CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION

On 8 June 2012, the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance launched the pre-budget consultations for 2012, and individuals and organizations were invited to share their thoughts online by responding to five questions:

- on the issue of economic recovery and growth: Given the current climate of federal and global fiscal restraint, what specific federal measures do you feel are needed for a sustained economic recovery and enhanced economic growth in Canada?
- on the issue of job creation: As Canadian companies face pressures resulting from such factors as uncertainty about the U.S. economic recovery, a sovereign debt crisis in Europe, and competition from a number of developed and developing countries, what specific federal actions do you believe should be taken to promote job creation in Canada, including that which occurs as a result of enhanced internal and international trade?
- on the issue of demographic change: What specific federal measures do you think should be implemented to help the country address the consequences of, and challenges associated with, the aging of the Canadian population and of skills shortages?
- on the issue of productivity: With labour market challenges arising in part as a result of the aging of Canada's population and an ongoing focus on the actions needed for competitiveness, what specific federal initiatives are needed in order to increase productivity in Canada?
- on the issue of other challenges: With some Canadian individuals, businesses and communities facing particular challenges at this time, in your view, who is facing the most challenges, what are the challenges that are being faced and what specific federal actions are needed to address these challenges?

To at least some extent, a number of the responses were influenced by the domestic and international economic environment, the level of employment, Canada's population aging and the nation's productivity performance.

In its World Economic Outlook: Coping with High Debt and Sluggish Growth, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) estimates that the global economy's gross domestic product (GDP) growth rate will be 3.3% in 2012 and 3.6% in 2013, down from 5.1% in 2010 and 3.8% in 2011; the rate for advanced economies is expected to be relatively lower, at 1.3% in 2012 and 1.5% in 2013. While monetary policies in a number of countries seem to be designed to stimulate economic growth, some governments are engaging in fiscal restraint and/or are facing continued uncertainty, with negative implications for economic growth. According to the IMF, Canada — whose economy is doing well compared to other countries — has the lowest public debt-to-GDP ratio among the Group of Seven (G7) nations. However, the IMF feels that fiscal challenges in the euro area and in the United States are the main risks to the global economic outlook. Both the IMF and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) predict that, in 2012 and 2013, Canada will have among the highest rates of economic growth in the G7.

Canada's economy is part of the global economy. According to Statistics Canada, year-over-year growth in Canada's real GDP declined from a rate of 3.0% in the first quarter of 2011 to 2.0% in the second quarter of that year, and remained in the 2.0% to 3.0% range through to the second quarter of 2012. Although Canada's small, open economy remains sensitive to economic, financial and fiscal challenges in other countries, IMF data suggest that the Canadian economy grew at a faster rate than most advanced economies in the first half of 2012 and that the nation's economy is expected to continue to grow in the short term. That said, the growth is predicted to be hampered by weak growth in the global economy, by higher-than-expected commodity prices and by an inability to increase consumer spending due to high levels of consumer debt. According to the IMF's projections, the Canadian economy will grow by 1.9% in 2012 and by 2.0% in 2013.

With more than 880,000 net new jobs created since July 2009, Canada has had one of the highest rates of employment growth among the G7 nations; the country has had a positive growth rate since the first quarter of 2010 and, in the third quarter of 2012, the country's unemployment rate remained stable, at 7.3%. According to Statistics Canada, employment in Canada — which decreased during the recession that began in 2008 — reached its pre-recession level in January 2011 and has since surpassed that level, with an additional 338,000 people employed as of September 2012; on a net basis, this employment growth has been in full-time positions.

For some time now, the Canadian population has been aging, a situation that can be explained by two factors: a declining birth rate and rising life expectancy. According to Statistics Canada, Canada's annual population growth rate increased after 1945, reaching 3.9% in 1959 before falling below the generational replacement rate of 2.1% in 1972 and continuing to decrease to an historical low of almost 0.8% in 1998 before rising to about 1.7% in 2008 and falling to 1.1% in 2010. Furthermore, between 1961 and 2006, life expectancy at birth in Canada rose from 68 to 78 years for men and from 74 to 83 years for women. Statistics Canada estimates that, in 2036, life expectancy at birth will be between 82 and 85 years for men and between 86 and 88 years for women. As a result, Statistics Canada anticipates that, with current demographic trends, the number of Canadian seniors could double between 2011 and 2033, rising from about 5 million to 10 million. Moreover, the proportion of working-aged people to seniors could diminish relatively rapidly, from 4.9 to 2.6, with implications for the ability of governments to support seniors.

Productivity enables a nation to enhance its economic growth. For example, it permits more goods to be produced and/or services to be provided with the same quantity of resources. For a number of years, Canada's productivity growth rate has lagged that of its major trading partners, including the United States. According to OECD data for the 2000 to 2009 period, Canada's labour productivity growth rate — at 0.6% — was less than one half of the average of OECD member countries, at 1.5%. On 17 October 2011, in a report entitled Innovation Canada: A Call to Action, innovation was highlighted as a solution to Canada's relatively poor productivity performance.

The witnesses' proposals and the Committee's recommendations might be viewed with this economic environment, level of employment growth, population aging and productivity performance in mind. Chapter 2 of the report summarizes the comments made to the Committee by the Bank of Canada about the nation's economic environment and the views of witnesses on the federal fiscal environment; in some sense, an examination of the economic and fiscal environments provides a context for the three subsequent chapters. Chapter 3 presents the testimony received by the Committee in relation to people, while the witnesses' views about businesses are contained in Chapter 4. Recognizing that Canada's people and businesses live and operate respectively in communities, the proposals made by witnesses on this topic are included in Chapter 5. The Committee's recommendations are provided in Chapter 6, and Chapter 7 contains the report's conclusions. Finally, for each of the five questions noted earlier, the report's Appendix identifies the topics about which individuals and organizations submitted comments and/or proposals for change. It should be noted that, while the pre-budget consultations were under way, the Committee also held hearings in relation to a study of tax incentives for charitable giving; a report and recommendations will be presented early in 2013.

In its recent biannual appearance before the Committee, which occurred while pre-budget consultations were ongoing, the Bank of Canada spoke about a range of considerations in relation to the domestic economy. Moreover, a number of the Committee's witnesses commented on federal fiscal issues, including revenue, expenditures, and budgetary balance and debt reduction.

ECONOMIC ENVIRONMENT

According to the Bank of Canada, economic growth has slowed in all major economic regions of the world, which has restrained growth in Canada; in particular, growth in the United States is slow, Europe is in a recession, the European crisis is expected to continue in the medium term, and growth in China and other emerging economies has slowed. The Bank also stated that the greatest risks to future economic growth in Canada are external, and made particular mention of the potential economic impacts for Canada of a failure to stabilize financial and credit markets in Europe, as well as of the possible scenarios concerning resolution of the United States' "fiscal cliff," which refers to such fiscal measures as tax reductions and extensions of unemployment insurance benefits that are set to expire in 2013, and scheduled spending reductions associated with sequestration.

In describing the domestic economic situation, the Bank of Canada stated that most of the economic growth observed in Canada in recent months — 1.8% and 1.9% in the first and second quarters of 2012 respectively — can be attributed to domestic factors. These factors include relatively low interest rates — which tend to increase household consumption and business investment — and high commodity prices — which tend to lead to greater economic growth due to the high proportion of the value of Canadian exports that is commodity-based. That said, according to the Bank, the household debt burden is expected to rise further before stabilizing by the end of 2014, a situation that poses a risk to Canada's future economic growth. The Bank projected that the economy will grow by 2.2% in 2012, by 2.3% in 2013 and by 2.4% in 2014.

Desjardins	2.6	2.2	2.2
International Monetary Fund	2.6	1.9 (2.1)	2.0 (2.2)

Notes: The numbers in brackets are previous projections.

According to Statistics Canada's 1 October 2012 release of historical revisions to the System of National Accounts, Canada's real gross domestic product grew by 2.6% in 2011, an upward revision from 2.4%.

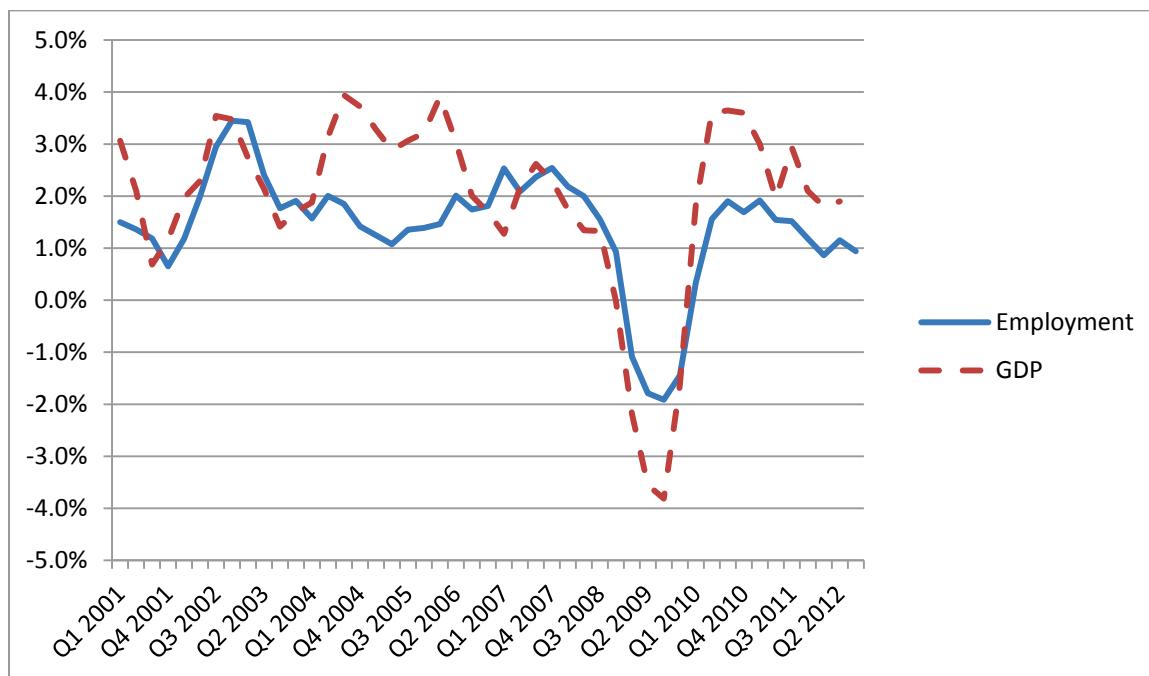

Sources: Prepared using data from Bank of Canada, Monetary Policy Report, 24 October 2012, p. 26; Department of Finance, Survey of Private Sector Economic Forecasters, June 2012; International Monetary Fund, World Economic Outlook, October 2012, p. 2; BMO, Canadian Economic Outlook, 19 October 2012; CIBC, Economic Insights, 28 August 2012, p. 12; Royal Bank of Canada, Financial Markets Monthly, 5 October 2012, p. 6; TD Economics, Quarterly Economic Forecast, 18 September 2012, p. 5; and Desjardins, Economic and Financial Outlook, 22 October 2012, p. 2.

In assessing the benefits and drawbacks of reducing federal spending, the Bank of Canada noted that the government's spending in 2008 and 2009 accounted for up to one third of the country's GDP growth in 2009 and 2010. It also stated that the subsequent withdrawal of fiscal stimulus and the desire to balance the budget will have a negative effect on economic growth; according to the Bank's projections, actual federal spending for 2013–2014 is expected to increase GDP growth by 0.3 percentage points, although this contribution is lower than the historical average of 0.6 percentage points. As well, the Bank indicated that, compared with other developed countries, Canada has the lowest debt-to-GDP ratio and, therefore, more policy options.

Regarding the level of employment in Canada, the Bank of Canada noted that the number of jobs fell by 430,000 during the recession that started in 2008; since then, employment has surpassed its pre-2008 level, having increased by an additional 380,000. Furthermore, according to the Bank, the "quality" of the additional positions is high; 77% of the positions are in industries where the wage is above average, 85% are in the private sector, and most are full-time. In comparing Canada to other countries, the Bank noted that Canada is in a much better position than is the United States, which has not yet recovered the number of jobs lost during the recession, and than other G7 countries, which have had slow job creation and have created jobs that are of relatively lower quality. That said, in indicating that employment improvements are still required, the Bank also highlighted that Canada's unemployment rate is currently 7.3% to 7.4%, the country's employment-to-population ratio is lower than prior to the recession, and the level of involuntary part-time employment, which reflects a situation where people are working part-time but would prefer full-time employment, exceeds its pre-recession level.

FISCAL ENVIRONMENT

Revenue

In speaking to the Committee about the proportion of tax revenue from various sources, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants said that, compared to other OECD countries, personal income taxes in Canada make a significantly higher contribution to government revenue than do consumption taxes, and that the government should increase the proportion of revenue from consumption taxes. Similarly, recognizing that economists view consumption taxes as the most efficient and progressive form of taxation, Financial Executives International Canada advocated an increase in the Goods and Services Tax (GST) rate, rather than increases in corporate taxes, personal taxes or social security contributions, in the event that additional revenue is required.

Source: Prepared using data from Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, Revenue Statistics StatExtracts, Tables 1100, 1200, 2000 and 5000 (accessed 16 November 2012).

In discussing the sources of revenue that should be the primary focus in the event that additional revenue is needed, the Certified General Accountant Association of Canada suggested that the government should close tax loopholes and prosecute more tax evaders, while the Réseau SOLIDARITÉ Itinérance du Québec said that taxes for high-income individuals should be increased.

Expenditures

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Labour Congress suggested that the government — in partnership with provincial and municipal governments — should launch a major, multi-year public investment program; particular mention was made of municipal infrastructure, transit systems, affordable housing, child care, energy conservation and renewable energy projects. Similarly, the Canadian Union of Public Employees urged higher funding of these initiatives.

The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada and Financial Executives International Canada suggested that the government should seek efficiencies in its day-to-day operations. The Calgary Chamber of Commerce stated that growth in federal expenditures for the 2013–2014 fiscal year should be limited to between 2.6% and 3.0% of the average of the previous five years of expenditures.

Regarding reductions in federal expenditures, the Public Service Alliance of Canada asked that the government reverse the reductions that have occurred, while the Canadian Union of Public Employees stated that the government should refrain from making further reductions. The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada argued that federal public service employment reductions should be curtailed, especially in respect of jobs related to health and safety.

Budgetary Balance and Debt Reduction

In their appearance before the Committee, and with a focus on eliminating federal deficits, Financial Executives International Canada, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, Desjardins Group, the Regroupement des jeunes chambres de commerce du Québec, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Mining Association of Canada urged the government to continue to pursue a balanced budget in the short to medium term. As well, the Mining Association of Canada asked that the government continue to prioritize Canada's economic "fundamentals" by preserving and improving the country's tax levels, and decreasing the national debt.

Transparency and Accountability

In speaking to the Committee about transparency in budgetary decisions, the Public Service Alliance of Canada indicated that the government should receive, and give consideration to, feedback from Canadians before budgetary decisions are made. The Canadian Association of Social Workers argued that the government should have direct responsibility for, and coordinate shared accountability with, the provinces through the Canada Social Transfer (CST); this responsibility and accountability could be similar to the Canada Health Act.

CHAPTER 3: PEOPLE

A variety of issues related to Canada's people were brought to the Committee's attention. Specifically, witnesses spoke about personal income taxation, education, employment, health, and retirement savings and income.

PERSONAL INCOME TAXATION

Tax Burden

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants shared its view that easing the personal income tax burden would help to attract and retain employees, thereby enhancing economic growth. In particular, it believed that broad-based tax reductions — rather than personal income tax credits, which add complexity to the system — should be examined.

According to Luc Godbout, additional study is needed in relation to data suggesting that some households in Ontario and Quebec with earnings of less than $40,000 pay relatively more in taxes when their household income increases by $400.

Seniors

In speaking to the Committee about single seniors, and particularly older women, the Canadian Association of Retired Persons made two requests: establish a measure that would be equivalent to the spousal allowance for single seniors who are in financial need, and make the Caregiver Tax Credit a refundable credit.

Persons with Disabilities

The Council of Canadians with Disabilities told the Committee that, in order to assist disabled individuals who are poor, the government should remove barriers for those with intellectual disabilities who wish to open a registered disability savings plan, expand the definition of a person with a disability in relation to the Disability Tax Credit, and make the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) disability benefit a non-taxable benefit for income tax purposes. As well, it said that the Disability Tax Credit should be fully refundable, exempt from income for purposes of provincial social assistance programs, and automatically available when qualification for the CPP disability benefit is established.

CHARITABLE DONATIONS

In speaking to the Committee about how best to provide incentives for individuals to donate to charities, the Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce suggested that the government should increase the charitable donations tax credit rates and provide less direct funding to charities.

Sport Manitoba Inc. commented on the increasingly important role of the private sector in providing resources for the delivery of sports programs, and spoke about charitable tax incentives that attract such sources of funding.

EDUCATION

Federal Education Strategy

The Association of Canadian Community Colleges spoke to the Committee about lifelong learning, and supported this concept as part of a national strategy for education in Canada, while Polytechnics Canada highlighted the United Kingdom, Australia and Germany as possible models for addressing skilled labour shortages through the education system. The latter suggested that expert panels should be established and assigned the task of addressing the issue of skilled labour shortages.

In commenting on the Advisory Panel on Canada's International Education Strategy's report entitled International Education: A Key Driver of Canada's Future Prosperity, the Canadian Bureau for International Education and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada supported the report's recommendations. The former also advocated substantial and sustained investments in an international education strategy delivered in partnership with key stakeholders, and requested that funding for international education be increased to $25 million within three years, with a particular focus on enhancing Canada's supply of scholarships. The Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences supported scholarships, training and educational opportunities abroad, while the University of Toronto proposed investments in scholarships, particularly for graduate students.

The University of Manitoba focused on the strategic importance of fostering international research collaborations among universities, governments and industry, of investing in opportunities for Canadian students to study abroad, and of enhancing marketing and branding efforts in order to attract international students to Canada. The Council of Ontario Universities encouraged the government to make international education and research a pillar of the nation's foreign policy and economic growth objectives. The University of Saskatchewan advocated the creation of a federal science strategy that would increase the national and international visibility of research-intensive Canadian universities and attract high-quality students and researchers to Canada, while McGill University spoke about the importance of supporting international partnerships through investments in internationalization, such as funding study-abroad programs for Canadian students, providing seed funding to support international research collaborations, and funding bilateral or multinational research initiatives.

Regarding the inequity that they perceived exists in federal post-secondary education funding, the National Association of Career Colleges and Polytechnics Canada highlighted the need to ensure that private and public educational institutions receive an equitable share of research awards and scholarships, particularly within an approach designed to attract international students to Canada. In relation to English as a second language training, the Canadian Association of University Teachers urged the government to fund public institutions and to avoid a voucher system that, in its view, gives a preferential benefit to private trainers.

Support to the Provinces/Territories and First Nations

The Association of Canadian Community Colleges informed the Committee about the need to increase funding of the post-secondary education component of the CST in order to achieve improved educational outcomes across Canada.

The Inuit Tapiriit Kanatami highlighted the challenge of adapting public-sector policies and private-sector initiatives to address the particular needs of Aboriginal students, and noted the urgency of achieving better socioeconomic outcomes for Inuit through educational support; from that perspective, it argued for targeted funding measures aimed at what it characterized as radical improvements in Inuit education and training. The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and the University of Saskatchewan supported more federal funding of post-secondary studies, while the University of Manitoba encouraged renewed federal funding of reach-back programs, which are currently being financed by the private sector. The University of Manitoba also advocated support for university programs that address the unique needs of Canada's Aboriginal population, as well as for a greater range of family, community and other supports for Aboriginal post-secondary students. The Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada encouraged the government to work in collaboration with Aboriginal organizations to meet the needs of Aboriginal peoples for information relating to post-secondary education.

The Canadian Association of University Teachers and the Canadian Union of Public Employees argued for increased funding of Aboriginal post-secondary education, while the Association of Canadian Community Colleges spoke about the need for balanced investments between the kindergarten through grade 12 system and post-secondary education, and highlighted the educational gap between Aboriginal peoples and non-Aboriginal residents in Canada. The Canadian Alliance of Student Associations requested that the government remove the 2% funding cap currently in place in relation to the Post-Secondary Student Support Program, and called for adequate funding to support both the backlog of students who have been denied assistance and the needs of future applicants. The Council of Ontario Universities urged the government to consider new areas of investment that would increase Aboriginal high school completion, and that would expand access to — and encourage success in — post-secondary education for Aboriginal learners.

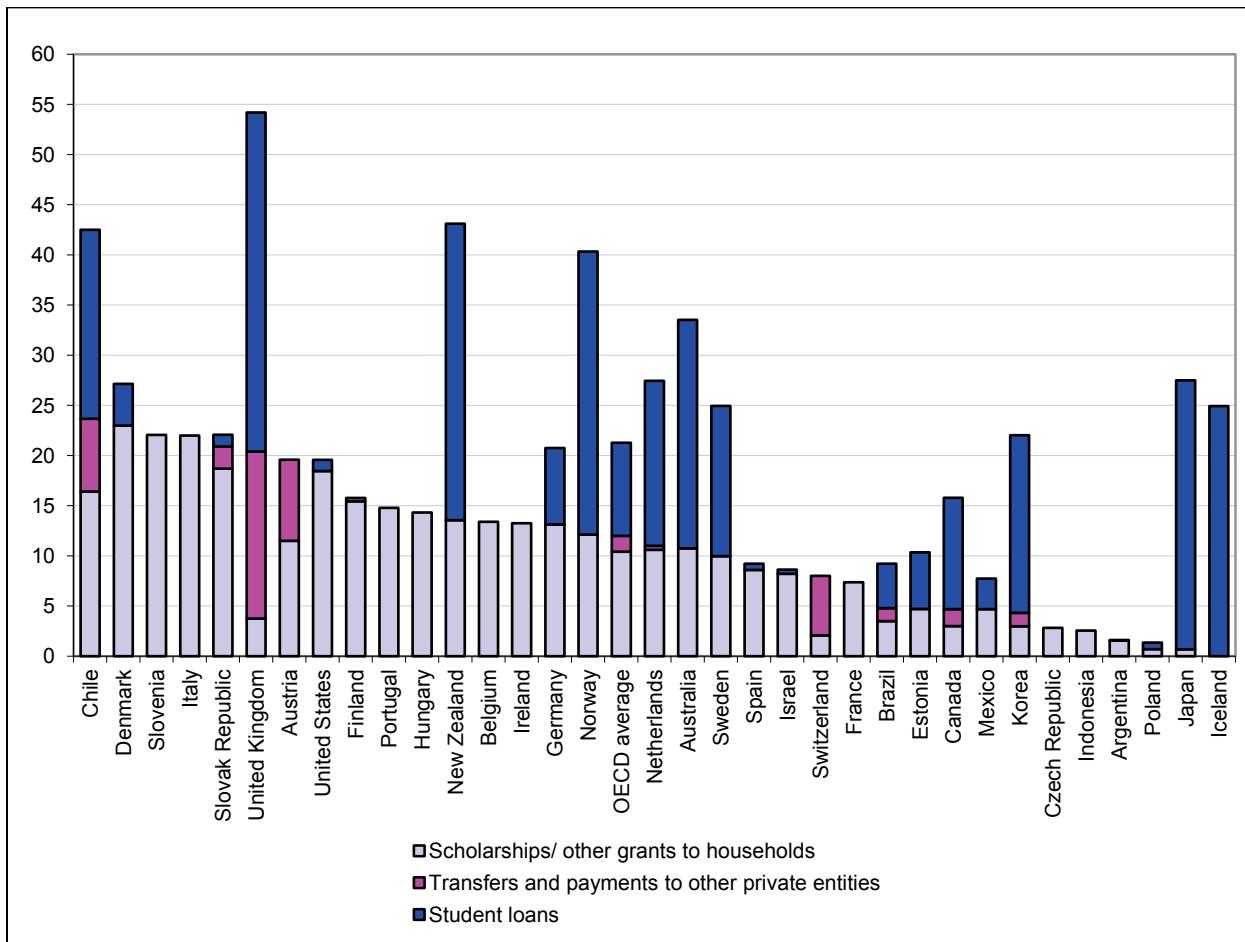

Regarding the improved Aboriginal educational outcomes that they argued could be achieved through government support of ongoing efforts by private institutions, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada focused on increasing the scale of proven projects, while the University of Saskatchewan mentioned that new approaches that are being explored would be implemented more quickly with federal support. As a means of closing the educational gap between Aboriginal peoples and non-Aboriginal residents in Canada, they noted the need for federal support of initiatives developed in partnership with such stakeholders as Aboriginal leaders, universities and the private sector.

Support for Students

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Federation of Students advocated the implementation of a federal post-secondary education act modelled on the Canada Health Act, with provincial accountability regarding the way in which federal transfers are spent. It called for measures that would address current disparities in the amount of per-student funding to the provinces, decrease student debt by one half by 2015, address the underfunding of post-secondary education resulting from reduced federal transfers in the late 1990s, and lower tuition fees.

The Canadian Federation of Students requested that the government redirect the tax expenditure in respect of education tax credits and savings schemes — currently about $2.52 billion — to the Canada Student Grants Program (CSGP), while the Canadian Alliance of Student Associations asked for a 25% increase, per qualified student, in the funding available under the CSGP. Regarding student loans, the National Association of Career Colleges advocated more funding for students through the Canada Student Loans Program (CSLP).

Polytechnics Canada and the National Association of Career Colleges noted that, given the eligibility requirements for funding under the CSGP and the CSLP, the condensed nature of their programs puts them at a disadvantage compared to other educational institutions, such as universities. In particular, the latter noted that the average length of a career college program is about 26 weeks, and that eligibility for the CSLP and the CSGP requires program durations of at least 4 weeks and 60 weeks respectively; consequently, it advocated harmonization of program-duration eligibility criteria for both programs, which it believed would reduce unnecessary and complicated bureaucracy.

In speaking about student nutrition, Food Secure Canada stated that a national student nutrition program for all primary and secondary schools in Canada would result in higher grades; it suggested that the government should fund 20% of the costs of existing breakfast and snack programs.

The Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions proposed an expansion of the CSLP's loan forgiveness provision for nurses and other health care providers, such as physiotherapists, working in rural and remote areas to those working in other geographical areas, and an expansion of the CSGP to registered nurses who are returning to school.

Job Training

The Association of Canadian Community Colleges and the Canadian Union of Public Employees spoke to the Committee about the need for public-private collaboration to address the skills development needs of Canadians. The latter also supported greater investments in training and education, particularly in national workplace training programs and initiatives that would lead to improved employment opportunities for women, visible minorities and disabled Canadians. The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada advocated internships and other measures that would increase the work experiences of graduate students in a broad range of interdisciplinary sectors.

The Canadian Steel Producers Association and the Petroleum Services Association of Canada proposed the introduction of a training tax credit that would offset some of the training costs associated with hiring people who lack the necessary skills and that would encourage employers to invest in further skills development of their existing workforce. The Mining Association of Canada asked that the government consider the funding of specific programs within the Mining Industry Human Resources Council related to labour market research, labour certification and Aboriginal inclusion. In speaking about the needs of their profession and sector respectively, Engineers Canada and the Forest Products Association of Canada urged the government to work on initiatives to help attract and train underrepresented groups, such as women and Aboriginal peoples.

Financial Literacy

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants observed that individuals must have the skills and knowledge to save for their retirement. To that end, it urged the government to continue its commitment to financial literacy.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Shortages and Domestic Labour Force

In speaking to the Committee about the need to address current and projected labour shortages, the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors supported providing incentives through existing pension plans, while the Alberta Chambers of Commerce advocated specific pension-related changes, such as increasing the age of 70 that currently exists in respect of CPP retirement benefits to 75, providing incentives to individuals who postpone receipt of their pension, amending registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) rules to provide greater flexibility for retirement saving after age 72, and developing harmonized and flexible pension policies in relation to part-time employment that would provide Canadians with incentives to transition out of the labour force after age 65.

Regarding training and educational initiatives to address skills gaps in the labour force, the Greater Kitchener Waterloo Chamber of Commerce cited the need for increased investments in skills development as complex technological advances are continuously implemented by manufacturers seeking higher productivity. As well, the Canadian Alliance of Students Associations and the University of Manitoba suggested that training programs should be targeted to industries where skills gaps exist, and that the benefits of education in the technical professions that are in the greatest demand across Canada should be advertised. The Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association spoke about the importance of working in collaboration with community colleges and universities to improve their understanding of labour market needs, and to ensure that students are successful in obtaining employment upon graduation.

In support of trade professions and apprenticeships, the Canadian Association of University Teachers suggested that employers should be provided with incentives to hire apprentices, while the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO advocated an extension of the Apprenticeship Incentive Grant to cover the third and fourth years of the apprenticeship program, as well as an increase in the amount of the grant. Polytechnics Canada suggested that employers that are willing to retain an apprentice through completion of his/her certification should be provided with tax credits. The Association of Canadian Community Colleges advocated a national vision for skills development, specifically in relation to trades, while the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO noted the importance of national coordination in relation to the public funding of education and training programs, suggesting that — throughout the education system — skilled trades should be promoted as a valuable career path, and argued for enhanced support of the Skills Canada program.

Regarding the way in which Labour Market Agreements (LMAs) are delivered, Polytechnics Canada highlighted the need for national standards and for LMAs to address specific challenges, such as attracting Canada's youth to trade professions, as well as enhancing the image of colleges as providers of training and education for the skills that are in demand. The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO suggested that LMAs should prescribe and measure training goals for new Red Seal apprenticeships, and that funding to provincial governments under LMAs should be allocated differently so as to encourage employers to hire construction apprentices.

The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO proposed that the government establish a procurement policy in respect of construction sites under federal contracts that would encourage contractors to hire youth or Aboriginal peoples registered in the Red Seal trades, while Polytechnics Canada said that retention of registered apprentices should be a positive consideration for purposes of decisions about the employer that will be awarded a procurement contract.

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce, the Calgary Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Energy Pipeline Association and the Mining Association of Canada commented on labour shortages and highlighted the importance of inter-provincial labour mobility. The Calgary Chamber of Commerce also noted that promotion of Canada's energy sector and its role in the Canadian economy could lead to enhanced labour mobility.

The Association of Canadian Community Colleges and the Canadian Association of University Teachers supported initiatives to encourage the transferability of skills across jurisdictions, and proposed that the number of apprenticeships within the Red Seal Program be expanded; similarly, the Forest Products Association of Canada argued for initiatives to encourage skills transferability. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors advocated reform of the Employment Insurance (EI) system in order to encourage people to relocate to areas where labour shortages exist.

Regarding financial support for companies that incur expenses related to labour mobility and travel, the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors called for tax credits for worker relocation or seasonal work travel expenses, while the Petroleum Services Association of Canada proposed two changes: reversal of the decision to phase out the Overseas Employment Tax Credit as a means of encouraging employee retention, and an amendment to subsection 6(6) of the Income Tax Act (ITA) to make inter-provincial travel expenses incurred for non-temporary work assignments non-taxable benefits. The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO suggested that the government should consider measures that would encourage labour mobility of skilled trades workers, and noted its willingness to partner with the government in creating a mobility tax credit to benefit companies that provide housing incentives to their employees. It also supported Bill C-201, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (travel and accommodation deduction for tradespersons).

Labour Shortages and International Labour Force

In speaking to the Committee about foreign sources of labour, McGill University, the Forest Products Association of Canada, Engineers Canada and the Mining Association of Canada argued for improved efficiency of the immigration system as a means of lowering barriers to foreign workers. The Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association suggested that modernization of Canada's immigration laws should focus on the needs of the labour market for both skilled and unskilled workers. As well, McGill University, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and Engineers Canada urged the government to continue or increase support of initiatives that streamline the validation process in respect of foreign education qualifications, professional licences or credentials, and workplace experience.

The Petroleum Services Association of Canada and the Canadian Cattlemen's Association advocated more efficiency in relation to the Temporary Foreign Worker Program, as well as initiatives that would facilitate both the retention of temporary foreign workers in Canada and their transition to permanent residence status and citizenship. The Alberta Chambers of Commerce suggested that the Temporary Foreign Worker Program should be targeted to address immediate labour shortages; in its view, foreign workers should use other immigration programs for attaining permanent residence status. The Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce highlighted the importance of the Temporary Foreign Worker Program — which it said should have an increased investment — and the Provincial Nominee Program — which it said should be integrated federally in a different manner; it also identified the need to change the way in which these programs are implemented.

The Canadian Alliance of Student Associations asked that — like international doctoral students — international master's, undergraduate and college students in specific areas of study be accepted for permanent residence status under the Federal Skilled Worker Program.

Other Employment Supports

In their appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres and Canada Without Poverty advocated the design and establishment of a federal poverty reduction and elimination plan, and made particular mention of Bill C-233, An Act to eliminate poverty in Canada; in their view, such a plan should be adopted in collaboration with, and as a complement to, existing provincial/territorial initiatives. In discussing the link among educational attainment, employment and poverty, the Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada similarly supported a federal poverty reduction plan. As well, Canada Without Poverty proposed additional measures to alleviate poverty, such as the establishment of a low-income refundable tax credit equal to the difference between a person's total income and the value of the low-income measure of applicable households, and the creation of an anti-poverty competitiveness task force and an anti-poverty impact test similar to the business impact test undertaken by departments to evaluate regulations and regulatory burden.

Canada Without Poverty and the Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions supported affordable early childhood education and care programs across Canada, the former in order to address multi-generational poverty in families and the latter in order to encourage female labour force participation. As well, the Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions proposed that monies currently allocated to the Universal Child Care Benefit be given to provinces/territories to enable expansion of accessible, affordable and high-quality child care spaces. The Child Care Advocacy Association of Canada suggested that the government should include child care in any national strategy related to training skilled workers to replace retiring workers, and advocated universal, affordable, high-quality child care and education, which — among other effects — would support the education and employment needs of parents.

Canada Without Poverty highlighted the need to implement social skills and support programs that would help Canadians, particularly those with low incomes, be better equipped to access the labour force, while the Council of Canadians with Disabilities advocated initiatives to improve employment access for disabled persons, such as the regulation of new information technologies, the creation of a centre of excellence for the dissemination of information to employers about universal design options, and the inclusion of employment targets in LMAs with the provinces.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada noted the importance of Canada's Youth Employment Strategy and of high-quality after-school programs in enhancing opportunities for youth employment through skills development. It requested increased funding of the Skills Link program, and argued that funding of this and related programs should be made on a long-term and stable basis.

HEALTH

Health Accord, the Canada Health Act and the Health Care System

In speaking to the Committee about the next health accord between the federal government and the provinces/territories, the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres suggested that the accord should contain stable funding, with a minimum 6% yearly increase, and provide for enforcement of the Canada Health Act. Canadian Doctors for Medicare, which highlighted the need for national leadership in maintaining a universal health care system, urged the government to negotiate an accord that reflects the needs of all regions and the shared priorities of Canadians, with new funding conditional on provincial/territorial compliance with the Canada Health Act.

As well, Canadian Doctors for Medicare noted the federal responsibility for enforcing the Canada Health Act, and — in identifying the violation of the legislation that is occurring with extra billing — suggested that the government should work with the provinces to prevent extra billing.

The Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions supported negotiations between the federal and provincial/territorial governments on a new health accord with a duration that exceeds five years.

The Canadian Medical Association requested that the government recognize the implications of the social determinants of health for the demands placed on the health care system. It also suggested that metrics to link health care spending to health outcomes should be created.

Health Care Delivery

The Canadian Nurses Association informed the Committee about the use of health system indicators to improve health care delivery and about the work of the Canadian Institute for Health Information (CIHI) in identifying indicators, and suggested that the government should implement a national strategy with five health and health system indicators; the indicators should be selected in cooperation with the provinces/territories after working with the CIHI, health providers and other stakeholders. It also advocated a federal commitment to Canada being among the top five ranking nations for each indicator by 2017.

Table 2 – Possible Indicators for Measuring Health System Outcomes

Indicator	Description
Perceived Health	An indicator of overall health status reported by individuals aged 12 and older
Health Conditions	Information on selected health conditions, such as diabetes and high blood pressure
Birth-related Indicators	Low birth weight and preterm birth
Life Expectancy	Life expectancy at birth and life expectancy at age 65
Premature Mortality	Age-standardized rate of deaths of individuals who are younger than age 75, per 100,000 population
Potential Years of Life Lost	All deaths occurring at each age before 75 multiplied by the number of remaining years to live until age 75
Potentially Avoidable Mortality	Age-standardized rate of premature deaths before age 75 that could potentially have been avoided through all levels of prevention (primary, secondary, tertiary), per 100,000 population
Mortality From Preventable Causes	Age-standardized rate of premature deaths that could potentially have been prevented through primary prevention efforts, per 100,000 population
Mortality From Treatable Causes	Age-standardized rate of premature deaths that could potentially have been avoided through secondary or tertiary prevention, per 100,000 population
Health Utility Index	An index for measuring years lived in good health compared with years lived in poor health
Disability-adjusted Life Expectancy	A comprehensive index of mortality and health status
Wait time	Information on wait times for various procedures including such indicators as hip fracture surgery or diagnostic imaging (that is, MRI and CT scans)
In-hospital Mortality	Information on selected conditions and interventions, including 30-day in-hospital mortality for acute myocardial infarction and stroke
Readmission	Information on readmission for selected conditions and interventions
Repeat Hospitalization for Mental Illness	A proxy measure for aspects of appropriateness of services

Source: Prepared using information from Canadian Institute for Health Information, Developing a Model for Measuring the Efficiency of the Health System in Canada, October 2012.

Canadian Doctors for Medicare said that the federal role in health care should not be limited to transferring funds to the provinces, and proposed that the government set national standards — such as best practices — for health care delivery. It also noted that certain best practices are limited to hospitals and clinics, and requested federal leadership to identify health care innovations that could be used throughout Canada.

Regarding innovation and models of best practices, such as optimal nurse staffing, integrating care beyond the hospital and measures identified by the Premiers' working group on health care innovation, the Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions called for the government to establish a health innovation fund that would finance the identification and implementation of such models, and to obtain information through the National Survey of the Work and Health of Nurses that was previously conducted by the CIHI and Statistics Canada.

In order to increase hospital efficiency, improve health care, reduce health care spending and create jobs, St. Boniface Hospital advocated the use of Lean quality transformation methods, and the creation of a Canadian centre for innovation in the delivery of health care that would provide training and advice on the implementation of such methods to other health care facilities.

The use of inter-professional primary health care teams, such as those used in community health centres, was highlighted by the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres. It suggested that investments should be made in a pan-Canadian network of such centres, and advocated a national vision to integrate services across the country.

Regarding the funding of health care for refugees, the Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions shared its view that recent reductions in federal funding of such health care would result in increased use of emergency services, which are funded by provincial/territorial governments, and argued for a reversal of the reductions.

The Canadian Medical Association called for targeted investments in health infrastructure to address the lack of long-term care accommodations.

Health Research

In informing the Committee about the limited research on the issue of the transfer of health-related research to public policy and practice, the Canadian Cancer Society suggested that all governments should make a commitment to conducting such research and to investments that would support health research.

The Canadian Cancer Society also commented on the impact of cancer and other chronic diseases on the economy, and said that investments in cancer prevention could also reduce the incidence of other diseases. It urged the government to increase investments in prevention research, and to integrate such research into policies and programs that would empower Canadians to make decisions that would have a positive impact on their health.

The Réseau québécois d'action pour la santé des femmes noted that Health Canada's Women's Health Contribution Program is being abolished in March 2013, and requested permanent funding of $4 million annually for independent and specialized research centres so that the health of women could be improved.

Regarding the health of military personnel, veterans and their families, the Canadian Institute for Military and Veterans Health Research requested a federal investment of $15 million over five years. It commented that the investment would fund direct research and research with industry partners through public-private partnerships, and would reduce the costs of health care insurance and benefits provided by Veterans Affairs Canada.

People with Disabilities or Other Medical Conditions, Seniors and Women

The Council of Canadians with Disabilities informed the Committee that grants provided to national disability organizations through the Social Development Partnerships Program were recently reduced and that, in future, grants will be provided to all not-for-profit groups in a competitive process. It proposed that funds for national disability organizations be allocated through a separate competitive process.

The Canadian Cancer Society commented that a multi-sectoral approach is important in addressing chronic diseases, and urged the government to take a leadership role in bringing non-governmental organizations, governments and the private sector together to advance shared practices.

Regarding seniors' health, the Canadian Nurses Association noted that social determinants of health — such as income — play a large role in the health of Canadians. It proposed the implementation of a healthy aging strategy, as well as expanded federal tax credits and home care benefits so that older Canadians could stay in their homes and remain independent longer. The Canadian Medical Association spoke about the need to develop a pan-Canadian strategy for long-term care, home care and palliative care, as well as a dementia strategy.

In speaking about the health of women, the Réseau québécois d'action pour la santé des femmes requested a $100 million investment in prevention programs that aim to improve daily living conditions for women.

Mental Health

In informing the Committee about a coordinated national strategy for mental illness and mental health with federal leadership and provincial partnerships, the Canadian Association of Social Workers supported specific recommendations in the federal government's mental health strategy for Canada and said that the strategy should be implemented immediately. In particular, it mentioned increasing the proportion of health and social spending that is devoted to mental health, creating an innovation fund to assist provinces/territories in developing sustainable mental health infrastructure and ensuring that mental health services comply with the five key principles of the Canada Health Act. The Canadian Psychological Association also supported the creation of an innovation fund to assist provinces/territories in developing sustainable mental health infrastructure.

Regarding access to psychologists in the federal health sector as well as in rural and remote communities, the Canadian Psychological Association urged the creation of federal residency placements within federal departments that provide health services as well as loan forgiveness under the CSLP for psychologists who relocate to rural and remote communities.

In commenting that it is difficult for federal public service employees to obtain psychological services, the Canadian Psychological Association suggested that extended health care insurance plans for such employees should be examined, and urged the removal of the requirement for a referral by a medical doctor before reimbursement of psychological services fees by an insurance plan.

Purchase of Pharmaceutical Drugs

The Canadian Federation of Nurses Unions told the Committee that the purchase of pharmaceutical drugs in bulk by the provinces/territories could lower health care costs, and suggested that the government should provide leadership in respect of this type of purchasing. Similarly, the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres supported a national bulk purchasing program and the Canadian Medical Association recognized the need for a national pharmaceutical strategy so that Canadians can afford essential drugs.

RETIREMENT SAVINGS AND INCOME

General

In speaking to the Committee about Canada's demographic change, which will mean a higher proportion of retirement-age Canadians, the Financial Executives International Canada suggested that the government should conduct a study and develop a national framework regarding retirement income security.

Government-sponsored Benefits

The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada spoke to the Committee about the CPP, and requested mandatory CPP contribution and retirement benefit increases as a means to provide Canadians with a secure option for retirement savings. The Canadian Labour Congress and the Canadian Union of Public Employees suggested that future CPP retirement benefits should be doubled, with this change phased in on a fully pre-funded basis, while the Canadian Federation of Independent Business supported a supplementary voluntary CPP that would allow eligible Canadians to increase their CPP contributions in order to receive additional CPP retirement benefits.

In order to address what they deemed to be the growing income inequality gap in Canada, the Canadian Association of Social Workers suggested that the recent increase in the age of eligibility for Old Age Security (OAS) benefits from 65 to 67 should be reversed. The Canadian Association of Retired Persons noted that, since eligibility for Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) benefits depends on eligibility for OAS benefits, GIS benefits that will be lost as a result of the increase in the age of eligibility should be reimbursed.

Privately Financed Benefits

The Portfolio Management Association of Canada informed the Committee about the difficulties encountered by Canadians seeking to invest their retirement savings in stock exchanges located in "emerging market" countries. In particular, the list of designated stock exchanges that are approved for purposes of RRSP investments includes only three exchanges that are located in emerging markets; from that perspective, it proposed that the government update the list of designated stock exchanges.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants urged the government to provide additional incentives to save for retirement. It made particular mention of reducing or eliminating the income tax on personal savings, increasing limits on Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) contributions and reviewing the limits for RRSP contributions.

The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada called for the government to encourage employers to provide defined benefit pension plans.

The Alberta Chambers of Commerce stated that, in 1995, the government changed the ITA's provisions regarding the transferability of severance payments to an RRSP; it asked that these provisions be reinstated, thus ensuring that Canadians are not burdened with higher-than-normal levels of taxation during times of personal financial hardship.

In noting that the introduction of the Harmonized Sales Tax (HST) affected management fees for financial services, the Portfolio Management Association of Canada urged the government to simplify the taxation of these fees when they are related to retirement savings.

Recognizing that the ITA provisions in relation to the capital gains exemption for small business owners are rarely changed and that almost one half and three quarters of Canadian entrepreneurs plan to leave their businesses in the next 5 and 10 years respectively, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business suggested that the level of the lifetime capital gains exemption should be indexed to inflation.

In speaking about the requirement that provincial governments adopt legislation that would enable pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs) to be offered by provincially regulated employers, the Canadian Bankers' Association encouraged the government to continue working with provincial governments to that end. According to the Portfolio Management Association of Canada, there is a strong likelihood that many provinces will not implement legislation that would require employers to offer PRPPs. From that perspective, it encouraged the government to introduce specific tax incentives for employers to establish PRPPs or other retirement savings vehicles.

Source: Prepared using data from Statistics Canada, CANSIM, Table 280-0010 (accessed 23 November 2012).

Fair Pensions for All commented on the differences between the private and public sectors and among generations in terms of pension coverage, and encouraged the government to reform the federal public pension system and pension entitlements to enhance equity between sectors and across generations.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business said that the normal retirement age should be increased to 65 for all federal public servants, and that the bridge benefit that ensures that retiring federal public servants receive an amount equivalent to full CPP retirement benefits until age 65 should be eliminated. It also believed that parliamentarians and individuals who join the federal public service should be members of a defined contribution pension plan, which it characterized as the standard in the private sector.

CHAPTER 4: BUSINESSES

In their appearance before the Committee, the witnesses spoke about a variety of issues related to Canadian businesses. For example, they discussed a range of tax considerations, regulatory matters, business financing and development, research, innovation and commercialization, and trade.

TAX CONSIDERATIONS

Capital Cost Allowance Rates

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants informed the Committee that, in certain cases, capital cost allowance (CCA) rates do not correspond to actual depreciation rates. For that reason, it proposed that the rates be continuously adjusted to reflect the true economic life of the asset, which could encourage investment and increase productivity.

Regarding the CCA rates for assets used in natural gas liquefaction, the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers called for the harmonization of these rates with manufacturing and processing assets in Class 43; with this change, existing Canadian liquefied natural gas (LNG) exports would be more competitive with LNG exports from the United States and Australia, and investment in new liquefaction facilities in Canada could increase.

Table 3 – Selected Capital Cost Allowance Classes and Associated Rates, Canada, 2012

Class	Rate (%)	Description
3	5	Most buildings acquired before 1988 (or 1990, subject to certain conditions). Also includes the cost of additions or alterations made after 1987.
8	20	Property used in the business that is not included in another class. Also includes data network infrastructure equipment and systems software for that equipment acquired before 23 March 2004.
10	30	Motor vehicles, automobiles and some passenger vehicles.
17	8	Roads, parking lots, sidewalks, airplane runways, storage areas or similar surface construction.
29	25 in the first and third years, 50 in the second year	Eligible machinery and equipment used for the manufacturing and processing in Canada of goods for sale or lease acquired after 18 March 2007 and before 2012 that would otherwise be included in Class 43.
43	30	Eligible machinery and equipment used for the manufacturing and processing in Canada of goods for sale or lease that are not included in Class 29.
52	100	General-purpose electronic data processing equipment (commonly called computer hardware) and systems software for that equipment, including ancillary data-processing equipment acquired after 27 January 2009 and before February 2011.

Source: Prepared using information from Canada Revenue Agency, CCA classes.

In commenting on the role of the temporary accelerated CCA for manufacturing and processing in encouraging investment in Canada, increasing productivity and enhancing the competitiveness of Canadian business, Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters and the Greater Kitchener Waterloo Chamber of Commerce suggested that the measure should be made permanent, while the Canadian Steel Producers Association and the Chemistry Industry Association of Canada argued for an extension of the measure.

The Green Budget Coalition noted that the accelerated CCA is being phased out for the oil sands sector, and indicated that it should also be phased out for the mining sector.

Tax Rates

Regarding the general corporate income tax rate, the Investment Industry Association of Canada told the Committee that the current rate, which has not resulted in a decline in corporate tax revenue, should remain unchanged. The Canadian Bankers Association said that provincial governments should be encouraged to achieve and maintain a 10% corporate income tax rate.

The Canadian Labour Congress noted that businesses have accumulated $500 billion in capital because of the relatively low tax rate; it proposed that the rate be increased, with the resulting corporate tax revenue used to help businesses in strategic sectors. Similarly, the Réseau SOLIDARITÉ Itinérance du Québec requested a reduction in tax measures that benefit corporations, with the resulting corporate tax revenue used to help the homeless and the poor. The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada suggested that further corporation tax rate reductions should be eliminated.

Corporate Group Taxation

The Tax Executives Institute, Inc. commented that income taxation of affiliated corporations as a group would reduce the group's borrowing costs and improve liquidity; as well, it would eliminate both the group's costs associated with current tax planning strategies and enforcement of such strategies by the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA). In highlighting that Canada is the only G7 country that prohibits the sharing of tax losses among affiliated entities, it suggested that Canada — similar to the United States — should implement an elective tax loss or attribute transfer system that would allow the transfer of losses and tax credits among affiliated corporations; the election would be made annually. The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants advocated a loss transfer system among corporate group members.

Taxation of Small and Family Businesses

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business noted that small businesses have a higher tax burden as a percentage of total revenue than do larger businesses, and proposed either that the small business tax rate be reduced to one half of the general corporate income tax rate or that the government aim for a combined federal-provincial rate of 12%.

Moreover, regarding the total tax burden imposed on small businesses, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business indicated that payroll taxes have the greatest impact on business growth, as all businesses must pay them regardless of their level of profitability. As well, it requested that the hiring credit for small businesses be extended until EI rates remain stable and argued that CPP premiums should not be increased.

Believing that a complex tax code can affect the growth of small businesses and the ability to attract investors, the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce suggested that the government should conduct a review of the ITA and other federal tax legislation.

The Edmonton Chamber of Commerce also said that transferring ownership of a family business to a family member is difficult due to the imposition of tax on the capital gains of the business' assets at the time of transfer. In that context, it called for a comprehensive federal review of tax provisions affecting estate and succession planning to ensure that such familial transfers are treated fairly for tax purposes; the review should occur in the next 24 months.

Customs and Excise Tax

The Retail Council of Canada informed the Committee that certain goods sold in Canada are at a competitive disadvantage when compared to identical goods sold in the United States; this situation leads Canadian retailers near the Canada-U.S. border to have relatively less revenue, as U.S. retailers experience higher sales. It advocated the elimination of tariffs on certain goods that are not produced domestically, and highlighted that the customs revenue that would be lost would be offset by increased taxable income as well as GST revenue from Canadian retailers.

In speaking about competition between meals prepared in restaurants and prepared meals sold in grocery stores, the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association noted that the former incur the GST while the latter are tax-exempt. According to it, the exemption in relation to prepared meals sold in grocery stores should be removed.

Regarding the harmonization of provincial sales tax and the GST in certain provinces, the Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce highlighted that investors are paying HST on asset management services, and requested that such services be GST-exempt.

International Taxation

Regarding proposed foreign affiliate dumping rules that impose a tax on certain investments made by a Canadian corporation in a foreign affiliate, the Tax Executives Institute, Inc. told the Committee that, while the government's targeting of abusive tax-motivated foreign affiliate dumping transactions will be beneficial, the proposed rules will reduce Canada's attractiveness as a destination for foreign investment.

As well, the Tax Executives Institute, Inc. mentioned two Income Tax Regulations that affect the taxation of non-residents and/or payments to non-residents that were previously highlighted by the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation. Regarding Regulation 102, it said that the waiver system in respect of the withholding tax is cumbersome for non-residents. It also noted that, due to the difficulty and delay in obtaining a waiver from paying the withholding tax as prescribed in Regulation 105, non-resident service providers charge higher fees to Canadian businesses to offset the tax. Regarding both regulations, it suggested that a self-certification system based on current information reporting requirements should be implemented in order to shift compliance costs to the non-resident party.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants urged the general adoption of policies suggested by the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation.

Tax Administration

Financial Executives International Canada informed the Committee that the CRA's auditor incentive system, which measures total taxes reassessed by auditors, results in a high number of audits; it proposed an incentive system based on additional tax revenue collected by reassessments of taxpayers, which would increase the effectiveness of the monitoring of audits.

As well, Financial Executives International Canada spoke about the administrative costs associated with CRA audits and the resolution of disputes, and noted that field auditors do not have the authority to apply a range of outcomes when settling disputes with taxpayers; from that perspective, in order to prevent litigation of minor tax issues, it requested that these auditors be granted the power to settle disputes.

Regarding the administrative burden imposed on businesses that report income for both income tax purposes and for collection of the GST/HST, Financial Executives International Canada proposed that consolidated tax reporting be permitted.

In order to provide certainty, fairness and transparency in respect of the limitation period for taxpayer reassessments, the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce suggested that tax returns should be deemed assessed by the CRA on the 120th day after filing of the return.

Tax Simplification

In its appearance before the Committee, the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada argued that the complexity of Canada's tax system must be addressed if Canada is to remain competitive, attract investment, and create jobs and economic growth. From that perspective, it proposed that all levels of government work together with a view to modernizing and simplifying the ITA in a revenue-neutral manner; the result could be increased compliance by and lower compliance costs for taxpayers, as well as lower administrative costs for government and a more secure tax base with predictable revenue. In particular, it felt that the Committee should determine the scope of the review, with an expert panel created to review the ITA and, subsequently, to make recommendations about modernization and simplification of the tax system.

Regarding unlegislated tax proposals that add uncertainty and unpredictability to the tax system, the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada suggested that a technical tax amendment bill should be introduced and/or that a sunset provision should be implemented in respect of proposed changes to the ITA in order to ensure that tax amendments are legislated after a prescribed period of time and to prevent legislative backlogs.

The Edmonton Chamber of Commerce noted that tax incentives complicate the tax system, increase compliance costs, and allow for tax evasion and avoidance. It also commented that a broader tax base would facilitate lower taxes for all taxpayers. Consequently, it advocated the establishment of a royal commission to undertake a comprehensive review of tax statutes; the review should focus on reducing compliance costs, and ensuring neutrality, simplicity, efficiency and fairness.

Similarly, Financial Executives International Canada proposed that the Minister of Finance establish a task force to undertake a comprehensive review of the ITA, with the objective of reducing complexity and compliance costs.

In commenting that a simplified tax system would increase productivity and improve Canada's competitiveness, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants suggested a two-stage approach to simplification: establish an independent office that would provide advice on reducing both legislative and administrative complexity, perhaps modelled on the U.K. Office of Tax Simplification; and create an expert panel that could examine a wide range of areas in relation to taxation, such as language, the costs and benefits of various provisions and the use of anti-avoidance rules.

Financial Executives International Canada indicated that certain sections of the ITA no longer achieve the desired policy objectives and should be eliminated. As well, it advocated a consolidation of measures that contain too many provisions, such as the CCA classes.

REGULATORY MATTERS

Co-operatives

The Canadian Co-operative Association told the Committee that co-operatives are businesses that employ Canadians, pay taxes, create jobs and operate in almost every sector of the economy; for these reasons, they should not be regulated at the federal level by Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada. In its view, a more suitable federal department, such as Industry Canada, should have responsibility for co-operatives.

In noting the recent reduction in the size of the Rural and Co-operatives Secretariat, which coordinates federal programs that affect co-operatives, Desjardins Group similarly argued that Industry Canada should have federal responsibility for co-operatives; it believed that the Department should create a co-operative secretariat. It also proposed that co-operatives be eligible for federal programs that support businesses, such as those administered by Industry Canada.

Desjardins Group also spoke about demutualization applications, and suggested that the government should have safeguards to prevent unjustified monetary gain by a member or members of a mutual insurance company or co-operative as a consequence of demutualization.

Securities

The Portfolio Management Association of Canada told the Committee that the establishment of a common securities regulator could help to protect investors against fraud and could increase confidence in Canadian capital markets. It supported funding for the Canadian Securities Transition Office for at least an additional fiscal year and urged the government, in cooperation with the provinces, to develop legislation in light of the December 2011 Supreme Court of Canada ruling. Similarly, the Canadian Bankers Association supported the creation of a common securities regulator.

Supply-managed Commodities

In speaking to the Committee about milk prices set by the Canadian Dairy Commission, the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association noted that high milk prices in Canada have prompted Canadians to buy milk in states along the Canada-U.S. border; as well, it noted that milk and cheese smuggling operations have developed. It urged the government to modernize the supply management system so as to increase the market for dairy and poultry products.

Payment Systems

The Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association and the Retail Council of Canada informed the Committee that merchants incur higher processing fees for certain credit cards, which results in higher consumer prices and lower profit margins. The former called for changes to the Code of Conduct for the Credit and Debit Card Industry in Canada in order to eliminate the honour-all-cards rule and to permit surcharging.

Restaurant Sector

In speaking to the Committee, the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association noted that the restaurant sector is not represented by a government department. In its view, an assistant deputy minister in Industry Canada should be responsible for the restaurant sector in order to ensure that policy decisions consider the sector's views.

Burden

In its appearance before the Committee, and in recognition that — in some cases — provinces and/or municipalities have regulations that duplicate federal regulations, the Canadian Construction Association suggested that the government should conclude inter-jurisdictional agreements for harmonized regulations and create a single federal-provincial entity to administer these regulations.

Regarding the regulatory burden faced by small financial institutions, Credit Union Central of Canada noted that one half of all credit unions are very small financial institutions, with implications for compliance costs; it requested that the situation of small financial institutions be considered when the recommendations in the Red Tape Reduction Action Plan report are implemented. Desjardins Group indicated that affiliated co-operatives face a high individual compliance burden, and suggested that such co-operatives could comply at the group level in meeting certain statutory reporting requirements.

The Canadian Convenience Stores Association advocated implementation of the recommendation in the Red Tape Reduction Action Plan report that would require the government to remove an existing regulation that imposes administrative costs on businesses in each instance where a new regulation would increase such costs.

In commenting on foreign investment in Canada's oil and gas sector, the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors argued for a stable and competitive regulatory regime that would make Canada an attractive place for investments by global oil and gas producers.

According to the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, federal forms should use standardized business reporting language, known as XBRL, which would reduce compliance costs for taxpayers and enhance federal data collection.

BUSINESS FINANCING AND DEVELOPMENT

Co-operatives, Social Economy Enterprises and Small Businesses

In speaking about the ability of co-operatives to raise capital, the Canadian Co-operative Association told the Committee that the RRSP rules in the ITA prohibit co-operative members who own more than 10% of the shares of a co-operative from purchasing additional shares of that co-operative to hold within their RRSP; it suggested that the rules should be revoked. It also advocated the creation of a national investment fund to support existing and new co-operatives.

The Social Economy Working Group indicated that the Quebec co-operative investment plan — the Régime d'investissement coopératif — provides income tax incentives for workers to invest in the companies that employ them, and requested a similar federal program so that co-operatives could remain well-funded.

As well, the Social Economy Working Group commented on social economy enterprises, stating that such enterprises benefit the community rather than specific individuals. In its view, they should be eligible for federal support programs that currently help small and medium-sized businesses.

In order to promote business ownership by young entrepreneurs and to support business succession, the Regroupement des jeunes chambres de commerce du Québec proposed that potential entrepreneurs be able to use their RRSP funds — without penalty — to finance the purchase of their first business, provided the amount is repaid within 10 or 15 years.

Flow-through Shares and the Mineral Exploration Tax Credit

The Small Explorers and Producers Association of Canada informed the Committee that the ITA's flow-through shares program is an important financing mechanism for small oil and gas companies, and suggested two measures that it believed would enhance benefits for investors and could increase the level of financing for such companies: raising the annual Canadian development expense conversion limit to $4 million from $1 million, and changing the taxable capital threshold for conversion eligibility to $50 million from $15 million. In its view, these changes could offset higher development and exploration costs in the junior oil and gas sector.

Financial Executives International Canada and the Investment Industry Association of Canada said that the flow-through share program has been successful in encouraging private investment in the oil and gas and mining sectors, and advocated an expansion of the program to other sectors. According to Financial Executives International Canada, the program may increase the commercialization of innovation, and expansion to other sectors would not increase the program's federal fiscal cost since it only transfers tax deductions between taxpayers. The Investment Industry Association of Canada indicated that the program could be expanded to include the biotechnology and green sectors.

The Prospectors and Developers Association of Canada noted that the temporary Mineral Exploration Tax Credit (METC) provides Canada with a competitive advantage when compared to other countries, as it reduces the risk faced by investors in Canadian exploration activities. It believed that, in order to facilitate the implementation of long-term exploration projects, the METC should be made permanent.

According to the Mining Association of Canada, it is difficult for junior mining companies to raise capital; from that perspective, it advocated the extension of the METC and the flow-through shares program for an additional year.

In order to increase tax neutrality, the Green Budget Coalition suggested that the METC for flow-through shares should not be renewed.

Financing for High-risk Businesses

In its appearance before the Committee, the Investment Industry Association of Canada requested a range of measures to help generate capital at various stages of business development, especially for businesses that are capital-intensive and/or high-risk. For example, it supported the creation of angel networks for Canadian businesses, public-private partnerships, financial literacy for entrepreneurs, changes to the taxation of capital gains, lower regulatory costs, and a better balance between securities and tax rules.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants suggested that an angel tax credit should be created to support investments in innovative start-up companies.

Taxation of Investment Dealers

In highlighting that income tax changes in 2008 that required investment dealers to treat unrealized income — such as broker warrants — as taxable income affected the dealers' ability to receive warrants instead of cash for payment of underwriting fees incurred when shares are issued, the Investment Industry Association of Canada urged an amendment to the current rule so that such income is not taxable.

RESEARCH, INNOVATION AND COMMERCIALIZATION

Government Funding

In their appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences, the University of Manitoba and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada proposed that the funding for the three federal granting agencies — the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR), the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada (NSERC), and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) — and for the Canada Foundation for Innovation (CFI) be increased. McGill University advocated renewed, stable and predictable support for the granting agencies in light of variable funding in the past two years, and the Canadian Association of University Teachers suggested that their funding should be increased by $500 million annually.

The Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences said that a greater proportion of increased funding of the granting agencies should be allocated to SSHRC, while the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada indicated that grant funding should include the indirect costs incurred by institutions when conducting research.

Regarding the administration of the federal granting agencies and their grants, the Canadian Association of University Teachers proposed that grant applications be reviewed by the scientific community and that the agencies be more arm's length from the government. The Canadian Alliance of Student Associations called for agency-funded research to be available to the public in an open-access format.

Polytechnics Canada highlighted that the College and Community Innovation Program, which is administered by NSERC, is one of the few programs focused on applied research; it requested that the program's funding be increased by $15 million annually.

In order to foster innovation, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce suggested that a new national innovation strategy should be created; the strategy should include research, commercialization, training and retraining. Similarly, the University of Saskatchewan advocated such a strategy to support human, physical and technological capital through investments in advanced education, research, knowledge transfer and business development.

McGill University requested greater funding for research infrastructure through the CFI, and both it and the Association of Canadian Community Colleges called for renewed funding for the Knowledge Infrastructure Program. The Council of Ontario Universities also spoke about research infrastructure, and requested funding of data infrastructure, as well as the creation of a national framework for such infrastructure so that data collected by academic researchers could be used for policy and economic development purposes. The University of Toronto proposed direct funding of large capital projects to modernize facilities and to maintain Canada's international competitiveness.

The Canadian Psychological Association suggested that projects funded by the granting agencies should recognize the role of psychological factors in research conducted in relation to health and neurosciences.

In speaking about direct funding of applied research, Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters commented that such funding has high administrative costs and shared its view that governments do not always make the best decisions regarding the type of technology to support. The Toronto Board of Trade and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada advocated direct grants for this type of research.

Polytechnics Canada highlighted the voucher programs in Alberta, the Netherlands and Australia for late-stage applied research, and proposed the creation of a national voucher program for late-stage commercialization support at approved research and development service providers. Similarly, a voucher program was supported by Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters, which indicated that businesses could choose the support services they need for innovation.

The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada spoke about methods to increase links between the private sector and academic institutions to further innovation. In its view, there should be more federal research funding for university students to work in the private sector. Similarly, the University of Toronto requested greater funding of industry internships involving university students.

Sector-specific Government Support

The Canadian Renewable Fuels Association told the Committee that 60% of the $500 million in the Sustainable Development Technology Canada NextGen Biofuels Fund has been allocated to projects, and requested that the objectives of the program not be changed to fund projects outside the renewable fuels sector.

The Grain Farmers of Ontario commented that plant-breeding research is more successful when it occurs in the region where the plant will ultimately be grown; from that perspective, it advocated greater federal funding for the development of wheat varieties for Ontario. It also suggested that Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada should change its winter wheat research efforts so that research is conducted for wheat varieties that could be grown throughout Canada.

The Canadian Cattlemen's Association proposed an increase in funding for beef research, asked that federal research funding be for a minimum of five years, and supported the maintenance of such funding in relation to animal health and welfare, the environment, plant breeding and food safety.

In the view of the Mining Association of Canada, innovation is needed to address declining ore reserves, meet regulatory standards and manage higher operating costs. It advocated an $18 million annual investment over five years for the Canadian Mining Innovation Council, which facilitates mining-related research and development (R&D).

The Forest Products Association of Canada called for continued federal support for research and innovation so that novel paper and wood products can be commercialized and exported.

Collaboration and Partnerships

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences proposed that the government invest in cross-sector collaborations among academic institutions, governments, communities and not-for-profit entities. McGill University requested support for international and inter-sectoral partnerships that would strengthen links between Canadian and international universities and between Canadian universities and foreign businesses, as well as funding for bilateral or multilateral research initiatives. Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters advocated an increase in federal funding for collaborative research between businesses and academic institutions.

International Science and Technology Partnerships Canada and the Canada-Israel Industrial Research and Development Foundation noted that international partnerships stimulate the commercialization of technology, and said that the government should promote collaboration among researchers when the objective is commercialization. International Science and Technology Partnerships Canada requested an increase in funding to $20 million annually for five years.

In speaking about the contribution of colleges to the development of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), the Association of Canadian Community Colleges noted that colleges provide businesses with expertise, equipment and students for applied projects. It called for an increase in government funding for partnerships between community colleges and small businesses, suggesting that support should be between 1.25% and 5% of the total federal investment in research at post-secondary institutions.

The University of Manitoba suggested that federal investments in partnership programs, like those administered through the granting agencies that foster research partnerships between SMEs and universities, should be increased.

Scientific Research and Experimental Development Investment Tax Credit

Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters told the Committee that reduced federal support for the Scientific Research and Experimental Development (SR&ED) investment tax credit could lead companies to invest in countries other than Canada. It suggested that the CRA should simplify the administration of the credit, that the credit should be partially refundable and that an accelerated depreciation rate for investments in capital equipment that are used in R&D should be applied.

The Canadian Steel Producers Association highlighted recent changes to the SR&ED tax credit that it believed will reduce support for capital-intensive projects. It advocated a refundable credit for large corporations as well as the introduction of R&D programs for such projects.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants also commented on these recent changes, and proposed that the measure support all businesses that conduct R&D, regardless of size. In its view, the changes that reduce the general tax credit rate and that exclude capital expenditures should be repealed, and the credit should be made partially refundable in order to encourage foreign investment.

The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada requested that the balance between the SR&ED tax credit and direct spending on research be adjusted, while the Canadian Association of University Teachers said that the SR&ED tax credit is a blunt instrument. According to the latter, direct funding of applied research should be increased and an independent scientific review panel should be created to select funding recipients.

Intellectual Property

In speaking to the Committee about intellectual property (IP) protection in Canada, McGill University commented that its international business partners would like stronger protection; consequently, it proposed that Canada develop a stronger IP regime. Regarding international IP treaties, the Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists urged Canada to sign the World Intellectual Property Organization Beijing Treaty on Audiovisual Performances.

TRADE

Trade and Investment Agreements

In their appearance before the Committee, the Toronto Board of Trade, the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce identified the ability to compete globally for trade and investment — particularly in the European Union, the Asia-Pacific region and other emerging markets — as a benefit for Canadian businesses and workers. The Toronto Board of Trade also suggested that the federal, provincial and municipal governments should coordinate their efforts designed to promote trade and investment abroad.

The Regroupement des jeunes chambres de commerce du Québec and the Canadian Federation of Independent Business encouraged the government to enter into free trade agreements to help eliminate barriers to trade and to develop new export markets for SMEs.

According to Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters, Canada should have a series of coordinated investment agreements that ensure fair treatment of Canadian investors in foreign markets and that provide effective dispute resolution measures. The Canadian Labour Congress and the Canadian Union of Public Employees asked that all investment agreements promote high labour and social standards, focus on strategic industries and contribute to sustainable global economic development.

The Canadian Steel Producers Association identified a need to address the illegal dumping of products in the Canadian economy and unfair trade practices, to support penalties for customs violations, and to provide adequate resources for the Canada Border Services Agency and the Canadian International Trade Tribunal.

The Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce asked that the government invest in commercial services at border crossings so as to ensure consistency with the United States. It also urged the government to expand the border services provided at the Wild Horse Port of Entry in order to increase activity at this trade corridor and to provide Alberta with a second 24 hours-per-day port of entry for commercial transport trucks.

The Canadian Bankers Association highlighted that the U.S. Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act applies to Canadian financial institutions and account holders. In its view, future trade agreements concluded by Canada should prohibit the extra-territorial application of foreign laws to Canadian financial institutions.

Investment Canada Act

Regarding legislation addressing foreign investment and taxes, the Calgary Chamber of Commerce requested that the government conduct a comprehensive, stand-alone review of the Investment Canada Act and, in particular, clarify the net benefit test as well as set criteria within that test for foreign, state-owned companies wishing to invest in Canada. It also suggested that the review should address parameters in relation to mutual concessions between countries in relation to foreign investment, an increase in the threshold for automatic review by the government, and improved transparency in respect of decisions made by the government regarding foreign investment.

Sector-specific Trade Issues

From the perspective of Canada's agricultural and agri-food sector, the Grain Farmers of Ontario asked that imported grain products be subject to the same environmental and regulatory standards as domestic grain products, while the Canadian Cattlemen's Association argued for increased investments in market development for beef exports. The Grain Growers of Canada indicated that access to markets for Canadian crops should be developed through Canada's participation in the Trans-Pacific Partnership negotiations and in the European Union, Morocco, India, China and Japan. The Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association asked for fewer subsidies and for free trade in all agricultural products.

Regarding the petroleum sector, the Canadian Gas Association and the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors suggested that the government should focus on access to natural gas and crude oil markets in Asia. The former indicated that the government must act quickly, as other countries with natural gas reserves will also be pursuing market access opportunities within the next 10 years, while the latter highlighted that market access to the United States and Eastern Canada is also required, as petroleum products are being sold in Western Canada at a discounted price when compared to other petroleum price benchmarks, resulting in a loss of revenue for the industry and the government.

The Forest Products Association of Canada suggested that, when Canadian paper products are being promoted in new markets, Canada's certified world leadership in terms of sustainably managed forests should be a focus.

According to the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres, health care should be exempted from an eventual comprehensive economic and trade agreement between Canada and the European Union, as well as from all other trade agreements.

CHAPTER 5: COMMUNITIES

The Committee's witnesses shared their views on a range of issues related to the communities in which people live and businesses operate. For example, they spoke about national economic development as well as the development of particular sectors and geographic regions, infrastructure, energy, the environment, arts and culture, housing, and national security and crime.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

General

In its appearance before the Committee, Financial Executives International Canada advocated business incentives that would encourage infrastructure investments, including in equipment that would increase efficiency and decrease pollution, as well as initiatives that involve the community, such as public-private partnerships. It also called for a review of accelerated CCA rates to encourage businesses to increase their investments in capital that will improve productivity.

The Greater Kitchener Waterloo Chamber of Commerce encouraged the government to extend the FedDev Ontario program beyond its original five-year mandate, while the Toronto Board of Trade urged the government to work in partnership with it, perhaps through the FedDev Ontario program, to establish an initiative aimed at developing particular industry "clusters" in the Toronto region.

In commenting on the benefits of diversification of products and production in the economy, Desjardins Group suggested that diversification is required in terms of both geography and corporate structure, and encouraged the government to consider alternative corporate structures — such as co-operatives — to a greater extent when making program and policy decisions. The Canadian Union of Public Employees stated that more support should be given to industries that add value to goods before they are sold, rather than to those that sell raw materials.

Sector-specific

In speaking to the Committee about the ability of grain farmers to compete internationally, the Grain Growers of Canada requested that the federal government adjust regulations for the Canadian Grain Commission with a view to reducing costs to farmers, facilitating grain exports and modernizing the process through which breeders of wheat register a new variety federally.

In discussing the costs incurred since 2007 by Canadian cattle producers, processors and veterinarians associated with the removal of specified risk material, the Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce requested that the government work with the cattle industry to implement regulatory reforms that would offset these costs and harmonize regulations with the United States.

The Grain Farmers of Ontario said that, in 2010, 70% of the funds provided through the Growing Forward framework for agricultural support were used for investments in Western Canada, the largest of which was specific to crops grown there. Consequently, it stated that the Growing Forward 2 framework should ensure equity among producers of different agricultural commodities as well as among the provinces; in its view, the government should establish clear program objectives and guidelines, with the aim of ensuring equity. The Canola Council of Canada suggested that the Growing Forward 2 framework should be focused on research, market development and market access.

In the context of intergenerational farm transfers, the Fédération de la relève agricole du Québec urged the government to implement incentives that would encourage farmers to transfer farm ownership to family members; in its view, incentives could include the creation of a transfer savings account that would be similar to a registered education savings plan, renewed funding of the Canadian Young Farmers' Forum beyond 2013, and a relaunch — by the Canadian Young Farmers' Forum — of the National Future Farmers Network, which was discontinued after the federal minister who founded the program was defeated in the 2011 election. The Grain Growers of Canada and the Fédération de la relève agricole du Québec asked the government to consider a capital gains exemption for farmers in the case of inter-generational transfers of farm ownership.

Source: Prepared using data from Statistics Canada, Census of Agriculture, 1991 to 2011.

The Forest Products Association of Canada and the Grain Growers of Canada urged the government to conduct a review of rail service in Canada with the aim of allowing shippers to have a better opportunity to negotiate, with the railways, on issues such as reciprocal penalties. Stating that a one-sided penalty system is in place, whereby shippers are charged penalties for such incidents as delays while the railways are not charged for similar occurrences, they advocated the implementation of a fair dispute resolution and arbitration process.

As well, the Forest Products Association of Canada urged the government to support renewal of Canada's forest sector and the Investments in Forestry Industry Transformation program. It also believed that existing federal procurement practices should be modified in order to increase the proportion of "next-generation" forest products — such as biofuels — purchased by the government.

The Green Budget Coalition highlighted the federal tax incentives that are available to the Canadian mining sector, and urged the government to modify the Canadian Exploration Expenditures income tax deduction to make mining companies that are successful in their exploration activity ineligible for the deduction. In its view, the accelerated CCA rates that are currently available for certain depreciable properties associated with mining activity should be ended and the METC for flow-through shares should not be renewed.

Northern Canada

The Inuit Tapiriit Kanatami told the Committee that projects in Canada's North must strike an appropriate balance among economic, environmental, social and cultural objectives. It urged the government to engage with Inuit communities in an active manner.

INFRASTRUCTURE

Federal Infrastructure Plan

The Canadian Construction Association, Engineers Canada, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, the Toronto Board of Trade, the Société de transport de Montréal and the Canadian Union of Public Employees informed the Committee that they support a continuation of long-term federal funding of the construction and repair of critical public infrastructure, which would aid the economic recovery and help to maintain Canada's competitiveness as well as the quality of life of Canadians.

Figure 8 – Index Scores for Global Competitiveness and Quality of Overall Infrastructure, Selected Countries, 2012–2013

Note: According to the World Economic Forum (WEF), the Global Competitiveness Index (GCI) Score measures the microeconomic and macroeconomic foundations of national competitiveness. The WEF defines competitiveness as the set of institutions, policies and factors that determine the level of productivity of a country. The GCI Score calculation is based on the weighted average of 12 pillars of competitiveness: institutions, infrastructure, macroeconomic environment, health and primary education, higher education and training, goods market efficiency, labour market efficiency, financial market development, technological readiness, market size, business sophistication and innovation. The GCI Score ranges from 1 to 7.

Source: Prepared using data from World Economic Forum, The Global Competitiveness Report 2012–2013.

In particular, they supported the creation of a federal long-term national infrastructure plan to replace the $33 billion Building Canada Plan that is set to expire on 31 March 2014, and urged an announcement of the Plan's successor as soon as possible in order to provide certainty; other levels of government and the private sector would provide matching funds.

The Federation of Canadian Municipalities, the Toronto Board of Trade and the Canadian Union of Public Employees emphasized the need to address municipal infrastructure challenges. The Federation of Canadian Municipalities underscored the need for flexibility in the design of federal-municipal infrastructure programs in order to meet the goals of different cities and communities.

Furthermore, the Toronto Board of Trade urged the government to introduce a mechanism to increase the value of the federal Gas Tax Fund in accordance with rising costs, while the Société de transport de Montréal proposed that federal excise taxes on fuel be transferred to the Gas Tax Fund.

In highlighting that the viability of mining projects may be linked to the availability of core public infrastructure, the Mining Association of Canada advocated more public-private investment in transportation and energy facilities.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees supported the elimination of incentives and requirements to engage in public-private partnerships. According to it, these incentives and requirements increase the burden on future taxpayers.

Administration, Partnerships and Tendering

The Canadian Construction Association, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities and Merit Canada spoke to the Committee about improved administration of federal infrastructure programs. The Canadian Construction Association and the Federation of Canadian Municipalities highlighted the need to reduce “red tape” in order to avoid costly project delays; the former cited, in particular, high transaction costs — such as legal agreements — associated with public-private partnerships.

According to the Canadian Construction Association, Canadian firms are generally at a disadvantage when competing with European contractors, which are typically in a better financial position. From that perspective, it argued that different financial arrangements in respect of public-private partnerships should be explored, and supported an expanded mandate for Export Development Canada.

Merit Canada focused on the need to tender federally funded infrastructure projects in an open and competitive manner. It argued that union-only worker arrangements should not be allowed, as this approach increases costs and disadvantages a majority of the workers in the construction industry.

First Nations Communities

The Green Budget Coalition told the Committee that the economic health and quality of life of First Nations communities could be improved by integrating green infrastructure considerations into program policies. While it recognized that progress has been made in many First Nations communities, it said that significant challenges remain; from that perspective, it urged investments in water and waste water systems as well as in residential and non-residential energy conservation and efficiency programs. Also, it indicated that diesel fuel consumption could be reduced through increased use of green energy.

Transportation

In their appearance before the Committee, the Toronto Board of Trade, the Société de transport de Montréal, the Agence métropolitaine de transport and the Canadian Union of Public Employees identified such problems as congested highways and delays in the transportation of goods. Consequently, they underscored the need for federal funding of transportation infrastructure and urged the government to make transportation infrastructure a key element in the successor to the Building Canada Plan.

The Agence métropolitaine de transport advocated the creation of a $1 billion public transport investment fund over 7 to 10 years, and argued that the eligibility of transportation projects for existing infrastructure programs should be maintained; it also urged the government to introduce economic development guidelines for public transit through a 10-year action plan. The Société de transport de Montréal supported federal transportation infrastructure funding that is dedicated, recurring and indexed to inflation.

ENERGY

Diversifying Energy Use in Transportation

In speaking to the Committee, the Canadian Natural Gas Vehicle Alliance, the Canadian Gas Association and the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors supported a larger federal role in expanding the use of medium-duty and heavy-duty natural gas vehicles in Canada in order to reduce carbon emissions, take advantage of abundant North American natural gas supplies and benefit from relatively lower natural gas prices when compared to other transportation fuels, such as gasoline and diesel. According to the Canadian Natural Gas Vehicle Alliance, with the United States having already started to develop its natural gas vehicle market, including the construction of liquefied natural gas stations and transportation corridors, federal support is needed in order that Canada does not miss opportunities to diversify energy use in the transportation sector.

The Canadian Natural Gas Vehicle Alliance and the Canadian Gas Association highlighted the need for targeted federal incentives, including tax credits and accelerated depreciation, aimed at increasing the affordability of natural gas medium-duty and heavy-duty vehicles, which are more costly than gasoline or diesel vehicles. According to the former, the federal fiscal cost of incentives could be financed by the introduction of a natural gas transportation levy.

Energy Strategy

The Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, the Calgary Chamber of Commerce and the Alberta Chambers of Commerce spoke to the Committee about the development of energy resources within a Canadian energy strategy. The Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors advocated a natural gas strategy to promote and expand the use of natural gas, while the Calgary Chamber of Commerce and the Alberta Chambers of Commerce argued that an energy strategy is needed in order to encourage value-added domestic production and diversification of energy export markets across a range of renewable and non-renewable natural resources. The Alberta Chambers of Commerce also highlighted the need to expand pipeline capacity for marine shipments in order to address the current price discount that exists in Western Canadian oil commodities due to the lack of access to world oil markets.

Renewable Energy

The Canadian Association of Social Workers and the Canadian Renewable Fuels Association told the Committee that the government should increase its support for renewable energy and related technologies.

In particular, the Canadian Renewable Fuels Association advocated additional federal assistance to promote renewable diesel production in Canada, including through an extension to the ecoENERGY for Biofuels program for new renewable diesel production projects to 31 March 2017 and for existing projects that were not substantially completed by the program's September 2012 deadline, as well as through the introduction of additional program conditions, such as an obligation for applicants to prove the financial viability of their projects. As well, it proposed an operating incentive of 15¢ per litre for next-generation ethanol projects funded through unused revenue remaining in the ecoENERGY for Biofuels program, which it estimated to be approximately $50 million.

Energy Retrofits

In speaking to the Committee about the ecoENERGY Home Retrofit program for households, the Canadian Union of Public Employees urged the government to introduce a similar plan for public-sector buildings.

ENVIRONMENT

Enforcement Information

In their appearance before the Committee, Ecojustice Canada and the Green Budget Coalition advocated better access to, and more transparency in respect of, federal environmental enforcement and compliance information. The former indicated that this access and transparency would be good public policy and would assist investors contemplating the purchase of an asset or an entity.

Specifically, they proposed the creation of a searchable online database that would include environmental enforcement and compliance information. According to Ecojustice Canada, the database would not entail any marginal federal cost, as this type of information would no longer be the subject of access-to-information requests.

Regulatory Reform

The Canadian Energy Pipeline Association and the Canadian Mining Association spoke to the Committee about environmental regulatory reform, with the former underscoring the need for the federal government to commit sufficient resources to implement the recently legislated changes to the environmental assessment process, including in respect of the policies and regulations that it believed have not been completed. The latter noted that uncertainty exists about how different authorities will work together to implement the legislation, and urged the government to implement a functional permitting system for the Species at Risk Act, as well as to modernize and complete the environmental legislation governing Canada's North.

Safety and Mitigation

Ecojustice Canada told the Committee that the current $40 million legislated cap on liability for offshore drilling in cases of a major spill is insufficient, considering that the 20 April 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico was estimated to cost approximately $40 billion in damages and remediation costs. From that perspective, it urged the government to raise the current cap so as to be consistent with that in other jurisdictions, such as the United States and the United Kingdom.

The Canadian Energy Pipeline Association argued that the biggest safety risk to the pipeline industry is damages incurred by third parties and noted that, while extensive regulatory tools exist to address pipeline integrity, Canada lacks the legislative means to enforce the physical protection of pipelines from third parties. It urged stronger federal regulation that would require any party that is planning to dig near a pipeline in Canada to call the pipeline operator before digging occurs, with fines imposed if this requirement is violated.

Carbon Mitigation and Management

The Canadian Renewable Fuels Association, the Greater Kitchener Waterloo Chamber of Commerce and the Calgary Chamber of Commerce spoke to the Committee about methods for reducing greenhouse gas emissions, indicating their preference for the current regulatory emission reduction approach applied on a sector-by-sector basis; they did not support a carbon tax as a means of reducing these emissions.

The Green Budget Coalition shared its view that putting a price on carbon, through either a carbon tax or a cap-and-trade system, is the most efficient and cost-effective method of reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Canadian Manufacturers & Exporters said that an increased investment in new technology is the best approach, and preferred programs that provide companies with an incentive to invest in carbon-reducing technologies; it did not support approaches involving regulation or a carbon tax.

Climate Change Adaptation

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Climate Forum identified the need for an increased policy focus on the potential impacts of climate change on key sectors and regions in Canada, including the energy and agriculture sectors as well as the Arctic region. It emphasized climate adaptation, and spoke about investments in research facilities, training, and information networks that can leverage different resources across Canada and through international partnerships. According to it, the government should create a climate change weather disaster risk-reduction strategy; the strategy should focus on investing in critical infrastructure to reduce economic and societal risks associated with climate change.

Conservation

The Green Budget Coalition informed the Committee about a national conservation plan, which was announced in the 3 June 2011 Speech from the Throne, and advocated the plan's creation. In its opinion, this plan should value and conserve nature for the benefit of current and future generations of Canadians.

ARTS AND CULTURE

Funding and Credits

In its appearance before the Committee, the Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists requested that federal support for Canadian content be renewed through restoration of Telefilm Canada's parliamentary appropriation, reversal of the National Film Board's budgetary reduction and an increase — to $40 — in the per-capita parliamentary allocation to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation/Radio Canada. The Association des producteurs de films et de télévision du Québec called for increased funding of audiovisual programs managed under Canadian Heritage, in particular of Telefilm Canada and of programs under the Canada Media Fund. It also suggested that the government should support the continued existence of the Canada Media Fund, increase investments through the creation of a specific fund to support the production of digital content, and finalize, implement and adequately fund Canada's Policy on Audiovisual Treaty Coproduction.

The Association des producteurs de films et de télévision du Québec spoke about the importance of stable and long-term financing for Radio-Canada, and noted that the government could use a portion of the proceeds from an eventual auction of some broadcast frequencies in the 700 MHz band to provide financial assistance to the industry. In advocating government support for the production of television programming and digital media content, the Writers Guild of Canada suggested that the government should increase funding of the Canada Media Fund. The Canadian Arts Coalition urged the government to renew its investment in the Canada Arts Training Fund, the Canada Arts Presentation Fund, the Canada Cultural Spaces Fund and the Canada Cultural Investment Fund; as well, it argued that funding of the Canada Council for the Arts should be maintained at $300 million annually, although it felt that funding should be increased if possible.

As a complement to enhanced public funding, the Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists proposed measures to attract private sources of funding. It advocated changes to the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit that would allow production services tax credits to be applied against the production's entire budget and not solely against labour costs, and supported the creation of federal labour-based tax credits for digital and interactive media. The Association des producteurs de films et de télévision du Québec suggested that eligibility for the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit should be extended to labour expenses linked to the production of digital content, while the Writers Guild of Canada proposed an extension of the credit to digital distribution.

As well, the Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists urged support for Bill C-427, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act (income averaging for artists), which it felt would address the inequity in taxation that it believed exists between artists whose incomes are volatile and employees whose incomes are relatively stable over time.

In speaking about the importance of support for the Canadian Tourism Commission (CTC) as Canada's national marketer of cultural and recreational attractions, the Association québécoise de l'industrie touristique suggested that the CTC's budget should be increased to between $120 million and $130 million annually.

Skate Canada requested $10 million and the government's partnership as preparations for its upcoming 100th anniversary celebration in 2014 are being made.

Regarding the structure of federal funding for culture in Canada, Sport Manitoba Inc. argued that the inclusion of support for sport-based research and innovation, as well as infrastructure facilities in the Building Canada Fund, has often resulted in investments in the former being under-prioritized. Consequently, it proposed that the government provide funding for this research and innovation outside of the Building Canada Fund.

Linguistic

The Fédération des communautés francophones et acadienne du Canada spoke to the Committee about cultural heritage and francophonie, and emphasized the importance of continued federal support for communities where an official language is spoken by a minority of the residents. It argued for renewal of the Roadmap for Canada's Linguistic Duality, with investments focused on the three priorities of population, space and development; the roadmap is set to expire on 31 March 2013. In addition, it advocated funding increases for organizations and institutions that ensure the provision of services to Francophone citizens, particularly for the Community Life component of Canadian Heritage's Official Languages Support Programs, and called for increased jurisdictional accountability — in future federal-provincial/territorial agreements — in relation to the allocation and use of investment funds. It specifically mentioned the inclusion of strong linguistic clauses, as well as the identification and dedication of specific funding for services intended for French-speaking citizens of the province/territory with which an agreement is being signed.

HOUSING

Strategy

In its appearance before the Committee, the Canadian Association of Community Health Centres supported the establishment of a federal housing strategy through the adoption and implementation of Bill C-400, An Act to ensure secure, adequate, accessible and affordable housing for Canadians.

Homelessness

Regarding homelessness, the Réseau SOLIDARITÉ Itinérance du Québec informed the Committee about the Homelessness Partnering Strategy, and requested that funding for it be increased from $20 million to $50 million for 2014 and beyond for the province of Quebec. It also suggested that public investment in social housing should be renewed, and advocated an enhanced role for the National Secretariat on Homelessness to promote discussions on homelessness. To improve the management and efficiency of the Homelessness Partnering Strategy, it called for the government to reduce “red-tape-related” delays in accessing available funding.

The Kamloops Homelessness Action Plan presented a plan for reducing the flow of people to homeless shelters; this plan would redirect a portion of the funds currently under the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation’s Affordable Housing Initiative to support the introduction of a housing tax credit for private or not-for-profit developers that construct affordable rental housing. In its view, this tax credit would have an estimated maximum federal fiscal cost of $50 million in the first year and of up to $500 million in the 10th year.

Census Metropolitan Areas, 1989–2011

New Housing Tax Rebates

In its appearance before the Committee, the Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce urged the government to consider indexation of the GST and the HST rebates in relation to new home purchases to inflation.

NATIONAL SECURITY AND CRIME

Defence

Regarding defence spending, the Rideau Institute told the Committee that the government should further reduce such expenditures over time to reach the level that existed prior to the 11 September 2001 terrorist attacks. It also argued for improved parliamentary oversight of the military procurement process through the creation of a dedicated parliamentary committee or subcommittee for major Crown projects, and — in an effort to support economic recovery — for a mechanism to ensure that defence procurement provides support to Canadian industries.

The Medicine Hat and District Chamber of Commerce indicated that Canadian Forces bases attract foreign investment to Canada by providing training to other countries' military forces. From that perspective, it suggested that the government should ensure the existence of adequate support for Canadian Forces bases to continue these activities, particularly in respect of Commonwealth military forces.

Crime

In speaking to the Committee, the Canadian Convenience Stores Association stated that an increased presence of law enforcement agents at the port of entry in Cornwall, Ontario will be required to combat the escalation in contraband tobacco activity that will occur when the Cornwall border crossing is moved to New York. As well, it urged the government to establish – by the end of 2013 – a new Royal Canadian Mounted Police anti-contraband task force.

Source: Prepared using data from Canada Border Services Agency, National Statistics — April 1, 2012 to June 30, 2012, 27 August 2012.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada asked for increased support for the National Crime Prevention Strategy, the Youth Justice Fund and the Youth Gang Prevention Fund; support for the strategy and these funds would help to prevent youth from engaging in criminal activity.

CHAPTER 6: RECOMMENDATIONS

- 1. That the federal government, acknowledging the current fiscal situation, restrict new spending commitments in the upcoming budget and continue to reject new costly and irresponsible spending.
- 2. That the federal government remain focused on its plan to return to balanced budgets in the medium term.
- 3. That the federal government vigorously and continually review spending of taxpayers' money to eliminate all waste and inefficiencies, including through the elimination of government programs that no longer serve their purpose or achieve their intended results. This should include an ongoing review of corporate assets to obtain the most effective and efficient use of government resources, ensuring value for taxpayers.
- 4. That the federal government reaffirm its commitment, as it seeks to return to budgetary balance, not to reduce transfers to persons, including those for seniors, children and the unemployed, or transfers to other levels of government in support of health care and social services, equalization and the gas tax transfer to municipalities.
- 5. That the federal government reaffirm its already strong commitment to keep taxes low and not impose new taxes on Canadians, especially any form of a carbon tax that would harm key sectors of the economy, while passing the costs on to Canadian families.
- 6. That the federal government review public sector compensation and benefits to ensure their ongoing financial sustainability, and align them more closely and make them more competitive with other public- and private-sector employers.
- 7. That the federal government and the Bank of Canada continue to support the current inflation-targeting framework.

8. That the federal government, in collaboration with the provinces and territories, continue its strong support and promotion of the skilled trades, such as exploring the feasibility and cost of new support programs or tax incentives to help skilled workers and their mobility. This should include continued support for Skills Canada to ensure the continued promotion of trades in secondary schools and to address youth unemployment and underemployment.
9. That the federal government explore options to reform and reorient Labour Market Agreements with the provinces and territories to better promote skills training and more effectively respond to labour market needs, such as in the construction sector.
10. That the federal government continue its modernization of Canada's immigration system to a "fast and flexible" system better focused on labour market needs, thus supporting economic prosperity for all Canadians. The government should also review the minimum language thresholds of the Federal Skilled Worker Program.
11. That the federal government review the Temporary Foreign Worker Program to ensure that it better and more accurately responds to Canada's labour market needs.
12. That the federal government, working with provinces and territories, continue to improve foreign credential recognition for immigrants to Canada.
13. That the federal government continue its efforts committed to make targeted, common-sense changes to make Employment Insurance a more efficient program focused on job creation and labour market needs.
14. That the federal government review the upcoming report of the Panel on Labour Market Opportunities of Persons with Disabilities to identify ways to increase the labour market participation of disabled persons.
15. That the federal government continue programs that help to ensure that older workers have access to the training they need to secure new employment.
16. That the federal government continue to acknowledge the even greater contribution that Aboriginal peoples can make to the labour market by reducing barriers to their increased participation in Canada's economy.

17. That the federal government implement a jobs plan by providing continued support to the Aboriginal Skills and Employment Training Strategy model and other proven programs to help First Nations and other Aboriginal groups fill the skilled job shortages. Furthermore, the government should continue to work with First Nations to address our shared priority of improving First Nations educational outcomes and to fulfill its commitment to having in place, for September 2014, a First Nations education act while also exploring mechanisms to ensure stable, predictable and sustainable funding for First Nations education.
18. That the federal government continue to work towards improving financial literacy as outlined in Motion M-269, which was proposed by James Rajotte, M.P. and was supported by the House of Commons.
19. That the federal government continue to implement pooled retirement pension plans, including through working cooperatively with provinces and territories on the introduction of such plans.
20. That the federal government continue to ensure a competitive tax system to promote job creation and attract new investments, including through a continued commitment to the recently implemented corporate tax rate reductions and ensuring competitive personal income tax rates.
21. That the federal government explore ways to simplify the Income Tax Act to reduce the complexity and inefficiency of its administration, including through the establishment of a royal commission to undertake a comprehensive review. Additionally, the government should ensure the timely assessment of income tax returns and explore the possibility of permitting consolidated reporting.
22. That the federal government undertake a comprehensive review of the tax system and ensure its fairness as well as neutrality by continuing to close tax loopholes that allow select taxpayers to avoid paying their fair share of tax.
23. That the federal government examine further ways to better equip the Canada Revenue Agency to combat tax evasion while working collaboratively with law enforcement agencies to prosecute tax evaders.
24. That the federal government examine tax provisions in relation to estate and succession planning and their impact on the transfer of family-owned businesses.

25. That the federal government remain vigilant in examining ways to improve Canada's international tax competitiveness, including through the continued implementation of the recommendations of the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation.
26. That the federal government continue to implement the recommendations of the Red Tape Reduction Commission, such as the "One-for-One" Rule, to reduce irritants to business that impede growth, competitiveness and innovation. This could include exploring the possibility of standardizing business reporting language, known as XBRL, to reduce compliance costs for taxpayers and enhance federal data collection.
27. That the federal government continue to review the recent report of the Advisory Panel on Canada's International Education Strategy to identify ways that Canada, working with the provinces and territories, can become a leader in international education and contribute to Canada's long-term prosperity.
28. That the federal government continue its work to promote linkages between the private sector and academic institutions to further economic growth and innovation. This should include working with provinces and territories, school boards, colleges and universities to facilitate an improved understanding of labour market needs, such as encouraging graduate student internships in a range of disciplines.
29. That the federal government explore the feasibility and cost of exempting additional in-study income from the Canada Student Loans Program assessment of borrowers' assets.
30. That the federal government continue to support research and development to help ensure Canada's ongoing competitiveness.
31. That the federal government continue to refocus the National Research Council toward research that assists Canadian entrepreneurs in developing innovative products and services.
32. That the federal government continue its efforts to streamline and improve the Scientific Research and Experimental Development tax incentive program, including through implementation of its commitment to direct savings generated by these actions to more direct support for innovative private-sector businesses.
33. That the federal government move forward with its commitment to enhance access to venture capital financing.

34. That the federal government consider how to include co-operatives and new forms of social enterprise and social finance in policies and programs.
35. That, in order to improve opportunities for cooperative development, the federal government create a new partnership with the co-operative sector and Industry Canada.
36. That the federal government continue to pursue its aggressive trade agenda, including through continued pursuit of free trade agreements and the conclusion of tax treaties with foreign governments, to help eliminate barriers for Canadian goods and services in new export markets.
37. That the federal government continue to implement the Perimeter Security and Economic Competitiveness Action Plan and the Regulatory Cooperation Council Joint Action Plan to facilitate trade and investment with the United States.
38. That the federal government review the relevance of the current tariff regime on consumer goods, especially those not produced domestically, and examine the impact of their removal on household costs and government revenue.
39. That the federal government continue to work cooperatively with willing provinces and territories towards establishing a common securities regulator in order to better protect Canadians and promote the integrity of Canada's financial system.
40. That the federal government continue to encourage provinces and territories to eliminate internal barriers to trade and mobility within Canada.
41. That the federal government continually review all relevant legislation and regulations to ensure the safety and security of the financial sector, thereby maintaining Canada's standing as having the soundest banking system in the world.
42. That the federal government continue to examine ways to better protect consumers of financial sector products and services.
43. That the federal government further enhance the neutrality of the tax system by eliminating inefficient fossil fuel subsidies, in line with Canada's recent Group of Twenty commitment.
44. That the federal government continue to promote tax incentives to encourage the development and use of clean energy generation.

45. That the federal government, in conjunction with the provincial and territorial governments, continue to support clean energy projects, including the Lower Churchill hydroelectric project.
46. That the federal government continue to explore methods to encourage value-added domestic production in the energy sector.
47. That the federal government explore the cost and feasibility of expanding the accelerated capital cost allowance (ACCA) to encourage the construction of domestic infrastructure in relation to downstream activities in the oil and gas sector, such as transportation, refining and upgrading.
48. That the federal government expeditiously encourage and support the development of infrastructure in relation to liquefied natural gas exports.
49. That the federal government consider extending the temporary 15% Mineral Exploration Tax Credit for flow-through share investors for an additional year to support junior mineral exploration.
50. That the federal government, in order to remain competitive in the North American market, explore the cost and feasibility of tax incentives, such as the accelerated capital cost allowance, or other support programs to improve the affordability of commercial natural gas vehicles and the use of natural gas as transportation fuel to reduce air pollutants and support economic growth.
51. That the federal government continue to work to further strengthen Canada's traditional industries, like agriculture, manufacturing and forestry, with innovative ways to support their productivity and competitiveness.
52. That the federal government, as most recently committed in the 2012 budget, continue to engage provinces and territories, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities and other stakeholders on the development of a long-term plan for public infrastructure that extends beyond the expiry of the Building Canada plan in 2014, with a focus on economic infrastructure that supports long-term growth.
53. That the federal government continue to promote public-private partnerships, or P3s, for public infrastructure, where they can produce better value for taxpayers' dollars.
54. That the federal government continue to improve health research for the health care sector and health professions to further improve health care delivery for patients and reduce costs through improved efficiency, including through consideration of the development of pan-Canadian health indicators and promotion of best practices, such as the St. Boniface Hospital's Lean transformation program and the Canadian Centre for Innovation in Health Care.

55. That the federal government, building on recent actions for family physicians, nurses and nurse practitioners, examine the cost and feasibility of forgiving a portion of loans under the Canada Student Loans Program for new psychologists and other under-represented health care professionals who practise in underserved rural or remote communities.
56. That the federal government consider additional funding for the Canadian Institute for Military and Veteran Health Research.
57. That the federal government continue with and strengthen its efforts to combat contraband tobacco by working to reduce its trafficking, including through the establishment of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police anti-contraband force.
58. That the federal government renew the Roadmap for Canada's Linguistic Duality, with a special focus on efficient and targeted support for minority language communities.
59. That the federal government commemorate Skate Canada's 100th anniversary celebration, including through consideration of additional support for the organization and its development of amateur figure skating in Canada.
60. That the federal government continue to facilitate greater charitable giving by Canadians, including through examination of the forthcoming recommendations in relation to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance's study on tax incentives for charitable donations.

CHAPTER 7: CONCLUSION

The Committee believes in the fundamental strength of Canada: its fiscal and monetary situation and outlook, its people, its businesses and its communities. We realize, however, that the nation is affected by a range of uncontrollable factors occurring in the rest of the world. While the Canadian economy performed well during the recent global financial and economic crisis — and is expected to continue to do so, particularly when compared to other developed countries — global economic, financial and fiscal uncertainties will affect the nation to at least some extent.

As presented in the five questions that informed our pre-budget consultations this year, the Committee believes that it is important that the nation have a sustained economic recovery and growth, that jobs be created for the benefit of residents and businesses, that needed actions are taken to address the aging of Canada's population and skill shortages, that productivity improvements occur as contributors to growth and competitiveness, and that the various individuals, businesses and communities facing particular challenges are supported as they address their challenges.

From that perspective, and bearing in mind the importance of a sound fiscal situation, the Committee — in developing the recommendations presented in Chapter 6 — was mindful of the actions that are needed to support Canada's people, businesses and communities. Ultimately, it is their strength that will determine the nation's strength.

2. JOB CREATION

As Canadian companies face pressures resulting from such factors as uncertainty about the U.S. economic recovery, a sovereign debt crisis in Europe, and competition from a number of developed and developing countries, what specific federal actions do you believe should be taken to promote job creation in Canada, including that which occurs as a result of enhanced internal and international trade?

Pre-budget Consultation Minority Report – Building a better Budget for all Canadians in 2013

Introduction

The New Democratic Party is once again pleased that the Standing Committee on Finance conducted broad and extensive pre-budget consultations that engaged Canadians on fiscal and policy priorities for the 2013 Budget. However, we would suggest that the format for submissions be less limiting in the future, both in terms of questions and of allowed length. Limiting interventions to this extent does not allow for Canadians to participate in the Budget process in the fullest and most comprehensive fashion.

We are producing this minority report because, while we think that the majority report contains many important summaries of witness testimonies, the report's recommendations do not present comprehensive solutions to the important issues raised in the hearings.

Canada has done better than many countries during and after the last recession, but Canadians and their economy are not out of the woods by any means:

- Unemployment remains stubbornly high at over 7% across the country. Some provinces still have double digit unemployment and the total unemployed still number near 1.4 million – higher absolute numbers than before the recession.
- Many segments of the population have much higher than average rates of unemployment—including youth at a jobless rate of 14%, Aboriginal peoples and new Canadians.
- At a time when families are struggling to make ends meet, hundreds of thousands of Canadians are in part-time and precarious work when they would rather have full-time permanent jobs.
- The government's job creation strategy is unbalanced and limited as it puts all of its emphasis on resource extraction and export and not enough on promoting the development of value added jobs in diverse sectors.
- At the same time, there are more than a quarter of a million vacant jobs in Canada that are going unfilled.
- Rather than developing the skills of Canadian workers and matching our unemployed to these vacancies, the government has put the emphasis on Temporary Foreign Workers (TFW) as a solution. There were 190,842 new TFW entrants in 2011 – a 56-per-cent increase over the 122,368 who entered in 2005. At the end of 2011 there were 446,847 TFWs in Canada, roughly double the 2005 total. By comparison, the family class, economic and refugee categories of immigrants totaled 248,748 in 2011.
- Household debt remains stubbornly high and is worsening. In the December 2012 Financial System Review, the Bank of Canada noted that “Data for the second quarter show that the household debt-to-disposable income ratio increased by another 1 1/2 percentage points to 163 per cent, while the aggregate credit-to-GDP gap remained high.”
- Poverty also remains unacceptably high in Canada, with just under a million children living in poverty and over 882,000 Canadians using food banks on a monthly basis.

- The government is downloading massive costs to the provinces through cuts in health care and by raising the age of eligibility for OAS. The government is cutting some $36 billion from health transfers and has disengaged from any real leadership role with the provinces in improving healthcare – including assuring access to health care professionals, providing better prescription drug coverage at a lower cost, and ensuring quality homecare and long term care.

In order to effectively deal with these issues we need a new commitment to open, transparent and accountable government. We have heard from Canadians and stakeholders from coast to coast to coast who are outraged at the changes being made in successive omnibus budget bills. They want real consultation and real partnership from their government, and they deserve better.

The Government must work with the Parliamentary Budget Officer and Parliamentarians to improve transparency in the long-term so that Canadians and their representatives are able to make informed decisions about the future of our country

Dealing with an unstable world economic climate needs a clear strategy.

This is why Budget 2013 needs to be about job creation and ensuring that Canadian employment and economic growth are protected against global economic volatility. Canada needs a budget that will get Canadians to work now and that will address the persistent high unemployment that has not fundamentally subsided since the 2008 recession.

To make this happen, the federal government needs a plan to fix the skills mismatch that is sapping our economy. The government also needs to address two decades of very weak productivity growth, which has likely resulted in billions of dollars of lost gross domestic production.

As a result of a well-regulated financial sector, Canada has weathered the financial crisis and subsequent global recession better than many nations. However, ongoing volatility in the global economy, combined with contradictory domestic fiscal policy, poses a risk to Canada's future economic growth. New Democrats believe strongly that the federal government should take immediate action to safeguard the Canadian economy against outside risks from the Euro-zone and the United States.

As the Toronto Board of Trade told the Committee, “Maintaining [this] economic dynamism is not easy, especially within an economic environment characterized by considerable political and economic uncertainty in key export markets like the U.S. and Europe. Key to the success of our region's and nation's economy is having both a credible fiscal plan and a clear strategy to drive private sector growth. As events in the U.S. and Europe demonstrate, not having a credible fiscal plan becomes a drag on economic growth, increases debt servicing cost, and threatens the ability of governments to pay for vital investments in human and physical capital.”

Focus for the next Budget

Four elements require urgent attention in Budget 2013:

1. Promoting jobs and skills in a balanced economy;
2. Promoting productivity growth by closing our infrastructure gap with strategic investments;
3. Building a sustainable vision for Canada's energy economy;
4. Supporting Canada's families.

THE NDP RESPONSE 1: Promoting jobs and skills in a balanced economy

While the government talks about a jobs and prosperity agenda – this talk has not turned into action. The Official Opposition New Democrats ask the federal government to tie financial incentives to real job creation and to bring down the stubbornly high unemployment rate. We must ensure that business can find the workers they need, and that Canadian workers have the opportunities they deserve.

Economic growth and employment are currently widely divergent across Canada in terms of regions, population groups and industrial sectors. And despite the significant employment challenges outlined above, in certain regions of the country and in certain industries, there are also acute labour shortages. For example, the Prairie provinces have low levels of unemployment, while most Atlantic Canadian provinces have rates in the double digits. Measures need to be included to promote local job creation as well as to provide support for labour mobility.

As we have noted, youth, new Canadians and Aboriginal peoples all continue to have very high unemployment. Specific strategies need to be developed for these groups. For example, the Assembly of First Nations emphasized that “investments in First Nation education systems become even more crucial to ensuring that First Nation citizens can take advantage of existing and projected opportunities. Canada requires a well-trained workforce, especially in the booming resource extraction industry, and First Nation entrants into the labour market will be crucial in filling current and future labour market requirements in all sectors, skilled trades and professions”.

We also need to develop new strategies to create value added jobs in diverse sectors of the economy.

As the Canadian Labour Congress indicated, “Business investments are not where they should be. The across-the-board corporate tax cut didn't deliver the promised investments in real assets, such as new factories and workers' training. Thus, these cuts failed to boost economic growth and productivity and didn't help create more and better jobs in Canada. Instead, those corporate tax cuts delivered high compensation to CEOs, cost Canadians billions in lower than expected government revenues, led to higher federal debt and deficit, and led to cuts in public services.”<sup>1</sup>

The federal government must take immediate measures to promote job creation and to enhance and sustain economic growth for all Canadians in all regions, population groups and across all economic sectors.

The Official Opposition New Democrats are asking for the government to bring in a jobs and skills plan with the following components:

- A long-term skills training strategy – created in partnership with the provinces and territories, employers, labour and educational organizations – to fill the skilled job shortages;
- A sector-by-sector strategy – developed in partnership with industry, labour and the provinces and territories – to promote job creation across all economic sectors;
- The improvement of supports for voluntary labour mobility where there is a short or long-term need that a Canadian worker can fill;
- Developing a comprehensive strategy to deal with persistent structural youth un- and underemployment involving linking education and training with targeted job creation;

- Stable, predictable and sustainable funding – developed in consultation with First Nations – for the successful Aboriginal Skills and Employment Training Strategy and for other programs to help First Nations and other Aboriginal groups fill the skilled job shortages;
- Significant improvements to the Temporary Foreign Worker program, including working with the provinces to improve the monitoring of rights and compliance issues, and setting out a path for citizenship for Temporary Foreign Workers.

THE NDP RESPONSE 2: Turning productivity growth around by closing our infrastructure gap with strategic investments

Canada needs sustainable, predictable and transparent infrastructure funding to lower business costs and boost productivity. The Official Opposition New Democrats urge the government to take action in Budget 2013 to build our social and physical infrastructure in order to ensure Canada's competitiveness and support our families into the future.

Canada is falling behind in rebuilding existing infrastructure and creating new projects. This infrastructure deficit has major economic costs. There is a demonstrated link between aging and underdeveloped infrastructure and flagging productivity. According to the Federation of Canadian Municipalities (FCM), “During the period when productivity in the United States outpaced Canada’s, infrastructure investment in Canada declined by 3.5 percent while in the United States it grew by 24 percent. The discrepancy between Canada’s infrastructure investments and that of other global competitors, especially China and the European Union, are even greater.” In fact, Canada’s infrastructure deficit was estimated by the FCM at over $123 billion in 2007.

The Canadian Construction Association told the Committee that: “With respect to Canada's continued economic recovery and growth, it will probably come as no surprise to you that we continue to emphasize the importance of ensuring that Canada's key critical public infrastructures—its highways, roads, bridges, seaports, border crossings, inland trade routes, water treatment facilities, water distribution systems, schools, and hospitals—are not only repaired and restored, but improved and maintained. Why? Because there can be no economic growth without state-of-the-art and well-maintained critical public infrastructure”.

The cost of new infrastructure more than pays for itself over time. The Association of Consulting Engineering Companies – Canada cited a study by the Residential and Civil Construction Alliance of Ontario that “predicts that public infrastructure underinvestment will cost the Canadian economy 1.1% of real GDP growth annually over the next fifty years and reduce the long-term profitability of Canadian businesses by an average of 20%”.

Investment in public infrastructure provides enormous economic benefits. The Federation of Canadian Municipalities noted in their presentation to the Committee that “There is no surer way to create jobs today and strengthen our economic foundations of tomorrow than investing in municipal infrastructure”. The Association of Consulting Engineering Companies – Canada agreed: “A national, long-term infrastructure investment strategy can eliminate the economic costs of infrastructure underinvestment and promote a sustained economic recovery in Canada”.

There is also a crucial link between innovation and good jobs. The Canada Foundation for Innovation told the Committee that: “The Government of Canada’s most important role in increasing productivity is to support both the generation of new knowledge that leads to innovation and the training of highly productive workers.”

Innovative technology is a key driver of increased productivity. For this reason, if Canada is to invest to promote innovation, it must help businesses every step of the way. As Ecotech noted, “The funding chain tends to give businesses access to capital over the entire phase of development, from basic research all the way to marketing and public trading of shares”. The Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters Association has also warned against the effects of cuts to research funding<sup>2</sup>.

Canada needs a long-term strategy that provides cities with long-term, predictable funding to improve business productivity and keep our communities moving. Funding should support innovative projects such as public transit, as well as projects that will help refurbish our communities and spur creative job development.

The Official Opposition New Democrats are calling on the federal government to address Canada’s lagging productivity gap by:

- Bringing in long-term, predictable and transparent infrastructure funding, starting with the allocation of 1 cent of the gas tax to transit projects across the country;
- Maintaining the Gateways and Border Crossings Fund, and continuing current federal infrastructure commitments, like those under the Building Canada Fund;
- Reversing cuts to research funding.

THE NDP RESPONSE 3: Building a sustainable vision for Canada’s energy economy

We need a Canadian energy strategy that realizes our potential and reflects the interests of all Canadians. The Official Opposition New Democrats urge the federal government to partner with the provinces and territories in moving Canada to a sustainable energy future.

The way we produce and consume our energy has major implications both for the competitiveness of our economy, and for the sustainability of our environment. A sound and sustainable energy policy for the 21st century must integrate both renewable and nonrenewable energy sectors. It must be framed in the practical understanding that economic success and the protection of the environment are deeply intertwined.

New Democrats recognize that depending solely on renewable sources is impossible and must be balanced with the use of existing non-renewable energy resources. The responsible approach would be to work with the provinces, territories and First Nations stakeholders to set a policy framework that would reduce our environmental footprint, and that would also safeguard future generations’ access to Canada’s valuable yet finite resources. Such a framework would include improved environmental performance as well as an increase in value-added processing of energy resources in Canada to capture more of the benefits of our non-renewable resources.

Countries like Germany are showing us that the right mix of public investment and market solutions in the green economy can create whole new sectors in green technology, conservation and renewable energy. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce told the Committee that “no one opposes environmental improvements. It is in area in Canada that we think is very promising”.

Unfortunately, Canada is missing out on this important opportunity. We are at the top globally of per capita contributors to climate change, and at the bottom of international energy efficiency ratings of major economies.

The Conservatives are squandering Canada's ability to cash in on a clean technology market that reached $1 trillion last year and is expected to grow to $3 trillion by 2020. Their roll back of environmental protections and failure to make polluters pay is not only causing significant damage to our environment – it's having a negative impact on our economy as well.

And yet we are still spending large sums on tax expenditures for fossil fuels. The Green Budget Coalition has recommended to the Committee that the government "further reduce the over $1.3 billion in federal subsidies to fossil fuels".

The Conservative government's focus on exports of raw resources undermines our capacity to help secure Canada's own energy needs, and neglects important opportunities for building value-added industry and good-paying jobs across the country.

The Canadian Labour Congress confirmed that our reliance on exporting unprocessed natural resources has a negative impact on productivity. They advocate for a new policy framework for international trade and investment that will lay out essential principles such as strict labour standards, create good jobs and promote sustainable economic development.

The Official Opposition New Democrats are calling for Budget 2013 to include a sustainable vision for Canada's energy economy. The federal government must work with the provinces on the development of a Canadian energy strategy that will kick-start our green energy potential by:

- Restoring investment in home energy efficiency retrofits;
- Supporting renewable energy sectors to help Canada grow and succeed in a new global economy;
- Taking action on eliminating $1.3 billion in fossil fuel subsidies;
- Helping industry capture the benefits of clean technology markets by supporting green R&D;
- Supporting skills training to prepare Canadian workers for the jobs of tomorrow.

THE NDP RESPONSE 4: Supporting Canada's families

Canada's stagnant economic growth has had serious consequences for families. The Official Opposition New Democrats urge the federal government to use Budget 2013 to protect families and the economy from the looming household debt crunch.

Both Bank of Canada Governor Mark Carney and Minister Flaherty have issued warnings about unprecedented levels of household debt, but the Conservative government is failing to take the necessary actions to deal with this situation. Between 1982 and 2010, mortgage debt has exploded, increasing tenfold. Consumer debt has increased from $48 billion to $460 billion over the same period.

At the same time, wages have remained stagnant and income inequality has been on the rise in Canada over the last two decades. Things remain particularly difficult for women, new Canadians and Aboriginal Canadians. YWCA Canada emphasized to the Committee that "Women are central to the nation's prosperity and productivity. Economic policy that fails to recognize this will fail for lack of foundation in the realities of Canada today".

Budget 2013 must provide a plan for economic growth that benefits everyone. As Campaign 2000 noted, “This period of slow economic growth and high personal debt requires the federal government to prevent and reduce poverty for the health and well-being of all Canadians”.

Unfortunately, the Conservative government has remained focused on an austerity agenda that has made major cuts to the services on which families rely. Of the nearly 1.4 million Canadians who are unemployed, only about 39% of them receive Employment Insurance benefits. The Conservatives’ recent changes will make the situation worse and force unemployed Canadians to accept lower skilled jobs and leave home to seek work.

Communities and industries that depend on seasonal workers are bearing the brunt of the Conservative changes introduced without any consultation with premium-paying workers and businesses. Wait times at Service Canada are unacceptably long and have not improved.

When interest rates go back up, or if we experience another economic shock as a result of global economic volatility, things could get much worse for millions of Canadians.

The Official Opposition New Democrats are calling on the federal government to take immediate action to set out a plan that will protect Canadian families and the economy from the looming household debt crunch, including:

- Reverse their damaging reforms to Employment Insurance and fix EI so that it works for unemployed Canadians;
- Hiring sufficient staff to properly administer Service Canada programs and dramatically reducing wait times;
- Implementing strong regulations to stop abusive practices by banks, lenders and credit card companies;
- Implementing the housing strategy as outlined in Bill C-400 (MC Morin);
- Implementing the anti-poverty strategy as outlined in Bill C-233 (Crowder);
- Providing equitable funding for all First Nations schools based on the Shannen’s Dream motion passed in the House in February 2012, including core and program funding that is stable, sustainable and predictable and that is determined in consultation with First Nations.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT OF THE LIBERAL PARTY OF CANADA

This year, the Standing Committee on Finance heard from a record number of individuals and organizations during its pre-budget consultations. We would like to thank the hundreds of people who took the time to share their thoughts with us either through written submissions or by appearing before the Committee.

While we support many of the recommendations contained in the report, we believe that the report does not go far enough in addressing the important challenges facing Canada.

Jobs and the Economy

We are concerned that the majority on the Committee have grown complacent about troubles in Canada's economy. Job creation has failed to keep up with population growth. The proportion of Canadians in the labour force remains well below pre-recession levels; too many have given up and stopped looking for work. In 2012, Canada saw some of the highest youth unemployment numbers since Statistics Canada began to track the data in the 1970s; an entire generation of Canadians risks being scarred with high student debt and no meaningful job experience. Therefore, to help improve job creation we recommend:

- 1. That the government recognize the significant unemployment and underemployment of young Canadians, and implement a national youth jobs strategy that includes a hiring tax credit dedicated to young Canadians, a significant expansion of the Canada Summer jobs program, and the reopening the summer job centres that were closed by the government.
- 2. That the government freeze Employment Insurance (E.I.) premium rates in order help Canadian employers create Canadian jobs.

If, however, the government chooses to proceed with another temporary "hiring" credit for small businesses instead of an across-the-board E.I. rate freeze, we recommend:

- 3. That the government lift the freeze on the $10,000 threshold for the hiring credit so that, unlike in 2012, small businesses near the threshold will not be penalized for hiring new workers or giving their existing workers modest wage increases.

- 4. That the government extend the accelerated Capital Cost Allowance (CCA) for a period of at least five years so that Canadian employers can make strategic investments to boost productivity and create Canadian jobs.
- 5. That the government reverse its cuts to the Scientific Research and Experimental Development (SR&ED) tax credit in order to provide the necessary incentives for Canadian employers to invest in Canadian research and development and create Canadian jobs.
- 6. That, in order to maintain a strong and vibrant tourism industry in Canada, the government recognize how essential international marketing is to attracting more foreign tourists to Canada and increase support for the Canada Tourism Commission.

The Committee also heard from the Bank of Canada that record high personal debt levels are the single biggest domestic threat to our economy. High personal debt is also a threat to Canadians' retirement security. To help Canadians increase their savings and prepare for retirement, we recommend:

- 7. That the government work with the provinces and territories to introduce a voluntary, supplemental program under the Canada Pension Plan so that Canadians and their employers have access to a retirement savings option with lower risks and lower administrative costs.

Childcare remains one of the most significant costs facing Canadian families. A recent TD report argues for greater public investment in early childhood education:

"There is a great deal of literature showing compelling evidence of the benefits of early learning. Not only do high-quality early childhood education programs benefit children, they also have positive impacts on parents and the economy as a whole. Several studies show that the benefits of early childhood education far outweigh the costs... More focus should be put on investing in, and improving, the system. Indeed, in most parts of Canada, there currently exists a gap between parental leave and the start of formal schooling, and the limited child care spaces that are available are often very costly for parents."

To strengthen the economy and help Canadian families make ends meet, we recommend:

8. That the government increase support for affordable early childhood education and care programs.

A Stronger Society

While the body of the report includes testimony from a wide range of witnesses calling attention to challenges faced by disadvantaged Canadians, the majority report is remarkably light on recommendations that address these challenges.

We reject the false dichotomy that others believe exists between a strong economy and a compassionate society. Instead, we believe that making the necessary investments so that Canadians from all backgrounds can more fully participate in the economy is both the right thing to do and makes good economic sense. Removing the barriers that prevent some Canadians from completing their education or contributing to the workforce leads to greater productivity and economic growth. Investing in education, health care, arts and culture not only contributes to a stronger society; it also helps us to attract and retain talent from around the world in today's globally competitive market for skilled workers.

On the issue of removing economic barriers for Aboriginal Canadians, the Committee heard from a large number of witnesses about the need to significantly improve funding and support for Aboriginal education. We heard from the University of Saskatchewan that:

"Investing in aboriginal education and employment is not only a moral imperative, it is a sound investment. Studies have shown that closing the education and labour market gap between aborigines and non-aboriginals by 2026 would lead to cumulative benefits of $400.5 billion in additional output and $115 billion in avoided government expenditures over the period from 2001 to 2026."

The Canadian Alliance of Student Associations also told the Committee that:

"Demographic projections illustrate that one of the most important investments the government can make is in the aboriginal population of Canada, which is forecast to grow to 1.4 million by 2017. However, the program currently structured to support First Nations and Inuit students is under a 2% funding cap placed on Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada... Those who've received funding are accessing and completing their education, and this is a positive. We're recommending the government remove the 2% funding cap on the post-secondary student support program, fund the backlog of students who've been denied funding, and ensure that the program is adequately funded into the future..."

Therefore, we recommend:

- 9. That the Government of Canada recognize the urgent need to improve socioeconomic outcomes of Aboriginal Peoples in Canada through significantly improved educational support, including the immediate removal of the 2 percent funding cap on the Post-Secondary Student Support Program for Aboriginal students.

The Committee also heard from witnesses about challenges associated with Canada's rapidly aging population. Witnesses argued for a smarter use of resources to relieve pressure on our public healthcare sector, and greater support for Canadians who are taking care of their aging loved ones. The Canadian Medical Association told the Committee that:

"Our country needs to catch up with other nations and develop a pan-Canadian strategy for long-term care, home care, and palliative care. We badly need a dementia strategy, and we need a national pharmaceutical strategy. We should not accept that one in 10 Canadians cannot afford to buy the medicines they've been prescribed... We know we are the only one of the G-7 countries that does not have a national dementia strategy."

Therefore, we recommend:

- 10. That the government introduce a national dementia strategy.
- 11. That the government recognize the need for a national pharmaceutical strategy so that Canadians can afford essential drugs.

Finally, the recommendations in the report were silent on one of the single most important concerns to Canadians: growing income inequality. We recommend:

- 12. That the government continue to increase the value of the Working Income Tax Benefit (WITB) and move toward widening eligibility for the WITB to include all households with earned income below the after-tax low income cut-off (LICO).

- 13. That the government reverse its recent decision to increase in the age of eligibility for Old Age Security (OAS) benefits.
- 14. That the government design and implement a federal poverty reduction plan.
- 15. That, in order to move toward a more fair and just society, the government consider making the Disability Tax Credit and the Family Caregiver Tax Credit fully refundable so that low-income Canadians are not deliberately excluded from these programs.
- 16. That, in order to fight growing income inequality in Canada, the government refrain from introducing new personal income tax credits until existing personal income tax credits – in particular, the Disability Tax Credit, Family Caregiver Tax Credit, Volunteer Firefighters Tax Credit, Children’s Arts Tax Credit, Children’s Fitness Tax Credit, Public Transit Tax Credit, and the education tax credits – are made fully refundable so that low-income Canadians can also benefit from them.
