Chairperson's Message

I have the honour, as Acting Chairperson of the Canadian Artists and Producers Professional Relations Tribunal, of presenting the Tribunal's Annual Report for 2011-2012 to Parliament and Canadians.

In the period under review, the Tribunal continued to promote and encourage constructive professional relations in the cultural sector, by administering the collective bargaining provisions of the Status of the Artist Act.

The Status of the Artist Act gives legal recognition and protection to collective bargaining by independent self-employed artists.

As countless studies and reports have shown, culture and the arts play a tremendously important role in Canada's society and economy. They are fundamental to our shared humanity, central to how we as Canadians represent ourselves to the world, and huge in their economic impact, with even small investments yielding multiple benefits in wealth and employment.

Collective bargaining is critical to artists and producers in the face of a continuously changing, and challenging, marketplace. Artists and producers need to develop creative collective agreements, in order to improve working conditions and compensation for artists, provide stable and predictable professional relations and qualified talent pools for producers, and build a strong Canadian presence in international cultural markets. We at the Tribunal are proud to play a role in this.

I have had the pleasure again this year of serving with very qualified Tribunal members. Mr. Robert Beccarea was re-appointed for a term of one year, effective October 20, 2011. Mr. Beccarea has over 27 years of legal practice and experience on administrative boards, and his expertise has proven invaluable to the Tribunal.

Ms. Marie-Josée Castonguay was re-appointed for a term of one year, effective December 11, 2011. Ms. Castonguay has over 15 years of experience in law and administrative tribunals, and has a particular expertise in labour law.

Ms. Lyse Lemieux, whose appointment ended in June, 2010, continued to take part as a panel member in the hearing and determination of a case with which she was previously seized, in accordance with the Act. That case was decided in the period under review. Once again, I thank Ms. Lemieux, a noted visual artist, for her many years of service to the Tribunal.

Our work as Tribunal members would be impossible without the help of our capable staff, and I want to take this opportunity to thank them all. I look forward to working with them, with my fellow members, and with our many stakeholders, as we go forward.

Elaine Kierans

Acting Chairperson and Chief Executive Officer

PART ONE

The Tribunal and What It Does

Mandate

The Canadian Artists and Producers Professional Relations Tribunal administers Part II of the Status of the Artist Act (“the Act”), which governs professional relations between self-employed artists and federally regulated producers. The Tribunal is an independent, quasi-judicial federal agency, whose goal is to encourage constructive professional relations between these parties.

The Tribunal’s jurisdiction covers broadcasting undertakings under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, federal government departments, and the majority of federal agencies and Crown corporations, such as the National Film Board and national museums.

Self-employed artists within the Tribunal’s jurisdiction include artists covered by the Copyright Act (such as writers, photographers and music composers), performers (such as actors, musicians and singers), directors, and other professionals who contribute to the creation of a production, such as those doing camera work, lighting and costume design.

The Tribunal has the following principal statutory responsibilities:

- To define sectors of cultural activity suitable for collective bargaining between artists’ associations and producers,
- To certify artists’ associations to represent self-employed artists working in these sectors, and
- To deal with complaints of unfair labour practices and other matters brought forward by artists, artists’ associations or producers, and prescribe appropriate remedies.

In carrying out its responsibilities, the Tribunal assists self-employed artists, artists’ associations and producers in the conduct of their professional relations.

Artists’ associations certified under the Act have the exclusive right to negotiate scale agreements with producers. A scale agreement specifies the minimum terms and conditions under which producers engage the services of, or commission a work from, a self-employed artist in a specified sector, as well as other matters related to the use of the work or services of artists.

Role

The role of the Tribunal is to provide a strong legal framework to support collective bargaining in the arts. This is important to artists, artists’ associations and producers, and to Canadians as a whole.

Constructive professional relations are an important element of a vibrant Canadian arts and culture sector. When artists can earn fair compensation and obtain equitable economic and social status with other Canadian workers, they are more likely to continue their artistic work. This provides producers with a national pool of highly skilled artistic talent. Both groups also need a stable, predictable environment. This means improved status, remuneration and working conditions for artists and fair compensation for the use of artists’ work, and an environment in which producers can plan their projects around established terms and conditions for engaging artists.

Over the years since the passage of the Status of the Artist Act, the Tribunal has defined 26 sectors of artistic activity and certified 24 artists’ associations to represent them. Artists’ associations certified under the Act have gone on to conclude nearly 190 scale agreements with producers, including broadcasters and federal government institutions. Seven percent of these are the first agreements that the parties have ever concluded.

Most sectors are now defined and artists' associations certified to represent them. The work of the Tribunal now focuses more on assisting parties in the bargaining process, renewal of certification orders, dealing with complaints under the Act about matters that arise in the bargaining relationship, changes in the definition of sectors and representation, and determining questions referred to the Tribunal by arbitrators.

Our Organization

The Tribunal is an independent quasi-judicial agency. It reports to Parliament through the Minister of Labour.

The Minister of Labour is responsible under the Act for tabling the Tribunal's annual report before Parliament and for signing documents required under the Financial Administration Act. The Minister of Labour also makes recommendations to the Governor in Council, in consultation with the Minister of Heritage, for the appointment of members to the Tribunal.

Under its governance structure, the Chairperson is the chief executive officer of the Tribunal and is responsible for management of the staff and supervision of the work of the Tribunal.

In 2011-2012, Elaine Kierans presided over the Tribunal as Acting Chairperson, under subsection 11(4) of the Act, as the position of Chairperson remained vacant during that period.

The Executive Director and General Counsel of the Tribunal assists the Chairperson in the exercise of her functions and, subject to her direction, directs and supervises the day-to-day operation of the Tribunal, the management of its internal affairs, and the work of the employees. As General Counsel, she is also responsible for the provision of legal support and research to the Chairperson and the Tribunal members as required.

Changes at the Tribunal

During fiscal year 2011-2012, all three members of the Tribunal were reappointed. Ms. Elaine Kierans was re-appointed on March 24, 2011, as Vice-Chairperson of the Tribunal for a term of one year, effective May 11, 2011.

Mr. Robert Beccarea was re-appointed as a part-time member of the Tribunal on October 20, 2011, for a term of one year.

Ms. Marie-Josée Castonguay was re-appointed as a part-time member of the Tribunal on December 11, 2011, for a term of one year.

PART TWO

This Year at the Tribunal

This Year at the Tribunal

The Tribunal's primary responsibility is to provide its stakeholder base – artists, artists' associations, and producers – with the structured framework for professional relations set out in the Status of the Artist Act. The Tribunal also provides stakeholders with assistance and support related to the collective bargaining process.

Tribunal staff members also carry out communications and outreach work to make the Act and its provisions more widely known to stakeholders and encourage them to make use of its provisions. In addition, staff members provide support to Tribunal members, and conduct research on issues related to the arts and cultural sector.

Case Activity

The Tribunal began fiscal 2011-2012 with three cases pending from the previous fiscal year. During the year, the Tribunal rendered one interim and one final letter decision. (Letter decisions, which are not published, deal with relatively straightforward administrative issues.) Two cases were pending at fiscal year-end.

Hearings were held in 2011 into the complaint filed on April 22, 2008, by the Canadian Artists' Representation/Le Front des artistes canadiens (CARFAC) and Le Regroupement des artistes en arts visuels du Québec (RAAV) against the National Gallery of Canada (NGC), alleging that the NGC failed to bargain in good faith (File No. 1330-08-001). CAPPRT Decision 053, the Tribunal's final decision in the matter, was issued on February 16, 2012. A copy of CAPPRT Decision 053 is available on the Tribunal's website.

On March 14, 2012, the NGC filed an application for judicial review of CAPPRT Decision 053 in the Federal Court of Appeal.

The complaint filed on February 15, 2011, by l'Union des artistes against la Société Radio-Canada remains before the Tribunal. Hearings have not been held because the Tribunal has lacked the necessary quorum of members to hear the case.

Certification Renewal

Pursuant to subsection 28(2) of the Act, an artists' association's certification by the Tribunal as the bargaining agent for a specified sector is valid for three years. During the 2011-2012 fiscal year, thirteen certification orders issued by the Tribunal came up for renewal:

- ACTRA Performers Guild
- Alliance québécoise des techniciens de l'image et du son
- Association québécoise des auteurs dramatiques
- Canadian Actors' Equity Association
- Canadian Association of Photographers and Illustrators in Communications
- Canadian Federation of Musicians / Fédération canadienne des musiciens
- Canadian Federation of Musicians / Fédération canadienne des musiciens (Pension)
- Editors' Association of Canada / Association canadienne des réviseurs
- Guilde des musiciens et musiciennes du Québec
- Periodical Writers Association of Canada
- Playwrights Guild Of Canada
- Société professionnelle des auteurs et des compositeurs du Québec
- Writers Guild of Canada

All thirteen certifications were renewed for a further three years.

The Tribunal's decisions on certification and information about the sectors for which these artists' associations are certified to bargain are available on the Tribunal's website¹.

Bargaining Under the Act

Agreements filed with the Tribunal

Pursuant to subsection 33(2) of the Act, parties to a scale agreement are required to file a copy of the agreement with the Minister of Labour without delay. The Tribunal encourages the parties to send a copy of the agreement to the Secretariat of the Tribunal as well, to assist it in reporting on bargaining activity under the Act. During the 2011-2012 fiscal year, six scale agreements were filed with the Tribunal:

- Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) & National Film Board (amendment)
- Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) & CBC Radio and Television (amendment)
- Société des auteurs de radio, télévision et cinéma (SARTEC) & National Film Board (amendment)
- Union des artistes (UDA) & Musique Plus (amendment)
- Union des artistes (UDA) & TV5 Québec Canada (TV5)
- Union des artistes (UDA) & National Battlefields Commission.

These scale agreements are accessible on the Tribunal's website².

Notices to bargain filed with the Tribunal

To initiate the bargaining process or to renew or revise a scale agreement, an artists' association or a producer serves a notice to bargain on the other party. Subsection 31(5) of the Act states that a party issuing a notice to bargain must file a copy with the Minister of Labour without delay. As with scale agreements, the Tribunal encourages the parties to file copies of their notices to bargain with the Tribunal as well. In fiscal year 2011-2012, five notices to bargain were filed with the Tribunal Secretariat:

- Alliance of Canadian Cinema, Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA) & CBC Radio and Television (April 11, 2011)
- Canadian Actors Equity Association (CAEA) & National Arts Centre Special Events (June 2, 2011)
- Union des artistes (UDA) & Office des télécommunications éducatives de langue française de l'Ontario (TFO) (September 15, 2011)
- Directors Guild of Canada (DGC) & National Film Board (February 14, 2012)
- Société des auteurs de radio, télévision et cinéma (SARTEC) and Société Radio-Canada (March 28, 2012).

Once a notice to bargain has been issued, the parties must meet and begin bargaining within twenty days, unless they agree otherwise. Four of the notices to bargain sent in 2011-2012 were still outstanding at the end of the fiscal year.

Tribunal staff members were available throughout the fiscal year to provide information and assistance to the parties in bargaining as required.

Communications and Outreach

Communications and outreach are very important to the Tribunal. The Tribunal's communications strategy, research agenda, and outreach activities continued to be central to its work in 2011-2012. The Tribunal has always worked to ensure that artists' associations and producers understand the Status of the Artist Act and what it can do for them. This is of increasing importance with the acceleration of changes in the new media and broadcasting industries.

The Chairperson, members and senior staff members play a key role in building awareness of the Tribunal's mandate and services. They serve on professional committees and frequently share their professional knowledge and experience with colleagues, clients and stakeholders, at conferences, presentations, and training sessions.

Again in 2011-2012, Tribunal senior staff attended industry conferences and met with representatives of artists' associations and producers. This has been an important area of activity of the Tribunal for some time.

The Tribunal continued to update its website to emphasize the services that the Tribunal can make available to artists, artists' associations, and producers. It also maintained its commitment to the Treasury Board Secretariat's standards for accessibility, usability, and official languages on the Internet.

All written reasons for decisions are available on the Tribunal's website, as are the Tribunal's Information Bulletins.

More detailed information on the Tribunal's activities is available in the Tribunal's annual Departmental Performance Report.

Enhanced Assistance to the Parties in the Bargaining Process

Professional relations between artists, artists' associations representing them, and producers are enhanced when all parties work with the same information. The Tribunal's staff members are committed to assisting parties and providing them with information and research, and to making this information publicly available.

The Tribunal continued to add digital copies of scale agreements to its website in 2011-2012. Most of the scale agreements currently in force between artists' associations and producers under the Act can be viewed on the Tribunal's website. This is part of a continuing project, which includes providing analyses of the scale agreements and facilitating comparisons between them. The Tribunal's Information Bulletin is issued on a monthly basis. The bulletins provide information on collective bargaining, case activity, and developments at the Tribunal, and are distributed electronically to a mailing list and made available on the website.

Tribunal staff members provide information to artists, producers and members of the public in response to inquiries. This is an ongoing commitment that frequently requires the staff to research complex issues and track down answers.

The complexity of the new digital media environment presents artists, artists' association and producers with unprecedented challenges related to collective bargaining. These have a significant impact on the work of the Tribunal. Much of the Tribunal staff's research focuses on broadcasting, one of the principal areas of the Tribunal's jurisdiction. Broadcasting is undergoing dramatic transformations, with mergers, changes of ownership, new technologies, and disrupted business models. Another area of importance for research is copyright law, since copyright is so fundamental to the monetization of culture, and is frequently an important element in or underlying scale agreements. Tribunal staff followed closely the work of Parliament on reform of the Copyright Act.

The Tribunal also encourages parties unable to reach an agreement to seek the assistance of professional mediators. Mediators can be appointed pursuant to section 45 of the Act. They are appointed from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS). They are knowledgeable, impartial third parties, with no decision power, who intervene in disputes to help the parties reach their own mutually acceptable solutions. These services are made available free of charge to the parties.

Mediation contributes directly to constructive professional relations in the cultural sector.

PART THREE

The context for the Tribunal and the Status of the Artist Act

The context for the Tribunal and the Status of the Artist Act

At the UNESCO World Congress on the Status of the Artist in 1997, held to review progress made following the 1980 recommendation on the status of the artist, Canada was often cited as an example. The following conclusion of the Congress is noteworthy:

Self-employed artists must be able to enjoy the same rights and freedoms as employed people – including the right to bargain collectively and to benefit from social security systems. This was far from being the case in far too many countries.

Artists and producers play a central role in creating and defining Canada and Canadians. They make our lives richer and our society vibrant. They represent Canada internationally. And, as studies keep showing, artistic activity creates jobs and generates wealth well beyond the amounts invested in it.

According to a 2008 analysis³ by the Conference Board of Canada, the cultural sector generated about $46 billion in real value-added gross domestic product (GDP) in 2007. This constituted 3.8 percent of Canada's real GDP. The cultural sector also created 616,000 jobs.

Moreover, the arts and cultural industries enhance economic performance more generally and act, in the words of the Conference Board, as “a catalyst of prosperity,” attracting talent and spurring creativity across all sectors of the economy. The Conference Board found that when the effects on other sectors of the economy were considered, the economic footprint of the arts and cultural industries amounted to about $84.6 billion in 2007, or 7.4 percent of total real GDP, and contributed 1.1 million jobs to the economy.

The earnings of Canadian artists, however, do not reflect their contributions to the country. The Federal Cultural Policy Review Committee observed in 1982 that most artists could best be classified as “highly-specialized, working poor” who subsidized Canada's culture through their unpaid or underpaid labour. Many reports since then have pointed out that artists have significantly lower earnings than other workers, and, because they tend to be self-employed, often do not have access to social program benefits available to employees, such as employment insurance, training benefits and pension funds.

In February 2009, Hill Strategies Research released *A Statistical Profile of Artists in Canada Based on the 2006 Census*⁴. Among the findings was that the number of artists in Canada in 2006 was slightly larger than the number of Canadians directly employed in the automotive industry (135,000). When heritage and cultural occupations were included as part of a broader cultural sector, the number employed swelled to 609,000, about double the number employed in the forestry sector and more than double the number in Canadian banks.

The report highlighted some key facts about artists in Canada. Most noteworthy, and perhaps most predictable, was that their average earnings are very low. Median earnings for artists in 2006 were only $12,900, less than half the typical earnings of all Canadian workers, and 38 percent below the low-income cutoff for larger urban areas. The situation is worse in some arts than in others, and a typical actor, artisan, dancer, musician, or visual artist earns only about $10,000 or less.

Another finding confirmed what was known from earlier studies: higher education for artists does not translate into economic success. Not only is the percentage of artists with a bachelor's degree or higher nearly double the rate in the overall labour force, but the average earnings of university-educated artists are less than the average earnings of overall labour force workers with a high school diploma.

³ Conference Board of Canada, Valuing Culture: Measuring and Understanding Canada's Creative Economy (August 2008).

⁴ Available on-line at <http://www.hillstrategies.com/>

What all this points to is that, more than ever, there is a need for a strong collective bargaining regime in the arts, to support predictable, structured professional relations between artists and producers, and to ensure the continued existence of a pool of professional artistic talent.

There are a number of respects in which the Act falls short of the expectations of the many artists and producers who welcomed it when it was introduced.

The impact of the Act is limited by its application to the federal jurisdiction. Most work in the cultural sector, including the bulk of film and television production, sound recording, art exhibitions, theatrical production and book publishing, falls under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

To date, Quebec is the only province with legislation granting collective bargaining rights to self-employed artists and providing an administrative structure for professional relations in the arts. The Tribunal supports the adoption by other jurisdictions of collective bargaining legislation for self-employed artists. In the past, it has provided information to policy makers and others interested in the benefits of such legislation, and it will continue to do so.

The Act's effectiveness is also limited because few federal government institutions – one of the class of producers covered by the Act – have entered into scale agreements with artists' associations. Artists' associations are typically hard-pressed for time and resources, and would rather negotiate with producers' associations than with individual producers. Similarly, many government producers would prefer to designate one department as their lead negotiator. One of the recommendations from the Department of Canadian Heritage's 2002 evaluation report was that the government consider establishing a single bargaining authority for all departments. The Tribunal continues to support this recommendation, as it would facilitate the bargaining process and make it more cost-effective, and is committed to working with other federal government institutions to promote understanding of the Act and the importance of respecting it.

Most importantly, as the Tribunal has frequently noted in reports to Parliament, amendments to the Status of the Artist Act, such as requiring arbitration in specific situations for the settlement of first agreements, would make the Act more effective.
