THE MACE

The Mace is a symbol of the authority of the Senate. Measuring 1.6 metres in length and weighing 11 kilograms, the Mace is made of brass and plated in gold. It dates from the mid-19th century. When the Senate is in session, the Mace rests on the clerk's table at the centre of the Senate Chamber. The Mace Bearer carries the Mace on the right shoulder during processions.

THE UNIFORMS AND SYMBOLS OF SENATE OFFICERS

The Hon. Joseph Édouard Cauchon,
Speaker of the Senate, April 1871

The distinctive black uniforms worn by the Speaker, Speaker pro tempore, the senior officers and the clerks at the table (procedural officers) in the Senate are part of the visible heritage of the Westminster parliamentary tradition observed in Canada. The sombre robes and outfits became the standard garb of the legal profession in the courts of England, shared by senior officers of the Lords and Commons in keeping with their affiliation to the High Court of Parliament. This court attire became required dress in Britain from the 18th century, and it has remained fundamentally unchanged from that time. It is now an integral part of the ceremonies and customs of most of the parliaments that emerged from the colonial legislatures of the British Empire, including that of Canada.

In the Senate, a particular parliamentary uniform is worn by the Speaker, the Speaker pro tempore and the clerks at the table. Its most visible component is a silk robe with a flat hood and distinctive “wings” that hang from the open elbow sleeves. A symbolic, black silk “wig bag” is fastened over the shoulders and hangs at the middle of the back. The robe is worn over a black wool tail coat, pigeon-breasted, with seven buttons and false buttonholes dressed with stitched ribbons. It has large buttoned cuffs also finished with ribbon. The lapels of the coat are connected at the middle by concealed hooks. The coat is worn over a black vest and wool trousers trimmed with a narrow silk band. The white shirts have French cuffs and winged collars around which are tied tabs, two white starched bands. The Speaker and Speaker pro tempore add to this a black tricorn hat.

The uniform worn by the Usher of the Black Rod, the Queen’s attendant in Parliament, differs somewhat. The Black Rod does not wear the robe, replaces the tab necktie with a white bow tie or lace jabot, and adds a bicorne hat and ceremonial sword. He carries the Black Rod, a symbol of his office. The Mace Bearer, the keeper of the ceremonial Senate Mace, wears the tab necktie, but not the silk gown or wig bag.

THE HONOURABLE
NOËL A. KINSELLA

Speaker of the Senate

Our Constitution states that “There shall be One Parliament for Canada, consisting of the Queen, an Upper House styled the Senate, and the House of Commons,” a clear reflection of our Westminster parliamentary heritage. The Senate is often described as the “chamber of sober second thought,” reflecting its role in reviewing and revising proposed legislation.

The Senate has a close association with the Crown and it is in the Senate Chamber that the thrones for Her Majesty and her consort are located. When the three constituent elements of Parliament come together in one place for the transaction of business, which includes the reading of the Speech from the Throne and the signification of Royal Assent to bills, it is always done in the Senate Chamber.

On these occasions, the Queen, or her representative the Governor General, takes the throne on the dais in the Senate Chamber and the Usher of the Black Rod is sent to summon the members of the House of Commons to the Senate Chamber.

This relationship between the Crown and the Senate is readily apparent to visitors to the Senate, as images of our monarchs abound in its art and architecture. Even the history of Canada’s evolution under two crowns, first of France and then of Great Britain, is in evidence in the impressive stone carvings of their respective Royal Arms at the south end of the chamber.

During fiscal year 2011–12, Canada and the Commonwealth celebrated the 60th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II’s accession to the throne. The Senate added two images of Her Majesty to the fabric of its architecture to mark the occasion. In a ceremony attended by His Excellency, Governor General David Johnston, and Prime Minister Stephen Harper, a new image of Her Majesty carved in stone was unveiled, joining the carvings of all of Canada’s previous monarchs, each one set at the base of one of the arches in the Senate foyer. On February 7 of this year, the Senate held a ceremony to dedicate a new stained glass window installed over the Senate entrance to the Centre Block.

This stunningly beautiful window commemorates the diamond jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II and also that of Queen Victoria. Canada has only had two queens to date and both have celebrated their diamond anniversaries, the only two monarchs in all of Great Britain’s history to do so. It is a glowing daily reminder to senators and visitors of our history as a parliamentary monarchy and of Her Majesty, who has reigned with such distinction and grace over Canada since 1952. We are inspired by her diligence and selfless dedication to service, and each of us would do well to emulate her example.

THE HONOURABLE DAVID TKACHUK

Chair, Standing Senate Committee
on Internal Economy,
Budgets and Administration

Fiscal responsibility; accountability; transparency. This trio of terms holds great meaning to the members of the committee I chair, the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration. We strive to improve in these areas not only because it is expected of us, but because it is our duty to the Canadian public. We made significant progress this year on all three fronts.

In 2011–12, we worked with senior management to review our Main Estimates and cut costs. These cuts will be made to the budgets not only of the Senate's administrative body, but to those of the Senate's committees, political leaders and international and interparliamentary activities, as well as to senators' office budgets.

This year is the third in which our financial statements were audited. The audit was done by an outside firm in accordance with Canadian generally accepted auditing standards. Once again, we received an unqualified opinion. We continue to publish quarterly reports on expenses, now an entrenched part of our work process. We also opened our doors this year to the Auditor General to participate in a full performance audit of our administrative practices, unlike the House of Commons.

In 2011–12, we continued to reach out to Canadians through modern communications. This is a priority for the Senate and a crucial part of our strategy to increase transparency. This year saw an excellent redesign of the parliamentary website, parl.gc.ca; significant improvement on the Senate's website, sen.parl.gc.ca; and a revamped website for Senate committees with powerful search functions. In addition, this year we launched what's turned out to be a very active Twitter feed, @SenateCA/@SenatCA, to reach out to Canadians. The Senate is one of only three legislative bodies in Canada with a Twitter feed. We are very proud of how it has connected us to Canadians in a new way.

Though we are pleased with these steps forward, our committee's work is continual. We are pursuing other avenues to meet our objectives while making our administration more efficient, our budgets leaner, and our activities more open to the scrutiny of the people we serve.

GARY W. O'BRIEN

Clerk of the Senate and Clerk of the Parliaments

To provide the best possible environment for senators to effectively contribute to federal legislation and public policy issues in the best interest of all Canadians.

This is the strategic outcome in the logic model of the Senate Administration, the goal of the 420 employee body I manage under the oversight of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, budgets and Administration. We aim for this goal first in how our employees directly serve senators and second in how we arrange our business to allow both senators and staff to work in an effective and efficient manner.

On the first point — how we serve senators directly — we have good news. This year, we conducted a survey of senators on the services they receive from the Administration. The survey results show that senators are, overall, highly satisfied with the level and range of services they receive. In their particulars, the survey results also point out areas that can be improved in order to move us closer to our goal of “the best possible environment” for senators to do their work.

On the theme of service to senators, this year also saw two initiatives that relate directly to Senate Administration employees. The first was the coming into force of the Code of Conduct of the Senate Administration. Keeping in step with the federal government’s renewal of its code of conduct system, our code is a comprehensive and clear elaboration of our statement of values and ethics. The second initiative was the groundwork for our first-ever survey of employees’ satisfaction with their work. Senate employees are already remarkably committed and the Administration has a low turnover rate. We are hoping to find out from employees how we can make their workplace even more worthy of their dedication. This, of course, has a benefit not only to our organization, but to the taxpayers who provide us with our jobs and whom we ultimately serve through serving senators.

Regarding our second enduring goal — the effectiveness, efficiency and economy of our business — the performance audit of the Senate Administration by the Office of the Auditor General served as a valuable opportunity to assess our work systems and practices. The results, issued in June 2012, acknowledged and positively reinforced our many strengths, and at the same time provided a constructive evaluation by respected experts in public administration of where the Senate Administration should best concentrate its efforts for continuous improvement. The Auditor General’s report has helped us to renew our course in service to senators and, by extension, to the Canadians they serve.

THE WIG BAG

A peculiar feature of the parliamentary uniform is the wig bag, a beribboned, black silk, eight-centimetre square that is worn on the back, attached to the silk robe or tailcoat. The wig bag is a vestige of the time when wigs were worn in the courts and by men generally. Powder was used to keep these wigs looking clean, and the bags were developed as a trap for the loose powder.

THE BLACK ROD

So called because it is made of ebony, the Black Rod is the cane carried by the Usher of the Black Rod as a symbol of his office. The position has 650-year-deep roots that reach to the days when the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was a member of the royal household and usher to the Knights of the Garter. The Senate's Black Rod was fashioned in 1918 to replace the one that had perished that year in the fire that consumed Canada's Parliament Building.

IN THE SERVICE

of Canadians

Drawn from every province and territory, Canada's 105 senators are a more diverse group than one might have found at Confederation. Among them are nurses and public servants, farmers and community leaders, former police officers and former premiers, academic researchers and high-school teachers.

In the Senate chamber, senators examine bills put forth by the government. They propose and debate bills of their own. They raise issues unique to their regions or questions suggested to them by their own combination of experience and discussion. In committees and caucuses they work together to detangle complex knots of public policy. And they travel, in Canada and abroad, to collaborate with others in these tasks.

Fiscal year 2011–12 was encompassed by a single session of Parliament. The 1st Session of the 41st Parliament began on June 2, 2011, following the general election on May 2, 2011. This election confirmed the Conservative Party of Canada as the government, making the Liberal Party of Canada the official opposition in the Senate. The session extended past the end of the fiscal year on March 31.

IN THE CHAMBER

Many Canadians recognize the Senate Chamber from broadcasts of the Speech from the Throne. This historic room is the space where senators meet formally to discuss the nation's business. Here, they comb through complex policy questions, study and debate proposed new laws (and amendments to existing ones), and bring the attention of Canadians to important social issues.

The agenda of sittings of the Senate is found in the Order Paper and Notice Paper. This document lists the items for consideration at each meeting of the Senate. It is updated for each sitting and can be viewed on the Senate's website, sen.parl.gc.ca.

Government Legislation

One of the Senate’s main jobs is to scrutinize the government’s proposed laws. Senators can debate a bill at second reading, after which it is usually sent for closer study to a Senate committee, where witnesses are heard and the bill is examined clause by clause. After debate and a vote on any amendments proposed by the committee, the bill moves to third reading in the chamber. At this time, senators may propose their own amendments. Bills are then passed or rejected by the Senate by a majority vote.

In fiscal year 2011–12, the Senate amended three government bills:

BILL S-2, THE FAMILY HOMES ON RESERVES AND MATRIMONIAL INTERESTS OR RIGHTS ACT

Two amendments, as recommended by the Senate Committee on Human Rights

BILL S-4, THE SAFER RAILWAYS ACT

One amendment, as recommended by the Senate Committee on Transport and Communications

BILL C-10, THE SAFE STREETS AND COMMUNITIES ACT

Six amendments, as recommended by the Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs

Four committee reports on government bills also included “observations,” further notes on aspects of the bill that came up in the committee’s study. These were the reports on Bills S-2, S-5 (Financial System Review Act), S-6 (First Nations Elections Act) and C-10.

Debate in the Senate Chamber

While scrutinizing government legislation may be its first priority, the Senate Chamber is more broadly the setting for a conversation about the kind of country Canadians want. Senators work independently or in small caucuses on particular policy matters, bringing up concerns of Canadians that can be addressed by the federal government. To this end, they have several tools at their disposal in the Senate Chamber.

Statements, Inquiries and Substantive Motions

The simplest tool for raising an issue is the Senator's Statement, a three-minute speech on matters of the public interest that are not already in the Orders of the Day. If senators want to foster debate and research on a topic, however, they can introduce an inquiry, an open-ended public policy debate. All senators can take part to contrast their opinions and present their research.

A substantive motion, on the other hand, is voted upon after debate. One can be moved and debated by any senator. If passed by a majority vote in the Senate, the wording of this motion becomes a public statement of the Senate's opinion.

Private Senators' Bills

Beyond simply initiating and fostering debate in the chamber, a senator can propose a solution to a perceived problem with a private senator's bill. Such bills can be introduced at any time and follow the usual course of approval for bills. They may not, however, impose a new tax or increase an existing one, nor can they spend public money.

THE LEGAL- STYLE ROBES

Robes have been worn as part of established court dress since at least the 14th century in England. English legal courts evolved different styles and colours of robes through the centuries for the use of judges, lawyers and barristers. In Canada, legal robes are black (with the exception of the scarlet fur-trimmed ceremonial robes of the Supreme Court justices). Likewise, the robes worn by the Senate's Speaker, Speaker pro tempore and table officers are of black silk.

Committee of the Whole

The Committee of the Whole is a Senate committee made up of all senators and meets in the Senate Chamber. This is a procedure for special circumstances, such as allowing all senators a chance to question a witness or to give rapid consideration to an urgent bill. The Senate met in Committee of the Whole five times this year.

June 26

The committee considered a bill urgently requested by the government, Bill C-6, Restoring Mail Delivery for Canadians Act. It called the following to appear:

- The Honourable Lisa Raitt, Minister of Labour
- The Honourable Steven Fletcher, Minister of State (Transport)
- Ms. Hélène Gosselin, Deputy Minister of Labour, Human Resources and Skills Development Canada
- Mr. Christian Beaulieu, Senior Counsel, Labour Group Head, Department of Justice

- Mr. Jacques Côté, Chief Operating Officer, Canada Post Corporation
- Mr. Denis Lemelin, President of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers
- Mr. Geoff Bickerton, Director of Research, Canadian Union of Postal Workers

November 1

The committee considered the appointment of Michael Ferguson as Auditor General of Canada, calling the following witnesses:

- Ms. Patricia Hassard, Deputy Secretary to the Cabinet, Senior Personnel and Public Service Renewal, Privy Council Office
- Ms. Michelle d'Auray, Secretary of the Treasury Board of Canada
- Mr. Michael Ferguson, Auditor General of Canada

The Usher of the Black Rod wears or carries a black bicorne hat when in procession. This style of hat was originally adopted in the late 18th century as a part of military and naval officers' uniforms in Europe and North America. In the 19th century, it also became part of the ceremonial uniforms of civilian officials in many European monarchies.

The committee considered the appointment of Mr. Mario Dion as Public Sector Integrity Commissioner, calling him to appear as a witness.

The committee considered the appointment of Ms. Anne-Marie Robinson as President of the Public Service Commission, calling her to appear as a witness.

IN COMMITTEES

Senate committees, like the Senate itself, have a formal history that stretches back to Confederation. Three Senate committees were established in 1867, the first year of the life of the Dominion Parliament. Many more were created over the years with varying mandates related to the work of the Senate. But it was in 1968 that significant changes to the Rules of the Senate created the system that now exists, with committees covering every area of policy interest. The evolving array of Senate committees is a reflection of the priorities of our country. Senate committees deal with topics that touch our everyday lives and that speak to our values through the policy questions they try to resolve.

This year, Senate committees continued to act as the engines of research and discussion they have been for many years. They posed difficult questions like “How can we protect our children from cyberbullying?” and “Is the current Health Care Accord working?” Their studies and reports helped Canada move towards answers to such questions and solutions to policy problems.

INTERNAL STANDING COMMITTEES

These committees are concerned with procedural and administrative issues internal to the Senate.

Standing Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators

Chair: Senator Terry Stratton (C)
Deputy Chair: Senator Serge Joyal, P.C. (Lib)

The Committee on Conflict of Interest for Senators was created in 2005 with the adoption of the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators. The committee is responsible for matters related to the code and provides general direction to the Senate Ethics Officer, whose office was also created in 2005.

This committee's members are chosen in a different way than those of other committees (who are usually chosen by the Standing Committee of Selection). Two members are elected by each of the government and opposition caucuses and these four members select a fifth.

This year, the committee reviewed the Conflict of Interest Code for Senators and suggested six amendments in a report to the Senate presented in March.

Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration

Chair: Senator David Tkachuk (C)
Deputy Chair: Senator George J. Furey (Lib)

This committee oversees the Senate Administration, the Senate's corporate body. It sets administrative and fiscal policy and approves all Senate budgets. This committee is one of two that are empowered to carry out their mandate on their own initiative, without the need for an order of reference from the Senate.

A few of the committee's accomplishments this fiscal year are approving the budgets for Senate committees for both 2011–12 and 2012–13; tabling the Senate's audited financial statements for 2010–11 in the Senate Chamber; approving the Senate's Main Estimates; producing a report recommending changes in pay rates for unrepresented employees and the discontinuation of the accumulation of these employees' severance pay by the end of 2012–13; and reviewing and approving the Annual Report on Internal Audits for 2010–11.

Standing Committee on Rules, Procedures and the Rights of Parliament

Chair: Senator David P. Smith, P.C. (Lib)

Deputy Chair: Senator David Braley (C)

This is one of two Senate committees empowered to initiate their own studies (although, like other committees, it also receives orders of reference from the Senate to study an issue). Its mandate is to propose amendments to the Rules of the Senate, examine and report on questions of privilege referred to it by the Senate, and to consider the orders and customs of the Senate and the privileges of Parliament.

This year, the committee submitted two reports to the Senate. The first proposed a fully revised version of the Rules of the Senate. The second proposed changes to the policy on leaves, absence and suspensions of senators.

Standing Committee of Selection

Chair: Senator Elizabeth (Beth) Marshall (C)

Deputy Chair: Senator Jim Munson (Lib)

The Standing Committee of Selection is struck at the beginning of every session to choose the members of the Senate's committees. The committee also proposes a Speaker pro tempore (who directs sittings of the Senate when the Speaker is unable to attend). This year, the committee proposed Senator Donald Oliver as Speaker pro tempore.

NECKTIES

TABS

Bands, known as “tabs” in Canada, evolved from men’s neckwear in the 16th and 17th century in England. By the early 18th century, these particular starched white bands had become a standard part of official legal, clerical and academic dress. They are still worn by Canadian lawyers and judges as part of their uniform. In the Senate, they are worn over a high wing-tipped collar by the Speaker, Speaker pro tempore and all table officers (procedural clerks).

THE JABOT

The jabot, a falling lace necktie, is sometimes chosen by certain officials to replace other neckties, such as tabs. As a style, it evolved from the ruffles on men’s shirts that were fashionable in 17th-century England. It continues to be part of the uniform of many parliamentary officials in the world. Today in the Senate, it is most often chosen by female Speakers, Speakers pro tempore and Ushers of the Black Rod.

JOINT STANDING COMMITTEES

Joint committees are struck by both the Senate and the House of Commons and are made up of members of each.

Standing Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament

Joint Chair: Senator Marie-P. Charette-Poulin (Lib)

The Library of Parliament provides research, reference and library services to members of the Senate and the House of Commons, and maintains Parliament's collection of books and journals. It also reaches out to Canadians on behalf of Parliament with publications, public research tools and the guided tour program, among other services. The Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament helps the Speaker of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Commons direct the library. It makes recommendations on the library's governance, expenditures and purchase of books, maps and other articles.

Standing Joint Committee for the Scrutiny of Regulations

Joint Chair: Senator Bob Runciman (C)

As a body meant to oversee the activities of the government, Parliament has a responsibility to review bills, or proposed laws. It also, however, reviews the regulations, and changes to regulations, that are made by the government to flesh out laws in practice. As required by the Statutory Instruments Act, this is the job of the Standing Joint Committee for the Scrutiny of Regulations. This committee reviews hundreds of such instruments every year to ensure compliance with many criteria, including whether they are authorized by legislation, whether they comply with the Charter and whether they are well drafted, among many others.

IN THE COMMUNITY

and the World

Modern telecommunications and air travel make it possible for parliamentarians to do much more, much more quickly, for the people they serve than was possible in the early days of Parliament. Senators gather the concerns of their community, town, region, province, territory and country, and bring them to the attention of public policy-makers. They organize or speak at events, attend and present to conferences, publish research, raise matters with Cabinet ministers, and provide credibility and support to causes they believe in.

Telecommunications and air travel also make it possible for parliamentarians to work much more closely with their colleagues across the world on international issues. Senators also take part alongside members of the House of Commons in diplomatic work, acting as ambassadors for our country, its parliament and its system of governance.

Much of this international work is done through interparliamentary associations and groups, which bring together legislators with shared interests or who represent regions whose countries are committed to cooperation. In 2011–12, senators participated in the twelve recognized interparliamentary associations and four recognized interparliamentary groups:

Canada-Africa Parliamentary Association
Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association —
Canadian Delegation to the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe Parliamentary Assembly (OSCE PA)
Canadian Branch of the Assemblée parlementaire de la Francophonie (APF)
Canadian Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA)
Canadian Group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU)
Canadian NATO Parliamentary Association (NATO PA)
Canadian Section of ParlAmericas
Canada-China Legislative Association

Canada-France Interparliamentary Association
Canada-Japan Inter-Parliamentary Group

THE SPEAKER'S TRICORNE HAT

The tricorn style of hat worn or carried by the Speaker of the Senate was a popular one among European men of the 18th century. It was a practical choice, as rain pooled in the brim and fell to the corners, away from the wearer's face. Though its popularity had waned by 1800, it continued to be required as part of court uniform for certain officials. The uniform of many parliamentary officials in the world still includes a tricorn hat. In the Senate, only the Speaker and the Speaker pro tempore wear one.

THE SPEAKER

of the Senate

Nominated by the Prime Minister, the Speaker of the Senate is a greatly respected parliamentary official whose role is one with a long tradition. This role is dual. First, the Speaker is essentially the chair of Senate sittings in the Senate Chamber. From the Speaker's chair on the dais at the front of the chamber, he opens and adjourns sittings and ensures that, in between, proceedings are carried out in accordance with proper procedure, decorum, timing and with due respect for parliamentary privilege. He is sometimes called upon to rule on disputes on these matters.

Second, the Speaker is fourth in the Canadian Order of Precedence after the Governor General, the Prime Minister and the Chief Justice. As such, the Speaker plays an important role in parliamentary diplomacy, both in Canada and abroad, hosting visits of foreign leaders and leading delegations of Canadian parliamentarians to further diplomatic ties with legislatures in other countries. He also reaches out to communities and individuals in Canada, listening to citizens' concerns and educating them about their bicameral parliamentary system.

In fiscal year 2011–12, the Speaker of the Senate was Noël A. Kinsella, who was appointed to the position in 2006 on the advice of Prime Minister Stephen Harper. As always, the Speaker continued to provide parliamentary leadership and to articulate Canada's values at the community, national and international levels.

THE SPEAKER AS PRESIDING OFFICER

The Speaker of the Senate is its presiding officer. Sittings of the Senate begin with the entrance of the Speaker's Parade and conclude with his departure after adjournment. During the sitting, he assists senators in the orderly conduct of their proceedings by formally leading them through the Order Paper and Notice Paper, the daily agenda of the Senate's business. From time to time, he rules on disputes in the chamber over proper procedure. At all times, he ensures the order and decorum of the proceedings.

In 2011–12, Speaker Kinsella made four formal rulings on procedure. They can be read at <http://sen.parl.gc.ca/nkinsella/English/Rulings-e.htm>.

In the Senate Chamber, the Speaker presides over formal and official parliamentary ceremonies. This year, he presided over the following:

THE WHITE GLOVES

Fashionable for centuries, gloves were part of most English court uniforms for ceremonial events from the early 19th century. They continue to be worn by parliamentary officials in many places in the world. The gloves of the Senate's officials are short and made of white cotton. They are worn on ceremonial occasions such as the Speaker's Parade, which opens and closes each sitting of the Senate.

THE SENATE'S

Administration and Finances

The Senate has 105 senators. In addition to the staff who work directly with senators, it has 420 employees, who work for its corporate body, the Senate Administration. These people print the Acts of Parliament; clean work spaces and corridors; set up equipment, chairs and tables for meetings; keep the Senate precinct safe and secure; advise on proper parliamentary procedure; organize sittings of the Senate and Senate committees; hire employees; facilitate communication with Canadians; provide IT and telecommunications services; manage finances; and plan for the future. And this is only a sample of the services that allow the Senate to run smoothly.

In recent years, the Senate and its administration have increasingly shifted towards greater controls over administrative processes and greater transparency in finances and activities. Keeping pace with funding cuts to the federal public service has been a priority and is being continuously achieved. Internal audit functions are strong and are leading to ever-greater efficiency in administrative processes. In short, the Senate takes the responsibility of public funding seriously and is constantly evolving towards better management of the funds entrusted to it.

THE SENATE ADMINISTRATION

The Senate's administrative functions and budget are overseen by the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration. This committee of 15 senators is responsible for approving administrative policy and overseeing the work of the Senate Administration. It also reviews and allocates the budgets of Senate committees, as well as funds for Senate-related activities not accounted for in senators' office budgets.

The Clerk of the Senate

The Clerk of the Senate, who is also the Clerk of the Parliaments, acts as clerk of Senate Chamber sittings. He is supported in this by three principal clerks and other table officers. The Clerk reports to the Speaker of the Senate in his capacity as a procedural expert.

The Clerk of the Senate is also responsible for the Senate Administration's day-to-day operations. Under this mandate, he reports to the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration (CIBA). He is supported by a senior management team that implements his vision.

Strategic Vision

The Clerk of the Senate has a clear vision for improving services to senators while continuously striving to increase efficiency and reduce expenses. This is aided by the Senate Administration's strong internal audit policy and results framework.

THE SENATE ADMINISTRATION RESULTS FRAMEWORK

- Vision and mission To provide exemplary support to senators in discharging their parliamentary duties.
- Strategic outcome To provide the best possible environment for senators to effectively contribute to federal legislation and public policy issues in the best interests of all Canadians.
- Supporting intermediate outcomes

 - Sound management with the best use of resources
 - Advice, products and processes that support bilateral and multilateral relationships
 - An informed citizenry with respect to the Senate and its work
 - A safe, secure and accessible environment
 - A representative, well-trained and productive workforce

Values and Ethics of the Senate Administration

This year, the Administration put into place the Code of Conduct for the Senate Administration. It went into force on January 1, 2012. Dealing with ethical situations often encountered by employees, the Code of Conduct is an elaboration of the Senate Administration's statement of values and ethics.

STATEMENT OF VALUES AND ETHICS OF THE SENATE ADMINISTRATION

Values and ethics know no borders. The Senate is a separate and autonomous institution with its own workplace culture. At the same time, Senate staff share common values and ethics with the Public Service of Canada.

The following four values are the hallmarks of the Senate Administration:

- Democratic Values Helping senators to serve the public interest
- Professional Values Serving with competence, excellence, efficiency, objectivity and impartiality
- Ethical Values Acting at all times to uphold the public trust
- People Values Demonstrating respect, fairness and courtesy in our relations with parliamentarians, Senate colleagues, fellow public servants and the general public

Managers are responsible for respecting and promoting these values within the Senate workplace.

Staff members are expected to be guided by these values in carrying out their duties and functions, and are responsible for exemplifying Public Service values in their work-related activities.

Together we can foster the climate of respect and ethical conduct that we expect of ourselves and that senators and Canadians expect of us.

Notes to Summary Financial Statements

Year ended March 31, 2012

The Senate of Canada is a self-governing institution, established under the Constitution Act, 1867, and its authority to act on all financial and administrative matters is provided under the Parliament of Canada Act. The Senate of Canada has four main functions: to debate; to legislate; to investigate national issues; and to represent regional, provincial and minority interests. Senators perform these functions either individually through their offices or collectively through deliberations in the Senate Chamber and in committees. Senate administration provides the support services required by senators in the performance of these parliamentary functions.

1. Summary financial statements

The summary financial statements are derived from the complete audited financial statements, prepared in accordance with Canadian public sector accounting standards, as at and for the year ended March 31, 2012.

The preparation of these summary financial statements requires management to determine the information that needs to be reflected in the summary financial statements so that they are consistent, in all material respects, with or represent a fair summary of the audited financial statements.

These summarized financial statements have been prepared by management using the following criteria:

- (a) whether information in the summary financial statements is in agreement with the related information in the complete audited financial statements; and
- (b) whether, in all material respects, the summary financial statements contain the information necessary to avoid distorting or obscuring matters disclosed in the related complete audited financial statements, including the notes thereto.

Management determined that the statement of cash flows does not provide additional useful information and as such has not included it as part of the summary financial statements.

The complete audited financial statements of the Senate of Canada are available on the Senate of Canada's website: www.sen.parl.gc.ca.
