Wage Settlements

Wage Settlements Covering 500 or More Employees March 2007

Wage adjustments from major collective bargaining settlements reached in March 2007 averaged 3.1% annually over the contract term. The results are based on 20 agreements covering 96,505 employees.

When the parties to these March settlements previously negotiated, the resulting wage adjustments averaged 2.6%, lower than in their current settlements. Contract duration in the previous round of settlements averaged 32.0 months, compared to a 29.7 month average for March 2007.

The majority of employees (52%) covered by March settlements came from a single agreement, the Ontario Hospital Association, providing 50,100 nurses with wage increases averaging 3.0%.

Wage gains in March were higher in the public sector (3.2%) than in the private sector (2.5%). The largest concentration of employees (79.3%) was in the public sector. These results were influenced by settlements in the Ontario nurse's agreement mentioned above and the Government of Saskatchewan agreement providing 13,000 employees with wage increases averaging 4.0%. The private-sector figure was influenced by an Ontario construction agreement providing 14,500 electricians with wage adjustments averaging 2.6%.

On an industry basis, wage adjustments ranged from a low of 0.5% in manufacturing to 4.0% in public administration. On a jurisdiction basis, wage adjustments ranged from an average of 1.0% in the Atlantic Provinces to 4.0% in Saskatchewan (and 6.6% in a single multiprovince agreement with Pyramid Corporation).

There are approximately 1,000 collective agreements covering 500 or more employees in Canada. Since the 1990s average contract duration has risen from the 24.3 months in 1992 to 42.6 months in 2006. The combination of longer collective agreements and increasing employee coverage (bargaining unit restructuring and mergers) has resulted in lower bargaining activity and fewer agreements. This year, average monthly settlement activity has been less than 30 agreements compared to an average of over 40 in the 1990s.

First Quarter 2007

Major collective bargaining settlements reached in the first quarter 2007 provided base-rate wage adjustments averaging 3.1% annually over the term of the contract. The results for the first quarter 2007 are based on a review of 44 settlements and cover 126,890 employees.

When the parties to these first quarter settlements previously negotiated, the resulting wage adjustments averaged 2.6%, lower than in their current settlements. Contract duration in the previous round of settlements averaged 31.5 months, compared to a 32.0-month average for the first quarter 2007.

In the first quarter of 2007, wage adjustments in the public sector averaged 3.3% for 91,970 employees in 24 agreements. There has been a modest upward trend in the size of public-sector wage adjustments, where average settlement increases rose to 2.2% in 2005 from 1.4% in 2004, and then up to 2.6% in 2006. The public-sector figure in the first quarter 2007 was influenced in large part by an Ontario health-sector agreement covering 50,100 nurses (40% of the total quarterly employee coverage) with wage increases averaging 3.0%; upward pressure on wages also originated in large part from the Government of Saskatchewan settlement providing 13,000 employees with adjustments averaging 4.0%.

The private-sector average for 34,920 employees in 20 agreements was 2.6%. The private-sector figure was influenced by an Ontario construction agreement providing 14,500 electricians (11.4% of the total quarterly employee coverage and 41.5% of the private sector coverage) with wage adjustments averaging 2.6%.

The largest concentration of employees (72.5%) in the first quarter settlements was in the public sector. The wage series is employee-weighted. Under this methodology, the current public-sector figures had a larger impact in the calculation of the national average.

There was a relatively wide variation in wage settlement levels in the first quarter 2007, ranging from a wage cut of 14% in the first year of the contract for 990 meat-packing employees at Olymel in Quebec (averaging -0.8% over an 87-month contract), to a 6.6% average annual increase over a 2-year contract for 950 construction employees at Pyramid Corporation operating from Alberta and the Northwest Territories (a multiprovince agreement). On an industry basis, wage adjustments ranged from a low of 0.7% in manufacturing to 4.0% in public administration; the largest concentration of agreements and employees was in education, health and social services with wage adjustments averaging 3.1%. On a jurisdiction basis, wage adjustments ranged from an average of 1.8% in Nova Scotia to 4.0% in Saskatchewan (and 6.6% in a single multiprovince agreement with Pyramid Corporation); the largest concentration of agreements and employees was in Ontario where wage adjustments averaged 2.9%.
