Union Membership in Canada—2007

Each year, the Strategic Policy, Analysis, and Workplace Information Directorate carries out a survey on international and national unions having one or more members in Canada. The survey is based on self-reports by labour organizations. The 2007 survey collected data on 501 labour organizations.

Information obtained during the most recent survey indicates that in 2007, 4,480,020 workers were union members. This represents an increase of 39,020 members compared to the 4,441,000 members accounted for in 2006. Consequently, the unionization rate or union density (union membership as a percentage of non-agricultural paid employment) is 30.3% for 2007.

Readers' Corner

The Service Canada and Human Resources and Social Development Canada Library offers a list of selected recent publications, with short abstracts, on current and emerging workplace topics.

Ethics in the Workplace

Ethical behaviour in the workplace, or the absence thereof, has been in the media spotlight frequently of late. The suggested reading material offers an overview of key ethical principles and ideas, and presents strategies for creating and maintaining a work atmosphere centred on strong principles, whether you are a member of a team or in the role of a leader. Case studies are offered as a means of exploring the diverse reactions of individuals in a work context who are faced with morally tenuous scenarios, as well as possible consequences of each course of action. This topic is addressed from several perspectives such as leadership theory, organizational behaviour and psychology, and change management.

See Readers' Corner for reading material on ethics in the workplace. Other references on the subject, in French only, are available on the French Web site.

To view previously published abstracts, visit the Library Web site.
