CHICKEN BROILERS

:.3

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE JBLICATION 1317 1972

Chicken broilers have markedly changed the poultry eating habits of Canadians. No longer is it "Chicken every Sunday" — it's chicken any day, any place and any time. Chicken is plentiful the year round and is popular for home, restaurant or take-out meals.

Convenient and easy to cook, broilers are in demand for the outdoor barbecue whether for a crowd or for a family cookout. No matter how broilers are served, they can be prepared imaginatively with different herbs and sauces.

Broilers compare favorably with red meats — they are economical, an excellent source of protein, relatively low in fat and a good source of iron. They are an excellent source of niacin, one of the B vitamins.

BUYING

Chicken is usually a good buy all year. Broilers are available fresh or frozen, as whole, halves, quarters or pieces. The whole broiler (2 to 4 pounds) usually sells for less per pound than the parts. Compare prices on the basis of cost per serving rather than cost per pound. Allow ³/₄ to 1 pound of cut-up parts for one serving, 1 pound breasts for 2 servings and 1 pound livers for 4 servings.

Whole chicken broilers are sold according to grade. The grade mark is on a metal tag on the breast, or is printed on the transparent bag or label insert. Canada Grade A (red tag) is the grade most commonly available. The "Canada Approved" or "Canada" health inspection legend on poultry indicates that the birds are wholesome and were processed in federally inspected plants.

STORING

Fresh chicken may be stored in a refrigerator 2 to 3 days before cooking. Remove outer wrappings and cover chicken loosely with waxed paper or aluminum foil. Store cooked chicken in a covered container, plastic bag or aluminum foil. It may be kept 3 to 4 days in a refrigerator.

If wrapped carefully, fresh whole chicken may be stored in a freezer at 0°F for 12 months; cut-up chicken may be stored for 6 months. Cooked chicken may be stored in the freezer for 1 to 2 months.

To thaw chicken, allow about 5 hours per pound in the refrigerator or about 1½ hours per pound at room temperature. Thaw the chicken in its original wrapper, but slit the wrapper along the back or underside when thawing at room temperature. Cook thawed chicken within 24 hours after defrosting.

Commercially barbecued chicken needs special care. If you plan to serve a hot barbecued chicken within $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours after purchase, keep it hot in an oven set at 150° to 200° F. If you plan to serve hot barbecued chicken more than $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours after you purchase it, it is best to remove it from the wrapper, refrigerate it as soon as possible, then reheat 20 to 30 minutes at 325° F before serving.

GRILL-BARBECUED CHICKEN

Use halves, quarters or small pieces of chicken allowing about ³/₄ pound per serving. Brush liberally with oil and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Place skin side down on greased grill about 3 inches from coals. Brown each side about 3 minutes. Raise grill to about 5 inches from coals. Turn meat often to avoid scorching. Baste lightly with oil after each turning. If desired, brush with sauce or marinade near end of cooking. Meat is done when it is fork-tender and pulls away easily from bone. Cook quarter chicken 30 to 35 minutes; half chicken, 50 to 55 minutes.

OVEN-BARBECUED CHICKEN

Preheat broiler. Place chicken pieces skin down in shallow pan. Broil 6 to 8 inches from heat until lightly browned (about 10 minutes). Turn, baste with oil and continue broiling until skin browns (about 5 minutes). Pour barbecue sauce over chicken. Bake at 325°F until chicken is tender (about 45 minutes for quarter chicken, 55 minutes for half chicken).
