A Strong Partnership in Trade:

Canada is California's top agricultural export market, with a total of $6.2 billion in bilateral agricultural trade in 2013. Canada imported $1.4 billion in fruit and nuts as well as over $1.1 billion in vegetables and legumes from California. Meanwhile, California imported $2.1 billion in agricultural products from Canada including $443 million in canola meal (often used for animal feed) which helped make California cows more productive and the California dairy industry more profitable. The California-Canada and U.S.-Canada trading relationships are increasingly important as trade and integration mutually strengthens our competitive position within the changing global marketplace.
