11th Annual Report

The Canada Council
1967-1968

Honourable Gérard Pelletier
Secretary of State of Canada
Ottawa, Canada

Sir,

I have the honour to transmit herewith the Annual Report of The Canada Council as required by section 23 of the Canada Council Act (5-6 Elizabeth II, 1957, Chap. 3) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1968.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

Chairman.
June 30, 1968.

Foreword

This year we have made some modest changes in the form of our report. The lists of grants which were previously to be found in the obscurity of appendices have been brought forward into the body of the book. After you have finished this simple foreword you will find a Preface to the Arts in which we take our usual cold-blooded look at those things we hold in great affection. There then follows the Preface to the Social Sciences and Humanities which relates the Council's work to both current and probable developments in these disciplines. Armed with these general views the reader can then move on to the lists of grants given in the field of the arts to both people and organizations, divided under the headings which the new multi-media still permit to be recognized as the major art forms. Each of these lists is preceded by a brief note explaining why the Council has done what it did. There then follows an analysis of the various types of awards given by the Council to university scholars, and this precedes the detailed lists of successful candidates divided into appropriate categories. The section on Finance is set out later in the report in its usual careful detail, but it may be useful here to note briefly the level of our expenditures for the year which is completed and what we expect to spend in the coming year.

Parliament approved a grant of $16.9 million for 1967-68 and, with interest from the Endowment Fund and revenue from other special funds, our total expenditure was $20.5 million – somewhat less than forecast in last year's annual report. This money had made it possible for the Council to meet in fair measure most of its existing programmes of aid and to give at least token support for others designed to meet new and pressing needs. For the coming year the Government has agreed to recommend a grant of $20.6 million, and our forecast of expenditures for 1968-69 is $28 million. This figure is arrived at by something more than simple addition of government grant and endowment interest, since a part of the funds designated for use in the past year (1.4 million) was held over for the 1968-69 programmes. The Council has scaled its forecast budget downwards for the coming year and, in anticipation of this, deftly reduced certain expenditures in 1967-68 to make it possible to maintain the level of subsidy which on-going programmes will require.

Though our policies will thus continue, there have been a number of changes in the composition of the Council. Miss Andrée Desautels succeeded Mrs. Annette Lasalle-Leduc in May, Mrs. Leduc's term of office having been completed. Mrs. Stanley Dowhan resigned in December 1967 and the vacancy thus created was not filled until the early part of the new fiscal year. Three members of the Council were nominated for a second term. They are Miss Kathleen Richardson, Mr. Douglas LePan and Mr. Napoléon LeBlanc.

Mr. Trevor Moore resigned from the Canada Council March 31, 1958, and his appointment to the Investment Committee became effective April 1, 1968. The Canada Council has appointed him Chairman of the Investment Committee to replace Mr. J. G. Hungerford, whose valuable service over a span of eleven years is deeply appreciated. The Canada Council lost at the same time the most valuable services of Mr. Douglas Fullerton, who had been associated in various capacities with the financial activities of the Council from its inception. First as Treasurer and then as Investment Consultant, Mr. Fullerton was largely responsible for the constant growth in excess of the average market yields of the Council's investments. To replace Mr. Fullerton the Council selected Messrs. Bolton, Tremblay and Company as Investment Consultants.

As a result of increased Council activities during the year several additions were made to the staff. At the same time, the retirement of Miss Lillian Breen, first and only Secretary of the Council during its initial ten years, left a void in many hearts both within the Council and among others accustomed to her devoted service. In October Mr. Claude Gauthier was appointed Assistant Director responsible for administration and Secretary of the Council. Other new appointments to the Council staff were those of Messrs. Naim Kattan and Rodrigue Millette and Mrs. Helen Hodgson in the Arts division, and Mrs. Jean Morrison, Mrs. Mireille Badour and Messrs. Robert Cournoyer and Noel F. W. Gates in the Social Sciences and Humanities Division, Mrs. Erika von Conta in the Secretariat, Mr. J. Norman Lamont in the Awards service and Mr. Jacques-Victor Morin as Associate Secretary-General of the Canadian National Commission for Unesco.

A final and grievous note. No one is more aware than are Council members of the contribution made to this country by the Right Honourable Vincent Massey. Ultimately we are the creation of the Royal Commission on National Development in the Arts, Letters and Sciences, over which he presided. He was one of the prime movers of the mighty commotion in the arts, social sciences and humanities which has taken place in the eleven years of our existence. His death at the end of 1967 leaves us with a profound sense of loss.

Preface/The Arts

Aftermath to a Laugh-In Writing a short time before the year 67, the poet Petronius Arbiter recommended what Ben Jonson later translated as "keeping endless holiday". Under the overhang of centennial most of us would agree, however, that holidays must in fact have an end. Even if we wished for a second edition of Festival Canada 1967 the present state of our economy would forbid its being any more than a paperback of the kind liable to split down the spine at page one hundred and one if you bend it too hard. The Canada Council is not violently addicted to moderation but we have thought in this report, written in a time of some austerity and after last year's panegyric to a decade, to assume a sobriety and to take a look not at the arts themselves but at some of the administrative machinery which makes their happenings happen. In fact, we propose to take you round backstage in a workaday way, going firmly past the notice we once saw by a stage door which said hesitantly: "Trespassers will be prosecuted, please".

In the centennial year of 1967 the Council completed a decade of work crowned by the glittering contribution which the artists of Canada made to our celebration. In doing so, we think that they have come to the end of one phase of development and are now embarking on another. Perhaps the most significant characteristic of the period has been a national political commitment to the arts. We like to believe that the creation of the Canada Council was an important landmark of this evolution. There were then only two similar bodies in existence, the Saskatchewan Arts Board and the Arts Council of Greater Montreal. In Quebec the provincial authorities already provided assistance at a level that artists in other provinces could envy, but there was not yet any organization solely concerned with development in the arts. Elsewhere provincial governments and some municipalities would help the arts when the spirit moved them and the spirit could be sporadic. Since then, however, we have seen the appearance of the Ministère des Affaires Culturelles in Quebec, the Province of Ontario Council for the Arts, the Centennial Cultural Fund in British Columbia and the Manitoba Arts Council. The Cultural Development Branch of the Department of the Provincial Secretary gives assistance in Alberta, New Brunswick has recently formed a Cultural Development Division in the Department of Youth, and other provinces help the arts in other ways. During the same time, Parliament has multiplied fivefold the funds given the arts through the Canada Council.

In our thin early days the Council's relations with such other bodies was often the result of haphazard urgencies common to the arts. (Indeed on those days when the long distance phone doesn't ring late in the evening to tell at great expense of an immediate need for funds, we sense an uneasy quiet). But this increased provincial interest has led to the formation of the Arts Administrators' Group, with representatives from most of the provinces, which now meets two or three times a year when mutual problems can be regularly discussed and we can bleed quietly together.

Along with this political involvement has gone a greater social commitment to the arts in Canada. We have already described in last year's report how this commitment can be seen in the box office, in operating expenditures, and in the purchase of works of art by the individual. If, as has been suggested, the country needs a consenting adult in every bedroom it also needs willing purchasers at every ticket office. The experience of Festival Canada shows that we are beginning to have them and that therefore the political commitment was wisely made. The Festival gave during the course of 1967 some 690 performances in 200 cities, towns and villages. All this was done by the sweat of our high brows and the public reacted notably. An examination of the returns obtained by the Centennial Commission shows that these productions which are not normally available across the country played to houses of some 75% of capacity. This is a high and encouraging figure and later on we shall have something to say about our present inability to maintain the momentum and to continue to wipe our feet on the welcome mat.

It is our observation that large periods of development in the arts are not hard-edge and that there is not a clear line to be drawn between them. Indeed, as we ended one phase with the centennial year we were already well into the beginning of what will be our next period. Until fairly recently artists have been most concerned to build to an acceptable level those particular organizations of which they were a part, and in some cases they have carried them farther than this to the edge of international recognition or beyond. They have therefore had to be self-centered and pursuing a policy of what Sandra Gwyn has described as "the devil take the Hindemith"; and this has been as it should be, for otherwise they could not possibly have done what they did. There is nothing like a touch of ruthlessness in sacrificing oneself for a good cause, and people unswervingly dedicated to compromise often get nowhere.

But it is now quite clear that the time has come for increased planning and coordination in the arts both on a regional and a national scale; and indeed we think that this will be essential for survival. As some orchestra budgets begin to push over the 1½ million dollar mark, as annual subsidies once thought to be generous at $50,000 now move up to over $300,000, as art galleries consider the large capital expenditures necessary to increase and enhance their display areas, as ballet and opera reach out to audiences now measured in their hundreds of thousands — as all these happen organizations can no longer continue to go their separate ways. Without losing the identity they have created, they must now plan together for the general as well as the particular good. If they know on which side their artistic bread is buttered, they must be efficient and must be seen to be efficient.

The recent seminar held at Ste-Adèle by the Canadian Conference of the Arts has indeed shown that they are well aware of the need for co-operative undertakings based on the fullest knowledge of the practical realities of the arts. It dealt with the performing arts, a field where the uncertainties of audience reaction make planning extremely difficult. We do nevertheless lay the basis for such planning, and the Canada Council's own research staff has recently completed a detailed study of the performing arts in Canada during the 1967-68 season just past. Although statistics often run off our back like a duck, we think this study is valuable not only for the information it contains but also as an example of the kind of enquiry essential to the coordination now required in the new phase which our arts have reached. The Council's subsidy to the performing arts uses up about 50% of our budget for the arts (a figure which next year will be about $9.1 million) and a quantitative analysis of the kind we have undertaken shows the economic importance of these arts to the people who depend upon them for their livelihood. It also serves to show the relative importance of the box-office, of subsidy and fund-raising. The Council's study is divided under four main headings: music, opera, dance and the theatre. Each category is limited to those non-profit organizations which the Council subsidises regularly, and while these do not represent by any means all the organizations devoted to the performing arts, they do include what in our opinion is most significant. We have excluded from the study any amateur organization, all groups devoted to bringing in recitalists, any organization that the Council has subsidised only once, and those which are fortunate enough not to require subsidy. Our sample contains 13 orchestras, 8 music groups, 5 dance groups, 5 organizations producing opera, and 17 theatres. Under each of the four main headings we have also included those parts of festivals which properly belong there.

During the season over which we are bending our dispassionate brow, the total expenditures for all the performing arts rose to $17.8 million of which 50% was obtained at the box-office. Ten years ago revenues were as high as 70% of expenditures, but at that time the total budget was five times smaller – that is, $3.5 million. From the point of view of a steely eyed accountant, the general situation may seem to have deteriorated over a ten year period, but in fact the figures permit some considerable optimism. For the very considerable increase in expenditures results from the fact that the organizations are now prepared to invest much larger sums of money to obtain much higher standards. And even though the salaries of certain types of artists need to be augmented, particularly if Canada is to retain them from the green pastures to the South, they are at least paid better than they were in the past.

The figures for revenue expressed in percentage of expenditures show a falling-off over the ten year period, but the absolute figures are encouraging for they show that earned income has risen from $2.4 million in 1957 to $9.0 million in the year just past. Therefore it is clear that higher standards of performance have produced a more responsive public – a public which we noted earlier in this report provided houses of 75% of capacity during Festival Canada. The Council's study shows that at the beginning of the just completed phase of our performing arts, the public bought 1,500,000 tickets while in the year just completed this figure had risen to some 4,000,000. We are therefore not dealing, as some people may have imagined, with a small and privileged minority.

The political commitment to the arts, to which we have referred earlier, is clearly reflected in the figures for direct public subsidy from the various levels of government which now represents 38% of expenditures or a total of $6.7 million of which the Canada Council provided one half, the other half being divided between the provinces and municipalities in the ratio of two to one. In absolute figures, public subsidy has increased eleven-fold since 1957 when it represented only 17% of expenditures. Thus the three levels of government have become partners in the early flowering of our performing arts and this is a partnership which must continue.

Now we must note that, during the ten year period, assistance from the private sector shows a relative reduction – relative because although its contribution has in fact quadrupled it now stands at only 11% of expenditures while in 1957 it represented 14%. It could of course be argued (and indeed it is) that as our performing arts mature, governments should assume full responsibility for the income gap. But we think that in our society there is a virtue in preserving the private nature of our arts organizations and that the established pattern in which governments share responsibility with corporations and private individuals has much to recommend it.

If we project our figures briefly to the 1969-70 season, and if we are allowed that margin of error which a statistician shrugs off like a weatherman caught in a shower, we estimate that the expenditures of the performing arts organizations subsidised by the Canada Council will rise to $25 million of which about $12 million will come in at the box-office and from other sources of earned revenue. People will dip into their pockets to buy some 4,800,000 tickets at an average cost of $2.50 to see and hear performances of what we expect to be improved quality. But the income gap will continue to yawn at our feet and will widen from some $9 million to $13 million, an increase of nearly 50%. This is the gap which will have to be closed by public subsidy and private donations. If it is not closed, then the accumulated deficits (which already cause us deep concern) will continue to grow and the spectre of bankruptcy to rattle its chains a little louder.

There are some interdisciplinary aspects of the figures set out in the table above which require comment because they are of special interest. There are also some statistics, precise and accurate as everything we receive from the Council's Research Section, which call for warnings and which make our Arts Division act like a cockled snail, whose tender horns being hit, shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain. Of first interest is the golden boy status of music in Canada. It commands the largest audience – more even than the theatre, though the number of concerts is not much more than a quarter of nights at the theatre. It enjoys a much higher percentage of subsidy from the private sector than any other kind of performing art and professional musicians are the best paid of our performers. We suspect that the reasons for this modest affluence are social and that indeed it would require a sociologist with a large grant to discover them. In the meantime perhaps André Malraux's remark will do: "Il n'y a pas d'homme qui ignore la musique; il y a ceux qui aiment Mozart. . . et ceux qui aiment les marches militaires".

It is worth noting that ballet, usually considered the most esoteric of the performing arts, has in fact the highest earning capacity (expressed as a percentage of expenditures) of the four art forms, outstripping the theatre by one percentage point but doing so with only a quarter the number of performances. We must however take into account that in the year under review some 40% of their performances were given in the United States. Theatres however mostly stay at home where they command a Canadian audience nearly as big as that which attends symphony concerts, but in order to do so they must give nearly four times the number of performances. Obviously this is because most theatre by tradition is an intimate form of art which must establish a close contact between the actor and his public which it can best do in small houses. It might therefore have been thought that private donations to the theatre would be high, but on the contrary we are faced with the paradox that this most intimate of the performing arts obtains, as a percentage of expenditures, by far the lowest level of financial assistance from the private sector.

We must now issue two warnings about the figures in our table to ensure that they do not lead to any misunderstandings. The table shows that when the houselights go down and the conductor raises his baton to start the overture, the performance of an opera is going to cost some $11,000 by the time the soprano lies dead on the stage. But this figure is deceptive because the Canadian Opera Company gave 48 performances on tour during the course of the year under review and these productions were on a much smaller scale than those which are given in our larger opera houses. In fact, the cost of one performance of opera such as Aida in Montreal is more likely to be in the neighbourhood of $30,000 and it is for this reason that, in our view, opera can only survive in our large metropolitan centres or in the framework of festivals which can command a large audience. You can have roses round the cottage door or Der Rosenkavalier, but you can't have both in the same place. Further, we must draw attention to a misapprehension which might arise from any attempt to compare the costs of a concert with those of a performance of a ballet; for in the table the concert appears to be the more expensive. But it is important to bear in mind that the average cost of an evening of ballet is held down by the considerable number of performances which ballet companies give with a reduced number of dancers, and perhaps with piano accompaniment only, on their visits to schools as a part of their educational programme. These are considerations which the figures do not pretend to take into account, but which of course the Council must bear in mind in its future planning of assistance to the performing arts.

To the results of our study on the performing arts will soon be added those of two other studies made on behalf of the Council. One being completed privately for us by Marcel Caron, Philip Vineberg and Michael Mackenzie deals with the Artist and Taxation, and will examine this hairshirt which artists wear with little grace and some considerable indignation. The other is a preliminary study on the need for, and the nature of, an information centre for the visual arts. It is being conducted by Professor Donald Theall, of McGill University, under the auspices of the Society for Arts Publications. The Council has also been associated with the Province of Ontario in the financing and planning of two studies on the arts in the province. A theatre study undertaken by a number of research teams and co-ordinated by Mavor Moore has uncovered a body of useful information and plots a course of development for the next decade or more. Its massive report is now in the final stages of editing. Another study produced by Louis Applebaum attempts to unravel the Toronto orchestral situation – a problem which makes our knotted and combined locks to part, and each particular hair to stand on end like quills upon the fretful porpentine. The Applebaum Report and its recommendations as to how available resources might meet symphonic, ballet, opera, choral and broadcasting needs is at present being privately studied by a combined committee of users. Orchestral problems on a national scale are to be discussed during the summer when orchestra managers from across the country will meet in the Canada Council's private hideaway at Stanley House overlooking the Baie des Chaleurs. In Quebec, Léopold Simoneau, in the course of the year, completed a study on the needs of opera in the province.

All these reports, with varying degrees of certainty in what is at the best an uncertain undertaking, map out directions we should begin to take as we venture into a new period of development. But none of them, we think, can equal in importance the results of a meeting which took place in the Guild Inn at Scarborough during November of last year. There at the invitation of the Canada Council and the Province of Ontario Council for the Arts, representatives of the boards, of management and of artistic direction of five of Ontario's major performing arts organizations met to discuss common problems. The representatives to be seen wandering along the inextricable corridors or over the winter lawns of the Guild Inn were from the Stratford Shakespearean Festival, Theatre Toronto, the National Ballet Guild, the Canadian Opera Company and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Almost any one had from time to time discussed some immediate and insoluble problem with any other, but they had never met altogether. Certainly they had not previously discussed together the detailed documentation which had been prepared for them and in which the two Councils had attempted to isolate and define the common interests which we believed they shared. Since these interests could have a general application to the arts across the country we think they are worth setting out.

Under the general heading of Audience Development the group discussed the future possibilities of central and computerised box-office facilities, joint mailing lists and composite season tickets, and combined educational programmes. Under Financing the chief consideration was for a united corporate fund-raising programme with computerised records. The documentation in Technical and Administrative Assistance foresaw the possibilities of consolidated and portable fringe benefits for staff, the use of joint technical facilities for warehousing, workshops, rehearsal space and coordinated booking, touring and transportation. It included proposals for a central purchasing and payroll system and a standardised accounting system. It provided for research and for the training of administrative and technical staff.

If the general public retains in any way the impression that the performing arts are run by people who trip over each other's long hair, the results of the Scarborough meeting should be reassuring. The representatives of the five organizations accepted in principle that they should jointly establish an organization to be known as Coordinated Arts Services with the clear understanding that this new body was to confine itself to the plumbing of the arts, would not interfere with the individual artistic direction of the organizations, nor through the medium of publicity attempt in any way to reshape the image which the organizations had already established for themselves. With the addition of this rider a flicker of satisfaction passed over Clifford William's granite face, Celia Franca lit a new cigarette with a steady hand, and a plume of smoke rose from Herman Geiger-Torel's cigar into the untroubled air.

By the new year the proposals for Coordinated Arts Services had been ratified by the boards of all the five founding members. An advisory committee was formed and it has now made very considerable progress in implementing the proposals. The chief executive officer of C.A.S. will be James Norcop. The two Councils may provide special help to the participants if necessary to support the new organization for a period of a year, at which time it must become the financial responsibility of the organizations which will enjoy its services – and it may be that the number of these organizations will be increased by additional members for whom provision has been made. If operations remain only at the present level economies should result from this new project, but we believe it may be able to give better services and provide a greater operating efficiency for the organizations taking part. Since this may prove to be so, we think that the experiment should be closely observed by people concerned with the performing arts throughout Canada. In this case, Toronto may be pointing the way for Montreal, and Vancouver and Winnipeg should both keep a weather eye open.

An interesting example of how a co-ordinated service can help the performing arts is provided by a project devised by the Canadian Theatre Centre. In 1965 with a grant from the Canada Council the Centre retained the services of Mr. Danny Newman of Chicago as a consultant on season ticket campaigns. Mr. Newman, who has also assisted the Ford Foundation and the Theatre Communications Group of New York, is an expert in the mysteries of the advance sale of season tickets. Between 1965 and 1967 his advice was made available to a dozen organizations in Canada through the good offices and support services of the Canadian Theatre Centre. What resulted is shown in the following brief table.

	Season ticket holders
	1965-66	1967-68
Playhouse Theatre Company; Vancouver	1,500	6,150
Neptune Theatre Foundation; Halifax	nil	3,500
National Ballet Guild of Canada; Toronto	nil	5,500
Théâtre du Nouveau Monde; Montreal	nil	8,300
Citadel Theatre; Edmonton	1,350	2,500
Canadian Opera Company; Toronto	8,204	9,000
Manitoba Theatre Centre; Winnipeg	6,050	9,000
MAC 14 Society; Calgary	300	1,400
Royal Winnipeg Ballet; Winnipeg	300	2,000
Théâtre de l'Estoc; Quebec	100	1,000
Théâtre de l'Egrégore; Montréal	nil	600
	17,804	48,950

In addition to these figures we must note that Theatre Toronto, which was not in existence as such in the 1965-66 season but which used Mr. Newman's services in 1967-68, obtained over 11,000 subscribers – an extremely high figure. In some cases – the Vancouver Playhouse, for instance – the increase is spectacular. Even where the percentage of increase is less, we must bear in mind that even a few hundred more subscribers may provide some very useful additional operating capital at the opening of a season. Perhaps not all the increase in season ticket holders was due to Mr. Newman alone, but we think that much of it was and that the project serves as a good example of a co-ordinated effort.

In taking this brief look behind the scene we do not want to pretend that planning and coordination of effort necessarily make good art nor that studies and reports will produce masterpieces. They do however help to make good art possible, permit it to be practised with greater efficiency and economy when it appears, and allow it to communicate with its public more effectively. Nor should it be thought that as our arts enter upon what appears to be a new phase we have folded our hands and grown garrulous by the fireside under the comforting impression that the backstage machinery on which our arts rely is now a model of efficiency. This is not yet so. for there are still things that need to be corrected.

Earlier in this report we have mentioned our grave concern at the level of the accumulated deficits being held by some of our major organizations. After more than a decade of subsidy, this is the detritus observable at low tide of the economy. The sums of money involved are in some cases alarmingly big and if costs continue to rise beyond the capacity of the country to absorb them, the organizations may be forced into bankruptcy. The responsibility to prevent such disasters lies heavily on boards of directors whose membership must now begin to represent more effectively the changing conditions of our society. There has recently been a rumble in the city of Nottingham in England between the Nottingham Theatre Trust Ltd. and the artistic director of the theatre, the actor John Neville. Here is a question on the subject which John Neville put to the public at large: "Can there be an ideal board, small enough to be coherent, large enough to be representative; generous and wise enough to delegate comprehensively to quality, but acute enough to rumble the phoney; discreet enough not to interfere, but quick enough to respond to the wishes of its community; average enough to represent the ordinary theatre-goer, but special enough to have an insight into the world of professional theatre?" This multi-question is not easy to answer, but the posing of it should lead us to some inward searching as we try to ensure that the underpinnings of management do not collapse under the weight of present financial requirements.

As we embark on the twelfth year of our work for the arts there is a cloud on the horizon no bigger than a Finance Minister's hand. During 1967 the Centennial Commission injected into the arts a sum of over $4 million. Not all of this was given to organizations subsidised by the Canada Council, and some of it was directed to projects which were for that one year only. But a very considerable amount of the Commission's funds had the effect of raising the level of operations of the organizations we help. We estimate that over $3 million went to these general purposes. But the Council's increase in funds for the arts in the coming year will be some $2 million and thus it will not quite sustain the energy which the arts generated.

An increase of $2 million in subsidy for the arts is a very handsome sum of money indeed at a time when the economy of the country requires that public expenditures should be closely contained by good sense. The artists of Canada are as responsible as the next person, and are quite aware that they must exercise restraint in the coming year or two. They have projects like other people have mice, but they know that for the time being they must stay in that large bottom drawer. However, if in the future as our economic position improves we are to serve the public as they were served by the arts in our centennial year, if we are to continue to ensure good exhibitions of painting and sculpture, if good books are to be handsomely published, if touring companies are to be out and about bringing in an audience across the country of 75% of capacity or more – if in fact we are to sock it to them, we shall in good time need a bigger sock.

Preface/the Social Sciences and Humanities

Expo 67 is history, but its theme – Terre des hommes : Man and His World – lives on, not just on the islands of Montreal, but as a lasting challenge to inquisitive minds. It is the task of the Canada Council to encourage such minds in their quest, to foster the study and understanding of the world that man has made for himself – the world of human bonds and conflicts, and the inner world of human values and aspirations, of man's perception of himself and of his society. This is the domain of the human sciences – the domain of the Social Sciences and Humanities Division of the Council.

Rates of Growth

As was forecast in the Annual Report of the preceding year, the Council in 1967-68 again more than doubled its support to the social sciences and humanities, for the third successive year. In three years, annual spending on these programmes has grown almost ten-fold, from $1.3 million to $11.3 million. Of greater importance than the rate of growth, however, is the fact that the sums available are at last beginning to make an impact on the development and support of Canadian career scholars in the social sciences and humanities.

Progress has been most impressive in the development of the doctoral fellowship programme. New rates of support were adopted in 1967-68: $3,500 as the basic grant, rising to $4,500 in the concluding stages of doctoral studies and with an additional $1,000 at each stage for outstanding candidates or for those who had given up the security of regular employment to re-enter graduate studies. The results bore out the Council's expectations, as the number of applicants rose by almost 75 per cent over the previous year to 2,501, more than half the total number of doctoral scholars who were eligible to apply. The number of fellowships awarded rose by almost 65 per cent, to 1,554. Under the combined impact of higher rates and growing numbers, the value of awards rose from $2.5 million to $6.5 million. There is every reason to expect that this programme will continue to grow, to the point where all able doctoral candidates can pursue their studies to completion without interruption. The long-term consequences are incalculable: in terms simply of numbers, the Council's fellowships may well mean that within five years this country will, for the first time, reach a kind of academic maturity, producing as many senior scholars and researchers in the social sciences and humanities as are needed to staff its universities.

Assistance to established scholars, although more modest in terms of the sums involved, showed comparable growth, rising from $1.5 million to $3.2 million. Two-thirds of this amount was given in 468 research grants to support the investigations of an estimated 623 social scientists and humanists. Another 125 scholars received leave fellowships to assist them in freeing themselves for a year of research and study. And a new programme of post-doctoral fellowships, designed to help the younger career scholars, was launched successfully on a modest scale, to the benefit of a further 21 researchers. The total number of these awards to career scholars – 769 – represented an increase of almost two-thirds over the number in the previous year and there were clear signs that Canadian social scientists and humanists, long starved for research funds, were beginning to respond to the support proffered by the Council. There is still a long way to go. The number assisted in 1967-68 represented only 7 per cent of the humanists and social scientists on the faculties of Canadian universities. But if the momentum of the established programmes can be maintained, it seems reasonable to expect that, over the next two or three years, free research in the social sciences and humanities will flourish in Canada on a scale commensurate with that found in the natural sciences, and with a growing sophistication of research skill and maturity of judgment.

Late in the fall of 1967, applications were invited for the first time for the new programme of Izaak Walton Killam Awards, intended to support a few scholars of exceptional ability engaged in research projects of far-reaching significance, either in the social sciences and humanities or in interdisciplinary projects linking one or more of these with any of the physical and biological sciences. These awards, administered by the Canada Council in cooperation with the Trustees of the Killam Estate, were made possible by a $17 million bequest of the late Dorothy J. Killam (Mrs. Izaak Walton Killam), and represent an important new source of support for pioneering scholarship. The response to the initial announcement was gratifying in terms both of the number and of the quality of the proposals, and at the end of the fiscal year the final selection of the first group of Killam award winners was awaiting the attention of the Council and Trustees.

Emerging Results

The support of free research in the social sciences and humanities involves, inescapably, an act of faith – a long range investment from which the returns must always be indirect and diffuse, defying precise measurement. More often than not, success can come only in intangible forms: a reduction of social conflicts and tensions, less alienation and wider opportunities for human development, and a general enrichment of the quality of life. No one can judge what good will flow from the inquiries supported by the Council, in 1967-68 – among them the following:

- mathematical models of the Canadian economy and studies in Canadian economic policy
- the application of computer technology to such widely disparate matters as graphic art, legal analysis, and literary criticism
- the nature of perception, of communication, and of human stress and hostility
- the political attitudes and voting patterns of the Canadian electorate
- experimental phonetics and the vocabulary of everyday speech
- the ethnography of the North Shore of the St. Lawrence
- the re-evaluation of our literary heritage
- studies, both particular and general, of human history.

Because there can be no certainty of success, nor even any clear test by which to measure it, the selection of research projects for support cannot be infallible. But as the sums involved have multiplied from year to year, the Council has concerned itself more and more with the processes of adjudication on which its programmes rest, and especially with the sources and quality of the informed opinion available to it. Judgment now rests heavily upon not only a final review by an academic panel, broadly representative of all the social sciences and humanities, but also upon prior detailed assessment by more specialized teams. For research grants, this is a particularly elaborate system involving almost three times as many assessors as applicants.

And in order to bring to bear the highest standards of international scholarship, the Council is turning for advice to leading scholars abroad almost as much as to experts at home.

Planning was also begun in 1967-68 to extend this closer association with academic advisers to a more systematic evaluation of the impact of the Council's programmes. Improved systems of record keeping are beginning to make possible a more analytical review of the activity being supported by the Council and as the growth of the programmes justifies more sophisticated systems, analysis of this kind can be extended. As this happens, academic advisers will become more and more deeply involved in evaluating the patterns of research activity, identifying neglected problems and stimulating greater efforts in those directions. In addition, it is to be expected that small teams of specialists will be enlisted for field visits to major projects supported by the Council, to evaluate progress and to advise and encourage the researchers.

Tangible evidence of the intensified research activity made possible by the Council's support is now beginning to emerge in the form of an accelerating pace of scholarly publication. The assistance to publication given by the Council is still modest, a slight reduction having actually occurred in 1967-68, but the work set in train under research grants awarded since the beginning of 1967 seems certain, within the next year or two, to lead to a dramatic increase in the output of scholarly manuscripts and papers in the social sciences and humanities. During 1967-68, much attention was devoted to the strengthening of Canadian learned journals: new journals of economics and political science were launched with substantial help from the Council and another grant made possible the planning by the Canadian Psychological Association of a new journal of behavioural studies. By the end of the year, discussions had been started with the historians, and with the anthropologists and sociologists, to bring the journals of those disciplines within the Council's programmes of support. Support to a number of journals in the humanities has been renewed and extended.

One incidental, but nonetheless important, consequence of the expanding programmes of the Council is becoming evident: the effect on the development of Canadian universities. There are clear signs that, as the funds available for research and for years of sabbatical leave increase, the ability of our universities to attract and retain able scholars is enhanced. Certainly fewer fears about the brain drain have been voiced by Canadian social scientists and humanists in the past year or two. Simultaneously, the rapid growth in the support of doctoral studies – combined with the evident willingness of the Council's doctoral fellows to return to Canada following completion of their studies abroad – is enlarging the supply of young, highly qualified scholars available for recruitment. A further consequence of these developments has been to contribute to the growth of graduate studies in the universities of Canada. Of the 1,554 students awarded fellowships in 1967-68, 624 declared their intention of enrolling in Canadian graduate schools, an increase of almost 300 from the previous year. In addition, the research grants awarded by the Council in 1967-68 provided for the employment of almost 350 research assistants, most of whom are graduate students devoting a part of their time to the research undertakings of their faculty advisers and thereby gaining valuable experience as well as financial support for their own studies. What is emerging, in fact, is a self-reinforcing process of growth of Canadian graduate studies in the humanities and social sciences: more ample research funds and a growing supply of graduate students serve to attract and retain stronger faculties, and this strengthening of faculties, combined with the greater availability of financial support for graduate studies in Canada serve to attract more and better graduate students. It is the earnest hope of the Council that whatever momentum it has added to this process can be sustained.

Other programmes of the Council are contributing to the strengthening of advanced study and research in Canadian universities. Grants to university libraries for the acquisition of research collections were more than doubled, to just over $1 million, with continuing emphasis on the building-up of research material essential to programmes of graduate studies. Much still remains to be done in this respect, as was underlined by the recent publication of a study of university library resources, sponsored by the Council through the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. This survey – the Downs Report – makes it abundantly clear that if Canada wants its universities to measure up to international standards it will have to double its university library collections and exploit fully the new technological facilities needed to cope with the information explosion. Against the background of this need, the grants given by the Council represent little more than token aid, and might appropriately be contrasted with the $12 million devoted last year by the National Research Council and Medical Research Council to the improvement of university research resources in the natural sciences.

Needs for the Future

Of necessity, the Council's programmes in support of the humanities and social sciences have concentrated on the provision of funds in direct support of scholarly research and of scholars in the making. This has been unquestionably the first and most pressing need. Nor is there now any justification for pausing in the development of these programmes of direct support. The momentum generated over the past two years should not be lost. In addition, experience is disclosing new kinds of financial need not covered by existing programmes, such as the research costs encountered by graduate students or the need for specialized developmental grants to encourage centres of specialized research.

The Council will be unable to forecast its future responsibilities until it has fuller information about the support for Canadian research coming from other sources, public and private, contractual or free, domestic or foreign. The Council was about to launch such a survey in 1966-67 when it decided to join forces with the Science Council of Canada in a broader review of the funding of university research, conducted under the direction of Dr. Macdonald, the former President of the University of British Columbia. It is hoped that the findings of this study will tell us more about such unsettled questions as the ability of universities to absorb the overhead costs of research, or the problem of making free research of the kind supported by Council grants more competitive in terms of financial rewards to the researcher with research contracts offered by public and private agencies.

Increasingly, however, the Council will be drawn into more indirect forms of support for research in the social sciences and humanities. It is becoming evident that Canadian scholarship is hampered by the inadequacy of essential research tools and services, such as research inventories, data banking systems and survey research facilities. During the past year the Council has given some recognition to these needs through grants to the Social Science Research Council of Canada, several learned societies and individual scholars for studies of the research resources available and the needs to be met. In addition, discussions have been initiated with representatives of the Humanities and Social Science Research Councils of Canada and of the associations representing the various disciplines, to redefine the functions of such bodies in relation to the development of scholarly research and in the light of the rapid growth of the Canadian academic community.

In the discussions with representatives of the research community, a good deal of attention has been centred on the growing problems of communication among scholars. It is becoming clear that the Council will be called upon to provide increasing support for measures that will improve communication and cohesion among Canadian scholars, such as the promotion of seminars and small conferences of researchers throughout the country who share common research interests. Looming ahead is the broader problem of the communication gap between scholars and the centres of decision within the community, and it can be foreseen that in the not too distant future the Council will become more deeply involved in its statutory concern with the dissemination of the fruits of research in the humanities and social sciences.

The growing scale and complexity of the Council's programmes, and the resulting intensification of their impact on the scholarly community in Canada are creating a growing need for the devising of systematic methods of evaluating the results of the Council's activities. As in all other aspects of the work of the Council, it can be safely predicted that this will draw the members of the academic community, in increasing numbers, into ever closer and more complex relationships with the Council as advisers and partners, and the Council has been heartened by the growing evidence of a desire among scholars to strengthen their own role and improve the means at their command for research in the social sciences and humanities.

That there is a growing public awareness of the importance of research – and especially of research in the social sciences and humanities – is evident from the widespread interest in the proceedings of the Special Committee of the Senate on Science Policy, before which representatives of the Council appeared at its inaugural meeting. It is also to be expected that, as the programmes of the Council are enlarged and its reliance on public funds increases, public interest in its activities will intensify. The Council itself is deeply conscious of the public trust it bears and welcomes this growing interest as a natural corollary of the essential recognition by the public of the crucial importance of unfettered research and informed speculation about the world of man.

Music

Our first concern for music must be to maintain the structure of symphony orchestras which stretches from one end of the country to the other and on which so much depends. A large part of the available funds goes naturally to the two great orchestras in Montreal and Toronto both because they are the pace-setters and because in the concert hall and on the radio they reach a large audience. But other orchestras, particularly Vancouver, Winnipeg, Quebec and the new Atlantic Orchestra are developing well, serving their area and consequently commanding an increasing level of subsidy. We could wish that some other orchestras elsewhere, competing for limited resources and audiences might find ways of coming together. We could also wish that all orchestras (with the possible exception of Winnipeg, which has an unequalled record) would pay more attention in their regular series of concerts to the work of Canadian composers.

We have tried not to neglect the composers. One of our grants goes to the Canadian Music Centre which is entirely concerned with their interests. We do not have funds available to emulate the great impetus given to Canadian music by the commissioning grants provided during 1967 by the Centennial Commission. Nevertheless we have tried to pick up in a modest way where the Commission left off and have invited a number of orchestras to commission and perform a new work from a composer of their own choosing. We have given grants to two Montreal Groups specializing in concerts of contemporary music, la Société de musique contemporaine and le Groupe de rencontres musicales. Our assistance also went to a Toronto group for a mixed-media concert festival under the direction of Udo Kasemets.

We observe an increasing interest in chamber music. Our grant of $27,000 to the Orford Quartet may seem modest beside the funds given to the large symphony orchestras, but it is one from which the Council takes great satisfaction. We have helped to nurture the development of this young quartet over a number of years and its recent debut in New York showed that many people's confidence in it was well placed. The Council also provided some modest help to some of the better choirs to encourage them to stage unusual and new works.

We are concerned with the lot of our young performing musicians and our grant to the National Youth Orchestra is directed both to their interests and those of the orchestras that they eventually join. Our large grant of $125,000 to Les Jeunesses Musicales du Canada is for similar purposes since it maintains a nationwide concert circuit for younger audiences and exposes young musicians on its platforms. We have plans for the future to supplement JMC's work by providing even wider opportunities to musicians in the early stages of their concert career.

We admire those few cities able, within the confines of our population distribution, to produce that expensive form of art – opera. Our largest grant in this field goes to the Canadian Opera Company in Toronto both because it presents a full fall season and because its touring company, now travelling with an orchestra, serves many of our smaller towns and cities. The future of opera in cities with a limited population will be doubtful, but we continue to support it because it provides important opportunities for our younger singers to gain experience on stage here at home.

Theatre

Our assistance to the theatre begins, as it were, each year with a substantial grant to the National Theatre School of Canada, which ensures the development and training both of actors and technical staff to supply the country's increasing demand and to ensure replacements for talent we lose to other countries. We supplement this work with the funds we set aside for our own Theatre Arts Development Programme which each year provides varying means for training younger people in theatre and company management, publicity and other essential services.

The following figures show, of course, that the largest part of our available funds goes to maintain the network of professional regional theatres which now extends from Vancouver to Halifax with a gaping hole in Saskatchewan which we hope will soon be repaired. Some of these theatres are able in various ways to serve their region by limited touring, but we do not have the funds available at present to stimulate movement on a national scale as we would like to do. We prefer to see these theatres also occupy themselves with the needs of children and young people (as, for instance, the Manitoba Theatre Centre does), but where this is not possible we will occasionally make grants to companies concerned only with theatre for children. Our grant to the Globe Theatre in Saskatchewan is an example.

A very considerable amount of subsidy goes to Montreal (over $425,000.) because it is a lively theatre town and because we must respond as best we can to vitality. Theatre in Toronto is attempting a valiant renewal after a period of considerable difficulty, but we must take into account that Stratford does supply the metropolitan area during the summer months and that the Shaw Festival is also making a real contribution.

We are concerned with the lot of our playwrights since theatre that is vital cannot rely simply upon the writers of other countries. For this reason a part of our substantial grant to the Canadian Theatre Centre is for a playreading and distribution service which puts new plays into the hands of potential producers. Our grant to the Centre d'Essai in Montreal is designed to provide workshop performances of new plays, and the prizes we provide to the Dominion Drama Festival are designed to stimulate amateur try-outs of new works. Whenever possible our Bursaries to individual artists are used to assist young playwrights.

It is not easy to hold together such a disparate group of theatres stretched out over so great a distance. Our European readers can note that the area with which we are concerned would stretch from Brussels to somewhere quite near the Western borders of the Sin-Kiang province of China. The Canadian Theatre Centre's publication The Stage in Canada serves as one link, and our Communications Fund permits theatre people to move back and forth and observe each other's productions with a little more freedom than they would otherwise have.

Since theatre-going is an essential of almost all festivals – though they may include many other forms of art – we have included them in this section for convenience.

Dance

This is a subject that can be dealt with briefly since the number of organisations involved is small – though they cost us deep in our purse. Our grant to the National Ballet School can be compared to the assistance we give to the National Theatre School, and of course, its purpose is to provide new dancers when the ranks of the corps de ballet are thinned by marriage and other selfish considerations. There are other valuable ballet schools in the country but this school is the only residential one which also provides a full secondary education.

Of our three ballet companies, the National is the largest, reaches the greatest audience and consequently commands the biggest grant. All three of them must tour outside the cities where they make their homes since they must stay and work together for extended periods of time during the year and must seek large audiences to do so. We continue to support our folk dance group, Les Feux Follets, because Festival Canada in 1967 showed them to be very popular. It remains, however, an open question as whether they should not in the foreseeable future become an entirely commercial operation. The Council continues to keep a weather eye open for the development of modern dance in Canada and our grant to the Groupe de la Place Royale is designed for this end.

We consider the development of young choreographers to be of the greatest importance to our ballet companies. Les Grands Ballets Canadiens have held a summer workshop for this purpose for a number of years and the National Ballet School has recently given similar opportunities to its senior students with the most remarkable and encouraging results.

Visual Arts

A very large share of our grants to individuals goes to the visual arts, since artists in this field work mostly in solitude. They received approximately 40% of our awards and bursaries and a very high proportion of short term grants. They also take up most of our aid for travel and shipping costs, since there are not the institutional structures in the visual arts to take up these financial burdens. There has been a notable increase in requests for these smaller ad hoc grants over the past year, a trend that we expect to continue at a still faster pace.

Next in importance to the grants for individuals are those which provide facilities for the creative person in the visual arts. Our most important undertaking this year in experimental areas was a grant to Intermedia in Vancouver. This venture, essentially a workshop adaptable to any experimental requirement, gives embodiment to the long felt desire of many artists to bring the different arts together. The name itself suggests an inter-relation, and anyone who visited Expo '67 could not help but realize the concern there is today with the totality of the environment in sound, sight and movement. Sir Roland Penrose has referred to this attempt of the arts to step into each other's shoes as something which as often as not ends up as a three-legged race. Time may prove this to be so, but in the meantime artists must be allowed to find out if in fact the race is to the swift; and our new venture has already attracted international attention and been a focus for considerable activity in Canada. A similar initiative, Fusion des Arts, is now under way in Montreal.

Also in Montreal, we have given support to two ateliers where experiments in print-making can be pursued by artists who cannot provide the same facilities for themselves; and to an experimental foundry which will not begin to answer the need for full-scale facilities for casting in bronze, but will at least provide an opportunity for testing new techniques and materials.

As we reported last year, our art galleries continue to provide the Canadian public (over 4 million this year) with admirable exhibitions, though they do so with inadequate finance, a low level of municipal support, cramped facilities and too few staff. The Council has again increased its grants in this area more strikingly than in any other (by over 100%) and has tried in other ways to supplement the work they do. For greater flexibility, the grants are given for general operations of the galleries rather than for specific projects. We have expanded the "Director's Choice" programme, under which they acquire works by Canadian artists. We have established a communications fund to enable directors and their staffs to travel, given support to new institutions and art circuits, allocated funds for a national study of art gallery needs and prospects for the decade ahead, and arranged for a meeting of experts to discuss the design and specification of galleries.

Writing

The most important assistance that the Council can give to writing is to help writers to write, and this we do through our Bursaries and Awards to individual artists. We pay most particular attention to young writers and, in order to reach those who do not yet have any substantial body of work by which they can be judged, we have instituted a limited number of grants to what we call Sponsored Writers. These are young writers recommended to us by an established author or critic, and we follow this act of faith by one of our own. The older writer is asked only to be ready to give a word of advice if his protégé asks for it.

The following list of grants shows that the Council continues to support the publication of literary periodicals, and that it regularly helps the publication of books in both French and English. Our purpose here is to ensure the appearance of new works which might not otherwise get into print and is also an occasion to hold down the price of the book near the pocket of a potential purchaser. Of particular interest to us is the appearance of new small publishing ventures which are showing an adventurous spirit and a fine sense of design.

The Council's support for the Conseil Supérieur du Livre is continued and is now joined by a grant to the Canadian Book Publishers Council. Both these organizations promote an interest in reading and in books across the country. To assist in a modest way with making Canadian writing known abroad, we support the delegation of Canadian publishers to the International Book Fair, in Frankfurt. Whenever opportunity offers we are glad to subsidize the reading of poetry by poets themselves and this most often takes place in universities. The latter also provides us from time to time with a chance to give support to writers-in-residence who thus obtain leisure to work and an opportunity to stimulate young people making their first attempts to express themselves.

Not included in this table are the Killam Programme and the Cultural Exchange Programme which are also administered by the Social Sciences and Humanities Division of the Council.

One of the difficulties in reporting on the year's assistance to the social sciences and humanities is that the figures are meaningful only in relation to the community of scholars served and to past performance and future expectations. The text that follows will talk a good deal about the two "universes" in the social sciences and humanities, of doctoral candidates and of career scholars. It will relate how these "universes" have grown, project future growth, and show how the Council increases its assistance in response to these developments.

The figures are there. It is clear from them that the scholarly community in the social sciences and humanities is reacting to the climate of our time, which urgently demands intensified research. It is also evident that interest in our programme of assistance is increasing constantly.

The text begins with doctoral fellowships and direct aid to research (post-doctoral and leave fellowships, and research grants), which account for 85% of the Council's total budget for the social sciences and humanities. This is followed by a complete list of grants given under that budget in 1967-68.

1. Doctoral Fellowships

The goal of the doctoral fellowships programme is to help young scholars in the social sciences and humanities through the final stage of their training for a career of research and teaching. Eligible for assistance are Canadians and landed immigrants to Canada enrolled in universities here or abroad. (Landed immigrants are considered as Canadian in the study).

a) The "Universe"

According to our calculations some 4,065 Canadian students were working full-time towards a doctorate in the social sciences or humanities in the 1967-68 academic year, and the total is expected to grow rapidly to 8,000 by 1972-73. On the other hand, it is estimated that there were fewer than 2,000 in 1963-64. The total will have quadrupled in less than ten years, as indicated in the following table.

	1963-64	1967-68	1968-69	1972-73
Total enrolment of Canadian doctoral candidates in the social sciences and humanities	1,965	4,065	4,815	7,935

The above figures include a sizeable number of Canadian students enrolled in foreign universities. Significantly there are proportionately fewer studying abroad these past few years, although the absolute number continues to increase. There is every reason to believe that this trend will continue, and it is assumed in the following table:

Enrolment of Canadian doctoral candidates in the social sciences and humanities
		1963-64	1967-68	1968-69	1972-73
In Canada	number	1,160	2,640	3,240	5,560
	% of total	59%	65%	67%	70%
Abroad	number	805	1,425	1,575	2,375
	% of total	41%	35%	33%	30%

Figures on Canadian enrolment in foreign universities are based largely on the United States publication, Open Doors, annual report of the Institute of International Education, and on fragmentary reports from the United Kingdom. Past enquiries indicate that 90% of Canadians enrolled in the social sciences and humanities faculties of foreign universities are in the United States, the United Kingdom or France, but with a vast majority in the first-named country.

As for enrolment in Canadian universities, basic figures are available from the publications on higher education of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The studies of Messrs. Zsigmond and Illing, on behalf of the Economic Council of Canada are very helpful in forecasting the future level of university enrolment. However, because these sources do not provide the required breakdowns, several estimates must be made to arrive at enrolment figures which will include only a) doctoral candidates

b) those working on a full-time basis and c) Canadian citizens and landed immigrants. It is worth noting that the proportion of full time post-graduate students (MA. or Ph.D.) enrolled in the social sciences and humanities has increased somewhat since 1963-64, going from 51.3% in that year to 54.5% in 1967-68, a trend which reached a peak of 55.8% in 1966-67 and now seems to have abated. It can be presumed that the proportion will continue at about 55% in the coming years.

Graduate enrolment in Canadian universities
Total enrolment	11,300	24,200	29,400	50,600
Social Sciences and Humanities:
number	5,800	13,200	16,200	27,800
% of total	51.3%	54.5%	55%	55%

Doctoral candidates make up an estimated 25% of the total graduate enrolment in the social sciences and humanities, which would amount to 3,300 students in the 1967-68 academic year. It is expected that there will be more than 4,000 in 1968-69, and nearly 7,000 in 1972-73. By comparison a National Research Council study indicates that more than 40% of graduates in the natural sciences were working for their doctorate in 1967-68.

At the same time foreign students make up an estimated 20% of the enrolment for doctoral studies in the social sciences and humanities. This percentage, based on incomplete data, is far lower than the figure for foreign doctoral candidates in the natural sciences, which is reported to be well over 30%. This area requires further study if reliable figures are to be obtained, particularly on the distinction between foreign students, ineligible for Canada Council fellowships, and landed immigrants, who are eligible.

Doctoral candidates in the social sciences and humanities in Canadian universities	1963-64	1967-68	1968-69	1972-73
Total enrolment	1,450	3,300	4,050	6,950
Canadians and landed immigrants	1,160	2,640	3,240	5,560

b. Demand and availability of fellowships

The 1,432 doctoral fellowship applications received by the Council for the 1967-68 academic year represented 35% of eligible candidates. Of these applicants, 953 (about 2 out of 3) received awards, or only 23% of the potential candidates. This is a considerable increase over 1963-64, when the 184 fellowships awarded by the Council reached less than 10% of the 1,965 students considered eligible. On the other hand, the demand was as high as for 1967-68, since the 674 applicants represented one third of the "universe" for 1963-64.

The Council has already approved a total of 1,554 fellowships for 1968-69. These, of course, will be financed from the budget for the 1967-68 fiscal year. This means that next year approximately 32% of the 4,800 Canadian doctoral candidates in the social sciences and humanities will receive financial support from the Council. There has been a significant increase in the demand, with more than half of the eligible scholars

(2,501 or 52%) applying for Council assistance. Slightly fewer than $\frac{2}{3}$ of the applicants were successful.

In 1968-69 the Council expects to receive 3,500 applications for use in the 1969-70 academic year, which represent more than 60% of the forecast "universe" of 5,600 Canadian doctoral candidates in the social sciences and humanities. In answer to this demand the Council expects to grant 2,325 fellowships, thus extending its support to 42% of these students. A realistic estimate of the number of students who will apply for grants in the 1972-73 academic year would be around 6,000, given the rapid growth of the universe and the still more rapid growth of the rate of demand. Selection committees have recommended almost invariably that slightly more than two out of three candidates fully merit Council support. At this rate the Council should extend assistance to some 4,200 students in the 1972-73 academic year. The data are summarized in the following table:

		1963-64	1967-68	1968-69	1969-70	1972-73
Universe of eligible students		1,965	4,065	4,815	5,600	7,935
Demand	Number	674	1,432	2,501	3,550	6,040
	% of universe	34.3%	35.2%	52%	63.4%	76%
Grants given	Number	184	953	1,554	2,325	4,210
	% of universe	9.4%	23.4%	32.2%	41.5%	53%

c. Distribution by Discipline

The graph on the next page illustrates how the Council's doctoral fellowships for the 1968-69 academic year are distributed among twenty disciplines which occur most frequently. The percentages have been calculated on the basis of fellowships granted rather than of the amounts involved. It is nonetheless easy to obtain an accurate enough idea of the amounts given in each discipline by multiplying the number of fellowships by $4,150, which is the average value of the doctoral fellowships awarded in 1967-68 (for use in 1968-69).

History and English are the specializations of the greatest number of award-winners, with history representing 15% and English 14% of the total number of fellowships awarded. Third place is shared almost equally by economics (11%), political science and philosophy (10% each). They are followed closely by sociology and French, each of which is the specialization of 8% of the award-winners. A more restricted number of award-winners specialize in each of the other disciplines, though there are a significant number of doctoral candidates in music, fine arts, architecture, psychology, anthropology, classics and linguistics, particularly if it is remembered that only a third of the universe receives Council support. It must also be remembered that support for certain disciplines is shared between the National Research Council and the Canada Council. Among these are psychology, geography, mathematics, anthropology and archaeology.

2. Assistance to Career Scholars

The Council's assistance to career scholars, or to research proper, is divided into three categories:

- (i) Post-doctoral fellowships, open to scholars during the five years after they have received their doctorate;
- (ii) Leave fellowships, for professors of Canadian universities on sabbatical or other leave;
- (iii) Research grants, intended to cover research costs exclusive of stipends for the principal researchers (who are almost always career scholars).

Unlike the assistance to doctoral studies, the scope of the financial aid given to research during a fiscal year must rather be measured against the "universe" of researchers during that same year, though it is evident that a more or less considerable part of this assistance (for example the post-doctoral and leave fellowships) will be used by the researchers during the following year.

a) The "Universe" of Researchers

The universe served consists essentially of members of the regular teaching staff of Canadian universities, who make up virtually all candidates in the programme described above. Here too the available data are somewhat sketchy, and in certain cases we must make our estimates from earlier or incomplete surveys.

Preliminary surveys of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that there were 20,700 full-time teachers in Canadian universities and colleges during 1967-68, and it is our estimate that some 10,600 were working in sectors relating to the social sciences and humanities rather than the natural sciences. This number can be compared with 9,200 teachers in the same area the year before, which indicates an increase of nearly 15%. The rate of growth in earlier years as well as the anticipated increase in enrolment in advanced studies makes it evident that in 1972-73 some 18,000 to 20,000 Canadian scholars will likely be engaged in teaching in the disciplines covered by the Council's programmes of assistance to research.

b) Extent of demand and assistance granted
During 1967-68 769 researchers received financial support from the Council, a number equivalent to 7% of Canadian scholars in the social sciences and humanities. Among these, 125 received leave fellowships, 21 post-doctoral fellowships, while the 623 remaining received grants to assist in the undertaking of 579 research projects of varying scope. As there were 978 requests for a fellowship or grant, the success rate was nearly 80%. It must be noted, however, that in the case of grants the amounts approved were often less than requested.

During the preceding year, 1966-67, the Council made 468 awards in its programmes of assistance to career scholars. Two-thirds of the 703 applicants received support, accounting for 5% of the total number of eligible scholars.

If the increase in demand during 1968-69 is close to that of last year, the larger budget of the Council for various types of aid to researchers will allow support of the projects of some 950 scholars from among 1,300 candidates, or 74%. On the other hand slightly less than 8% of the forecast number of faculty members in the social sciences and humanities will receive Council assistance, a rather reduced proportion which continues to be significantly below the percentage of scholars receiving support in the natural sciences. If the demand is projected, based on a gradually decreasing growth rate, there is reason to believe that in 1972-73 a total of 2,700 researchers will seek Council support, that is about 14% of the universe forecast for that year. As experience has shown that the Council's advisers on research projects tend to endorse roughly 75% of them, the Council must be prepared to deal with the financial needs of close to 2,000 researchers, or 11% of the teaching body.

The above-mentioned growth in demand and in fellowships and grants awarded is illustrated over leaf:

Aid to Career Scholars		Post-Doctoral* Fellowships	Leave Fellowships	Grants (Researchers involved)	Total for the 3 programmes

c) Distribution by discipline

Both to answer an often asked question and to shed further light on the direction taken by Council-supported research, a classification by discipline has been prepared of all the assistance given in 1967-68 under the three programmes of assistance to career scholars. The results of this study are presented in the table on the next page, followed by a graph illustrating them. Shown for each of the twenty disciplines listed is the number of fellowships and grants (though not the number of researchers involved in various projects), and the amount of financial support.

First fact to strike the eye is that there is no constant relationship between the number of grants and total value awarded. For example the 59 grants for studies in political science were of a total value of $342,000, somewhat more than the $332,000 disbursed on 113 grants in English.

History is the subject studied by the greatest number of researchers (118) and accounts for the largest expenditures ($432,000). A close second in number of grants is English (113), followed at a distance by political science (59), sociology (56), French studies and philosophy (50 each). As for the monetary value of the grants, political science is second ($342,000), followed closely by English ($332,000) and economics ($298,000). Sociology and philosophy also account for major sums, with $253,000 and $206,000 respectively.

3. Library Research Collections

The Council's increased funds in 1967-68 enabled it to double its assistance to Canadian university libraries for the purchase of volumes for their research collections. Expenditures on this programme have increased from the 1966-67 figure of $500,000 to $1,003,000 in 1967-68, and the same amount has been allotted for 1968-69. Although this increase marks a considerable improvement, it is still far less than the minimum of $2 million a year recommended by the Bladen Commission as essential if Canadian universities are to reach American levels of library holdings or at least not fall further behind.

Aware of this problem, the Council financed a study on library resources conducted by Prof. Robert B. Downs, dean of Library Administration at the University of Illinois. The report of this enquiry, recently published, deals among other things with means of alleviating the paucity of our research collections, suggesting a more extensive use of technical innovations. It is hoped that it is now possible to attack this problem as a whole.

The entry into Canada of the Bertrand Russell papers and library is a welcome event, one in which the Council is pleased to have participated with a grant of $150,000 spread over three years to McMaster University, Hamilton, which has acquired this valuable collection.

4. Aid to Publication, Meetings and Exchanges

This year the Council has once again extended substantial assistance to the Social Science Research Council ($23,000) and the Humanities Research Council ($72,000) for publication of research works in their respective sectors. Indispensable aid has also been granted to learned periodicals in such disciplines as economics, political science and Canadian literature. A new journal with the working title, "The Canadian Journal of Behavioural Science", is being launched by the Canadian Psychological Association with the help of a grant of $13,700.

In encouragement of exchanges between university staff and others concerned in research, the Council defrays travel costs for participants at meetings of learned societies, and it extends support to conferences between specialists in key areas to allow them to co-ordinate their research on a national or international level. Another Council programme assists Canadian universities to bring in outstanding specialists as visiting scholars.

Total cost of the programme of meetings and exchanges during 1967-68 was $250,000, a considerable increase over the 1966-67 outlay of $147,000.

It is difficult to make a break-down by disciplines of the grants to publication, meetings and exchanges, as has been done for doctoral fellowships and the programmes of aid to research. For one thing, Council aid to publication and, to a large degree, to scholarly meetings, is made in the form of block grants to the Social Science Research Council and the Humanities Research Council. In addition, many of the grants for library research collections include more than one discipline.

University Capital Grants Fund

The Building Programme under the University Capital Grants Fund

Established ten years ago with the creation of the Canada Council, the University Capital Grants Fund was totally allocated in 1967, the University of Ottawa having made the last application under the fund.

The initial fund of $50 million which the Council invested in bonds and other securities guaranteed by the Government of Canada has grown consistently from interest and profits; at March 31, 1968, the Council had approved grants totalling $68,132,991.62 to 71 universities and similar institutions of higher learning in the ten provinces of Canada. Of this amount, $62,163,234.00 have been paid to institutions and it is expected that as work progresses on the last constructions to have been approved, the fund will be completely spent in 1969-70.

Since its last report the Council made a further distribution of interest and profits for the fiscal year 1967-68, to the amount of $406,553. New grants were approved in a total amount of $606,580 to the following institutions:

St. Michael's College for its library	$ 60,455
St. Peter's College for an extension to its library facilities	60,034
University of Ottawa towards construction of a library of the humanities and social sciences	430,981
University of Saskatchewan (Transfer of allocations to Luther College and the Scolasticat du Sacré-Coeur)	55,110
	$606,580

The Council is now in a position to provide a complete report of all constructions which have qualified for assistance from the University Capital Grants Fund.

Cultural Exchanges

In addition to sending many Canadians abroad to study or engage in research under its own programmes of aid, the Council administers two exchange programmes with several European countries on behalf of the Government of Canada.

Exchange Programme with European Countries

For the fiscal year 1967-68 the Secretary of State for External Affairs allotted $700,000 to the Canada Council for the purpose of administering the programme of grants and fellowships within the cultural exchange plan with France, Belgium and Switzerland.

This programme is in two parts. The first part concerns grants to Canadian universities and cultural organizations wishing to invite from the countries concerned university professors, distinguished scholars or artists. The second part is the programme of fellowships available to citizens of these countries for graduate or post-graduate studies in Canada.

Canadian Universities were offered grants to facilitate the coming to Canada of 21 scholars: 15 from France, 4 from Belgium and 2 from Switzerland. The Fellowships awarded amounted to 118: 90 from France, 16 from Belgium and 12 from Switzerland.

In September, 1967, the Canadian Government made the decision to extend the cultural exchange programme to include the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the Netherlands, and the budget of the overall programme administered by the Council will be increased by $150,000 for the 1968-69 academic year.

the Governments of Canada and Italy relating to assistance given by Canada to Italian civilians during World War II. Under the terms of these agreements the Italian Government agreed to put the sum of $500,000 at the disposition of the Canadian Government, the interest of which, approximately $25,000, would serve to finance the Institute.

At the request of the Department of External Affairs the Canada Council agreed in Spring of 1967 to administer the funds of the Institute. The Council is assisted in this task by an advisory committee formed under the chairmanship of the Ambassador to Rome.

The Institute is a programme of cultural activities rather than a physical establishment. Its income is used to finance Canadian cultural activities in Italy and to aid a number of Canadian artists and scholars who wish to spend some time in Italy to further their professional formation.

The Institute made awards to sixteen Canadians during its first year, the amount in each case determined by length of tenure and the professional level of the recipient.

Canadian Cultural Institute in Rome

The Canadian Cultural Institute in Rome was created following agreements between

Canadian National Commission for Unesco

One of the less known responsibilities of the Canada Council is to establish and maintain the Canadian National Commission for Unesco. Each Member State is required by the Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to organize a National Commission, which is responsible generally for liaison between the international organization and agencies in the country concerned with the substance of education, science, culture and communications.

The President of the Canadian National Commission is M. Napoléon LeBlanc, a member of the Canada Council, and the secretariat is a small branch of the Council's staff. The Commission is responsible generally to foster Canadian participation in Unesco, to advise on government policy towards the Organization, and to carry out a modest programme in Canada in support of Unesco objectives.

In June, 1967, the Commission organized a major international seminar on "The Description and Measurement of Bilingualism", which was held at the Université de Moncton. The seminar was not concerned except incidentally with bilingualism in Canada but assumed, rather, that international insights would illuminate our domestic situation and that some of our current thinking would prove relevant to research into the phenomenon in other parts of the world. Surprisingly, most countries of the world are bilingual or multilingual, and the seminar attracted some 30 invited scholars and over 100 observers from twenty countries. The report of the seminar will be published in 1968.

Over the year the Commission was particularly concerned with Canadian participation in important international meetings within the Unesco terms of reference, and with arrangements to enable international organizations to hold occasional meetings in Canada. Travel grants to permit Canadians to attend meetings in other countries are listed in the table below. Fewer but larger grants were made to organizations (also shown in the table) to help meet some of the responsibilities of Canada as a host country, and to offset extra intercontinental travel expenses.

The 1967 experience makes it clear that Canada can take its turn in receiving international meetings, both scholarly and popular, and in both the official and non-governmental sectors. In addition to intercontinental transportation assistance, we would need to develop improved arrangements to provide facilities, simultaneous translation, and reasonable hospitality, following precedents established in many other countries. Many international organizations would like to meet occasionally in this country, so that their members can gain first-hand experience of a region and of a scholarly community which they seldom have an opportunity to visit. From the Canadian viewpoint, meetings here provide the occasion for more of our specialists to exchange ideas with colleagues from abroad. Canadians are taking an increasingly active part in international organizations and Centennial Year drew many international meetings to Canada for the first time; there is no doubt that, with reasonable official support, the new level of participation can be maintained.

During the year a number of Canadian organizations, including the National Commission itself, benefitted from grants under Unesco's "programme of participation in activities of Member States". The total of these grants secured through the National Commission was approximately $30,000; details are included in the table below.

A biennial report describing the activities of the National Commission in more detail is published separately, and may be secured on request to the Canada Council.

To a degree, the domestic terms of reference of the Canada Council are paralleled on the international scene by those of Unesco. Thus, while the Council's major activities are devoted primarily to the support of scholarship and the arts in Canada, the programme of the National Commission represents a modest projection of these activities in a larger compass.

Stanley House

Stanley House is a summer residence on the north shore of the Baie des Chaleurs near New Richmond, Quebec, which was given to the Canada Council in 1961. It is used for a series of week-long meetings during the summer months, designed to encourage reflection and the exchange of ideas on subject of interest to the Council and its constituency.

It is intended that Stanley House shall be a meeting place primarily for Canadians drawn from different regions, disciplines and intellectual traditions. In other words, we hope to encourage contacts and discussions which would not take place in the normal course of the professional activities of our guests. Each meeting – which may involve up to fourteen people – turns on a specific theme which may range, for example, from the problems of managing symphony orchestras, to the design of programmes for the continuing education of architects, or the establishment of documentation sources for historical restoration. Each session is convened by the Council's staff in co-operation with a chairman, who acts as host and organizer. Those invited to take part attend in a personal capacity as the guests of the Council.

In 1967, groups met to discuss the effects of changes in science and technology on contemporary society; citizenship education; the role of residential colleges in large metropolitan universities; and the implications of advances in the behavioural sciences for architectural design.

Five years ago the Stanley House programme was regarded as an experiment. To our knowledge no such centre had previously existed in Canada and it was not then clear whether informal meetings of this kind could contribute materially to the Council's mandate "to foster and promote the study and encouragement of . . . the arts, humanities and social sciences." Experience in the interval and the assessments received from our guests have demonstrated the value of the experiment which has become a regular part of the Council's programme.

Income and Expenditures

The programmes administered by the Canada Council have been grouped under three main headings: The Regular Programmes (i.e. Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities, Canadian National Commission for Unesco and Administration) which are financed from the Parliamentary grant and the income from the Endowment Fund; the Special Programmes (i.e. Killam Awards, Molson Prizes, Cultural Exchange Programmes, Canadian Cultural Institute in Rome, Miscellaneous Donations) which are financed from funds donated or made available to the Council for specific purposes; the University Capital Grants which are paid from the University Capital Grants Fund.

Regular Programmes

The table below shows the breakdown of income and expenditures for 1967-1968 compared to the last three years. The total income almost doubled that of 1966-1967 as a result of an increase of $10 million in the Parliamentary grant. The Government has included in the 1968-1969 estimates an amount of $20,580,000 for the Canada Council. The total expenditures were held down to $19,772,000, $1,350,000 having been held over to provide for a more even growth and to ease the strain which the expected increase in demand will put on the available funds for 1968-1969.

Expenditures in the Social Sciences and Humanities have increased by an amount of $7.7 million over the previous year, 138%, and are ten times higher than the level of expenditures of 1964-1965 before the first parliamentary grant. The Arts have increased by an amount of $2.8 million or 64% over the previous year. In the last four years, the Arts Programme increased almost five times. A substantial increase was also experienced in administration in 1967-1968 ($434,000 or 63%). It represents 5.3% of the budget compared to 6.4% in 1966-1967 and 12.5% in 1964-1965.

Special Programmes

Killam Awards Programme

The Killam Awards programme is financed from two separate donations: one of $4.4 million made anonymously in 1963 and a new donation, estimated at $12 million, in 1966, after the decease of Mrs. Izaak Walton Killam. Both donations will become available gradually; by March 31, 1968, the Council had received $1,615,000 under the first donation and $6,943,000 under the second and more recent donation. A summary of the income and expenditures during 1967-68 is shown in the appendix to the balance sheet for special funds.

The total income of the two funds together amounted to $491,000 in 1967-1968 while expenditures were only $17,000 leaving a combined accumulated surplus of $853,000 as of March 31, 1968. This surplus was accumulated pending the development of The Killam Awards programme which was announced in the fall of 1967 and under which the first awards had not yet been made at the close of 1967-1968. It is expected that the awards in the coming years will gradually reduce that surplus, in addition to using up annual income under the two funds.

Molson Prizes

The Molson Prizes are financed from a donation of $600,000 made in 1963 by the Molson Foundation to the Canada Council. Three prizes of $15,000 each were granted in 1967-1968; the total expenditures including $2,000 for administration amounted to $47,000. The income was $36,000. The surplus was thereby reduced from $28,000 to $17,000 as of March 31, 1968.

Exchange Programme with French Language Countries

An amount of $598,000 was spent under this programme in 1967-1968 from funds provided by the Department of External Affairs. A breakdown of our expenditures and a comparison with 1966-1967 is shown below: —

Canadian Cultural Institute in Rome

By Order in Council PC 1967-2354 of December 21, 1967, the Canada Council was given the responsibility for administering the Canada Foundation account to which are credited the interests payable on the bonds received by Canada under the Civilian Relief Agreement of 1950 and the Cultural Agreement of 1954 between Canada and Italy. An amount of $26,000 had been received to October 1967 in this account and against that amount, the Council authorized during 1967-1968 fifteen grants to individuals totalling $19,980. The Canada Foundation Account is with the Banco di Roma in Rome and all operations of the Council with respect to this account are in lira.

Miscellaneous

a) Watkins Estate

Mr. J. B. C. Watkins, of Ottawa, who died in 1964, donated to the Canada Council all income derived from his residual estate for the establishment of scholarships to graduates of Canadian universities for post-graduate studies in Scandinavia and Iceland.

The Royal Trust Company is administering Mr. Watkins' estate. The Council received in 1967-1968 an amount of $4,242 for a total of $11,932 at March 31, 1968. No awards have been made yet pending final settlement of the estate and development of a programme.

b) Sundry donations

In 1967-1968 the Canada Council received ten donations of amounts ranging from $800 to $15,000 totalling $33,900.

Two donations were earmarked for Canadian Art ($17,500); three for the chair of Canadian studies at Harvard University ($5,250); one for Vie des Arts ($1,000); one for Les éditions Lidec ($800) and one for a group of music students to attend a summer camp in New York ($3,350). In addition, a grant of $5,000 was paid to La Maison des étudiants canadiens in Paris according to the wishes of the donor, although it was not earmarked for this specific purpose, and one other un-earmarked donation of $1,000 was added to the income of the Canada Council.

University Capital Grants Fund

As shown in the balance sheet for the University Capital Grants Fund, grants totalling $1,623,753 were approved during 1967-1968 using up all remaining funds under this programme. There remains a balance of unpaid grants totalling $5,969,758 for construction projects still in progress. Any interest earned on that amount during 1968-1969 would be distributed on March 31, 1969.

Investments

There were no changes during the 1967-1968 year in the arrangements relating to the Council's securities, although on April 1, 1968 the firm of D. H. Fullerton & Company resigned as managers and were replaced by Bolton Tremblay Limited, investment consultants of Montreal. The investment committee continued to provide overall direction in the Management of the portfolio, with the Council's Treasurer, Mr. André Fortier serving as secretary of the committee. Mr. J. G. Hungerford resigned as Chairman of the investment committee on April 1st, 1968, with Mr. Trevor Moore becoming the new Chairman. The present investment committee consists of Mr. Moore, and Messrs. Jean Martineau, Arnold Hart and Henry Hicks.

The Endowment Fund

The Act imposes no restrictions on the manner in which the money of this fund can be invested. However, as indicated in earlier Annual Reports, the Council, on the advice of the Investment Committee, established rules similar to those in the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act, but adapted to meet the special requirements of the Endowment Fund. These provisions limit the Fund's holdings of a particular type of investment or the securities of any one company.

The present portfolio is divided into five main categories: short term securities, Canada, Provincial and Municipal bonds, Corporate bonds, Mortgages and Equities. A summary of these holdings at March 31, 1968 is as follows:

	Book Value Amortized $000	Market Value $000
Short term investments	13,389	13,298
Canada, Provincial, Municipal	16,303	13,850
Corporate	8,527	7,621
Mortgages (principally N. H. A.)	16,391	16,391
Equities and convertible bonds	13,457	14,073
	68,067	65,233

The total book value of the portfolio was increased by approximately $5 million over last year, caused by an increase in unpaid grants and surplus for the year, less a reduction in the profits reserve. These unspent funds are invested until such time as they are needed.

The market value of the portfolio was approximately $2.8 million below cost as compared to $835,000 above cost at the end of the 1967 fiscal year. During the year, a substantial decline in bond prices was experienced, affecting key bond issues by as much as ten points. The level of stock market prices was down substantially also, with the market value only $600,000 above cost, compared with $2.5 million above cost at the end of 1967. Net realized losses of $1.3 million brought the profit reserves down to $4.5 million at March 31, 1968.

The yield on the entire portfolio was 5.98% at March 31, 1968 as compared with 5.76% at the end of 1967 – an increase of .22%, the result of higher current yields in short term investments.

Killam Fund

In 1966-1967 this fund was established to invest the bequest to the Council of the late Mrs. Dorothy Killam. The investments aggregated $7.515 million at March 31, 1968. The yield on book value of the portfolio stood at 5.28% at March 31, 1968 compared to 5.45% at March 31, 1967. The market value of the portfolio at March 31, 1968 was $803,000 below amortized book value as compared with $98,000 above book value a year ago, as a result of declining bond prices and the realization of profits from the sale of securities. The principal of the fund at March 31, 1968 amounted to $6.95 million and the unexpended balance was $.6 million. It is expected that the awards programme will be started early in the 1968-1969 fiscal year.

Special Fund

This fund includes scholarship and prize funds of about $2.47 million arising out of private donations to the Council. These funds are invested in much the same fashion as the Endowment Fund. The yield on book value of the fund at March 31, 1968 was 5.89% as compared to 5.73% at March 31, 1967. The market value of the portfolio was $330,000 below amortized cost as compared with $113,000 below at March 31, 1967. The principal of the funds at March 31, 1968 was $2,215,000 and the unexpended balance was $258,000.

University Capital Grants Fund

As required by the Act, the University Capital Grants Fund is invested entirely in Government of Canada direct or guaranteed securities. Yield on book value of portfolio at March 31, 1968 was 5.69% as compared to 5.03% at March 31, 1967. Income and profits for the year were $406,000.

During the year grants of $1,623,753 were approved, bringing the total grants to date to $68,132,992. The position of the fund at March 31, 1968:

Principal	$50,000,000
Interest & Profits to March 31, 1968	18,132,992
	$68,132,992
Grants approved	68,132,992

Auditor General of Canada

Ottawa, September 24, 1968.
To: The Canada Council
The Secretary of State of Canada.

I have examined the accounts and financial statements of the Canada Council for the year ended March 31, 1968 in accordance with section 22 of the Canada Council Act. My examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of the accounting records and other supporting evidence as I considered necessary in the circumstances.

Section 9 of the Canada Council Act authorizes the Council to make grants to universities and similar institutions by way of capital assistance in respect of building construction projects. Subsection (2) of section 17 of the Act reads as follows:

"(2) Grants made by the Council under section 9 may be paid out of the University Capital Grants Fund, but shall not exceed (a) in the case of any particular project, one-half of the total expenditures made in respect of the project; and (b) in any province, an amount that is in the same proportion to the aggregate of the amounts credited to the University Capital Grants Fund as the population of the province, according to the latest census, is to the aggregate population, according to such census, of those provinces in which there is a university or other similar institution of higher learning."

To March 31, 1968 the Council had allocated and granted to such institutions the amount of $18,132,992 representing the total of interest and profits earned by the University Capital Grants Fund from its inception.

Grants authorized by the Council from allocations of accumulated interest and profits amounted to $16,533,946 by March 31, 1967, and payments thereon during the same period amounted to $9,639,009. During the year ended March 31, 1968 further grants of $1,599,046 were authorized from allocations of interest and profits and additional payments of $2,531,436 were made.

As the remainder of the University Capital Grants Fund's original principal of $50 million was also granted during the year, no balance of principal remained at March 31, 1968. Additional amounts will become available for allocation, however, from earnings on investments held for the payment of approved grants.

A resolution passed by the Council on August 26-27, 1963 adopted the "hotch-pot" or trust fund approach as the method to be employed in the allocation of these funds. This approach provided that grants already paid to institutions were to be treated as advances subject to interest. This resolution also provided that the "latest census" to be employed for the purpose was to be the census taken by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in 1956.

I remain of the opinion expressed in my report for the year ended March 31, 1964, for the reasons there given, that this method of allocation is not in accordance with section 17(2) of the Canada Council Act.

Subject to this qualification, I report that, in my opinion:

1. the attached balance sheet for the Endowment Account presents fairly the financial position of this account as at March 31, 1968;
2. the attached balance sheet for the Special Funds presents fairly the financial position of these funds as at March 31, 1968;
3. the attached balance sheet for the University Capital Grants Fund presents fairly the financial position of this fund as at March 31,

1968; and

4. the accompanying statement of income and expenditure for the Endowment Account presents fairly the financial transactions of the Endowment Account for the year ended March 31, 1968.

Yours faithfully,
Auditor General of Canada.

Auditor General of Canada
(Sgd.) A. M. Henderson,

The Canada Council

Notes to the financial statements

March 31, 1968

Note 1. Short term securities

This classification comprises provincial treasury bills, bank and corporate notes, and bonds and debentures maturing within the next five years valued at amortized cost in the amount of $10,338,896, and includes bank and corporate notes valued at cost in the amount of $3,050,000.

Note 2. Equities including convertible bonds, preferred shares and warrants

Convertible bonds have been included in this classification to reflect the intention of converting them, in the future, into equities. As at March 31, 1968 the balance sheets of the Endowment Account and the Special Funds included convertible bonds valued at cost and at amortized cost as follows:

	Endowment Account	Molson Prize and Special Scholarship Funds
At cost	$650,000	—
At amortized cost	1,035,000	$99,000
	$1,685,000	$99,000

Note 3. Administration expenditure

In addition to the expenses relating to the administration of the University Capital Grants Fund, the above-noted expenditure includes the indirect expenses of servicing the Canadian National Commission for Unesco – which are absorbed by the Council – and the Special Funds, and of administering the Programme of Cultural Relations and Academic Exchanges with countries of French expression. The Council has recovered $2,000 from the Molson Prize Fund, $488 from the Special Scholarship Fund and $30,000 from the Government of Canada, in respect of the indirect expenses of servicing the Molson Prize Fund and the Special Scholarship Fund, and of administering the Cultural Programme.

Note 4. Special Funds

During the year the Council amended its former resolution pertaining to the preparation of a separate balance sheet, designated as "Special Funds", to now account for all moneys or properties received by the Council pursuant to section 20 of the Canada Council Act except for Parliamentary annual grants.

Sundry donations received from private sources are shown in this balance sheet for purposes of record, although disbursements by way of grants are made through the Endowment Account.

The Council has received other gifts which, because of their terms, preclude this accounting treatment. They are as follows:

1. A gift of $600,000 from the Molson Foundation established a capital fund referred to as the Molson Prize Fund, the income from which is used for making cash awards to authors or creators of works or persons who have rendered service to Canada in the fields of the arts, humanities, or social sciences which are adjudged "to be of such outstanding importance that (they) will enrich the cultural or intellectual heritage of the nation, or make a noteworthy contribution to understanding and unity among Canadians of French and English descent". The value of each award is $15,000 to be made without restriction as to its use by the recipient.

2. A gift of approximately $4,350,000 from an anonymous donor (subsequently identified as the late Mrs. Dorothy J. Killam) for the establishment of a Special Scholarship Fund. The gift consists of securities registered in the name of the Canada Council, redeemable over a period of some years. To March 31, 1968 the Council had received proceeds from the redemption of these securities amounting to $1,615,418, including $144,116 received during the current year. These proceeds have been reinvested and the income derived therefrom has been used to provide fellowship and scholarship grants to Canadians for advanced study or research in the fields of medicine, science and engineering at universities, hospitals, research or scientific institutions or other equivalent or similar institutions in Canada in accordance with the terms of the gift.

3. A bequest of what may amount to $12,000,000, made by the late Mrs. Dorothy J. Killam, for the establishment of "The Izaak Walton Killam Memorial Fund for Advanced Studies" to provide scholarships "for advanced study or research at universities, hospitals, research or scientific institutes, or other equivalent or similar institutions both in Canada and in other countries in any field of study or research other than 'the arts' as presently defined in the Canada Council Act and not limited to the 'humanities and social sciences' referred to in such Act".

The bequest contains the following provisions: that the Killam Trust shall not form part of the Endowment Fund or the University Capital Grants Fund or otherwise be merged with any assets of the Council; and that, in the event the Canada Council should be liquidated or its existence terminated or its powers and authority changed so that it is no longer able to administer any Killam Trust, the assets forming the Killam Trust must be paid over to certain universities which have also benefited under the will.

A total of $6,942,638 in cash and securities had been received by March 31, 1968.

4. A bequest of the net income from the residue of the estate of the late John B. C. Watkins. The net income, which may amount to approximately $7,000 a year, is to be used "for the establishment of scholarships to be awarded to graduates of any Canadian University who may apply therefor for the purpose of engaging in post graduate studies in Denmark, Norway, Sweden or Iceland and who shall be selected for their outstanding worth or promise by a committee appointed by the Canada Council".

In prior years the balance sheet has shown only the amount received. This year the bequest has been included at a nominal value of $1.

To March 31, 1968 a total of $11,932 in cash had been received, including $4,242 during the year.

5. A bequest of what may amount to $31,500 made by the late J. B. Barwick. The payment of the bequest is to be postponed during the lifetime of the surviving beneficiary of the residue of the estate. The bequest to the Council is "on condition that such bequest shall be applied for the benefit of the musical division of the arts and for the encouragement of the musical arts to increase the Council's normal budget in the musical division or field of the arts". The bequest is reflected in the balance sheet at the nominal value of $1.

For investment purposes the Special Scholarship and Molson Prize Funds have been combined and are represented by one portfolio. During the year income has been apportioned as at the end of each quarter in the ratio that the principal and surplus of each fund as at the beginning of the quarter was of the total principal and surplus of the funds, with equitable adjustment for the amount of additional principal paid into the Special Scholarship Fund during the year.

Note 7. Principal of University Capital Grants Fund

The balance of the Fund as at March 31, 1967 consisted of $500,387 of allocated funds and $716,815 of unallocated funds.

Grants authorized during the year were made from the $500,387 allocated at March 31, 1967 plus $1,123,366 interest and profits allocated during the year for the period January 1, 1966 to March 31, 1968.
