INTRODUCTION

Note: This introduction to Info Source is in large print to assist persons with visual disabilities.

A. Foreword

Info Source: Sources of Federal Employee Information will help you, as a current or former federal employee, to locate your personal information held by the government. It will also help you to exercise your rights under the Privacy Act.

This publication is one of a series of four reference tools to assist you and other members of the public in exercising your rights under two Canadian laws - the Access to Information Act and the Privacy Act. The Info Source publications support the government's policy to explain and promote open and accessible information regarding its activities.

Info Source is comprised of the following publications:

Info Source: Sources of Federal Employee Information:

- Contains information to help current and former federal government employees to locate personal information held by the government.
- Is intended to help former and current government employees to exercise their rights under the Privacy Act.

Info Source: Sources of Federal Government Information:

- Provides information about the Government of Canada, its organization and its information holdings.
- Helps individuals determine which institution to contact about requesting information formally or informally.
- Provides individuals who are not, and who have never been employees of the federal government, with relevant information to facilitate access to personal information about them held by a federal government institution subject to the Privacy Act.

Info Source: The Access to Information Act and Privacy Act Bulletin:

- Provides statistical information about the number of Access to Information and Privacy requests on an annual basis and cumulative statistics since 1983.
- Contains a summary of federal court cases related to Access to Information.

Info Source: Directory of Federal Government Enquiry Points:

- Contains addresses and telephone numbers for federal departments and agencies subject to the Access to Information Act and/or the Privacy Act.
- Other institutions associated with the federal government are included to facilitate access.

Info Source is distributed to libraries, municipal offices and federal government offices across Canada.

It is helpful to understand the basic differences between the Access to Information Act and the Privacy Act. The information accessible under each Act is different and there are different procedures to obtain it. The following pages describe the essential details.

B. Inside Info Source

This Info Source publication has three main components:

1) Introduction

The Introduction includes:

- Section A - the Foreword
- Section B - a description of the contents of Info Source
- Section C - guidance on how to use Info Source effectively
- Section D - a summary of the roles and responsibilities of the federal government institutions that are either responsible for the production of Info Source or are responsible for the provision of input to the Info Source publications
- Section E - some essential points about the Privacy Act
- Section F - detailed information about the various categories of Personal Information Banks (PIBs)
- Section G – directions on how to make a formal request under the Privacy Act
- Section H - contact information if you wish to obtain a copy of any of the Info Source publications; and
- Section I - information about the terms used throughout the book

2) Standard Personal Information Banks (PIB)

Standardized descriptions of personal information have been developed by Treasury Board to describe personal information that may be found in records commonly maintained by federal institutions and are included in this publication. Institutions may choose to register and declare one or more of these standard Personal Information Banks rather than develop institution-specific PIBs.

3) Chapters

There is one chapter for each federal government department or agency subject to the Privacy Act. Chapters are arranged in alphabetical order by the commonly used name of the institution. Each chapter contains a description of personal information relating to current and former employees of the institution, the purpose and intended use (consistent use) of the information, and a statement of how long the records containing the information are retained by the institution (retention), what happens to the records when no longer required by the institution (disposal which is either destruction or transfer to the Library and Archives Canada for permanent retention and the authority reference that permits the disposition action (Retention Disposition Authority).

C. Using Info Source effectively

Determine the correct chapter

Turn to the chapter of the department or agency you think has the information, and check the Personal Information Banks.

If you don't know if you have the correct department or agency, a telephone call, email or letter to any Privacy Coordinator's office should provide the answer.

For persons with disabilities

Individuals who are unable to exercise their rights using regular procedures may obtain further assistance from any Privacy Coordinator's office.

D. Roles and Responsibilities

Treasury Board

In accordance with the Privacy Act, Treasury Board is responsible for the annual publication of an index of personal information that will both serve to keep the public informed of how the government handles personal information, as well as facilitating the public's ability to exercise its rights under the Privacy Act. Treasury Board Secretariat fulfils these requirements through the annual publication of Info Source.

Library and Archives Canada (LAC)

Under the Library and Archives Canada Act, the Library and Archives Canada is charged with various responsibilities regarding the disposition of information created by federal institutions in support of public policy, administration of government and program delivery. These responsibilities include the authorization of records destruction by government institutions and the preservation of records for their historical or archival importance.

Questions concerning these responsibilities may be addressed to the Information Management Centre of the Library and Archives Canada (LAC) at (613) 944-IMGI (4644) or by e-mailing imgi@lac-bac.gc.ca.

Individual Institutions

Government institutions are required to provide details about personal information banks as well as descriptions of their organization and information holdings to Treasury Board Secretariat on an annual basis. These descriptions are utilized in the production of the publications required by the Access to Information Act and Privacy Act. Each department and agency is responsible for the information it submits.

Government institutions are also responsible for ensuring that all information/records are managed within an established life cycle. It is incumbent upon each government institution to understand and apply any legislation regarding the retention of information and more specifically, its own legislation. Each government institution is required to determine the appropriate retention periods for its records, including those common administrative records covered by a MIDA. Accountability regarding the decision to destroy records, once a Records Disposition Authority (RDA) has been established, and the timing of records destruction rests with individual government institutions.

Each federal institution has a Privacy Coordinator. The Coordinators' offices are staffed by people to answer questions and help identify the records or information you wish to see.

Coordinators may be contacted in person, by telephone, e-mail, letter or through the submission of a completed Privacy Request Form.

Privacy Commissioner

The Privacy Commissioner is an ombudsman with the power to look into complaints of improper collection, use, storage, disclosure or disposition of personal information. The Privacy Commissioner may also help if you are dissatisfied with the response to your formal application or the time it has taken to obtain your response. If the Privacy Commissioner recommends that you be given access to records and the institution still refuses, an appeal may be made to the Federal Court.

When the Privacy Commissioner's investigation is completed, an individual who is of the opinion that they have not been given access to all of their personal information to which they are entitled, has the right to apply to the Federal Court - Trial Division for a review of the matter.

You may write or call the Privacy Commissioner's office at:

E. Privacy Act

In its day-to-day operations, federal government departments and agencies collect personal information from almost all Canadians. The Privacy Act gives Canadian citizens and people present in Canada the right to have access to information that is held about them by the federal government. It also protects against unauthorized disclosure of that personal information. In addition, it strictly controls how the government will collect, use, store, disclose and dispose of any personal information.

Most information is available when you ask

Most of your personal information is available to you at your request. This Info Source publication has been designed to help you pinpoint the department or agency where the information is held and assist you in obtaining it.

Types of personal information held

You probably already know about many of the programs and operations of the government that use personal information such as income tax at Canada Customs and Revenue Agency, citizenship at Citizenship and Immigration Canada and the Employment Insurance program at Social Development Canada.

There is personal information that the federal government may not release under the Privacy Act. For example, some personal information may relate to individuals other than the person requesting the information, or it may be about sensitive national security matters or law enforcement investigations.

Note: The Privacy Act does not control nor give you access to records that are not held by the federal government, such as those maintained by provincial or municipal governments or by private organizations such as commercial banks and credit bureaus. Most provincial governments have legislation similar to the Privacy Act. Consult the provincial government listings in the blue pages of your local telephone book.

Some personal information is confidential

The federal government must keep some personal information confidential under the Privacy Act, much of which relates to other people, national security or law enforcement.

Safeguarding personal information

The protection of your personal information and privacy is a very important aspect of the Privacy Act. The Act states how and when the government may collect, store and dispose of personal information. It also covers specifically why and how the information may be used or given out, as well as who may use or receive it.

Giving out information

The government may only disclose your information to someone else with your consent or when one or more of the criteria in the Privacy Act are met, such as to comply with a subpoena. Such disclosures are discretionary and are subject to any other Act of Parliament.

F. Personal Information Banks (PIB)

Personal Information Banks provide a summary of the type of information about individuals that is held by federal departments and agencies. The Privacy Act requires that Personal Information Banks include all personal information that is organized and retrievable by a person's name or by an identifying number, symbol or other particular assigned only to that person. Personal Information Banks must also include personal information that has been or is being used, or is available for use for an administrative purpose.

The three types of Personal Information Banks contained within Info Source: Sources of Federal Employee Information relate only to current and former Government of Canada employees and they are as follows:

Standard Employee Personal Information Banks: There are a number of Employee Related Standard PIBs (Standard Employee PIBs) that describe personal information contained in records commonly maintained by most government institutions about their employees. Institutions may require several or all of these Standard PIBs to describe the personal information contained within their records. The Standard PIBs describe information about such activities as pay and benefits, training and development, performance, etc.

These Standard Employee PIBs use the unique identifier “PSE”.

Particular Employee Personal Information Banks: Particular Employee PIBs describe personal information about employees that is specific to the requirements of each department or agency and is held within their record keeping systems.

Particular Employee PIBs use the unique identifier “PPE”.

Central Employee Personal Information Banks: These records and their related PIBs are maintained by central agencies such as the Public Service Commission, Public Works and Government Services Canada, and the Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat. They describe information about employees from all or several government institutions.

Central Employee PIBs use the unique identifier “PCE”.

The other types of Personal Information Banks (PIB) relate to members of the general public or a combination of members of the general public and federal employees (current and former). These PIBs are contained the complementary volume to this publication — Info Source: Sources of Federal Government Information, which is available in the office of the Access to Information and Privacy Coordinator at each federal government department or agency, federal government personnel offices and federal libraries.

Particular Personal Information Banks: describe personal information about members of the general public, plus federal employees (current and former) that is contained in the records of the particular institution.

These Particular PIBs are identified with the unique identifier “PPU”.

Standard Personal Information Banks: a series of Standard PIBs describe personal information contained in records commonly maintained by most government institutions. Institutions may require several or all of these Standard PIBs to describe the personal information contained within their records, such as Access to Information and Privacy Requests, Executive Correspondence Management Systems, etc.

These Standard PIBs are identified with the unique identifier “PSU”

Central Personal Information Banks: describe information about the general public, plus federal employees (current and former). These records and their related PIBs are maintained by central agencies such as the Public Service Commission, Public Works and Government Services Canada, and the Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat.

These Central PIBs are identified by the unique identifier “PCU”.

G. How to Apply

Privacy Act

When you have decided to make a formal request under the Privacy Act, there are certain procedures to follow. Remember, you will find what you are looking for faster if you already have a good idea of which department or agency has the information you want.

Obtain a Personal Information Request Form at any location where Info Source is available (including the Web Site: www.tbs-sct.gc.ca/tbsf-fsct_e.html).

Fill out the form and identify yourself in such a way that the government may verify who you are, i.e. that it is you, and not someone else, asking for your information. The more precise the information you provide, the faster your request can be answered.

Send the form to the Privacy Coordinator of the appropriate department or agency.

There is no charge to apply for information under the Privacy Act.

To change the information

If you believe the information that a federal institution has on file about you is untrue or misleading, you may ask to have it corrected. Even if the department or agency does not agree to change this information, it must make a note that you have asked for the change and attach it to the file.

Turnaround time

Under the law, all or most of the information you ask for should be disclosed within 30 days of receiving the request. If a time extension is required, you will be notified within the first 30 days and told why up to another 30 days may be needed.

Standard Personal Information Bank Descriptions

Standard Personal Information Bank (PIBs) descriptions have been developed to describe personal information that may be found in types of records commonly maintained by federal institutions. These records document internal administrative functions, systems and procedures that are common to or shared by all federal government institutions. They describe information related to pay and benefits, training and development, performance, etc.

These information banks are identified with the unique identifier “PSE” as part of the bank number contained within the PIB.

Retention and Disposal Standards for Standard PIBs:

The following Retention and Disposal Standards statement applies to all Standard PIBs unless otherwise noted within a specific PIB.

- The records containing the personal information described in the standard banks may be retained for different periods of time as decided by each government institution, unless otherwise specified.
- At a minimum, personal information used for an administrative purpose must be retained for at least two years unless the individual consents to its earlier disposal. Any disposal of such records must be in accordance with Records Disposition Authorities issued by the Librarian and Archivist of Canada.
 - The Privacy Act defines administrative purpose to mean the use of that information in a decision making process that directly affects an individual.
- For the specific amount of time that different types of common administrative documents are retained by a given government institution, please contact that institution’s ATIP Co-ordinator.

Attendance and Leave

Description: The records containing the information described in this bank may include absence reports and leave applications, as well as physicians’ certificates associated with sick leave, all of which include the individual’s Personal Record Identifier (PRI) and correspondence about attendance and leave. The annual record of attendance and leave may be attached to the Employee Personnel Record. Some attendance and leave information exists in automated form in institutional personnel databases, especially in time/attendance, leave control and absenteeism systems.

Employment Equity Program

Description: The records containing the information described in this bank include personal information on employees such as education, work history and career aspirations, and training and development, which is collected by means of questionnaires and/or interviews or compiled from employees' files or automated data systems. The information is collected on a voluntary basis, and respondents are asked to identify whether they are male or female, whether they are an aboriginal person, and whether they have a disability or are a member of a visible minority group. The Personal Record Identifier (PRI) may be used to identify employees in instances where government institutions are not able to employ an anonymous questionnaire, as well as when these identifiers are required to locate employee records.

Class of Individuals: Employees of the institution.

Purpose: Related records provide documentation for the implementation of the employment equity policy in government institutions falling under the Public Service Staff Relations Act, Part I, Schedule I. Data are collected to provide a comprehensive picture of employees by sex and by target group status (e.g., women, aboriginal peoples, persons with disabilities and members of visible minority groups). This information is used to compile a personnel profile of employees and to compare the situation of target group members with non-target group members within a government institution and with their counterparts in the general labour market. The Personal Record Identifier (PRI) may be used to link information in this bank with that in another bank containing employee information (e.g., the Personnel Management Information System) in order to obtain statistical information, where the securing of such information would be consistent with the uses for which the personal information was collected. Self-identification information may be obtained from the departmental records as described in Staffing translation required (PSE 902).

The information gathered will be used for institutional purposes in the government's employment equity program to identify and eliminate systemic discrimination in employment and to introduce temporary special measures to ensure that target groups participate in and are equitably represented in the federal public service. It may also be used for policy and planning purposes related to employment equity.

The information is destroyed when the individual reaches the age of 80, or two years after the death of the individual, provided two years have elapsed since the last administrative action concerning the information. For records relating to disciplinary action, the time limit for disposal is that specified in applicable collective agreements or three years following the date of disciplinary action, provided no further disciplinary action has been recorded in the meantime. In cases where a disciplinary action has been rescinded, onus is on the institution to ensure that the documentation of the action concerned is immediately destroyed. Respondents are asked to identify whether they are a native person, if they have a persistent disability, or form part of a visible minority. The Employee Personnel Record may contain summary records of decisions relating to staffing, attendance and leave, pay and benefits, training and development, decisions concerning compensation and fitness for work, official languages, discipline, and level of security clearance. The major series of information concerning these topics is, however, found in other personal information banks described in this chapter. The Employee Personnel Record may not include the personal information actually used to make decisions in the areas noted above. Some of the above information exists in a computer-based system in order to generate reports on such topics as training, human resources inventory searches, attendance and leave and other related reports as required.

Information about an individual may be used in decisions relating to the areas of staffing, attendance and leave, pay and benefits, training and development, occupational health and safety, official languages, discipline, and level of security, where information in one area may affect a decision in another area. In some of the above cases, the information in this bank is a summary which refers to other more detailed information in other banks. This information may be used, provided such use is consistent with the main uses of the information, to ensure that personnel actions are co-ordinated in the interests of both the individual and the employer.

Consistent Uses: The main use of this bank is to provide documentation and authorization regarding appointments, transfers, promotions, demotions, termination of employment and superannuation. It is also used to authenticate decisions on staffing, attendance and leave; pay and benefits; training and development; occupational health and safety; official languages; discipline; and level of security clearance; as well as to verify employment references.

Retention and Disposal Standards: After an employee leaves, the personnel record is kept until the individual reaches the age of eighty, or two years after the death of the individual, provided two years have elapsed since the last administrative action concerning the information. Performance appraisals are kept on an employee's file for a period of five years and then destroyed.

The analytical environment includes information obtained from the Public Service Human Resources Management Agency of Canada (PSHRMAC) incumbent, mobility and employment equity data systems, information extracted from the PSC's Program of Special Surveys, as well as appointments or statistics received from other departments for the period prior to April 1999 and subsequently estimates of departmental staffing activity are created from the PSHRMAC incumbent and mobility files. Specific Census data and Health and Activity Limitation Survey data from Statistics Canada are also included in the analytical environment.

Class of Individuals: All individuals who have been appointed to positions in the Public Service or who have left the Public Service.

Purpose: This analytical environment was created to record information on appointments in the Public Service (prior to April 1999), separations, and the distribution of public servants by department and by location, and to provide information on the health of the staffing system of the Public Service. From 1999 to 2003, staffing activities are estimated based on the Treasury Board incumbent and mobility data systems. As of 2003, staffing activities are estimated based on the Job-Based Analytical Information System (JAIS). The analytical environment is updated on a regular basis.

staffing system, the production of the PSC's Annual Report, PSC research and for other reports to PSHRMAC'S on the utilization of human resources and on the status of programs. This information is used for the planning and management of investigations, for auditing, and for studies on staffing practices. This information will not form, in any case, the basis for decision making for administrative decisions regarding individuals. This information is also used in order to track employee mobility and to determine the number of students who become regular employees of the public service and for other statistical purposes. Source data from PSHRMAC's incumbent and mobility systems is used to provide some additional tombstone information for PSC employee inventories. Information from the incumbent/mobility systems of PSHRMAC is also used to update the Job-Based Analytical Information System. For statistical purposes, information is also linked with data of the target groups of the Employment Equity System of PSHRMAC (SCT PCE 706). The information from the Census and Health and Activity Limitation Survey is used to update the employment equity data. No disclosure of personal information is made by this linkage that would permit the identification of the person with whom the information is associated.

Retention and Disposal Standards: Appointment Information Management System: The computerized data is kept in an optical archive for an indefinite period. Separations: The computerized information is retained until it has been superseded and then it is deleted, except for year-end information which is kept in an optical archive indefinitely. Indicators of Workplace Well-being: Employee Survey- Joint Pilot Project between PSHRMAC and TBS

Description: The personal information that will be captured will be based on anonymous employee responses to an online survey about their satisfaction in their workplace, including answers to open-ended questions as well as multiple choice questions. The personal information would be about their first official language, gender, years of service, classification, type of work and organizational unit. The survey also contains 4 open-ended questions where respondents have the opportunity to provide input directly in a text box. Although personal information is not requested for that or for any other question, respondents could inadvertently provide personal information via this text box. Reports will be produced based on aggregate information rather than personal information.

Class of Individuals: Public servants within two organizations: PSHRMAC and TBS.

Purpose: The personal information collected will serve to analyse the aggregate results based on a few demographic features, for example, are there statistical differences between the key drivers of employee engagement & workplace well-being based on gender, first official language, years of service at TBS and PSHRMAC. This information will allow management to determine if their follow-up strategies should consider these demographic differences in improving workplace well-being issues or not. This survey relates to several government programs/activities: workplace well-being, values and ethics, leadership development and HR modernization.

Consistent Uses: The information will assist PSHRMAC to implement the HR Modernization Agenda and its results-oriented Human Resources (HR) strategy by providing important research insights into the “drivers” of workplace wellbeing in the public sector. It will be used by PSHRMAC and TBS for statistical purposes and the development of plans to improve the workplace and foster better leadership.

Retention and Disposal Standards: A database (machine-readable format) of the results of the questionnaire will be retained for two (2) years after the survey is completed and then destroyed. Hardcopy of the aggregate reports of the survey is retained for five (5) years.
