2001 CENSUS HIGHLIGHTS

Four percent (4%) of Canada's 27 195 Aboriginal self-employed individuals resided in the Northwest Territories, Nunavut and Yukon. Of these 1000 individuals:

- ◆ almost half were Inuit;
- ◆ slightly more than one third were women;
- ◆ three out of ten lived in urban areas; and
- ◆ 71% resided off reserve.

ABORIGINAL ENTREPRENEURS SURVEY, 2002 HIGHLIGHTS¹

When compared to Aboriginal entrepreneurs from all regions of Canada, those living in the Northwest Territories, Nunavut and Yukon:

- ◆ were more likely to state that they did not expect their business to grow in the next two years because of barriers; and
- ◆ were less likely to view the economic situation as a very important barrier to growth.

* Differences between Canada and Northwest Territories, Nunavut and Yukon results are not large enough to be statistically significant at the 95% level.

1 Identified highlights are based on the weighted responses of the 1126 Aboriginal entrepreneurs who took part in the survey. As such, when attempting to generalize findings to a population or sub-population, data precision indicators must be taken into account.

2 This category includes professional, scientific & technical, education, health & social services.

3 Presented industrial distribution percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding.

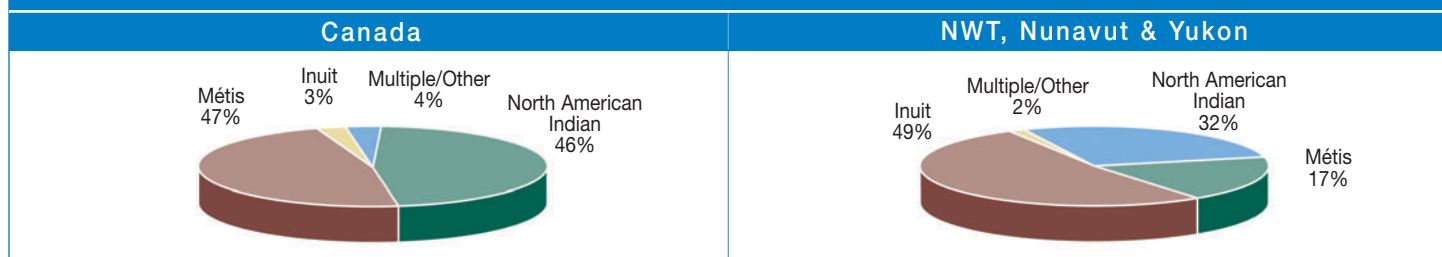

4 Respondents were asked to rate the importance of a number of business objectives. The responses reported here are the business objectives most frequently identified as being "very important" at the national level.

5 Respondents were asked to rate to what extent certain barriers presented obstacles in growing their business over the next two years. The responses reported here are the barriers most frequently identified as being "very important" at the national level.
