TEXTILE TARIFF REDUCTION TO BENEFIT CLOTHING INDUSTRY/CONSUMERS

(OTTAWA) Finance Minister Don Mazankowski today announced reductions in Canadian textile tariffs to bring them more into line with textile tariffs in other industrialized economies. These reductions will benefit the Canadian economy by making Canada's apparel and other textile-using industries more competitive. The tariff changes should also benefit consumers by lowering costs of clothing and other finished products.

The Minister said "reducing tariffs is the best way to ensure that Canadian companies that use significant amounts of textiles can compete on an equal footing". He added that preserving the competitiveness and viability of the Canadian apparel industry is in the long-term interest of the textile industry too -- the apparel industry alone uses between 35-40 per cent of what the Canadian textile industry produces.

Once fully implemented, the reductions will lower tariffs on textile fibres, yarns and fabrics to maximum rates of 5 per cent, 10 per cent and 16 per cent, respectively. Current Canadian rates are, on average, 8 per cent, 13 per cent, and from 18 to 25 per cent, respectively. The reductions will be phased in at a rate of 1.5 percentage points a year, beginning January 1, 1993, and will bring Canadian textile tariffs more in line with those of other industrialized countries, particularly the U.S.

The reductions in textile tariffs are in keeping with the recommendations made by the Canadian International Trade Tribunal in a report released in March, 1990, following extensive public hearings. The Tribunal had been asked by the Minister of Finance in 1989 to provide advice on reducing Canadian textile tariffs.

A Notice of Ways and Means Motion dealing with the changes was tabled today in the House of Commons.

A backgrounder on the tariff changes is attached.

Explanatory Note

Canadian textile tariffs have been significantly higher than those of other industrialized countries and this has affected the competitiveness of "textile-using" industries and increased costs to Canadian consumers. To help strengthen the competitive positions of the Canadian apparel and textile industries, the government announced certain tariff relief measures in March of 1988. The measures included a commitment to reduce textile tariffs to levels comparable with those of other industrialized countries, particularly the U.S.

As part of that commitment, the government asked the Canadian International Trade Tribunal in February of 1989 to provide advice on the level and pace of the tariff reductions. In March of 1990, after a year of public hearings on the matter, the Tribunal recommended that: a simpler tariff structure be adopted with maximum rates of 5 per cent for fibres, 10 per cent for yarns, and 16 per cent for fabrics; tariff rates on certain specially constructed textiles be reduced by one third and a complex, annually-calculated rate on certain wool fabrics be fixed at 11.8 per cent; and that the reductions be phased in at a rate of one percentage point a year once the results of the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations (MTN) are known, but no later than 1991.

Under the Tribunal's recommendations, Canadian textile tariffs would be reduced by an average of 26 per cent, leaving them, on average, slightly higher than those in the U.S. The Tribunal concluded that its recommendations would provide overall net benefits to the economy with only a relatively small impact on the textile industry and that the textile industry could successfully adjust to the reductions. The primary textile industry has, over the past 20 years, invested very heavily in its modernization and rationalization and, as a result, has recorded impressive productivity gains; it is no longer necessary to maintain high levels of tariff protection for textiles.

The Notice of Ways and Means Motion tabled today in the House of Commons would implement the Tribunal's recommendations, effective January 1, 1993, with the following modifications. First, the tariff reductions are being phased in at a rate of 1.5 percentage points per year, rather than the 1 percentage point recommended by the Tribunal. Second, all fibres, yarns and fabrics, including specialty textiles and certain lightweight wool fabrics, are being treated in the same manner, i.e. tariffs on them are being reduced to maximum rates of 5 per cent, 10 per cent, and 16 per cent, respectively. Also, margins of tariff preference are being maintained for Australia and New Zealand for six tariff items in which there is significant trade from these countries. These textile tariff reductions, in the first year, represent as much as $17 million in duties foregone.
