Construction Work Well Advanced On New Blue Mountain Institution

Construction work is now well advanced on the first of the buildings for the new Blue Mountain Correctional Institution being built for the Federal Penitentiary Service approximately 30 miles north of Saint John, New Brunswick.

It is expected that the project will reach the stage where inmates will be in their new quarters and Blue Mountain will be in operation by the end of March, 1963.

Work was officially started at Blue Mountain, which is located beside Island Lake and about 125 miles from Dorchester, during the early part of November last year, when Atlas Construction Company of Fredericton, N.B., was awarded the contract for the dormitory buildings, kitchen, mess hall and pump house and all services.

By November 12, trailers rented by Dorchester Penitentiary, including a kitchen unit, dining unit and two sleeper units, were on the site, and a group of six inmates were on the scene as an advance work party. Ten days later a second group of six inmates arrived, and work began on construction of a temporary storage building. During December, the foundation pads for the administration building were poured, and the roof was being placed, and the foundation for the staff quarters building had also been set.

Both buildings — administration and staff quarters — were closed in by the end of January, 1963, and at that time interior partitions were being placed and furnaces installed. These buildings will be used for storage of supplies until the dormitory and kitchen are turned over to the Penitentiary Service from the contractor by the Federal Department of Public Works.

Approximately 600 component parts, including roof trusses, floor panels and roof panels, were made in record time in three carpenter shops at Dorchester Penitentiary and these were transported to the site by vehicles from Dorchester before unfavourable winter driving conditions were encountered.

Blue Mountain's stores, laundry building and garage will be started as soon as weather permits in the spring. All building materials have been ordered and are due for delivery at the site.

All tradesmen among the officers and inmates working on the project have come from Dorchester Penitentiary, with the exception of one from Springhill. According to penitentiary officials, officers and inmates have accomplished much more than was anticipated, and consequently have almost worked themselves out of a job before the contractor has finished his portion of the work.

Apprenticeship Program Detailed For Dorchester Staff

New Brunswick's apprenticeship training program, with particular reference to the indentureship of penitentiary inmates and the role of penitentiary officers in working with the apprenticeship program in the institution, was the subject of a recent address to Dorchester staff members by E.O. Allain, Supervisor of Apprenticeship, New Brunswick Department of Labour. On another occasion, Mr. Allain spoke to vocational, maintenance and industrial instructors on aspects of the program's implementation at Dorchester.

David J. Reason, a member of the staff of Kingston Penitentiary for 40 years, died December 8, 1962. Mr. Reason, who joined the Service as a Guard in August, 1923, had become the Institution's Supervisor of Services in June, 1961, following a series of promotions over the years.

Collin's Bay Inmates Aid Easter Seal Drive

A group of inmates at Collin's Bay Penitentiary recently gave up leisure hours to assist the Rotary Club of Kingston in their Easter Seal Campaign. Working three hours each evening, addressing envelopes and preparing letters and Seals for mailing, six inmates handled approximately 1,000 letters per evening over a period of approximately three weeks.

The project stemmed from a suggestion by Warden-Rotarian Fred Smith, as the Rotary Club was preparing to launch its campaign for donations to help provide care and treatment for crippled children in the province. The Club undertakes the Easter Seal drive annually in association with the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

Fred Gurney, Kingston Rotary campaign chairman, said the club very much appreciated the work being done by the inmates, adding that the job, which would normally cost about $400, was being done by the inmates on their own time and without pay. He said the inmates seemed eager to help in such community projects, and one inmate commented that they would be glad to help in other similar campaigns.

Get to Know Prisons, Magistrates Urged

Canada's magistrates should become thoroughly familiar with reform and penal institutions before sentencing offenders to them, Professor Stuart Jaffary contends in a new book, "Sentencing Adults in Canada." Professor Jaffary is a member of the faculty of the University of Toronto's School of Social Work, and his book is published by the University of Toronto Press.

Prison Industries Devises Forest Fire Finder

The prototype of a new forest fire finder, developed in co-operation with the Industrial Division of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, has been approved by the National Research Council's associate committee on forest fire protection. The finder, to be produced by the Industrial Division in its shops in the penitentiary system, will be used at forest fire lookouts and towers to locate outbreaks. An earlier model of these finders is already in use by the forest fire protection services of several provinces.

Ontario Region Parole Failures Not High

C.A.M. Edwards, regional representative of the National Parole Service at Kingston, said recently that only seven out of the 198 persons who were on parole in the Ontario region during 1962 committed new offences. Paroles of another seven in the region were revoked for other reasons, bringing the region's failure rate to 7.07 percent, very nearly the same as the national rate, which is just under seven percent.

Mr. Edwards said that at the end of 1962 there were 93 persons still on parole in the region, compared with 97 on parole at the end of 1961.

"Half-Way House" Opened at Windsor

Canada's first "half-way house", which provides released prisoners with a place to stay until they can adjust themselves to normal living and working conditions, recently came into being with the opening of St. Leonard's House in Windsor, Ontario. Although the establishment is not operated by any federal agency, federal correctional authorities have a special interest in it since the need for a half-way house of this kind has long been stressed by W.F. Carabine of the National Parole Board.

Parole Recognizes People Can Reform

"We know people change, or we wouldn't be offering parole from Canada's penal institutions," J. Alex Edmison, a member of the National Parole Board, told the Peterborough Downtown Kiwanis Club at a recent meeting. Mr. Edmison said rehabilitation has succeeded because intelligent treatment has been offered inside prison, and because the National Employment Service and employers generally, as well as such groups as the John Howard Society and the Salvation Army, have co-operated in finding employment for former prison inmates, aiding their rehabilitation.

Collin's Bay Inmates Donate 309 Pints of Blood

Inmates of Collin's Bay Penitentiary and the Collin's Bay Farm Camp donated a total of 309 pints of blood at a blood donor clinic held by the Canadian Red Cross at the Institution early in January. The clinic was held in the Collin's Bay new Exercise Hall, School and Library Building, which served as an ideal location since it provided ample room for beds, blood collection, recording, and provision of lunches for donors.

The Collin's Bay first blood donor clinic was held in December 1957, when 273 pints were donated. In 1961, donations amounted to 612 pints, and in 1962, when only one clinic was held, 317 pints of blood were donated.

Extended Staff Training Program Inaugurated

An extended program of staff instruction and training, aimed at further standardizing penitentiary officers' correctional training at the institutional level, and further developing centralized training at Correctional Staff Colleges, has been launched by the Canadian Penitentiary Service.

Announcing the program, Commissioner of Penitentiaries Allen J. MacLeod, Q.C., said it would make possible more comprehensive and uniform training for correctional officers, and provide an improved basis for them to develop their careers in the Penitentiary Service.

In implementing the program, staff training advisory committees are being established at each institution, under the chairmanship of the Assistant Warden for Organization and Administration. These committees will recommend methods for implementing headquarters and divisional instructions on staff training, and will be concerned with all matters relating to staff training.

The program at the institutions will include probationary training, covering initial orientation and induction, followed by a continuous training program to continue throughout the duration of the employee's service.

The Correctional Staff Colleges will be centers for the development of staff at all levels, and will have several specific objectives. Their program will supplement the in-service training carried on at the institutions, but in addition they will be responsible for developing talents in correctional management to meet the Service's needs for supervisors and managers at all levels. They will also prepare and assess correctional officers for planned careers, and provide a basis for promotion in the institutions and in regional and central headquarters.

Rapid Improvement In Prison System

More advancement has been made in Canada's federal penitentiary system in the past four years than in the previous 40, Murray Gaw, executive director of the John Howard Society in British Columbia, said in a recent address to the Newman Alumni Association in Victoria.

Mr. Gaw said the most significant advancement has been in the growth of minimum security prisons of the type of William Head Institution in B.C., and in the introduction of such features as forestry and correctional work camps.

"In 1958 there were no inmates in minimum security prisons at the federal level," Mr. Gaw said. "Last year, more than 1,000 of the 7,000 inmates of federal prisons were in minimum security institutions. The idea here is a community-oriented environment, where there is less idleness and more opportunity for self-expression."

Mr. Gaw also said there were significant developments in the national parole system, and that results were proving the effectiveness of the system.

Speaking of the philosophy of a penal system, he said the ideal system was a middle-of-the-road blend of the custodial approach with the modern treatment approach to dealing with prison inmates.

Officers passing the final examination and receiving certificates were M.E. Millar, Mrs. W.B. Forte, H.C. Stafford, J.J. Boyle, A.E. Button, R.M. McKenna, W.N. Sears, F. McGinnis, R.D.J. Morey, L.G. Latimer, C.A. Parker, G. Cole, H.E. Mills, V.J. Grimley, R.J. McDonnell and F.C. Pitt.

Penitentiaries Act Changes Result In Fewer Inmates Seeking Paroles

Fewer prisoners in Federal penitentiaries applied for parole in 1962 and fewer applications were granted than in 1961, National Parole Board Chairman T. George Street, Q.C., reported recently.

Mr. Street attributed part of the decline in applications to provisions of the new Penitentiaries Act, which offer more time off for good behaviour and industry than was the case in the past.

Becoming aware of this, some prisoners seem to prefer to serve longer in prison and be wholly free on release, rather than accept a parole earlier and be subject to parole conditions.

The failure rate for parolees in the Board's first four years of operation was about nine percent, Mr. Street said. He added that a single-year failure rate was now being published for the first time, and said this rate — covering 1962 — was slightly under seven percent.

"No matter how the failure rate is computed, it is extremely low compared with other parole jurisdiction," Mr. Street said.

Last year, the National Parole Board granted 1,868 paroles, including 84 gradual releases, or 25 percent of the applications received. In the previous year, the Board had granted 2,297 paroles, which represented 27 percent of the 1961 applications. Applications requesting paroles during 1962 were down a full 1,000 from the total number of applications in 1961, and during 1962 failures on parole totalled 216, resulting in that number being returned to prison.

For the first four years of the Board's operations, Mr. Street said, there have been 8,494 paroles granted and failures were recorded in only 789 of these cases.

National TV Group at Manitoba Auditorium

The new recreation auditorium at Manitoba Penitentiary was the setting for a show put on by the group which presents the C.B.C. nationally televised program "Red River Jamboree" under the direction of Producer E. Mutimer. The special show featured Stu Phillips, Peggy Neville, the Altones, the dancers "Bows and Belles", Teddy Komar and his band, plus 40 members of the S.P.E.B.S.H.A. — Society for the Prevention of the Extinction of Barber Shop Harmony in America — (Barber Shop Choir), Winnipeg Branch.

Opening the program, the Barber Shop choir presented their harmonized renditions of many old favourites, and showed their versatility with quartets from the choir competing in different styles of harmony and rhythm.

The members of the professional "Red River Jamboree" group entertained in their inimitable western style, the singing of Stu Phillips, Peggy Neville and the Altones, brought many calls from the packed auditorium for encores, and the orchestra under the direction of Teddy Komar demonstrated why this group is considered among the best in Western Canada.

The Inmate Committee, on behalf of the inmates, presented the entertainers with gifts of hobbycraft as a mark of appreciation for the program, and for the fact the group came to the prison on their own time to entertain the inmate population.

Parole Board Head Says Persistent Offenders Committing More Than Half Of Total Crimes

An average approaching a two-to-one ratio of crimes to criminals, and ranging to as high as four-to-one in a large number of cases, was pointed out recently by T. George Street, Q.C., Chairman of the National Parole Board, in drawing attention to statistics on criminal offences in Canada.

Mr. Street said that in 1960 — the latest year for which complete statistics are available — a total of 35,443 indictable offenders committed a total of 64,707 indictable offences. Or, in effect, there were almost twice as many indictable crimes as criminals.

FOUR-TO-ONE RATIO

Also significant, he said, was the fact that slightly more than one-quarter of the total number of these offenders committed more than half of the total number of indictable offences, which brought the ratio in these cases up to almost four-to-one. Actual figures for these more frequent repeaters showed that 10,026 offenders were responsible for committing 33,732 indictable offences.

These evidences that a very large proportion of such offences were being committed by a relatively much smaller proportion of offenders were further emphasized by the fact that the total number of indictable offenders increased by only one-half of one percent from 1959 to 1960, but in the same interval the percentage of total offences which they committed increased by almost three percent.

"If the recidivists (repeaters) with three or more previous convictions are committing over half of the solved crimes, it is a reasonable assumption that recidivists are committing at least half of the unsolved crimes as well," Mr. Street said, pointing out that over half of all crimes committed in Canada in 1960 were unsolved.

MOST UNDER TWO YEARS

Despite the increase in crime and the large number of offences being committed by recidivists with three or more previous convictions, over 90% of all sentences in Canada are for less than two years.

He suggested that longer sentences for the more frequent offenders would provide more effective and adequate control over them, which should lead to a noticeable reduction in the total number of indictable offences being committed in Canada.

Longer sentences, he said, would have at least three definite advantages. First, they would provide personnel in correctional institutions with more time to reform these offenders if possible, and secondly they would provide the offenders themselves with added incentive to reform in order to qualify for possible release on parole.

The third and most important advantage would be more adequate protection for society — since those who were not reformable would be kept out of circulation longer, and those who were able to qualify for parole would still be under effective control.

"I would suggest that on either a third or fourth conviction an offender should be automatically sentenced to either an indeterminate sentence of preventive detention, or at least to the maximum sentence provided by law," Mr. Street said.

PROVIDED BY LAW

The law provides for a man who has committed four previous indictable offences since attaining the age of 18 years, and who is found to be persistently living a criminal life, to be convicted as a habitual criminal and sentenced to an indeterminate period of preventive detention.

This means he would in effect be in custody for the rest of his life, unless he were released on parole. However, only 63 men have been convicted as habitual criminals up to date, of which four died in prison. Of the remaining 59, 31 have been released on parole, two died on parole and seven had their paroles revoked or forfeited and were returned to prison but 22 are on parole, under strict supervision and are behaving properly. Of the seven who failed on parole, most of these failed because of misbehaviour and not because they committed new offences.

Therefore, some of these persistent offenders do reform and there is a very real incentive for them to do so in order to be released from prison, Mr. Street said. When they are released, they are carefully supervised so they cannot easily return to crime even if they were disposed to do so.

Young Offenders Make Up a Large Part Of Canada's Criminal Population

The reason for the concern of correctional authorities over the problem of young offenders is apparent in statistics regarding persons convicted of indictable offences, T. George Street, Q.C., Chairman of Canada's National Parole Board, said recently.

"The figures emphasize that young offenders make up the largest segments of Canada's criminal population, and therefore these offenders warrant special concern" Mr. Street said. "Many of these are first offenders, and in many cases adequate treatment can be undertaken in time to turn them away from a life of crime. Public cooperation in their early reformation is urgent, for it offers our main hope for reducing prison populations in the future."

He pointed out that, according to statistics recently published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, almost a third of all males and more than one-fifth of all females convicted of indictable offences in Canada during 1960 were between the ages of 16 and 19 years.

In fact, he said, the DBS figures showed that over 53½ percent of all males and almost 41½ percent of all females convicted of such offences in that year were under 25 years of age.

These were the figures referred to by Mr. Street:

In the age group 16 to 19 years, DBS reported 10,446 males convicted out of a total of 32,891 males convicted for indictable offences;

In the same age group, 524 females convicted out of a total of 2,552 females convicted for indictable offences;

In the age group 20 to 24 years of age, an additional 7,203 males convicted — making a total of 17,649 males convicted between the ages of 16 and 24 years;

In the age group 20 to 24, an additional 534 females convicted — making a total of 1,058 females convicted while between the ages of 16 and 24.

Combining the figures, they showed that young men and women from 16 to 24 years of age formed 52.8 percent of the criminal population who committed indictable offences during 1960 — 18,707 out of the total of 35,443 — although this age group accounted for less than 20 percent of Canada's population over 16 years of age.

BEAVER CREEK INMATES ON FOREST STANDS PLAN

Inmates of Beaver Creek Correctional Camp, near Gravenhurst, Ontario, who in recent years have actively assisted the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests in fighting forest fires, are now engaged in another forestry project.

Beginning late in November last year, 14 inmates and one guard, working under the direction of a provincial Forest Ranger, began work on a forest stand improvement project covering approximately 75 acres of Crown land surrounding the Forestry Service's Bracebridge headquarters.

The project involves cleaning and burning of slash, crop tree pruning, and the removal of undesired stems, to basically improve the forest stand in the area. On part of the area, the cleaning is more intensive than would normally be done, since it is adjacent to a Department of Highway picnic area at the intersection of Highways 118 and 11, which is being used increasingly each year.

Inmates are not receiving any pay from the Forestry Department, but bus transportation is provided from and to the Correctional Camp, which is 10 miles from the project area. Equipment being used on the project includes chain saws, brush tools, axes, swede saws and pruning saws, also provided by the Department.

Commenting on the project, H.J. Featherston, Chief Ranger in the area, said: "This source of manpower has already been of great value to this headquarters for fire suppression work, and it is planned to try to institute further improvement project as well, which will fall within the scope of work on which the inmates can be employed."

Reviewing the Beaver Creek inmates' work on fire suppression during the 1962 fire season, Ranger Featherston reported that inmates were employed to assist in fighting nine separate fires, and together with their guards worked for a combined total of almost 2,200 hours. For this work, Lands and Forests paid labour costs of approximately $1 per hour, and also assumed all costs for food, transportation and accommodation. Pay for inmates is credited to their accounts, and paid to them at the time they are discharged.

Before taking part in actual fire-fighting, inmates are given training courses in fire suppression work, conducted by instructors from Lands and Forests. Approximately 40 men are given instruction, each year, and about 50 percent of these have to be replaced each year, as inmates complete their terms and leave the Camp.

Second Family Service Day at Collin's Bay

For the second time in three months, a "Family Service Day" was held at Collin's Bay Penitentiary on Sunday, December 16, 1962. This new privilege, which is given to inmates who attend the institution's chapel services on a regular basis, was first inaugurated at Collin's Bay in September of last year.

Family Service Day gives inmates who attend chapel services the privilege of inviting their families to share a day with them inside the walls of the penitentiary. The day includes chapel services, lunch and an extended visit in a relaxed and relatively uncensored atmosphere, enabling an inmate and his family to re-establish a measure of family atmosphere.

The visiting family members, who totalled approximately 140, began arriving at the institution at about 9:30 a.m., were registered at the Main Gate, and directed to the prison auditorium, where each of the inmates was permitted to meet with his family prior to chapel services.

Inmates, accompanied by their families, attended chapel services from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., with services in the Protestant chapel conducted by Canon Minto Swan, Protestant Chaplain, and those in the Roman Catholic chapel conducted by Rev. Fr. Felix M. Devine, Catholic chaplain.

Following the services, the inmates accompanied their visitors back to the auditorium, where a light lunch was served. The inmates were then allowed to visit with their families until 2:45 p.m., when they returned to their institutional activities and their families left for home.

Collin's Bay officials describe both Family Service Days held to date as highly successful.

Collin's Bay Inmates Stage Variety Show

Christmas season observances at Collin's Bay Penitentiary featured a three-hour Christmas Variety Show, produced and directed entirely by inmates, held in the prison's new auditorium in mid-December.

The show was attended by more than 500 invited guests, who included families and friends of inmates, penitentiary officers and their families, and representatives of after-care agencies and other groups involved in rehabilitation fields.

The entertainment, all provided by inmate entertainers, included six soloists featuring everything from musical comedy songs to "rock 'n' roll" a trio singing popular music, a quintet singing popular songs and folk songs, and a slapstick circus act.

A highlight of the show was the presentation of a 12-member Chorale Group, singing "Winter Wonderland" and "Silent Night." Members of an inmate 10-piece band provided band selections and also musical accompaniment for the singers.

Following the show, guests of the entertainers were invited to remain for an hour's visit with the group.

First Winter Carnival Feature at Joyceville

A highlight of holiday season activities at Joyceville Institution was the first Annual Winter Carnival and Field Day, presented December 24-25.

The first day of the event featured a basketball throw, races, and a new event called "shuffleboard scoro," in which a shuffleboard skittle had to be shot from one end of the gymnasium floor through a small opening at the other end. A football throw, more races, and a hockey "scoro" were on the agenda for the following day.

Other activities included special Christmas services at both the Protestant and Roman Catholic chapels at Joyceville, attended by record groups of inmates.

Plans are being made to have the Winter Carnival staged annually, with a considerably expanded program of events projected for next year.

Over 400 Entertained at B.C. Penitentiary

A special showing of a colour film of the entire Eaton's Santa Claus parade held in Toronto, plus a live magician show, were the highlights of the annual Christmas party for children of staff members held by the British Columbia Penitentiary at Our Lady of Mercy Hall in New Westminster in mid-December. Over 400 children and their parents were in attendance.

Serving as Santa Claus, retired guard Charles Price presented gifts to the children, while the parents were served coffee and doughnuts. In charge of arrangements for the annual party was a committee headed by Assistant Steward K. Schmidt.

Leclerc Inmates Hold Party for Orphans

One of the holiday season highlights at Leclerc Institution was a special party at Leclerc, planned and presented by the inmates, for a group of 27 orphaned boys from the orphanage of La Crèche St.-Francois d'Assise.

For several weeks before Christmas the inmates spent many hours discussing the organization of a party for these children, who ranged from three to six years of age. To accomplish their plans for a Christmas party, complete with gifts, they collected almost $400 in voluntary donations from the inmate population.

The party, complete with Christmas tree and Santa Claus, saw the children presented with gifts such as Christmas stockings, bowling games, horse-shoe games, blackboards, skates, toy cars and trucks, and candies.

The most appreciated gift of all went to the entire group of children, and was presented in answer to a letter which had been received from one of the orphans, which said in part: "Dear Santa Claus: We were not always well behaved, but we promise to do better now. We would like very much to have an electric train (for) all the children here."

Following distribution of the toys, the children presented choral and solo selections, sketches and speeches, and later were served a lunch of cake and milk before leaving to return to the orphanage.

N.B. Institutions Hold Holiday Observances

A Salvation Army band and choristers were featured at a concert at Dorchester Penitentiary in December, presenting band and vocal selections featuring carols and music of the Christmas season. Following the concert, Salvation Army Cheer packages were distributed to Dorchester inmates at noon meal parade.

At Dorchester Farm Camp, concerts were held on December 24 and December 30, with these events featuring carols, sacred hymns, and other Christmas music.

At Blue Mountain Correctional Institution, still in its early construction stages with only 12 inmates at the site, accommodated in trailers, religious services were conducted by Rev. Father Murphy of Westfield Roman Catholic parish and by Mr. Brown, lay reader of the Anglican parish of Central Greenwich.

Music Teacher Brings New Song to Leclerc

A music teacher who regularly brings her class of school pupils to entertain inmates at Leclerc Institution displayed special ingenuity and talents recently when she had her singers present a song which she had heard for the first time only 10 days before the program was presented.

The teacher, Mrs. J. Laspeyrez, principal of Ecole Pasteur, hearing the song on a radio program, thought it would be appreciated by the inmates, and decided to teach it to her pupils. She copied the words as they were sung, then began a search of music stores to get a copy of the music. When she was unsuccessful, she wrote out the music from memory and taught it to the children, and was able to include it in her program at Leclerc only 10 days later.

The pupils, who began presenting their programs of songs and plays at Leclerc three years ago, have made it an annual holiday season event. Since their first visit, there has been a steady correspondence between the children and the inmates, with the institution's classification officers and censors forwarding inmates' letters to Mrs. Laspeyrez for the children, and she in turn sending the children's letters to Leclerc.

As on previous occasions, the children distributed chocolate bars to the inmates following the music program, and the inmates presented them with a large Christmas card which they had made and signed.

Children's Party Held Within FTC Institution

As in past years, the Federal Training Centre's Central Committee for Social and Sports Activities held a Christmas celebration for staff member's children during the past holiday season, but the event marked a new departure — for the first time, it was held within the institution, in the gymnasium.

More than 750 people, including more than 375 children, were in attendance, and toys were distributed to all the children, who also received balloons, streamers, noise makers, popcorn and other favours. Christmas carols and other music was presented by the "Harmonie Régionale."

All Fields of Correctional Work Represented In New Atlantic Provinces Corrections Group

Several members of the staff of Dorchester Penitentiary, including Warden Hazen Smith and Deputy Warden R.K. Allaby, were among those attending the first meeting of the newly-formed Atlantic Provinces Corrections Association — third association of its kind to be formed in Canada.

The Association, which has members representing all aspects of correctional work including after-care, will co-ordinate studies of crime and treatment, and may make recommendations regarding penal improvements which come to its attention.

In addition to the representatives of prison, probation and parole services, other groups represented at the meeting and in the new Association include Alcoholics Anonymous, universities, courts, police, religious organizations, the John Howard Society, National Employment Service, Big Brother Associations, and government health and welfare departments.

At its inaugural meeting, the Association elected as its first president Ian L. Campbell, professor of sociology at Mount Allison University. Named first vice-president was John Arnott of Halifax, president of the Nova Scotia John Howard Society; while Bernard W. Henheffer of Fredericton, inspector of penal institutions for New Brunswick, was elected second vice-president.

Members of the board of directors are: Daniel Hurley, professor of law at the University of New Brunswick law school; Brig. W.W. Reid of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island's deputy minister of welfare; J. Thomas Troy, Restigouche county magistrate, of Campbellton; F.W. Rouke of St. Mary's University; William Case, Superintendent of Her Majesty's Prison at St. John's, Newfoundland; Laurie Hancock, director of the Maritime School of Social Work in Halifax; R.G. Rowcliffe, regional representative of the National Parole Board; and Charles Maxton, Chief Superintendent of the R.C.M.P. in the area.

In its constitution, the Association listed its main purposes as:

Bringing together the resources of persons, organizations and agencies engaged in the work program development of research of correctional services;

Providing a common ground for members to study, discuss and publish material on matters concerning the prevention of crime and delinquency, the treatment of offenders and the development of correctional and related welfare services generally in order to promote the efficient operation of such services;

Promoting fellowship and co-operation among correctional workers and all persons and organizations engaged in or concerned with the administration of justice and the treatment of offenders;

Fostering collective action, where appropriate, in the support of persons or groups making outstanding contributions to or interested in correctional or related services.

Dorchester Repairs 2,000 Toys for Tots

More than 2,000 toys have been repaired by inmates of Dorchester Penitentiary in New Brunswick in the institution's current annual "Toys for Tots" program, which is carried on in conjunction with the Moncton Fire Fighters Association.

The program has received a high rating in the field of occupational therapy for inmates in the psychiatric section of the institution's hospital, and consideration is being given to continuing the program on a year-round basis.

Approximately 40 inmates, in addition to those in hospital, are taking part in the program this year, which is regarded as the most successful year since the program's inception.

Repairs are not carried on during shop hours. Most of the actual repair work is done by the inmates in their cells, with the decorative painting being done in the hospital.

Two of the inmates in the group working on the program are in charge of the distribution of damaged toys to inmates for repair, and keep records of toys distributed and repaired. Repair materials for the program are sent to the institution by the Moncton Fire Fighters, who receive them through donations from Moncton business firms and individuals.

After repair, the toys are returned to the Fire Fighters, who arrange for their distribution to children through various welfare organizations.

To stimulate interest in the program, Dorchester's Supervisor of Services, C.H. Allen, who serves as liaison man between the inmates and firemen, recently appeared on a local television program to explain the program and display various toys in the "before" and "after" condition, which resulted in a strong response by viewers to his request for more toys for repair.
