CLASSIFICATION OF INDUSTRIES

EIGHTH CENSUS OF CANADA, 1941

INTRODUCTION

The Classification of Industries prepared for use in the Eighth Census of Canada, 1941, and presented in this volume is based on the dual classification of the gainfully occupied population. According to this principle, every person 14 years of age and over will be classified separately as to occupation and as to industry.

Application of the dual classification requires the clear distinction between a person's occupation and his industry and the separate enumeration of each. Occupation is personal to the individual, it is his particular contribution to the productive process. Industry is the field of activity in which he carries on his occupation, it gives him his position in the economic structure of the country. Occupations are carried on in industries and industries themselves are units of production. The one may give a clue to the other but more frequently it does not. Thus "carpenter" alone gives no indication of industry and "railway transportation" alone tells nothing useful concerning occupation.¹

Hence the necessity for two separate Classifications of the census entries describing a person's employment. The one is known as the Classification of Industries and is presented in the present volume. The other is known as the Classification of Occupations and is given in a separate volume. The two are complementary and both are necessary to the statistical presentation of the capacities of the country's gainfully occupied population.

The Classification of Industries presented in the following pages is based primarily on branch of economic activity, the unit being the particular business, manufacturing, service or other type of establishment to which the person enumerated is attached. As in the 1937 "Classification of Industries and Services Adopted by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics", the manufacturing group of industries are classified according to the chief component material of the principal product. The "Custom and Repair" group, however, has been deleted, three of the classes being transferred to manufacturing, two to personal service and the remainder incorporated in other manufacturing classes. The Public Administration sub-group has been reorganized to show a separation of Dominion and Provincial service. To make provision for special war industries a number of additional classes have been included in the sub-group "Iron and Its Products". Several transfers and combinations have been made at other points, these changes representing in the main modifications made since 1937. Except at a few minor points, the present classification is readily convertible into the 1938 "Definitions and Classifications" prepared and recommended by the Committee of Statistical Experts of the League of Nations for the purpose of providing internationally comparable statistics of the gainfully occupied populations.

The plan of the present volume consists of a classification of Main Industry Groups followed by a summary of Industry Classes, a Classified Index of Industries and an Alphabetical Index of Industries. In the Summary of Industry Classes the main industry groups listed on page 8 are shown subdivided into sub-groups each comprising a varying number of industry classes. The Classified Index of Industries which follows shows in detail the individual industry terms assigned to and comprising each industry class. And finally, the Alphabetical Index of Industries lists these individual industry terms alphabetically together with the code number of the industry class to which the particular term has been assigned.

Essentially the 191 industry classes themselves represent a revision of the 210 classes used in the Census of 1931 in the light of subsequent experience and development. The classification as here set up is in the main the resultant of the relative importance attached to the necessities of historical comparison, to the need of devising a structure capable of fitting the quality of industrial data characteristic of census taking, and to the desirability of modifying procedure to meet such changes as have taken place in the field of industrial organization during the past decennial period.

¹A fuller statement appears in the introduction to the "Classification of Industries", prepared for the Census of 1931 in England and Wales; "Mankind in its working capacity may be classified for statistical purposes according to two classifications, the one 'occupational' and the other 'industrial' . . . The occupation of any person is the kind of work which he or she performs; and this alone determines the particular group in an occupation classification to which the person is assigned. The nature of the factory, business, or service in which the person is employed has no bearing upon the classification of his occupation, except to the extent that it enables the nature of his duties to be more clearly defined. . . . As a single business will employ a number of individuals of widely varying occupations for the purpose of affording a particular service or creating a particular product, it will be seen that the industrial classification differs essentially from the occupational in that the latter only takes account of the nature of the work performed by the individual, while the former has regard only to the nature of the service or product to which his labour contributes. The man who is occupationally a carpenter, for instance, is classified industrially to building, if employed by a builder, or to brewing, if employed by a brewer. . . . It is a person's occupation, i.e., the nature of his work, which determines the type and degree of the strains, physical or mental, to which he is subjected. This is in the main independent of his industrial association. Hence it follows that a satisfactory occupational classification must ignore the irrelevant consideration of industry, grouping together, e.g., all clerks, whether employed in insurance, trade, or railway transport, etc. But industrial association, grouping together all persons, whatever their occupation, who contribute their labour to a particular service or product, is also of prime importance, largely from the economic point of view, e.g., as affecting unemployment, and as in the aggregate affording a record of industrial development."

INSTRUCTIONS TO CODING CLERKS

General.—The industry of each gainfully occupied person will be coded from information given in Columns 32 and 33 of the Population Schedule. In Column 32 is given the kind of product or service and in Column 33 the branch of industry. It is necessary, therefore, to consider the entries in both columns to obtain a full industry description. The industry code number will be entered in the column headed "Ind." immediately preceding Column 35 on the Schedule.

In assigning code numbers to the industry returns appearing on the Schedules, the coder will consult the Alphabetical Index of Industries. When an industry term is found, the code number opposite it will indicate to what class in the Classified Index of Industries it belongs. The coder should then refer to the Classified Index to ascertain the title of the corresponding class and to determine from the other industry terms listed under it whether the return being coded belongs to this class. After this has been done the code number will be entered on the schedule. Never code from the Alphabetical Index alone.

If the kind of product or service in Column 32 is expressed by more than one word and it is not found under the first, it should be sought under each successive word.

Industry Symbols.—Each Industry designation is represented by a 3-digit code symbol. The first figure represents one of the Main Industry Groups listed on page 8, as "0"—Agriculture, "1"—Fishing, etc. "0" in the third column has been reserved for some of the numerically more important industries, e.g., "640"—Steam railways, "880"—Domestic service, etc.

Word Order.—For the most part, industry terms have been printed in their natural order, e.g. "Carriage wheel mfg." "Fur dealing (retail)", "Life insurance", etc. Though the list of industry designations included in the present volume is quite extensive, it does not completely cover the variety of ways in which industry descriptions may be returned on the Population Schedule. A limited number of terms have, therefore, been listed both in the natural and in the inverted order, e.g. "Canner, fruit", "Cannery, vegetable", "Fruit and vegetable canning and preserving". If an industry return expressed by more than one word is not found listed in the expected order, it should be sought under each of the other words in the complete description.

Alphabetical Order.—The listing of terms in both the Classified and Alphabetical Index is according to strict alphabetical order. To illustrate, in the case of "Car barn", "Card mfg." and "Car or railway shop", the first three letters being the same, the fourth letter determines the alphabetical position. Words in brackets are used to qualify what immediately precedes and are disregarded in making the alphabetical arrangement.

Incomplete or Missing Entries.—Entries in Column 32 for kind of product or service may be incomplete, e.g., "Boxes" only may be entered instead of "Wooden boxes", "Paper boxes", or "Metal boxes", as the case may be. Often the occupation description may contain the missing data, as for example "Nailer" from which it might be inferred that the kind of product was wooden boxes.

In cases where little or no information is entered in the industry columns, the industry can be inferred in many cases from the occupation. Occupations, such as "Brewer", "Brick maker", "Glass blower" are likely found in only the one industry and when such occupations are reported, the industry data can be filled in. Also, in the case of employers (E) and persons on own account (OA), the occupation will denote the industry. For example, "Hotel keeper" will be coded industrially to the class "Hotels and lodging houses"; "Shoe repairer (OA)" to "Shoe repair"; "Automobile mechanic (OA)" to "Automobile repair"; "Building contractor" to "Buildings and structures"; and "Laundress (OA)" to "Laundering".

Consistency between Occupation and Industry.—The coder must be sure that the occupation and the industry codes used for persons reporting status as "E" or "OA" are in agreement, for as mentioned in the preceding paragraph the industry of these people depends upon the occupation. A list of industry classes that can be used correctly with each occupation class in the coding of employers and own accounts will be furnished each coder.

In the case of wage-earners, there is not the same degree of dependency between occupation and industry as in the case of employers and persons on their own account. Many and varied occupations are usually necessary in the production of a certain article or the rendering of a particular service. Combinations of occupations and industry for wage-earners, which would not be possible for employers and own accounts, therefore will be found and coded accordingly. However, it would be very improbable for certain occupations to be found in many industries, for example, "Radio station operators" in "Electrical products mfg." or "Locomotive engineers" in "Health service". When the coder encounters such cases, he will consult his supervisor before applying the code.

Entry of more than One Industry.—Sometimes two different products or services will be entered in Column 32 or two branches of industry in Column 33. Unless there is evidence to the contrary, the first entry will be assumed to describe the main industry and this will be used in assigning the industry code.

Firms Engaged in more than One Industry.—For a person employed by a firm maintaining several establishments each engaged in a different kind of activity, the industry to be coded is that which is carried on in the establishment in which the person works. Thus, persons employed in cafés or restaurants attached to department stores, office buildings, railway stations, etc. are to be coded to "Restaurants, cafés, taverns". Lumbermen employed at a logging camp operated by a pulp and paper mill are to be coded to "Forestry and logging", not to "Pulp and paper (mfg.)". Workers in the repair shops of a railway are to be coded to "Railway rolling stock and repair" in the "Iron and its products" group of industries and not to "Steam railways". However, men doing maintenance work at a depot or car barn will be coded to "Steam railways" or "Electric railways" and not to "Railway rolling stock and repair". Furthermore, where a person states that he is working for a copper mine, for example, and yet the evidence on the Schedule, such as his occupation—which may be "Furnaceman", "Tapper", etc.—or the locality would indicate that he is employed at a smelter, he should be coded to "Non-ferrous metal smelting, refining" and not to copper mining. Likewise, persons employed in branch sales agencies of manufacturing firms are to be coded to trade rather than to manufacturing.

Bakeries and Dairies.—All employees of a manufacturing bakery will be included with the manufacturing industry regardless of whether they are engaged in making bread or pastry, or delivering it to stores or to customers for consumption. However, it should be remembered that retail bake shops are to be classified as retail trade.

On the other hand, employees of dairies engaged primarily in the retail distribution of milk and milk products are all to be coded to retail trade, even employees in the processing plants of such firms. There are, however, many firms engaged only in the making of milk products, e.g., butter factories or creameries, cheese factories, and condensed milk plants. Employees of such firms of course will be classified under manufacturing. Employees of dairy farms belong to the "Agriculture" group of industries.

Lodging and Boarding Houses.—On Schedules where there are lodgers or boarders in excess of the number of persons in the family and no person on the Schedule is returned as a "lodging house keeper", the head of the household, or, if the head is returned as following a gainful occupation, his wife or near female relative is to be coded occupationally to "Lodging and boarding house keepers" and industrially to "Hotels and lodging houses". Any other relatives returned as engaged in home duties are also to be coded as employed in a lodging house.

Doubtful Cases.—The coder must refer all doubtful cases immediately to his supervisor and to no one else. Good coding will depend largely on willingness to ask questions. Moreover, the supervisor will learn the most frequent sources of difficulty and take them up with all.

Finally, the coders must report all industry descriptions not in the Index to the supervisor.
