PREFACE

The Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) is a revision of the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual and is designed for use in statistical surveys, including the 1981 Census of Population and Housing. The classification is revised to take account of changes in the occupational composition of the labour force resulting from industrial and technological developments. On the other hand, stability in the classification structure is desirable to preserve the statistical continuity required for analysis of time series. Obviously, a middle course must be set to meet these objectives and the present revision continues the pattern whereby the major revisions of the SOC occur decennially.

In revising the SOC, considerable attention was given to future revisions contemplated for the Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations (CCDO) prepared by Employment and Immigration Canada in order to minimize the differences between the two classifications. This has important consequences in that it brings occupational distributions of survey data into a system that includes such related statistics as those derived from immigration records, employment placement programs, vocational education and training programs and the like.

In revising this classification, a number of national and international classifications were consulted and certain concepts, definitions and approaches to coding, where applicable to the Canadian situation, were adopted. The major classifications used were the Australian Bureau of Statistics Classification and Classified List of Occupations; the International Labour Office International Standard Classification of Occupations; the United Kingdom Classification of Occupations and Directory of Occupational Titles; and the United States of America Dictionary of Occupational Titles and their Standard Occupational Classification Manual.

The present revision was carried out under the direction of Mr. Jean M. Léger and project manager Mrs. Alice Latrémouille. Other members of the Standards Division contributing to this work were: Messrs. Carl Kritsch, Rodger O. Lee, Guy St-Pierre and Michael P.E. Webber and Mesdames Claudette Bourque, Elizabeth M. Habgood, Lois E.T. Leahy, Joanne Maisonneuve and Lyn M. Wilson. The valuable assistance of members of the Bureau's Technical Committee and of others both within and outside of Statistics Canada is gratefully acknowledged although responsibility for the form and content of the Manual rests with Statistics Canada.

INTRODUCTION

The 1980 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) is a revision of the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual (OCM) and is designed as a classification manual for use in statistical surveys and other purposes. It provides a systematic classification structure to identify and categorize the entire range of occupational activity in Canada.

An occupation is defined as a collection of jobs sufficiently similar in their main tasks to be grouped under a common title for classification purposes. A job, in turn, encompasses all the tasks carried out by a particular worker to complete her/his duties.

The basic principle of classification in the SOC is that of kind of work performed. Occupations are therefore identified and grouped primarily in terms of the work usually performed, this being determined by the tasks, duties, and responsibilities of the occupation. Factors such as the materials processed or used, the industrial processes used, the equipment used, the degree of responsibility and complexity of work, the products made and services provided, have been taken as indicators of the work performed when combining jobs into occupations and occupations into groups.

Thus, within each group the occupations are almost unique and related to each other by similarity of kind of work performed. This approach to the grouping of occupations ensures a certain homogeneity within groups and permits a distinction between groups.

At the highest level of aggregation of occupations termed "Major Groups", very broad fields of work are represented rather than specific types of work performed. Some major aspects of the SOC are discussed below.

PART A — Related Classifications

For statistical purposes, the classification of occupations does not stand alone but must be understood as being related to the classifications of industries and that of class of worker; namely, as self-employed, employee, or unpaid family worker. Each of the aforementioned classifications supplements the SOC in presenting a rounded picture of the nature of a person's job.

More specifically, the industrial designation which accompanies each occupational title:

- (a) Indicates the type of economic activity with which the job is usually associated. It is important to note that the assignment of an industry designation does not necessarily limit a job to that industry. These designations are merely indicative of the possible areas of activity in which the job may be found.
- (b) Permits the assignment of similar occupational titles to different occupation groups where the duties vary as between industries; e.g., 8296 Examiner — Tobacco Products Industry compared with 8566 Examiner — Footwear Industry.
- (c) Aids in defining the specific occupations and helps the coder grasp the underlying principles of this classification.

The industry in which the individual is employed is determined by the principal kind of economic activity of the establishment. The establishment is usually a factory, mine, farm, store, other place of business or an institution capable of providing data on a number of basic production variables.

It is important to note the difference in concept between an industry classification and an occupation classification. An establishment can employ individuals performing completely different occupations, and these are classified to appropriate occupational groups, but the industrial classification of each individual employed in the establishment should be the same and is determined by the nature of the product made or service rendered. In other words, the nature of the factory, business or service in which the person is employed does not determine the classification of the occupation, except to the extent that it enables the nature of the duties to be more clearly defined.

Also, an individual's employment relationship to the business in which the person is engaged, i.e., class of worker, provides another means of describing the work. This is usually indicated by the form of remuneration the worker receives. The self-employed depend upon a residual return in the form of profit while employees are paid wages or salaries and unpaid family workers receive no set remuneration. In the 1980 SOC, the class of worker classification is not identified separately for each occupation since many occupations can be assigned to more than one category (i.e., working for wages, salary, tips or commission; working without pay in a family business or farm; self-employed without paid help; and self-employed with paid help). However, a general rule has been established for coding purposes (refer to Part F).

PART B — The Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations (CCDO)

The CCDO provides a multipurpose instrument for use in manpower research, formulation of manpower policies, support of employment and educational programs and for such operational activities as employment placement, employment counselling, immigration and other programs which facilitate the mobility of workers within the country.

The CCDO was initially published in 1971 by the Manpower and Immigration Department (now Employment and Immigration Canada). It is a systematic and comprehensive arrangement of occupational descriptions, reflecting the work performed by Canadians. These descriptions represent a summary of the significant activities of a number of similar jobs found in different establishments or industries. The significant duties, or the kind of work performed, act as the basic principle for classifying occupations as in the SOC.

The classification structure consists of four levels of occupational categories instead of the three levels in the SOC, each providing successively finer detail:

- (a) The major group
- (b) The minor group
- (c) The unit group
- (d) The individual occupations

Several minor differences exist between the major, minor and unit group structures of the CCDO and the SOC.

- (a) At the major group level, occupations in sports and recreation form a major group in the CCDO and a minor group in the SOC. Persons not classifiable by occupation such as students and retired persons form a major group in the SOC and are not covered in the CCDO.
- (b) At the minor group level, farm management occupations are treated as part of farming in the CCDO and as part of managerial and administrative occupations in the SOC.

- (c) At the unit group level, additional groups have been provided in the SOC for occupations in engineering, architecture, nursing, therapy and dentistry. On the other hand, more detail is provided in the CCDO for livestock and crop farm workers, for occupations related to the operation of stationary engines and utilities equipment, and for laundering and dry cleaning occupations.

Another feature unique to the CCDO is provision of the following data with each occupational definition: a unique code number; digits and letters covering environmental conditions, physical activities, training time, and worker functions in relation to data-people-things; and alternate and related titles where applicable.

The qualifiers used in the CCDO to indicate industry or industrial process and shown after each occupational title differ from those used in the SOC. The CCDO list of "industrial designations" representing some ninety-six industries is more aggregative than the list of industries in the SOC.

The world of work, however, does not remain static and the degree of change since the first publication of the CCDO has brought about a progressive revision. A new CCDO booklet to update Major Group 87 with new and revised occupational descriptions was released in August 1978. By autumn 1980 a total of four revision booklets will have been published:

- Construction Occupations — Major Group 87
- Primary Products Occupations — Major Groups 71, 73, 75 and 77
- Service Occupations — Major Group 61
- Occupations in Social Sciences, Religion, Teaching, and Medicine and Health — Major Groups 23, 25, 27 and 31

This approach contrasts sharply with the decennial revision of the SOC required by Statistics Canada for statistical purposes. In conjunction with these revisions a working group, established in 1977 with representatives from both Employment and Immigration Canada and Statistics Canada, has attempted to minimize the differences between the CCDO and the SOC.

PART C — Explanatory Notes

C.1 Structure

The Standard Occupational Classification manual contains the classification structure and definitions for the major, minor and unit groups as well as two separate indices. A classified index lists individual occupational titles arranged alphabetically within their respective unit groups. An alphabetical index presents the occupational titles in alphabetical order, irrespective of group association.

The occupational groupings are such that, within each major group, one or more minor groups are identified and within each minor group, one or more unit groups. A functional relationship is reinforced by means of the coding system.

For example:

- 21 Major Group — Occupations in Natural Sciences, Engineering and Mathematics
- 211 Minor Group — Occupations in Physical Sciences
- 2111 Unit Group — Chemists
- 2112 Unit Group — Geologists
- 2113 Unit Group — Physicists
- 2114 Unit Group — Meteorologists
- 2117 Unit Group — Physical Sciences Technologists and Technicians
- 2119 Unit Group — Occupations in Physical Sciences, n.e.c.

It should be noted that the major group code is repeated at all levels and the minor group code is repeated at the unit group level.

Within relevant minor groups, provision has been made, whenever possible, to assign a distinct code number to particular occupational groups; i.e., Foremen/Women (or Supervisors); Inspectors, Testers, Graders and Samplers; Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work; and Occupations Not Elsewhere Classified.

For example:

- 6120 Supervisors: Food and Beverage Preparation and Related Service Occupations
- 8110 Foremen/Women: Mineral Ore Treating Occupations
- 8116 Inspecting, Testing, Grading and Sampling Occupations: Mineral Ore Treating
- 8118 Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work: Mineral Ore Treating 8119 Mineral Ore Treating Occupations, n.e.c.

As a general rule, the final digit of the four-digit code identifies each of these types of occupational groups. Thus a 0 signifies a category of supervisor or foreman/woman; 6 usually signifies an inspector, tester, grader or sampler; 8 a labourer; and 9 a residual category to denote occupations not elsewhere classified within the minor group or major group.

In LABOURER/ELEMENTAL WORKER occupations, the title LABOURER is used for certain occupations which require application of common-sense understanding to carry out simple one or two-step instructions, with little or no training required for satisfactory performance on the job. ELEMENTAL WORKER may be used to describe occupations that are not, according to custom, referred to as LABOURERS; e.g., Checkroom Attendant.

C.2 Abbreviations

A list of abbreviations used in this manual is given in a separate section. Particular attention, however, should be given to the abbreviation n.e.c. (not elsewhere classified). As an occupational qualifier, n.e.c. is used in many titles of major, minor and unit groups to refer to occupations not elsewhere classified; e.g., 7519 Forestry and Logging Occupations, n.e.c. As an industrial designation, n.e.c. refers to industries not identified elsewhere for a specific occupation.

For example:

- 8785 Painter — Construction Industries
- 8295 Painter — Leather Tanneries
- 8595 Painter — n.e.c.

In the example above, "Painter — n.e.c." refers to the occupation "painter" in all other industries except leather tanneries and construction.

The industrial designation, Any Industry, is used when an occupation is found common to four or more industries and is classified to only one unit group; otherwise the industries are listed separately. The occupational title appears only once in the SOC when given the industrial designation "Any Industry", and therefore, is given only one code; e.g., 4131 Accounting Clerk — Any Ind.

C.3 Language

The 1980 SOC is published separately in both official languages. It is important to note that the French version includes only titles commonly used in French and proper to the milieu and therefore these are not normally translations of the English titles. The classification structure is the same in both versions.

C.4 Alphabetical Arrangement in the Indices

Each word in a title is taken separately for purposes of alphabetical arrangement. The following titles will be found in this order in the index:

- Car dealer
- Car painter
- Car washer
- Card grinder
- Carder
- Caretaker
- Carpenter
- Carton wrapper

Hyphenated occupations are listed in the following manner:

- Pipe liner
- Pipe-Line Manager
- Pipeline Inspector

Where the same occupational title is listed more than once, the alphabetical order of the industry designation prevails:

- Grader — Footwear Industry

- Grader — Furniture and Fixture Industries
- Grader — Highways, Streets and Bridges
- Grader — Hosiery Industry

PART D — Relating the 1980 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) to the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual (OCM)

The pace of technological change in the years since the classification was completed in 1971 has rendered a number of occupational titles obsolete while creating a demand for new occupational groups and titles. Experience in using the classification in the collection and analysis of occupational data has also revealed a need for new occupational titles and changes to occupational groups, in addition to a number of incorrectly coded occupational titles. For these reasons, the 1980 revision represents an updating of the classification and attempts to reflect more accurately the occupational situation forecast for the 1980s.

D.1 Structural Changes at the Major Group Level

The only change introduced at this level was to extend coverage of the 1971 Occupations Not Stated group to include persons for which an occupation is not an applicable variable in a survey; e.g., students, retired persons. As in 1971, this major group includes those respondents not reporting any occupation or reporting insufficient information to permit determining an occupation; e.g., "driving". These categories are reflected at the major group level in the detail below.

Major Group 00 — Occupations Not Stated

1980

Major Group 00 — Persons Not Classifiable by Occupation

D.2 Structural Changes at the Minor Group Level

The most apparent change at this level is the transfer of farm management occupations from Major Group 71 — Farming, Horticultural and Animal Husbandry Occupations to Major Group 11 — Managerial,

Administrative and Related Occupations in order to introduce more consistency to the classification. The other changes are revisions to titles of minor groups; e.g., architects, engineers and community planners, or to the numbering system because of new unit groups; e.g., sports and recreation. See the changes below:

1971

Minor Group 214/215 — Architects and Engineers

1980

Minor Group 214/215 — Architects, Engineers and Community Planners

Minor Group 315 — Other Occupations in Medicine and Health

Recreation

Recreation

or Inadequately Described Occupations (Not Codeable)

Minor Group 002 — Workers Not Reporting Any Occupation

Minor Group 003 — Other Persons, n.e.c.

D.3 Structural Changes at the Unit Group Level

These structural modifications involve three main kinds of changes: splitting of unit groups, combining of unit groups and mixing of parts of unit groups. Unit groups may be split to reduce the disparity of skill levels within groups or to recognize the increasing importance of particular occupations in the economy. Among the groups listed below that belong to this category are: organization and methods analysts, split from industrial engineers; architectural versus engineering occupations; orderlies versus nursing attendants, etc.

Unit groups may be combined either because the distinction between groups is beyond the capacity of general surveys including occupational questions or because the distinction between them is of little use to occupational statistics analysts. Examples are commodity salespersons and sales clerks, which have been combined in the 1980 revision.

The mixing of parts of unit groups which may result in new unit groups takes place where a significant purpose may be shown; such as, to reduce the importance of residual groups of occupations (e.g., agricultural engineers, supervisors and operators of amusement and recreation facilities, housekeepers and servants, parcel carriers) or to correct wrongly assigned occupations to certain groups.

In addition to these changes, other unit groups were modified to facilitate overall coding; e.g., managers of hotel and motel accommodations are now part of managerial and administrative occupations instead of service occupations. Unit group changes for the 1980 revision are shown below.

D.4 Structural Changes at the Occupational Level

Modifications introduced at this level result from attempts to simplify the use of the occupational classification, to eliminate sexist terminology, to standardize industrial designations of occupations and to update occupational titles through analysis of occupations reported on various surveys. These are:

- (a) A reduction in occupations listed; i.e., alternate and related titles, in conformity with the notion that a classification manual as opposed to a coding manual establishes the structure for coding and provides a list of occupations which can be used as guidelines during the coding exercise.
- (b) An updating of occupational titles. New occupations have been inserted and obsolete terms, terms rarely used, misleading terms and synonyms have been deleted.
- (c) Inverted titles (e.g., Parking Attendant and Attendant, Parking) have been eliminated from the alphabetical index.
- (d) Changes to occupational titles to eliminate sexual biases (e.g., Set-Up Man becomes Machine Setter, Corset Seamstress becomes Corset Sewer).
- (e) Cross-referencing of occupational titles (e.g., Chief Steward — see Steward) is also eliminated. The titles affected have been given their own code and industrial designation.
- (f) Industrial designations are taken from the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification¹ at the one, two, three, or four digit level. For SOC purposes, two others have been added; namely, "Not Elsewhere Classified" and "Any Industry"

- (g) The abbreviations N.O.R. (not otherwise reported), N.E.S. (not elsewhere specified), N.S. (not stated or not specified) and Any Except (any industry except those listed) are no longer used.
- (h) Class of worker designations such as OA (self-employed without paid help), E (self-employed with paid help), W (working for wages, salary, tips or commission), and NP (working without pay on a family farm or in a business) are no longer appended to specific titles but a more general rule has been established (refer to Part F). Those occupations whose main functions are taken to be either supervisory or purely administrative are classified in the appropriate unit groups, that is, most unit groups with the four-digit code ending in 0 or Major Group 11; others are classified in the profession, service or craft occupations performed.
- (i) Departmental managers and managers of retail chain stores and of supermarket stores are now coded to Unit Group 1137 — Sales and Advertising Management Occupations, instead of Unit Group 5130 — Supervisors: Sales Occupations, Commodities, as in 1971.
- (j) A number of titles classified in Major Group 99 in 1971 have been recoded to other major groups by adding a more specific industry designation. This reduces the importance of this "catch all" category.

For more detail refer to comparison tables 1980 SOC to 1971 OCM and 1971 OCM to 1980 SOC.

PART E — Procedures in Coding an Occupation

As explained earlier, the SOC, as a classification manual, provides an overall structure for classifying occupations according to kind of work performed. When used as a coding manual, the classified and alphabetical indices are merely indicative of the types of occupations that fit within specific unit groups. The list of occupational titles is not exhaustive nor is it intended to be.

When coding an occupation, obtain all the relevant facts about the job and its environment. These include the kind of work performed, the most important activities or duties, the job title, the kind of business, industry or service, and the class of worker described earlier. The more complete and comprehensive information the coder is able to assemble about the tasks performed by a worker on a particular job, the easier it will be to determine the appropriate classification.

To code an occupation, one can start with either the classified index or the alphabetical index.

E.1 To Use the Classified Index

- (a) Find the major group occupational category which seems most likely to contain the job. This is done by reading carefully the definition of each major group. If an occupation is so described that it might be assigned to any of two or more major groups (usually due to lack of specificity) then it is assigned to Major Group 99. This major group serves a dual purpose: first as a residual for occupations that cannot, for some reason, be included in any one of the Major Groups 11 to 95; and second to accommodate situations where more than one major group is involved. Before classifying an occupation to Major Group 99, every effort should be made to assign it to a more specific major group. Major group 99 is a last resort when an occupation is classifiable, and should not be confused with Major Group 00 which relates to persons not classifiable by occupation. This caution applies to all levels of residual groups.
- (b) Find the most appropriate minor group within the major group selected. Again the definition of each minor group should be read carefully. If the situation should arise where an occupation could conceivably be coded in two or more minor groups within one major group, then the occupation will be assigned to the residual minor group within that major group. For example, Button Maker — Other Manufactured Products Industries could be coded in more than one minor group in Major Group 85 — Product Fabricating, Assembling and Repairing Occupations and must be classified in the residual minor group (859).

- (c) Find the most appropriate unit group within the minor group selected. As before, read the definition carefully before deciding if this unit group offers the best possible classification. If it does not correspond closely with the information collected, repeat steps (a) to (c) to find the most appropriate classification. An occupation is classified in the residual (n.e.c.) unit group of its relevant minor group if it cannot be ascertained that it belongs in any particular unit group. For example, "Carpet Layer — Retail Trade; Construction", cannot be classified in any of the specific unit groups within Minor Group 878/879 — Other Construction Trades Occupations, and must therefore, be classified in Unit Group 8799 — Other Construction Trades Occupations, n.e.c..

E.2 To Use the Alphabetical Index

- (a) Find the occupation in the alphabetical index of the occupational classification. After locating the title and its four-digit code, check to ensure that the title is listed only once in the alphabetical index. If so, note the corresponding four-digit code. If listed more than once, check the corresponding industrial designations and select the one which relates most closely to the one stated by the respondent. Using this code as a guide, find the definition for the unit group to which this title belongs in the classified index. Read the entire definition before deciding whether it is the most appropriate classification and check in the classified index for final verification and commonality of job title.
- (b) If you cannot find the title or if the definition appears inappropriate, look for another title. Some clues are:
 - (1) look for the noun form: answering the phone will be Receptionist or Telephone Clerk
 - (2) shorten the title: Electronic Data Processor to Data Processor
 - (3) find a synonym: Aircraft Mechanic for Jet Mechanic
 - (4) consider such factors as:

Job location — Tunnel Worker; Bridge Keeper

Kind of machines used — Cement-Mixer Operator; Hydraulic Riveter

Materials used — Concrete Mason; Leather Handbag Maker

Subject matter — Music Cataloguer; Press Clipper

Activity performed — Locomotive Inspector; Bodyshop Foreman/Woman

Job skills — Surgical-Instrument Repairer; Tool Machinist

PART F — Coding Instructions

To facilitate as well as to introduce more consistency in the coding of occupations, a list of coding instructions has been prepared for users at large. These instructions provide the classification accorded to individual occupations or groups of occupations resulting from problem cases uncovered during the coding of various surveys.

It must be emphasized that, as a basis for classification by occupation, the performance of particular duties and tasks takes precedence over possession of formal qualifications. However, the use of qualifications or trade training at professional, trade or other certificate levels can be of considerable value in bringing precision to certain occupational coding.

Class of Worker

Occupations involved with the supervision of employees or as self-employed with paid employees are classified in the appropriate unit groups designating supervisors and foremen/women, while workers engaged in occupations as self-employed without paid employees or working for wages, salaries or for no set remuneration are classified as members of the relevant trade, craft or profession. Where no supervisory or foreman/woman group has been provided in the appropriate minor group, the code of the occupation supervised is used (e.g., Supervisor — Forestry Services Industry is classified in Unit Group 2131 — Agriculturists and Related Scientists).

Apprentices

Apprentices are classified according to the occupation being learned. The titles “learners” and “trainees” are often used as synonyms for apprentices. For example, an apprentice plumber is classified as a plumber, an apprentice draughter is classified as a draughter.

Owners/Proprietors

Proprietors are classified in the occupational unit groups associated with the particular business or industry concerned, either as supervisors (a proprietor with paid employees) or as members of the relevant trade, craft or profession (a proprietor without paid employees). This rule also applies to the occupation “owner”.

Presidents and Managers

Occupational descriptions referring to President or Manager are classified to Major Group 11 — Managerial, Administrative and Related Occupations.

Helpers

Helpers are classified either with the trades or other occupations they support or they are classified with labourers, in the appropriate unit groups entitled Occupations in Labouring and Other Elemental Work, that is, unit groups ending with the digit 8. The determining factors are the most important duties performed. The occupation “Helper” is not identified separately in the SOC.

Machine Set-Up Operators

Machinery set-up occupations are classified in the same unit groups as operators or tenders of the machine (e.g., 8313 — Machine Tool Set-Up Operator — Fabricated Metal Products Industries).

Two or More Occupations

Where two or more occupations are reported in reply to a question on occupation, the first one mentioned is coded unless there is additional information to suggest otherwise.

Assistant, Deputy, Junior, Senior, Vice, Executive

Generally the addition of such words as deputy, junior, senior, are ignored in determining the appropriate occupation code. However, care must be exercised in determining the code to be used when a person is described as an “assistant to”. A worker who performs duties closely related to those of the worker assisted and who on occasion assumes the authority and responsibilities of the worker assisted should be assigned the same code as the worker assisted. For example, Assistant Director, Assistant Foreman/Woman, Assistant Professor should be classified respectively with Director, Foreman/Woman and Professor.

However, when duties performed by an assistant are clearly subordinate to and different from those of the worker assisted, the job is that of supporter. For example, Engineer's Assistant would be classified as Engineering Technician.

Foremen/Women

Persons who report the term Foreman or Forewoman in an occupation description are classified in the appropriate unit groups designating supervisors and foremen/women (most four-digit codes ending in 0) irrespective of the time spent performing these duties. If no supervisory or foreman/woman group has been provided in the appropriate minor group, code to the occupation supervised unless there are other indications that the person should be classified in the managerial and administrative major group.

Members of Armed Forces

All personnel in the armed forces are classified in either Unit Group 6116 — Commissioned Officers, Armed Forces or in Unit Group 6117 — Other Ranks, Armed Forces. These unit groups exclude civilian employees at the National Defence department who are classified according to kind of work performed.

Repairers

Repairers are classified in the same groups as workers who assemble, make or build the article in question.

Members of Religious Orders

Members of religious communities or orders who are primarily engaged in occupations other than those in Major Group 25 — Occupations in Religion (e.g., in teaching, nursing, social welfare work, sewing, bookbinding, cooking or farming) are classified in accordance with the kind of work performed. Major Group 25 is intended to include only those primarily engaged in performing religious functions.

Teachers and Instructors

Persons engaged in the teaching profession, whether as professors, school teachers, or instructors in other types of institutions, are classified in Major Group 27. This group excludes physical education instructors, not in educational institutions, who are classified in Unit Group 3370 — Coaches, Trainers, and Instructors, Sports and Recreation.

Persons primarily engaged in giving training, whether on-the-job training or otherwise, are considered to be distinct from foremen/women and supervisors and are, therefore, classified in an appropriate unit group within Minor Group 279 — Other Teaching and Related Occupations.

Presidents, deans, assistant deans, associate deans, vice-deans and directors of faculties in universities, as well as principals in all types of schools, including business colleges, are considered to be administrators and are classified in Unit Group 1133 — Administrators in Teaching and Related Fields.

COMPARISON TABLE 1980 SOC TO 1971 OCM

This table identifies the significant differences between the 1980 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) and the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual (OCM) when the comparison is based on the occupations in the 1980 SOC.

The differences between the SOC and the OCM are listed in 1980 unit group order. A blank in the 1971 column indicates that the occupational title in question does not appear in the OCM. Within each unit group, occupational titles are arranged alphabetically first for those that appear only in the SOC followed by those that appear in both manuals.

Included are differences caused by the addition of occupational titles to those of the 1971 OCM or by transfers of titles between unit groups. Changes in industrial designation (e.g., 8315 File Cutter — Hardware, Tool and Cutlery Industries in 1980 from 8315 File Cutter — Cut Tools Manufacturers in 1971), and changes within an occupational title (e.g., 9131 Diesel Engineer, Locomotive in 1980 from 9131 Diesel Engineer (Locomotive Engineer) in 1971) are not listed. Also excluded from the table are changes in occupational titles resulting from their being desexed (e.g., 8585 Dictaphone Repairer in 1980 from 8585 Dictaphone Repairman in 1971) and from the elimination of the class of worker designation (e.g., 1149 Publisher in 1980 from 1149 Publisher (E) in 1971), to which reference is made in the SOC introduction.

For information pertaining to differences between the 1971 OCM and the 1980 SOC, based on the 1971 occupational titles, reference should be made to the comparison table in the following section.

COMPARISON TABLE 1971 OCM TO 1980 SOC

This table identifies the significant differences between the 1971 Occupational Classification Manual (OCM) and the 1980 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) when the comparison is based on the occupations in the 1971 OCM.

The differences between the OCM and the SOC are listed in 1971 unit group order. A blank in the 1980 column indicates that the occupational title in question does not appear in the SOC. Within each unit group, occupational titles are arranged alphabetically first for those that appear only in the OCM followed by those that appear in both manuals.

Included are differences caused by the deletion of specific titles from the 1971 OCM or by transfers of titles between unit groups. Changes in industrial designation

(e.g., 8315 File Cutter — Cut Tools Manufacturers in 1971 to 8315 File Cutter — Hardware, Tool and Cutlery Industries in 1980), and changes within an occupational title (e.g., 9131 Diesel Engineer (Locomotive Engineer) in 1971 to 9131 Diesel Engineer, Locomotive in 1980) are not listed. Also excluded from the table are changes in occupational titles resulting from their being desexed (e.g., 8585 Dictaphone Repairman in 1971 to 8585 Dictaphone Repairer in 1980) and from the elimination of the class of worker designation (e.g., 1149 Publisher (E) in 1971 to 1149 Publisher in 1980), to which reference is made in the SOC introduction.

For information pertaining to differences between the 1980 SOC and the 1971 OCM, based on the 1980 occupational titles, reference should be made to the comparison table in the previous section.
