About the artist:

Mark Houston

Mark was born in Northern Manitoba at a place called Sagkeeng, Fort Alexander. Mark currently lives and works out of his home in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mark began to draw at the age of five, drawing cartoons, people and wildlife. He sold his first painting at the age of 10, and has not looked back since.

Mark currently has some of his paintings on display in Winnipeg Galleries. Some of his paintings can also be found in countries such as Sweden, Japan and Germany.

INTRODUCTION

The 1996 First Nations Community profiles are published by Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, Manitoba Region for the general public.

The community profiles are intended to provide a comprehensive picture of First Nation communities in Manitoba and to reflect the many changes taking place across the province with First Nation communities.

Every effort has been made to ensure that this publication is the best it can be. We would like to thank the First Nations for their input, as the quality of the profile for each community is only as good as the information they have provided us.

This publication provides detailed reference data on Manitoba First Nation communities, and tribal councils. It also provides the political organization for each First Nation.

Each profile contains a brief history of the community, language, population data, reserve acreages, band government, community services, transportation, education, child and family service agencies and business/commercial services.

Those wishing to obtain further information and/or more current statistics should contact the First Nation directly.

For information on the Dakota Tipi First Nation No. 295 please contact the band office at (204) 857-4381.

Each First Nation community profile is compiled with the assistance of a contact person from the community and coordinated by:

DEFINITION OF TERMS CONTAINED IN THE COMMUNITY PROFILES

The following information provides points of clarification and definition relevant to the community profile data contained herein.

POPULATION

Band Population:

On Reserve (Own Band): Indian Register refers to individuals who are band members or who are descendants from members of a First Nation and who are residing on reserve.

Off Reserve: Indian Register refers to individuals who are First Nation members or who are descendants from members of a band who reside neither on-reserve nor on Crown land. Very often this indicates that First Nation members are living in a city, town or land removed from a reserve.

Crown Land (Own Band): Indian Register refers to individuals who are First Nation members or who are descendants from members of a First Nation and who reside on Crown land in a community administered by their First Nation.

Source of Data

The Indian Register records the names of individuals who are registered under the Indian Act. An individual is a Registered Indian if their name is on the Indian Register. Individuals are added or deleted from the Indian Register based on such evidence as provincial birth or death certificates.

NOTE: Some events may not be reported, particularly changes in residency from On Reserve to Off Reserve.

BAND GOVERNMENT

The chief and council assume power on the effective date and retain power for the specified term unless the next election date is determined by band custom. Should the current date appear to exceed the election term, an election may have taken place or be scheduled to take place. The chief and council may or may not change at this point.

Twenty-seven First Nations in Manitoba conduct their elections in accordance with section 74 of the Indian Act. These First Nations are required to have one councillor for every one hundred First Nation members, with a minimum of two and a maximum of 12 councillors.

Thirteen First Nations hold their elections in accordance with section 74 of the Indian Act and also have ministerial orders declaring that each council shall consist of one chief and a specific number of councillors regardless of band population.

Band Custom: Elections are called when a specified majority deems it necessary.

Affiliations: Tribal councils or political organizations who work with First Nations in Manitoba.

CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES

All First Nations in Manitoba region have available to them a full range of child and family services. First Nation Child and Family Services agencies are mandated under the Child and Family Services Act of Manitoba. These services are provided in a culturally appropriate manner with a predominantly First Nation staff.

Local workers and child care committees work in conjunction with their colleagues in their respective incorporated Indian Child and Family Service agencies. The agencies provide services to registered Indians and non-Indians living on-reserve.

EDUCATION

Enrolment: The figures used in the profiles represent the number of students attending school from a particular First Nation during the 1995-1996 school year as per nominal roll.

These figures do not indicate which school off-reserve they attend or how many attend school on their own reserve, except where indicated.

Schools Serving the Reserve: Schools which are attended by a large number of First Nation members are listed. These include schools on-reserve, those in a nearby community and those attended by students who move away from the reserve to attend school.

K4 - indicates nursery school
K5 - indicates kindergarten i

TRANSPORTATION

Transportation information should be verified with appropriate sources to ensure accuracy prior to travel. Most First Nations have an all-weather road for easy access into the community. A winter road may be built over the frozen lake to bring in fuel or freight from other communities.

PTH - provincial trunk highway
PH - provincial highway

COMMERCIAL BUSINESS AND/OR SERVICES

A partial listing of the commercial services and enterprises in the vicinity of each First Nation are listed.

These businesses are not necessarily on-reserve nor run by First Nation members.

COMMUNITY SERVICES

Most First Nations have a community hall serving the population, as well as an outdoor rink, ball diamond, playground, park and school facilities.

Mail Service: In many cases, mail is delivered to a small town near the First Nation and the frequency indicates the delivery to this point. The number of times the First Nation receives mail is determined by the frequency of travel to town.

Health Centre: A unit which supplements hospitals and clinics, usually located in a separate building or trailer and staffed by one or more nurses and possibly some auxiliary staff, from which a Public Health Program is administered.

Health Station: A field unit in a small building or trailer, usually under the charge of a Community Health

Representative where a visiting nurse or doctor may obtain shelter while rendering medical, surgical, obstetrical, and preventive services.

In cases of emergency, a patient may be accommodated overnight until evacuation to a nursing station or hospital can be arranged.

Fire Protection: A water delivery truck with firefighting capabilities is usually a five ton truck with a 500 - 1000 gallon water tank and a high volume pump. Water can be valved through a high-pressured circuit to a fire hose. Ancillary firefighting equipment includes hose, nozzles, axes, ladders, tools, etc. Back packs are portable 20-litre water tanks equipped with a harness, hose and hand-pumped sprayer used to combat brush or small structure fires. Volunteer fire departments are given training and upgraded to the standards of the Manitoba Fire Commission. Fire control packs contain portable pumps, hoses, axes, etc., and are used to fight brush or structure fires.

Nursing Station: A field unit staffed by one or more nurses and subsidiary staff organized to carry out a Public Health Program, out-patient treatment, and short-term in-patient care.

Normally, a nursing station has 2 to 12 beds and serves an isolated community of 100 - 1000 persons where there is no other medical facility.

C.H.R.: Community Health Representatives (CHR) are trained to handle medical emergencies. They extensive first aid training and in small communities, may act as a liaison between patients and doctors, as well as arrange for medical transportation.

NORWAY HOUSE FIRST NATION First Nation No. 278

The Norway House Indian Reserve is 450 air kilometres north of Winnipeg at the intersection of the Nelson River and Playgreen Lake.

History

The Norway House First Nation received its current name when the Hudson's Bay Co. (HBC) established a post near the northern outlet of Lake Winnipeg (1814) in recognition of the Norwegian labourers, recruited to build the post.

Norway House was a key point in the HBC's transportation system. At this fort, furs and goods were collected for outward shipment. The furs were collected from outposts further inland for the transportation along the Hayes River system to York Factory for export to the East. The Swampy Cree Indian people of the area had to adapt out of necessity to the changing world brought about by the introduction of the fur trade into their traditional territory. They participated in the fur trade, either through employment as cargo handlers or trippers for the inward and outward journeys from the HBC post or through their trapping activities. With the establishment of the major post at Norway House, it became a focal point in the fur trade industry in northern Manitoba. Norway House drew an increasing number of Indian people who sought to actively participate in this new economy. Due to the employment possibilities with the HBC, the influence of the missionaries, (who for their own purposes encouraged the Indian people to establish themselves more permanently at one location), by the late 1860's a large and prosperous Indian settlement was in existence at Norway House. In June of 1874, David Rundle, chief of the "Christain Indians of Rossville", wrote to Lieutenant Governor Morris requesting that a treaty be made. One of the primary reasons for this request was the introduction of steam navigation on Lake Winnipeg resulting in workers being thrown out of work as "trappers" with the HBC. Over the last hundred years, the economy was nevertheless characterized by a continuing dependence on the renewable resource sector. Today, while these traditional forms of economic activity, such as fishing and trapping, may not be so important as a source of cash income, the lifestyle of a large proportion of the population still revolves around these pursuits. Norway House was not officially recognized by Canada, until December 10, 1923 by Order in Council P.C. 2406. The Reserve, itself is identified as Norway House Indian Reserve No. 17.11. Until the 1950's, residents of Norway House lived primarily in pockets of housing scattered throughout the community. Until such time the villagers were without electricity, telephone and a road system. In recent years all the above amenities have been brought to Norway House and the First Nation works continuously to improve the quality of life on-reserve. The First Nation is one of five First Nations whose Reserve has been affected the by hydro developments.

The First Nation is signatory to Treaty 5 signed in 1975.

First Nation Government

The Chief and Councillors were elected in March 1996. The First Nation officials normally serve a two-year term with the next election scheduled for March 1998. Elections are held pursuant to section 74 of the Indian Act.

The chief of the Norway House First Nation is Ronnie Evans.

Councillors are Fred Clarke, Kenneth McKay, James Dixon, Larson Anderson, Mike Muswagon and Fred Muskego.

SAYISI DENE FIRST NATION (Tadoule Lake) First Nation No. 303

The Tadoule Lake settlement is located in north central Manitoba. It was established by the Churchill First Nation of the Sayisi Dene tribe who originally lived in a community at Little Duck Bay, 90 air kilometres to the north, 250 kilometres west of Churchill and 960 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

History

In 1956, the First Nation was relocated to Churchill by government authorities. The sudden move to an urban setting contributed to unforeseen social and cultural problems. As a result, the First Nation took the initiative and returned to their traditional lands. After a number of unsuccessful attempts to establish a new settlement, the site at Tadoule was finally chosen and was named Churchill Indian Reserve No. 1.

The First Nation is signatory to the 1910 adhesion to Treaty 5.

Language

The native language is Dene.

Reserve

I.R. No. 1
Area: 524 acres

First Nation Government

The Chief of the Sayisi Dene First Nation is Ernie Bussidor.

Councillors are Albert Thorassie, Marcel Kithithee,

Evan Yassie and Clifford Yassie.

The Chief and Councillors were elected in February 1995. The next election is scheduled for March 1996.

KEEWATIN TRIBAL COUNCIL (KTC)

MEMBERSHIP/MANDATE:

The tribal council was incorporated and recognized by the Government of Canada in 1979. It represents eleven member First Nations located in the northern precambrian area in Manitoba. The tribal council is accountable to approximately 10,942 First Nations members under the leadership of each respective First Nation council. The KTC signed an Alternative Funding Arrangement with the department on November 24, 1989.

The mandate of the tribal council is to facilitate the transfer of local control and responsibility of programs and services to member First Nations by the following objectives:

- to promote continuous public relations aimed at creating and developing mutual understanding and improved relations between Indian First Nations and government agencies;
- to allow the resource development council of the area to contribute and to participate in community and regional economic development;
- to allow the continuation of the First Nations' way of life with enhanced pride and purpose;
- to participate in the utilization of natural resources and establish new or existing enterprises and services;
- to undertake a broad range of initiatives in Northern Manitoba on resource and economic development, community services; all of which are referred to as the resource development concept and are associated with a long-term development strategy;
- to develop the council into a self-supporting, revenue-generating corporation for the mutual benefit of the council and its member First Nations; and
- to eliminate the complete dependency of the First Nations on the department and other funding agencies as the sole source of revenue.
