REPORT

ON THE

ORGANIZATION OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE OF CANADA

BY

SIR GEORGE MURRAY

PRINTED BY ORDER OF PARLIAMENT

OTTAWA
PRINTED BY C. H. PARMELEE, PRINTER TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY 1912
Certified Copy of a Report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Deputy Governor General on the 7th October, 1912.

The Committee of the Privy Council have had under consideration a report under date of the 30th September, 1912, from the Right Honourable the Prime Minister, in which he observes that he has engaged the Right Honourable Sir George Murray, G.C.B., to undertake an inquiry into certain matters affecting the operation of the Civil Service Acts, the organization of the public service and the methods of administration under which the public business of Canada is carried on; and that Sir George Murray has arrived in Ottawa and has commenced the consideration of the matters aforesaid.

The Prime Minister further reports that the time which Sir George Murray will be able to spend in this country will be somewhat limited, and that it is desirable to define the scope of the inquiry upon which he is to engage.

The Prime Minister recommends that his action in engaging the Right Honourable Sir George Murray be confirmed, and that he be requested to give such consideration as may be possible within the time at his disposal to the following subjects and to report thereon:

1. The methods employed in the transaction of public business.
2. The control of appropriations and expenditure.
3. The administrative methods and operations of the chief spending Departments, including:
   (a) the manner in which appointments to the public service are made;
   (b) the manner in which promotions within it are made;
   (c) the manner in which retirements are effected;
   (d) the classification of the staff and the distribution of duties in each Department and the duplication of the same or similar work in two or more Departments;
   (e) the distribution of the work between the several departments or authorities.
4. Generally the manner in which the public business of the Dominion is administered.

The Prime Minister further recommends that for the purpose aforesaid the Right Honourable Sir George Murray, G.C.B., be appointed a Commissioner under the provisions of the Inquiries Act, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, Chapter 104, with all the powers conferred by the same Statute, and that a commission do issue to him accordingly.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

REPORT ON THE PUBLIC SERVICE OF CANADA

BY

OTTAWA, NOVEMBER 30, 1912.

Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that, so far as the time at my disposal will permit, I have completed the inquiry, with which you were good enough to entrust me, into the organisation of the public service of Canada; and I beg to submit the following report.

(2) At the outset I may perhaps be allowed to say that no one can be more conscious than I am how little weight any views of mine on this subject are entitled to carry, owing to the difficulty of forming a judgment on matters depending so largely on local conditions and local sentiment, the effect of which cannot be fully realized without a prolonged stay in the country. I ought, however, to add that while there are some points to which I should have been glad to give more attention if time had permitted, there are others on which I think it is unlikely that my conclusions would have been affected by further consideration.

(3) I propose to deal with the questions referred to me in the order in which they stand in my instructions.

I.—THE METHODS EMPLOYED IN THE TRANSACTION OF PUBLIC BUSINESS.

(4) My suggestions under this head will be confined almost exclusively to the functions of Ministers and the possibility of affording them relief, leaving for a later portion of the report some other questions of departmental organisation.

(5) Nothing has impressed me so much in the course of my inquiry as the almost intolerable burden which the present system of transacting business imposes on Ministers themselves. They both have too much to do and do too much.

(6) Speaking broadly, it may be said that every act of the Executive Government, or of any member of it, requires the sanction of the Governor in Council which, under present practice, is identical with the Cabinet.

(7) The number of these Orders in Council averages from three thousand to four thousand per annum, and their subject matter ranges from questions of the highest importance, such as the approval of a treaty with some foreign Power, the disallowance of provincial legislation, the appointment of a judge, or the exercise of the prerogative of mercy, down to the acceptance of a tender for the erection of a pump, the promotion of a clerk from one grade to another, and the appointment of a lighthouse keeper or an exciseman.
(8) Almost every decision of a Minister, even of the most trivial importance, is thus—at least in theory—brought before his colleagues for the purpose of obtaining their collective approval, which is necessary for its validity.

(9) Provisions to this effect can be traced in almost every Act of Parliament which has been passed since Confederation; and it seems clear that the statesmen of that time thought it necessary to ensure that the collective responsibility of the Cabinet for the action of individual Ministers should be protected by safeguards of this kind.

(10) But I need scarcely point out that a great deal has happened since 1867, and that methods of administration which may have been well adapted to the circumstances of those days have become quite unsuitable after the lapse of nearly half a century.

(11) With the increase of population, the extension of trade, and the development of the various activities of the State, the business of Government necessarily grows both in amount and in complexity.

(12) The only means by which this growth can be met is by division of labour and devolution of power. In the absence of some continuous process of this kind the machinery of government must gradually become less efficient and must ultimately break down under the stress imposed upon it.

(13) Many topics which, in the early stages of national life, may properly form the subject of collective discussion and decision, will in the course of time diminish in relative importance, and must be dealt with in some more summary fashion.

(14) The first suggestion which I have to offer is that many of the powers now vested in the Governor in Council should, by some process of devolution, be transferred to individual Ministers. At times mistakes will no doubt be made. These mistakes will occasionally be inconvenient to the Administration; and it may be conceded that some of them are such as might have been avoided by fuller discussion or consideration. But these are risks which must be run, and which are inherent in the working of any highly developed organisation. Under present conditions it is practically impossible that all Ministers should take part in all decisions.

(15) Legislation would, of course, be required in order to effect such a change, since the duties to which I have referred are imposed on the Governor in Council by statute; but the legislation, though complicated in detail, would not be likely to raise many questions of a controversial character. It would, I think, be generally conceded that a Minister should be able to give leave of absence to the officers of his department; to grant statutory increases of salary; to sanction the acceptance of tenders, except where very large amounts or questions of principle are involved; to make appointments to vacancies; and to promote the clerks in his department from one class to another.

I only mention these as illustrations of the general character of the changes proposed. There are many others which will readily occur to any one who will examine the details of the existing system.

(16) I suggest therefore that a Committee of Ministers should be appointed to review the whole of the duties now discharged by Council, and select those which can safely be left to the discretion of the individual Ministers. All that would then be necessary would be to schedule these particulars, and provide by statute that the powers hitherto exercised by the Governor in Council should be transferred to the several Heads of the departments concerned.

(17) If, in view of the importance which is attached in this country to even minor appointments and promotions, such a reform is considered too drastic to be fully adopted at once, a board of two or, at most, three Ministers, with an equal number of permanent officials, might be constituted, and charged with the duty of considering all appointments and promotions recommended in any department. If approved by the Board, the decision of the Minister would take effect at once, or with such modifications as the Board thought advisable.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 57a

(18) Even after this relief has been given to the Governor in Council there will still remain many matters which, though of small intrinsic importance, must for various reasons receive the approval of the highest administrative authority. There will always be some decisions which, though properly taken by an individual Minister on his own responsibility, may yet require the outward form of sanction by the Governor in Council.

(19) Whenever this sanction is merely formal and does not require the collective consideration of Ministers it should be given at a meeting of Council constituted for the purpose. It is not necessary that the whole body of Ministers should attend; the minimum quorum would be sufficient for the purpose and the business, being formal, would be rapidly transacted.

(20) In other words a distinction should be drawn between a meeting of the Cabinet and a meeting of Council.

At present the Cabinet, besides performing its proper functions of discussing and deciding questions of high policy, is compelled to conduct a large amount of purely routine business. If the latter were relegated to a meeting of Council summoned ad hoc and in much smaller numbers, the time at the disposal of the Cabinet for its more important duties could be better employed.

(21) In this connection reference should be made to another institution closely allied to the Council, namely, the Treasury Board.

This Board consists of six Ministers, acting as a committee of the Privy Council, and deals with such matters relating to finance, revenue and expenditure, and public accounts, as are referred to it by Council. In practice the references to it include all proposals relating to the appointment, promotion, salary, pension, leave of absence, and allowances, of any official in the public service. But, notwithstanding the unimportant character of nearly all these subjects, the Board has no power to deal finally with them. Reports have to be made to Council in all cases.

(22) Such matters do not appear to me to require the personal consideration either of Council or of a Board of six Cabinet Ministers; and in my judgment no harm could ensue if the Board were abolished and its duties discharged by the several Departments concerned; or by the Appointment and Promotion Board, if it is thought advisable to adopt the alternative suggestion made in paragraph 17.

(23) The Board has some other and more important duties to perform under the Bank Act, the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act, the Finance and Treasury Board Act, the Savings Bank Act, the Penny Banks Act and the Insurance Act; but all these could be equally well discharged by the Minister of Finance, within whose sphere of action they seem naturally to fall; subject, of course, to consideration by the Cabinet when any important question of policy was involved.

(24) So far I have dealt only with the business of the Ministers in their corporate or collective capacity. I propose next to consider whether they could not be relieved of some of the work which now falls on them as Heads of Departments. At present they appear to transact in this capacity a great deal of business which need not engage their attention and could be equally well done by others. As an illustration of this, I may refer to an Order in Council of December, 1905, under which every requisition for furniture, fittings, and repairs, for all public buildings throughout the Dominion must be countersigned by the Minister of the Department making the requisition. A similar practice prevails with respect to certain articles supplied by the Stationery Department.

(25) The business of a Minister is not to administer, but to direct policy. When a Minister has laid down a line of policy to be adopted in his Department, the carrying out of this policy, or in other words the administration of the Department, should be left to his subordinates.

If I venture to make this statement in a rather dogmatic form it is because I am convinced that it is the foundation of any sound system of departmental organisation.

(26) Under the conditions which now prevail in Canada, and to which I have already referred, it is essential that a Minister, if he is to have time for the consideration of questions of policy and for his other important duties, should be relieved as far as possible of all purely administrative work. This, of course, involves the imposition of greater responsibility on the Deputy Heads of Departments. Their duty should be to give executive effect to the Ministers' decisions; they should be charged with the whole responsibility for the administration of their Departments, and should be the only channel through which the Minister acts.

(27) I realize, of course, that under any such scheme the Deputy Heads would require to be selected with great care, and that more power would be placed in their hands than under the existing system. But I cannot believe that it is impossible to find competent men to fill these positions under the new conditions which I have indicated.

(28) I have one further suggestion to make by which more relief could be given to Ministers.

Under present conditions there is only one political officer in each Department, namely, the Minister in charge of it. As a Cabinet Minister he has work of the highest importance to perform outside his Department; and even if the relief which I have above indicated could be afforded to him within his Department, his parliamentary and other duties would still be a heavy tax on his time, especially in the case of those Ministers who are in charge of the more important Departments. I suggest that in these Departments—probably four or five in number—a political Deputy Minister should be appointed who would be able to relieve the Minister himself not only of some of the departmental work but of many interviews and negotiations with Members of Parliament and others. It would, of course, be necessary that he should enjoy the full confidence of the Minister so that he could speak generally in the name of the latter without specific reference to him, and in other cases could refer for directions as occasion required.

II.—THE CONTROL OF APPROPRIATIONS AND EXPENDITURE.

(29) By the control of appropriations I understand the methods which Parliament has prescribed for securing that the funds which it grants for the various purposes of Government are applied to those purposes and to no other. This seems to me to be adequately provided for under the existing law, which is effectively carried out by the Auditor General.

(30) The control of expenditure may be considered from two points of view; there is the control exercised by the Government over its own Departments; and the control exercised by Parliament over the proposals of the Government.

(31) The latter may, I think, be regarded as negligible for the present purpose. In theory the control of Parliament over expenditure is complete; in practice it is of little value. This is partly due to the fact that, as the Government must necessarily command a majority in the House of Commons, it can generally secure the passing of its own estimates; and partly because notwithstanding many professions of a desire for economy in the abstracts, Members will generally be found demanding increased expenditure for purposes in which their constituencies are interested, rather than reductions on items which do not fall under this category.

(32) In short, the control of public expenditure must depend almost entirely on the Government of the day; and here again we shall generally find that individual Ministers, while not unwilling to acquiesce in the reduction of the estimates of other Departments, are prima facie disposed to recommend increased expenditure in their own.
(33) The Minister of Finance, who is responsible for raising the necessary taxation, is therefore, as a rule, the only Minister who has a strong inducement to press for economy.

The point of time at which he can use his influence with the best effect is while the estimates are under consideration and before they have been presented to Parliament. Proposals for expenditure which have passed this stage may be regarded in practice as unlikely to be further amended except in the direction of increase.

(34) The system under which the estimates are at present framed, criticised, and presented does not appear to me calculated to promote economical administration.

(35) They are drawn up, in the first instance, by individual Ministers who are likely to be influenced largely by their own prepossessions, and by the pressure put upon them by Members of Parliament.

The estimates so prepared are then subjected to the examination of the Department of Finance; but this examination, owing to pressure of time, has necessarily been of a somewhat cursory character, and directed rather to the totals of the votes than to the details.

The final settlement is arrived at in Council, usually after oral discussion between Ministers.

(36) This method appears to me to be at once wasteful of the time of the Ministers and unlikely to result in effective control, which can only be secured by persistent criticism of details, carried on by means of written correspondence in the first instance, rather than by oral discussion, and under conditions which permit of a thorough examination of the proposals.

(37) I suggest that the Department of Finance should be definitely charged with this duty. Every item of new or increased expenditures should be closely scrutinised; and the Department proposing it should be called on to state in sufficient detail the ground on which the expenditure is required; the reasons which prevent its being deferred to a later date; and the consequential expenditure which will be rendered necessary in future years if the proposal is sanctioned.

(38) I think it is important that these proceedings should be carried on in writing. Oral criticism in Council by the Minister of Finance, and oral replies by his colleagues are necessarily but imperfect methods for either attacking or defending proposals made.

(39) Arguments which may sound plausible in debate often lose much of their force when subjected to the kind of criticism which is only possible in the light of full information and accurate statements of fact. Pledges given in conversation are apt to be forgotten afterwards, and it is always desirable to keep on record statements of fact or arguments used in defence of particular points of policy.

(40) Correspondence will, of course, take time; but there must be great inconvenience in the present system under which the examination of all the estimates must be concentrated in the short period which elapses between the date when they are forwarded to the Department of Finance and the date at which they must be submitted to Parliament.

(41) Proposals for increased expenditure are probably being framed in the Departments throughout the year; and it is not easy to see why they should not be submitted for the approval of the Finance Department, as and when they are matured. This would relieve the pressure in the period immediately before the estimates are presented to Parliament, and would enable many of the proposals to be considered with due deliberation. Any sanction given in the course of the year would, of course, be provisional and subject to any modifications which might hereafter be found necessary when the final estimates for the ensuing year were under consideration.

(42) When the process of examination was completed the proposals for expenditure would be reviewed by the Minister of Finance; and those which were accepted by him need not be considered again; those to which he raised objections not accepted by his colleagues would be referred to the Cabinet for discussion by the whole body of Ministers. The Cabinet would thus be relieved of an immense amount of discussion on the details of the estimates which is necessary under the present system, and would have to deal only with those points on which there was an irreconcilable difference of opinion between the Minister of Finance and one of his colleagues.

(43) In at least one respect the existing financial system seems to me unnecessarily rigid. Under section 41 of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act the Auditor General is directed to see that no payment of any public money is made for which there is no direct parliamentary appropriation, or which is in excess of any such appropriation.

(44) The result of this provision is that (except during the parliamentary recess when special powers are available to meet urgent and unforeseen expenditure) no money can be spent on any service not specially provided for in the estimates, nor can the sum provided for any service be exceeded.

(45) But it must occasionally happen, for example, that a public work for which specific provision has been made in the estimates, turns out in the course of the year not to be required, while some other work ejusdem generis proves to be urgently needed; or again, that the amount provided for a work turns out to be insufficient to complete it within the year, and the progress of the work has accordingly to be suspended until further supplies have been made available. I think it would be reasonable, so long as the total provision under the vote was not exceeded, that there should be some means of supplying these deficiencies; and that power might be given to the Minister of Finance on the application of a Department to authorise expenditure of a like kind to that already provided for in the estimates; or to authorise expenditure on a specific service in excess of the provision made.

(46) But in both cases the power should be subject to the limitation that the total amount provided in the vote was not to be exceeded; and it should be clearly understood that the power was not to be used except in really urgent cases.

III.—THE ADMINISTRATIVE METHODS AND OPERATIONS OF THE CHIEF SPENDING DEPARTMENTS, INCLUDING

(a) THE MANNER IN WHICH APPOINTMENTS TO THE PUBLIC SERVICE ARE MADE.

(47) The provisions of the law applicable to first appointments are extremely difficult to follow, as the Civil Service Act (R.S. 1906, Chapter 16) has been amended in 1908, 1909, 1910 and 1912. In the latter year, indeed, no less than seven Acts amending it in various respects were placed on the statute book.

(48) As regards the Inside Service the position is fairly clear. No appointment can be made to it without a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners, who are constituted under the Civil Service Amendment Act of 1908; but whose powers do not apparently extend to the Outside Service.

(49) The normal method of appointment is by competitive examination and this is in practice the method adopted for admission to both Subdivision B of the Second Division and Subdivision B of the Third Division. But under section 21 of the Act of 1908, when the knowledge and ability requisite for a vacant situation are "wholly or in part professional, technical or otherwise peculiar," persons may be appointed without competitive examination. A certificate from the Civil Service Commission is, however, equally necessary in these cases.

(50) As regards the lower grades of officials, such as messengers and porters, whilst a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners is required, the examination is not competitive but qualifying only.
(51) There are consequently three distinct types of examination for first appointments in the Inside Service; namely, that for Subdivision B of the Second Division, which was intended to correspond with an education approaching the University standard, but is in fact scarcely so high; that for Subdivision B of the Third Division, which represents an education corresponding roughly with that of a High School; and that for the lower grades, which is of an elementary character.

(52) In addition to the above there is the method of admission to the service provided by section 21 of the Act of 1908, which may or may not involve an examination of a more or less special character.

(53) A special qualifying examination is also prescribed in the case of candidates for appointment to the Second Division, who were in the service at the commencement of the Act of 1908 and were then classified in the Third Division under section 6 of that Act. This examination, whilst in some respects similar to the ordinary competitive examination for the same Division, includes also papers on the duties of the particular Department in which the candidate is serving.

(54) So far as I am able to judge, this method of recruiting the service by competitive examination has given general satisfaction and has succeeded in attracting a better class of candidate than the system which it replaced.

(55) The selection of persons for appointments in the public service, and especially in the Second Division, is a peculiarly difficult task because, if the service is to be regarded as a permanent career to which a man is to devote his active life, it becomes necessary to form a judgment not only on his capacity for the work which will fall to him immediately on appointment, but on his capacity some twenty or thirty years later for the higher duties which he may then be required to perform.

(56) No conceivable method of selection can be relied upon to penetrate so far into the future. We must, therefore, be content with such a measure of merit as is evinced by success in a competitive examination in subjects which indicate a previous education of a high standard; and we must assume that the raw material so selected will, with suitable training in the Department, develop the required capacity for the more advanced duties. The system of selection by open competition undoubtedly leaves much to be desired; but in this imperfect world it is not the least perfect institution; at any rate nothing better has yet, in my opinion, been suggested.

(57) For reasons given later on in this report, I think it is of great importance to maintain an examination of a much higher standard for admission to the Second Division than is necessary for the Third. There may be isolated cases of men who, having entered the Third Division, afterwards show ability which might be usefully applied to the more responsible duties; but these will always be rare, and I think it is scarcely worth while to provide for them at the risk of introducing a lower standard of education into the higher ranks of the service.

(58) While the method of appointment to the Inside Service is on the whole satisfactory, it is a question whether it is attracting as good a class of recruits as it should—and must if the business of the country is to be carried on in an efficient manner.

(59) For this purpose it is necessary to attract the best brains and capacity into the service, and to induce young men to look on it as an honourable career in which they may spend their lives.

(60) One of the main drawbacks to which it is subject from this point of view, is the uncertainty of the prizes attainable. A man of ability will not be induced to enter the service or to put forth his best powers in it, unless he feels that merit is certain of its due reward. Care in the selection of candidates for first appointments is, therefore, not the only requisite: a man must be encouraged to feel that throughout his whole career his advancement depends on his own ability and industry, and that, given the proper measure of these qualities, success is assured to him. So long as promotion does not depend on these qualities alone, but is liable to be affected by other considerations, the Civil Service will never be in a position to cope effectively with the growing business of the country.

(61) Confining myself for the moment to the Inside Service alone, I have the following suggestions to make:

(a) The limits of age for appointment are too wide. If a man is to be properly trained in the Civil Service, he should enter it as soon as possible after he has completed his education. Under present conditions the maximum limit of age is 35. Men who come in after 25 have probably attempted some other occupation and failed in it; and there is, moreover, great inconvenience in having officials of 30 and upwards working side by side with younger men and performing duties of an elementary character. For Subdivision B of the Second Division, the limits of age should be 18 and 25. For Subdivision B of the Third Division, it might be desirable to take in youths even below the age of 18. Probably 17 and 21 would be more appropriate limits for candidates for this Division than 18 and 35. For the lower grades age is of less importance than physical vigour; but I think that 45 should be the limit not only for sorters, porters and packers, but for messengers also.

(b) In the case of both Subdivisions, the vacancies known to exist should be notified at the time when the examination is announced, and the vacant appointments should be offered to the successful candidates in order of merit. The Departments would, of course, have the right to reject any candidate after probation; but all successful candidates ought to be assured of an appointment, and so far as is practicable, they ought to be allowed, in order of merit, to select the Department in which they will serve.

(c) The powers conferred by section 21 of the Act of 1908 are, in my opinion, too wide, and tend to encourage a departure from the general principle of selection for merit alone, as it is always possible to contend that any particular position, even if not 'wholly or in part professional or technical,' is 'otherwise peculiar.' I suggest that the powers under this section should be limited to professional or technical positions; and that a schedule of the situations which may be filled in this way should be prepared and approved by the Governor in Council. The list could, of course, be added to from time to time with the like authority. If this suggestion is approved, the section should be amended so as to run as follows:

'When the qualifications requisite for any situation are wholly or in part professional or technical, the Governor in Council may appoint a person thereto without competitive examination and without reference to the other conditions prescribed in section 14 of this Act: Provided that he obtains from the Commission a certificate to be given in accordance with the regulations of the Commission that he possesses the requisite knowledge and ability and is duly qualified as to health and character. A schedule of such situations shall be drawn up forthwith and approved by the Governor in Council, and shall not be added to, except with the like approval.'

I think it is also desirable that appointments under section 21 should be left entirely to the Civil Service Commissioners, unless they report that they are unable to find suitable candidates.

(d) A distinction should be drawn between those branches of the service which are of a clerical or administrative character, and those in which technical or professional knowledge is required; and special schemes of examination should be drawn up for the latter, when required.

(e) Provision should be made in the junior grades corresponding to the Third Division for a class of skilled artisans and technical assistants, such as laboratory assistants, electricians, draughtsmen and others, who require technical skill though not qualified by scientific or professional training for the higher positions.

(62) In connection with the method of making appointments in the Inside Service it may be proper at this point to refer to the question of the employment of temporary clerks, in which there appears to be a certain amount of laxity.
(63) Under present practice each Department inserts in its estimates a round sum for clerical and other assistance. When the estimates have been voted the Department is in a position, without any further control, to spend this sum on the employment of temporary clerks, the rate of pay being usually $500 per annum, and rising in some cases to as much as $800.

(64) The practice of employing temporary clerks seems to be growing, as the actual expenditure from Civil Government Contingencies under this head was $25,995 in 1909-10, and $110,071 in 1911-12; and the Estimates for 1912-13 include a provision of $20,000 in one Department alone.

(65) Theoretically, the organisation of a Department should be arranged as to enable the whole of the year's work to be performed by the permanent staff. This can be accomplished to a certain extent by shifting clerks from branches where there is less to do at a particular time to branches where there is a temporary pressure; by arranging that work which is not urgent should be done at times when the pressure is least; and by taking care that leave of absence should only be taken with due regard to the convenience of the Department. It might even be practicable, on occasions of pressure, to borrow clerks from another Department. In practice it is of course not always possible to make adequate arrangements of this kind; and a certain amount of temporary employment will always be necessary in some Departments. But I feel sure that with the exercise of greater care more might be done in this direction.

(66) A temporary staff is, speaking generally, less efficient, owing to its defective training, than a permanent one; and is consequently more costly in reality, though perhaps more economical in appearance. Temporary employment should therefore, in my opinion, be discouraged in every possible way.

(67) I suggest that the employment of temporary clerks should be closely watched by the Department of Finance, under whose direction the remuneration is paid; and on every occasion when a temporary clerk is required the sanction of that Department should be obtained, the reason for the employment and the work to be performed being explained. The limit of six months prescribed for such employment seems to be reasonable, and necessary in order to prevent employment intended to be temporary in its character, from becoming in effect permanent. Precautions should also be taken to prevent this result being produced by successive periods of employment in different offices or in different branches of the service. Perhaps the simplest way of securing this would be by means of a declaration to be made by the temporary clerk on each occasion of his appointment stating all the previous occasions on which he had been employed.

(68) If the provisions of the law with regard to the Inside Service are fairly clear, the same cannot be said of the Outside Service.

(69) Under section 4 (b) of the Civil Service Act (R.S. 1906, Chapter 16) the Outside Service consists of the officers, clerks and employees mentioned in Schedule B, and the other officers, clerks and employees included in the Civil Service who are employed otherwise than on the departmental staffs at Ottawa. These 'other officers, &c., are presumably those described in paragraph (a) and (b) of section 3 of the Act.

(70) Under sections 7 to 15 of the Act a Board of Examiners was constituted, which was intended to conduct examinations for both branches of the service; and under section 16 of the Act no person could be employed in either division of the Civil Service unless he had passed the prescribed examination.

(71) By section 4 of the Civil Service Amendment Act of 1908 the requirements as to examination were repealed so far as regards the Inside Service; and by sections 9 to 26 the Civil Service Commission was constituted, and provision made for the examinations which the Commission was to conduct; the powers of the Board of Examiners under the principal Act being transferred to the Commission. Sections 9 to 26, however, by reason of the provisions of section 4 (1), have no application to the Outside Service.
(72) It would appear, therefore, that the provisions contained in sections 7 to 16 of the earlier Act, with regard to the Board of Examiners and the examinations to be held by them, remain in force as regards that portion of the Outside Service which is defined by section 4 (b) of that Act. But by section 3 of the Civil Service Amendment Act of 1910 these examinations are to be held at the times and places specified under the regulations of the Civil Service Commission for the ordinary competitive examinations.

(73) The system thus provided would in itself be sufficiently inconvenient to administer; but further complications are introduced by the amending Acts of 1908 and 1910.

(74) By section 3 of the former of these two Acts the definition of the Civil Service seems to be considerably enlarged. After defining the Inside Service, the Act provides that the Outside Service shall consist of ‘the rest of the public service.’ The ‘public service’ is an expression which appears for the first time in the Act of 1908, and is not defined either in that Act or elsewhere; but the ‘rest of the public service’ presumably includes a considerable body of officials and employees not within the meaning of section 4 (b) of the original Act.

(75) It is not clear whether the provisions in sections 7 to 16 of the original Act were extended by the Act of 1908 to this enlarged Outside Service. But by section 2 of the Act of 1910 this enlargement of the Service is expressly excepted from the operation of section 16 and the other sections relating to examinations.

(76) We have, therefore, the original Outside Service defined by the principal Act, and the enlarged Outside Service defined by the Act of 1908. The former is still subject to the provisions of the principal Act dealing with examinations; but the additional force brought within the definition of the Outside Service by the Act of 1908 is specially excepted from those provisions by the Act of 1910.

(77) For the present purpose, however, it is not necessary to consider the legal position more closely; for I understand that in practice the Act is not regarded as requiring either examination or a Civil Service certificate for any position in the Outside Service, although the Civil Service Commissioners do in fact hold the Preliminary and Qualifying examinations referred to in the principal Act, and a certain number of candidates do in fact pass them either under department regulations or voluntarily.

(78) This position cannot be regarded as satisfactory. If the system of examination and certificate (whether after competitive or merely qualifying examination) is desirable for the Inside Service, it is difficult to understand why it should not be regarded as equally desirable for the Outside Service. I can see no reason why the junior ranks in the Excise and Customs Service, for example, should not be subjected to the same conditions, mutatis mutandis, as the junior ranks in the clerical departments of the Inside Service. The Outside Service is, speaking generally, of no less importance than the Inside Service. An efficient staff is no less necessary; and it should be recruited under similar conditions.

(79) For the same reason promotion in it should follow on the same lines; by which I mean that the prizes of the service should be reserved for those who have shown themselves capable of performing the highest duties. At present such positions as Postmasterships and Collectorships are filled by the appointment of persons who, whatever their other merits, have not had the advantage of long training in the service, and are consequently compelled to rely on their subordinates in transacting the business of their Departments. Such a system is fatal to an efficient service in two ways: the higher positions are filled, not by experts, but by amateurs; and the best type of official is not attracted into the service because he recognizes that its prizes are not within his reach.

(80) By section 4 (3) of the Act of 1908, power is given to the Governor in Council to bring the whole or any part of the Outside Service under the same provisions of the law as the Inside Service. I strongly recommend that this power should be exercised forthwith, at least as regards the Post Office, Customs, and Inland Revenue Departments; and further, that each of these services should be graded in such a way as to provide a ladder of promotion from the lowest ranks to the highest.

(b) THE MANNER IN WHICH PROMOTIONS ARE MADE.

(81) As the law now stands promotion from the Third Division to the Second Division can only be made through the open competitive examination described above, except in the case of officers who were already in the Third Division on the 1st of September, 1908, for whom special provision has been made.

Promotion in the First and Second Divisions is made by the Governor in Council upon the recommendation of the Head of the Department, based on the report in writing of the Deputy Head, and with a certificate of qualification from the Civil Service Commissioners to be given either with or without examination as may be determined by them.

(82) Prima facie it appears to me undesirable that the Commission should intervene in questions of promotion. The duty of selecting suitable persons for first appointments in the service is one which they are well fitted to perform. The duty of adjudicating on the merits of officers whom it is proposed to promote from one grade to another is an entirely different one.

(83) Except in rare cases the method of examination seems to me unsuitable for such a purpose as promotion. The claims of an officer to promotion rest partly on the manner in which he has hitherto performed his duties, and partly on the judgment which can be formed of his capacity for the higher duties which will fall to him after promotion. On both these points the opinion of those under whom he has worked must be of far greater value than that of an outside body of commissioners who can have no personal experience of him or of his work. I cannot but think, too, that the intervention of the Commissioners in this matter must tend to weaken their position in the discharge of the more important duties imposed on them in regard to first appointments.

(84) If the recommendations of the Head of the Department and of the Deputy Head were honestly made under a proper sense of the responsibility imposed on them (and for the present purpose no other assumption is possible) I should feel some confidence that the right man was selected; and I should, therefore, be disposed to dispense with the certificate of the Civil Service Commissioners.

(85) On the other hand, I must say that cases have come under my notice which lead me to think that in some instances the recommendations of both the Heads and the Deputy Heads of Departments have not been founded exclusively on ‘merit’ as the Act directs, but that other considerations, or perhaps I should say ‘merits’ other than those contemplated by the Act, have been allowed to carry weight, and that grave injustice has sometimes been done to deserving officers who have in consequence been passed over. I should hope, however, that promotions of this kind are becoming fewer, as a sense of the responsibility for the selection of the fittest candidate becomes more real. Not only does the public service suffer if the fittest man is not promoted, but grave injustice is inflicted on the individual who is passed over merely because he is unable to bring political or other influence to bear in his favour.

(86) On the whole, whilst I do not feel entitled to express a very decided opinion on the subject, I should be inclined to repeal those provisions of the Act which require a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners for promotions, and leave the matter in the hands either of the Head of the Department and his Deputy, or of the Appointment and Promotion Board above suggested.
(c) THE MANNER IN WHICH RETIREMENTS ARE EFFECTED.

(87) All persons in the Civil Service, with very few exceptions, hold office during pleasure—that is to say, their services can be dispensed with at any time. But I cannot find that there is in actual operation any rule or practice making retirement compulsory at any given age: and except in rare cases little or no pressure seems to be brought to bear on officers to induce them to retire, so long as they are able to continue in attendance at their Department. In the absence of ill health or misconduct, or some special ground for pressure on the individual, it seems to be left to the discretion of the officer himself to select the moment for his retirement.

(88) In the case of those who are entitled to pension some inducement is afforded to encourage voluntary retirement or to enable pressure to be exercised to enforce it. But speaking generally, the tendency on the part of the Heads of Departments is to leave the question to the officer himself. This tendency is, of course, more noticeable in the case of officers who are not entitled to pension; and this class now includes all officers appointed to the Inside Service since the 1st of July, 1898, as well as the greater part of the Outside Service, whether appointed before or after that date.

(89) This state of things, in my judgment, constitutes a very grave evil. Some system of securing retirement is absolutely essential if the public service is to be maintained in a satisfactory condition. It is necessary, on the one hand, in order to prevent officers from continuing in the service after they have ceased to be efficient; and it is equally necessary in order to provide a flow of promotion and to ensure that men of capacity should reach the higher positions at a period of life when they are able to make the best use of their powers.

(90) But a system of pensions is an essential element in any system of retirement. For it will be found that Heads of Departments will not discharge men who have given long and faithful service to the State—or even men who have not—unless some definite provision is made for their support when they have ceased to draw salary; and it is probable that public opinion would generally endorse this view.

(91) The pension system also has advantages of another kind. Owing to the nature of the work carried on in the public service it is highly desirable that men should be encouraged to enter it early and remain in it as long as their powers are unimpaired—in short to make their career in it. A pension, which will be available when they break down through ill-health, or when their term of service comes to an end, will be a powerful attraction to young men just entering a career, and will appeal even more directly to Civil Servants who have reached middle life and are tempted by offers of outside employment.

(92) The absence of a pension system, therefore, operates against the public interest in two ways;—men whose services might well be dispensed with are retained after their powers have begun to fail: and men whom the State would be glad to retain are allowed to be tempted out of the service at a time when their value is highest.

(93) I would therefore strongly urge as one of the most important items of Civil Service reform that some system of pensions such as that which was re-established in 1898 should be re-established.

(94) But if the pension system is to be restored, it should be accompanied by a provision requiring compulsory retirement at a certain age. I suggest that at or after the age of sixty retirement should be at the option either of the officer himself or his Department; that at the age of sixty-five he should be compelled to retire; and that no relaxation of this rule should be permitted except for the single purpose of allowing him to continue in the service for a few months (not more than twelve) in order to complete a definite piece of work for which his services were specially required.
(95) The advantage of a rigid rule of this kind is that it relieves the Heads of Departments of the unpleasant and invidious task of representing to an official, who may perhaps be of long standing, that his powers have begun to fail and that his place can be better filled by a younger man. There will, of course, be cases of men who at the age of sixty-five will still be fully efficient, and whom it might be desirable to retain in the service; but these will be far out-numbered by the cases in which an officer ought in the public interest to retire, and will, under this rule, be compelled to do so without feeling that he has been harshly treated, or that any reflection has been cast upon his capacity. He will recognise that he is only conforming to a regulation which strikes at the efficient and inefficient alike.

(96) I do not propose to discuss the provisions of a pension scheme in detail but I may perhaps be permitted to suggest the following points for consideration:—

(i) The award of a pension has hitherto taken the form of an annuity for life, varying in amount according to length of service and salary. It may be worth while to consider whether it should not in future take the form of a reduced annuity coupled with the payment of a lump sum on retirement. The lump sum would, of course, represent the actuarial equivalent of the difference between an annuity at the higher rate and at the lower rate. In other words, the Government would undertake to commute, at a certain rate a portion, say one-fifth or one-fourth, of the pension to which the officer was entitled. I think that a scheme of this kind would be found popular with Civil Servants; and it would impose no additional charge on public funds.

(ii) No retirement should be permitted on the ground of ill-health unless it is certified that the officer's incapacity is likely to be permanent; and a medical referee should be appointed by the Government to examine these certificates and satisfy himself of their accuracy.

(iii) The provisions of section 12 of the Superannuation and Retirement Act, which enable an addition of years to be made to the actual service of certain persons, are in my opinion of doubtful expediency; and I should prefer to see them withdrawn. But if retained, I think that power should be taken to draw up a schedule of offices or situations requiring professional or technical qualifications, with the number of years to be added in each case, and that the grant of additional years should be confined to persons holding these offices. Under the Act the grant of the additional years is personal to the individual and depends on the view which may be taken, either at the time of his appointment or at the time of his retirement, of his qualifications, and on other considerations of a less relevant character. This involves a good deal of rather invidious discussion, which would be avoided if the grant depended not upon the individual but on the qualifications required for the office which he happened to hold.

(iv) It is a question whether it would not be desirable to abandon the practice of requiring contributions towards a pension to be deducted from the salary. My own opinion is against the system of contributions. I think it preferable on many grounds that the pension should be an entirely free gift on the part of the State.

(v) If the suggestion made in paragraph 22 of this Report (namely, that the Treasury Board should be abolished) is adopted, it would probably be found convenient that the administration of the pension system should be assigned to the Department of Finance.
(d) THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE STAFF AND THE DISTRIBUTION OF DUTIES IN EACH DEPARTMENT; AND THE DUPLICATION OF THE SAME OR SIMILAR WORK IN TWO OR MORE DEPARTMENTS.

(97) The Inside Service as constituted under the provisions of the Civil Service Amendment Act, 1905, is arranged in three divisions: First, Second and Third; each of these again comprises two subdivisions known as A and B.

Subdivision A of the First Division should consist of officers having the rank of deputy heads (but not being in charge of Departments), assistant deputy Ministers, and the principal technical, administrative and executive officers

The scale of salary assigned to this Subdivision is $2,500 rising to $4,000.

Subdivision B of the First Division should consist of 'the lesser technical, administrative and executive officers,' including the former chief clerks who are not eligible for Subdivision A.

The scale of salary is $2,100, rising to $2,800.

The Second Division, with its two Subdivisions A and B, should consist of 'other clerks having technical, administrative, executive, or other duties which are of the same character as, but of less importance and responsibility than, those of the First Division.'

The scales of salary of the two Subdivisions are $1,600 to $2,100, and $800 to $1,600 respectively.

The Third Division, also in two Subdivisions, comprises all other clerks in the service whose duties are copying and routine work, under direct supervision, of less importance than that of the Second Division.

The scales of salary of the two Subdivisions are $900 to $1,200 and $500 to $800 respectively.

The clerks who were actually in the service at the time of the passing of the Act in 1905, were distributed among these Divisions and Subdivisions, according to the rank and salary which they then enjoyed; but without apparently any other reference to the duties actually performed by them.

(98) A clear distinction is drawn by the Act between the duties of the Third Division on the one hand, and those of the Second and First Divisions, on the other. The duties of the former are described as copying and routine work under direct supervision, of less importance than those of the Second Division. The duties of the First and Second Divisions are technical, administrative or executive.

(99) While the First Division is to be recruited by promotion from the Second Division (section 25) and the Second Division by open competitive examination, no other provision is made for transfer from the Third Division to the Second, except in the case of officers who were already in the Third Division at the time of the passing of the Act, for whom special arrangements are made in section 26 (2).

Moreover, the subjects prescribed for the Second Division examination indicate a standard of education similar to that provided by the Universities, while the subjects prescribed for the examination admitting to the Third Division represent a much lower range of attainments.

(100) It is in my opinion of great importance that this distinction between the work of the two Divisions should be preserved. The essential difference between them is that the work of the two higher Divisions requires the exercise of discretion and the possession of altogether higher qualifications, whether professional, technical, or administrative, than that of the Third.

(101) For routine work, under direct supervision, all that is required is punctuality, accuracy, and precision. The copying of accounts, the compilation of statistics, the filling up of forms, and even the drafting of simple letters, are all matters in which there is no room for the exercise of discretion. The qualifications required for the work of the higher classes are essentially different from those required for the routine duties of the lower classes; and are not usually developed from them. There will always be a large number of persons who, while quite capable of routine work, will never be able to rise to duties of a higher character requiring a higher standard of education and the higher qualities required for successful administration.

(102) I fear that under present conditions sufficient attention has not been paid to this distinction. In many Departments there are officers in both the First and Second Divisions performing duties which belong properly to the Third; and little, if any, attempt has been made to distribute the work in the two upper Divisions so as to correspond to the salaries assigned to them. Moreover, the distinction between the routine work of the Third Division and the superior work of the two higher Divisions seems to have been ignored.

(103) I attribute this mainly to two causes, (a) the principle laid down by the Act of 1908 for classifying the officers then in the service, which, as I have already mentioned, paid insufficient regard to the nature of the duties to be performed; and (b) the want of some one co-ordinating authority with power to deal with all Departments and regulate their staffs on uniform principles.

(104) It might possibly be contended that the Treasury Board and, through it, the Council, were charged with this duty; but it is obvious that Ministers themselves could not afford the time, and would otherwise be scarcely qualified, to exercise continuously such functions as those which I have described.

(105) In the absence of any such authority the various Departments have acted independently and each has arranged its staff in its own way. The result is that no uniform principles of organisation have been enforced. Men will be found in one Department with high salaries doing work which is performed by a much lower class in others; and the numbers of the various classes have been increased from time to time to meet the supposed claims of individuals without any special reference to the nature of the duties to be performed. It would be easy to quote numerous cases in which an officer has been allowed to proceed from one class to another without any change of work whatever, merely because it was desired to improve his position.

(106) The following figures afford a striking illustration of the consequences which inevitably flow from the absence of a controlling authority charged with the duty of co-ordinating the organisation of the whole service. They show (1) the classification of the staff in the various Departments made in 1909 under section 8 of the Act of 1908, and (2) the classification as it stands at the present time.

(107) It will be observed that while the total number of clerks has increased in the three years from 2,616 to 3,118, or by 19.2 per cent, the increase in the First Division has been 139 or 52.6 per cent; in the Second Division 212, or 19.6 per cent; and in Subdivision B of the Third Division, the lowest grade of all, there has been an actual diminution of 42 clerks.

(108) The character of the work performed differs widely in the several Departments, but it may be confidently asserted that in any properly organised Department, the routine work will require a considerably larger number of clerks than the work of a superior kind.

(109) I find, however, that in 1909 the Third Division represented no more than 48.5 per cent of the total number in the service; whilst in 1912 it represents only 45.5 per cent. It will further be noticed that while the lowest subdivision, namely III-B, is actually reduced in number, the highest, namely I-A, is increased by 57 to 61 per cent, and the next highest, I-B, by 82, or 48- per cent. The quantity of work has no doubt grown in the last three years, but it can hardly be supposed that its quality has grown in these proportions.

(110) The inferences which I draw from these figures are that the original classification of 1909 did not correspond with the duties to be performed; and that the alterations which have been made during the last three years have aggravated the initial error. I may add that, though I have not been able to make an exhaustive examination of the work in all of the Departments, my own observation, so far as it goes, entirely supports those conclusions.

(113) I have already called attention to one respect in which these principles are flagrantly ignored, namely, by the promotion of officers without any change of duties, so that there are numerous cases of men who, after twenty years' service, will be found to be doing work which, though quite suitable to their position at the beginning of their official career, is extravagantly remunerated by the salary of the class to which they have ultimately attained.

(114) As another illustration of the same error I may point to the legislation which enables a private secretary of a Minister to be added, after one year's service, without any certificate of the Civil Service Commissioners or other evidence of his qualifications, to the permanent staff of the Department in any position below Subdivision A of the First Division. It might thus happen that in a Department, presided over by a rapid succession of Ministers, the number of clerks in Subdivision B of the First Division (the salary of which is $2,100 rising to $2,800) might be increased at the rate of one a year without any corresponding increase in the work of the Department, and consequently without any duties for the clerks in question to discharge.

(115) It is difficult to understand how this point could have escaped notice when the legislation in question was being passed. If at any time there is work enough in a given department for a certain number of clerks and no more, how could the addition of another clerk be justified? The desire of the Minister to provide for his private secretary is intelligible, but this should clearly be done by appointing him to some vacant position which he is qualified to fill, and not by the creation for him of a post which is not required for the work of the Department, and which imposes for all time an additional charge on public funds.

(116) What seems to be urgently required is the appointment of a committee of Deputy Heads or other high officials to examine in detail the work of every Department in the service, and report what number of clerks of each grade is required to carry out the work. This may appear at first sight a task of inconvenient magnitude; but I think that when once the members of the committee had established certain principles for their own guidance (such as, for example, the definition of routine work), they would find the application of these principles to the business of the several Departments a comparatively easy matter.

(117) When this task has been completed some one Department should be charged with the duty of seeing that the classification laid down was adhered to. Every proposal for an increase in the number of any class should be carefully scrutinized; and the Department proposing it should be called on to explain the necessity for the new post, the nature of the duties to be attached to it, and any other matters which may seem to call for inquiry. In this way the classification of all the Departments will be kept within proper limits and uniform principles of organisation will be applied.

(118) I think that the Department of Finance, which is directly interested in the financial effect of such proposals, is naturally marked out for this duty.

(119) In one other respect the classification prescribed by the Act might, I think, be amended with advantage. It appears to me to be too rigid and wanting in flexibility.

(120) The intention seems to have been to frame a uniform classification for all Departments. Considering the great variations in the work of the Departments, I doubt if this is either possible or even desirable. Even if the clerical services could be treated in this fashion, there is a large number of professional and technical appointments the classification of which cannot be cast in the same mold.

(121) For administrative work of a clerical kind it may perhaps be reasonable that a young man entering Subdivision B of the Second Division by open competition should begin at $500 a year and rise in the normal course through the other classes to Subdivision A of the First Division, in which the maximum salary is $4,000. But a frame-work of this kind is not so readily adaptable to the cases of men in middle life drawn from outside professions, or to the young men whose qualifications and work are mainly technical.

(123) As regards the duplication of the same or similar work in two or more Departments, I regret that the limited time at my disposal has prevented my making as complete an examination of the work of the several Departments as I could have wished. In any case, however, I should scarcely be competent to make any definite recommendations of a detailed kind. But I have noticed some branches of business the organisation of which seems susceptible of improvement in this respect.

(1) The statistical information compiled or published by the Government Departments.—This is a matter in which co-ordination and control are especially necessary; but a very competent Commission has been appointed, under the chairmanship of Mr. Grigg, to inquire into it, and their labours have not yet been brought to a conclusion. I therefore refrain from making any suggestions on the subject. But I may perhaps be allowed to express the opinion that, while the form and matter of the statistical information to be issued to the public may properly be prescribed by some central authority or Department, the actual compilation of the statistics should rest with the Department dealing with the subject to which they relate.

(ii) Public health.—This is a subject which is at present dealt with by several Departments. Having regard to the rapid growth of population and the very important interests involved, it is, I think, desirable that a strong central Department should be established with power to deal with all questions relating to public health.

(iii) Surveying and map-making.—Several Departments appear to be engaged in this work, and I have no doubt that advantage would result if it were more concentrated; but the subject is one which requires much detailed investigation before a scheme could be drawn up. I suggest that a Departmental Commission should be appointed to inquire into the matter.

(iv) Steamship subsidies.—These are dealt with by both the Post Office Department and the Department of Trade and Commerce. I think that they should all be controlled by one Department. Under present conditions it is quite possible for a steamship company to be in receipt of a subvention from both Departments without either of them being aware of the payments made by, or the services rendered to, the other.
(e) THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE WORK BETWEEN THE SEVERAL DEPARTMENTS OR AUTHORITIES.

(124) This is another subject which requires more careful examination than I have been able to give to it, and I feel some diffidence in offering any remarks upon it. The branches of administration which come within the purview of the Dominion Government are so numerous and so varied in their nature that it is clearly necessary to adopt some system of grouping; and it is certainly desirable not only that the branches to be dealt with by each Minister should be as nearly cognate as possible, but that all work of the same character should be concentrated in one Department. In the system under which the present distribution has been arranged it is not easy to recognize any underlying principle.

(125) For example, the Department of Agriculture, besides the work which one would naturally expect to find allotted to it, deals with patents, copyright, trademarks, exhibitions, public health and quarantine. The Department of Inland Revenue, the main function of which is collecting the duties of excise, deals also with the inspection of weights and measures, the inspection of gas and electric light, patent medicines, and the adulteration of food and fertilizers. The Department of Public Works maintains harbours, piers and navigation works generally; but the maintenance of the St. Lawrence Ship Channel, a work not very different in character from the other navigation works, is under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. I have already referred to the fact that two Departments, namely, the Post Office and the Department of Trade and Commerce, deal with steamship subsidies, while the latter Department is also charged with duties relating to the inspection of grain which, at first sight, seem more appropriate to the Department of Agriculture.

I am not in a position to make any definite suggestions as to the redistribution of these duties; but I think that the whole subject should receive early consideration by the Government.

(126) In this connection, however, I may perhaps be allowed to make a suggestion with regard to the Departments of Customs and Inland Revenue. Both of them are engaged in work of much the same character and each maintains a staff at various points in the Dominion. The suggestion which I have to make is that these two Departments and their staffs should be amalgamated. I feel sure that the convenience of the public would be consulted by such a change, and that considerable economies could be effected not only in the higher positions but also among the rank and file. Collectors of Customs, with a number of subordinate officials, are stationed at almost all places at which there are Inland Revenue Collectors; and at many of these places, judging from the amount of revenue collected, the duties must be scarcely sufficient to occupy the whole time of the officials. In suggesting this amalgamation I confine myself, so far as the Department of Inland Revenue is concerned, to that portion of its functions which relates to the collection of the excise. Its other duties seem to be more appropriate to the Department of Trade and Commerce.

IV.—GENERALLY THE MANNER IN WHICH THE PUBLIC BUSINESS OF THE DOMINION IS ADMINISTERED.

(127) Under this head I have brought together some miscellaneous points which have suggested themselves to me in the course of my inquiries and which could not conveniently be dealt with under any of the foregoing sections of this Report.

(i) The development of the natural resources of the country.—The Dominion of Canada is peculiarly fortunate, in comparison with other countries, in the wealth of its natural resources; but, notwithstanding what has already been done in this connection, I feel some doubt whether adequate steps have been taken for preserving and developing these resources for the benefit of the nation as a whole.
In laying down a policy to be adopted in such matters questions of great complexity will arise which must be treated from a comprehensive point of view and which require for their elucidation the highest technical and professional skill which can be made available.

The carrying out of the policy when decided on, and the execution of the necessary works must, of course, be left to the particular Department dealing with the matter in hand. This departmental autonomy is necessary for administrative purposes, and must clearly be maintained; but it has two drawbacks. In the first place it results in questions being dealt with in a fragmentary or piecemeal fashion without sufficient consideration of all their various aspects; and in the second place, the technical officers of the Departments, being mainly occupied with the projects and business of the moment, have not sufficient time to deal in a deliberate manner with all the problems involved, many of which do not directly concern their own Department and may consequently be lost sight of altogether.

For example, almost every waterway may be considered from at least two points of view. It may be utilised either for purposes of navigation or for the purpose of the production of power. These two objects may, and probably will, be antagonistic to each other. It may happen that the Department dealing with one is not the Department dealing with the other; and in that case one or both of the Departments will in all probability be found to be acting independently. Yet it is clear that a sound judgment can only be formed on a careful balance of all the considerations affecting the subject.

By the appointment of the Conservation Commission, under an Act passed in 1909, the first step was taken towards a comprehensive treatment of these important questions; and I understand that some progress has been made with the work. But I venture to think that it is necessary to define with greater precision the objects to be aimed at; and that the Commission is not adequately equipped with the expert assistance without which the best results cannot be achieved. I notice that the whole cost of the staff for the current year does not amount to $25,000. Moreover, the size of the Commission (32 members) seems to me inconveniently large for practical purposes.

I think that a more suitable body for the purposes which I have indicated would be a small permanent Commission of three, or at most five, members, who should devote their whole time to the work, and who should be assisted by a staff of the best experts procurable either in Canada or elsewhere. Their functions should be (a) to initiate and work out—but not to execute—schemes for the utilisation in the future of the natural resources of the country; (b) to examine and report upon every scheme affecting these resources, whether promoted by the Government or by private parties, before it is sanctioned by Parliament; and (c) to train up a body of technical experts who could be transferred, as opportunity offered, to the permanent service in any Department in which they were required. The Commission would in short be a thinking, planning, advising, and training body, with no executive functions. It should be directly responsible to and under the general control of the Prime Minister.

(ii) General control of the public service.—In paragraph 103 I called attention to the want of some co-ordinating authority with power to deal with the staff and organisation of the different Departments so as to secure the application of uniform principles and methods; and in paragraph 118 I suggested that the Department of Finance should be charged with this duty. I attach importance to this recommendation because I feel sure that many of the defects in the existing system are attributable to the want of such an authority. But I think that its functions might usefully be extended to certain other matters in which general control is desirable:—such as the modification within certain minimum and maximum limits of the prescribed scales of salary; the number and character of the situations which may be filled under section 21 of the Act of 1908; exchanges and transfers between different Departments or different branches of the service; the hours of work in the several Departments; the amount of ordinary and sick leave to be allowed; the keeping of attendance books, &c. Some of these are now regulated by statute, but it appears to me that they are matters which could be more conveniently dealt with by administrative action, which enables such uniformity as is desirable to be more readily enforced, and at the same time permits of exceptional treatment when required.

(iii) Salaries.—The question of salaries has not been specifically referred to me, and even if it had been, I do not consider myself competent to make definite recommendations on the subject without more knowledge than I possess of the various conditions affecting it, such as the cost of living in this country and the effect of the competition of other forms of employment. But I may perhaps be allowed to make the following observations.

The provisions in the Civil Service Acts with regard to classification and scales of salary are, as I have suggested in paragraphs 119 to 122, wanting in flexibility. I think it would be more satisfactory if, while minima and maxima were prescribed by statute, the actual scales were left to be settled, as occasion required, by the Departments concerned, with the approval of the Finance Department. For example, it does not seem to me necessary that all officers who are placed in Subdivision A of the First Division should proceed as a matter of course to the maximum of $4,000. Having regard to the large number of administrative officers in this subdivision the maximum appears to be unnecessarily high in many cases, if compared with the salaries of the Deputy Heads, who rank immediately above them, and with the principal technical and professional officers who are usually placed in this class. On the other hand, while the normal salary of the Deputy Heads is $5,000, it is clear that some of these positions involve much greater responsibility than others. If $5,000 is a suitable remuneration for the greater number of these situations, I think that in some cases this amount should be considerably increased. The same remark applies to the higher professional and technical officers, many of whom are paid on the same scale as administrative officers performing duties of much less importance. It is clear that the best professional and technical skill should be at the disposal of the Government, but this can only be attained by the payment of salaries approximating to those which are received by professional men of equal eminence in outside employment.

I desire also to offer one suggestion with respect to the scale of salary prescribed for the Third Division. If it is intended to adhere to the principle laid down in the Civil Service Act of 1905 under which there is no outlet from this division into the Second Division except by open competition or the method prescribed in section 26 (2) of the Act, I think that the maximum of Subdivision A of the Third Division might well be increased to $1,500, and in the case of specially meritorious officers with not less than, say, twenty-five years' service, even as far as $1,800. If the Third Division is to be kept rigidly fenced off from the Second Division as the Act contemplates, and as is, I think, desirable, it is necessary that the maximum salary attainable in that branch of the service should be fairly high, and that there should be a few prizes in it, in order to attract candidates who will be content to make their career in it. For this purpose a maximum of $1,500, with a rise to $1,800 in special cases, does not appear to me to be excessive.

(iv) The Drafting of Government Bills.—Under present conditions no single authority seems to be responsible for seeing that uniform methods, language, and principles are observed in the preparation of Government measures. I think that this is a serious defect. While there is no objection to each Department drafting its own measures, it is highly desirable that all should be subjected to examination by some co-ordinating authority with a view to the application of common principles of construction and interpretation.

(v) Accounts.—The forms of account kept by the various public Departments do not appear to be designed on any uniform plan. The Governor in Council, on the report of the Treasury Board, has power, under section 12 of the Finance and Treasury Board Act, to prescribe the manner in which each Department of the Public Service shall keep its accounts; but this power does not appear to have been exercised up to the present time. Uniformity in the system of account-keeping is a matter of some importance; and I think it would be well if the subject were taken into consideration at an early date. Probably the most convenient procedure would be for a committee consisting of a representative of the Auditor General’s Department and a representative of the Finance Department to examine the various systems at present in use, and then prescribe one uniform system for the whole service.

(vi) Medical Referee.—In paragraph 96 I suggested the appointment of a medical referee to examine the certificates of ill health put forward in support of applications for superannuation. I think that the functions of such an official could be usefully extended so as to include the examination of certificates of ill health in support of applications for leave of absence. If such an examination were instituted an appreciable number of the certificates would in all probability be found to require reconsideration.

(128) In the earlier portions of this Report I have indicated the important points which appear to require attention in connection with the organisation of the public service; such as the amount of routine business transacted by Ministers both in Council and in their Departments; the necessity for a closer control over the expenditure; the practice of transacting business by oral discussion rather than by correspondence; the want of a proper classification of the duties and staff in the several Departments; the appointment and promotion of officials on political grounds rather than on merit; and the establishment of a system of retirement.

But of all the topics on which I have touched the two which appear to me to be the most important are first, the relief of Ministers from routine and administrative duties so that they may be set free for the consideration of policy; and secondly, the improvement of the organisation and personnel of the Public service so that it may be in a position to cope efficiently with the business of the country, not only in the present, but in a future which is day by day developing additional work and fresh responsibilities.

I desire to urge as strongly as I may that for the creation and maintenance of an efficient Civil Service three essential conditions are required:—

(1) The best material in the country must be attracted into it and induced to remain there.

(2) To this end the service must be so regulated as to provide a permanent career in which promotion will depend on individual merit exhibited in the daily performance of duty.

(3) It follows from this that the mutual relations of Ministers and Civil Servants alike must be conducted with a loyal and single-minded devotion to the public service, from which all considerations dependent on the political views of individuals should be wholly excluded.

Whether and how far it is possible to realise these conditions it is not for me to say. But I feel confident that, until they are realized, the Public Service will not be such as the Dominion is entitled to expect, or such as is essential for the proper transaction of its business.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

G. H. MURRAY, RETURN

LOUIS CODERRE.
Secretary of State.

At Government House, Victoria, B.C.,
The 24th of March, 1913.

Sir,—I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, copy of a Minute of Council, dated the 19th instant, containing a resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly during the late session referring to the payment to British Columbia of an additional grant of $100,000 for a period of ten years, as an adequate settlement of the claim of this province for special treatment, and urging the Dominion Government to take steps to bring about a fair and adequate settlement of this matter.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) GORDON HUNTER, Administrator.

The Honourable
The Secretary of State,
Ottawa.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Copy of a Report of a Committee of the Honourable the Executive Council, approved by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor on the 19th day of March, 1908.

The Committee of Council submit for approval of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor the undermentioned Resolution of the Legislative Assembly, namely:—

'Whereas, the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, by an Address signed by the Speakers of the Senate and Commons of Canada, on the 26th day of April, 1907, did petition the King's Most Excellent Majesty to cause to be laid before the Imperial Parliament a measure to make certain amendments to the scale of payments to be made by Canada to the several provinces of the Dominion, under Section 118 of "The British North America Act, 1867," or by or under the terms or conditions upon which any other provinces were admitted to the Union, and praying that such amended scale of payments should be a final and unalterable settlement of the 67th—1 amounts to be paid yearly to the several provinces of the Dominion for their local purposes and the support of their Government and Legislatures; and

‘Whereas by “The British North America Act, 1907,” passed by the Imperial Parliament to make further provision with respect to the sums to be paid by Canada to the several provinces of the Dominion, it is enacted inter alia, that

"An additional grant of one hundred thousand dollars shall be made yearly to the Province of British Columbia for a period of ten years from the commencement of this Act,” and

‘Whereas this grant of one hundred thousand dollars a year for ten years was intended by the Dominion Parliament as a settlement of the claim of British Columbia for special treatment at the hands of the Dominion of Canada, as stated by the Prime Minister of Canada in the Dominion House of Commons on March 25, 1907, and as also appears by the proceedings of the conference between members of the Government of Canada and of the various Provincial Governments at the city of Ottawa, in the month of October, 1906, and

‘Whereas the Legislative Assembly of the Province of British Columbia, by a resolution passed on the 25th day of March, 1907, declared that:—

"The proposed additional allowance of one hundred thousand dollars annually for ten years, as compensation for the recognized claims of British Columbia, is inadequate, and cannot be accepted as a final and unalterable settlement”; and

‘Whereas said “British North America Act, 1907” does not make final and unalterable said amended scale of payments to the province, and cannot affect the right of future negotiations between the province and the Dominion, with reference to said recognized special claim of British Columbia;

‘Therefore, be it resolved, that this House, adhering to the position that said grant of one hundred thousand dollars annually for ten years is inadequate, affirms its right to further urge on the Dominion Government that steps be taken to bring about a fair and adequate settlement of the recognized claim of British Columbia for special treatment at the hands of Canada; and

‘That an humble address be presented to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, praying him that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to His Excellency the Governor General in Council.’

The Committee advise that a copy of this Minute, if approved, be forwarded to the Honourable the Secretary of State.

(Sgd.) FRED. J. FULTON,
Clerk of the Executive Council.

The Committee of Council submit for the approval of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor the undermentioned resolution of the Legislative Assembly, namely:—

‘Whereas by a resolution passed on March 7, 1908, this House declared that the grant of $100,000 annually for ten years, provided by the “British North America Act, 1907," to be paid to this Province, is inadequate as a settlement of the claims of British Columbia for special treatment at the hands of Canada; and

WHEREAS this House, affirmed in said resolution its right to further urge on the Dominion government that steps be taken to bring about a fair and adequate settlement of the recognized claim of this province; and

WHEREAS, it appears from the report of Hon. Mr. R. McBride, Hon. W. J. Bowser and Hon. W. R. Ross, a delegation from the Government of British Columbia to Ottawa in November, 1911, that, in response to their representations, the Dominion Government is prepared to appoint a Commission, as requested in a memorandum submitted to the Dominion Government by the Hon. W. R. McBride on October 9, 1906, to investigate the merits of the claim made by this province; such Commission to be composed of three persons of eminent repute, one Commissioner to be named by the Dominion, one by the Province, and the third by agreement of the two Commissioners, or failing such agreement, by the Secretary of State for the Colonies:

Therefore, be it resolved, that this House endorses the course taken by said delegation, and is of the opinion that such Commission be appointed at an early date; and that an humble Address be presented to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor requesting that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Honourable the Secretary of State at Ottawa.'

The Committee advise that a copy of this Minute, if approved, be forwarded to the Honourable the Secretary of State.

The interests of Canada in respect of immigration will be safeguarded and your Government will be consulted with regard to considerations specially affecting British Columbia.

Where Underwriters quote a rate on Hulls, 10% and 5% is usually allowed, 10% to the shipowner, and 5% to the broker.

In certain cases change in policy conditions account for change in rates, these are affected by a variety of conditions, ownership, new ships, &c.

Insurance not covered by Underwriters is undertaken by an Indemnity club, a mutual association of ship owners who take certain risks, such as under 3%, accidents to crew, &c.

Difference in rates some times occur through competition between Underwriters.

Extract of letter from Willis Faber & Co., respecting tramps:

"The extra rate generally charged on tramp steamers for one round voyage "to the St. Lawrence in the summer has been 21s., subject to warranty of sailing "from the St. Lawrence not later than 30th September. For later sailings "anything up to 3gs% extra has been paid according to the steamer and the "lateness of the sailing. It is not possible for us to tell you anything in the "shape of a fixed scale of rates, each case being treated on its merits. Such "tramp steamers as we have been able to trace having had extra premiums "paid on them, made voyages not to the River, but to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. "The objective point of such steamers is generally Chaleur Bay or some other "place in the Canadian Provinces where wood cargoes are to be obtained."

RETURN

To an Order of the House of Commons, dated the 9th December, 1912, for a copy of all papers, documents, letters, &c., between the Government of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia for the past twelve months relative to the matter of preferential tariff arrangements between the said two countries.

LOUIS CODERRE,
Secretary of State.

Office of the Commissioner of Commerce,
Ottawa, January 4, 1913.

Dear Mr. Tudor,—With reference to former correspondence, I beg leave to say that, as at present advised, I shall leave Canada for New Zealand on February 19, and will take part in the deliberations of the Dominion Royal Commission, first in New Zealand and afterwards in Australia, reaching the latter country about the last of March.

Whilst engaged in that work I shall be able to have an informal conference with you and members of your Government with reference to possible preferential arrangements between Canada and Australia, and at the conclusion of the proceedings of the Dominion Royal Commission in June, will be able to devote such time as is necessary exclusively to our negotiations.

I will keep you informed as to my movements and the time when I shall arrive in Melbourne.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) GEORGE E. FOSTER.

Hon. Frank Tudor,
Minister of Commerce,
Melbourne, Australia.

Office of the Commissioner of Commerce,
Ottawa, December 11, 1912.

Dear Mr. Tudor,—I have your letter of November 1st, and thank you for the same.

I am glad to know that the contingency of elections will not prevent a full discussion of the question of reciprocal trade, and I thank you for the assurance of welcome and good-will.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) GEORGE E. FOSTER.

Hon. F. G. Tudor,
Minister of Commerce.
Melbourne, Australia.

94—1
DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND CUSTOMS, COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA,
MELBOURNE, NOVEMBER 1, 1912.

DEAR MR. FOSTER,—I received with pleasure your note of 26th September last, intimating your contemplated visit to Australia.

Whilst you will arrive here during the usual turmoil of our general elections, that feature will not interfere with our opportunity for full discussion of the question of reciprocal trade—a subject which both our governments are keenly interested in, and which, if successfully and wisely consummated, must prove of substantial benefit to Canada and Australia.

You may be sure of a warm welcome, and that my colleagues and myself will endeavour to make your stay in Australia pleasant and enjoyable.

I have given your message to Mr. Fisher, who joins me in reciprocating good wishes.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) FRANK G. TUDOR.

The Hon. George E. Foster,
Minister of Trade and Commerce,
Ottawa, Canada.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF COMMERCE,
OTTAWA, SEPTEMBER 26, 1912.

DEAR MR. TUDOR,—I was on the point of writing you when I received advices from our Mr. Ross that your Government has decided not to introduce any tariff legislation at the present session of your parliament. This action was not unexpected by me as I knew the difficulties of bringing down important and controversial legislation towards the dissolution of Parliament.

It soon became apparent to me, as it no doubt did to you, that there were great difficulties in the way of conducting tariff negotiations at such long distances, and these, in the case of Canada and Australia, were enhanced on account of the nature of the products to be interchanged. I think, however, that it would be to the advantage of both countries that personal conference should take place when we can talk over freely and far more thoroughly the various articles to be included in our proposed arrangement. So far as at present advised, I expect to be in Australia not much latter than the middle of April and to remain there for some considerable time. I hope that by that time your elections will have been over, and that we shall be able to sit down and give thorough and sympathetic consideration to the whole subject of our commercial relations, and I do not have any doubt that we shall arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

The assurances of your premier and yourself as regards your desire and sympathy to that end are amply sufficient to justify the hope that I have expressed, and you may rest assured that Canada is none the less sympathetic than your Commonwealth.

Kindly remember me to Mr. Fisher and accept my assurances of regard and esteem.

Yours sincerely,

Mr. W. D. Scott,
Superintendent of Immigration,
Ottawa.

Sir,—In conforming with your instructions, I have in the course of a trip to Europe last winter, studied on the spot the question of immigration from France and Belgium to Canada. I left on January 11, and returned on April 23, after having spent three weeks in Liverpool, Birmingham and London, one week in Belgium and eight weeks in France. My object in going first to England was to acquaint myself as much as possible with the processes of propaganda employed by the Canadian agents in that country, in order to judge whether, and to what extent, they could be applied in France and Belgium. My relatively short stop in Belgium is due to the fact that I did not observe in that country any of the difficulties that, in France, seem at first sight to hinder emigration to Canada, and moreover being obliged by sickness to come back by Havre, I could not as I had wished, return to Anvers, to make a complimentary sojourn, with your agent, Mr. de Coeli, of a few days in the Flanders and the official centre of Brussels.

In submitting to you now this report of my inquiry, I beg to assure you that uncontrollable circumstances did not permit me sooner to accomplish this duty, I also pray you to note that, leaving aside, of course, my personal opinion in the principle itself of encouragement to immigration I have, in this work, placed myself in the viewpoint of the Government, which, if I am not mistaken, is the opportunity to attract to Canada, by all legitimate means possible, the greatest number of corporally and mentally sane subjects, capable of adapting themselves to Canadian life.

It did not belong to me to reopen the question of the value of the Belgium and French settler in Canada, after the declarations made in different occasions by the Immigration officers.

Your predecessor, Mr. Smart, in his report of 1907, declares that 'the French and Belgian farmers are amongst the best that we can bring to Canada.'

Mr. J. Obed Smith, your present general agent in England, but then Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg, and in that capacity, entrusted with the direction and superintendence of immigrants in the western provinces, writes in 1907:—

'The great majority of French and Belgian immigrants are farmers... These settlers are very successful and thrifty.'

We read in a previous report of Mr. Smith:—

'The striking feature of the year is the arrival of a great number of French emigrants with their families. I am happy to report that we have been able to procure them employment with good wages. They willingly accept the work that is offered, specially from their countrymen, and they are anxious to learn and save the money required to acquire a farm for their own account. I am glad to say that anywhere in western Canada the French and Belgian are very successful. The energy and ingenuity which they apply to their work characterizes their farming operations.'

Mr. J. Bruce Walker, formerly general agent in England, who succeeded to Mr. Smith, at Winnipeg, writes in 1909:—

'The French and Belgian emigrants who came here last year were the best class, as they were nearly all farmers they accepted service on farms, or took lands for their own accounts.'
In 1911 the same officer, referring to the French, Belgian, Swiss, German and Scandinavian emigrants, in the above order, says, 'These people are an unusually good class, and accept work at agriculture with great readiness.'

What could I add, but that the Belgian and French farmers by their perfect knowledge of mixed farming and soilling will be specially precious in a country like western Canada, where the cultivating of the soil is still in an elementary state, and that the French and Belgian workers, the most skilled and industrious of all Europe, would be an inestimable acquisition for our young industry, specially in the west. Belgium with a population of nearly eight millions and a territory about the size of some counties of Quebec, has only one colony, whose white population is not over fifteen hundred souls, after the most intelligent and persevering efforts made in modern times, for its settlement and exploitation. I met at Antwerp, on his way to Harwich, a young Belgian, who was going as agent for a commercial firm of Liege, to establish himself in Kantanga, presently the only region of the Belgian Congo, wherein white people can reside. This young man was going to Harwich by boat, from Harwich to Southampton by rail, from Southampton to Cape by steamer, from the Cape to Broken Hill by rail, through Bouloungoro, from Broken Hill to the Kantanga in a cart drawn by oxen, that means with a half a dozen transhipments, and either by boat, rail or cart, a five weeks' trip costing for second class everywhere, except in the oxen drawn cart, four hundred dollars. He could have gone by Suez and through eastern Africa, but his patrons, all reckoned did not see any saving by it.

How many common people, servants, peasants, workmen, mechanics, tank-workers could afford a five weeks' trip of four hundred dollars, to try and try only to improve their condition? Is it not evident that the virtual impossibility of the return, in case of failure, will always impede the immigration of these different classes, with one which no serious settlement is possible? The Congo shall some day, perhaps, be accessible to white people's activity, although many even in Belgium doubt it, but it seems that, for the present, public officers and traders only can find any profit in it. The bulk of Belgian emigration at the present moment directs its steps towards the north of France. It is reckoned that every year more than one hundred thousand Belgians cross the frontier to work all the harvest in the French provinces, but thousands of them remain in France, in departments where not only the price of land is higher than anywhere in Canada, except in the immediate vicinity of large towns and cities, but where the attachment to the land being stronger than here, it is more difficult, even at a higher price to acquire a large domain. The day is near when Belgium, in spite of its economic regime and social institutions which make pauperism unknown in that nice country, will no longer be able to nourish all its population, do what she might, and will have to resign itself to let tens of thousands of its children migrate to foreign countries. All the leading men which I have met are of opinion that Canada could easily draw the most part of that emigration. The committees named 'Expansion Mondiale,' sitting at Mons in 1905 during the Liege exhibition, adotped a resolution to the effect that Belgian youths should preferably emigrate to our country. In the high commercial schools, as the Saint Ignace Institute, at Antwerp, they already and very properly teach the economic geography and history of Canada.

France with a less dense population, with births scarcely equal to deaths, a more exacting military service, still differs from Belgium in the fact that it does not lack colonial territories, and itself needs farm labourers. Nevertheless the difference is not as great as it appears at first view. Although France has always been and will always be in need of labourers on any point of its territory, and for any of its industries, it does not follow that it can or even ought to, hold its people by force. In England also, which after all does not suffer by it, emigration is strongly objected to by the large agriculturists.
I refer you on this point to the testimony of Mr. John McLennan, now agent at Birmingham, who wrote on March 31, 1911, from Aberdeen, where he was then stationed: ‘Some of the large farmers and employers of labour are opposed to our work.’

The wish for, I should say the need of, property which cannot be better fulfilled than in the colonies, is perhaps the more noted feature of the French. In France as anywhere else, the imposition of burdens more and more heavy on the ratepayers, that is in short to all for the maintenance of civil and military institutions, induces, a great many to seeking elsewhere a political regime, more favourable to individual efforts. Finally, under a Government so strongly centralized and ruled by ideas, there will always be a portion of the population which will not put up with the social or religious theories of the men in power. Here are as many causes which might, by a free action, largely increase emigration. It is not to be wondered that the French people do not emigrate more to their own colonies. While in Canada, specially in central Canada, commonly called the Canadian West, the cultivation of lands gives profit the very first year, the possible cultures in Algeria or Morocco, not to speak of other countries where difficulties, though of other kinds are not less, only become profitable after several years, from which it follows that the first expenses are lower in our country. There are now two hundred thousand French in the Argentine Republic. They have settled there, because the Argentine, contrary to nearly all the French colonies, is a hospitable and generous land, to the poor settler and for the white settler, what the English in their admirable language call it ‘a poor man’s and a white man’s country.” With natural resources, as abundant and more varied, and a French population ten times more considerable, Canada in spite of its colder climate, which nevertheless all the Europeans endure wonderfully well, should attract at least as much as the French emigrant. It is to be noted that, far from opposing emigration to Canada, the societies which private initiative has created in France these late years for French colonial or commercial expansion, have rather favoured it. Such is the case of the Dupleix Committee, as also of the Committee France-Amérique, a section of which existing at Montreal has just, after a few years of silence, set actively to work. The Canadienne, created at Paris ten years ago by French people, has no other object than to make known in France, by means of lectures and publications the advantages of farming colonization in our country.

There follows a statement of Belgian and French emigration from 1900-1901 inclusively to last year:—

*Nine months only.

In order to ascertain whether this double current could be increased it will, perhaps be useful to see to what extent the means employed by the Canadian Government in England are applied or could be applied in Belgium and France.
In the British Isles our work of propaganda comprises:—

(a) The services of district agents, directed by a chief agent, located at London, who acts under the instructions of the general manager or Superintendent of Immigration at Ottawa. In 1911 there were eight of these district agents (that is one for every five million people), and the chief agent, Mr. Obed Smith, in his annual report of 1910 and 1911 earnestly asks the appointment of two more, one (speaking Welsh) for Wales, and the other for England. Each has his own staff and office.

(b) The delegations of Anglo-Canadian settlers, spread over the English territory according to their original place. Those farmer delegates are naturally chosen amongst the most intelligent and successful. They come to England in the fall and return in the spring of the year. Thirty-eight men sent in 1910-1911.

(c) Illustrated lectures.—Four hundred and fifty more delivered last winter by the government agents at a cost of $50 each, and many more yet by agents of Canadian transportation companies, one of these, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, has quite a host of lecturers. teachers, clergymen, and private individuals, who wish to deliver lectures on Canada, are furnished free of cost with views and a lantern. Add to this the more intimate and familiar talk of the farmer delegates to groups gathered by them.

(d) Advertisement and newspaper articles.—This item has cost about $50,000 in 1911, not including the many special editions of Canadian newspapers distributed in England. Half of that sum has been spent directly by Ottawa with the other half, our London agent has published advertisements in six hundred newspapers, the most part of which, predisposed in favour of Canada by this consideration, gratuitously inserted notices, agricultural information, and even original articles on our country. I am informed by Mr. Smith that the number of newspapers will be increased this year from six hundred to one thousand, then the whole English territory will be reached by our publicity operations. The agricultural information is inserted preferably in the country newspapers which are generally published on fair or market days. There exists in the London office, under the active and intelligent direction of Mr. Just, a publicity department through which our chief agent can at all times and at a moment impress upon English opinion.

(e) Premium to navigation companies' agents, for certain classes of emigrants, farmers, farm servants, &c., this premium is not paid without discernment, the steamship agents are periodically visited, for two reasons; first, to stimulate those who lack initiative, and secondly, to punish those who might abuse the public, and specially the labour man. In his report of 1911, Mr. Smith insists on the insufficiency of his inspection staff and the urgent necessity of increasing it.

(f) Free distribution of literature.—In 1911, the Government printed or bought, for his English agencies, 1,721,675 copies of maps, pamphlets and newspapers, of which 1,150,570 copies were sent to Liverpool where the distribution office is 'Nevertheless,' says Mr. Smith in his report of 1911, 'the demand for literature has been so great that at times we have been obliged to have small extra editions of the pamphlets printed here.'

All the schools are provided with maps and all pamphlets are sent to the teachers. The literature is addressed by mail to farmers, and farm servants which we cannot reach otherwise. If you add the maps, pictures, provincial, municipal or even individual publications, you will have an idea of the part played by literature in our operations.

(g) Exhibitions.—Apart from the great national, imperial or international exhibitions, as those which were held these late years at Glasgow, Cork, London, the permanent exhibition as at Crystal Palace, the participation agricultural shows, and the exposition of natural and agricultural produce which is made in its offices and in the steamship agencies, Canada makes use, since a few years, of circulating, or rather calling exhibitions. Two large automobile lorries (trucks), and several horse-drawn vehicles, loaded with farm produce, go from fair to fair, from market to market, stopping on public squares along the way, the driver addressing crowds, and distributing to them literature with samples of products, that is, it seems, one of the most efficacious mode of advertising.
sessional paper no. 95

(h) Co-operation of public and private assistance bureaux.—On 2,048 subjects, introduced by these in 1911 our agents have accepted 1,378.

(i) Periodic trips of agents and lecturers to Canada to allow them to provide themselves with documents and to obtain information by sight.

(j) Spreading of precise information referring to the wants of farm and domestic labourers in Canada.—This information gathered on the spot by agents of the Department of the Interior, which could be purveyors of labour, is forwarded to the chief agent at London, who communicates it to his subordinates, to the steamship agents, to the assistance and employment bureaux. There are in Ontario 88 of these agents and 16 in the English sections of Quebec. During my stay in London, Mr. Smith showed me a circular which he had just received from the Department containing a recapitulation, according to the reports of these agents, of the wants of labour in thirty-nine localities of Ontario and in one of Quebec, for the following spring season. Those demands formed an army of over seven thousand, comprising a great number of families and a high proportion of unskilled labour. Mr. Smith, in communicating the circular to the steamship agents, wrote them that they could conclude from it the assurance that the department would look to the placing of all the emigrants in equally good situations, should they be too numerous for a stated place.

Those are in short, the means by which Canada has been able to increase its immigration from England, from 11,810 to 123,013 during the ten years period from 1900-01 to 1910-11, when for the first time it exceeded American immigration. If I refer to them here, it is only to demonstrate that the success of an immigration campaign specially depends on publicity, notwithstanding the primary dispositions of the people concerned. In proof of this statement I could also cite Australia. Up to those late years emigration from England to Australia was reckoned by the hundreds. Five years ago that colony was yet less known, and less favourably looked upon in London than was Canada thirty years ago. In 1909-10 Canada received 67 per cent of English emigration, and Australia 12-8 per cent only, in 1911-12 Canada 65 per cent and Australia 19-5 per cent, last year Canada 54-9 per cent and Australia 28-2 per cent, and it is expected that Australia will equal Canada this year, or at least next year. I could still mention New Brunswick, which was virtually receiving no emigrants four years ago, and which, through the opening of a particular agency in London, received three thousand last year.

It would not be just to say specially after the exhibition of Liege and Brussels, that we have done nothing in Belgium but what we have done there so little answered to the exigencies of the situation that it is not surprising to see that the annual immigration from that country reach the figure of 1,463.

In order that the great exhibitions of 1905 and 1909 could have much influence on emigration, it would have been necessary.

1st. That your department should have been entirely free to give information to visitors through its own agents. Now I am told by your agent at Antwerp, Mr. Treau de Coeli, that on both occasions the Canadian Commissioner, Mr. Hutcheson declined to adjoin him to his staff, which, belonging to the Department of Agriculture, had not stayed long enough in Belgium to know the people, and anybody could not but have made a very summary study of the emigration problem.
2nd. To supplement these exhibitions by a systematic work in proportion with the endeavours made towards the same. Now, referring only to the four last years, here follows the detailed budget of the Anvers agency:

*Approximately.

Add to that the cost of printed matter received from London, Ottawa, Brussels (balance from the exhibition), and also from Paris, viz., 38,800 copies in 1908-1909, 8,600 copies in 1909-1910 and 18,575 copies in 1910-1911.

With these modest resources the agent:

(a) Delivers personally fifteen to twenty lectures during each winter.

(b) Causes the teachers to deliver about the same number to their pupils, and with the aid of information and material furnished by himself, these are generally repeated in the evening before classes of adults. Let me say by the way that the Belgian Congo is, except Canada, the only colony to which the teachers give a particular attention.

(c) Publishes monthly in French and Flemish four thousand in each language of a small newspaper, four pages 12-inch x 16, entitled 'Canada West'.

(d) Forward literature, including the Canada West, by mail to eight or nine thousand teachers, to steamship agents, &c.

(e) Answer by letter or verbally to every demand of information.

(f) Insert plain notices in 62 Belgian (Welsh and Flemish) and 28 Dutch newspapers.

This work, though praiseworthy, does not after all differ much from that done in the first years of our agency, established in 1898. It is always the same routine, conscientiously followed. On certain points, there is even a step backward, for there was a time when our agent used to deliver an average of two or three lectures per week.

The present agent is intelligent, conscientious and well thought of, his knowledge of four languages, viz., French, English, Flemish, and Dutch, give him a special competency, and he shows a splendid activity in spite of his advanced age (he is, I believe, over 65 years), but his means of action are too restricted. Let us add that not one Anglo-Canadian Steamship Company causes lectures to be delivered, although they have agents in that country, and one of these, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, has a direct line to Antwerp, and it is not to be wondered if he does not obtain better results.

These results are even surprising if we take notice that one-fourth, if not one-third, of the above modest budget is applied to Holland, which depends also on Antwerp agency, and from whence 931 emigrants came to Canada in 1910-1911 against 25 in 1900-1901, and 35 in 1901-1902.

The share for Belgium does not exceed $4,500. I inquired from Mr. de Coeli if any article of the laws of Belgium would prohibit the sending of farmer delegates to that country? He answered me in the negative, in fact one or two came during the winter of 1909-1910, and another one in 1910-1911, his name was Mercier. He came without instructions, hardly saw our agent, and went back the following spring, without having done either good or bad.

The participation of Canada in agriculture fairs? No. The permanent exhibition of Canadian produce in the steamship agencies? No. The co-operation of our agent with the assistance bureaux? No. A more strict control of the steamship agents, with the suppression of the premium as sanction? No. The publication of our wants of farm and domestic labour through the steamship agents? No. The periodic trips of the lecturers and agents to Canada? No. The circulating exhibition? No. The publicity in newspapers? No.

Finally, Mr. de Coeli summed up all his answers to me by stating that nothing in the laws or police regulations of Belgium prohibit us from virtually doing in that country, with certain modifications, the same work as in England, that at a very much lower cost, we could, with regard to population obtain as good results. The repressive action of the Belgian Government is only employed against breach of trust, it is to prevent those abuses, possible in Belgium as in England, that they require from steamship agents about 40,000 francs.

If our own agency, 23 Place de la Gare, bears the modest name of Information Bureaux, it is because the emigration agent, according to the laws of Belgium, is not the person who sells the fare tickets, but the company who employs him, he being simply an employee, and as such, subject to the much smaller bond, and Canada can then prosecute, through authorized agents, all the propaganda operations which it will think fit to do, upon the only condition that it will respect the truth.

The Belgian Government never ignored the existence of our agency, they know that our action does not restrict itself to give information, undesignedly to intending emigrants to Canada, but they have always closed their eyes to it. Mr. de Coeli is on the best of terms with the immigration inspector at the port of Antwerp, Mr. Venescon. The Government themselves, though the Department of Foreign Affairs, published last year, on Canada, for the use of emigrants, a pamphlet, which I hold at your disposal, and which although more concise than most of our own, and less exuberant in its optimism, is very sympathetic all the same. The emigrants have the benefit of special fares on the railways managed by the Government, within a circuit of 100 kilometers from Antwerp, the ordinary tariff is reduced to half in their favour. Argentina has at Brussels an agency which, the same as ours, operates freely.

Does our agent lack initiative? Should he have, and has he made to our chief agent at London, from which he depends, the suggestions required to increase his means of action? Does the responsibility rest on his superior? In order to decide the question I should want information which it was not in my power to obtain. However, some of the official representatives of Canada in London are under the most erroneous impression concerning Belgian emigration. In your letter of January 5, you told me to take instructions from Lord Strathcona while in London. I saw the High Commissioner twice, and each time, he mentioned to me what he called the hostility of European Governments regarding emigration. Each time he related to me that, a few years previously, he had nearly placed himself in a bad fix for having attempted to relieve a Canadian agent arrested by one of those Governments. Each time he advised one, and repeatedly, to be extremely prudent, if I wished not to expose myself to trouble. One would have thought that jail was open for me on my landing in Belgium. The same story was repeated to me at least once, by the secretary of the Commissioner, Mr. Griffith. It was only later, and on the spot, that, having known the very special circumstances the origin and the venerable antiquity of the incident which had so much alarmed the noble Lord, I understood the real importance of those stories. I am far from doubting the good faith of the High Commissioner or of his secretary, I only state that being able, owing to their position, to keep themselves posted day by day, and exactly on the Belgium opinion, they talked of it as if they did not know anything of it.

I also could, on the same subject, note one occurrence in the official relation of Mr. de Coeli with his immediate superior, Mr. Smith.

In 1911, the great socialist paper, The People, inspired by a Belgian who entrusted a few years previously with a particular mission in Belgium, had quarrelled with Mr. de Coeli, engaged in a campaign against Canada. Its articles were reprinted in newspapers of divers opinions, and the reputation of Canada suffered by the fact. Our agent wanted to refute, Mr. Smith dissuaded him from it, saying that, in an emigration campaign, actual work is worth more than controversies, that he, himself, had realized so much in England, by seeming to ignore critics. Apparently Mr. Smith was talking very sensibly, but he was forgetting that, if it is possible with a publicity budget of $5,000 per year to cause to sing the praises of Canada loud enough to silence all critics, it is no more the same with £75 (8375) per year, which is as we remember the publicity budget of the Antwerp agency. And that difference escaped Mr. Smith's mind not because he is against Belgian emigration, we have already seen on the contrary that he is in favour of it (and I make it a pleasure as well as a duty to declare that not often a gentleman gave me such an impression of largeness of his views), but because being entirely absorbed by the gigantic work which he does, and so well, in England, he can not either actively nor knowingly, attend to Belgium. Last fall, the inauguration of the publicity campaign, if we may so call the appropriation of a modest credit of $375, was delayed several weeks on account of a difference of views, between Mr. de Coeli and Mr. Smith about the nature of advertisements to be published.

In order to materially increase Belgium emigration to Canada, it would in my opinion be necessary to:

1st. Separate from Belgium, Holland, a country too different in its interests, its habits and language, and moreover important enough to be attended to by a distinct agency.

2nd. Withdraw Belgium from the control of the London office.

3rd. Increase the budget and make a trial in that country, through active and intelligent agents, well acquainted with the languages and affairs in Belgium, who would themselves as much as possible use the service of the authorized emigration agents, of the propaganda means employed in England, and which are not prohibited by the Belgian Government. Publicity especially, would require a much larger amount. This mode of action, wisely employed, shall give so much more results, as Belgium is one of the countries in the world where newspapers are more spread. Last year there were published in that country 76 daily newspapers, of which 50 in French and 20 in Flemish, 130 large weeklies, of which 80 in Flemish and 50 in French, and about as many local weeklies.

I have said, make a trial through agents, in fact, the Belgian territory could very soon be divided into Antwerp for Flanders and Brussels for Walloony.

Should a consular or commercial agency be appointed in Belgium, there shall be established a close co-operation between it and the emigration agencies. Australia having no agency in Belgium, Canada's operations will be all the more efficient. I shall add that the present staff seems to me insufficiently paid.

With respect to our work in France it has, since a few years, raised in the French official circles, an opposition the cause of which it is urgent to remove. if we do not wish to allow the situation to grow still worse.
Sessional Paper No. 95

On several occasions the French Government by the Department of the Interior entrusted with public security, has highly manifested its dislike about the Canadian agents' work in France.

On June 25, 1909, Mr. Clemencean instructed the prefect to warn the French public of the dangers of emigration to Canada, 'a country where alone farm-servants hiring their services to land owners, and mechanics possessing sufficient means to set up for themselves, can settle under favourable conditions.' And that circular, including many items on the deficiency of roads and railways, 'that want and call for, sectionmen and labourers. The difficulty to sell agricultural products, &c., is itself railway sectionmen and labourers.' The difficulty to sell agricultural products, &c., is itself but the issuing of a circular of February 26, 1886, apparently directed against the agent which the government of Quebec was then sending to France.

On August 21, 1911, Mr. Briand, who had succeeded to Mr. Clemencean, forwarded to the prefects, 'in virtue of his office' a notice which he begs them to insert, without mention of origin, (these words are underlined in the text) and as an ordinary news in the newspaper of the towns and districts where French emigrants are principally recruited, employees, industrial mechanics and farm labourers, for Canada. In that notice it is said—

(a) that, with a very few exceptions, the clerks, the young men of quality, the office employees, meet in Canada, but 'disappointments and failure.'

(b) that, outside of Montreal, if he is not familiar with the English language, and everywhere if he does not belong to the syndicates or 'unions' the foreign mechanics can hardly find work; that moreover the difference in tools almost imposes a new apprenticeship and that, on account of the mode of living the salaries are not as high as they seem at first, in short that 'the mechanics who have slight chances of success are those who are skilled or special labourers, knowing the English language.'

(c) that, seeing the insufficiency of transport accommodation and the difficulty of selling their crops, and also the scarcity of manual labour even the farmers are not always sure to succeed, 'They have the more luck,' says the circular, but yet they have to go to the north-west, and they must be vigourous, experienced, and possess a capital of at least ten thousand francs, and as much as possible, a family who saves them paid labour. They should have initiative, not fear a severe climate and work with perseverance and courage during ten or fifteen years. 'At that price,' adds the notice, 'they would have succeeded in France and suffered much less. And the minister concludes: 'The best French emigration to Canada would still be our directors of enterprises, engineers, &c., and our capital well employed and controlled by a French founded bank.'

A circular of which I have not the exact date, but which goes back to the Combes Ministry in 1905, reads thus:—

'Mr. Prefect, my attention has been several times drawn to the increase of the rural population, specially in the Departments of the South and Savoie and that fact is attributed to increasing emigration of youths.

'Some duly authorized agencies have, in fact, extended their action upon nearly all the territory, and in order to recruit the greatest possible number of labourers intended for different countries of America they most often make an exaggerated or even false description of the advantages to be met in those remote parts. The sub-agents whom they employ do not confine themselves to verbal promises. They also issue hand bills and pamphlets. they even make use of irregular auxiliaries, that is of individuals who do not hold an authentic proxy of an emigration agency only authorized by the Government.
REPORT OF MR. OLIVAR ASSELIN

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Recent acts of illicit recruitment, which I have established to be submitted to the Courts, appear to me of such a nature as to justify a more severe watch in order to prevent the extension of a traffic whose agents would resort to any means to earn the premium allotted to them for each person they can engage.

Whilst insisting that each violation of these instructions should immediately be proved and prosecuted according to law, you will be careful to recommend to the above mentioned officers (under prefects and officers of judiciary police) to quite specially watch posters purporting appeals to French labourers to emigrate and to refuse authorization to post up placards where agents would entitle themselves otherwise than agents authorized by the French Government, the proof of which they would have previously to furnish.

Finally, you shall also recommend to the same officers to prohibit distribution of pamphlets appealing to emigrants, they should always refuse permission for such distribution.

There is no reason to except our countrymen from this rule, for it is important to keep them at home where they are useful for farm labour and they may be called to fill the obligations imposed by the recruitment law.

I recommend you at last, Mr. Prefect, to renew to the agents of Emigration police the order to draw up an official report for violation of the law, against any individual who would meddle with emigration operations without being authorized thereto either directly by the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, or through an authentic power of attorney given him by an authorized agency.

At last, as a direct consequence of the campaign made by a portion of the French press against our agency, there was an exchange of diplomatic communication between the French Government and the English embassy, in 1910-11. It is from the above situation that in some Canadian political circles, they have concluded that no emigration propaganda was possible in France, in order to judge intelligently it is necessary:

1st. To admit the absolute right of the French Government to protect its countrymen against breaches of trust by emigration agents (including steamship agents), even without any law to that effect. Now, it does not appear that the object of the above circulars, though containing some errors in point of fact, is anything but the repression of breaches of trust, what we commonly call false representations.

2nd. To acknowledge the truth, which may be or is evidently contained in the circulars and communications of the French Department of the Interior, on the dangers which an inconsiderate emigration from France to our country would present, not only for France, but for Canada itself. Nothing authorizes us to believe that in spite of its quite natural look of Combes, the circular of 1905, which, let it be said by the way, concerns not only Canada, but all the ‘Countries of America’, making some propaganda in France by means of premiums or otherwise, exaggerates the audaciousness, the imprudence, may even the breaches of trust committed by agents at that agitated period of the French life, when the idea of emigration was making such powerful impression on a portion of its nation. One cannot help smiling to-day in reading in the Clemenceau circular that in Canada there are no roads or railways for the farmers, and consequently the sale of farm produce is difficult; that there is ‘no demand here for section men and railway labourers,’ &c. All such assertions being partially true in 1886, but all told of such an amusing archaism in 1906, and so much more in 1912: but, if this may settle things, we will readily go as far as admit the conclusion that in Canada, ‘only farm labourers can settle in favourable conditions’ (see above). At last, if the circular of 1911 shows the gloomy side of the obstacles to agricultural colonization, and if the chances of success of the foreign mechanics, already very good in spite of the obstacles pointed out, cannot but improve in a country wherein, to mention only the building trades, unskilled masons and brick labourers are paid three francs an hour and carpenters as much as two francs, we are, by way of compensation, as much more at ease to admit what is said about office employees, young men of quality, clerks, that after some experiments an unnecessary groping our Government, as in fact Mr. Briand confesses it, dissuades this kind of compensation, may more, advises only farmers emigration.

3rd. To distinguish between the French law and the decrees which complete it, on the one part, and on the other the simple police regulations brought about by the circumstances. The French law on emigration (of course I only cite the essential articles) read as follows:—

Article 1.

No one may undertake the operations of engagement or transportation of emigrants without the authorization of the Minister of Agriculture, Commerce and Public Works.

Article 4.

No vessel intended for the service of emigration may leave port until the captain or the ship owner has obtained a certificate showing that all prescriptions imposed, either by the present law, or by the ministerial law, or by the ministerial decrees and orders edicted in execution of the said law in the interest of the police and of the emigrants, have been complied with.

Article 10.

Any transgression of the Articles 1 and 4 (the latter referring to transportation of emigrants on vessels) of the present law, is subject to a penalty of from 50 francs to 5,000 francs. In case of a second offence in the same year the fine is double.

Any infraction of the regulations of public administration, and of the ministerial decrees and orders issued for the execution of the said regulations and decrees concerning emigration police, is subject to the penalties contained in Article 471 of the Penal Code;—

An executive decree issued on the 9th March, 1861, and still in force, states that the emigration companies or agencies may not be authorized to undertake the engagement and transportation of emigrants only on the condition to furnish a bond which would be fixed by the Minister of Agriculture, Commerce and Public Works, within the limits of 15 to 40,000 francs (Article 1) that the agents whom the authorized companies may employ must be furnished with an authentic power of attorney (Article 4) finally that, the companies shall be held responsible for the acts of their agents.

It may be seen that there is nothing in that law, nor in the decree which forbids the engagement, that is the more direct and interested of all the kinds of incitation to emigration. Even now, Mr. Wallard tells me, all what the law requires is, from the agents, (viz., the steamship companies) a bond of 40,000 francs against transgressions and breaches of trust, and from the sub-agents (viz., the regional or local agents of transportation companies, commonly called steamship agents because they mostly represent steamship companies), a bond of 3,000 francs. The police regulations, issued by the Minister of the Interior, have no other object but to cause the law and the decree to be observed, and, most evidently, cannot go further. The judicial situation of the emigration agent in France and in England, is not then so dissimilar as it has been claimed to be, since the bond is also required in England. And the actual situation, though more different, still offers 'certain analogy,' since in these years, on the initiative of our agent at London, several ticket brokers have been condemned by the English tribunals for want of authorization. The only difference rests in the fact that the English Government dispensed of the bond the official agents of the British Colonies.

4th. To distinguish in reading the above circulars between the authorized and the non-authorized agents.

The necessity of that distinction is evident, of course it would be ridiculous to say that, when the French Government expressly points out to its prefects, repressive action the unauthorized emigration agents, it does not concern those who have furnished the obligatory bond, and that when ordering also the repression of breaches of trust of authorized agents, it does not mean to hinder the honest, carrying on of a trade allowed by the law. Your departments agent in Paris, not having furnished a bond, is not authorized to incite people to emigrate. None of the lecturers delegated by your department to France was any more authorized to the purpose. The acts of such incitement committed by your agents or delegates, either under your instructions or otherwise, were then a violation of the French law and it is not to be wondered at if the French Government after several years of more or less gracious forbearance, has at last made them the subject of diplomatic remonstrances.

5th. To distinguish between the lawful and the unlawful acts of the authorized agents, because a steamship agent has furnished the required bond it does not follow that he is allowed to use all kinds of tricks.

6th. To distinguish, amongst the lawful acts, between the opportune and the inopportune ones. Justifiable or not, judicious or not, the circular of 1905 which has preceded and likely brought on the others, was partly resolved by the religious and political considerations which, not only our agents and delegates, but also some authorized steamship agents, used in their campaign in favour of Canada. About 1904, that is one year after the installation of our agency and in the height of the agitation caused by the law on associations, some French missionaries who had resided in Canada a few years went back to France in order to preach an emigration crusade. They naturally, in their speeches compared to what they were calling, justly or not, the tyranny of the anti-clerical Government to the religious liberty enjoyed in Canada. The Catholic press published their utterances, the anti-Catholic press denounced them, and the Government’s intervention became inevitable. The Minister of the Interior had the law for him, none of our agents being authorized. Amongst the ecclesiastical or religious delegates whose propaganda would have exceeded the judicious if not the legal limits, the Paris agent mentions, for instance, the Rev. F. D. Dumond, the Abbe’s Gaire and Lefloch.

The Paris agency, established in 1903 under the direct authority of your department, placed under the dependency of London in 1905 after the entry of Hon. Mr. Oliver, as Minister of the Interior, and reinstated in its primitive situation of 1908, has undergone so many different influences that it was impossible without a much more thorough investigation, to knowingly allot the responsibility of the present state of things.

Rightly does it seem, however, that the worst causes of its troubles, was precisely those changes of direction unquestionably entailing,—corresponding changes of policy. If we examine its work since the beginning we are struck with the lack of steadiness which marks it. Now, it wants lectures, now it does not want them. Sometimes newspapers advertisements are considered necessary and soon after as dangerous and so forth. Nowhere more than in France it would have been important to previously examine closely the economical and social situation of the country, its laws, the manners and liking of its inhabitants, and then to adopt a well defined line of conduct. Even taking into account the arbitrary part played by the Governments in a Caesarean Republic like France, we feel that our agent, on the contrary has been led, willing or not, now by the command of Ottawa, now by that of London, and now even by the claims of the Canadian political parties, when he was not trying to please everybody.

Our agency had also to bear before the French Government, the responsibility of acts committed in 1907 by one agent of the province of Quebec. I shall quote on that incident the following extract of a memorandum of Mr. Wiallard:—

‘In 1907, the Province of Quebec to which Mr. Wiallard had often times offered to distribute its pamphlets specially drawn up to show the advantages of the said province to French emigration, resolved, not to profit by that offer, but to subsidize an ‘emigration agency’ under the direction of Mr. Deslauriers who came to France to make a propaganda.

‘Mr. Deslauriers was recommended by the Minister of Colonization, the Hon. Chas. Devlin, to Mr. Fabre, then General Commissioner, who, representing the Province of Quebec as well as the Dominion, thought fit to allow Mr. Deslauriers to make his headquarters at the General Commissariat of Canada. Mr. Deslauriers, intimate friend of one of Mr. Wiallard’s assistants, Mr. Geoffrin, published with the latter’s help, at Paris, an emigration pamphlet the text of which was nearly word for word taken from our federal pamphlets, and always using the above mentioned name of ‘Emigration Agency’ which is always prohibited by the French law, gave in the same pamphlet the address of the General Commissariat as the seat of operation.

‘The above act of kindness and, anyway, of difference to the wishes of the Quebec Minister, seems to have disordered Mr. Wiallard’s work in this way that the propaganda thus openly made by Mr. Deslaurier’s violation of the attention of the French Government already so prejudiced against it.

‘After four months of operation without any other result besides that to arouse a recrudescence and accentuation of the ill humour of the authorities of the country, the Federal Government, seeing the irregularity of this situation, enjoined Mr. Fabre to ask Mr. Deslauriers to install his agency elsewhere than in the premises of the General Commissariat.

It is to be noted that then, and ever since his appointment, Mr. Wiallard had his offices at the Commissariat, 10 Rue de Rome, which, in the opinion of strangers, rendered him still more liable for the act of Mr. Deslauriers.

It does not seem either that our agent is entirely free from personal responsibility. He has protested, even in 1907 (see letter of 22 October, 1907) against sending delegates, lecturers who too often, says he, refused or neglected to conform themselves to the French laws and regulations, and the department has continued until 1911 to send every year a couple of laymen or clerical delegates; but assuming that the delegates were truly as hard to train, he does not seem to have himself always followed the line of conduct best adapted to save him from annoyances.

Unable according to the law to exercise any direct action Mr. Wiallard should have, it seems, by keeping himself in the shade so much as possible, looked for, and with still more reason accepted the assistance authorized by the French law.

Now without questioning his good intentions, nor contesting his untiring activity, the persons whom I have been able to consult, among those who take an interest in any way whatever in the matter of emigration to Canada, unanimously told me that Mr. Wiallard constantly neglected such assistance.

That opinion is especially alive in the ‘Canadienne,’ a society which since ten years, through the greatest sacrifices, serves the interests of Canada in France. It is also held, in various measures by the maritime circles.

All the Anglo-Canadian navigation companies have presently in Paris, agencies which are themselves represented in all the districts of France and adjoining countries and though only one keeps a line between France and Canada, all of them, to say nothing of any immediate interest, would gladly contribute to make known a country whose general prosperity shall necessarily have an influence on theirs. The general agent of the Canadian Northern, Mr. Heyek, who makes in central Europe an intensive emigration campaign, tells me that he has in France two thousand sub-agents, out of which six hundred are diligent, that he would with pleasure send them the official publications of Canada, but that Mr. Wiallard never asked him to do so.

While I was in France, a serious difficulty arose between Mr. Wiallard and the ‘Campany General Transatlantique’ which was then organizing, and has since organized a direct line between Havre and Canada. The company, offering to collaborate with our agent, was asking in return the benefit of the premium granted by the Canadian law to all agents without distribution.

Mr. Wiallard declined, invoking a decision of your Department in 1908 given on a previous demand of the same company, and by which, in his mind, the premium had to be reserved to the Allan Company only, as a subsidized company. The question submitted to the Canadian Commissioner, the Hon. Mr. Roy, was referred to me. After examining the correspondence I found out that most evidently the Company General had been refused in benefit of premium in 1908, because then it had no line to Canada.

At that time the intending emigrants were handed a ‘list’ of some authorized steamship agencies, reading thus:—

Currie & Co., Agents of the Allan line (direct service from France to Canada), 2 Pleuvy Street, Havre, or 10 Auber Street, Paris.
Pitt & Scott, 47 Cambon Street, Paris.

Now out of these three agencies, one represents only, and the two others represent mostly the Allan line.

You will find in the Department a letter of Mr. Wiallard, dated March 15, 1912, when it is said:—

‘Personally, I have no doubt that far from complicating the transportation problem, the opening of a new line to Canada will be beneficial to all, specially to Canada. I hope that the Allan people shall keep the favour which they enjoy and which they have earned by their past work, while, on the other side the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, by means of its numerous and strong connections, will bring forth a renewed activity between the two countries.

It was only on my pressing advice and under the threat of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, to provoke from the French Government an intervention which could have been fatal to us, that Mr. Wiallard decided to write that letter, wherein for my part, I would only find fault with the exaggerated care for the Allan line interests, and which after all is but the summing up of what; strange circumstance, our agent was writing to you of his own motion on May 25, 1908.

At least, you would believe, there will remain with our agent the co-operation of the Allan Company. Nevertheless, we do not see anywhere the extraordinary services for which the company might deserve the particular services for which the company might reserve the particular anxiety felt about it. It published a year book on Canada, extracted for the most part from our official publications, and I read in the memorandum already quoted: ‘The Allan Company with its line from Havre to Canada, seems to have given satisfaction to the French public, which has adopted that line to go to Canada.’ But I also read in that memorandum, about the premium, ‘All the work is mostly done by our agents and not by the steamship agencies. The sale of transportation tickets that they (the steamship agents) make to the emigrants is, in large proportion, supplied by Mr. Wiallard agency, and they have no more but to issue the said tickets.’

Mr. Wiallard might answer that, in the whole this extract from his memorandum directed against the premium regime reads thus: ‘All the work is mostly done by our agents and not by the steamship agencies, which have no right to, and do not, use means that they know to be reprehensible.' Which would give to understand that he and his subordinates only may incite to emigration without violating the French law.

Now, Mr. Wiallard does not only thus attribute to himself and his subordinates, powers which he has not, or which in any case he will never be able to exercise, but with the utmost reserve, but. I have already said, and I repeat it, it is the steamship agents, and they alone, who are authorized to engage emigrants.

Save the independent and unfortunately too limited action of the 'Canadienne' that of the steamship agencies which, from Mr. Wiallard's own admission, has been about null, and the direct delegation of a couple of lectures each year by the Department of the Interior after as before 1905, and until 1911 the work of the Paris agency, as far as I have been able to make it up from the diffuse and on some points manifestly incomplete memorandum and the verbal utterances of Mr. Wiallard, may be summed up as follows:—

From 1903 to 1905 under the immediate direction of Ottawa: (a) Lectures in the provinces, specially in Brittany and Savoy by Mr. Wiallard and by French priests delegated by the Canadian Government, these latter combining with their lectures on history and geography, sharp reflection on the French Government in order to the more strongly impressing Catholic audiences.

(b) Distribution of literature by the lecturers.

Advertisements in papers. Mr. Wiallard declares that he obtained from Mr. Sifton, then Minister, and his chief officer, Mr. Smart, all what he asked them.

From 1905 to the middle of 1907, under the direction of Mr. Preston and then Mr. Walker, agents in London, work about null for want of money. Mr. Wiallard hastens to explain that during that period all the agencies were by Mr. Oliver reduced to a congruous portion. He adds:—

'It was so much more easy for Mr. Wiallard to obey the orders of the Department that that era of economy coincided with the efforts of the French Government, by way of circulars to all its officers in order to check the emigration agitation which was then becoming more and more evident owing to the work done by our agent.'

From the middle of 1907 to February, 1908, under the direction of Mr. Walker, and after a trip to Paris, of W. W. Cory, chief officer in the Department of the Interior, and Scott, General Superintendent of Emigration. Publication of advertisements in many papers of Paris and the province 'in order to draw the attention of the public on Canada.' 'Those advertisements,' says Mr. Wiallard, 'were so drafted as to show what class of emigrants were apt to succeed in Canada, and who were those, who, in the contrary, should abstain.' It was also in that period that Mr. Arthur Geoffrion was adjoined to Mr. Wiallard.

From February to September, 1908, under the direction of Mr. Obed Smith, successor to Mr. Walker, work almost null, on account of discussion between Mr. Wiallard and Mr. Smith.

From September, 1908 to 1910, inclusively, after the signature of the Franco-Canadian Treaty of Commerce, and under the immediate direction of Ottawa. Advertisements in newspapers, lectures on economy, geography and history, distribution of wall maps to teachers who agree to give their pupils a lecture on Canada; distribution of atlases to pupils as reward for the best lessons, and of Canadian illustrated postal cards to allow them to correspond with the agency. There were given about five hundred lectures by teachers in 1909-10. 'They do not cost much,' says Mr. Wiallard, 'but the impression on the classes which the Canadian Government wishes more specially to reach was everywhere evident.' The memorandum adds:—

Mr. Wiallard had also asked from the department the authorization for Mr. Geoffrion and Montpetit, connected with the commissariat, to give about fifty familiar talks or lectures before the Chambers of Commerce as also in agriculture schools. Those lectures had a certain success but they entailed rather great expenses.

1911.—Almost complete inaction, imposed by the diplomatic protests of the French government.

1912.—Resumption of the propaganda in school circles, in the month of March after the distribution of 4,500 atlases each containing ten illustrated cards, to as many teachers, with the promise of wall maps to the lecturers and atlases to the pupils, Mr. Wiallard had already obtained five hundred lectures and could count on three hundred more, from then till the holidays. Our agent adds that those lectures are given not only in the classes, but most of the time in presence of the parents, and always in the best desirable circles; that in many cases the pupils make compositions after the lecture.

A work so often interrupted, and so incoherent, cannot evidently bear the fruits which could be expected from a more persistent and better regulated campaign. That it has nevertheless carried the figure of the French emigration to Canada from 431 as it was in 1901-02 up to 2,041 in 1910-11, is the most eloquent answer to be made to those who pretend that a movement of French emigration to Canada is impossible. The figure of 2,041 is even inferior to the true figure, and many French emigrants come to Canada as first passengers, and a certain number of foreign emigrants, who come through Paris are not counted by that agency.

In order to strictly conform to law, the work of our agent, presently, would be reduced to make Canada known by the disinterested, but necessarily cautious, intermediary of the teachers these latter, could not in fact incite to emigration without subjecting themselves to serious annoyances to advertise the address of the agency in the petty adds of a couple of newspapers of Paris, without saying a word of emigration, and to answer verbally or in writing, to applicants for information. It is already something, we must specially appreciate the collaboration, precarious to say the truth as regards the state schools, as it could cease on a nod of the Minister, which Mr. Wiallard has been able to obtain in the body of teachers. Is it to say that we could not do more?

I have already pointed out how we could turn to account the authorization of the steamship agencies for the spreading of information concerning Canada. Allow me, Mr. the General Superintendent, to indicate to you some other steps to undertake or attempt.

A French gentleman, who has been one of the founders of the Canadienne, and who is still one of the leading minds, I should say the souls of this valiant society, and from whom I was asking what he thought our Government might and should do to increase French emigration to Canada, pointed out to me amongst others:—

First. The periodical delegation to France, of French settlers.

On this point at least, my interlocutor was agreeing with Mr. Wiallard. I notice a letter which our agent wrote you on the 22nd October, 1907:—

'Although, for reasons well known to you, you must not send any more agents like those who transiently came here, I believe it would now be most necessary to seriously consider a plan which I have long ago submitted to your department. That plan consists in the sending to France of a dozen delegates chosen one half in the province of Quebec, and the other half in the West, among the French settlers who have succeeded and to whom you would pay a second-class passage from their residing point to the place where they came from. No mission would be entrusted to them. They would go back among their old friends without any other object than to spend there two or three months, that is the best kind of propaganda. Should they persuade some one to emigrate, we could remunerate them by so much per head on condition that the emigrants would go with them. The number of such delegates may vary according to the will of the Department, but to my mind it should be less than twelve. I repeat that, in my opinion, the Department should not grant any salary or travelling expenses of any kind to those delegates, besides the return ticket, as stated above.'

Mr. Wiallard also suggested, in 1908 (see letter of September 23, 1908, to the General Superintendent of Emigration) to send from France to Canada, at the expense of Canada, a delegation composed of about twenty expert agriculturists, directors of agronomic institutes, editors of agricultural papers, &c.

That suggestion, which remained without reply, could easily be carried out, and I believe without giving umbrage to the French authorities. For my own part, I would see but an advantage for our country, if every year an agricultural mission from France to Canada should correspond to the farmers' delegation of Canada to France.

2nd. The exhibitions.—However opportune they may be the permanent exhibitions in the large cities would benefit only the industrial and commercial expansion, and therefore your department would be right in taking no interest in them, they being dependent on your colleague, the Minister of Commerce, on the Chambers of Commerce or the manufacturers and merchants concerned. It would not be the same with single shows, of divers products, natural, agricultural and industrial, installed in the stores of small town merchants on the main street or on the square.
The very low cost of such installation could be divided with the Department of Mines and that of Commerce, who might in return sell permits to Canadian merchants and manufacturers.

The motor-car exhibitions, would have a good effect.—If on fair days, in the large towns an automobile waggon should arrive and display under a tent a Canadian exhibition of all kinds of produce. If at that display one could buy cheap adversising articles; if the farming processes and results were intelligently brought up, there would still be efficacious mode of action. That kind of shows might be organized with the same co-operation as the previous one. Visitors would on demand be given sober, precise, and true information on Canada.

The commercial interests which we have in France would be surprised to justify these steps which yet, and naturally would have to be previously considered with the view of complying to the French laws and regulations, but it is useless to observe that even in the absence of any direct invitations they would also help the emigration cause.

3rd. Utilization of French co-operation. It is not to be forgotten that any Frenchman has a right to make known not only Canada, its history, its geography, its farming and colonization processes, but also, and that by writings, by speech or by direct demonstration, (shows) his own opinion as French citizen, of the benefit which his countrymen might derive from the resources of this country. Shall I add that the Frenchman knows better than we will ever do, the economical and social situation of his compatriots, their temper, the laws and regulations of the country, the intimate disposition of the rulers?

There exists in France societies of lecturers who cover the whole territory and who, for a light remuneration would willingly agree that their lecturers should treat on Canada.

On the guarantee of its disbursements Canadienne which for the last ten years, at its own expense has made propaganda in favour of Canada, could:—

(a) write out, with the collaborators which you design to it, and in the French style (which one would think that the writers or translators of your department have always endeavoured to hurt) quite a library of popular works of Canada, which it would afterwards apply itself to spread into the schools of every grade and nature, official or free, public libraries, reading rooms, and which might also be sold at a very trifling price, in all the bookseller’s shops.

(b) Inform the French public on every occasion by notices in the press, which would be so much easier for the Canadienne that the monthly Bulletin of that society is already an excellent compendium of our national life, and that in France as anywhere else the papers are ordinarily glad to gratuitously insert articles of public interest.

(c) Also publish letters that your agents in Canada would invite French business men and settlers to write to French newspapers—preferably emigrants from the provinces to the papers of their province.

(d) Still improve its Bulletin and spread it gradually through the whole of France.

In the propaganda writings, the illustrated monographies of parishes populated in whole or in part by settlers from France (or Belgium) would occupy an ample place. In fact one could not too much exaggerate the importance of a testimony based on a concluding personal experiment. I met, during my stay in France, in a small group of political and intellectual men specially assembled to talk of our country, a French publicist of great repute, who told me that he had spent several weeks in the western Canada. I was flattering myself in advance to see among us a man who could support my assertions. I was greatly surprised to find him extremely adverse to emigration to Canada. He was pleading the requirements of the French agriculture, and the depopulation of France. But as I was replying to that by the arguments of other Frenchmen, that French agriculture shall always want more hands whatever may be done, and that a larger emigration would perhaps determine a stronger proportion of births, he switched on the deplorable, in his opinion, situation of the French settlers in Canada. He pointed out with a particular bitterness the deceptions and sufferings of the settlers from Montmartre, the individual who has founded that colony had better not appear there any more, or he would be lynched. Being unable to contradict him on the spot I was feeling my surprise replaced by deep humiliation; I could only timidly ask the name of the individual. It was a Frenchman, it appears who had been a municipal councillor at Paris. I recognized by that description one of the officials of our agency, Mr. Foursin. Some days later I accidentally met Mr. Foursin, and in a hurry asked him explanations, ‘It is a curious coincidence,’ said he, ‘the Mayor of Montmartre has just come to Paris. Having gone to Canada with very little money, he now enjoys a nice fortune which allows him to make his annual trip to France. His compatriots are besides all comfortable, deprived of means of communication for some time, they held on all the same, nearly all, if not all, are to-day large land owners.’

I imagine that a good monography of Montmartre, coupled with the testimony of interested settlers would eventually be in France on excellent antidote to the denunciation of our publicist, a true model (if I judge by our first interview) of that class of Frenchman, who, being satisfied to understand colonization as Daudet pretends that they do at Tarascon, are more preoccupied to conform to their theories than their theories to the real facts. That mode of action, inaugurated in France under Mr. Oliver by the publication of a collection of testimonies entitled: ‘Truth about Canada,’ will improve by its expansion and its systematizing, but also to be placed under the care, or at least the patronage of a French society. It was recommended in these words, in August, 1888, in a report of Mr. Foursin, to Father Labelle, then assistant Minister of Colonization of Quebec:

1st. It is possible, contrary to the general opinion to create a serious movement of farmers in France, it suffices for that, to employ the means appropriated to the character and wants of the French peasant.

2nd. All care should be taken to favour at the outset the emigration of one or two good families in a stated locality and to devote attention to the success of these first families, who will afterwards become excellent agents of propaganda.

Therefore, leave with the steamship agents the work which they are authorized to do, subsidize, and at need, organize annual delegations from Canada to France, and from France to Canada. Make use of the inestimable co-operation which is offered to us by the French societies of propaganda in favour of Canada, all processes which we have hitherto neglected and the adoption of which is imperative.

The realization of that programme will be possible only on two conditions.

1st. That the person entrusted with the carrying on of same, shall understand its motive, and not see in it, on the contrary, an arbitrary condemnation of his own part conduct. I think I have already shown how the present agent is mistaken about his powers on certain matters. In a firsh memorandum which he submitted to me on my arrival in Paris, before I had even asked him a single question, Mr. Wiallard defends himself as follows:

"If we had had plenty of elbow-room could we have obtained better results? Yes, probably. But was it desirable that it should have been so? I do not believe it.

"Suppose that we had met no opposition and that instead of sending each year 2 to 3,000 French settlers to Canada, I had succeeded in sending 8 to 10,000 in the very first years, would not such a result have been dangerous for future work in France?

"What! the French colonies absorb but 3 or 4,000 emigrants from France every year, and here is an English colony which draws twice as many. Would have been claimed everywhere.

"Behold the attempt to systematically depopulate France would have been said with some appearance of right. Was it not better to continue in the same way, slowly, moderately and cautiously, and let the seed which we have sown in French lanb bring forth its fruits with time.

"Once more, should the Canadian Government hold on to its decision not to send any more propagandists and delegates to address the crowds in the four ends of France to invite people to emigrate to Canada, I do not hesitate in saying that more and more the movement already created will increase by the mere fact of the rational and continual impulse produced by our assertions since many years."

"We have to content ourselves with making Canada, known by all means allowed by the law in France, lectures on geography, history, and economics in all the favour-able centres, publication of articles of a general interest on Canada, distribution of atlases and views of Canada, offer to the school museums or to teachers of Canadian photographs, samples of grains, sheaves of wheat, and if possible, of specimens of fruits, and vegetables. Never to utter the word emigration, and not let it be found in the literature offered, at least to give our official propaganda pamphlets only to the persons determined to quit the country, and who ask special information for that purpose."

"That is where we have always practiced and suggested. If we still do the same, the French Government cannot and will not annoy us. Having been approved by my chiefs for having inaugurated and followed this line of conduct, I dare hope that, with his well-informed mind that the new minister shall be satisfied with it."
Mr. Wiallard is then convinced that he has done nothing for his part, against the French regulations, that he has done all the law allowed him to do, that not only it is impossible to increase his means of action, but that, even if possible, it would not be opportune.

Without trying to see through Mr. Wiallard's secret mind, I have said and I repeat that, from the testimony of all those who have seen him at work he puts forth a great diligence in the exercise of his functions. It seems also evident that in sending every year to France, at first with the assent of our agent, and then in spite of him occasional lecturers who, by their direct appeals are violating the French law so much more easily that they knew it less, the Department of the Interior has not in a small degree, contributed to indispose the French Government. But I am no less compelled to think that the annoyances which Mr. Wiallard, and Canada with him, had to endure in France, came from the most part, from his obstinacy in dispensing with a co-operation which, without in reality lessening his personal action, would have allowed him to dissipulate it, more than that, to conform it to the French laws, and that the cause of that obstinacy lies in a false idea of the situation, in a defect of character or in self conceit out of place, whatever it may be,—and if this opinion is well founded, it follows that Mr. Wiallard should not hesitate to admit that he has erred on certain points, and to loyalty try, if requested the carrying out of programme which I suggest to you.

2nd. That it (this programme) shall have been previously submitted and agreed to by all the interested parties, including the French Government. What will be the use in fact, of this change of direction if we do not at first take care to remove the visiting misapprehensions and grievances? Whatever policy we may adopt, it is important that our agents be not exposed to a periodical repression which, while terrifying them, would sometimes induce them, to still more unfortunate resolutions, and nearly always inspires them expedients incompatible with our national dignity.

And that question of the agreement to be made with the French Government of the guarantee to be asked that our action legitimate as it remains and lawful as it may become, can be continuously exercised, without having to fear anybody's arbitrariness,—that question, I say, draws me to speak of disagreements which exist between the agent of your department and the General Commissioner of Canada.

Before 1908, we had as representative in France, but one General Commissioner, Mr. Fabre, which depended on the whole cabinet. In that year—and I hold that information from Mr. Wiallard himself—Mr. Wiallard was appointed assistant Commissioner with mission to specially attend to emigration. Still later on, Mr. Poindron was appointed Commercial Agent, by the Department of Commerce, which gave us the representatives in France. Mr. Fabre died two years ago, and after a few months interim fulfilled by Mr. Wiallard, the Laurier Government appointed the Hon. Phillip Roy as commissioner, with, I believe, better defined, if not, as I also believe more extended powers. On its occasion to power, of the present Government, last fall, Mr. Poindron, was dismissed, the commercial agency mingled with the Commissariat, and the Commissioner placed under the authority of the Minister of Commerce.

We then presently have in France, as in the past a sub-commissioner general who attends to emigration only, and not to Canadian affairs at large, but it moreover happens that the general Commissioner, himself, reduced to the rank of ordinary commercial agent, is not a general Commissioner, consequently has no authority, even in theory, over the sub-commissioner. When this anomaly that, when one complains to him of the sub-commissioner's acts, the personage responsible before the French authority for all the doings of the Canadian Government in France, has, to defend himself, to allege the independence of his subordinate. It is necessary to observe that such an excuse must inevitably look like a subterfuge in the logic eye of the Frenchman, that far from improving the situation it is rather of a nature to make it worse.

On my arrival in France that question of the relations of the Commissioner with the sub-commissioner rather the emigration agent, or else the attendant to information on emigration had reached its acute phase with regard to the respective offices of two services. After inquiry, I wrote to you on March 5:—

'Since some time, according to instructions from the Department of the Interior, I am studying on the spot the question of emigration from France and Belgium to Canada. As I intend to return to Canada about April 1, I shall wait until then to make a detailed report, the importance and the delicacy of the subject not allowing me to do it sooner. In the meantime, however, you will permit me to draw your attention on the dispute which broke out here in reference to the location of your agency and which really, concerns the whole policy of Canada in France.

In December last, Mr. Wiallard was instructed by your department to install himself at the Commissariat, 17-19 Boulevard des Capucines. If I am not mistaken, Mr. Roy objected to that installation, firstly because, owing to the policy of Mr. Wiallard, he did not believe he could assume before the French Government the responsibility of the Frenchman’s doings. Secondly because, the space available at the Commissariat was far from sufficient to lodge Mr. Wiallard and his personnel. Thirdly because, in Mr. Roy’s opinion, it would not be either wise or practicable to throw wide open to intending emigrants, offices fitted up for other purposes and, besides situated on the third floor.

Mr. Wiallard does not deny that there exists a dispute between himself and Mr. Roy, and contradictions between himself and the French Government, only he maintains to be right against the one and the other. He does not pretend either that he could find at the Commissariat the required space, in fact I am sure he would much prefer to have distinct offices.

Now the lease for the emigration office at No. 3 Islely street, expires on April 1, and if, by that time your instructions have not been modified, Mr. Wiallard shall have to obey them, to the great damage of Canada, I fear, as any sejourn, even temporary of Mr. Wiallard at 17-19 Boulevard des Capucines could but envenom matters.

Without intending for the present to say who is right and who is wrong in the case, and if you should eventually give up locating Mr. Wiallard with Mr. Roy, I would strongly recommend to you to instruct Mr. Wiallard to obtain an extension of his lease for three, and even if possible far six months. You would thus have time to receive my report and consider its conclusions.'

Mr. Wiallard, authorized according to my recommendation, caused his lease to be extended until November 1. I do not know what arrangements he has made since, but I know that, no matter what decision you may take about the office, it will not restore harmony between your agency and the Commissariat.

Should this be comprised in my functions, I would humbly advise that the representation which would be more convenient for Canada in a country like France, where we can make a considerable trade and where we are trying to create an emigration movement towards our country, is the one which we had before the abolition of the commercial agency, but under the direction or at least the control of the Commissioner, who would, of course, be the only one responsible to the Canadian Government. I would believe I am going out of the limits of my commission in saying that the joining the two services (Commerce and Emigration) under the same head seems to me to be essential, in the first place, in order to put an end to a conflict which cannot be but detrimental to us before the French Government, and as an immediate consequence, to give the benefit of our commercial propaganda to the cause of emigration which in France is by itself deprived of all the means of action allowed to it in England and even in Belgium. An active and intelligent publicity in favour of Canada shall presently, nowhere give better results than in France, but nowhere also is it more important that our publicity by avoiding the wild, declamatory and false style of the American advertising, should present Canada under all its aspects, under all its true aspects, at the same time, that work shall only be done by one central office recognized by the French authorities and actively co-operating with all the elements of the French nation favourably disposed towards Canada. That is not, I know it, Mr. Wiallard's opinion, I so much more regret to differ from him, that he seems to have been personally the more consequence in the fulfilment of his duties, but it is impossible not to adopt the above opinion after having consulted on the spot all those who take an interest in the Franco-Canadian relations. It does not belong to me to indicate to you, how you could, in the present circumstances, arrive at that agreement with the Department of Commerce. It is enough for me to observe that the publicity office of the two services could be installed at the commissariat, and in another place, preferably a ground floor in a great thoroughfare, a museum and an information bureau which could be of use both to commerce and emigration.

Allow me to observe also that it would in advance nullify the result of my recommendations if you were to avail yourself of them to reduce the staff or the budget presently appropriated to the emigration propaganda.

The budget of your Paris agency since its creation is apparently as follows:

If, however, we recollect that the above budget comprises since 1905-1909 inclusively the salaries of the personnel, which were till then paid by the London offices, and since 1910-1911 the rent of the agency, previously under the charge of the commissariat, it will be noticed that it has not so much increased since 1904-1905. The personnel alone has last year received about thirty-five thousand francs, which leaves only thirty thousand francs on the 65,000 without mentioning the rent. Their budget may suffice for the actual work (in fact, and this admission is worth noticing, Mr. Wiallard admits that excepting the period of economy, 1905-1907, the Department has in general granted him what he has asked), it would not be sufficient for the work which the publicity office of the commissariat and the service of exhibitions and information depending on it, would soon be called to accomplish on your account. It goes by itself that if the number of propaganda means authorized in France is much less than those employed in England, we will only be able to obtain results by using for the authorized processes the money that we are compelled to save on the others. There would be, for instance, no good reason for not establishing in some other towns, and even in certain provincial towns, museums and information bureaux like those at Paris. It is also to be noticed that for the last three years the publicity budget has been from one thousand to twelve hundred francs only per year, that the indirect and veiled publicity, of the kind which I believe we should adopt, would be far more profitable, but also probably more costly. The object of the concentration which I recommend would be, not to reduce expenses, but at first to derive a better result from the present budget, and the not allow the Canadian Government, and specially your department to expand an action, which, in the present situation, tends to the contrary, to its own destruction.

Eventually, the action thus organized of the Paris agency might be extended to Switzerland, Northern Italy, the Basque provinces of Spain.

Honest, well educated, thoroughly knowing the French life, the chief clerks of the agency, Mr. Foursin, and Belanger, the former a Frenchman having spent many years in Canada, and having constituted himself at his own expense, one of the first apostles of Canada, in Europe, the latter a Canadian having lived many years in France, can both, I believe, render valuable services. It is to be regretted that they are not given, they are not asked, or if they are asked, that they are not required to exert more initiative. Mr. Foursin, appointed seven years ago at $900, has had no increase. The lower staff is cheaply paid.

The French districts where it seems that the work shall be the more profitable are Brittany, Savoy, the Basque provinces, the North, the Aveyron and Charentes. The influence of the farmer delegates, specially, will have there a more favourable opportunity than anywhere else. I shall, after Mr. Wiallard mentions the case of three Bretons from the vicinity of Pontivy, who, settled in Manitoba in 1904, have since gone at their own expense, to fetch among their relations, friends, and acquaintances of Brittany something like five hundred settlers. Now disseminated in Saint Claude, Haywood, Notre Dame-de-Lourdes, etc., also the foundation of Notre-Dame-de-Sovoie in 1904 by the Abbé Ferroux and twenty-five other Savoyards, which were afterwards joined by a greater number of their fellow countrymen.

If it has not been already done, it would be expedient to give satisfaction without delay the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique in reference to the premium. That company, composed of French people, and naturally more in favour before the government authorities of the country, is more than any other in a position to be useful to us in France, whatever may be the laws and regulations. Unless to add that it can also do us an incalculable harm in the official French circles, if we wish to give, at its expense, an advantage to the subsidized Canadian line, I say purposely, at its expense. In fact, to refuse the premium to the Compagnie Générale would be virtually to confer on the Allan Company an official character, a privileged situation, and thus draw towards it a movement created at a large cost by its not subsidized rival, so that, in many cases, the latter, would lose not only the premium but also the fare.

It has been already seen, incidentally, that the present agent is in favour of the abolishment of the propaganda premium or bonus. The reasons which he gives for it are rather contradictory, now in fact he states that the steamship agents, entirely relying on the work of the Canadian Government agents, do absolutely nothing to earn the premium, and further on that the payment of such premium, in inciting to infractions, is one of the principal grievances of the French Government. The Combes circular (1905) would seem to corroborate this last assertion. All the rest on the contrary leads to believe in the almost absolute inaction of the steamship agents. It does not appear that, for the present the experiment of premiums which has been made in France may lead to conclude either to its maintenance or its abolishment. We could perhaps satisfy all exigencies and silence all criticism in paying the premium only to steamship agents who would have given proof of exertions, but the laws and regulations of the country,—two conditions which are imposed to the English agents, but which have not been up to now either one or the other, imposed to the French agents. One of the grievances of the French Government (we find it expressed in one of its circulars) is the necessity wherein it often finds itself to bring back people who have been deceived by the emigration agents. The most frequent abuse, on the part of the steamship agents, consists in sending the emigrant to the farthest point possible in the interior of Canada, in order to get the highest possible premium, no matter what may become of the poor unfortunate man. Another abuse consists in speculating on the exchange of money, the steamship agents seldom taking less than 5f. 25 for one dollar, while the Parisian branch of the National Bank is satisfied with 5f. 18. The protestations which our agent repeatedly uttered, and which have already had the result of obtaining for the emigrant intended for the west the permission of a ten days' stop in the Province of Quebec, would have still more weight if they could be sanctioned by the suppression of the premium. I shall add that if, in France as elsewhere, the attraction of the premium may sometimes induce an agent to transgress the law of the country, the French agent on the other hand, is less than others tempted to send to Canada the scums of the French society, each French emigrant being supposed to carry with him his judiciary status.

Our agent reports that he often has demands of Canadian produce for school museums, he should be in a position to promptly and favourably comply with such demands.

Besides the above special recommendations, relative either to France or to Belgium, you will allow me, sir, to make you some others which may apply to both countries.

I hear from the agents at Paris and Antwerp, that the persons who directly apply to your department, in the French, Flemish or Dutch language, for information on Canada, usually receive their answer in English. It is useless to observe how little this process is apt to inform and draw foreigners, specially the Frenchman who had imagined that the French was one of the official languages of our country. In order to answer to every body in his own language, at least those of whom, as the Belgian and the French, we specially solicit to emigrate to Canada, it would be sufficient to have a couple of good linguists like Mr. Treau de Coeli in your department.

The Department of Commerce, in drafting its contracts with the navigation companies, should consult with the Department of the Interior with a view to the improvement of the conditions of transportation of the emigrants. Before this year, the Allan Company, which however has received from the Canadian Government, something like $130,000 per year, and whose subsidy has since been, it appears, carried to $200,000 a year, had no French cooks, and to tell the truth no interpreters on its ships, and for a twelve or fifteen days voyage, was charging the same price as other companies for a seven or eight days trip. A still more serious matter, the first sailing from Havre was delayed until the middle or the end of May, and the farm labourers recruited during the winter in view of the opening of the works, getting tired of waiting, were renewing their engagements in France. This year the Sardinián and the Pomeranian have been replaced by the Ionian and the Scotián, larger and more rapid. It appears that they have engaged French cooks on these new boats, and that the first sailing has taken place on April 27, but these improvements, besides incomplete of a rival service by the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique. I cannot for my part understand why Canada expects the protection of its interests only from competition, when it has the right and is in a position to dictate its conditions.

There should be official and authorized interpreters, not only on subsidized steamers, but in all the landing ports and on all the railways where French is not usually spoken. One cannot realize the annoyance of every kind caused to the emigrants of French language by the insufficiency or even the total want of this service, in a country where they were told that they could everywhere be understood in their own language. I shall give only one example, Edouard Claude, his wife and nine children, and Eleonore LeRoy, with four children, from Orgeo, in the province of Luxemburg (in Belgium) having started for Halifax on the Canada, of the Dominion Line, on May 1, 1910, had so much to suffer from the totally strange customs of the ship that they landed with their eyes all reddened for having wept. They wanted to explain themselves, but there again nobody could understand French and they were sent back to Antwerp as affected with Trachoma. The Belgian Government and the deported families protested, the truth was found out, and the Canadian Government had to pay an indemnity. One of the deported was a farmer possessing fifteen to twenty thousand francs in ready money. A single incident of that kind may cause an incalculable injury to Canada. There is already at Winnipeg, I am told, one French and one Dutch interpreter, the latter being able to serve the Flemish. If the French or Belgian emigration increases ever so little an Anglo-Franco-Flemish interpreter will probably be wanted at Halifax.

The most part of our agents abroad have brought their families with them, besides that, having lost contact with Canada, they would have to begin a new life, they would not come back to this country without great expense. It is then important that they be not displaced except for the exigencies of the service and that they be not dismissed but for incompetency or dishonesty. As their salary is not high, and the work which is expected from them is hardly possible in their old age, it would equally be expedient, after a certain age, if not to pay them a pension, to employ them at Ottawa as writers or otherwise, in the offices from which the outside agencies depend.

The Department should, in future appointments, require from the titulary not only a perfect knowledge of the society but also a good general education. All over Europe intelligent training is regarded as essential for the exercise of certain public charges, specially of those offering a certain diplomatic character.

The drawing up of official literature being, in a publicity campaign, an element of the very first importance, one can not too much deplore the common incompetency of the French writers or translators of the Department of the Interior.

I do not hesitate to say that the style of most of the official literary production of the Canadian Government intended for countries of French language are far from doing honour to Canada. There are some which Mr. Wallard had to conceal in the cellars of the Paris agencies in order not to let them be seen by the French people, even if he had himself to translate the English original, at the cost of heavy work. Our agents have something else to do, however, and most of the time they are after all bound to use the material at their disposal. The wall map which we distribute in the schools of France is drawn up partly in French, partly in English, and partly in I do not know what. In France, where ridicule kills, a country like ours should take care not to couple its name with grotesque publications of which Patagonia or Nigeria would be ashamed. If Canada can not do better by itself, it has only to take as a model the tidy publications of the Argentina or of many other countries, which without pretending to be New France's, have all the same found out the means to address French people in French. I remember having seen a pamphlet issued by Western Australia for the Universal Exposition of 1900, which would make the publicists of your department one of shame, if they were not past all shame.

At the present moment most of the publications sent to the countries of French language are literal translations of works expressly written for English countries. That imprints in them, not to speak of the mere blunders of translation, a general exotic character which offends and disposes the French reader. Just as good translators are not produced suddenly, it is not the first comer who can address all the different peoples according to their own tastes, their traditions and even their prejudices—for that it requires more judgment than some of your subordinates seem to possess. For instance, in the L'Ouest Canadian a translation of the pamphlet entitled Western Canada, which is most extensively distributed by your agents, a reference is successively made to the testimony of A. Baumak, formerly of Indiana; Philip N. Taft, Ira Sutton, formerly of Iowa, and of dozens of others, but not of a single Belgian or French settler. Is it not evident that if it was not rather intended to frighten the French and Belgian settlers with the prospect of louliness (which certainly is not the end in view), it would have been wise to quote the testimony of French and Belgian settlements? And what I say here about these two nations equally applies to the other European peoples. Some chapters of the pamphlet could remain; some others should be modified according to the countries.

One word also about distribution, some people seem to believe that the more you give them reading matter on your country the more information you give to the foreigner, no matter how heavy, confuse and most of the time, contradictory. If it be so in some countries, it is not the same in the countries of French language, where the clearness of a work is more appreciated, than its volume, and when they do not feel that it should be necessary to read a whole library to learn what could be contained in two or three hundred pages. At the time of my visit to Antwerp, for instance, I was painfully affected to see the quantity and nature of official literature intended for the Belgian and Dutch public. I quote:—

Dominion of Canada (in English only), a volume of 222 pages, balance from the Liege Exhibition (1905).
Canada in a Nutshell (a Dutch work with an English title; small pamphlet of 40 pages) 1911.
Vast fields open to Colonization and Industry, the Temiscamingue, Province of Quebec, pamphlet of 72 pages, issued many years ago by the Department of Colonization of the Quebec Government.
Canada de le Siecle Nouveau (title literally translated from Canada and the New Century), 48 pages. 1906.
Canada—Practical advice to Settlers, 36 pages. 1911.
The Canada, 49 pages, 1911.
Canada, album of views of the show made at Crystal Palace, in London, on the occasion of the Coronation of 1911: explanations in English.
Atlas of Canada (in French) and Atlas van Canada (in Flemish), 64 pages each, 1910.
L'Ouest Canadian, ce qui reste de mieux dans l'ouest, an unconsciously ludicrous translation of the English title, Western Canada, the Last Best West, 42 pages. 1911.
Le Canada Occidental and West Canada, the monthly paper previously mentioned.

Of the above various publications, those of the Government of Quebec, I regret to say, are inferior to all as regards the style and accuracy. Among the others, some are excellent, some are useless, and therefore detrimental, for they only serve to upset the foreigner who reads them: some others at least clearly pernicious.

Your department should, it seems to me, stick, on such matters to the following rules:—

1st. Have its works written by persons well accustomed to translation and drawing up, and moreover well informed about the countries concerned.

2nd. Not to publish anything which has not been revised, as to the form and matter, by the interested agents.

3rd. Not to distribute anything for the provincial Governments which does not, if not perfectly, at least well enough come into the outline of the outline of the federal publications—special nothing contradictory to them.

4th. Insist more on the ethnic and religious character and the economic situation of the different provinces, so as to allow the emigrants to guide themselves more knowingly.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 95

5th. Besides monographies of farming regions and other works of the same kind, which, however, should never have a useless repetition, stick to a limited number of publications which ought to be revised and corrected each year, an essential condition for a growing country so rapidly as Canada. Those publications would be:

(a) After the model of the present atlas, a work of one hundred pages at the utmost about Canada, with a general map of the country and one of each province or territory.

(b) Under the same size, a pamphlet or thin book of not more than 50 pages, for each of the old provinces and of 50 to 75 pages for the two provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

(c) A pocket guide for the use of the Belgian or French settler, and even for the Italian, Swiss or Spanish emigrant, as the case may be.

As an example of conciseness, exactness and propriety, I shall mention the publications of the emigration office of the English government.

The co-operation of the Federal Government with the provincial authorities, especially those of Quebec, in France and Belgium is a matter which has been frequently discussed in Canada. Such a policy could evidently be adopted by the mutual consent of both powers. The Antwerp agent declares that he has many a time offered to the Quebec Government to distribute its literature, but that it did not even, to say the truth, take the trouble to answer him. The only answer that the same Government has ever made to identical advances of Mr. Wiallard was the sending of Mr. Deslauriers as emigration and placing agent, with the result which we know of. It seems true that the provincial authorities of Quebec not making any emigration propaganda in the other countries of Europe, do not see the necessity of doing any more in the countries of the French language. The pretended attempts that they have made in that way, have nevertheless, in the absence of any exact information and of any placing system, given so pitiful results that it is very doubtful whether we must, in the present circumstances, deplore their inaction. It has been contended (this is specially Mr. Wiallard's opinion) that the immediate direction of your agency by the Commissioner, To my mind, we should rather see in that fact a guarantee of security for the Federal government, that functionary receiving also a salary from the province of Quebec.

To my mind, we should rather see in that fact a guarantee of security for the federal Government, for should the province ever decide to energetic measures,—which unfortunately, or not, is not for the present to be foreseen,—those measures, subjected to the same direction and control, will necessarily have to harmonize with yours and conform also with the French law.

THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Since it is specially concerned in this matter,—would further directly profit by the work of the federal Government if the latter would more practice, in the French centres, the system established in Ontario and the English districts of Quebec for the placing of emigrants.

The appointment of French Canadian placing agents would have as a first result to facilitate to the emigrants from France and Belgium their installation in Canada. To see that the emigrant be properly treated on the steamers and may be understood in his own language on his arrival, that is necessary, but not sufficient; it is also necessary that he should from the start, be directed to the place the most favourable for the use of his resources and the display of his energies. For many immigrants the transition from the old civilization of Europe to life in Central Canada is too severe; the customs, the language are different, and even more perhaps the economic conditions—a triple difference by which a Belgian or a Frenchman who considered himself well off in his own country shall in a few months dissipate his savings and shall be reduced to poverty, if he does not happen to have on the spot relations or friends to advise and assist him.

An emigrant of French language who shall on landing at Quebec or Montreal find a remunerative employment (wages of farm servants in Quebec are now ten to fifteen hundred francs per year, including board, lodging and washing and most of the time clothing) not only will not lose his savings, but will at the end of the year have increased them, familiarized himself with the country, have probably, here and there, picked up a few English words, in short, shall be more apt to settle definitely, whether in Quebec or in the West. More content with his lot, he shall be, with his compatriots of the old country, a better propagandist and the complaints about the optimism of our prospectuses shall become less numerous.

But a not smaller result will be to enrich a province which the want of help labour greatly contributes so to keep in an economic inferiority.

It is reckoned that there is presently from thirty to fifty thousand European domestic servants in Ontario, while in Quebec, where I repeat, the wants are the same, a few hundred could hardly be found, and nearly all English, the measure which I suggest would make matters even.

The most part of the French and Belgium emigrants who have taken service with French Canadian farmers would afterwards start for the west. Some others, especially those owning more money would purchase farms in Eastern Canada, where they would become careless and acting by routine people so many professors of domestic ingenuity and intensive farming.

There exists in every parish an agricultural circle, and in every country an agricultural society which would only be too happy I suppose, to make use of the good services of your placing agents.

The competent persons with whom I had the advantage of consulting, agree with me that, with a good placing system Canada could procure every year, in Belgium alone, thousands of farm servants who would mostly be able, after a very short time, to acquire a farm of their own. The Canadian Pacific Railway authorities in London, who manage that company’s navigation service between Antwerp and Canada, and whom I have questioned about it, are ready, for their part to give you all the necessary cooperation. It would perhaps be more difficult to directly make our wants known in France, but the moment that the Frenchman emigrating to Canada would, by the wisdom of our Government, be protected against disappointments, annoyances of every sort, which result from differences of customs, language, economic way of living, it would not take long to be known in France as elsewhere.

A placing system would not be complete without creating reception houses at Quebec and Montreal.

Such is, Mr. General Superintendent, the result of my observations. I shall complete my report by saying that, in my opinion, if the Government does not intend to soon establish in Belgium a general agency or Commissariat to which would naturally belong the direction or at least the control of the emigration propaganda in that country, and if the representation of Canada in France is reorganized as suggested by me, it would perhaps be expedient to eventually connect your agency or agencies with the Paris Commissariat. The relative community of language and the easy means of communication (trains go from Paris to Brussels in three hours) would allow to the Paris Commissioner a more effective direction or control than could ever be exercised from London.

Wishing that my work should be of some help to you in the conscientious fulfilment of your duty, I tender you the homage of my highest regard, and I subscribe myself.

Your devoted servant,

(Sgd.) OLIVAR ASSELIN.

RETURN

(124)

To an Address of the House of Commons, dated the 10th February, 1913, for a copy of the memorial presented to the Government during the session of 1911-12 by a delegation from the Government of Prince Edward Island, asking for an increased provincial subsidy, a copy of which memorial was laid on the table of the House by the Finance Minister last session of Parliament but is not now apparently on the files of the House.

LOUIS CODERRE.

Secretary of State.

To His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, Governor General of Canada in Council:

We, the undersigned delegates, appointed by the Government of Prince Edward Island to present to Your Royal Highness in Council the claims of that province against the Government of Canada, respectfully submit:—

That Prince Edward Island entered confederation on the first day of July A.D. 1873.

That it was the intention of the founders of Confederation to provide for each province, from the federal revenues, a sum sufficient to enable each province to manage its local affairs without resort to direct taxation. The services assumed by the Dominion together with the subsidies were intended as an equivalent to each province for its surrendered customs and excise duties.

The negotiations preliminary to Confederation disclose this intention. Hon. George Brown, speaking in the Legislature of Canada, in 1865, stated the attitude of the Lower Provinces on this question thus:—

'The objections (i.e., to direct taxation) moreover were not confined to Lower Canada. All the Lower Provinces stood in exactly the same position. They have not a municipal system such as we have discharging many of the functions of the government, but their general government performs all the duties which in Upper Canada devolve upon our municipal councils as well as upon Parliament. If then the Lower Provinces had been asked to maintain their customs duties for federal purposes, and to impose on themselves by the same act direct taxation for all their local purposes, the chances of carrying the scheme of union would have been greatly lessened'.

Hon. John H. Gray, the historian of Confederation, himself a delegate to the several preliminary conferences (p. 55 et seq.): 'In several provinces municipalities were not established, direct taxation was unknown. It was absurd therefore to suppose that the delegates from these provinces would consent to any propositions for union that did not make adequate provisions for meeting the existing wants and contributions to which their people had been accustomed. It was equally hard to make the representatives of the people of Upper Canada understand that that was right.

In vain was argument used. It amounted to nothing. Unless some compromise could be effected, the discussion about union might as well cease. Subsidies were proposed. The expenses of each local government were in calculation. The general government assumed the burden of every expenditure that could possibly be considered of a general character; but still, as the distribution was to be by population, the province of Upper Canada would receive what it did not want, while the others would not get what they did want. Agreement seemed hopeless, and on or about the tenth morning after the convention met, the conviction was general that it must break up without coming to any conclusion. The terms of mutual concession and demand had been drawn to their extremist tension, and silence was all around.

The deadlock was broken by the compromise that the per capita subsidy to Ontario and Quebec should be based upon the population as shown in the census of 1861, for all time, whilst the other provinces should be paid upon their actual population up to the limit of 400,000. It is instructive to note the understanding which Prince Edward Island had of the confederation proposals. The resolution of the Island Legislature passed May 2, 1873, hereto annexed marked 'A' declares this in explicit terms.

Sir Louis H. Davies, then a member of the Provincial Legislature, estimated that under Confederation, the annual revenue of the province would amount to $222,520.02, with an expenditure of $205,216.71, giving a surplus of $17,103.31.

Hon. David Laird and Hon. J. C. Pope were somewhat less sanguine, but the debates of 1873 on the Confederation proposals show that the whole question on the financial terms was whether or not the subsidies would be sufficient to maintain the local government services without having resort to direct taxation, and when the terms were finally settled it was upon the understanding that the subsidies would be adequate to that end.

What was the financial position of Prince Edward Island on the 30th June, 1873?

The debt of the island, exclusive of the railway debt, was more than offset by the balance due on lands purchased by the Government from the proprietors, cash loaned to tenants, and other assets, all of which were subsequently converted into cash and used as ordinary revenue.

In 1873 this island as a separate colony was one hundred years old. Its population had doubled in the last thirty years with an increasing ratio. Its revenues were doubling every 12 years. It had constructed suitable public buildings, wharves, roads, breakwaters, lighthouses, and other public works, equipped a stock and experimental farm, and was building up manufacturing industries of many kinds.

In relation to its size, there was no more progressive community in British North America.

All this had been done under a customs and excise tax not exceeding $3.10 per capita.

By the Confederation agreement, the island surrendered to Canada the control of its customs and excise, and immediately became liable to a taxation of $5.05, an increase of $1.95 per capita, or a total increase of $190,000 per annum—sufficient to have enabled it to finance the railway and to carry on the other services efficiently.

Thus, at the outset, Canada exercised its taxing power over this island to the amount of $5.05 multiplied by 97,000, equalling $489,850. In return Canada assumed the performance of services which were then costing this island $143,000 per annum and to pay subsidies amounting, when adjusted, to $191,052, the two items totalling $334,052.

The financial balance was thus against this province from the first to the amount of at least $150,000 per annum.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 124

The following financial statement shows in a general way—

_How the Province fared in Confederation._

1. Assets of the province in 1873, since realized upon . . . . $515,036
2. Money borrowed for purchase of lands which were since realized upon, and used as ordinary revenue.—See Page XIII. of Public Accounts, 1911 . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 782,403
3. Capital withdrawn from credit of province at Ottawa, and used as ordinary revenue. . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 200,000
4. _Debt and liabilities_ of province 2nd December, 1911 (as per audit of Messrs, Rossborough and Dench) less overdue taxes uncollected. . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 1,008,242

In the same period there has been collected in land income and other direct taxes, the sum of $1,190,224. A small part of this money was used in the construction of an insane asylum, an infirmary and other necessary public buildings, but no revenue-producing asset of the province has resulted from its expenditure. Except as above stated it has been used as ordinary revenue.

The situation in the province in relation to revenue from Canada and total expenditure is as follows:—

Subsidies for 1911 ........................................ $272,181
" at confederation ........................................ 191,052

$81,129

Increase .........................................................
Expenditure for 1911 ........................................ $416,631
Expenditure for 1873 ........................................ 237,686

$97,816

The gulf between revenue and expenditure is, therefore, $97,816 wider than it was at the time of Confederation.

_Cost of Government not Excessive._

The average cost of legislation at the time of Confederation was $16,000 per annum approximately. Since 1893 the average cost has been less than $9,000. The sessional indemnity of members is $200. The number of heads of departments has been reduced from four to three, and the salaries reduced from $1,000 to $1,200 each. Generally speaking, the salaries paid clerks and other minor officials do not exceed one-half of those paid by the Dominion for similar services. Further reduction is impracticable.

Your memorialists contend that the present unfortunate financial condition of this province is due to two principal causes: (a) The failure of Canada to provide continuous communication with the mainland; (b) The insufficiency of the subsidies to meet the purposes intended.

It must be borne in mind that in surrendering to Canada the tariff-making power this island placed in the hands of Canada the direction and control of its commercial and industrial development—diverted to Canadian channels the independent lines of trade which this island had established, and thereby made its future welfare depend so much the more upon continuous communication with the mainland of Canada.
What this island has lost by the non-fulfilment of the terms of union cannot be exactly computed. Over twenty years ago a claim was made for financial damages amounting to $3,000,000 which was agreed by both parties in the Legislature not to be excessive. Under the pressure of immediate need, this claim was the added wrongs of the intervening years was sold out in 1901, by the local government, for a paltry subsidy of $30,000, which certainly did not measure one-fifth part of the actual financial loss, while for the arrested development of the province, in which 'Time lost is forever lost,' and for the consequent loss of population no compensation was given. This may be described as:—

Claim No. 1.—Damage for non-fulfilment of the terms of union in respect to 'Continuous Communication.'

This claim was settled up to the year 1901 by the grant of a subsidy of $30,000 per annum, and the present claim is from the year 1901 to the present date. During this period the province has suffered grievously. For example, in the year 1902-3, there were 45 days on which no trips were made and thirty-three days on which half trips only were made by the winter boats. In 1904-5, there were fifty-four days on which no trips were made, and nineteen days with half trips only. For twenty-one days no mails were received from any quarter. In 1906-7 there were thirty-five days with no trips and twelve days with half trips. The annexed schedule A shows in detail the record of each year.

Great as is the loss from such interruptions of communication, it is small compared with that caused by the uncertainty that continually hangs over the winter service. The possibility of failure is always staring us in the face, and paralyzing the energies of our people. Shippers from this island of perishable produce, such as fish and meats, were ruined by these disastrous years, and the general losses were very great in the aggregate.

This province would not have entertained a proposal to surrender its fiscal independence and to change the currents of its trade, were it not for the undertaking of Canada to provide continuous communication with the railway system of the Dominion. The failure to carry out this contract is responsible in a large measure for the reduction of our population, which involves all losses.

It is submitted that the first earnest and practical attempt by the Federal Government to carry out its contract with the island is to be found in the undertaking by the present Government to construct a car ferry, which it is sincerely hoped may be the means of bringing to an end this long continued grievance.

Claim No. 2.—Compensation in respect of the public lands of Canada actually transferred, or proposed to be transferred, to certain provinces of Canada.

It is submitted that each province in Canada has a beneficial interest in those lands, in the nature of a partnership interest. At Confederation this province assumed its proportion of the debt arising from the purchase, and has since that time contributed its share to every expenditure necessary to equip these territories for settlement.

Any gift for those lands to any province or provinces without compensation to the others is so manifestly unjust as to require no argument. The United States of America is possibly the only other country affording a precedent. There the proceeds of the lands sold went to the federal treasury, and where gifts of lands were made to the states organized out of the purchased territories, equivalent gifts were made to all the other states, amounting to 30,000 acres of land for each Representative and Senator in Congress. This grant was applied to the purpose of establishing agricultural and mechanical institutions. In the ease of the states in which the Federal Government held sufficient public lands for the purpose, the land grant was located in that state. In the other cases scrip was issued for public lands outside of the state to be benefited. The result of that every state in the union has established a college and received its quota of land and scrip. It is claimed on behalf of Prince Edward Island that it has a right to receive its proper proportion of the public demesne, or an equivalent therefor.

Claim No. 3.—In respect of the Prince Edward Island Railway.

In the adjustment of the debt account between this province and Canada, this island was charged with the sum of $3,144,000 expended by the province on the construction of the road, and at the same time the road was transferred to Canada.

The transaction was carried out in this form: Canada paid at maturity the debentures which had been issued by the provincial government to meet the cost of the road; then charged the province with the amount and took over the road.

It is claimed that the cost of operation of this road is in excess of the receipts, but on the other hand no credit is given to this railway for the large amount of traffic it supplies to the Intercolonial Railway. In fact, almost all the export traffic originating on the Prince Edward Island Railway is carried to Pictou and Pointe du Chene, and there transferred to the Intercolonial Railway. The greater part of this traffic would otherwise be sea-borne directly to its destination.

In 1873 it was estimated that the expenditure of Canada upon railways and canals would not exceed $79,000,000, and on this estimate the balance of the debt was computed. When it is consented to allow Canada to charge as part of the provincial debt the cost of the railway, and forthwith presented it to Canada, it was not contemplated that the further expenditure on railways and canals on the mainland should amount to over five hundred million dollars in excess of the estimate. The system of constructing provincial railways, or subsidizing the same, was then still in the future. The enormous increase of federal taxation was not even dreamt of. The complete change in the railway policy of Canada since 1873 justifies the claim of this province to be indemnified in respect of the cost of this railway, which was given to Canada, upon the assumption that the railway policy of Canada was then settled. Since that time a railway has been built by Canada in the neighboring island of Cape Breton at a cost of $3,800,000.

In accordance with the railway policy carried out in Canada in recent years, a private company constructing such a railway as that in Prince Edward Island would receive a subsidy of from $3,200 to $6,400 per mile, and would then own the road. This island received nothing, and gave the road away.

Claim No. 4.—An allowance for the difference between the estimated expenditure upon railways and canals of Canada since Confederation and the amount actually spent thereon.

When the Confederation terms between this province and Canada were settled, it was upon the basis of a total estimated future expenditure by Canada upon railways and canals of seventy-nine million dollars.

This claim was adjusted by the Government of Canada up to the year 1887 by the grant of an additional subsidy of $20,000 per annum. The grounds for this settlement are set forth in the Report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved on the 22nd March, 1887, and subsequently ratified by Parliament.

It is submitted that the further expenditure by Canada since the date of said additional subsidy, after taking into account the expenditure made in the extension of the Prince Edward Island Railway, should constitute a ground for compensation to this province.

Claim No. 5.—An equivalent for the increased subsidies granted to the larger provinces to meet the increased cost of education, public works, asylums, agriculture, charities, &c., under the amendments to the British North America Act, 1907.

By the re-arrangement of subsidies this province received an increase for government and legislation slightly below the proportionate increase granted to all the other provinces, but the changes made in respect to the payment of per capita subsidy to meet the increased cost of the services mentioned in this claim conferred no benefit upon this province, although it was equally entitled to receive it, and urgently needed it, as the following statement shows:—

Total increase: ........................................... $145,958 77

Under the above heads the increase at the time of the re-arrangement of subsidies in 1907 was $128,000. The increased rate of Dominion taxation and the requirements of the provincial services were arguments advanced in favour of the increase of the per capita subsidy. By the removal of the limit of the population upon which this subsidy was payable, all the other provinces either immediately or prospectively obtained the relief sought, but in the case of Prince Edward Island, owing to its limited area and other causes, the plan worked out no remedy while imposing an additional burden in respect to its population of the cost of the benefits conferred upon the larger provinces.

The following table shows how the scheme for the per capita increase has worked out up to the present time:—

The other large provinces will soon come within the benefits of this amendment, but no such hope exists for this province.

It is true that this province was represented by delegates at the conference which settled upon this plan, and that they consented to it, but it is urged that their failure to guard its interests should not be regarded as a justification for perpetuating an injustice.

In order to bring this island within the benefits from which it has been excluded as above set forth, some other plan would require to be devised, and it is submitted that this might be done on the basis of the claim next set forth.

Claim No. 6.—The payment of the subsidies and the fixing of the unit of representation upon the basis of an assumed population of at least 180,000.

The history of Confederation shows that this was a method frequently employed, and in no instance did such cogent reasons exist for its exercise as in the present case.

The population of Manitoba in 1881 was 62,260. In 1882, in pursuance of 45 Vic., cap. 5, the subsidy was paid upon an assumed population of 150,000. Several such advanced estimates of population were made from time to time, until as late as 1904 by Order in Council an assumed population of 350,000 was given though the actual population by the census of 1901 was only 255,211.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 124

British Columbia also was paid subsidies upon an assumed population much greater than the actual number. Alberta and Saskatchewan were launched into Confederation with an assumed population for each 250,000, though the actual population of both provinces combined, according to the last preceding decennial census, was 164,307.

The quinquennial and intermediate census allowed to the three prairie provinces as the basis for payment of subsidies were all concessions from the rule of the decennial census, that confers a benefit of like nature.

From the year 1841 to 1871 the population of this Island had increased from 47,034 to 94,021. At the same rate of increase it would amount to 97,153 when it entered into Confederation. Continuing at the same rate it would in 1911 have amounted to 219,000. It is now 240,000, being 3,431 less than it was at the time of Confederation. Newfoundland is a colony whose natural conditions were never so favourable as those of Prince Edward Island. From its earliest history down to 1873, its ratio of increase of population had always been lower but from 1874, when its census was taken to 1911, its last census, it has increased from 161,334 to upwards of 240,000.

It is true that the population of Prince Edward Island continued to increase until 1891, but at a steadily diminishing ratio; then the decline began, and still continues at an accelerating rate. One unfortunate result of the exodus is that the infirm in mind and body are left as a charge upon the dwindling population. The cost of the maintenance of the insane and poor has grown since 1873 from $11,414 to $51,483 per annum, while the number has more than trebled. The paucity of the rural population does not reduce the cost of education, nor the requirements of the public roads, but it does gravely increase the difficulty of properly maintaining them.

It is the opinion of your memorialists, almost unanimously supported by the people of our province, that Confederation had caused the destruction of the industries of the island, and has driven those formerly engaged therein to other lands. Had the island remained out of Confederation, it could have guarded these industries and developed its trade along the lines which it had established, but by surrendering to Canada its power to regulate its own tariff, its established trade routes were broken up, its business turned into Canadian channels, its industries so heavily weighted in the race with rivals who enjoyed the advantages of continuous connection with the transportation facilities of the mainland, that they have almost become extinct.

It is useless to talk of further taxation upon a diminishing population. What is necessary for the financial redemption of the province is to improve existing conditions, not to make them more burdensome.

Prince Edward Island has always borne its full proportion of the burdens of Canada, while sharing to a very small degree into the advantages of Confederation.

The National Policy, under which Canada generally has achieved such splendid development, has not extended its benefits to the industries of the province, for the reasons above set forth. The proportionate contribution of this province to the revenues of Canada amounted to $1,181,052 in 1911, computing it at the average rate, but your memorialists claim that it is much larger, by reason of the almost total extinction of the manufacturing industries within the island and the consequent large importation of dutiable goods. But even at the average rate this province now pays to Canada in taxes more than three times as much as was required for all its public services at Confederation.

The promised ear ferry, it is confidently expected, will open a new era of hope and enterprise throughout the province, and will for the first time make it an integral part of the Dominion.

But in order to enable this province to take full advantage of the boon thus offered it is necessary that its depleted revenues be restored, and the wrongs under which it has suffered be righted so far as they are capable of being righted by financial aid.
It is further submitted that Canada with its abounding revenues can now well afford the necessary relief, but cannot afford to permit its smallest province to be crushed under the burden of debt which now lies upon it.

The claim of the province to a share of the Fishery Award is presented separately. Other claims are reserved for future presentation.

Your memorialists therefore pray that Your Royal Highness in Council may be pleased to take into consideration the circumstances above set forth, and all other matters in question between this province and Canada, requiring adjustment to the end that justice may be done.

Dated this 17th day of February, A.D. 1911.

(Sgd.) JOHN A. MATHIESON,
Premier and Attorney General of Prince Edward Island.

JOHN McLEAN,
Member of the Executive Council of Prince Edward Island.

AUBIN E. ARSENAULT,
Member of the Executive Council of Prince Edward Island.

Schedule 'A.'

Friday, May 2, 1873.

And Mr. A. C. Macdonald reported that the Committee had come to a resolution which resolution was again read at the Clerk's table, and is as follows:

Whereas, the question of Confederation of this island with the Dominion of Canada having formed the subject of negotiations between the Dominion of Canada and the late Executive Council of this colony, the correspondence interchanged between His Excellency the Governor General and His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of this island, and the minutes of the Privy Council of Canada and this island, embodying certain terms and conditions relating to the proposed union, having been officially laid before the House are duly considered, the House is of opinion that said terms and conditions do not secure to this colony a sum sufficient to defray the ordinary and indispensable requirements of its local government, and are by no means equivalent for the revenue present and prospective which it would be called upon to surrender to the Dominion; and whereas the strong objections hitherto entertained by the people of this island to Confederation, having been much modified, and the present House of Assembly feeling anxious to meet the desire of Her Majesty's Imperial Government, to unite under one government all the British possessions in America, is willing in good faith and loyalty to merge the interests of the inhabitants of Prince Edward Island with those of their fellow subjects, in the Dominion, on terms which are just and reasonable, and such as will not involve the people of this island in direct local taxation for objects for which the ordinary revenue has hitherto enabled them to provide.

Resolved, therefore, that this House being most desirous to secure to the people of Prince Edward Island, on entering the union, just and reasonable terms, do hereby authorize His Honour the Lieutenant Governor to appoint delegates to proceed at once to Ottawa to confer with the Government of the Dominion of Canada on this great and important subject, with a full confidence that the terms to which they will agree, will be such as will insure their immediate and unqualified ratification by the Legislature of this Colony.

[153a]

To His Royal Highness Field Marshal Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and of Strathearn, Earl of Sussex in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, &c., &c., Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of Canada:

In pursuance of the Commission of Your Royal Highness, dated the twelfth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and twelve, by which I was appointed a Commissioner to make investigation into all material and relevant facts in relation to:

(a) The incorporation by Act of Parliament of the Farmers Bank of Canada and the organization thereof;
(b) the application for and the giving by the Treasury Board of the certificate permitting the bank to issue notes and to commence the business of banking;
(c) the conduct and operation of the business of the bank, the amount of capital subscribed and paid up, the causes of the suspension and failure, and the extent of the liabilities and the value of the assets thereof.

I have made the investigation which I was appointed to make, and have the honour to report:

Before dealing in detail with the special matters as to which inquiry is directed, it will be convenient to give a brief outline of the history of the bank from its incorporation until its suspension.

The bank was incorporated in the year 1904, by 4 Edward VII., chapter 77.

The applicants for the Act were James Gallagher, of the village of Teeswater, John Watson, of the town of Listowel, John Ferguson and Alexander Fraser, of the city of Toronto, and Alexander Shepherd Lown, of the village of Drayton, and they are named in the Act as the provisional directors of the bank.

The capital stock was fixed at $1,000,000, and, subject to section 16 of the Bank Act, the Act was to remain in force until 1st July, 1911.

By an Act passed in 1905 (4-5 Edward VII., chapter 92), it was provided that the Treasury Board, notwithstanding anything contained in the Bank Act or in the Chapter 77 of the statutes of 1904 incorporating the Farmers Bank of Canada, might within two years from the 18th July, 1904, give to the bank the certificate required by section 14 of the Bank Act, and it was further provided that if the bank did not obtain the certificate within that time "the rights, powers and privileges conferred" on the bank by the Act of incorporation and by the Act of 1905 should "thereupon cease and determine but otherwise" should "remain in full force and effect notwithstanding section 16 of the Bank Act."

By another Act, passed in 1906 (6 Edward VII., chapter 94), the time for obtaining the certificate of the Treasury Board was extended for six months from the 18th July, 1906, and this Act contained a provision similar to that contained in the Act of 1905 as to the consequence of failure to obtain the certificate within that time and as to the Act remaining in force notwithstanding section 16 of the Bank Act.
Section 16 of the Bank Act provides that:—

"16. If the bank does not obtain a certificate from the Treasury Board within one year from the time of the passing of its Act of incorporation, all the rights, powers and privileges conferred on the bank by its Act of incorporation shall thereupon cease and determine, and be of no force or effect whatever."

And it was in consequence of this provision that it was necessary to obtain the extensions which were granted by the Acts of 1905 and 1906.

The provisional directors met for organization on the 26th August, 1904, and, after having appointed John Ferguson, M.D., as chairman, and Alexander Fraser as secretary, and transacting some other business, passed the following resolution:—

"The first block of $500,000 of the capital stock shall be offered at par value, viz.: $100 each share at the price of $100 per share, and the payments on the same shall be as follows: $5 per share on subscription, a further $15 per share on allotment, and eight equal monthly payments of $10 each per share on the first day of each and every of the eight months immediately succeeding the date of such allotment."

Public notice was subsequently given that stock books, upon which would be recorded the subscribers of such persons as should desire to become subscribers in the bank, would be opened on September 6, 1904.

On that day another meeting of the provisional directors was held, at which the following resolution was passed:—

"That $500,000 capital stock of the Farmers Bank of Canada be placed in the hands of Mr. C. H. Smith for sale at par and that he be allowed a commission of five per cent on all stock placed and that the agreement to be entered into under this minute continue in force until the 6th day of January, 1905, subject to such further extension as may then be deemed expedient, and shall contain a clause that the Board may at any time rescind this agreement, provided that satisfactory progress has not been shown."

At the same meeting it was resolved that the provisional directors should be paid their railway fare, and for each meeting to those living out of Toronto, $20, and to those living in Toronto $10.

At a meeting held on the 26th November, 1904, a prospectus was approved and directed to be printed.

The first allotment of shares appears to have been made by the provisional directors on the 23rd day of December, 1904, and subsequent allotments were made from time to time by them.

At a meeting of the provisional directors held on the 5th September, 1906, a resolution was passed authorizing the giving of notice of a meeting of the subscribers for shares for the purpose of organization when the government deposit should have been made.

The deposit was made on the 23rd October following.

Notice of the meeting to be held on the 26th November following was given: it is dated the 18th October, 1906, and was first published in the "Globe" newspaper on the 22nd, and in the "Canada Gazette" on the 27th of that month.

The meeting was held pursuant to the notice, and at it a report of the provisional directors, which bears date the 22nd November, 1906, was read and adopted, and their acts were "confirmed, ratified and approved, and directors were elected and by-laws passed.

On the day following this meeting an application for the issue of the certificate of the Treasury Board was made; the application was accompanied by what purported to be a list of the shareholders, and among other documents a statutory declaration of W. R. Travers, the General Manager of the bank, in which referring to the list of shareholders, he declares that it is "a list of the subscribers to the capital stock of the said bank correctly setting forth as to each subscription the name of the subscriber, his address, the number of shares subscribed for by him, the amount of such shares, and the amount paid in thereon," and that each of the subscriptions 'is a bona fide subscription to the capital stock' of the bank.

At a meeting of the Treasury Board held on the 30th November, 1906, the issue of the certificate was authorized, and the certificaté was issued on that day.

The bank began business on the 2nd day of January, 1907, and suspended payment on the 19th day of December, 1910, and was subsequently ordered to be, and is now in process of being wound up.

I proceed now to deal in detail with the matters as to which I am directed to inquire.

It is not without significance, I think, as bearing upon the subsequent history of the bank, that its incorporators who became its provisional directors had no experience in the business of banking or in any other business in which they would have acquired the knowledge essential to the successful launching of a bank.

The provisional directors found much difficulty in procuring subscriptions for a sufficient number of shares to enable the bank to be organized and to obtain authority to issue notes and commence the business of banking.

The issue of $500,000 authorized at the meeting of 6th September, 1904, was first placed in the hands of Mr. C. H. Smith for disposal, and he was to receive a commission of 5 per cent 'on all stock placed.'

The progress made by Smith in obtaining subscriptions seems to have been slow, for on the 15th February, 1905, at a meeting of the provisional directors a motion was proposed by Dr. Ferguson and seconded by Mr. Fraser:

"That in view of the fact that the charter of the Farmers Bank will lapse at an early date and it is evident going to be grave difficulties in the way of disposing of the capital stock of the bank, be it resolved that all money paid on shares now placed be returned and the expenses up to date be defrayed equally by the provisional directors."

The motion, unfortunately, in the light of subsequent events, did not commend itself to the other directors, Messrs. Lowns, Gallagher and Watson, and it was lost.

After the defeat of this motion, it appears to have been decided to continue the efforts to obtain the necessary subscriptions, for immediately following it a motion made by Dr. Ferguson and seconded by Mr. Fraser:

"That an application be forthwith made to the Parliament of Canada for an extension of time for obtaining the certificate of the Treasury Board," was carried.

Efforts continued to be made to obtain the necessary subscriptions, but they do not appear to have been attended with much success, until after the 10th March, 1906, when Mr. W. R. Travers appeared upon the scene, and an agreement was entered into between him and the provisional directors by which he was authorized 'to sell all the capital stock' except portions of it which Smith and a firm of Toronto solicitors had been entrusted to sell. According to the terms of this agreement, Travers was to receive a commission of ten per cent on the stock sold by him, payable one-half on the signing of the subscription and payment of deposit, and the balance on allotment, and, subject to ratification by the permanent board of directors elected by the shareholders, he was to be engaged as General Manager of the bank for five years certain, to date from the issue of the certificate of the Treasury Board, at a salary of $4,000 for the first year, increasing by $1,000 in each of the subsequent four years, and if he should not be continued as General Manager after the five years he was to receive a pension of $1,500 a year during the remainder of his natural life.

The agreement contains other terms which it is not necessary to mention, and a provision that the expenses of the provisional directors, if they did not up to the date of the agreement exceed $16,000, should be paid out of the funds of the bank and that "the literature, office rent, and other incidental expenses of a like nature" should be paid by the bank.

At the same meeting, a resolution was passed that Lown and Smith should be given positions in the bank on its organization, Lown as secretary, and Smith as manager of a branch, or an equivalent position in the head office, and that in the event of their not being continued in office for a period to be agreed on between them and Travers, an adequate allowance should be made to them by pension or bonus, and a further resolution that an allowance of $3,000 each should be made to Ferguson and Fraser for their services and outlays as provisional directors in the organization of the bank, and that these sums should be paid when the bank should be ready for business.

On the 4th day of July, 1906, the agreement of the previous 10th March was put an end to, and a new agreement was entered into between Travers and the provisional directors.

By the new agreement it was provided that Travers was to be "allowed to sell" all unsubscribed shares of the first issue of $50,000 at par, and the remainder of the capital stock ($500,000) at such premium as might be decided on, up to the time at which the duties of the provisional directors should cease, and that he should be paid a commission of ten per cent for the expenses of selling the stock "payable one-half on the signing of the subscription and payment of deposit, and the balance on allotment"; that the provisional directors should be bound to allot all the stock on the application of Travers, and to make "all legal calls thereon," and at his request to call all meetings and do all acts which should be legally necessary for the organization of the bank, and that Travers should be engaged as General Manager for five years certain to date from the issue of the certificate of the Treasury Board at a salary of $5,000 for the first year, increasing by $1,000 in each of the subsequent four years.

This agreement also contained a provision similar to that of the earlier agreement as to a pension to Travers and as to his engagement as General Manager subject to ratification by the directors to be elected by the shareholders.

The agreement also provided that "the literature, office rent, and other expenses" of the organization of the bank should be paid by the bank, and confirmed all acts done by Travers, and "all accounts incurred by him as General Manager" up to the date of the agreement, and it further provided that Travers "accepted the legitimate accounts" as they then stood on the books for the expenses of organization to that time, and that he would allow to the provisional directors and Smith, who was also a party to the agreement, $20,000 as remuneration for their "services, surrender of charter" etc., to be paid out of the funds of the bank if confirmed at the meeting of the subscribers, and that Travers should thereafter have full control of the office of the bank and all affairs pertaining to its organization.

By a contemporaneous agreement the provisional directors and Smith agreed to assign to Travers "all their claims and interest" under the other agreement, and Travers agreed to accept their claim under it and to take "the responsibility of the claim and to pay the $20,000 to them immediately upon" their passing the necessary resolution to give the legal notice calling a meeting of the subscribers for the organization of the bank, and on the same day Travers paid them $10,000 on account of the $20,000, and an agreement was made between the provisional directors and Smith for the division of the $20,000 between them as follows: to Lown and Smith each $5,000; to Ferguson and Fraser each $3,500; and to Watson and Gallagher each $1,500, and the $10,000 was divided between them in those proportions.

The $10,000 paid by Travers was provided by paying him that sum on account of the commissions out of the money of the bank in the hands of the provisional directors, and the payment was authorized by a resolution passed on the same day.
Another agreement bearing the signatures and seals of all the parties to the agreement of the 4th July, 1906, was adduced in evidence; it bears the same date and is in all respects identical with that agreement except that the rate of commission is stated to be 15 per cent. According to the testimony of Travers this agreement was the final one between the parties and the one that was acted on, but the contrary was stated by the provisional directors who gave evidence.

It is unnecessary for the purpose of the inquiry to determine on which side the truth lies, and I therefore make no finding as to it.

It appears clear from these agreements and resolutions that what was intended was to sell the charter of the bank to Travers and to put him in control of its organization and business, and that the provisional directors should abdicate their functions and act in accordance with his directions, and that is what followed.

Travers at once set about obtaining the requisite subscribers and a vigorous canvass for that purpose was entered on, especially after an agreement was made in the following August between him and W. J. Lindsay for the latter assisting in the work and for an equal division of the commission between them.

A prospectus was issued by the provisional directors some time in March, 1906, and no doubt after the agreement of the 10th, as it appears to have been approved of by them at a meeting held on the 21st of that month. A copy of it appears in the return brought down to the House of Commons pursuant to an order of the House of the 10th January, 1911 (Exhibit 5, pp. 10, 11 and 12).

The prospectus contains the names of a number of persons who it is stated had consented to act as directors if elected, four of whom were called at witnesses on the inquiry and each of whom testified that as to him the statement was incorrect and unauthorized.

How far, if at all, persons were induced to subscribe in consequence of these statements does not appear.

The form of application to be signed by an applicant for shares appears on pages 13 and 14 of the return, and that form was used in most if not all cases; it provides for the payment in respect of each share of $10 on signing the application, $20 on allotment, and the remainder in seven equal monthly instalments of $10 each, the first of them to be paid in 30 days after allotment, and the succeeding ones at intervals of 30 days, and gives the applicant the right to pay in full on allotment.

In a number of cases a promissory note was given by the applicant for the full amount of his subscription, payable in most cases in twelve months to the order of "the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada."

In many cases no payment in cash was made at the time of the application or up to the time of allotment.

Questions having arisen as to the legality of taking promissory notes in settlement of subscriptions for shares, and as to the payment of commissions on such subscriptions, at a meeting of the provisional directors held on the 23rd June, 1906, it was decided to take the option of Messrs. Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor, a firm of Toronto solicitors, on the questions and to instruct Travers not to accept notes in lieu of cash and that the conditions set forth in the form of application should be adhered to "on a cash basis unless otherwise specially authorized by the Board."

Apparently only the first question was submitted to the solicitors, and their opinion as to it was that the provisional directors had power to accept subscriptions where the applicant gives his promissory note in payment for the shares in place of or in addition to "giving his subscription in the usual manner," and though the note should mature "at a time different from the payments in the subscription." A copy of this opinion was adduced in evidence and is Exhibit 13.

On the 4th July, following, the resolution "calling for the selling of stock on a cash basis" was rescinded.
I have no doubt that one reason, at all events, and probably the main one for accepting promissory notes was that Travers might be enabled by means of them to raise money to make up the cash deposit which had to be made as one of the conditions precedent to the issue of the certificate of the Treasury Board.

On the 5th September, 1906, as I have mentioned, authority was given to give the notice of the meeting of the subscribers for organization as soon as the government deposit should have been made; this authority was given Travers and he was authorized to do all other acts necessary for calling the meeting.

It is not open to question that $500,000 of the capital stock had not been then subscribed, and that $250,000 had not been paid by the subscribers.

It was contended that the statement in the statutory declaration of Travers, made on the 27th November, 1906, to which I have referred, and a copy of which appears on pages 7 and 8 of the return (Exhibit 5), that the list of subscribers marked Exhibit D to the declaration correctly set forth as to each subscription the name of the subscriber, his address, the number of shares subscribed by him and the amount of his shares, and that each subscription was a bona fide subscription to the capital stock of the bank, was untrue. The number of shares subscribed for, as shown by the list, was 5,792, though by an error in the addition it was stated to be 5,789, and the amount subscribed was $579,200, a corresponding error as to this having been made in adding up the figures; of these shares it was, however, stated that 35 were subscribed after the 22nd October, 1906, which as I have mentioned was the date of the first publication in the Globe newspaper of the notice calling the meeting of the subscribers, and Travers appears to have thought that subscriptions received down to and including that day, but not those received after it, were to be taken into account in making up the $500,000 which section 13 of the Bank Act requires to be bona fide subscribed before the meeting of the subscribers is called.

If the 22nd October, 1906, be the determining date, and as I think allotment was necessary to constitute an applicant for shares a subscriber within the meaning of the Act, the statement as to the number of shares that had been bona fide subscribed for was untrue, and on the hypothesis I have just mentioned less than 5,000 shares had been subscribed for.

If, however, all the shares for which bona fide applications had been then made were properly included, or the determining date was the date of the meeting of the subscribers, the statement was true.

I express no opinion as to what date is the determining one, as my function is not to pass upon questions of law, but only to determine questions of fact.

The statement in the declaration that the list of subscribers correctly set forth as each subscription "the amount paid in thereon" and the statement that the $250,000 deposited to the credit of the Minister of Finance and the Receiver General was paid out of the moneys paid in and which actually had been received in respect of the shares, was literally true, but was calculated to deceive the Minister of Finance as to the real facts and was intended to do so.

The fact was that two sums amounting together to $160,000 had been borrowed by Travers from the Trustees and Guarantee Company on the security of promissory notes made by applicants for shares which had been endorsed to him by the provisional directors for the express purpose of raising money to be used in making the deposit, as appears from the following resolution passed by the provisional directors on the 8th October, 1906:

"that the provisional directors execute a power of attorney to W. R. Travers for the purpose of endorsing all notes in their names as provisional directors and of signing their names to a note or notes for the purpose of raising funds to put up the deposit with the Government, and we authorize the Secretary to hand over all notes to W. R. Travers for the said purpose."
Acting under the authority of this resolution and armed with a power of attorney from the provisional directors to him, dated the 8th October, 1906, Travers, on the ninth day of October, 1906, borrowed from the Trusts and Guarantee Company $80,000, repayable in a month, on the security of promissory notes of subscribers amounting in the aggregate to $100,955, agreeing to pay interest on the loan at the rate of 10 per cent per annum and a bonus of $1,000, and on the twenty-third day of October, 1906, he borrowed from the same company $20,000, repayable on demand, on the security of promissory notes of subscribers amounting in the aggregate to $26,500, and certain shares of Loan Companies, valued at $20,500, which had been transferred to the bank in payment of subscriptions, agreeing to pay the same rate of interest and a bonus of $500.

For the loan of $80,000, the Trusts and Guarantee Company issued its cheque on the Bank of Montreal payable to the order of that bank 'For credit of the Farmers' Bank of Canada with the Finance Minister and Receiver General' and for the loan of $20,000 the company issued its cheque on the Ontario Bank payable to the order of the Bank of Montreal, for 'Credits Farmers' Bank of Canada with Finance Minister and Receiver General.'

The form was then gone through of crediting the proceeds of these loans, to the extent of $75,995, as payments on the shares of certain of the applicants for shares, as shown on pages 40 and 41 of Exhibit 63, and to the extent of $20,027 in substitution for securities which had been taken in payment for shares and were held by the provisional directors, and the latter sum was treated as having been paid in cash: the balance of the loans were used to cover in part expenses of organization which were not carried into the books of the bank until some months after it began business. $17,595 was placed to the credit of subscribers other than those whose promissory notes had been used for the purpose of obtaining the loans, and who had actually paid nothing on account of their shares, and in many cases subscribers' notes for much larger sums than were placed to their credit were pledged for the loans.

Although the form of applying the money borrowed in the way I have indicated was gone through, the real purpose of the transaction was to enable Travers to represent to the Treasury Board that a larger sum had been paid in than had been actually received on account of the shares, and Travers intended that as soon as the deposit of $250,000 was returned to the bank the loans should be paid off and the subscribers' notes be discounted in the various offices of the bank, and that was in fact done, about $60,000 having been repaid in December and the remainder in the March or April following.

That in thus dealing with these notes the provisional directors and Travers were guilty of a breach of trust does not, I think, admit of doubt, and for the manner in which the money borrowed was applied there was neither justification nor excuse.

When the Finance Minister, as I shall refer to more fully later on, raised the question as to whether money had been borrowed to make up the $250,000 deposit, and in his letter to Travers, of the 30th November, 1906, (Exhibit 5, p. 36), asked for an assurance from him that notes of subscribers who had not actually paid in cash but had given notes to the provisional directors had not been used to raise the money. Travers' letter in reply (Exhibit 5, pp. 36-37), while it was intended to appear to give the assurance for which the Minister had asked, did not do so; his letter was a brief one and was confined to the statement that the provisional directors had not raised the money in the way mentioned by the Minister, and the further statement that the Minister would find the statement that had been put in "absolutely correct as to the amount of stock subscribed and the amount paid up." These statements, though possibly literally true as Travers understood the transaction with the Trusts and Guarantee Company, which was that the loans were personal loans of his own, were, in fact, untrue and the language used in his letter was deliberately chosen by Travers in order to make it appear that he was giving the assurance for which the Minister had asked, while he was in fact not doing so and could not truthfully do so.
My conclusion on this branch of the inquiry is that the Treasury Board was induced to give its certificate by false and fraudulent representations on the part of Travers, and that if the facts I have mentioned as to the way in which the $250,000 was made up had been disclosed, the certificate of the Treasury Board would not have been given.

It is plain from the letter of the Finance Minister to Travers, of 20th November, 1906, that the Minister understood that section 13 of The Bank Act would not have been complied with if the $250,000 was made up wholly or in part of money raised on promissory notes given by subscribers for shares to the provisional directors and that he would have felt it his duty to recommend that the certificate should not be granted if he had known that part of the money had been raised in that way.

That that information had been given to the Minister before the certificate was issued appears from the testimony of Sir Edmund Osler and Mr. David Henderson and is shown by the letter of the 19th October, 1906, of Mr. Leighton McCarthy to the Minister, which appears in Exhibit 5, pp. 2, 3. In that letter Mr. McCarthy states as follows:

"I have received information that the alleged subscribers for shares paid a large sum of money in cash and have signed notes for other large sums of money and that the persons professing to act in the name of the bank have transferred notes and received the proceeds and that a deposit either has been or will be made of the cash received and the proceeds of these notes or sufficient amount to make up $250,000."

That the verbal information I have mentioned was conveyed to Mr. Fielding was not denied though he stated that, as I have no doubt was the fact, no formal objection to the granting of the certificate was made either by Sir Edmund Osler or by Mr. Henderson. That, however, in my opinion, is immaterial.

I do not suggest that the Minister would have been justified because of the information conveyed to him in recommending that the certificate should not be granted, or that the Treasury Board because of it would not have been justified in refusing to grant it, but, having received the information, it was in my opinion incumbent on the Treasury Board to have investigated the charges that had been made before coming to a conclusion as to whether or not the certificate should be given.

The officials of the Department of Finance appear to have treated Mr. McCarthy's letter as if it had never existed, and, in my opinion, in that they erred, for, although Mr. McCarthy on the 2nd November, 1906, wrote to the Minister informing him that the claims made by his clients had been "settled by their subscriptions being taken up by some parties interested in the bank and refunding the money paid by the individuals or returning the notes which had been given" and had withdrawn the objections which he had made on behalf of his clients to the issue of the certificates, Mr. McCarthy did not in any way intimate that the information he conveyed to the Minister as to the way in which the $250,000 had been made up had been found to be incorrect.

Although the information which had been conveyed to the Minister had evidently impressed him with the necessity for further inquiry on his part before advising that the certificate shall be given, the only inquiry made was that contained in his letter to Travers, of the 30th November, 1906, to which reference has been made, and strangely enough in that letter what is said to have led to the inquiry is stated, not, as one would have expected, that information of the character mentioned in the letter had reference to the application of the Farmers Bank but that it had reference to previous applications where it is said the application was in all respects apparently regular.

As I have already pointed out, Travers in his reply did not give the assurance for which the Minister had asked, viz., an assurance that nothing of the kind had taken place in relation to the subscriptions for the Farmers Bank, but that the amounts set forth in the application as having been paid up have in every case been bona fide cash payments.

Unfortunately, Travers' reply appears to have been treated by the Department as containing the assurance for which the Minister had asked.

I very much doubt whether in the circumstances it would have been right to have depended upon the word of Travers, even if he had given the assurance for which the Minister had asked. The information which had been conveyed to the Minister had come from gentlemen of standing, and if it was accurate the declaration of Travers had made was untrue and it would seem to have been almost an idle thing to ask for an assurance that there was no foundation for the statements that had been made to the Minister from the very man whose honesty was in question and unwise to have acted on that assurance.

It is true that, as Mr. Fielding stated in evidence, Travers, so far as he knew, was a reputable banker; but that was not, in my opinion, a sufficient reason for not having instituted an inquiry as to the matters which had been called to his attention. Such an inquiry could easily have been made, and the delay occasioned by it would have been inconsiderable, and such an inquiry would, undoubtedly, have resulted in the discovery of the manner in which the $100,000 had been raised and in the refusal of the Treasury Board to give the certificate.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to show that money had been used by Travers to procure the issue of the certificate. In support of it Travers testified to the issue of a cheque for $3,000 which he said was placed in an envelope addressed to Mr. Peter Ryan and sent to Mr. Ryan's room in the Russell House, at Ottawa, and afterwards presented and cashed.

That Ryan received this cheque or had any connection with it, if it was used for the purpose stated by Travers, was disproved.

There is, in my opinion, no ground for supposing that any improper influence was used to induce the Treasury Board to give the certificate or to induce the Minister of Finance to recommend the granting of it, and the most that can properly be charged against the Department of Finance or the Treasury Board is an error of judgment.

It was argued before me that there was a duty resting upon the Department of Finance upon receipt of the letter of the President of the Canadian Bankers Association (Mr. Clouston) (Exhibit 28) which reached the Department after the certificates of the Treasury Board had been given, to have taken steps to recall it, but I am not of that opinion and know of no power in the Department or in the Treasury Board to recall a certificate.

It is to be observed that this letter contained no further information than already had been communicated to the Minister of Finance by Sir Edmund Osler, Mr. Henderson and Mr. McCarthy.

It was unfortunate, I think, that the information conveyed to the Minister of Finance by Sir Edmund Osler and Mr. David Henderson as to the way in which the money deposited by the bank had been raised, if it was intended to prevent the issue of the certificate, was not conveyed to the Minister in writing, and it may be observed as probably indicative of their view as to the gravity of the irregularities of which they had been informed, that neither of them, though both were Members of the House of Commons, when the fact that the certificate had been given came to his knowledge, called in question in the House the action of the Treasury Board or made the granting by it of the certificate the subject of inquiry.

The action of the Canadian Bankers Association in receiving as it was said it had done the Farmers Bank into the Association was questioned by Mr. Fielding in his testimony before me, but his criticism was based upon an erroneous assumption as to the power of the Association to exclude from membership. On reference to the Act of incorporation of the Association, 63-64., cap. 93 D. it will be found that it had no such power, and that on the Farmers Bank becoming entitled to carry on the business of banking in Canada it became ipso facto a member of the Association.

I was asked by the representative of the shareholders and depositors to find that there was "neglect of duty on the part of the Finance Department after the" receipt of the letter of the 17th April, 1907, from Mr. G. Vankoughnet, the manager of the bank at Milton, addressed to the Deputy Minister of Finance ( Exhibit 5, p. 29), and informing him that promissory notes given in payment for shares were being discounted at the bank's branches and the proceeds credited to the head office, which included them in its returns as paid up capital and issued circulation accordingly.

In consequence of this letter, the Department, on the 2nd May, 1907, called for a special return showing (1) what part of the $375,473 paid up capital as shown by the return of 30th March, 1907, was represented by promissory notes or other obligations of shareholders or the proceeds of the same of which the bank was the holder or liable on, and (2) the names and holdings of stock of such shareholders with particulars of such notes or obligations as were then current.

The return asked for was made a few days afterwards. It appears on pages 35 and 36 of Exhibit 5, and shows that promissory notes amounting in the aggregate to $59,110 given by shareholders having shares of the aggregate par value of $92,700 were included in the $375,473, and were held by the bank, and no further action was taken by the department.

I am unable to find that in this there was any neglect of duty on the part of the Department, or to see that anything more than was done could have been done, even if Mr. Vankoughnet's letter had stated, which it did not, that the promissory notes he referred to were notes that had been given in respect of shares included in the list furnished to the department when the application for the issue of the certificate of the Treasury Board was made.

Notwithstanding the irregularities on the part of Travers and his misconduct in connection with the application for the certificate, which I have mentioned, the evidence satisfies me that if the bank had been prudently and honestly managed there is no reason why it should not have succeeded. The promissory notes that had been given by subscribers were for the most part good and were subsequently paid, and while it is true that if the certificate of the Treasury Board had not been granted the money of the shareholders and depositors would not have been lost, the efficient cause of that loss was the recklessness and fraud of those entrusted with the management of the bank, and not the granting of the certificate.

One of the first acts of Travers after the certificate had been obtained, was to cause a fraudulent entry to be made in the books of the bank as to the expenses incurred by the provisional directors, by writing down the amount of them, which was at least $10,513.71, to $32,127.71, the difference being concealed by treating as cash on hand three sums of $3,000 each, represented by cheques and obligations of persons who had subscribed for shares which had not been, if they were to be so treated, credited to capital account, and taking the remaining $3,978 and the $1,500 bonus paid to the Trusts and Guarantee Company, less $62 received from other sources, out of the money borrowed from the Trusts and Guarantee Company.

The subsequent management of the affairs of the bank was characterized by gross extravagance, recklessness, incompetency, dishonesty and fraud, and has resulted in the entire loss of the paid-up capital and the whole of the deposits, and that after allowing for all that can be extracted from the shareholders on their double liability a loss amounting to no less than $1,806,487, making a record unparalleled in the history of any bank in Canada, or, as far as I am aware, in any other country.

It is unnecessary to do more than state in general terms in what way these losses were incurred, as full particulars of them will be found in the carefully prepared and exhaustive statements of the liquidator, Mr. Clarkson, which accompany my report, and in which will also be found a history of the Keeley mine transaction in which a loss approximating $500,000, as afterwards mentioned, was sustained by the bank.

Subject to deductions in respect of some of the times of sums amounting in the aggregate to $42,377, during the short career of the bank, the bad debts amounted to $598,565; the operating losses, including the cost of printing bank notes and stationery, to $281,119; the organization expenses to $87,279; the sums stolen by officers of the bank, after deducting what has been and is expected to be recovered from sureties, to $134,118; the dividends paid, to $50,772; the losses on expenditures on bank premises, fixtures and furniture, to $108,801; the loss on the purchase of the Keeley mine, to $509,886, from which, however, is to be deducted what may ultimately be realized from the sale of it; loss on the purchase of stock in the Keeley Mine Company, $15,000; besides other losses amounting in the aggregate to approximately $63,274.

The amount of capital subscribed and paid up and the extent of the liabilities and the value of the assets of the bank appear in a statement prepared by Mr. Clarkson which is annexed to my report and is marked Exhibit 96.

Before concluding my report, it seems to me proper to mention some matters as to which evidence was adduced, and which have formed the subject of public discussion, and to state my conclusions as to them.

It was shown that the World Newspaper Printing Company had a credit with the bank for a considerable sum, and that money was kept on deposit at the bank bearing interest by the Treasurer of Ontario, and it was alleged that the credit was given by Travers on the understanding or agreement that in consideration of it being given the company should use its influence with the Provincial Government and its Treasurer to induce them to make deposits with the bank, that the company did use its influence to that end, and that its efforts resulted in the deposits that were made by the Treasurer or some of them being made.

Most of the transactions between the company and the bank were carried on on behalf of the company by Mr. Greenwood, who was its Managing Director.

Mr. Greenwood was a witness upon the inquiry and correspondence between him and Travers and between him and the Provincial Treasurer was put in evidence.

My conclusions as to these matters are:

1. That while it is probable that Travers thought that the giving of the credit which he gave to the company would result in such influence as the company could bring to bear upon the Provincial Treasurer to induce him to make deposits with the bank being used, and that Greenwood knew that Travers so thought and promised to use that influence, there was nothing in the nature of an agreement that as a consideration for giving the credit it would be used, and there is no reason of thinking that had the promise not been made the credit would not have been granted.

2. That if any such promise was made it was not communicated to the Provincial Treasurer, and that he was not made aware that it had been made, and that in making deposits with the bank he acted with nothing in view but the public interest and the making of a fair distribution of Government deposits between the banks carrying on business in Toronto.

I may add that since the inquiry was entered on, the whole of the indebtedness of the company to the bank has been paid.

It is proper also to say, in conclusion, that Travers appears to have thought the Keeley Mine a property of immense value and that by the sale of it all the losses which had been incurred would be met, and that he appears to be still of that opinion.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY
IN THE MATTER OF THE FARMERS BANK OF CANADA.

The Commission held its first meeting at 11 A.M. March 4th, 1912, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. There were present the following:

HON. SIR WILLIAM R. MEREDITH, Commissioner.
FRANK E. HODGINS, K.C., Counsel representing the Dominion Government.

There were also present counsel mentioned below.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Have you the notice, Mr. Hodgins?
MR. HODGINS: I might mention that public notice was given in all the Toronto papers, morning and evening, during the past week.

MR. COMMISSIONER: This meeting this morning is to open the Commission and have it read and make arrangements for the future meetings—Mr. Nield read the Commission, which is dated February 12th, 1912, and directs the Commissioner to make an investigation “into all material and relevant facts in relation to:

(a) The incorporation by Act of Parliament of the Farmers Bank of Canada and the organization thereof;

(b) The application for and the giving by the Treasury Board of the certificate permitting the Bank to issue notes and commence the business of banking;

(c) The conduct and operation of the business of the bank, the amount of the capital subscribed and paid up, the causes of the suspension and failure, the extent of the liabilities and the value of the assets thereof.”

THE COMMISSIONER: As to the date of our next meeting I can give Tuesday and the following days of next week, and the week after next except Saturday.

MR. HODGINS: I suggest beginning on Wednesday of next week in Ottawa. The Order in Council speaks of incorporation, organization, application for, and giving of the certificate by the Treasury Board, and that evidence is available in Ottawa conveniently, and I hope that a session there of a day or two may finish that part of it up completely, and then the subsequent sittings might be held in Toronto.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Are there any persons here, or persons representing others, who desire to be present at the inquiry?

MR. WILLIAM LAIDLAW, K.C.: I would wish to mention I received two telephone messages this morning, one from the East and one from the West; the parties are on the train coming down and there has been some delay in the arrival of the railway trains.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You are appearing for whom, Mr. Laidlaw?

MR. LAIDLAW: I have been representing the contributories in the proceedings in the liquidation.
Mr. Commissioner: You desire to represent them here?
Mr. Lairdlaw: Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: How does the date Mr. Hodgins suggest suit you?
Mr. Lairdlaw: Excellently well; I entirely agree with the suggestion made by Mr. Hodgins.
Mr. W. C Mikel: I represent depositors. That date seems to be satisfactory.
Mr. James Bain: I am here representing the liquidator.
Mr. Commissioner: What status has he?
Mr. Bain: Except possibly he will offer any assistance he possibly can.
Mr. D. I. Grant: I am representing a number of persons who have been served as directors and have been directors at one time and merely to watch proceedings. I do not know that we are interested particularly at this stage.
Mr. Commissioner: I suppose these delayed gentlemen will be informed of what has been done.
Mr. Lairdlaw: They will come to the office and I will give them the information.
Mr. Commissioner: I think that is all we can do now.
Mr. Hodgins: I think, Mr. Commissioner, for the information of some members of the profession who have spoken to me who represent people that they think may be affected in some way by these proceedings, that I see no objection for them coming in at any time when they think they are being affected and appearing; that it is not necessary for them to appear here to-day, that the idea to-day is only to ascertain who want to attend at their own expense during the whole inquiry.
Mr. Commissioner: I suppose there are no other questions that arise just now. How far these gentlemen who represent persons interested in the inquiry will be allowed to intervene can be disposed of later on as the occasion arises. I suppose that is satisfactory.
Mr. Lairdlaw: Quite satisfactory. I may say, Mr. Commissioner, that I do not think from the experience I have had in this matter there will be anything in controversy; the relevant and material facts are almost all in documentary evidence. There are two or three witnesses whom the parties would like to be examined, and I will give their names so that necessary notices can go to them.
Mr. Hodgins: I will be very glad if any gentlemen who have information will communicate it to me, and I will be glad to consider it and if necessary bring it before the Commissioner.
Mr. Lairdlaw: I will give you a very full brief. (At this point Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., came in.)
Mr. Commissioner: Do you represent anybody, Mr. Dewart?
Mr. Dewart: I was going to say, Mr. Commissioner, I am perhaps holding a watching brief at present.
The Commission adjourned to meet in Ottawa at 11 A.M. Wednesday, March the 13th, 1912.

Ottawa, March 13th, 1912.

The Commission resumed its sittings in the Court House, Ottawa, March 13th, 1913, at 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

The Commissioner, Honourable Sir William Meredith.
William Lairdlaw, K.C., representing the shareholders.
W. C. Mikel, K.C. and I. E. Weldon, representing the depositors.
Mr. Hodgins: The matters that I think can possibly be gone into here are in the first place, the incorporation by Act of Parliament of the Farmers Bank of Canada and the organization thereof, and application for and the giving by the Treasury Board of the certificate permitting the bank to issue notes and commence the business of banking, and possibly some evidence may be given as to the conduct and operation of the business of the bank so far as it came under the purview of the Department, and as to whether they affected the cause of suspension and failure is a matter that will be developed later. I therefore propose to take up in the first place the incorporation of the bank, which is largely formal.

Mr. Commissioner: What was it incorporated by?

Mr. Hodgins: By an Act of Parliament of Canada, 4 Edward VII, Chapter 77, on the 18th July, 1904. That named the provisional directors: Mr. James Gallagher who has since died; John Watson of Listowel; John Ferguson of Toronto; Alexander Fraser of Toronto, and A. S. Lown. That provided that subject to the provisions of section 16 of the Bank Act it was to remain in force until the 1st July, 1911. I have some doubts as to whether that is the right date.

Mr. Laidlaw: It means the Bank Act continued till 1911.

Mr. Hodgins: Then 4 and 5 Edward VII, Chapter 92, assented to on the 20th July, 1905, extended the time for the issue by the Treasury Board of the certificate to within two years after the 18th July, 1904, that is two years after its original incorporation, and if it did not get the certificate within that time the Act of Incorporation practically ceased. Then comes the last Statute, 6 Edward VII chapter 94. The passing of that is not given. That recites that the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank have by their petition prayed that it be enacted as hereinafter set forth. Then section 1 provides that notwithstanding anything in the Bank Act or the Statute of 1904 or 1905 the Treasury Board may within six months after the 18th July, 1906, give the said bank the certificate required by section 14 and in the event of not getting the incorporation by that date the rights and privileges by the Act of Incorporation should cease. I have Mr. Robideau here to produce papers connected with those incorporations.

Mr. Commissioner: Were they Acts?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, particularly with regard to 6 Edw. VII. I want to see the petition, because it is said at that time or shortly afterwards they transferred everything to Mr. Travers.

Mr. Commissioner: Mr. Henderson told me last night that he had been subpoenaed and his Parliamentary duties make it difficult for him to be here. He would like to be examined as early as possible. I told him you would no doubt facilitate that.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, I will do that. His evidence is confined to one branch of the case, and if you would like it taken now I can take it.

Mr. Commissioner: Very well, now.

DAVID HENDERSON, sworn, examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You are a Member of Parliament?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were a Member of Parliament in 1906?

A. Yes.

Q. Representing the County of Halton.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You became somewhat interested, I understand, in some matters connected with the organization of the Farmers Bank; I mean, interested to the extent of hearing and knowing about them?
A. Yes, I was present; do you mean the granting of the charter?
Q. About that time?
A. Yes, I was familiar with it from its inception.
Q. You never were financially interested one way or the other?
A. No, in no way; not personally.
Q. Your interest was in what sense?
A. Simply that I represented a county in which a very large amount of money had been subscribed in stock, and in that way I felt interested for the people I represented.
Q. This being called the Farmers Bank?
A. Well, it was so called, though practically it was not organized by farmers.
Q. Were you a member of the Banking Committee of the House of Commons?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember the fact that an application for extension was made on two occasions, in 1905 and 1906?
A. There were two occasions at any rate, if not three; two occasions; perhaps the first one would allow a year to apply for a certificate, and there would be two applications after that.
Q. The last application that I know of is contained in the Statute, 1906, which gave six months?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember that coming up in the Banking Committee?
A. Yes, it was limited to six months.
Q. Do you remember why?
A. Why it was limited?
Q. Yes?
A. We had in the Banking and Commerce Committee hesitated a good deal about extending the time; the Finance Minister objected very much, and I confess I concurred with him, usually supported him in that; and on the second occasion when they came back, we simply gave them six months, thinking as they had had two years it was not well to keep the matter dangling before the people longer, and the time was limited because we thought they should have been more active.
Q. Was anything known as to who was interested in the bank at that time?
A. Well, I knew nothing about it, I think, beyond the names of the provisional directors as published.
Q. Did any one appear before the Committee in order to urge this extension?
A. Now, I am not sure, I do not recall.
Q. Do you know who suggested limiting the time to six months?
A. I could not speak at this date; it may have been Mr. Fielding, or perhaps myself. I had adopted a policy of that kind—we had—the Committee had—adopted a policy of that kind, I think, with some previous charter.
Q. Was any inquiry made into the particular circumstances of the difficulty these people had in organizing?
A. I am not aware that there was any particular inquiry, the simple fact they had not succeeded in getting all the money; they asked for more time.
Q. They had six months. from the 18th July, 1906; probably about six months from the date it came up?
A. It was six months from the expiry of the previous year.
Q. After that, did you take any steps in connection with the organization of the Farmers Bank or with reference to it?
A. No, I think I could say none whatever.
Q. That is, you had nothing to do with the matter from that time?
A. No.
Q. Did you make any communication at all at any time to the Finance Department with reference to it or to any one connected with the Finance Department? A. I had a conversation with the Hon. Mr. Fielding with reference to their mode of raising money.

Q. Had you known about that yourself? A. I incidentally learned it a few days before I went to him that they were discounting the notes which had been taken from shareholders.

Q. They were discounting the notes; did you know anything more than that? A. I was shown several notes made by shareholders, farmers in my county, and I saw on the back of these notes the endorsement of the provisional directors.

Q. That would be several names, would it? A. Yes, there were several names.

Q. How did you see those? A. A few days before the House met; the House met that year, I think, on the 22nd of November—a day or two days before I had occasion to go to Milton, from where I lived in the village of Acton, and on my way I met the solicitor of a number of farmers who had contested their liability to pay their stock, feeling that something was wrong.

Q. Who was the solicitor you met? A. Mr. Laidlaw.

Q. Where were you going from when you met him? A. I was going from home, from the village of Acton, by way of Georgetown to Milton.

Q. By rail? A. Yes.

Q. Did you meet him? A. Just met him casually in the car.

Q. Had he the notes? A. Yes, he showed them to me.

Q. That would fix the time at which you acquired your first knowledge?

Mr. Commissioner: He has not mentioned the year yet.

Mr. Hodgins: Can you fix the date at all to that? A. I can fix it by reference to other matters, I said the House met that year on the 22nd November.

Q. What year was it? A. 1906; the House met that year on the 22nd November, and it would be short time before that, perhaps not more than a few days.

Q. What communication did you make then, and to whom, in consequence of what you saw and heard from Mr. Laidlaw? A. I casually met Mr. Fielding and informed him that I had seen notes of shareholders in the possession of Mr. Laidlaw, endorsed by provisional directors, and presumably it was for the purpose of raising money to make the deposits, as the time had nearly expired. Our conversation lasted only for a few minutes and was along that line.

Q. Can you give us in any more detail what was said by you and by him, or is that what you have told us the general tenor of it? A. By Mr. Fielding?

Q. Yes? A. I mentioned the circumstance which I have detailed to you, and Mr. Fielding, I think, seemed somewhat surprised; at any rate, he answered me by saying that he would hold back the certificate as long as he could.

Q. Would you look at this note, which I find in the Department’s file, just for the purpose of seeing whether you can state what endorsements were on the notes you saw? A. I could not state what endorsements were on the notes, but I remember there were several; that was the impression I had, although I had not seen the notes for five years; that is the impression I had, a series of endorsements like that.

Q. You could not recognize and give the names of the men? A. No, I could not say who were the provisional directors at that time.

Q. You had no further conversation with Mr. Fielding at that time? A. No, I have given you just the conversation we had; I don’t think it lasted more than two or three minutes at the outside.

Q. How soon after your coming down to Ottawa was that? A. I would assume, I have no absolute data, but I would assume it would be within three or four days at the furthest, within a few days; I may mention this as fixed in my memory, I knew it was before the granting of the certificate, because Mr. Fielding told me he would hold it back as long as he could, and it was after the House met; the House met on the 22nd, the certificate was granted about the 30th, so it was between the 22nd and the 30th; I would suppose I went to Mr. Fielding possibly within a day or two at the outside after I came down.

Q. Were you communicated with either by Mr. Fielding or any one at the Finance Department between the date of that conversation and the 30th when the certificate was issued? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in attendance in Parliament during that time? A. I was in attendance all the time, but after the certificate was granted I was communicated with but not before.

Q. How soon after the certificate was granted can you say did you have any communication? A. I met Mr. Fielding in the lobby of the House of Commons, he was either going in and I was going out, or I was going in and he was going out, I don't remember which, but I remember very well it was in the lobby of the House of Commons and Mr. Fielding approached me himself and he said to me that Mr. Travers had been down; that was the communication he made to me.

Q. What occurred then, what further was said? A. He stated that Mr. Travers had been down and he had brought his money; that he had asked him, that he had put it up to him—he did not say definitely what he had put up to him; he left me to assume on account of our conversation within a few days before that it was what I had told him—and that Mr. Travers had denied it, and he asked him to give him a letter to that effect and he said he did so; and he says, "I then gave him the certificate."

Q. You have known Mr. Fielding for a long time? A. I have known him for over 15 years.

Q. After that had you any conversation with Mr. Fielding in connection with another aspect of the Farmers Bank? A. Not for about two years after that; I met Mr. Fielding again and he spoke to me. I assumed he had done so, because I had impressed upon him in the first visit the reason why I felt so anxious about the Farmers Bank, the large amount of stock subscribed in the county, and Mr. Fielding I should say about two years after my first interview met me just casually and mentioned the fact that he had learned that the bank was peddling around a deposit receipt of $150,000 in New York and failed to get a purchaser and he thought it looked very bad for the bank.

Q. Was there any reference to any other transaction? A. No reference whatever in none of these conversations.

Q. I say to any other transaction than the $150,000? A. Not at that time. We had a conversation the latter part of 1910 before I left to go home after the prorogation.

Q. What was the date of the $150,000 deposit conversation? A. My own impression is, and it is only an impression, that it would be about two years after the first interview. The bank had been running for some time.

Q. Did you ever hear of any transaction in connection with the City of Syracuse or an institution there? A. Yes.

Q. Was that on the same occasion or on a later occasion? A. That was on a later occasion.

Q. In 1910? A. Yes. On that occasion I went to Mr. Fielding's room in the House of Commons, to his office, to see him personally. I had information that there was something of a very peculiar character which seemed to me would materially affect the bank's interests, and its standing, and I felt, as I said before, very naturally worried and anxious about it and I called on Mr. Fielding and told him what I had learned. He was familiar with the facts himself, as much so as I was, and after chatting a few moments about it he turned to me and said, "Well Henderson I don't know why you should worry over this; you are not responsible for it and besides you did warn the Government."
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I just want to identify the transaction you and he were discussing then; where did it take place? A. You mean the later conversation?

Q. Yes? A. I called at his office and informed him—the fact of it was I had some clippings from newspapers giving an account of this transaction.

Q. Where did that take place? A. This conversation?

Q. No, this transaction, was it in the head office? A. I assumed it had taken place in Syracuse.

Q. Do you remember any of the names connected with it; I want to identify your conversation with the transaction which we may give in evidence later on? A. I am not sure that I can; I am under the impression strongly that Mr. Travers name was connected with it.

Q. Was it in connection with an insurance company in the United States? A. Yes, Syracuse was where—

Q. Would you recognize the name Tevis or Hunt? A. I think the name Tevis would be mentioned in these newspaper clippings.

Q. One of my learned friends wishes me to ask you whether on the very first occasion of all when you spoke to Mr. Fielding before the granting of the certificate, you communicated any of your reasons to him beyond what you have told me? A. I think I have told you all the reasons that I had for making the inquiry. It was the fact that a very large amount of money had been subscribed in the County and a great many people whom I know who were living in the County were deeply interested. That was the nature of the reasons why I brought the matter to his attention.

Mr. Commissioner: Why did not you put in writing your warning? A. Well, we do not always put everything in writing that we say to a Minister. Sometimes it is safer not to put it in writing; that is my experience. It did not occur to me at the moment to put it in writing, besides I think I simply met him casually; sometimes these things are given out to the public, but into other hands sometimes to the detriment of the Member of Parliament. They might say it was undue interference on my part. However, my own impression is I met Mr. Fielding casually, this matter was in my mind, and I just simply mentioned the matter to him, told him what I knew about it. Of course being Finance Minister I did not require to put it in the shape of a warning, because he knew the effect of a thing of that kind. It did not occur to me at the moment the necessity of putting it in writing; I thought that he was the man that if he had the knowledge that that would possibly be as far as it would be necessary for me to go, he having control practically of the issue of this certificate, and being the chief member of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Commissioner: What did you expect Mr. Fielding could have done at the time you had these later conversations with him? A. I did not really expect anything; I thought the whole fat was in the fire, if I may so use the expression. Mr. Fielding approached me himself on the second occasion and told me that Mr. Travers had been down with his money and how he had asked him for a letter after receiving his denial and that he had given him the certificate. On the third occasion Mr. Fielding also approached me and spoke of the matter himself. It was only on the first and last occasions that I went to Mr. Fielding. On the latter occasion I went to Mr. Fielding to express to get his views perhaps or to make him aware of what I had been made aware of myself, and I found he had more knowledge, as much knowledge at any rate as I had; so that I did not expect to accomplish anything in these interviews.

Mr. Commissioner: You say that Mr. Fielding said that he would hold back the certificate as long as he could? A. Yes, your Lordship.

Q. What does that mean, did you not make any inquiry as to what he meant by that? A. No, I did not because I thought I understood what he meant by it. He had the power within his hand to hold back the certificate unless everything was satisfactory, and I simply accepted that answer knowing the official position which he held as the Chairman of the Board, and did not ask him for any explanation of what he meant by those words.

Q. You say that upon the last occasion he told you not to worry, that you had warned the government; did you not say anything upon that? A. I do not recall anything further that I said. He acknowledged that I had done my part, that I had warned the government and said that I should not worry. I saw nothing more that I could accomplish and I am not aware that I made really any reply to that. I would simply say that our interviews were all extremely brief. You know how it is interviewing a Minister sometimes. You have to be very careful and not monopolize his time too much.

MR. HODGINS: I would like to call Mr. Laidlaw just for the purpose of fixing the date of that interview between himself and Mr. Henderson.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Is not that fixed with sufficient particularity now without calling one of the counsel? He fixes it within two or three days.

MR. HODGINS: Very well, then.

NARCISSE ROBIDEAU, called on subpoena.

MR. HODGINS: Q. I just want to know whether you have the papers of the incorporation of the Farmers Bank? A. All I have are the minute books and an extract from the minutes.

Q. What are those minutes? A. The minutes show what was done with the Bill in the committee room.

Q. Are you speaking of the minutes of the Banking and Commerce Committee?

MR. COMMISSIONER: What is Mr. Robideau's official position? A. Clerk of the Banking and Commerce Committee.

MR. HODGINS: All you brought with you this morning are the minutes? A. The minute books.

Q. Is there any minute kept of the last statute 6 Edward VII, chapter 94, the extension for six months? A. Yes. (Indicates.)

MR. COMMISSIONER: Who was Chairman of that committee? A. Mr. H. H. Miller was the Chairman.

MR. HODGINS: I think this memorandum might go in; it is just an extract from the minutes of the Committee. There is no matter about the first two. The last is dated the 11th of May, 1906;

"The preamble was read and adopted after Mr. Urquhart, of Toronto, had been heard thereon.

"Section 1 was amended by substituting 'six months' for one year on line 5."

—Extract from minutes of Banking and Commerce Committee, filed as EXHIBIT 1.

MR. HODGINS: Will you tell me if there was a petition presented before that last Act of 1906? The Act itself says that the provisional directors by their petition have prayed that it be enacted. A. There must have been a petition.

Q. Who will have that petition? A. It would be in the custody of Mr. Colwell, the keeper of the records.

Q. Could you get it?

MR. COMMISSIONER: Get a certified copy.

MR. HODGINS: A certified copy could be got of that? A. Yes.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Would that be the only paper that would come before the Committee other than the formal paper of advertising and so on.  A. Yes, the notice of application would come before the Standing Orders Committee.
Q. Is it usual to have the petition sworn to?  A. No.
Q. Just a petition signed?  A. Yes.

THOMAS BEATTIE, sworn, examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You are a Member of Parliament?  A. Yes.
Q. And were you a Member of Parliament in 1906?  A. I think I was, I am not very certain.
Q. Were you a Member of Parliament in 1904 and 1905 as well?  A. No, I don’t think I was.
Q. You were at that time President of the London City Gas Company?  A. Yes.
Q. And Director of the Agricultural Savings and Loan Company of London?  A. Yes.
Q. In the papers which I propose to put in in connection with the Farmers Bank, there is a prospectus which makes the following statement:
   “The following gentlemen have consented to act as Directors if elected”—then after the name of his Honor Mr. Forget comes the name of Major Thomas Beattie, President of the London City Gas Co., and so on—would that refer to you by description?  A. I think it would.
Q. Had you ever agreed or consented to act as Director, if elected, of the Farmers Bank?  A. I never agreed or consented. Perhaps, if I just tell how it came about it would be better. One Sunday night, I think about 10 o’clock, in my house I was called to the telephone to speak to Toronto. The gentleman speaking said it was Mr. Travers. I knew Mr. Robert Travers, who was Manager of the Bank of Montreal in Peterborough. He was in London for many years. He was then in Almonte at that time, and I thought I was speaking to Mr. Robert Travers. He said he was getting up a new bank, and asked me if I would join with them, and I told him I might if there were parties associated that I would approve of; and that is all at that time until Monday morning before I had had breakfast a party came to my house, ready for me to sign. The thing was done so sharp it aroused my suspicion.
Q. Before breakfast?  A. Yes. The telephone was on Sunday night, and this was on Monday morning, and it roused my suspicion and I said to the party, what is the hurry about this?  I said, “When did you leave Toronto?” He said he left Toronto just after I spoke to Mr. Travers. I said, “When did Mr. Travers leave the Bank of Montreal?” He told me Mr. Travers was never in the Bank of Montreal; and then I discovered I had been speaking to a man I did not know; and I hesitated about doing anything, and I went down to the Merchants Bank, where I found Mr. Travers had been employed, and the reputation I got of him was such that I concluded I had better have nothing to do with him, and I went back and told the gentlemen I would not sign any papers; and I found at that time he had issued a prospectus; he had used my name without any consent of mine whatever. I had several parties write me about my name on the prospectus, and I wrote them saying I had nothing to do with the bank and did not intend to have.
Q. Do you know who this was who came to see you on Monday morning?
A. Yes, a man named Lindsey.
Q. W. J. Lindsey? A. Yes.
Q. When did you tell him that you would have nothing to do with it? A. It was on Monday morning after I had been down to the city.
Q. That same morning? A. Yes.
Q. I understand he wanted you to sign some stock subscription? A. Yes.
Q. Did he discuss with you your becoming a Director or merely taking stock? A. I could not be certain whether he discussed with me or not, he wanted me to take stock.
Q. There was no authority for the use of your name as director? A. Not at all, he simply came there and I think he told me they would have to be in a great hurry, because they were anxious to get the bank going, and that is the reason he came so early.
Q. Can you fix the date at all? A. No, I don’t think I could.
Q. Can you fix the year? A. I do not know that I can do that; it was before the bank started at all, before any meeting of stockholders, because he came to London some three different times to see me and wanted me to subscribe for $5,000 of stock, that he would make me President of the bank.
Q. This conversation was the first time you had any interview? A. Yes.
Q. How long after that was the first meeting of shareholders? A. It was some time after that. The first meeting of shareholders, I could not tell the date, but it was before the meeting of Directors.
Q. Could you give us information as to the date? A. No.
Q. Was it the same year? A. I think it was the same year.
Q. That the bank got its certificate? A. Yes, it was.
Q. Were you a Member of Parliament in 1906? were you in Parliament in 1906? A. I cannot tell you without looking over the records. It was the time Mr. Hyman resigned that I came back that year.
Q. Perhaps you could give me that later when you were there and whether you were attending that session that began the 92nd November, 1906? A. I can get it for you.
Q. You had no further connection with the matter? A. I had no further connection with the matter whatever; they simply made use of my name and put it in the prospectus and said I had consented to be a director if elected and I had no stock and could not state that at all.

SYDNEY FISHER, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You were one of the Ministers in the late Cabinet? A. Yes.
Q. Minister of Agriculture? A. Yes.
Q. In 1906? A. Yes.
Q. Were you a member of the Treasury Board? A. I have been a member of the Treasury Board, but I would not like to give definite dates as to when I went on the Board. I was a member of the Board once or twice at intervals when other members of the Treasury Board were absent from Canada, taking their place, and then eventually I went on the Board permanently, but I could not say what dates. Mr. Boville can tell you. What date do you mention?
Q. November, 1906? A. I think I was a member of the Treasury Board but I am not certain.
Q. Five and the Minister of Finance? A. I think so.
Q. Which would make six in all—
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Mr. T. C. Boville: I find immediately before and immediately after this meeting Mr. Fisher was a member of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Hodgins: I am proposing to put in on Mr. Boville’s examination an abstract from the minutes of the Treasury Board held in Ottawa the 30th of November, 1906; have you any recollection at all of that meeting, the one in which the Farmers Bank certificate was directed to be issued? A. No, I do not think I was present. The Farmers Bank question was drawn to my attention later on, and my memory is I was not present when the certificate was issued.

Q. You probably would remember the granting of a certificate for a bank to go into operation? A. I think so.

Q. Was there any regularity in the calling of the meetings of the Treasury Board, any formality about it? A. The members of the Treasury Board received a notice from the Secretary of the Treasury Board.

Q. Would you be able to say whether that was a meeting of which you had notice but did not attend it? A. If I did not attend it was probably because I was away from Ottawa, and the notice would go to my office and no further attention would be paid to it.

Q. At all events they were formal calls? A. Usually, not invariably; occasionally the Chairman would give us verbal notice and say “I have to have a meeting of the Treasury Board;” and he might say to meet him at a certain time.

Q. When the meetings were held, were minutes kept of the meetings? A. Yes.

Q. Who was charged with the duty of keeping minutes? A. Mr. Boville was the Secretary of the Treasury Board.

Q. He would record who were present and the business transacted? A. Yes, I think it was the practice to record who were present, I would not be positive as to that, because I never examined any of the minutes.

Q. If he did not, how would any record be kept of the action of the Treasury Board? A. He would keep minutes of what business was transacted. I only say I am not sure that he recorded who were present.

Q. Speaking for the moment on the question of there being six members on the Treasury Board, now would the minute show at all as to how many were present? A. I would suppose, speaking only as a supposition, because I never examined the minutes, that the minutes would declare there was a duly authorized meeting of the Treasury Board.

Q. Was there any effort made to keep up a quorum or was that matter ever decided by the committee to your knowledge as to how many would form a quorum of the Treasury Board? A. Yes, there was a definite quorum.

Q. Do you remember how many that was? A. I think it was four, perhaps three, including the President and Chairman.

Q. Three including the Minister of Finance, or three together with the Minister of Finance? A. I think three including him.

Q. That would only be three out of six? A. Yes.

Q. Was it your practice to sign minutes in any way? A. Not for the members; I won’t say the Chairman did not.

Q. Was it your custom to sign any memorandum at all of the minutes of the meeting or verifying the business done? A. No, I never did it.

Q. Have you the minutes of that meeting Mr. Boville?

Mr. Boville: Yes. (Produces minutes.)

Mr. Hodgins: I produce, Mr. Commissioner, and will put in a copy—

Mr. Commissioner: You had better put that in afterwards and direct your questions to Mr. Fisher.

Mr. Hodgins: “Ottawa, 30 November, 1906. Present: Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, Chairman; Right Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce; Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries.
"The Board had under consideration application made by the Farmers Bank of Canada under the provisions of the Bank Act for the issue by the Treasury Board of a certificate permitting the said bank to issue notes and commence the business of banking. It having been shown to the satisfaction of the Board that all the requirements of section 15 of said Act had been complied with, the Board authorized the issue of the certificate applied for.

Signed, "W. S. Fielding, Chairman."

That does not show your presence there; may I take it that you as a member of the Treasury Board had no knowledge of the correspondence with the Finance Department which they then had, or the information which was in their possession on the 30th November? A. I had no knowledge.

Q. Had there been a previous meeting of the Treasury Board say in October or November at which you were present in which the Farmers Bank matter came up at all? A. I do not remember any meeting of the Treasury Board in which I was present that the Farmers Bank matter was discussed.

Q. I am putting in from the Department file this document, which is an extract from the minutes of a meeting, with the initials of the three gentlemen who are said to have been present that day upon it, and I show it to you, just to ask you if that is in accordance with the practice where a meeting has been regularly called and held? A. Yes, these signatures were put on the Treasury Board reports to Council.

Q. Always? A. Always, at any rate—

Q. Is that a report to Council? A. This is a minute; yes, I would call this a minute of the Treasury Board for Council.

Q. Then were the minutes of the Treasury Board always reported to Council? A. The Treasury Board had to report to Council for action of the Council.

Q. But if they had not to report a matter on which Council had to act would they report? A. No.

Q. Would you think the Council had to approve of the issue of this certificate? A. No, the Treasury Board had power to issue the certificate without the report to Council.

Q. Would that make any difference? A. That may mean that that was simply an adoption of the minute of the Treasury Board by the Treasury Board.

Q. I just called your attention to it to know whether it was in accordance with the practice so far as you knew it, that the members of the Treasury Board should initial the minutes where apparently from the book it would appear that they had all attended and passed the resolution; you say the initials were appended in your knowledge to reports or minutes sent to Council for their action? A. Yes.

Q. And in that case only? A. I would not say in that case only; I am not certain, I do not remember now positively whether we were in the habit of initialling the action of the Treasury Board in itself or only the reports to Council.

Q. You are not able to speak? A. No, I would not like to say positively one way or the other on that.

THOMAS COOPER BOVILLE, Sworn, Examined BY MR. HODGINS.

Q. You are Deputy Minister of Finance? A. Yes.

Q. And did you occupy that position in 1906? A. I was appointed on the first November, 1906.

Q. Then prior to that what was your position? A. I had been Secretary of the Department of Finance.
Q. It was a step up on the first November? A. Yes.
Q. Had you occupied the position of Secretary long? A. Not very long, for a few years.
Q. To which of those offices appertains the duty of keeping the minutes of the Treasury Board? A. The Deputy Minister of Finance is also Secretary of the Treasury Board.
Q. Had you begun to keep them on the first November, 1906? A. Yes.
Q. Who would have kept them prior to that? A. My predecessor Mr. Courtney. He was also Deputy Minister of Finance and Secretary of the Treasury Board.
Q. Before we get into your file that you produce here, can you tell me if there is a quorum of the Treasury Board? A. Yes.
Q. How is that fixed? A. Established by Order in Council.
Q. Passed do you remember when? A. It was before 1906.
Q. Is it of long standing? A. Yes.
Q. Does that Order-in-Council provide that the Minister of Finance shall be a member of the quorum? A. No.
Q. The Treasury Board consists of the Finance Minister and six other members? A. Five other members. The members of the Treasury Board, outside of the Minister of Finance, are appointed by the Order-in-Council. The Treasury Board at that time consisted of the Minister of Finance and four others who were appointed by Orders-in-Council.
Q. Can you give me their names? A. Mr. Fielding—I was speaking from memory, not from definite record.
Q. Have you a record there? A. The Orders-in-Council will give you exactly, but I will speak from memory, and I think I am correct: Mr. Fielding, Chairman; Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Brodeur and Mr. Fisher.
Q. And that would only make five all told? A. Yes.
Q. I understand from Mr. Fisher that six was the number? A. The formation of the Treasury Board is statutory.
Q. Does not that say six; that is my impression? A. Section 9 of Chapter 23, Revised Statutes, "There shall be a Board, to be called the Treasury Board, consisting of the Minister of Finance and any five of the members belonging to the King's Privy Council, to be nominated from time to time by the Governor-in-Council."
Q. One would naturally suppose there were six members? A. Yes.
Q. And who was the sixth? A. I don't think there was any sixth.
Q. Where would we go to find out? A. The Orders-in-Council. I can give you copies of the Orders-in-Council; I can get them from the Clerk of the Council.
Q. You have minutes of the Treasury Board here, would you mind turning them up and let me see the October minutes? A. (Produces Minute Book:) Before you go into that it would be wise for me to explain the method.
Q. I will no doubt ask you that. I do not want to look into any of these matters that do not concern me, but perhaps you will look over that and say just what meetings there were in October.

Mr. Commissioner: Do you mean in reference to this bank or generally?
Mr. Hodgins: Generally.
A. On the 26th October; 17th October; 13th October; 4th October; 31st September.
Q. That will be sufficient; who were present at those meetings? A. The 21st September, Fielding, Paterson and Brodeur; 4th October, Fielding, Brodeur and Fisher. The 13th October, Fielding, Cartwright and Paterson. The 17th October, Fielding, Cartwright, Paterson and Brodeur. The 26th October, Cartwright, Paterson and Fisher.

Mr. Commissioner: Mr. Fielding was not there? A. No.
Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Fisher was a member then during those two months? A.
Yes.

Q. Is there any mention in any of those you have gone over prior to the 30th
November of the Farmers Bank? A. None at all.

Q. You have carefully compared them in order to see? A. Yes.

Q. The minutes of each of these, who would have kept them from the 1st November? A. I probably was in charge of the Department at that time in October; I was probably acting at that time.

Q. Whose handwriting are they in? A. Different clerks’ handwriting.

Q. You were in charge, Mr Courtney having left? A. Practically left at that time.

Q. And you would then be responsible for the minutes? A. Yes.

Q. In what way were those minutes kept, taking the October minutes; there seemed to be a good deal of business transacted? A. A great deal. Almost the whole of the minutes represent reports which are passed upon by the Board and are recommended for action by the Privy Council.

Q. Probably nine-tenths? A. Probably more than nine-tenths—99%.

Q. What is the residue? A. The residue was cases such as this kind.

Q. Which kind? A. Cases that required the action of the Treasury Board only.

Q. That would be the remaining 1%? A. Yes, very small.

Q. That does not tell me how the minutes are kept of the meeting; does the Treasury meet around the table? A. As a rule.

Q. You as Secretary would be there? A. Yes.

Q. And these reports come in through you? A. The reports usually come to the Board in the shape of papers, recommendations from the different Departments and so on, they are dealt with.

Q. They are presented to the Board and dealt with by them? A. Yes.

Q. How is the record kept? A. Then under my direction a precis was made of each recommendation, and these are gathered together and placed in one report, signed by the Minister of Finance and sent on to Council.

Q. That precis would only be a sort of condensed statement of the report.

A. Yes. of the action taken by the Board on these respective cases.

Q. The reports themselves are presented to the Board? A. Yes.

Q. And reports then go back to you as Secretary—

Mr. Commissioner: Are we very much concerned in these that have nothing to do with the action of the Treasury Board?

Mr. Hodgins: We are getting the practice.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think it is worth while.

Mr. Hodgins: Is there any difference in treatment between cases where the Treasury Board have not the power to take final action, where they report to Council and where they take final action? A. In the one case the report of the Treasury Board, signed by the Minister of Finance, is sent to the Privy Council: in other cases the precis of the cases is prepared and either attached on the file or kept by themselves and finally copied into this book: that is one of them.

Q. Finally copied into this book? A. Not finally, but ultimately.

Q. I suppose this 30th November minute is a copy from somewhere else?
A. A copy from the document under your hand.

Q. A copy from the document which I have here with printed top, “Extract from the minutes of the Meeting — A. That is a draft.

Q. Which is a draft? A. You see it is a draft underneath.

Q. You said it was a draft, which is a draft? A. The copy underneath is a draft.

Q. But the document itself you said a moment ago was under my hand is what? A. The final document of the Treasury Board.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I want a little explanation about this; that is not written out, it cannot be written out while the Board is sitting, because it is typewritten?  A. No.
Q. Is there any way in which you take minutes of what they do when they are sitting?  A. I may take a rough memorandum on a slip of paper of those who are present, and then the cases of this kind you will find the papers are all submitted to the Board, and on the back I may take a rough memorandum of Yes or No; ultimately preparing the minute.
Q. Have you a recollection in this case of what you did?  A. In this case the draft was prepared, the papers had been gone through and a draft minute was prepared for Mr. Fielding for his use. That he took with the papers, and it was ultimately returned to me with the initials on it as a minute of the meeting, and these initials on the corner are my certificate, so to speak, of those who were present at the meeting, where I am not present myself.
Q. So far as you know, there was no meeting?  A. I was not present at a meeting.
Q. Will you say there was a meeting  A. I do not know; I will give you my impression.
Q. I am not asking for impressions; would you say this minute in that book, page 458—I think you have told us that that is the final— A. Ultimate rescript.
Q. That would be prepared from this minute which bears the initials in the corner?  A. Yes.
Q. And so far as you are concerned you were not present at a formal meeting?  A. No.
Q. That is all I want to ask you about that. You said a minute was prepared for Mr. Fielding. This document, which I suppose might go in by itself as EXHIBIT 2—perhaps the whole file might go in.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: We must get certified copies of them; I do not want originals. Certified copies will answer all the purpose.
Mr. HODGINS: I may say a Return has been printed by the House of Commons which contains quite a number of these, and I shall be glad to put that in if we can find any other copy, with certified copies of the additional documents I may want, and perhaps the Registrar will take a note of the documents I want copies of. I will want a copy of the Minute of November 30th, 1906, of the Meeting of the Board, the extract. This, which will be EXHIBIT 2, is signed by you. It is an extract from the minutes of the Meeting of the Treasury Board held in Ottawa on the 30th November, 1906: “The Board had under consideration an application made by the Farmers Bank of Canada, under the provisions of the Bank Act, for the issue by the Treasury Board of a certificate permitting the said Bank to issue notes, and commence the business of Banking. It having been shown to the satisfaction of the Board that all the requirements of section 15 of the said Act had been complied with, the Board authorized the issue of the certificate applied for.” That was prepared by whom?  A. By myself.
Q. On the 30th November?  A. Yes.
Q. Prior to its containing these initials?  A. Yes.
Q. You prepared it and handed it to whom?  A. To Mr. Fielding.
Q. Returned to you the same day?  A. I think so; I think I am correct in saying yes.
Q. You have a memory of that day?  A. There is other action which would depend on that.
Q. That is the action you refer to?  A. The return of the deposit; it would not be returned until that was returned to me.
Q. Are you quite sure of that?  A. Yes.
Q. Have you any memory apart from that?  A. No, not apart from that, but I am quite sure of it.
Q. You are quite sure that you would have got this back before returning the money? A. Quite sure.

Q. The money was returned that day? A. Yes, the receipt for the money is on that file.

Q. What did you hand Mr. Fielding at the time you handed this? A. That draft minute with all the papers; he would have that and all the papers.

Q. Are you prepared to say that as a matter of recollection? A. That is a matter of practice, and I am perfectly certain of it.

Q. Mr. Fielding is not here? A. No.

Q. Where is he? A. I understand he is in London with his widowed daughter at the present moment.

Q. Are you prepared to say that you handed him all the papers with that minute? A. Yes.

Q. Without qualification? A. Without qualification.

Q. Will you tell me what you refer to as "all the papers"? A. If you will give me that file I will show you.

Q. May I ask you for your recollection first?

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not think you should treat Mr. Boville that way; I think he has a right to see it.

MR. HODGINS: If you so rule.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do so rule. A. It is the application with the affidavit and the papers accompanying the affidavit.

MR. HODGINS: Look at the file now? A. (Looking at the papers). Yes, the application, the affidavit with the accompanying exhibits.

Q. Whose affidavit? A. The affidavit of Travers.

Q. The application, the affidavit of Travers with the accompanying exhibits, and what else? A. The correspondence with the Department of Justice.

Q. What do you mean by the correspondence, give us the dates please? A. 28th November, to Mr. Newcome, and Mr. Newcome's reply of the same day.

Q. Have you looked through the file? A. Yes.

Q. Have you told me all that you handed Mr. Fielding? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when you handed them to him that day? A. I could not remember the particular hour of the day.

Q. Think over the matter, you must remember, the whole of the transaction occurred on the 30th November, and that is the date of this minute? A. It occurred amidst other items of business during the day.

Q. Do you recollect what time of day you handed these papers to Mr. Fielding? A. I could not say.

Q. Is it your duty to give careful attention to the details? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Fielding would assume you had handed him all the papers that were of importance? A. Yes.

Q. Had you taken any interest in this matter before the 30th? A. Yes.

Q. Had you communicated to Mr. Fielding the correspondence that had reached the Department prior to that? A. What correspondence?

Q. Any correspondence about the Farmers Bank? A. I had communicated all the information I had in my possession.

Q. That would include correspondence which came in connection with the Farmers Bank prior to the 30th November? A. Yes, if any.

Q. I have shown you the file, do you qualify it by saying "if any"? A. There was not any.

Q. No correspondence connected with the Farmers Bank prior to the 30th November? A. You mean outside of the Farmers Bank or with the Farmers Bank?

Q. Concerning the Farmers Bank? A. There is a letter I think you will find of mine to Travers about the nature of the documents he submitted.

Q. Is that all? A. That is all I recollect.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Perhaps you can tell me what letter that is on the file, was it the letter of the 21st October, what sort of a letter is it?  A. It is with regard to the amounts paid in by each subscriber.
Q. Is it the one probably of the 21st November—I said October—is that the one?  A. Yes, that is it.
Q. Are you entirely right when you say that is the only other letter?  A. The only one I have any memory of.
Q. And that letter is referring to your letter of the 23rd October making a deposit under section 13 of the Bank Act?  A. That is the deposit of the $250,000.
Q. No doubt; of the sum of $250,000—"I have no doubt that you will be applying very shortly for a certificate under section 14 to commence business. In the papers to be submitted to the Board in support of the application there is a list of bona fide subscribers of capital stock of the Bank showing subscriptions to the extent of $500,000. Would you be so good as to have added to this list for submission to the Board a statement showing the actual amount of cash paid up by each subscriber (Signed) T. C. Boville, Deputy Minister of Finance." That is the letter you refer to?  A. Yes.
Q. Is that a usual letter to write?  A. No, it is not.
Q. Why was it written?  A. On account of the rumours that had come to the Department that there might be some action taken by those who were making the application for the certificate looking to obtaining part of the cash by indirect means rather than by cash subscriptions from the shareholders themselves.
Q. These were rumours only?  A. Yes, rumours only.
Q. Had these reached you yourself or had they reached Mr. Fielding?  A. They had reached Mr. Fielding, they had reached myself and there had been a suit started in Toronto, if I recollect right, which looked to that kind of thing.
Q. The department had official knowledge of that suit?  A. Yes, we had a letter from the lawyer in the case.
Q. Anything more than that?  A. A request not to take action.
Mr. COMMISSIONER:  Is that letter there?  A. That letter is on the files.
Mr. HODGINS:  Not only rumours had reached you, and you think Mr. Fielding, but a letter, was it from Mr. McCarthy?  A. Yes, of the 19th October.
Q. Enclosing copy of a writ?  A. Yes.
Q. With the endorsement?  A. Enclosing special endorsement on writ of summons.
Q. I am instructed that Mr. William Laidlaw's affidavit accompanied that?  A. The papers were asked to be returned, so that I have not got it before me.
Mr. COMMISSIONER:  And were returned?  A. Yes.
Mr. HODGINS:  Can you, looking at that file or otherwise tell me whether that affidavit was there or not?  I may tell you that with my glance at the file I see no reference to it at all?  A. No, I see no reference to it.
Q. I want to know whether you recollect that?  A. No.
Q. A pretty strong affidavit?  A. It is a very strong affidavit.
Q. Have you seen it since?  A. No.
Q. You saw it then?  A. I saw it then at that time.
Q. It came down with the copy of the writ of summons?  A. Yes.
Q. It was sent back?  A. Yes, returned.
Q. You did not keep a copy of it as you did of the writ of summons?  A. No, I kept a copy of the writ of summons.
Q. There is a letter here dated 31st October to Mr. McCarthy from you: "Referring to your letter of the 19th inst. addressed to Mr. Fielding on the subject of the Farmers Bank of Canada and the issue of a certificate to the Bank to commence business under section 15 of the Bank Act, I noticed recently a reference in the newspapers to a judgment given by Judge Anglin in a suit relating to this matter. In view of the decision rendered I would be obliged if you let me know if you still desire the protest contained in your letter to be brought before the Treasury Board upon an application of the Farmers Bank for a certificate to be considered." What was the occasion of writing that letter? A. If I recollect right the suit was dismissed. We wanted to have the ground cleared for action by the Treasury Board, and if the suit was dismissed and nothing in it we wanted to know.

Q. There was no application made at that time for the certificate? A. No.
Q. You wrote to Mr. McCarthy having noticed this in the papers? A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember in Mr. Laidlaw's affidavit anything said about discount notes? A. I do not remember Mr. Laidlaw's affidavit at all.
Q. I was speaking to you a few minutes ago and you said you remembered speaking about it? A. No, the writ of summons; I only referred to the writ of summons.

Q. You certainly said it went back with the writ of summons; it was a pretty strong affidavit? A. The writ of summons, the original papers sent to me by Mr. Leighton McCarthy were returned.
Q. Let me ask you again, I am instructed that there was an affidavit by Mr. Laidlaw with those papers sent to you with the writ of summons? A. Yes, I have no record of it and no recollection of it.
Q. You had at all events a writ of summons, you kept a copy of that? A. Yes, it is marked copy of the original document returned to Mr. McCarthy.
Q. Had this phase of the matter, speaking generally, come up before you that these notes by the various subscribers were being discounted for the purpose of raising money to pay the deposit to the government? A. As I said before there were rumours.
Q. Of that particular sort of action? A. Rumours of the incorporators endeavouring to obtain money by means of discount for the purpose of making up the $250,000 required to be deposited under the Act.
Q. I suppose that would also come to you in the form of a notice from Mr. Leighton McCarthy. I am going to put in, Mr. Commissioner, the correspondence between Mr. McCarthy and the then Minister of Finance, and Mr. Boville. The first letter is dated the 8th October.

Mr. Commissioner: Is not that all part of this same return you are going to put in?
Mr. Hodgins: Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: Do not let us split it up.
Mr. Hodgins: Shall I read the letters?
Mr. Commissioner: I don't think it worth while.
Mr. Hodgins: Very well, I will put them in. The letter of the 19th October, 1906, I suppose to Mr. Fielding you would see, that is the one enclosing writ, "I beg to enclose special endorsement upon a writ of summons in the High Court of Justice etc.? A. Yes.
Q. Have you that letter there in the file? A. Yes.
Q. Further down it says, "I have received information that the alleged subscribers for shares paid a large sum of money in cash and have signed notes for other large sums of money, and that the persons professing to act in the name of the Bank have transferred notes and received the proceeds, and that a deposit either has been made or will be made of the cash received and the proceeds of these notes, or a sufficient amount to make up $250,000. I wish you will have the kindness to acknowledge the receipt of this protest against the granting of the certificate"—did that go before Mr. Fielding? A. Mr. Fielding saw that.
Q. And saw the endorsement on the writ of summons? A. Yes.
Q. You wrote Mr. McCarthy on the 23rd October acknowledging that letter and stating "When application is made by the Farmers Bank to the Treasury Board for a certificate to enable them to commence business the representations contained in your letter with its enclosure will be laid before the Board". Will you tell me why that was not done? A. Because the document was withdrawn afterwards; I could not submit it to the Board; I had not it, it was withdrawn.

Q. Why did you write the letter of the 21st November asking particulars as to the amount paid by each subscriber if the action had been withdrawn and you were satisfied? A. On account of these other rumours and to protect ourselves, if possible.

Q. The rumour was that the subscribers had not paid up in cash but had given notes? A. The rumour was rather that those who were seeking for the certificate were endeavouring to raise some part of the $250,000 by means of discounts.

Q. That was specifically charged by Mr. Leighton McCarthy in his letter, and did you notice whether that was involved in that suit or not? A. I do not recollect.

Q. I am not very sure that it is in that endorsement? A. I do not recollect.

Q. At all events you had the letter before you. The suit itself impressed you I suppose as a suit to set aside the subscriptions by these—A. Something of that kind.

Q. And I suppose you did not concern yourself very particularly with it? A. Not after it was withdrawn; it was dismissed. I presumed the action of the Court meant something.

Q. Did you see what the action of the Court was? A. I must have read it from the 'Globe' of the 29th October, because I have a memorandum, "Vide 'Globe' 29th October, page ?".

Q. You did not get a copy of the judgment? A. No.

Q. The 'Globe' report showed that they had assigned their claims to somebody else? A. Something of that kind.

Q. Or had been settled with? A. Settled with.

Q. Is that all the information you got, or did you get a copy of the judgment at any time before the issue in order to see? A. No.

Q. The information that you had then at that time was that certain subscribers were disputing their subscriptions and had given notes for the balance of their claim, that their subscriptions had been transferred to other people, and they had been paid off, am I right in that? A. I don't know that that feature was so very strongly before us.

Q. What was the feature? A. The writ of summons had been withdrawn and the case dismissed. I did not take any material interest in the case after that.

Q. Did you not take any interest in the case in which it was set up that the subscriptions had been obtained by fraud? A. That was only an allegation.

Q. I am speaking now as to the action of the Department, did you find it necessary in view of the charges made there to investigate further and see whether there was any truth in it? A. It was in that line that the Department was acting, and asking for this special information from Mr. Travers.

Q. If these same parties who had made the charges of fraud, and whose subscriptions you knew had been settled by other people—because that is what the 'Globe' said, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. If they appeared in the list that Mr. Travers submitted to the Minister of Finance and that you handed him, would you think that attention should be called to that feature? A. I do not think so. These people might have come back and been mollified and subscribed again, especially in view of the affidavit.

Q. I am asking you if the Department made any effort to find out, either from seeing the judgment of the Court in that action, or by enquiry from Mr. McCarthy, or by enquiry from any one else as to whether the settlement of that suit involved a complete withdrawal of the charges, and the substitution of other subscriptions? A. No, because the whole thing was deleted by being withdrawn.

Q. That is your assumption? A. Yes.
Q. But the means of investigating that you did not take? A. There was no investigation of that kind.
Q. When this list of subscribers came down, that was the list you asked in your letter of the 21st November, was it not? A. The 21st November, yes.
Q. In consequence of the rumours and of that letter from Mr. McCarthy saying they were issuing that $250,000? A. Yes.
Q. You had apparently not been satisfied by the settlement of the suit so far as that feature had been concerned? A. We wanted to make further inquiry.
Q. You would not do that if you were sure? A. There had been some allegations and we wished to satisfy ourselves.
Q. I say you were not satisfied by the settlement of the suit upon that point? A. No, because this had not been the practice in previous cases.
Q. I am not really concerned with the reasons, but you really did not feel that that was got out of the way by the settlement of the suit? A. We wished to strengthen our position by getting this special information.
Q. I suppose I had better take it at that. Your position still needed to be strengthened on that point? A. Yes.
Q. When that came down did you check over that list of subscribers? A. I see the check marks on it but I did not check it.
Q. You see your letter says, "In the papers to be submitted there is a list of bona fide subscribers of capital stock......would you be good enough to add to this list for submission to the Board a statement showing the actual amount of cash paid up by each subscriber"—in that list which you handed to Mr. Fielding the names of these parties who had brought this action and had since been settled with are included as bona fide subscribers, was that noticed by you? A. I don’t think there was any attention paid to it at all.
Q. Did you look to see whether that feature was there? A. I don’t think so.
Q. If you had noticed it you would have returned the list for correction? A. Not necessarily.
Q. Why not? A. In view of the affidavit because that was a very strong affidavit.
Q. At all events that feature of it was not gone over; the list bears the marks, you say of checking? A. I see the checking marks on the outside here.
Q. What on earth would you have to check that with; what could you check that list of subscribers with if it was not with the writ of summons? A. These are subsequent check marks.
Q. In the letter of Mr. Fielding which was written on the 30th November, to Mr. Travers, am I wrong in saying that you dictated that letter? A. You are; Mr. Fielding dictated it later himself.
Q. And he I believe handed that out to Mr. Travers, do you know about that yourself? A. No.
Q. The letter is dated the 30th November: "There is a phase of the matter which I should like to bring to your notice so that you may consider it at once. It has been represented to us that in some previous instances where an application was in all respects apparently regular there was actually an evasion of the intention of the Bank Act in relation to the paid-up capital. We have been told that in some cases the subscribers did not actually pay in cash, but gave notes to the Provisional Directors which were used to raise the money. On account of information of this kind which has reached us in relation to a previous case we deem it proper to scan very closely every application for a certificate which comes to us. I shall be glad to have an assurance that nothing of the kind has taken place in relation to the subscriptions for the Farmers Bank, but that the amounts set forth in the application as having been paid up have in every case been bona fide cash payments”? A. Yes.
Q. What is the date of that affidavit that you speak of as being such a strong affidavit, is it the one dated the 27th November made by Mr. Travers? A. The 27th November, by Travers.

Q. When did that reach the Department? A. It was forwarded from Toronto on the 27th November and evidently was received the next day, on the 28th.

Q. And then it was not in the hands of the Department during the 28th and 29th, was it? A. It must have been in the hands of the Department on the 28th, because I enclosed it to the Department of Justice.

Q. And they would have had it on the 28th and probably the 29th; Mr. Newcombe's letter was the 28th? A. The same date.

Q. Did he get it back the same day? A. The same day.

Q. Then evidently on the 30th Mr. Fielding was not satisfied with that affidavit? A. I would not say that.

Q. Were you? A. I was satisfied with it.

Q. Based upon what you have told us, the withdrawal of the suit back? A. Yes, and the strength of the affidavit itself, and the people who were at the back of it.

Q. Who were the people at the back of it? The shareholders.

Q. Did you know any of them? A. No, but they represented the farming element, evidently well spread throughout the County of Halton, and they represented a good class of people as far as I knew.

Q. Will you tell me what you did other than what you have already said in connection with this, before you handed the papers to Mr. Fielding to satisfy yourself upon the point raised by Mr. McCarthy in the matters set out in the writ of summons, and in the matters referred to in the Minister's letter of the 30th November, which he says requires them to scan very closely every application for a certificate? A. Scan all the papers in the light of the requirements of the section of the Bank Act.

Q. Yes, but other than what you have told me as to what you went over or what you did, was anything else done? A. I do not think so, other than checking the notices, the necessary requirements.

Q. The preliminary requirements? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything at all or did you take any means to verify the statements that were in the prospectus as to the directors? A. No.

Q. Some of those directors were members of Parliament then, were they not? A. Yes.

Q. You made no enquiry from them? A. No.

Q. Mr. Calvert's name, I see, is given; does that feature enter into the calculations at all? A. That feature enters more into the calculations of the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons.

Q. But not into the Department's? A. No. "In every case a Committee upon any bill for incorporating a Company may require proof that the persons whose names appear in the Bill as composing the Company are of full age and in a position to effect the objects contemplated, and have consented to become incorporated" (section 104 of Rules of the House of Commons).

Q. But these names only reached the Department of Finance on the 28th November? A. Yes.

Q. They never reached the Banking and Commerce Committee. I am only asking you, the names of Members of Parliament in Ottawa appearing as Directors, whether any enquiry is made from them? A. No.

Q. I suppose you cannot tell me whether anything further was done by way of enquiry? A. No.

Q. Did you submit to Mr. Newcombe, the Deputy Minister of Justice, the correspondence with Mr. McCarthy on the writ of summons, the copy you had retained? A. The letter to Mr. Newcombe would have to speak for itself; I could not say for certain.
Q. Mr. Newcombe's letter I see does not give any details; can you say whether you submitted those to him or not? A. I could not say.

Q. He makes no reference to it? A. No.

Q. You would recollect if you had, would you not? A. No, I would not. We might send him the whole file or we might only send him the papers relevant.

Q. I want to see how far you regarded that as important at that date? A. The practice would be to send only the papers which were relevant.

MR. COMMISSIONER: To the enquiry you were making? A. Yes.

MR. HODGINS: That enquiry was whether on the papers submitted such a certificate might legally issue? A. Yes.

Q. Was that enquiry made in all bank cases as a matter of form? A. I would not say all the bank cases, but Mr. Fielding was generally very particular about having the advice of the Department of Justice, and I was starting in at that time.

Q. What you wanted to know was whether apparently the Bank Act had been complied with? A. Yes.

Q. And that was all? A. Yes.

Q. You were taking any responsibility there might be in regard to the enquiries which had been made by the Department? A. That is our responsibility.

Q. Did you know Travers yourself? A. No.

Q. Had never seen him before he came to Ottawa? A. No.

Q. When did you see him first, was it before the 30th or on the 30th? A. I think it would be probably before the 30th. Mr. Fielding delivered his Budget speech on the 29th, and I fancy Mr. Travers may have called at the Department the day before or that day regarding the matter.

Q. You do not remember seeing him then? A. No.

Q. The application of Travers was the one you enclosed to Mr. Newcombe? A. Yes.

Q. That application is given in this printed memorandum dated 27th November, that is the one enclosing the declaration? A. Yes.

Q. "I have the honour herewith to forward declaration of the General Manager of the Farmers Bank of Canada, setting forth the facts relating to the incorporation, organization of said Bank and also giving the names of the Directors elected at the meeting of the subscribers, and such other particulars as required by the Bank Act; the provisions of the Act as to subscriptions and deposits with the Receiver General having been fully complied with on behalf of the said Bank, I apply for the Certificate of the Treasury Board permitting said Bank to commence business of Banking." There is the time the application first came in, that would be the 28th? A. Probably the 28th.

Q. Then I suppose, apart from the letters on the 30th, whatever had been done with regard to satisfying yourself had been done prior to that in anticipation of the application? A. What is that?

Q. I suppose that whatever you had done with regard to satisfying yourself had been done previous to the 28th November? A. I do not catch the drift.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Before your letter to Mr. Newcombe, what belonged to your Department was that all finished? A. That was all finished before we wrote to Mr. Newcombe.

MR. HODGINS: Is it the practice of the Department to ask when an application is made for the authority of the person applying? A. No.

Q. Who were you issuing the certificate to? A. The Farmers Bank.

Q. Are you familiar with the Bank Act? A. Generally.

Q. You know what the Provisional Directors can and cannot do? A. Yes.

Q. And know there requires to be an election of Directors? A. Yes.

Q. And some resolutions or authority to apply for the certificate? A. Is that in the Bank Act?
MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not know that you need examine Mr. Boville upon the law.

MR. HODGINS: If I did I would find very little he did not know about it, I am only asking for information in order to found a question whether he made enquiries.

MR. COMMISSIONER: He says it is not usual to do so? A. It is usual in these matters to deal with the general knowledge and the information by some one who knows the facts, the General Manager practically in all cases.

MR. HODGINS: Without any evidence that the Board of Directors has been legally elected? A. Oh, no.

Q. I think you will agree with me that that is required by the Bank Act? A. Oh, that is required by the Bank Act.

Q. You took Travers' declaration that day without further enquiry? A. We heard, generally by the newspapers, that he had been elected General Manager.

Q. With regard to the formality? A. No formality. We had no definite legal instrument advising us that he was General Manager.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Does his declaration cover that ground? A. Yes, his declaration covers that ground.

Q. And that is all you require? A. Yes; section 13 of the Bank Act says (reads).

MR. HODGINS: Before the certificate issues there are certain statutory requirements, and that is one? A. Yes.

Q. The establishment of that fact that they were properly elected directors? A. Yes, and that is covered in the affidavit.

Q. And upon that you acted? A. Yes.

Q. On the 30th November you cannot recollect the time at which this was taken over to Mr. Fielding. A. No.

Q. His letter to Mr. Travers speaks of an interview at one o'clock or else in the afternoon. A. Yes.

Q. And from information I have I should think it was in the morning, was it not? A. I could not tell you.

Q. Did it pass entirely out of your hands after you handed— A. Practically, yes.

Q. When did you come into it again, get this minute of the Treasury Board? A. Mr. Fielding would send it to me, and it must have been sent to me in the afternoon some time.

Q. The whole of the business connected with this, other than what you have told us, must have been transacted between one o'clock in the afternoon of the 30th and the evening of the 30th, when somebody got the certificate? A. Yes.

Q. Who got that certificate, who was it handed to? A. If you read my letter to Mr. Travers of the 30th, "Referring to your letter of the 27th inst., to the address of the Deputy Minister of Finance applying for the certificate of the Treasury Board entitling the Farmers Bank of Canada to commence business of banking, I beg to hand you herewith a certificate issued under the authority of the Treasury Board in accordance with the provisions of the Bank Act". So that it was handed to him on the 30th.

Q. You handed it to Mr. Travers enclosed in the letter? A. I handed it with the letter, yes.

Q. Are you quite sure of that? A. I think so. It is a long time back.

Q. Was any one with Mr. Travers at the time? A. I do not think so.

Q. Was Mr. Stratton there? A. No; I think Travers was alone.
Q. You think it was handed to him? A. Yes; the letter says it was handed to him.

Q. Was the cheque handed back to him? A. I also said in the letter, "I beg to hand you herewith Finance Department cheque on the Bank of Montreal, Ottawa, in favor of the Farmers Bank for $245,000."

Q. How late in the afternoon did this take place? A. I suppose about five o'clock.

Q. You gave the minute of the Treasury Board, the cheque, the certificate and wrote these letters? A. Yes.

Q. In the afternoon? A. Yes.

Q. So as to hand them over to him so as to be through by five o'clock? A. It may have been about that. After the Treasury Board had given its decision the rest is only a matter of a short time.

Q. Did you see a man named C. H. Smith there at all? A. I did not know C. H. Smith.

Q. He was down at the same time Travers was? A. I do not remember any C. H. Smith.

Q. He got $1,800 from Mr. Travers that day in Ottawa? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. Did you see Mr. W. H. Hunter? A. No.

Q. Did you see Mr. Norman Guthrie? A. No.

Q. All the dealings were with Travers? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any reason for issuing this in such a hurry between one and five o'clock on the same day? A. No, the ordinary way of doing business. As soon as the Treasury Board gives its decision, it is only a matter of half an hour's work.

Q. It is as easy as that? A. After the decision is given the rest is easy.

Q. I should think it would be easy, considering what you handed Mr. Fielding? A. Well, that is your opinion.

Q. Was there any demand made on Travers that evening to your knowledge for the return of that certificate? A. Not to my knowledge, I know nothing about that.

Q. Did you ever hear anything about it? A. No.

Q. You did not go? A. No.

Q. Nor send for it? A. No.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Fielding went? A. I could not tell you. I don't know.

Q. Were you instructed afterwards to get it back? A. No.

Q. Did you go later? A. No.

Q. I do not mean later in the day or evening, I mean later in point of time? A. No.

Q. To see Mr. Travers? A. No.

Q. You make no effort to recall the certificate once it was issued? A. No.

Q. Did you receive a letter on the following morning that you answered from Mr. Edward Clouston? A. Yes, that is on the file.

Q. Received it on the first December? A. Mr. Clouston's letter of the 30th November.

Q. Have you the original letter? A. Yes, there is the original letter.

Q. Dated November 30th at Montreal? A. Yes.

Q. Nothing to show when that was received? A. No; in ordinary mail it would be received the next morning.

Q. This is your reply to it? A. Yes.

Q. December 3rd, would that be the date you replied to it? A. Yes, the date of our reply.

Q. That letter of Sir Edward Clouston just repeated what Mr. McCarthy had written, did not it: “In connection with the application of the Farmers Bank of Canada for the usual certificate from the Treasury Board I have reason to believe that the money lodged or to be lodged at Ottawa as stock subscriptions cannot be regarded as paid-up capital, and that a large proportion of the amount necessary to the obtaining of a certificate is a loan made upon the promise of its re-payment when returned by your Department. Permit me to request that if only for the protection of the public the Treasury Board will exercise its right to refuse to issue the certificate if it thinks best to do so until a thorough investigation has been made into the circumstances stated therein.” Mr. McCarthy’s letter apparently says, as I read it, the same thing. I would like to ask you whether you gained the same impression from it. “I have received information,” Mr. McCarthy says, “that the alleged subscribers for shares paid a large sum of money in cash and have signed notes for other large sums of money, and that the persons professing to act in the name of the Bank have transferred notes and received the proceeds, and that a deposit either has been made or will be made of the cash received and the proceeds of these notes, or a sufficient amount to make up $250,000.”

Mr. Commissioner: There is a very important statement of Mr. Clouston’s which is not there, the money will be returned to the lender.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, probably not known to or thought of by Mr. McCarthy; I am asking you.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think that is a fair question at all; the letters speak for themselves? A. The letters speak for themselves.

Mr. Hodgins: Of course they do, but I want to know whether the explanation he gives to Mr. Clouston is the explanation he would have given to Mr. McCarthy.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think that is right to speculate on what he would have given.

Mr. Hodgins: I will put it to you in another way: this letter then to Mr. Clouston sets out, does it not, pretty well your reason why the certificate was granted? A. Yes.

Q. It speaks for itself? A. Yes.

Q. You have nothing to add to it? A. No.

Q. “In view of published reports in the newspapers of some litigation in connection with the subscriptions to the capital in the Bank the matter has had the careful attention of the Department.” Did that include the matter that Mr. McCarthy had laid before you in the letter I have read you? A. I presume it would be borne in mind.

Q. What had been done then to investigate that—“had the careful attention of the Department”? A. I say the matter of the issue of the certificate.

Q. That is what this means? A. Yes.

Q. What careful attention, if any, was given to the question of how the $250,000 was being raised? A. Special form of affidavit, special information asked for by affidavit, and the special questioning by Mr. Fielding of Mr. Travers.

Q. “And some time ago the General Manager of the Bank was communicated with to the effect that when applying for the certificate to commence business in addition to the list of subscriptions to the extent of half a million required by the Bank Act the statement should contain also the actual amount of cash paid up by each subscriber on his subscription. On the 29th ultimo application in due form was made by the Bank for the certificate permitting it to commence the business of Banking. The application was accompanied by the usual documents and also by a list of the subscriptions and cash paid in by each subscriber. The list itself covers over 500 names, and nothing therein appeared calling for any particular comment.” I understand you to say that this was not checked over? A. It was scanned fairly closely as to where these men came from, as to their—
Q. You would not expect to find anything in the list which would show what money was improperly obtained? A. It would not be in the list, that was in the affidavit.

Q. Beyond scanning where they came from there was nothing done with regard to that list. "From the statutory declaration of the General Manager I quote the following paragraphs"—you set out paragraphs 4 and 5? A. Yes.

Q. "I previously had some conversation with Mr. Fielding who was very busy in connection with the preparation of the Budget speech, with regard to this application, but on Friday last, the day after the Budget speech, Mr. Travers, the General Manager, had an interview with him. In the course of this interview that gentleman gave a most positive assurance that 'not a dollar' of the amount deposited had been borrowed"? Was that given in your presence? A. I think that information Mr. Fielding gave me.

Q. "For the purpose of record Mr. Fielding wrote Mr. Travers a letter of which I enclose a copy, asking for the assurance that the amounts set forth in the application as having been paid in were in every case bona fide cash payments. I enclose a copy of Mr. Travers' reply".

"Under these circumstances there did not seem to be any warrant for the withholding of a certificate under section 14 of the Act, and, accordingly, a certificate was issued on the 30th ultimo". That sets out your view? A. Yes.

Q. Do you still adhere to it? A. Yes.

Q. No attempt was made by the Department to recall that certificate?

A. No.

Q. Had Travers left Ottawa? A. I could not tell.

Q. The same evening? A. I don’t know.

Q. Did you make enquiries when you got Mr. Clouston’s letter as to whether he was in town? A. No, I don’t think I did.

Q. Attention has been called to the fact that Mr. Clouston’s letter contained another charge which was not before you, that is that the money when borrowed was agreed to be returned out of the money to be handed back by the Government? A. No.

Q. Did that feature strike you as being important? A. No.

Q. You made no enquiry from Mr. Travers as to that? A. No.

Q. "Are you aware that the Bank did not open for business till the 2nd January, 1907? A. I could not tell you when they opened for business, it was a short time I remember, but the exact time I could not remember.

Q. It would have been quite easy to recall that certificate?

MR. COMMISSIONER: Do you argue there was any power in the Treasury Board or in the Minister or anybody else to recall the certificate?

MR. HODGINS: Yes, if it was obtained under circumstances which an investigation turned out to be fraudulent, he could recall it.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I don’t know whether that is so or not, but that is what you are going to argue?

MR. HODGINS: Yes. Of course there is another phase of it I shall argue, that business prudence would indicate when Mr. Clouston, the President of the Bankers’ Association, writes that letter, and the certificate had only left the Department that enquiry ought fairly to be made at once.

Q. Beyond answering Mr. Clouston did you take any steps to notify Mr. Travers of what was said in that letter? A. I do not think so; the correspondence will show.

Q. There is no correspondence that does show that? A. I do not think so.

Q. If that be so why had you notified him when Mr. McCarthy’s protest came in? A. In the case of Mr. McCarthy’s protest we want to let him know we would practically oppose the issue of a certificate unless that objection were cleared up.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. What I cannot understand is why the matter should have gone through in such haste and apparently without the matter being investigated before it was issued, and then when this matter comes up again why at all events then the Department could not have made enquiry? A. So far as the use of the word “haste” is concerned there are classes of business which come to the Department which are always dealt with promptly; the issue of licenses to Insurance Companies and matters of that kind, where interests are involved, and probable loss of money, and those things are promptly dealt with.

Q. Turning to a little later date the correspondence of the Department shows you were communicated with in April, 1907, with regard to notes under discount at the Milton office? A. Yes.

Q. Had you to do with that? A. It is of interest to the Department.

Q. I know, are you the one in the Department that had to do with it? A. The letter was addressed to myself.

Q. Did you connect in any way the two things, the charge made by Mr. McCarthy with regard to the notes and the actual fact that Mr. Vankoughnet states to you on the 17th April? A. No, they were not connected, I don’t think.

Q. 17th April: “Will you kindly give me your opinion on the following: our General Manager sends to the different Branches lists of notes given in payment of our capital stock. These notes he makes the Managers put through as discounts, crediting the amount to Head Office. This is figured in the Government Return as paid-up capital and circulation issued to that amount. If I read the Bank Act correctly, section 76, he is asking us to do what is not right. As I do not wish to do anything contrary to the law I should be much obliged if you give me the ruling on it. With many apologies for troubling you.

(Signed) “G. VANKOUGHNET, Manager.”

A. I did not think it was any province of mine to give a ruling on that. The information was of interest to the Department because if the circulation of the Bank were increasing abnormally beyond their really paid-up capital they would be liable for fine for infraction of the Bank Act.

Q. You did not connect this, however, with the fact that the notes had been given for subscriptions and used to get in the $250,000? A. No.

Q. You wrote to Mr. Vankoughnet then on the first May: “While it is not deemed expedient to enter into correspondence at this stage, the matter referred to by you is of sufficient importance to warrant further enquiry. This will shortly be made. I should like to have a copy of any of the notes”. Was the note produced here and shown Mr. Henderson, do you know, the note that was forwarded to you? A. Yes, I think that is the note.

Q. That is not printed in the printed Return; I would like that note to go in.

—Note referred to filed as EXHIBIT 3.

Q. That was one of the notes (Exhibit 3)? A. Yes.

Q. You got a further letter from him May 3rd, “I received your letter of the 1st instant and enclose as requested one of the notes which I referred to in my letter to you of the 17th ult; when we renewed these notes we dated them 2nd January, 1907, or later, and made them payable at this office. The amount under discount at this office, 30th April, was about $111,885.” There is no further letter to Mr. Vankoughnet, he does not appear to have got any satisfaction or information from the Department? A. It was not a valuable correspondence to carry on, because there was nothing that I could do for him directly. I think later on we asked for a special Return.

Q. You communicated with Mr. Travers immediately? A. I asked for a special Return later on.
Q. You asked him on the 2nd May for certain detailed information: "What portion, if any, of the $375,473 paid up capital of the Bank as per Return of liabilities and assets of March 30th, 1907, is represented by promissory notes or other obligations of shareholders or the proceeds of the same of which the Bank is the holder or is liable thereon."

"The names and holdings of stock of such shareholders, if any, with particulars of such notes or obligations now current."

Then you draw his attention to section 113. Did you get that information?

A. Yes.
Q. And have you it there? A. Yes.
Q. That is not printed in this return, is it? A. I do not recollect.
Q. How much does that show? A. Out of $375,000 paid-up capital as per Return 30th March, 1907, represented by shareholders’ notes held by the Bank $59,110.
Q. Did you notice that Mr. Vankoughnet said the amount under discount at his own office at Milton was $111,000? A. Yes.
Q. Did you call attention of Mr. Travers as to the disparity between those two?

Mr. Commissioner: How is this relevant to the enquiry? It has nothing to do with the issuing of the certificate?

Mr. Hodgins: No, but it has to do with the conduct of the Bank afterwards.

Mr. Commissioner: It seems to me it is going pretty far afield, however, if you think it is important I won’t stop it.

Mr. Hodgins: I only just want to see what the Department did; I am not going to pursue the matter to any length.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think that is involved at all. I am not asked to investigate the conduct of the Department with regard to these reports that were sent to it, and I am not going outside the mandate I have.

Mr. Hodgins: If you rule that this enquiry is unimportant in view of the Commission I will not pursue it.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think at present it is covered except so far as, if at all, it affects the first branch of the Enquiry with which you have just been dealing, the issue of the certificate, and I don’t see how it does.

Mr. Hodgins: It cannot possibly affect that, because the certificate had been issued to the Bank, and the Bank in operation. It only shows notice to the Department of a state of affairs—

Mr. Commissioner: I am not trying the Department; that is not my function.

Mr. Hodgins: I appreciate that, but I do not know that you can report upon the causes of the failure of the Bank altogether without seeing that it was allowed to go on by the Department without attention being called to this, that Travers was making these statements, and if the Department had knowledge or noticed they were untrue, and did not investigate them, I think it is in the public interests that that should come out.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think that is within the scope of the enquiry.

Mr. Hodgins: At all events when we get further into the matter, and the causes of the failure of the Bank come up, perhaps it may be relevant there.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not see how at present it can. If it does Mr. Boville can be called then.

Mr. Hodgins: It can be resumed then. That will shorten Mr. Boville’s examination up in that respect just now.

The Commission adjourned at 1.40 P.M. to 3 P.M.

The Commission resumed its Sittings at 3 P.M., March 13th, 1912, at the Court House, Ottawa.
NORMAN G. GUTHRIE, sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. You are a practising Barrister in Ottawa? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And were you practising here as a member of the firm of Pringle & Guthrie in November, 1906? A. Yes.
Q. Did you know Travers, the Managing Director of the Farmers Bank, at that time? A. I met him in Ottawa at that time.
Q. Had you known him before? A. No, sir; I had never seen him till that occasion.
Q. Were you the Mr. Guthrie that he saw that day on professional business?
A. What day was that?
Q. The day you saw him in Ottawa? A. I presume so. I was the only Mr. Guthrie in Ottawa at the time, I presume.
Q. The date I speak of is the 30th November, 1906? A. I would be the Mr. Guthrie.
Q. Do you remember his coming to you for any purpose? A. I remember fairly distinctly.
Q. What was his object, as explained to you? A. He came to my office in the 'Citizen' Building shortly after four o'clock for the purpose of paying me some costs which had been arranged between himself and my client in an action in which I was acting in an adverse interest to the Farmers Bank; that was the object of his visit.
Q. I suppose it is impressed on your mind because it was a question of costs?
A. Well, yes.
Q. Who was the client you speak of? A. C. H. Smith.
Q. When had he become your client? A. He had become my client, I think, two or three days previously. I could not speak accurately.
Q. Do you know if he came down with Travers? A. I could not say as to that.
Q. Or with Mr. Hunter? A. I could not say as to that.
Q. Then he drifted into your office? A. He was sent to me by Mr. A. S. Lown. Mr. Lown used to practise law in Drayton, and he knew me, and he advised Smith to see me.
Q. A. S. Lown was one of the Provisional Directors of the Bank? A. Yes.
Q. What was the nature of Smith's claim that you say was adverse to the Farmers Bank? A. As I recollect the instructions given me by Mr. Smith, he had been acting as Secretary to the Provisional Directors, and when Travers took over the General Managernship of the bank he had quarrelled with Smith and had discharged him, and Smith claimed that at the time of his discharge there was a considerable sum of money due him for services, and, as I recollect it, commissions on sale of stock and a number of matters. When he came to me he wished me to take whatever proceedings might be necessary to endeavor to collect the claim.
Q. Have you any idea why he came to Ottawa to do that when the bank was in Toronto? A. Well, I have not any particular idea, except that I am sure that it was his intention to endeavor to enforce a settlement, and if he could not do so to issue a writ and deposit it with the Department of Finance and fight the issue of the certificate.
Q. I suppose he instructed you along that line? A. He instructed me very generally. In the first place, he was in bodily fear of Travers; he had been discharged, and Travers had used considerable violence; and Smith put up at the Grand Union Hotel, I recollect, and no doubt his registry can be found there. Travers was at the Russell, and I had a great deal of trouble to bring the parties together in order to discuss the question.
Q. Did you do that? A. I did that.
Q. In your office?  A. No, in the Russell House; Mr. Travers, and his solicitor, Mr. Smith and I.

Q. Who was Travers' solicitor?  A. I think it was Mr. Hunter, of Toronto. I had never met him before.

Q. A gentleman with spectacles?  A. Yes, and a reddish beard.

Q. Did this occur on the date I mention, the 30th November?  A. No, that occurred, I think, the day before. The parties were brought together, and as I recollect it Mr. Smith and Mr. Travers arranged a settlement, I think, of $1,800, payable by a note at three months, or something of that sort, and I was informed by Mr. Smith of the settlement. Then, on the 30th November, Mr. Travers called at my office with the object of paying the costs.

Q. Was this settlement arranged between Smith and Travers on that date or the date previous?  A. I think it was the day previous.

Q. Were you present when the settlement was arranged?  A. No.

Q. Undoubtedly, your instructions were, if not settled you must prevent the issue of the certificate?  A. No, they hardly went to that extent. I questioned Mr. Smith with regard to that, and he said he had no material on which he could oppose the certificate unless he issued a writ. I asked him if there was any means by which he could delay the issue by the Treasury Board, and he told me he did not know anything, except there were four or five names which should not be on the affidavit as shareholders on account of their subscriptions being cancelled, or something of the sort, they might be on the schedule. I attended the Department of Finance and I saw the affidavit filed by Mr. Travers and the schedule, and as far as my recollection goes these names were not.

Q. Did he give you the names?  A. Yes, I think I took them on a small piece of paper, and I was up at the Department for five or ten minutes.

Q. Would you recognize them if I were to read you the names?  A. It is a considerable time ago. The only one I have any recollection of was the late Senator Merner; I recollect his name.

Q. Did he say anything about a writ which had been issued in Toronto, Mr. Smith?  A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he mention anything about Mr. Laidlaw's clients; could we in any way get at what names they were through any collateral matter he mentioned?  A. No, he did not mention them. You see he had been discharged, as I understand it, before the material had been prepared, and it was a matter of guess work on his part.

Q. And he gave you such names as he could, and you say you did not find them?  A. That is my recollection; the search was unsatisfactory.

Q. Who did you see in the Department?  A. I saw Mr. Boville.

Q. Did you explain to him what you wanted?  A. I told him I wanted to look at the names on the schedule to the affidavit to see if certain names were there, and he showed me the schedule, and I looked at it and left.

Q. You did not tell him the purpose of your search, did you?  A. No, I did not, because to be quite candid I was afraid of blocking the issue of the certificate.

Q. I thought your client wanted that?  A. No, he did not; he wanted if it came in the proper way; if he were compelled to be proposed to issue a writ of summons, file it with the Department, and ask for a day before the Treasury Board to be heard.

Q. You knew, anyway, he wanted his money on this claim before the certificate issued?  A. Yes.

Q. The idea was to prevent that in some way?  A. To avoid litigation.

Q. To avoid the issue of the Treasury certificate?  A. On our part it was to avoid litigation.

Q. You wanted a settlement?  A. Yes.
Q. The litigation would have been directed towards stopping the issue? A. No, the litigation would have been directed towards collecting the claim, and meanwhile I suppose Mr. Smith had intended to go up and carry on what investigation he could into the matter and ask the Treasury Board to delay the issue of the certificate.

Q. You proposed to file a copy of the writ with the Finance Department? A. That was it.

Q. You did not get that far? A. As I say, the matter was settled by the parties before it came to that point.

Q. Did you say anything to Mr. Boville about your client, Smith? A. I do not recollect, Mr. Hodgins; I may have mentioned to him for whom I was acting; I cannot recollect definitely.

Q. Having brought the parties together, was the settlement carried out in the Russell House, as far as Smith was concerned, apart from the costs? A. As far as I recollect, the settlement was in the nature of a note at three months given by Mr. Travers to Smith.

Q. Did you hear that from Smith? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the note? A. I have no recollection of seeing it; the great difficulty, as I said before, in the matter, was to bring the parties together on account of the treatment which Smith had received from Mr. Travers.

Q. The claim was about $2,500? A. Yes.

Q. To come to the interview with Travers, he came into your office for the purpose of settling the costs? A. Yes.

Q. And had you set the costs at that time? A. The costs had been agreed upon by Mr. Smith and Mr. Travers, that was part of the settlement.

Q. At what rate? A. I was to get $100.

Q. You had stated that to Smith? A. Mr. Smith rang me up and told me of the settlement and asked me if that would be satisfactory, and I said yes.

Q. When was the note given to him? A. I cannot recollect that, Mr. Hodgins. I do not know that I was ever aware of the delivery of the note.

Q. Did you get a cheque from Travers? A. Yes, at that interview.

Q. Then was the interview confined to his giving you a cheque for the $100? A. Possibly the best way would be to describe the whole interview. Mr. Travers, as I say, arrived at my office some time after four o'clock in the afternoon; he appeared to be quite excited, and at the same time to be in very excellent humor. He informed me that he had just concluded a very strenuous examination by the Minister of Finance in connection with the affidavit which he had filed. I have a table in my office and he sat on the opposite side of the table and called for a blank form of cheque to pay my costs.

Q. He called for a blank form? A. He asked for a blank form.

Q. On what Bank? A. I have no recollection; I presume the cheque can be obtained. He then wrote out the cheque and threw it across the table to me. I looked at the cheque and I saw it was for $110. I said to him, "Mr. Travers, I understood from Mr. Smith that the costs were fixed at $100," and he said to me something of this sort, "I am very well pleased with the settlement that has been arrived at and have been well treated, and I would be very glad to add something to the cheque, as I may have to ask for the use of your office, and ask you to draw some papers for me." I said "It is quite unnecessary to add anything to the cheque for that purpose; I would be very glad to have you use the office". He said "I will have some further business with you in Ottawa, and I want to be on good terms," and he was in very excellent humor. That is as I recollect it.

Q. He left the cheque with you? A. Yes, which I deposited in the bank in due course.

Q. And went away then? A. No. Subsequently to that we had some conversation about various matters, and he showed me a letter which he had been handed by the Minister of Finance. My only recollection about that letter is that it was wet from the letter-press. He tossed it over to me and asked me what I thought of it. I read the letter and I really did not take in what the letter meant as I had no knowledge of the particular point that the Minister of Finance wished to bring out.

Q. Look at that letter, 30th November, copy of the letter there in the Return and see if that is the letter you saw? A. I cannot identify it from memory but I have no doubt that is the one, I read it very casually.

Q. What is the impression left on your mind as to what it was about? A. The impression left on my mind was this that Mr. Fielding had examined Mr. Travers orally on the items contained in the affidavit.

Q. Had you seen the affidavit? A. I had seen it previously. I had seen it before on behalf of Smith. Mr. Fielding had on concluding that oral examination asked Mr. Travers to give him a letter covering the ground on which he had examined him, and I presume that was the case.

Q. What did he ask you to do or say, what did he give you the letter for? A. As I say, it was handed to me in the most casual way, and I read it and tossed it back to him, and then we had some conversation about it, and I am not perfectly certain, but I think he asked me what reply he ought to make, or something of that sort, and I pointed out to him that I was in no position to advise him on the reply he should make to this letter, as I was absolutely unacquainted with the circumstances. Then I left the office for the day, very shortly after that. He said “All right”, and stuck the letter in his pocket. He said “You will have no objection to my using your office to dictate some letters”, and so forth. I said “Not the least in the world, I would be delighted to have him use the stenographer”; and as far as my recollection goes he stayed in the office and did dictate some letters. My recollection is that as I left the office he was walking up and down smoking a cigar and dictating.

Q. Did you see what he dictated that day? A. No, I did not; and I have not seen Mr. Travers from that day to this.

Q. Mr. Travers has been examined in a case against Messrs. Stratton and Warren, and he says this—I would like to ask you what you say about it—he is speaking now of the fact that he had borrowed the money, he borrowed it personally from the Trust & Guarantee, and he speaks of the letter that he wrote in order to get the certificate, the one probably dictated after you left: “I paid the money in on account of the subscribers, that is the way I looked at it at the time”.

Q. In that way it was you justified the statement made by you? A. Yes, I took legal advice upon it, and they told me it was, and I wrote the letter accordingly.

Q. Would that statement apply to legal advice he got from you? A. That may be Mr. Travers’ recollection. I have endeavored to give you my recollection, and I can swear positively that I did not advise him on that subject. I was going to say, you called attention to Mr. Hunter being in Ottawa, Mr. Hunter was the Bank’s solicitor, and I presume if Mr. Travers wanted legal advice he would have gone to Mr. Hunter?

Q. Yes, but Mr. Hunter had left for Toronto on the 28th, and was not in town on the 30th? A. That just occurred to me in that connection.

Q. I want to put to you what he said, so that we may clear the thing up? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: He has told you he did not advise him.

Mr. Hodgins: In this examination in the prosecution of Warren and others he made an answer there saying with regard to the $100 which was paid you: “That $100 were for Smith’s services, and $10 was for some little advice I asked him about”? A. I presume that is Mr. Travers’ way of putting it. I have told you what occurred as far as I recollect.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I am giving you these extracts so that if Mr. Travers is not telling the truth you can say so. Speaking of Guthrie and Pringle he says: "Guthrie charged $100 for settling it and $10 he charged me for some advice to me. I asked him what he thought of Fielding's letter to me."

"Mr. Corley: What did he get the $10 for? A. I got him to read over the letter from the Finance Minister.

"Q. Complaining that your proceedings were not regular? A. Yes, I explained the matter to him, and I suggested the reply, and he said it was all right; that is my recollection.

"Q. You paid him $10 for that? A. I paid him $10 for that.

"Q. For saying it was right? A. Yes, for saying it was right.

That is covered by your previous answers? A. Yes, my answer to that is what I said previously. You must remember I have not read Mr. Travers' examinations and I am giving you the best recollection I have in the matter.

Q. He says further at page 476 in the same examination:

"Q. Your affidavit had been filed with the Department? A. Yes, it had been filed and I explained the circumstances to Mr. Guthrie.

"Q. What circumstances? A. The circumstances of the subscription, the amount shown having been applied by borrowed money, and if I remember right Mr. Hunter left for Toronto that night, and the next day I prepared the answer to Mr. Fielding and showed it to Mr. Guthrie, and I think with some slight changes it went on, and that is all I remember." A. With regard to that I have to say that Mr. Travers did not, so far as my recollection extends give me any information of that sort, nor did he submit to me the reply. I think possibly if you would look into the records of the Finance Department you will find the letter went back that afternoon.

Q. That is quite right it did; you are not sure as to what Bank that Cheque for $100 was on? A. I cannot recollect.

Q. Is that all your connection with the matter? A. That is everything I had to do at that particular time. I was engaged as Counsel when the original charter of the Bank was granted.

Q. Did you see Travers produce any blank cheque or cheques on the Farmers Bank, blank but on the Bank form, or signed by any one during the time of your discussion with him re Smith or in connection with your own fees? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Because it will be shown that there were three blank cheques sent down to him here? A. In regard to the cheque which he gave us I feel perfectly certain that it was not on the Farmers Bank.

Q. I think you are quite right there, it is a Traders Bank cheque? A. It was not on the Farmers Bank, I feel certain and I never saw any other cheques.

Q. Probably these were Traders Bank cheques, they were keeping their account in the Traders Bank then. Mr. Travers said he paid $1,800 to Smith by cheque? A. My recollection is that it was a three months' note.

Q. That is what I suppose somebody told you, you did not see it? A. Mr. Smith told me that was the terms of the settlement.

Q. You did not hear from Mr. Travers? A. No.

Mr. Commissioner: Where is Smith? A. I could not say. He was in Vancouver the last I heard of him.

Mr. Hodgins: I think he helped to get subscriptions for the Vancouver Bank? A. Yes.

Q. And he is out there now? A. Yes, he is doing business out there now.

Q. Perhaps you can tell us whether your brother, Mr. Hugh Guthrie, M.P., was in town in Ottawa at that time? A. I am perfectly certain he was not.

Q. At all events the Mr. Guthrie that was seen was yourself? A. Yes, myself, a member of the firm of Pringle & Guthrie.
W. S. CALVERT, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You were Member of Parliament in 1906? A. Yes.
Q. Still? A. No.
Q. You were at all events a member of Parliament during the Session of 1906 which began some time in November? A. I was from 1896 to 1909.
Q. Do you know W. R. Travers? A. Yes.
Q. How did you become acquainted with him? A. The first time I met Mr. Travers was in the Russell House by letter of introduction from Mr. Thomas Urquhart, Ex-Mayor of Toronto, he had evidently given a letter to Mr. Travers asking me if I would be good enough to introduce him to the Minister of Finance as he did not know him.
Q. Do you remember when that was? A. That would be about the time he received the certificate, I suppose 1906.
Q. You had not known him before? A. I never met the gentleman before.
Q. He presented a letter to you, what did you do for him? A. He sent up to my room and I told the boy I would see him when I came down, and I was going up to the house, so I suggested that he would walk up with me, and we called at the office of the Finance Minister and waited a few minutes till he came in, and I introduced him in accordance with the request of the letter.
Q. How long did you stay with them? A. Probably two or three minutes.
Q. Is that all? A. Yes.
Q. Did you vouch for him at all to the Finance Minister? A. I knew nothing of the gentleman except what the letter said.
Q. What did you tell the Finance Minister about him? A. I presume I said, “This is Mr. Travers, as Mr. Urquhart has advised me by letter, who is probably in connection with the Farmers Bank”, and about his business there, that was for Mr. Fielding to decide.
Q. Nothing you said to him would tell Mr. Fielding much about him? A. No, because I knew nothing of him whatever.
Q. You did not profess to give him any certificate of character? A. I had never heard of the gentleman before.
Q. Was that on the same day he got his certificate, do you know? A. I could not say that, I do not know how long it was after that he received his certificate, but I presume it must have been some days later than that.
Q. He was not in Ottawa on the 27th; he swore an affidavit in Toronto on that day? A. I cannot tell you anything about the date because I made no note of it; I was not interested except to carry out Mr. Urquhart’s suggestion.
Q. Your name was mentioned by him as one of the Provisional Directors on the prospectus which he attached to his affidavit? A. Was that at the time he applied for the certificate?
Q. Yes? A. I cannot help that.
Q. Did you know it? A. I did not know it. The only thing I knew about it was I had a phone message from Mr. Lindsay, I think it was, from Toronto, asking me if I would go on the Board.
Q. W. J. Lindsay? A. Yes, and my recollection of it would be that was the time they were forming their Board after they had their certificate, and probably the first meeting of the Board.
Q. You think it was after they had got their certificate? A. I cannot say positively; that is the only recollection I have of it. I said no, that I had no interest in the Farmers Bank, I had no stock in the Farmers Bank, and that I did not wish to have anything to do with it.
Q. This was after you had introduced Mr. Travers to the Finance Minister? A. I think so, it must have been, because I did not know Mr. Travers before.
Q. How would it be possible they would give your name on a prospectus issued prior to the 27th November, 1906? A. I have not the slightest idea how it could be done, I cannot give the dates, whether it was before or after because I paid very little attention to it.

Q. If Lindsay states that you had given him authority to put your name on what would you say to that? A. I would say Mr. Lindsay was mistaken; I believe they did put it on because I saw it in the papers and as far as I remember I had to write and ask them to please remove it as I did not wish it to be on.

Q. Did you see Mr. Fielding after the interview at which you introduced Mr. Travers? A. In regard to this matter?

Q. Yes, in the next few days? A. I do not remember of ever having a word with Mr. Fielding after I introduced him with regard to this matter.

Q. When did you first hear they had the certificate? A. I cannot tell you that.

Q. Did you interest yourself in it at all? A. Not in the slightest.

Q. You did not go over to Finance Department? A. No, never except that once.

Q. To assist Mr. Travers? A. No, not that I remember of.

Q. You were Liberal Whip at the time, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Travers ask you to assist him? A. I do not recollect of Mr. Travers asking me anything excepting the letter he presented when I introduced him to Mr. Fielding.

Q. Mr. Travers says that he told you there was some delay in getting the certificate and asked you to give him some assistance, and that you took him down to Mr. Fielding, and that you had an interview there for about 15 minutes, and perhaps half an hour or so? A. I think that was the first time.

Q. That is the time of the introduction? A. Yes, I do not remember of any other.

Q. Would you be fairly describing it in that? A. I left him there with Mr. Fielding and went over to the House. My recollection of it is I only remained a few minutes because I knew nothing of the matter whatever.

Q. He is asked: “Q. Did he assist you? A. He said everything he could favorable to me at the time, and did what he could to induce the Minister”? A. The only recollection I have of what I said is, “This is Mr. Travers, if he has everything proper and legal I presume he would be entitled to his certificate”, that is all I can recollect I said in regard to the whole matter.

Q. Is it unusual for the Whip to interest himself in these matters with Ministers? A. Not unusual, but in this case I did not happen to be very much interested.

Q. It is said he has very considerable influence when he does? A. I do not know that he has more than another member but in this case I was not interested in any shape or form, I did it at the solicitation of Mr. Urquhart, whom I knew very well.

Q. Had you any money dealings with Travers? A. Yes—

Q. At that time? A. No.

Q. Or afterwards? A. About three years afterwards, yes, business transaction purely.

Q. I do not know that I want to go into that? A. You may if you like.

Q. But probably as it has become public you may as well tell us about it; when was it? A. It was in July, 1909, about three years after this certificate was issued. I happened to be in Toronto, I was interested in connection with the Thermos Bottle; I had some interest in connection with that and I had asked one or two friends to join me in buying out the Thermos Bottle Company, of Montreal, of which Mr. R. J. Copeland is one. I left Mr. Copeland’s office and dropped into the Farmers Bank and said, “Can I get two or three thousand dollars if I require it on a business proposition?” He told me I could.
Q. Had you seen him between November, 1906, and January, 1909? A. I had never seen Mr. Travers except once or twice at the King Edward Hotel in a casual way.

Q. Did he say yes before you told him what the business proposition was? A. No, I told him what the proposition was.

Q. What did you get in that way? A. I got $3,000 on a demand note.

Q. Made by yourself alone? A. Yes. I have never had anybody join with me on a note yet.

Q. Did you get it that day? A. No, because the business was not concluded that day. Mr. Copeland and myself came to Ottawa, met a gentleman here along with Mr. A. W. Fraser and we closed the deal, and I gave a cheque for $3,000 on the Farmers Bank. The next day I called and gave my demand note for it.

Q. Had you cheques of the Farmers Bank with you? A. No.

Q. How did you give it? A. Simply changed the form of another Bank.

Q. You had no account in the Farmers Bank? A. No, no account then or since.

Q. You gave it here on the Farmers Bank in Toronto? A. Yes.

Q. And went up that night? A. Yes, and gave my demand note the next day.

Q. How long afterwards was that paid? A. I have it right here, $3,000, July 9th, 1909. And on the 22nd of the same month I paid $750 of it. On December 1st, 1909, I renewed the balance for that amount, and I think there was some paid on the back of that.

Q. December 1st, 1909, you renewed the balance, $2,510.82? A. Yes, that was with the interest, and $750 I paid.

Q. You paid $1,000 on the 3rd January? A. Yes.

Q. $1,000 on the 13th June, 1910? A. Yes. Then there is the renewed there is the renewal of the balance, which I paid to the Trust Company; paid to the Trust Company $585.04 December 31st, 1910, making the full payments; there was $100 odd interest.

Q. In the original demand note that is all in your own handwriting I think? A. No, I did not write that. That was made at the Bank; all made by the Bank; I simply signed it.

Q. Look at that "loan W.R.T." who wrote that? A. I cannot tell you anything about that.

Q. Did you get it from Mr. Travers himself? A. Certainly I did, just as I would from any other Bank.

Q. "W.R.T."

MR. COMMISSIONER: That is the voucher of the Officer of the Bank? A. Yes.

MR. HODGINS: I want to ascertain whether he wrote it or Travers wrote it on? A. I did not write anything but my name. There is the letter that came with the renewal $2,515.

Q. When did you become Commissioner of the Transcontinental Railway? A. In October, 1909, that was when I left the House of Commons.

Q. The second one is the same, "Loan, W.R.T.", you do not know anything about that? A. No, except I paid it as shown, and I had nothing to do with the Bank or charter directly or indirectly in any shape or form, but purely my own business.

Q. The last one was paid to the Trust & Guarantee Company, who notified you they were the holders of the note? A. Yes.

Q. And that you paid? A. Yes, and they returned me the note.

Q. I think you did assist Mr. Travers in connection with the Customs Department at one time? A. Yes, he asked me in regard to the matter of a boat coming in.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. That was after this loan? A. I presume it was.
Q. The following month, it was in the summer of 1909? A. I cannot give you the date; I have had a great many applications from people for one thing and another; however, it was in the hands of the Customs men to decide the question.
Q. You did interest yourself? A. I simply told them what he advised me with regard to the boat and the age of it, and so on, and it was ascertained afterwards that they had really charged him quite sufficient.
Q. The effect of the correspondence was that you asked them to value it for the purpose of entry here at $1,000? A. That is what he said it was worth.
Q. That is what you asked should be done? A. Yes.
Q. I have the date of that, 18th August, 1909, would you say that would be it? A. Yes, that may be it. That had nothing to do with this, because this was purely a business transaction for which I paid.
Q. Had you any interest in Colonel Munro's bank, the one who became President of this bank? A. Not the slightest.
Q. Or dealings with them? A. Not the slightest.
Q. Colonel Munro lives at Embro? A. Yes, or did live there.
Q. Is that anywhere near your home? A. No, quite a ways.
Q. You say you had no transactions with that bank, good, bad or indifferent? A. Good, bad or indifferent.
Q. Did you interest yourself in getting subscriptions for the bank? A. No.
Q. Are you a friend of W. J. Lindsay's? A. Just a casual friend; just happened to meet here; know very little about him, except seeing him over at the House of Commons there; he used to be over there frequently.
Q. He comes from over your way? A. No, he does not come from near my home.
Q. He comes from around St. Thomas, I think; had you any intimate acquaintance with him at all? A. No.
Q. You have never helped him to get any subscriptions? A. Nothing in the world.
Q. Or any one else? A. No, nor any one else.
Q. Is that all your interest? A. Yes, except I introduced the Bill for renewal, that was all.
Q. That is the Bill for 1906? A. Yes.
Q. At whose request was that done? A. I think it was for Mr. Urquhart.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: I got the figures of the renewal, $2,500; if you had paid $750, how would it be as much as that on the $3,000 note? A. I think there was $200 I had received shortly after paying the $750, a further loan of $200, and that is what made the difference.
Q. About this Customs matter, the way the question was put to you it was as if you had asked the Customs authorities to value this boat at $1,000, is that the way you put it to them? A. I cannot recollect exactly what I said. My recollection is that Mr. Travers said the boat was an old boat—I have forgotten how many years old, a very old boat, anyway—and that he was taking it in as a matter of pleasure; that it was not worth more than $1,000, and he thought if he paid duty on $1,000 it would be all that it was worth.
Q. Did you convey that to the Customs Officer as something coming from him or your own idea? A. I presume it was coming from him, because I did not know anything about it.
Mr. HODGINS: I think probably it would be well to put in the letter that was sent to the Customs Department; probably that would settle the terms? A. I do not recollect it.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: It was in writing? A. Yes; he said he would not bring it in at all if he had to pay more, because it was not worth it.
Mr. Hodgins: I think perhaps it has been published? A. Yes, it was published at the time.

Q. And therefore there is no controversy about it? A. No.

The Commission adjourned at 3.45 p.m., to meet at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Railway Committee Room of the Senate.

Railway Committee Room, the Senate,
Ottawa, March 13th, 1912.

The Commission continued its session at 4 p.m. in the Railway Committee Room of the Senate.

RT. HON. SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, sworn, examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You were a member of the Treasury Board of the Government in 1906? A. Yes.

Q. The certificate was granted by the Treasury Board, apparently, on the 30th of November of that year? A. Yes.

Q. Have you any recollection as to whether a meeting of the Treasury Board took place prior to the issue of that certificate? A. I think so. My recollection is that the matter was discussed at a meeting of the Treasury Board; that is to say, the question of issuing a certificate to the Farmers Bank was discussed at some meeting, but whether at that meeting they ordered the certificate to issue or not I could not say.

Q. I may tell you that the minutes of the Treasury Board that are produced prior to the 30th of November showing meetings extending during the month of October contain no reference at all to the Farmers Bank matter? A. That might easily occur.

Q. And Mr. Boville thinks it did not come up at that time? A. That might easily occur; I am speaking from recollection at this distance of time, but my recollection of the matter is that the question of giving a certificate to the Farmers Bank was discussed at some meeting, and I think that, probably, though there I am not quite positive, I think that probably this is what occurred: that the Treasury Board demanded if the various legal formalities had been complied with, and that it was understood that so soon as they were reported to be complied with that a certificate would issue; and we could not meet very often for various reasons at that time; many of our members were away; I remember that; after that a minute would be sent—this minute you speak of is probably initialled?

Q. Yes. A. That would mean that the Treasury Board could not meet; that the thing was sent round to two or three who would constitute a quorum and they would initial it, but that was hardly ever done unless the thing had been previously discussed.

Q. The effect of the previous discussion would be, as I take it, that if the legal formalities were complied with, the certificate would issue? A. That was the usual course, and that I think was what must have occurred.

Q. Would that necessitate the Treasury Board feeling itself obliged to go into the details, or would they act upon the report, say, of the Deputy Minister of Justice and of the Deputy Minister of Finance? A. That is all they would be likely to inquire into.
Q. In other words, the matter of the details would be left to the Finance Department? A. Yes, we would act on the initiative of the Finance Department exclusively; our business we considered would be to see that the legal details were complied with.

Q. Sir Richard, you would not, I suppose, yourself endeavor to ascertain by examination of the documents whether the legal requirements had been complied with? A. No, we would leave that to the Minister of Justice to report to us, or the Deputy Minister of Finance as the case might be.

Q. This appears to be the minute which is produced? A. I have no doubt it is as I told you.

Q. You see the initials there? A. The probability is (of course I can only speak of it as a probability) the probability is that the application had been considered at an ordinary meeting and that an understanding had been reached that when the full legal formalities had been complied with that should issue.

Q. If no meeting of the Treasury Board occurred between the time that the money had been deposited and the 30th of November, that would hardly have occurred, it would not have come up for consideration? A. I do not quite follow you.

Q. The deposit of the money with the Bank of Montreal and forwarding it to the Finance Minister is the first step that is taken preceding the application for the certificates of the Treasury Board? A. As a rule, yes.

Q. And if no meeting of the Treasury Board is recorded between that date and the 30th of November, would you say that it was possible that it might not have been considered at a meeting of the Treasury Board? A. I am speaking of my recollection of it, and my recollection of it is that the matter was mentioned at a meeting of the Treasury Board, but the exact date of it must have been prior to this minute that you showed me now.

Q. Would it be formally mentioned or informally? A. We do not keep a minute record of all the discussions and conversations that take place at the Treasury Board. A vast number of matters are brought up before us, sometimes we have had to deal with two or three hundred.

Q. You would not at all events expect that the discussion would take place at the Treasury Board prior to the application of the party interested for the issue of the certificate? A. No, I should say not.

Q. Then your recollection I suppose would be governed to a certain extent by whether or not a formal meeting did take place in the interim? A. I think it did.

Q. The reason I ask you that is, would it be possible that what you are speaking of would be some informal meeting or some discussion between yourself and perhaps some other member of the Board and the Finance Minister? A. Three will constitute a quorum, and I do not think any informal discussion did take place or could have taken place except at the Treasury Board; I have no recollection, in fact I am almost certain that that could not have occurred. If it was mentioned it must have been mentioned at the Treasury Board meeting.

Q. And your recollection is that it was mentioned? A. Yes.

Q. And it was mentioned at a meeting prior to the 30th of November, when this minute appears to have been as you say sent around and initialled? A. Yes.

Q. Beyond that one meeting occurring as you think it did, there would be another occasion that the Treasury Board considered it? A. Not in my presence I am not quite sure how many of those meetings I might have attended or not there are six members of the Board and three constitute a quorum.

Q. Mr. Boville, I think, was Secretary of the Board during that time? A. Yes.

Q. He told us Mr. Courtney had resigned and he was acting in his place until he was appointed Deputy Minister? A. Yes.
Q. So that he would of course know when the meetings took place, formal meetings?  A. A record of that would be kept. Every formal meeting almost invariably transacts a certain amount of business and that is duly minuted and sent up to Council for confirmation.
Q. If it needs confirmation?  A. It almost invariably does, I think in all cases that the minutes of the Treasury Board have no force until they are approved by the Governor in Council.
Q. I think the certificate to a bank is the action of the Treasury Board alone?  A. You can look at the Statute and see.
Mr. Commissioner: That was Mr. Boville’s idea?  A. Mr. Boville ought to know, but my impression is we sent up everything that we passed at the Treasury Board.
Mr. Hodgins: He said that probably 99% would go to the Council because they needed confirmation, but that a certificate to a bank would be one of those cases which need not go?  A. It would be under the Statute.
Hon. Mr. Brodeur: What about insurance?
Mr. Hodgins: Yes, insurance.
Q. Could you tell me as a matter of memory whether in connection with the Farmers Bank you ever heard of any litigation which was notified to the Department?  A. No, of that I am quite certain I did not from any party.
Q. Did you hear of any information having reached the Department of the Finance Minister as to the method of raising the money to deposit with the Finance Minister?  A. To the best of my recollection nothing at all.
Q. In fact I take it that so far as the details are concerned they never came before you?  A. All that the Treasury Board as far as my recollection goes in this or in other cases would do would be to see or to inquire whether the legal formalities had been complied with.
Q. Following that up we know that the Deputy Minister of Justice advised on the 28th of November on documents which arrived here on that date, because they were sworn in Toronto on the 27th, then this is issued on the 30th, could you say whether you had or had not when this memorandum was sent round the documents on which the Deputy Minister had advised or given his opinion that it could be issued if they were accepted?  A. That I could not say from recollection, I don’t think we had.
Q. I suppose if this were sent around this would first be initialed by Mr. Fielding?  A. Generally, yes.
Q. You would not expect to sign it first if it emanated from the Finance Department?  A. Not if he was present.
Q. I suppose if you found it signed by him you would then sign it without insisting you should see—?  A. All that I would be likely to require in a case of that kind unless under very special circumstances would be the assurance of his Department that the legal formalities had been correctly carried out.
Q. Would that be certified to you from the fact that Mr. Fielding himself had initialed this minute before it reached you?  A. We would so consider it.
Q. Was there any system of notification of the members of the Treasury Board so that it might be properly called each time it met?  A. Yes, as a rule notices were sent to us from the Finance Department calling a meeting at such and such an hour on such and such a day.
Q. That of course would not apply to a case such as this where the minute is sent around?  A. I presume that there may have been difficulty owing to pressure of business in getting the Treasury Board together; it is only under such circumstances. That is rather exceptional, it is not often that a minute of that kind is signed.
HON. L. P. BRODEUR, sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You were a member of the Government and of the Treasury Board in October and November, 1906? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I do not know whether we can shorten it by asking you, having heard Sir Richard Cartwright's evidence whether your own would be the same upon the same points or whether in any matter your recollection differs from his? A. I must admit very frankly that I have not any distinct recollection that even I signed that document until I saw it yesterday; I think Mr. Thompson called my attention to it. You see we have so many of those questions which come up, and I must tell you very frankly I do not remember the case of the Farmers Bank, but I am sure I had something to do with it since I signed it; but there are so many cases of that kind that I am not liable to remember exactly what occurred in connection with this case, and I suppose with regard to others.

Q. Have you any recollection following what Sir Richard said about the matter having come up for discussion at a meeting of the Treasury Board? A. I have no recollection with regard to that; it might have happened when I was not there, and we might have had some meetings outside. Generally we met in the office of the Finance Minister in the eastern block; sometimes we met in Council, sometimes we met in the ante-chamber of the Council, sometimes we met in his room across the Commons; I have no distinct recollection; and besides it was a matter which was not concerning me particularly, this matter of the Farmers Bank, so I do not remember exactly the circumstances connected with it.

Q. Really your evidence would come to this, that you have no recollection at all of the matter, and would not have recollected that such a thing had gone through unless you had seen your initials? A. I do not say what Sir Richard said is not correct, quite the reverse, because he might have a better memory of those circumstances; it was a matter coming from Ontario and he was supposed to give more interest to the matter than I. Of course when I signed the document I must have made some inquiry as to the nature of the document and how it came about, but to tell you that I remember some particular instances I do not.

Q. You have no recollection, as I take it, at all, and if you had not seen these initials on of yours you would not have supposed—? A. I would have forgotten I had signed it.

Q. You would not have even remembered the Farmers Bank had come up before you? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. So that I suppose we may take it that Sir Richard has described pretty well how the document would come to be signed? A. Yes, although it was not entered through the minutes of the Treasury Board we were discussing informal questions there at the meeting of the Treasury Board and later on a minute would be made, and it would be probably passed upon that.

Q. That is argument, not recollection? A. That is the way that would be done.

Q. You know that possibly in other cases and possibly in this it may have happened in that way, but you have no recollection about it? A. No.

Q. You cannot throw any light on the real details of the case? A. No.

Q. Or what you had before you when you did sign this? A. No.

Q. You heard of no litigation pending in connection with this matter? A. No.

Q. Nor of any question as to how the money was being raised? A. No, generally rely on Mr. Fielding with regard to those questions.
Mr. Commissioner: At some stage communication should be had with Mr. Fielding in order to ascertain whether he desires to be heard to give his evidence.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, I think that would be very desirable; I would be very glad to have him give evidence.

Mr. Commissioner: Perhaps Mr. Thompson might speak to—I do not know whether that would be wise—his former chief, and find out whether he thinks Mr. Fielding would desire to be heard. I think it would be better to find out if he desires to state the circumstances under which the certificate was issued.

Mr. Hodgins: One might not get Mr. Fielding’s own mind.

Mr. Commissioner: I should fancy it is very probable you would get the answer he thought he would; but I do not know.

Mr. Thompson: If I can find his address in London I could wire.

Mr. Mikel: You could see Sir Wilfrid first and see what he says. I should think it would be very important to have Mr. Fielding’s evidence.

The Commission adjourned to meet at the Court House, Ottawa, March 14th, 1912, at 11 A.M.

THE COURT HOUSE, OTTAWA, MARCH 14TH, 1912.

The Commission resumed its sittings at 11 A.M. in the Court House, Ottawa, March 14th, 1912.

PRESENT:

The Commissioner, Sir William Meredith.
Frank E. Hodgins, K.C.
John Thompson, K.C.

Mr. Hodgins: I have a letter from Sir E. Clouston saying that he is unable to travel at present owing to an attack of neuritis. “In any case”, he says, “The secretary of the Bankers’ Association will be with you and he is more thoroughly informed about all matters connected with the bank than I am”. Mr. Knight is here, and it may be possible to get along without Sir Edward Clouston.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not see what you want him for; you have all he did, all that is relevant, have you not?

Mr. Hodgins: No, we have not, as I am instructed.

JOHN KNIGHT, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You are the secretary of the Bankers’ Association? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is incorporated by Act of Parliament and has certain powers? A. Yes.

Q. And you were secretary in October and November, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember taking any step with regard to the Farmers Bank in November or December 1906? A. No, I think it was in January, 1907—I am doubtful, but the bank was in operation.

Q. I am told that the date as sworn to in the other matters, of your interview in Toronto is the 18th December, 1906? A. At all events I was at its birth and at its death.
Q. There was only one interview you had with Beattie Nesbitt and Mr. Travers at Toronto in the bank?  A. Yes.
Q. Shortly after the certificate had been granted?  A. Yes.
Q. If you cannot recollect the exact date I will have to prove that by some one else?  A. Yes.
Q. What was the occasion of your visit?  A. Ostensibly to examine the circulation, the supervision of which is entrusted to the Association, and my purpose was to prove if there was any justification for the suspicions that we had that the stock list was not what it should be, and if possible to obtain cancellation of the certificate on the ground that it had not been granted according to the Act.
Q. Did you go to Toronto then?  A. Yes.
Q. Your headquarters were in Montreal?  A. Yes.
Q. And visited the bank premises?  A. Yes.
Q. Who did you see there?  A. Beattie Nesbitt and Travers.
Q. What was Beattie Nesbitt’s position?  A. President.
Q. And Travers?  A. General Manager.
Q. What took place between you?  A. Our interview followed a visit of mine to the bank where the money paid in by the so-called shareholders was deposited.
Q. What bank was that?  A. The Traders Bank.
Q. What occurred when you saw these two gentlemen?  A. I found that the amount deposited was not nearly sufficient to warrant the supposition that the money had been deposited at Ottawa, so I went to the bank and saw Mr. Beattie Nesbitt and Mr. Travers; of course it was not a very pleasant interview.
Q. Explain that a little more, you went to the Traders Bank and found out?  A. My object there would be the object of any bank man, to ascertain if the money supposed to be deposited pending the granting of the certificate had been made.
Q. What did you find from the records there?  A. I found a shortage.
Q. To what extent?  A. Speaking from memory about $100,000 which later events have proved was the case.
Q. How much did you find on deposit there?  A. About $150,000.
Q. To the credit of the Farmers Bank?  A. Yes.
Q. Then come to your interview which was not a pleasant one?  A. No, it was decidedly unpleasant. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt was blustering and contended that the Association (and very properly) had no right to inquire into anything except the circulation. Well, I insisted upon having certain questions answered, and Mr. Travers and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt at last produced a very satisfactory looking stock list, and I then, you may as well have the entire story, telephoned my suspicions to Ottawa.
Q. I want to get it step by step; they produced an unsatisfactory list, did you look at it?  A. Yes.
Q. Did you examine the books of the bank?  A. Yes, such as they were.
Q. What did you find in the books of the bank?  A. A stock list—
Q. MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not think that is the proper way to prove it; we must get the original sources.
MR. Hodgins: I propose to.
MR. COMMISSIONER: I won’t allow any examination as to the contents of these documents or books.
MR. Hodgins: Mr. Knight will have to attend in Toronto. I do not see why he cannot tell the results of his examination.
MR. COMMISSIONER: It is elementary, he cannot tell the contents of a written document.
MR. Hodgins: I am afraid you will have to come to Toronto?  A. I may as well tell you, if you were to show me today what I saw four five years ago I would not swear to it.
Q. You examined some books there, we have that far?  A. Yes.
Q. Was that in the morning?  A. I think about mid-day.
Q. Was anything else except the stock list and the books such as they were produced to you on that interview?  A. I think there was a roll of linen with the names very like a theatrical bill of fare.
Q. What names?  A. With the names of the supposed contributors to the stock.
Q. Had you any conversation with regard to either the books or the stock list or the results of your examination either with these two gentlemen?  A. Yes, a great deal.
Q. What was the conversation?  A. Not nice.
Q. So far as it relates to this matter and as a matter of business let me have it.
Q. I told them that to the best of my knowledge and belief there was something wanting and I asked for proof and I did not get it.
Q. Did you define what the something was?  A. I wanted to know where the missing $100,000 was.
Q. You wanted to prove, you say?  A. Yes.
Q. Did they allege anything about it?  A. Yes. The rest of the story has been made known in the Courts of Toronto; they borrowed.
Q. What did they say about it?  A. They said nothing except that I believe (I am just stating from memory) I believe they hinted that Mr. Stratton representing the Trust Company could show that they had the necessary amount on deposit at that Trust Company, in fact I think I saw a receipt.
Q. At that interview?  A. No, I think there must have been two interviews that day; I think it was in the afternoon that Travers told me that by going over to the Trust Company I could ascertain the truth of his statement. I then attempted to find Mr. Stratton and I failed until late in the afternoon and I then communicated to Ottawa.
Q. Did you find him though?  A. I never found him.
Q. Going back still to that first interview what did they say about this $100,000; if they said anything I want to know what it was?  A. I do not know.
Q. You were there asking for it?  A. I know that.
Q. Tell me whether any explanation was or was not given on that morning interview?  A. They claimed that they had the $100,000.
Q. Were you satisfied with their assurance?  A. No, I was not.
Q. Was there a second interview?  A. I think so, but not with Beattie Nesbitt.
Q. Who was the interview with?  A. I think, Travers.
Q. Were you shown anything on the second interview?  A. I was shown a certificate of deposit, I believe.
Q. From what concern?  A. Some trust company.
Q. Do you remember the name of it?  A. It was the one presided over by Mr. Stratton, and at that time managed by Mr. Warren.
Q. That is the Trusts & Guarantee Co.?  A. Yes.
Q. For what amount?  A. I think $50,000.
Q. Then did that satisfy you?  A. No.
Q. Were the inquiries you mentioned a moment or two ago made in consequence of that, your not being satisfied?  A. As proof that I was not satisfied I telephoned to Ottawa.
Q. Who did you speak to in Ottawa, who did you call up?  A. I called up the Vice-president for this district, Mr. George Burn.
Q. Had you a conversation with him?  A. Yes.
Q. How much of what you have told us here to-day did you relate to him over the telephone?  A. It was very much condensed; I simply intimated that
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

I was not at all satisfied, and I recommended that Mr. Stratton might be located in order that he might explain why this money was given to the Farmers Bank, and the conditions under which the loan, if it was a loan, was made.

Q. And did that end your connection with the matter?  A. Yes, with the birth of the bank.

GEORGE BURN, sworn, examined by:—

Mr. Hodgins: You are the Vice-president in this district of the Bankers' Association?  A. Yes.

Q. Have you a recollection of a telephone from Mr. Knight, the last witness, some time in December, 1906, in connection with the Farmers Bank?  A. I remember receiving a telephone from him; I do not know the date.

Q. Can you fix it at all?  A. No, it would be impossible for me to fix the date at this distance of time; to the best of my recollection the telephone was received in the evening.

Q. Do you know whether the certificate had issued to the Farmers Bank before the telephone message to you?  A. I cannot say positively.

Q. Will you give me what the communication was as you recollect it?  A. My recollection of the communication was to the effect that Mr. J. R. Stratton, of Peterboro, was either in Ottawa or coming to Ottawa, and he might possibly be able to afford some information in connection with the Farmers Bank.

Q. In relation to any particular object?  A. More particularly in relation to the raising of money by the discount of notes, or something of that sort.

Q. For what purpose?  A. In connection with the furnishing of money on the notes of the shareholders for the purpose of securing the certificate, I understood.

Q. Is that all you recollect Mr. Knight stated or did he give any details of what he had seen or heard in Toronto?  A. I have no recollection of anything else taking place in connection with that.

Q. In consequence of that, did you do anything?  A. I informed the Minister of Finance.

Q. Mr. Fielding?  A. Yes. My recollection of that part of it is from the fact that I saw Mr. Fielding that evening.

Q. What did you say to him?  A. I told him that Mr. Stratton was either coming or was then in Ottawa, at the Russell House, I believed, and that he might be able to afford some information with regard to the stories which were then current as to the raising of money in connection with the discount of the shareholders' notes.

Q. Had you anything more yourself to do with the matter after that interview with the Finance Minister?  A. No.

Q. You did not take any steps yourself?  A. No; you mean with regard to seeing Mr. Stratton?

Q. Yes?  A. No.

Q. Or take any further steps in regard to it?  A. No.

Q. Did you make any inquiries afterwards as to what, if any, action had been taken by the Minister?  A. I was told that the Minister had seen Mr. Stratton and did not get very much information from him; he had promised to write him.

Q. And did you not intervene, yourself, actively at all other than what you have told us?  A. I did not.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not quite understand what you went to Mr. Fielding for; what did you go to him for?  A. I thought he might get more light on the subject.

Q. From Stratton?  A. From Stratton, yes.
T. C. BOVILLE, Examination continued.

MR. HODGINS: I do not know whether you can enlighten us at all with regard to that date Mr. Knight telephoned Mr. Burn; Mr. Burn said he saw the Minister of Finance, do you know anything about the time, was it brought to your attention? A. Not specially; I may have had a casual knowledge of it, it was not specially brought to my attention.

Q. Can you assist us in fixing the date?
A. I don't think I could be of any assistance to you.

Q. Had you occasion to see Mr. Stratton, do you know, in December in connection with that? A. No, I had no connection with the Stratton incident at all.

Q. Is this something you have brought this morning? A. They are some Orders in Council. There is the Order in Council in regard to a quorum.

Q. You produce then copies of three Orders in Council which I will put in as one exhibit. The first one is the 13th July, 1896, constituting the Treasury Board; this is the one that fixes the quorum. The second one is dated the 10th July, 1905, constituting Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. Mr. Prefontaine, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Brodeur and the Minister of Finance, as Chairman, members of the Treasury Board. The last one is dated the 26th July, 1906, appointing Mr. Fisher. Did he replace Mr. Prefontaine? A. That I could not say. Mr. Prefontaine had died in the meantime I fancy; speaking from memory I think he died about 1906.

Q. Is it not stated in the minutes that he replaces any one? A. No.

—The three Orders in Council, dated respectively July 13th, 1896, July 10th, 1905; and July 20th, 1906, filed and marked as Exhibit 4.

Q. What was dealt with on that day the 26th October? A. Insurance only.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Are we not having copies of these minutes?

MR. HODGINS: Yes, I think we ought to have copies of the 24th and 26th October.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Let it be understood that certified copies of these may be put in.

MR. HODGINS: I want to put in this return; this is the Return? A. Yes, 110 B and C.

Q. That contains quite a good deal of the contents of the file? A. Yes.

—House of Commons Return 110 B and C marked as Exhibit 5.

Q. There are one or two papers that I want that I think are on this file and are not in this Return Exhibit 5; I will be glad if you will run over them with me? A. Very well.

Q. I see here is a memorandum dated the 30th November, 1906, which is not copied, signed by yourself? A. That is a memorandum to the Minister.

Q. I would like a copy of that; was that supplied to the Minister? A. Yes, for him; it practically takes the place of a verbal communication between the Minister and myself.

Q. You said yesterday that what was handed to the Minister was the affidavit of Travers with the Exhibits referred to in it? A. Yes.

Q. Looking at this certificate would you still think that that was so, or was the certificate what you handed to him? A. That was also handed to him. What I said was correct with this; that takes the place of a verbal communication with the Minister.

Q. There is here a copy of an original document returned to Mr. McCarthy, 7th November, 1906; this is a copy? A. Part of the papers which were returned.

Q. It is a copy of the endorsement on the writ of summons? A. I presume it is, that is what it purports to be.

Q. You recognize it as a copy of the endorsement on the writ? A. Yes.

Q. You had retained that when you sent Mr. McCarthy the original. Here is one dated December 12th, 1906, from yourself to E. S. Clouston; that is not copied in the Return: “I return herewith the letter from your Toronto manager which you were good enough to send me with your letter of the 10th inst. for my private information, etc.—” is that signed by you or Mr. Fielding? A. Signed by myself, that was a personal letter.

Q. Where is that letter; the letter itself was returned, but did you keep a copy of it? A. I possibly have a copy of it somewhere amongst my private papers.

Q. I understood that was on the file within a week? A. It is a private personal letter.

Q. It has been removed from the file? A. Yes.

Q. Why was it on this file? A. A memorandum for myself.

Q. Before its production here? A. Private and personal, purely personal.

Q. I understood it was a letter from the Toronto Manager of the Bank of Montreal to Mr. Clouston? A. Private letter from his Toronto Manager to Mr. Clouston and enclosed in a personal and private letter from Mr. Clouston to myself.

Q. Why did you make a copy of it for the file? A. Merely as a memorandum for myself.

Q. Why was it removed from the file? A. Because I did not think it had any relation to the file, being private and personal.

Q. You got that copy? A. Yes.

Q. I would like to have that produced; I expect Mr. Braithwaite here and I intend to examine him upon it? A. Very well.

Mr. Hodgins: There are quite a number of documents on the file which are of a much later date, which refer to the matter I suggested yesterday, that is communications in that Tevis matter which took place in Syracuse and evidence as to which I will have to give in Toronto. These communications were made by the Superintendent of Insurance in the State of New York to the Department of Finance. I take it that under your ruling at present it would be unnecessary to go into this matter here. I see the force of your objection under the wording of the Commission and I would just like to run over these with Mr. Boville, so that we may have a list of them if it is necessary.

Mr. Commissioner: Let Mr. Thompson do that. You need not do it here now.

Mr. Hodgins: Very well, he can do that. A. Mr. Thompson can have access to them at any time.

Mr. Commissioner: Is it at all suggested that this transaction in Rochester had anything to do with the failure of the bank?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, that will be part of the evidence in Toronto.

Mr. Commissioner: What could it possibly have to do with the failure of the bank? It showed the curious methods adopted by the management, that was all.

Mr. Hodgins: Oh yes, it did.

Mr. Commissioner: It eventuated in nothing.

Mr. Hodgins: I am not quite so sure that that did not affect the credit of the bank. I am not sufficiently informed as to the whole detail to be able to pronounce upon it at the moment, and that is why I would like to have a memorandum of these.

Mr. Commissioner: Let Mr. Thompson go over them and Mr. Boville will no doubt give all you ask for.

Mr. Hodgins: There is just one memo here that I saw in going over the file, and I would like to ask you about it as a matter of interest; that is a memo of your own, is it not? A. Yes, in my handwriting.

Q. And you say in that memo that “The Farmers while not in the best position is not in such desperate straits as the Toronto bankers imagine”. Would that be made in 1909, in connection with the attached letters? A. Possibly; this seems to be just a jotting of what some one may have said; I do not know who said it.

Q. You have just put your initials at the bottom? A. Just to show it was put there by myself.

Q. Had you any information, were you intimately acquainted with the Farmers Bank so as to be able to write a memorandum like that? A. This is not my expression of opinion; that is meant to be the expression of some one to whom probably I had been speaking in the matter. We often had from time to time all through that period of the panic, we have had various conversations over the Farmers, one way and another, and that is a memo of probably what some one has said to me; not my own opinion.

Q. It is your handwriting? A. Yes.

Q. "From subsequent inquiries re annexed letter the genuineness of the supposed receipt has been denied by the General Manager of the Farmers and its relation to a mining deal at Haileybury is not established. The latter is only for small amount, $29,000 and is one of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt's deals. The Farmers while not in the best position is not in such desperate straits as the Toronto bankers imagine"—that is somebody else's gossip? A. Yes, it was not my opinion.

Q. Would that have been put down just about the date, December 1909? A. I think that had something to do about the deposit receipt.

Q. The Syracuse matter? A. No, it did not matter. There had been a rumor abroad that a certificate of the Farmers was being hawked around the country and probably I had been making some inquiries from some one who knew.

Q. You put that on the file? A. Yes, but that had no relation to the file. That is one of those things which should disappear. In the Department we often put a memorandum.

Q. About banks? A. Other things; all sorts of things; merely for aid to memory.

Q. On the next file there are communications between the bank and the Department of Finance arising out of Mr. VanKoughnet's letter which is in the printed exhibit, and subsequent returns called for by the Government, explanations from the Traders Bank and so on; I understand that that, you think, under the Commission is not relevant to the inquiry.

Mr. Commissioner: No, I do not think so.

Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Thompson might also make a note of those, so that if anything transpires later we might know what they are.

Q. This file is the one in connection with the liquidation? A. Yes.

Q. So that the same remarks might apply to that? A. Yes. Any document of which you want a copy you can obtain it through Mr. Thompson.

Q. Have you the cheque that was returned to Mr. Travers? A. Yes.

Q. You produce cheque for $245,000.

Mr. Commissioner: That is for the money returned? A. Yes, the Finance Department's cheque.

Mr. Hodgins: Dated the 30th November, 1906: "Pay to the order of the Farmers Bank of Canada $245,000. Signed T. C. Boville," that is addressed to the Bank of Montreal, Ottawa; are those cheques payable at any branch bank of the Bank of Montreal anywhere? A. They are payable anywhere, practically, payable anywhere under the terms of the Bank Act.

Q. That is endorsed to the order of the Traders Bank by Travers as General Manager, and appears to have been received there on December 3rd, 1906? A. Yes.

Copy of cheque dated the 30th November, 1906, for $245,000, from the Finance Department to the Farmers Bank, with endorsement, and stamp of Traders Bank to be filed as Exhibit 5a.
Mr. Boville: Do you wish copies of all these minutes? They are lengthy?

Mr. Commissioner: I do not know that it is necessary to put in something that has no reference to this matter.

Mr. Hodgins: It may be sufficient if Mr. Boville will go over the minutes and say that no record appears of anything in connection with the Farmers Bank.

Mr. Commissioner: He has said that now. A. I have said that already.

Mr. Hodgins: He refers to the meetings of the 24th and 26th October? A. Meetings immediately prior to the 30th November.

Mr. Hodgins: The printed Return shows the letter of Sir Edward Clouston dated the 30th November, I think you said that would be received the next day? A. In the course of the mail, yes.

Q. The money that was deposited by Mr. Travers, that was sent by Mr. Travers; a copy of the letter is in and is dated the 23rd October? A. Yes.

Q. And the receipt is the same day; you acknowledged that on October 24th, that would show when you received it? A. Yes.

Q. And then when would the matter come up? I see you wrote Travers on the 24th, acknowledging the money and pointing out that there was opposition? A. Yes, that deposit has to be made under the Bank Act a month before the organization.

Q. And you then wrote Mr. Travers saying that opposition had been filed? A. Yes.

Q. And you got his letter dated the 29th October? A. Yes.

Q. That would reach you in due course of mail on the following day? A. Yes.

Q. And that is what brought forth your answer of the 31st October to Mr. Leighton McCarthy apparently, and of November 2nd to Mr. Travers? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: When you mentioned opposition what did it refer to?

Mr. McCarthy's communication.

Q. I gathered from what Sir Richard Cartwright said yesterday that his collection of the practice was that his initials did not appear upon the minute where there had been a formal meeting held? A. Yes.

Q. That when it was impossible to get the members together, the practice was for the Finance Minister to initial and then for enough to make up a quorum to initial also; does your memory agree with that? A. If you will let me explain the method of procedure in connection with the Treasury Board. There are very large quantities of business to be dealt with, there are regular meetings of the Board which occupy probably two hours or two and a half hours' time. As a rule these are called by special notice and the minutes in those cases are prepared and signed by the Minister of Finance and they are usually sent on to the Privy Council. There are cases when there are very small amounts of urgent business, and in the rush of the session very often a meeting will take place either in the Privy Council Chamber or in the ante-chamber or in the House of Commons, it frequently happens; in those cases I may not be present, and the minutes in those cases are generally initialled by the members present as a verification to myself that there has been a meeting. I fancy what was done in this case of the Farmers Bank, and I think Mr. Fielding's statement in the House of Commons would bear me out, it was in the rush of the session, it was one item of business, he probably most likely had the papers with him, at two o'clock at a meeting of the Privy Council—there is a standing order for the meeting of the Privy Council during the session at two o'clock—he probably had the papers with him at two o'clock, and whether he consulted the whole Council or not, I do not know, but he evidently consulted the members of the Treasury Board who were present, and that was why they placed their initial on the document which I produced here.

Mr. Commissioner: As I understand you, you handed to the Minister of Finance, your certificate that the papers were in order? A. The cognate documents.
Q. In view of that, and the declaration of Travers that was contained in the papers you sent, how did Mr. Fielding come to write the letter of the 30th November; do you know anything about that? A. It was in consequence of these persistent rumours that were brought with regard to the irregularities, what may be termed irregularities, in the method of obtaining the necessary $250,000; he wanted to make certain.

Q. Did you know Travers? A. No, not personally.

Q. You had no acquaintance with him at all? A. No.

Q. Had you any reason except in so far as suspicion might be cast upon his operations, to doubt his standing? A. None whatever; it seemed incredible to myself that a man who represented a list of shareholders such as he produced and who had been elected to the high and responsible position of general manager by directors should be other than he ought to be.

Q. Did what was done with regard to the issue of this certificate differ in any respect from what was done in the case of similar certificates? A. There was a slight difference, some.

Q. In what respect? A. We demanded from him an affidavit as to the actual amount of cash paid in by each shareholder, which was not done in previous cases.

Q. Ordinarily what would the Treasury Board or what would your Department require before granting the certificate? A. A production of the shareholders' list showing subscriptions to the extent of $500,000, verified by affidavit.

Q. You did not get a copy of the subscriptions, but just a list of the shareholders? A. We take the list with the affidavit that this is a true list.

Q. And if nothing to arouse suspicion appeared you would certify it? A. The Treasury Board accepts that as evidence.

Q. Does your certificate precede the certificate of the Department of Justice, or do you get that before you certify? A. I usually wait until after I get the certificate of the Minister of Justice, although that is not an invariable rule.

Q. Does not this inquiry suggest that a rubber stamp would be a good thing to have in your department to stamp your letters when they come in? However, you are not expected to express an opinion at once? A. There is so little of our business which really comes into a circumstance of this kind—

Q. Take a letter like Mr. Clouston's (perhaps in this case nothing turns upon it) it might have been most important to know the hour at which that arrived? A. With the returns of the bank we always do that.

MR. HODGINS: My recollection of Sir Richard Cartwright's evidence yesterday is that, owing to pressure of business, this memorandum was very often sent around without any formal meeting at all, and I understand you are giving your idea of what might have happened? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Sir Richard mentioned various things Mr. Boville has mentioned about the places where they might meet.

MR. HODGINS: Undoubtedly, there is the possibility. But the other practice was followed up of sending around? A. Occasionally informal matters relating to Departmental routine.

Q. You are not professing to say whether there was a meeting or whether there was an informal meeting this time? A. No.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Was it the practice in matters, except of routine, for the Ministers to initial the minute of the Treasury Board and that to be sent around with the papers to the other members without any meetings and they to initial, too, and then action taken upon it; do you know of any cases of that kind? A. Matters of importance, no.

MR. HODGINS: That seems to leave it just as unsatisfactory as ever. Sir Richard Cartwright said in connection with this very memorandum that his idea was that had been sent around to him, that he had signed it, seeing the Finance Minister's signature there or initial? A. That would not be the practice.
Q. But you have no knowledge as to whether that was followed in this case or not? A. Not different; I could not say.

Mr. Hodgins: Before you go I would like to have that letter available for Mr. Braithwaite? A. If you think it is material.

Mr. Hodgins: Until I have seen Mr. Braithwaite and seen the letter I cannot say. Mr. Braithwaite has been subpoenaed and we have heard nothing from him. I think possibly we will have to telephone to Montreal. He may have arrived by the 12 o’clock train, and if you would adjourn now until some time this afternoon, if he is present, we will examine him then.

The Commission adjourned at 12.45 to 2.30 p.m.

At 2.30 p.m., Mr. A. D. Braithwaite, local manager of the Bank of Montreal, Montreal, did not appear under his subpoena, and the Commission adjourned to meet at 11 a.m., March 19th, 1912, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

Osgoode Hall,
Toronto, March 19th, 1912.

The Commission resumed its sittings at Osgoode Hall, at 11 a.m., March 19th, 1912.

PRESENT:

The Commissioner, Hon. Sir William Meredith;
Frank E. Hodgins, K.C.;
John Thompson, K.C.;

SIR EDMUND OSLER, sworn, examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You were a member of the House of Commons in 1906? A. Yes.

Q. You remember the time at which the certificate was granted to the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.

Q. Had you an interview on the subject of the Farmers Bank at all with Mr. Fielding, the Finance Minister? A. Yes.

Q. Was that before or after the certificate was granted? A. Before the certificate was granted.

Q. Was it at Ottawa? A. Yes.

Q. We are told that the House sat about the 22nd of November in that year? A. I do not recollect.

Q. We will have to prove that in some other way; was it after the session began in 1906? A. Yes.

Q. What was your interview with him, what occurred during that interview? A. I told Mr. Fielding that I had knowledge that the money that was deposited there was practically obtained by false pretences, that it was not bona fide money obtained by stock subscriptions.

Q. What money did you refer to? A. The money that was deposited with the Government pending the issue of the certificate.

Q. Did you go any more into detail? A. No, I told him that I knew, as a matter of personal knowledge that it was not a straight—
Q. What further was said, did the Finance Minister say anything or discuss it with you? A. He said he was very anxious about it, and it all passed off.

Q. That is practically all? A. Yes, that was all until after the certificate was issued, I again saw Mr. Fielding and said I was very sorry the certificate had been issued. He expressed himself as having been a great deal worried about the transaction, but said he was afraid if he had refused the certificate it would have been charged that the Government were favoring the large banks and did not want to establish new banks.

Q. How long after the granting of the certificate was that? A. It must have been a few days; it was as soon as I heard it had been granted.

Q. That is all that took place? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Were you connected with any other banking institution at that time? A. Yes.

Q. That was one of the large banks? A. Yes, no doubt.

Q. Was your statement as broad as that the money that was on deposit had been obtained by fraud? A. I knew that part of it; I knew that they had been discounting these notes.

Q. That is what you mean by the discount of notes? A. Yes, it was not a straight—

Q. Because there are two suggestions made about it, one of which was the subject of an action, subscriptions to stock having been obtained by fraud? A. I know nothing about that.

Q. You were speaking of the way in which the money was raised by the discount of notes? A. Yes, to my knowledge.

Q. Of what notes? A. From discounting the notes of the subscribers.

Q. Did you intimate that to Mr. Fielding? A. Yes.

Q. Or was it in a general way that you made the statement? A. Oh, it was in a general way, but in a sense particular, because I made that statement.

Q. When did the interview take place? A. I have not a date; it was after the money.

Q. Where? A. In Ottawa.

Q. In the House? A. Yes, in the House.

Q. MR. HODGINS: In the Chamber itself? A. Yes, in the Chamber or in one of the Committee Rooms.

ARTHUR DOUGLAS BRAITHWAITE, sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You were the Manager of the Toronto branch of the Bank of Montreal here for some time? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know W. R. Travers? A. Yes.

Q. He was manager, afterwards became the general manager, of the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know in what position he was before the opening of the bank for business, which occurred, I am instructed, on the 2nd January, 1907? A. He was manager of the Merchants Bank in Hamilton when I first knew him.

Q. I mean immediately preceding the opening of the bank for business, when he came before the public as general manager, do you know what his position was immediately before that? A. No.

Q. You understood he was connected with the Farmers Bank? A. I understood he was getting up the Farmers Bank.
Q. Was it with you that he made the deposit for the Government?    A. Yes.
Q. That would take place in Toronto?    A. Yes.
Q. And your office issued the receipt for the money here?    A. Issued a draft in favour of the Receiver-General at Ottawa.
Q. You received the money, though, here?    A. Yes.
Q. And you gave a receipt which is sent down to the Receiver-General in Ottawa?    A. We gave him a draft on the Bank of Montreal, Ottawa, in favour of the Receiver-General.
Q. Did he deposit the whole $250,000 at once?    A. No, he deposited $230,000 on the 16th October, 1906, and $20,000 on the 23rd October, 1906.
Q. That would make, altogether, $250,000?    A. Yes, and on the same day we gave him a draft on Ottawa.
Q. Prior to his deposit of the $20,000, had you any conversation with him?    A. Yes, he called upon me at the Ontario Bank.
Q. What took place?    A. He asked me to advance him $20,000 against several notes of the subscribers of the stock to the Farmers Bank.
Q. Do you remember how long that was before the deposit of the $20,000, generally speaking?    A. A week or ten days.
Q. What was the amount he asked you for as a loan?    A. $20,000.
Q. At that time had he deposited the $230,000?    A. I am not quite sure as to that, but I think he had. He deposited that on the 16th, and I think his application would be somewhere between the 16th and the 23rd.
Q. What was the result of his application?    A. I refused to make the loan.
Q. You communicated afterwards with your head office in connection with it, although not till after the certificate was granted?    A. Not for some time afterwards, in December, I think.
Q. That was a letter to Sir Edward Clouston?    A. Yes.
Q. Notifying him of the fact of the deposit and the fact of the application for the loan?    A. Yes.
Q. Would that have reached him before the 30th November?    A. No, the letter was only written on the 7th December.
Q. Of course, you don't know what he did with it; we have traced that in Ottawa; I suppose it is your letter to Sir Edward Clouston that was sent to Mr. Boville?    A. I know it was sent to Ottawa, either to Mr. Fielding or to Mr. Boville, I don't know which.
Q. And subsequently was returned to you?    A. Yes.
Q. And the date of that letter was the 7th December?    A. Yes.
Q. And was it sent on that day, as far as you can remember?    A. No, it was not sent to Ottawa until the 10th December.
Q. You sent it in the usual course?    A. No, I think it did not go down till the next night, because I was under the impression I dictated it very late at night and it was too late for the mail.
Q. Except that interview with Mr. Travers that you have told us about when he applied for the loan, had you anything further to do with or come in contact with the organization of the Farmers Bank?    A. Nothing at all.
Mr. Commissioner: Was the deposit made with your bank as financial agents or bankers of the Federal Government?    A. Yes, I presume so; they have to get the drafts on Ottawa from us; I think we are the only people in Toronto who issue them.
Q. How was it you did not communicate earlier to Mr. Clouston, as he then was, the fact of this application to discount the notes?    A. I do not think that I realized what it was; I was very busy at the time; it was in the office of the Ontario Bank in the head office, and I do not think I quite realized what it was, whether it was to make up the amount of the charter or what it was.
Q. Did that strike you as anything very much out of the ordinary?  A. I cannot say that it did, particularly at the time.

Q. I suppose some subsequent event must have made it important, to give it greater importance in your mind?  A. Mr. Coulsen, the general manager of the Bank of Toronto, asked me to advise Mr. Clouston how the deposit was made; then it immediately flashed across my mind.

Q. Until then it had no particular significance?  A. No.

Q. What was the reason you declined to advance the money upon the notes?  A. I did not want to have business with Mr. Travers; I knew him pretty well.

LEIGHTON McCARTHY, sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS:  Your name has been mentioned in the correspondence which has already been put in, published in the Parliamentary Return; you had correspondence between yourself and the Finance Department and Mr. Fielding?  A. Yes.

Q. You are familiar with that correspondence; I need not go over it with you?  A. I have my file here.

Q. I want to ask you whether in addition to that correspondence you ever had in the matter a personal interview with Mr. Fielding?  A. I did not.

Q. There is something in the correspondence which indicates you were expecting to see him, that is why I want to know?  A. Yes, in two of my letters I suggested I would do myself the pleasure of calling upon him with reference to the matter, but I never did.

Q. Who were you acting for in the matter?  A. I was instructed by Mr. William Laidlaw, K.C., on behalf of his clients who are set forth in the letter to Mr. Fielding of the 19th October.

Q. Had you any personal knowledge except what you got from him as to the grievances of those that issued the writ?  A. None whatever.

Q. In writing the letter it bears a little later date than that, telling him the claim was withdrawn?  A. One letter suggesting I would call is dated 1st November; the letter withdrawing is on the 2nd November, the day after.

Q. The letter is dated November 2nd, that is the one written to Mr. Fielding?  A. Yes.

Q. Saying that the objections which you made on their behalf to the issue of the certificate are withdrawn?  A. Yes.

Q. On whose instructions did you write that letter?  A. Mr. Laidlaw came in and told me that a settlement had been made, or arranged with these individuals whose names are set out in the letter of the 19th October.

Q. Am I right in assuming that we have in this correspondence all that took place between you and the Finance Department?  A. Yes, you are absolutely correct.

Q. Had you anything to do with the matter either before or after that?  A. None whatever.

MR. COMMISSIONER:  By whom were you instructed, I suppose it appears in the papers?  A. By Mr. Laidlaw.

Q. On behalf of whom, how many different persons?  A. They are all the plaintiffs in that writ between—

Q. How many are there?  A. William Dixon, John Sproat, George Castle, William McLean, Finlay McCallum, Robert Hume, James Murray, George Denoon, John McLeod, James Shuert, William Harris, on behalf of themselves and all other persons alleged to be subscribers for shares of the capital stock of the Farmers Bank who may desire to come in and be parties to this action.
Q. What was the complaint they made?  A. I have not that endorsement, and I have not seen it for six years. As I recollect it their allegation was that the subscriptions had been procured by fraud, and that the subscriptions had been paid with notes, and they demanded—

Q. What was the fraud?  A. Misrepresentation in procuring their subscriptions.

Q. Misrepresentation as to what? were you instructed as to the nature?  A. I have no doubt I had a good many interviews with Mr. Laidlaw between those times, between the 8th October and the 2nd November, and I have no doubt we very thoroughly discussed it, it is six years ago, and it has passed from my mind.

Q. I judge from what you say apparently some one was of the opinion that a subscription not paid for in cash was not a valid subscription, was that one of his contentions?  A. Yes, that was one of his contentions, also it comes back to me, I think that Lindsay was the man who had procured most of these subscriptions, and that these people thought a most rosy condition of affairs had been painted by Lindsay as to what these people would make if they went into the transaction, and that the money would not be called, and they had given notes on the assumption that they would never have to pay the notes.

Q. I suppose you advised them these rosy anticipations were not a ground for setting aside the subscriptions?  A. I did not come in contact with the clients.

Q. Everybody does that?  A. I did not come in contact with the clients; I only came in contact with Mr. Laidlaw.

MR. HODGINS: Your letter of the 19th October sets out, encloses the special endorsements on the writ?  A. Yes.

Q. That is in the return which is being copied and sent up here; and you request the Treasury Board to "Stay any action upon the application of persons professing to act in the name of the Farmers Bank of Canada or in the name of the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada, for a certificate under section 15 of the Bank Act on the grounds alleged in the enclosed special endorsement, and other grounds which may be disclosed upon the examination of the alleged subscribers for shares."

"I have received information that the alleged subscribers for shares, paid a large sum of money in cash and have signed notes for other large sums of money, and that the persons professing to act in the name of the bank have transferred notes and received the proceeds, and that a deposit either has been made or will be made of the cash received and the proceeds of these notes, or a sufficient amount to make up $250,000."

"I wish you to have the kindness to acknowledge the receipt of this protest against the granting of a certificate so that I may advise the shareholders who are disputing their liability."

Q. I suppose without seeing the endorsement on the writ you cannot say whether that last paragraph I have read you, which refers to the action of those professing to act, in the name of the bank, with the notes which they have got, is included in the special endorsement?  A. No, I cannot tell you. I gave back those papers to Mr. Laidlaw.

Q. That letter and enclosure was the notice you gave to the Finance Department?  A. Yes.

JAMES G. FITZGIBBON, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: I want you to identify this letter of November 29th, 1906, to W. R. Travers?  A. Yes, sir, that is mine.
Q. The letter is:

"Dear Travers:

"Mr. Hunter called in this morning, and I was glad to learn that so far things are going on nicely, and trust you will have no trouble."

Who is Mr. Hunter? A. He was the solicitor for the bank.

Q. How had you learned that so far things were going on nicely? A. From Mr. Hunter himself, who had returned from Ottawa.

Q. Can you say when—"You say he called in this morning"? A. That would be that day, the 29th November.

Q. That he had got back from Ottawa? A. Yes.

Q. Then he had gone down with Mr. Travers, had he? A. So I presume.

Mr. Commissioner: You had better not give that.

Mr. Hodgins: If he knows.

Mr. Commissioner: He does not know.

A. I do not know that he had been.

Mr. Hodgins: I think from the cheque book he did know; I am going to call Mr. Hunter.

Q. The letter continues: "Mr. Hunter went over all the applications and informs me that they are in first class shape, and that he would have no hesitation in exhibiting them if called for"—what applications were those? A. The applications for stock.

Q. What list would there be of those applications, or did he go over the applications themselves? A. He went over the applications themselves.

Q. Had he gone over those applications prior to that? A. I think he went over them with Mr. Travers before the certificate was granted.

Q. And then the letter continues: "At his request I enclose three blank cheques out of the cheque book in case you have occasion to use them". This is the cheque book, will you just show me the stubs of the cheques that were taken out and sent down? A. I do not think I can identify the cheques from the stubs.

Q. See if you can; this is dated the 29th November; I want to trace up those three cheques.

Mr. Commissioner: Can you identify them? A. Only one.

Q. What one is that? A. No. 26, December 4th, issued to Guthrie & Pringle of Ottawa, $110, No. 27 is marked cancelled, and No. 28 was evidently used after he came back.

Q. You think those were the three? A. I think those were the three, they are all dated here December 4th. Any between the 29th November and December 4th could not have been used in Ottawa.

Q. Which ones do you identify as the ones you sent him? A. No. 26, 27 and 28.

Mr. Hodgins: 26 appears to be a cheque made out to G. S. McCorquodale? A. It was evidently started as that but altered afterwards.

Q. I do not understand that, you do not start a cheque? A. I did not draw—

Mr. Commissioner: The witness is giving his evidence.

A. I do not know why the name of G. C. McCorquodale was in there or why it was struck out, but I know that the cheque to Guthrie & Pringle was issued in Ottawa by Mr. Travers.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, so do I; but I want to know why you identify a cheque the stub of which is payable to G. S. McCorquodale as one of the blank cheques you sent down to Mr. Travers? A. I could not say, except it must have been one of the three that went to Mr. Travers in Ottawa. I do not know why McCorquodale's name was entered on the stub. I did not draw out the cheque.

Q. Look at the cheque immediately preceding that, what is the date of that cheque No. 25? A. It is dated there December 1st.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. And that is written over something? A. Yes.
Q. What is it written over? A. I could not tell you.
Q. I think I can make it out; have you your glasses with you? A. Yes; November 30th, it is apparently.
Q. Would not that look as if that cheque No. 25 was subsequent to those that you sent down on the 29th of November? A. Yes, but that was payment of office salaries here, and could not have been used in Ottawa.
Q. Quite so, but it was written out on the 30th, which was the day after the date on which you sent them down.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Not necessarily the 30th; it may have been written on the 1st December and probably being the end of the month a man might make a mistake. A. I do not know, as I did not draw out the cheques.
Q. Who drew them out? A. Mr. Shaver.
Q. And he would probably know better than you? A. Certainly.
Q. Does that mean you cannot identify the three cheques you gave us now as being the three that you sent down? A. No, I could not positively identify them. The only one I could identify is that one which was issued to Guthrie and Pringle in Ottawa, and that one was as I understand the only one of the three that was used in Ottawa. The three that were sent down may have been Nos. 25, 26, 27 or may have been numbers 26, 27 and 28.
Q. That is the best of your recollection? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know anything about No. 30 which is marked cancelled? A. No, sir.
Q. Do you think you and Mr. Shaver together could account for the three cheques that were sent down? A. I could not say as to what Mr. Shaver can say.
Q. You have never gone into that phase of the matter? A. No, but No. 30 appears to have been to the contractors for the office building.
Q. Just look at cheque No. 25 and tell me when that cheque was written out?
A. That was evidently November 30th, 1906.
Q. That is in favor of yourself? A. Yes.
Q. For salary, $62.50? A. Yes.
Q. It is marked as including Miss McKenna’s salary? A. It was paid to me, and I paid her her salary out of that.
Q. Would Mr. Shaver be the one who altered the date on the stub? A. It was in his handwriting; it was paid at the Traders Bank, on the 1st December.
Cheque No. 25 filed as EXHIBIT No. 6.
Q. Look at that cheque, what is the number of that cheque? A. No. 28.
Q. That is dated December 4th? A. Yes.
Q. For $10? A. Yes.
Q. Was that paid up here? A. That was paid apparently at the Traders Bank, on the 8th December.
Q. Whose writing would that be? A. That is in Mr. Shaver’s handwriting; he drew out all the cheques.
Cheque No. 28 marked as EXHIBIT 7.
Q. Then look at this cheque, dated the 30th November, is that the Pringle & Guthrie cheque? A. Yes.
Q. What is the date of that? A. November, 30th.
Q. What is the number of that cheque? A. No. 27.
Q. That corresponds with the cancelled stub? A. Yes.
Q. It is number 26 that is in the stub payable to Guthrie & Pringle? A. I do not understand why the wrong one was cancelled. This one evidently with McCorquodale’s name on it should have been cancelled, and this one written in, Guthrie & Pringle.
Q. There is 26, and 27: 26 is on the stub payable to Guthrie & Pringle, but when the cheque is produced it is No. 27 that is payable to them? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know anything about the other cheque?  A. No, sir. Cheque No. 27 is filled out in Mr. Travers' own handwriting at Ottawa, and when it came in Mr. Shaver doubtless—

Q. Never mind what he doubtless did?  A. I do not know.

Q. Look at this attached cheque No. 52, that cheque is payable to whom?

A. To W. R. Travers.

Q. And endorsed by him?  A. Yes.

Q. For $1,800?  A. Yes.

Q. Did you have to do with the closing of that transaction?  A. No, sir.

Q. Who did, Mr. Travers?  A. No, Mr. Shaver, I believe.

Q. Do you know anything about this attached receipt signed by Pringle & Guthrie?  A. Nothing beyond the fact that it was handed in to be attached to the cheque when it came back from Ottawa.

MR. HODGINS: I will put those three in together as one exhibit.

Cheque No. 27 to Pringle & Guthrie for $110; cheque to W. R. Travers, No. 52 for $1,800, signed by W. R. Travers, General Manager, and endorsed by W. R. Travers and A. R. Shaver; and receipt of Pringle & Guthrie, solicitors for C. A. Smith, for promissory note of W. R. Travers for $1,800 in favour of C. A. Smith, including release by Smith of all claims and demands of Smith against W. R. Travers and the Farmers Bank of Canada—filed as EXHIBIT 8.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Who is McCorquodale?  A. He was one of the solicitors for stock for the bank.

MR. HODGINS: One of the stock sellers?  A. Yes.

Q. I see he was a stockholder too?  A. He subscribed for one share, but if I remember rightly he never paid anything on it, and it was subsequently cancelled.

Q. Where are the stock applications?  A. The last I saw of them they were in the hands of the liquidator.

Q. Would it be asking you too much to see if you could find them amongst the papers that have been produced up here?  A. They ought to be all together, they were all on file.

Q. We will get them then?  A. All right.

ALEXANDER G. MCKAY, Sworn,—

MR. HODGINS: I have called you because your name is set forth in the prospectus which was sent by Mr. Travers to the Finance Minister in 1906, as one who had consented to act as a Director if elected, "Hon. A. G. McKay, K.C., Owen Sound, Ex-Commissioner of Crown Lands"—that would describe you pretty accurately?  A. Yes, fairly accurately.

Q. Did you consent to act as a Director of the Farmers Bank?  A. No, not exactly. I did not. I was approached by an agent to subscribe for stock, and of course I discussed the Directorship and that sort of thing, but I never decided to subscribe and did not subscribe.

Q. Who was the agent?  A. I think his name was Lindsay.

Q. On the 27th November, was there any authority given by you under which you could have been described as a gentleman who had consented to act as Director of the Farmers Bank if elected?  A. No, because I had not subscribed for stock.

Q. Nor prior to that, that would not have been proper?  A. No, it would not have been proper. I was considering and was being canvassed to subscribe for stock, and the discussion took place with regard to that, and I decided not to subscribe and told him so, and I did not know my name was in the prospectus until some one called my attention to it months afterwards.

Q. Is that all you had to do with it?  A. Yes.
INSPECTOR WALTER DUNCAN, called to produce certain papers.—

MR. HODGINS: There is said to be a statement made by Mr. Travers to you which has not been produced in any of these proceedings? A. Yes.

Q. Can you let me have it? A. I can. (Produces).

MR. HODGINS: Perhaps Inspector Duncan had better be sworn.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not know that I will receive that at present, a statement made by Travers. If you are going to call Travers possibly it may be proper to introduce it afterwards. I am not going to take second hand statements.

MR. HODGINS: I have no objection at all to do that; I wanted to get this, and I thought it just as well when the document was produced that the Inspector should state how he got it and how it comes to appear in the form it is. If you think it is better to wait for Mr. Travers, I will do so.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I think we had better wait till we see what Travers says.

MR. HODGINS: Have you any other papers? A. Yes, there are some papers bearing on some monies said to have been obtained by the 'World' newspaper. Then I have here a number of cheques signed by Fitzgibbon which are made payable to W. R. Travers. I produce one here for $6,000.

Q. I will go into these later; we will have to go through those very carefully. All I want to know is what you have? A. Then there are others here aggregating perhaps $100,000 or over. There is another statement that is of no value to me; that was taken in the bank. There is a short brief that was prepared for the Police Court for Mr. Corley, Crown Attorney.

Q. I have that. A. Then it was said there was a letter missing which was produced at the Police Court.

Q. Without going into it, perhaps you will just leave the papers with me and I will look through them myself.

MR. COMMISSIONER: One letter he says is missing? Whom was it to? A. It was to Mr. Coulson.

Q. From whom? A. Something in connection with the Finance Department at Ottawa with regard to something being wrong.

MR. HODGINS: Is not that the letter you are thinking of from Mr. Braithwaite to Mr. Clouston? A. I rather think it is.

Q. That letter I have seen. That letter mentioned Mr. Coulson made inquiry just as Mr. Braithwaite states. A. This one I would like to get back; that is a criminal charge bearing on a man that is not before the Court. And here is one also I would like to get back.

Q. We will just put these together and before you leave, Mr. Thompson will give them back to you. He wants to make a note of them. A. Very well.

JOHN D. IVEY, sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You are a merchant in Toronto? A. Yes.

Q. And were you at any time a Director of the Farmers Bank? A. Never.

Q. Did you contemplate becoming a director? A. I was solicited to subscribe for stock.

Q. Who solicited you? A. Mr. Travers, and there were some names that he mentioned to me, Major Beattie and Colonel McLennan, I think, and some others that rather appealed to me, and I said I would think it over, and in thinking it over I communicated with those gentlemen and I found that they were not directors.

Q. What was the result; did you make up your mind one way or the other? A. I practically dropped out at that.
Q. Do you remember when you dropped out?  A. No, I am sorry to say I do not; it was very early on at the beginning of the organization.

Q. And you were represented in the prospectus sent to the Finance Minister about the 27th of November, 1906, as a gentleman who had consented to act as a Director, if elected; would that be correct?  A. That would be without my authority at the time; I had never subscribed for stock.

Q. I notice in the document which I have here, which is really a lawyer's bill against the bank, that in March you had various interviews with Mr. Urquhart and Mr. Travers, two at least, in reference to extending of time for the bank proceeding with its organization; do you remember those?  A. Ex-Mayor Urquhart's name was among the three or four names that were mentioned to me at the first interview, and I had one or two interviews with Ex-Mayor Urquhart in order to inform myself as to the organization of the bank.

Q. You had nothing to do with the bank then on the 27th November, 1906?  A. None whatever.

Mr. HODGINS: Mr. Urquhart telephoned me that he could not be here this morning, but would be here this afternoon. In his absence I think I had better take Mr. Lown. But before that I am going to put in the minutes of the provisional directors which have been already produced in the former proceedings, and the minutes of the directors after their election.

Minute book of provisional directors filed as EXHIBIT No. 9.

Minute book of the directors of the Farmers Bank filed as EXHIBIT No. 10

ALEXANDER S. LOWN, sworn, examined by—

Mr. HODGINS: "You were one of the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank?  A. Yes.

Q. What is your profession?  A. I am a solicitor.

Q. You were practising where?  A. I was practising at that time in the village of Drayton.

Q. And you became interested in the Farmers Bank?  A. Yes.

Q. You took out the charter, did you not?  A. Yes.

Q. Of the original provisional directors, how many are still living?  A. Gallagher is dead.

Q. Who were the others besides yourself?  A. Dr. Ferguson, Fraser and Watson.

Q. Mr. Watson lives in Listowel?  A. Yes.

Q. The others in Toronto?  A. Yes. Mr. Gallagher, I think, lived in Tieswater at that time.

Q. You acted as a provisional director?  A. Yes.

Q. Right up to the time when the meeting of subscribers was held?  A. Yes.

Q. In November or December, 1906: you remember, I suppose, the agreements that were entered into at that time by the provisional directors?  A. Yes.

Q. 12th March, 1906, is the agreement signed by you, Fraser and Ferguson and Travers?  A. Yes.

Agreement between A. S. Lown et al. and W. R. Travers, dated the 12th March, 1906, filed as EXHIBIT 11.

Q. This is your signature and those are the signatures of the others (on EXHIBIT 11)?  A. Yes.

Q. That agreement, in effect, was to allow Travers to sell all the capital stock of the bank?  A. I think there is an exception in it.

Q. Yes. "Except such portions of the stock as they may reserve to be sold by C. H. Smith and the firm of Messrs. Urquhart, Urquhart and McGregor”—but outside of that Travers was to have the whole control; that is, in 1906? A. Yes.

Q. At that time you found you had not made much progress, is that right?
A. We had, I think, about $40,000 of stock subscribed.
Q. That was about two years, was it, after the bank had been incorporated?
A. Well, about a year or six months, I should judge.
Q. That agreement provides for the procuring, within a week from its date, four members for the permanent Board that will be acceptable to the provisional directors and to Mr. Thomas Urquhart, and he agreed that the expenses of the directors, providing they do not exceed $16,000 to date, be paid out of the funds of the bank? A. Yes.
Q. That was the arrangement? A. Yes.
Q. How many shares of stock had you got up to that time subscribed? A. It is pretty hard for me to say without going through the books.
Q. I agree with you. A. I would say, roughly speaking, about $10,000 or $50,000.
Q. That is two years’ work? A. Yes.
Q. Had you employed any one to get that? A. Yes.
Q. Who had you employed, C. H. Smith? A. Smith, and Smith had employed quite a number of others.
Q. Was Smith being paid by commission? A. Smith was being paid by commission, and Smith also acted as Secretary of the Provisional Board.
Q. Was he on salary or on commission? A. I think he had a salary of $75 a month and a commission besides, if I remember right.
Q. Those who have apparently been paid or charged up commissions were Smith, Travers, Fraser and Urquhart; did you employ any one else? A. I suppose Travers would employ other agents and Smith would employ other agents, and I think under Urquhart was a gentleman called Richardson.
Q. What was the meaning of this $16,000 that was provided for the payment of the provisional directors? A. At that time certain monies had been expended, we did not know just how much, but the idea was that these matters would be adjusted afterwards.
Q. Who did know the amount? A. I suppose we could have got the amount from the books.
Q. Had you kept books? A. Yes.
Q. And would they represent anything like a total of $16,000? A. They would represent, I could not tell without looking at the books.
Q. What books do you refer to? A. There would be the ledger and the cash book; the books were kept by Smith.
Q. Probably you will look at them later on; I think they are here? A. Very well. Roughly speaking, I think there were one or two unsettled matters and I think the books would show about $10,000.
Q. Of expenditure? A. Yes, at that time.
Q. How much of that had been contributed by the provisional directors? A. Not very much.
Q. It had been spent, then, out of the subscriptions? A. Yes
Q. Then there are three subsequent agreements? A. Two, I think.
Q. You are right; that is, two subsequent ones with Mr. Travers? A. Yes.
Q. They are both dated the 4th July, and I will put them in together; see if those are the originals? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This agreement of the 4th July, 1906, recites the agreement of the 12th March and allows Travers to sell all the capital stock which is now unsold and you engaged him at a salary of $5,000 for the first year, increasing a thousand dollars each year; and if he retires he is to be allowed a pension of $1,500 a year, that to be confirmed by the shareholders. Then it is provided that Travers agrees to accept the legitimate accounts as they now stand upon the books for the expenses of the organization to date, that would be what you would find in the books? A. Yes.

Q. "And also agrees to allow the parties of the first and second part the sum of $20,000 as a remuneration for their services, surrender of charter, etc., to be paid out of the funds of the bank provided the same be confirmed at the meeting of the subscribers"—that I see is signed by all the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. What is the meaning of your getting $20,000 for services as well as the legitimate accounts as they stand? A. It simply meant that Travers would recommend at the meeting, as I understood, at the meeting of shareholders that we would be paid that much.

Q. What was it for? A. For our work and trouble in promoting the bank.

Q. Such as you have described? A. Yes.

Q. This speaks of a surrender of charter, I suppose that was really a transfer of the charter to Mr. Travers? A. I suppose so, yes.

Q. Was it on the understanding that he was to have—? A. The understanding was that he was to go on and complete the organization and that we were to do any acts that were necessary to assist him.

Q. At that time in July, 1906, there had been a good deal more stock taken up, had there not? A. Yes.

Q. What did you know about promissory notes that had been taken for stock? A. I think it is all explained in the minute book. We had some objections to the promissory notes. Those notes were taken without our knowledge, and when we discovered it, some of the members of the Board raised some objections to those promissory notes, and we decided to take legal advice on the matter, and we did.

Q. The second agreement of the 4th of July recites the prior one of the same date, as to the $20,000 and Mr. Travers in that agrees to "accept their claim and to pay the $20,000 to the parties of the first and second part as follows:...... immediately upon their passing the necessary resolution to give the legal notice calling a meeting of the subscribers for the organization of the bank."

Then at the bottom of that agreement there is a receipt for Travers for $10,000, "And to this extent we hereby assign our interest in said $20,000 to said Travers"? A. Yes.

Q. When after the 4th of July did the provisional directors get the $10,000 from Travers? A. We were paid that day.

Q. Was that paid out of these subscriptions? A. No, that was paid out of Travers' commissions. Of course the commissions were paid out of the subscriptions.

Q. Was there a resolution directing payment to him of $10,000? A. I cannot remember.

Q. Then these are the other memorandum and power of attorney, I think they had better go in together; they are also signed by the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. One is memorandum as to distribution, and the other is the power of attorney from the provisional directors to Travers? A. Yes.

Memorandum as to distribution and power of attorney from provisional directors to Travers filed together as Exhibit 13.

Q. The memorandum of distribution says "We, the undersigned, hereby agree that we will divide the sum of $20,000 to be paid us by W. R. Travers under an agreement dated the 4th day of July, A.D., 1906, amongst ourselves as follows: A. S. Lown $5,000; C. H. Smith $5,000; John Feguson $3,500; Alexander Fraser $3,500; John Watson $1,500; James Gallagher $1,500."
The power of attorney states "To constitute and appoint W. R. Travers our lawful attorney for us and in our name and stead to endorse our names on all notes made by anyone whatever payable to the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada, and the endorsement of our names on said notes by him as our attorney shall be as valid and effectual as if we ourselves had endorsed notes, etc."

You did endorse all these notes didn't you? A. I presume that Travers as attorney endorsed those notes.

Q. The power of attorney is dated the 8th October, 1906; look at this resolution of the same date, and certified by you as Chairman? A. It was signed by me as Chairman.

Q. That was passed at that meeting? A. Yes.

Q. It reads: "Moved by James Gallagher, seconded by John Ferguson: "That the provisional directors execute a power of attorney to W. R. Travers for the purpose of endorsing all notes in their names as provisional directors and signing their names to a note or notes for the purpose of raising funds to put up the deposit with the Government, and we authorize the secretary to hand over all notes to W. R. Travers for the said purpose." (Motion filed as Exhibit 14.)

Q. Am I wrong in saying that at that period of time out of the subscriptions that had been raised all the expenses were to be paid and the $20,000 to the provisional directors would come out of that, although charged as commissions to Mr. Travers?

Q. It would come out of Mr. Travers' commissions, his commissions would be chargeable to that.

Q. And he would then get all the promissory notes made up to that time by subscribers? A. No.

Q. What was the situation? A. The bank would get the credit for the proceeds of any money that he raised by endorsing those notes.

Q. I am speaking of the subscriptions which had been got by you four provisional directors before Mr. Travers came into it? A. Yes.

Q. The expenses were to be paid out of that? A. Out of all the money subscribed by the stockholders, I presume.

Q. Then you were to get $20,000 in addition.

Mr. Commissioner: He explained that differently before; that $10,000 came out of the commission that Travers got, which came out of the bank funds.

Mr. Hodgins: Up to the time that Travers made the agreement with you to pay you $16,000 in March and $20,000 in July had Travers got any stock taken up himself? A. Travers himself, we never saw Travers until about the 12th of March, and from the 12th March to the 4th July Travers and his agents had been instrumental in getting the great portion of the stock.

Q. Coming back to the 12th of March the arrangement under that agreement was that you four directors were to be paid the $16,000? A. No, not exactly; we were to be paid whatever expenses there were, if they were not more than $16,000; if they were less, we would get less.

Q. What was the object of changing the agreement on the 4th of July; Travers in the meantime had been getting stock taken up? A. Out of the money that we had expended we ourselves would get practically nothing; that had gone in rent and advertising and commissions, and so on.

Q. We can find the amount of that; but I want the reason for making the agreement of the 4th of July? A. Travers had been promising us that we would get a certain amount of remuneration for the services that we had done.

Q. If the $20,000 was to be paid out of Travers' commission it was on the commission from between the 12th March and the 4th July? A. No, it would be on the commissions earned at the time at which the bank was organized.

Q. You turned over the entire stock-selling to Travers? A. Yes.

Q. And he, you say, out of his commissions was to pay that? A. Yes.
Q. What commission did you as provisional directors arrange to pay Travers?
A. 10%.
Q. On the par value of a subscription? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Not upon the cash paid in? A. The par value of the subscription; I think, if I remember rightly, the agreement sets it forth.
Q. Supposing these notes were given by subscribers would Travers get in cash his commissions out of that as if it had been paid in cash; was that the idea you had in your minds at the time? A. If the note was a good note.
Q. Had you anything to say to that? A. No, the notes were all recommended to us as being good notes.
Q. You passed certain resolutions on the subject; in addition to that agreement of the 12th March, 1906, was there an agreement to pay Dr. Ferguson and Alexander Fraser more, an additional amount to that? A. No.
Q. This is the minute of the 10th March, 1906: "That the provisional Board hereby agrees that provision be made for Messrs. A. S. Lown, and C. H. Smith as originators of the bank, by giving them positions in the bank on its organization, Mr. Lown as Secretary and Mr. Smith as manager of a branch bank, or at least its equivalent in the head office; and in the event of their not being continued to a period to be agreed upon between Mr. Lown and Mr. Smith and Mr. Travers, the prospective General Manager, an adequate allowance be made by pension or bonus on retirement and that Dr. Ferguson and Alexander Fraser be empowered to execute this agreement with Mr. Travers on behalf of the Provisional Board." That is on the 10th March, and would that agreement on the 12th March immediately follow it and be the one executed in pursuance of this, because my recollection is there is no provision in that for your being continued? A. I do not think that was ever carried out.
Q. On the same day: moved by Dr. Ferguson, seconded by Alexander Fraser: "That an allowance of $3,000 be made to Alexander Fraser and Dr. John Ferguson for their services and outlays as provisional directors in the organization of the bank, and that the same be paid when the bank is ready for business—" A. That would be included in that $20,000.
Q. Which? A. That $3,000.
Q. That was mentioned in the 4th of July agreement? A. Yes.
Q. Would it be included in what is mentioned as the agreement of the 12th of March? A. I do not think so.
Q. I want to ask you about the agreement as to notes; you had taken advice had you not, relative to the legality of the provisional Board accepting notes? A. Yes.
Q. I see that at the meeting of the 23rd of June the resolution was passed against that being done; "It was moved by Dr. Ferguson, seconded by Mr. Gallagher: that whereas it appears that the notes have been accepted by agents in settlement of subscriptions to stock, be it resolved that the opinion of Messrs. Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor be secured at once as to the legality of accepting by the provisional Board such settlements and the payments of commissions, on such subscriptions." Moved by Alexander Fraser, seconded by Mr. Gallagher: "That instructions be given to Mr. Travers that no note be accepted in lieu of cash for payment of stock and that no agent or sub-agent employed by him accept the same, but that the conditions set forth in the form of application be adhered to on cash basis unless otherwise specially authorized by the Board"—do you remember that? A. Yes.
Q. Was there an opinion obtained? A. Yes.
Q. To what effect? A. To the effect that—
MR. COMMISSIONER: Is it in writing? A. Yes.
MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not think it would be fair.
MR. HODGINS: I only want to get whether, generally speaking, it was in favor or against it, because I have the opinion here, what I take to be the opinion. I expected to put that in when Mr. Urquhart came. Perhaps you would recognize that? A. I think we have the original letter somewhere.

Mr. Commissioner: That purports to be a copy? A. Yes; it would be fairer for Mr. Urquhart to put in the original letter.

Mr. Hodgins: On July 4th, which was the date at which that agreement appears to have been made, it was moved by Mr. Ferguson, seconded by Mr. Gallagher; "that in consideration of the letter of Messrs. Urquhart, Urquhart and McGregor, regarding the acceptance of notes on subscriptions of stock, the resolution of the 23rd June, 1906, calling for the selling of stock on a cash basis be repealed". I suppose that affected your minds. You repealed the resolution?
A. Yes.

Q. And then the next is a resolution: "That the sum of $10,000 on account of commissions for the sale of the capital stock in the bank be paid to W. R. Travers". Then, "That the agreement entered into this day between W. R. Travers, C. H. Smith and Messrs. Watson, Gallagher, Lown, Ferguson and Fraser be confirmed and signed?". Then it was known when the $10,000 was given that the notes had been taken, and do you pretend to say that you knew they were all good at that time? A. We did not know they were all good, but they were all stated to us to be notes of good substantial farmers.

Q. Stated by whom? A. By Travers.

Q. And on that statement the $10,000 was paid out of the monies on hand?
A. Yes.

Q. You did not discount the notes to get this money? A. No, not at that time.

Q. Further on the same day, "That the Chairman of the Board"—who was that? A. Myself.

Q. "That the Chairman of the Board, the Secretary Treasurer of the Board"—who was the secretary treasurer? A. Mr. Smith.

Q. "And W. R. Travers, General Manager, be authorized to endorse all notes made in favour of the bank for the purpose of raising money to make deposit with the Treasury Board of the Dominion Government". This is on the 4th July, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. Then I see by the minutes that you kept on alloting stock as subscriptions were brought in? A. Yes.

Q. Irrespective of whether they were cash or otherwise? A. Yes.

Q. You knew, of course, quite well, that notes were being taken? A. Yes.

Q. After that change of attitude? A. Yes.

Q. And I suppose you will say you were aware that a very large proportion of notes were being taken? A. I could not say that.

Q. Did you make any inquiry from Mr. Travers as to the proportion of notes and cash? A. That is nearly seven years ago, and it is hard for me to remember.

Q. Then we come to the meeting of the 8th October, where that resolution that I put in apparently carried. There are quite a number of minutes, extending over quite a long period of time, that all appear to have been read and confirmed at the meeting on the 6th November, do you recollect why they were left for confirmation so long? A. I cannot remember.

Q. The allotment that you made was not subject to any condition at all on payment of the notes, it was simply an allotment of the stock by the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. Did you think you had power to do that? A. We thought we had, yes.

Q. You made your report to the shareholders or subscribers on the 22nd November? A. Yes.

Q. Would you just look at that report which I will put in signed by you, tell me about the expenses there on the second page? (Report of the provisional Board, dated the 22nd November, 1906, filed as Exhibit 15.) A. $44,403.65.
Q. Is that correct? A. It is approximately correct. Of course I simply got that, I would ask Mr. Shaver or Mr. Fitzgibbon who were in charge of the books as to what the expenses were.
Q. Do you remember asking them? A. Yes; excuse me a moment, the figures there are not in my handwriting.
Q. Whose are they in? A. I cannot tell you; they may be in Mr. Shaver's; they are certainly not in mine.
Q. Were you elected as a regular director of the bank? A. No.
Q. Had you anything to do with opening the original books of the bank? A. No.
Q. You do not know why the figures for expenses were not the same as reported to the subscribers? A. No, so far as I know, I had asked some person and apparently the entries have been made in some other person's handwriting.
Q. Did that amount to your knowledge include the amount paid to the provisional directors by Travers? A. Yes.
Q. Did it include all the commissions paid? A. Yes.
Q. To Travers or others? A. Yes.
Q. Did you know at the time how much had been paid in in cash to that date? A. I think possibly I did. I think I signed a cheque for $150,000 transferring the Traders Bank account to the Bank of Montreal.
Q. You think you signed a cheque for that? A. Yes, I probably signed a cheque for that.
Q. The cash that had come in being to the credit of the provisional directors? A. Yes. in the Traders Bank, and $150,000 of that was transferred.
Q. Now from whom did you get this information in paragraph 4; "The Board have to report in the first place that they have the sum of $579,200 bona fide subscribed"? A. I would get it from Mr. Shaver or Mr. Fitzgibbon.
Q. Then this, "And out of the subscriptions thereon they have paid in to the Treasury Department of the Dominion Government, the sum of $250,000?" A. I knew as a matter of fact that $250,000 had been paid to the Treasury Board; I was told that by Mr. Travers.
Q. But not out of the subscriptions thereon? A. Out of the monies derived from the proceeds of the discounts of the subscribers' notes.
Q. That was your knowledge at the time? A. Yes.
Q. When you signed the report? A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever get that $10,000? A. No.
Q. How was that? A. We simply did not get it; that was all.
Q. You had a good deal to do with the application for the certificate to the Treasury? A. I had nothing to do with it.
Q. Did you prepare that report which we have just put in? A. Yes, I think Mr. Travers and I prepared it.
Q. He says you did? A. Possibly.
Q. You remember, at all events, the application for the money to make up the additional amount of $100,000 and you knew there was an affidavit being made to borrow on the notes? A. Yes.
Q. Had you anything to do with negotiating that yourself? A. None whatever.
Q. And did you go over the list of subscriptions with Mr. Travers? A. No.
Q. Did you know anything about what he called spreading the cash over the subscriptions? A. Nothing, except what I heard him tell in the Police Court.
Q. You really had nothing to do with it, is that right? A. I had nothing to do whatever with the application for the certificate.
Q. Had you anything to do with preparing the papers to be used? A. No, none whatever.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. At whose request did you sign the cheque for $150,000 you have spoken of? A. I presume, Mr. Travers' request.

Q. Did you endorse the notes? A. No, the notes were endorsed by Mr. Travers as the attorney. I think the notes I have seen the endorsement was in Mr. Smith's handwriting and signed by Travers as attorney.

Q. The money was paid in on or about the 23rd October? A. Yes.

Q. So that I suppose the provisional directors were fully aware that the power of attorney was being acted on for the purpose of raising the money? A. I do not know about the others, I was.

Q. I think I have seen somewhere that Mr. Travers says you were aware of the making up of that list? A. No, I think he says I was not.

Q. Who were the officers of the bank at that time, the officers of the provisional directors? A. At what time?

Q. Say, October 8th, 1906? A. I was chairman and Smith would be secretary and Mr. Travers was acting manager.

Q. You have spoken of Fitzgibbon and Shaver, when did they come into the employ of the bank? A. Smith went out some time in October, and then, I think, Mr. Shaver became the secretary, and some short time after that Mr. Fitzgibbon came in.

Q. Was he there before the meeting of subscribers when the directors were formally elected? A. Yes, they were both there; Smith would not be there, but Fitzgibbon and Shaver would be there.

Q. Where is Smith now, do you know—I am instructed he was in Vancouver or in British Columbia somewhere? A. I understand he is in Vancouver. The last time I saw him he told me he was going to Vancouver; I have not heard from him since.

Q. Who was the solicitor for the bank while it was under your charge as one of the provisional directors? A. Mr. Urquhart was part of the time.

Q. Was he succeeded by Mr. Hunter? A. Yes, he was succeeded by Mr. Hunter.

Q. Prior to the 8th October? A. It would be very hard to say when Mr. Urquhart went out and when Mr. Hunter came in; if you tell me any particular dates.

Q. I am giving you the 8th October, 1906? A. I would think Mr. Hunter would then be solicitor.

Q. He went down with Travers to Ottawa? A. I do not know anything about that.

Q. Apart from the $10,000 which you have paid, have you obtained any money, did you get any further monies from Mr. Travers from the bank? A. I got $300.

Q. For what? A. In settlement of the $10,000.

Q. In settlement of the remaining $10,000? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not press your claim for the $10,000 which he had agreed to pay you? A. Well, matters had gone a little harder than we expected with the bank, and I thought it would be rather unfair.

Q. When did you make a settlement with him? A. Some time in January. I do not remember the date.

Q. Mr. Travers says, in respect to that agreement of the 4th July, that when he entered into the agreement on the 4th of July they, that is the provisional directors, desired that $10,000 of the amount should be paid forthwith, and to that he agreed; that was before the issue of the certificate by the Treasury Board and before they had a sufficient amount of stock even subscribed to apply for the certificate, and the balance of $10,000 was to be paid after the permanent directors were elected. Would that be right? A. The agreement says at the time of the election—
Q. The point I want to know is, before there was a sufficient amount even subscribed, the $500,000 had been subscribed? A. No, there would not be $500,000 subscribed then.
Q. Had the payment of the $10,000 been approved by the permanent Board at any time? A. I do not know what the permanent Board did.
Q. You never heard it was nor never inquired? A. I never inquired.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Who were the promoters of this bank, who got up the idea? A. I think the idea in the first place was originally with Mr. C. H. Smith.
Q. Had Travers at the beginning anything to do with it? A. Travers had nothing whatever to do with it until about the 12th of March.
Q. You had been going on, I judge from what you said, without any large success in getting large subscriptions? A. Yes.
Q. The $16,000 you spoke of, approximately, what did that represent? A. What I understood it represented was the money that had been expended.
Q. In what? A. For commissions, for rent, for advertising, for various things.
Q. Was there an account kept? A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen that account? A. I have seen that account, yes; it is in the ledger.
Q. I notice that the agreement provides that the provisional directors authorized Mr. Travers to pledge their personal credit for the payment of the notes that were discounted? A. I have forgotten about that.
Q. Was the credit of the Farmers Bank pledged or intended to be pledged for the payment of those notes? A. No.
Q. Were you acting under anybody's advice in adopting the course you took for raising the money? A. We were acting under advice from Mr. Travers, whom we understood was advised by Mr. Hunter.
Q. What did you expect to happen if the bank never went into operation; what did you expect to happen with regard to the $10,000, you and your associates? A. I expected we would have to repay it.
Q. Do you know whether in the forty thousand odd dollars, which was the sum said to be the preliminary expenses, the $20,000 that you were to receive was included? A. No, only $10,000 of it was included.
Q. Do you know where the $300 that you got in settlement of your claim for your share of the unpaid $10,000 came from? A. I do not know.
Q. It would be Travers that would be making the money and not the bank, if you took $300 for your share; I understood you to say that this money was to come out of Travers' commissions? A. Yes. There had been a good deal of trouble over the formation of the bank, and matters had not gone as I had expected they would, and I did not want to raise any trouble; that was the reason I—
Q. Were the other gentlemen who were entitled to a share in that $10,000 settled with at the same time? A. Yes, and all on a somewhat similar basis.
MR. HODGINS: I notice that the power of attorney contains the clause, "We personally guaranteeing the said notes"—that is what Mr. Commissioner referred to? A. Yes.
Q. What is the object of that? A. I do not remember.
Q. Just to get the $10,000? A. No, the power of attorney was drawn, I presume, by Mr. Hunter.
Q. Would you like to read it? A. (Witness reads over power of attorney).
Q. You see the words, "We personally guaranteeing the notes"? A. I had forgotten all about that being in the power of attorney.
Q. Do you remember why you people should guarantee the notes? A. No.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Was there anything else you were getting out of it except the $10,000? A. No, nothing.
Q. Are you aware that the notes were all endorsed without recourse against you? A. I believe they were.
Q. Why was that change made? A. I do not know any reason for it at all.
Q. Did you ask for it? A. I don't think we ever did.
Q. Travers just? A. Did it himself.
Q. Let you off? A. Apparently so.
Q. Was this power of attorney drawn by the solicitor of the bank, either Mr. Urquhart or Mr. Hunter? A. My impression is it was.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Which of you gentlemen had experience before in launching a banking institution upon the world? A. None of us except perhaps Mr. Smith.

Q. What is his business? A. He was a banker.
Q. Connected with that bank? A. He had managed, I think, a private bank; he had been manager of the Traders, and he had also conducted a private bank of his own.
Q. Who advised you as to the proper rate of commission to pay the persons who procured subscriptions for the stock; how did you arrive at a figure of 10%? A. We had been trying five, and we found we could not get the stock at five, so we raised it to ten.
Q. You would not know much about that; who told you what you ought to pay in the first place? A. I suppose—Mr. Gallagher was also a bank manager.
Q. What bank was he connected with? A. I think he was at one time a manager of the Sovereign.

Mr. Hodgins: I should like to ask you, did you not give me the name of the solicitor that you thought prepared that power of attorney? A. I do not know.
Q. You thought it was either one or the other? A. Yes; probably Mr. Hunter, I should think.
Q. Were not the provisional directors to get a 10% commission themselves on what they sold in the way of stock? A. There was no understanding of that.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Did any of you get any commission? A. I got a little commission myself, and I think Mr. Fraser got some.

Mr. Hodgins: I thought there was a resolution about that? A. I do not think there was a resolution about it.

The Commission adjourned at 1.30 p.m. to 2.30 this afternoon

The Commission resumed at 2.30 p.m., March 19th, 1912, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

JOHN WATSON, of Listowel, sworn by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. You were one of the provisional directors? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And were an active member of the Board until the charter was disposed of, the Provisional Board? A. Yes.
Q. Had you anything to do with getting up stock subscriptions? A. No, sir.
Q. Nothing at all? A. Nothing at all; I never sold a dollar's worth of stock, nor asked a man to buy a dollar's worth.
Q. What is your business? A. I am a brewer.
Q. You remained, however, a provisional director for something like two years or more? A. From the start of the bank until the end; that is, so far as the provisional directors were concerned.

Q. You attended the meetings? A. Some of them.

Q. Throughout? A. Pretty nearly all.

Q. You were familiar with what was going on? A. Yes.

Q. Were you familiar with those agreements that were produced this morning of the 12th March, 1906, and 4th July, 1906? A. The 12th March agreement I did not sign.

Q. Why not? A. Mr. Travers was a stranger to me, and the agreement had been signed by three members of the Board and I did not see that it made any difference whether I signed it or not, and I therefore did not sign it.

Q. You lived in Listowel? A. Yes.

Q. Was Travers known there? Not that I am aware of.

Q. You did not know him at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not agree then, do I understand that you did not agree, is that the reason you did not sign that agreement? A. I did not know anything about Mr. Travers at the time and I refused to sign the agreement.

Q. Was your refusal based in any way on the fact that the agreement was unfair? A. No.

Q. Up to that time had you expended anything that would justify the arrangement to pay the expenses of the directors provided they had not exceeded $16,000? A. Had we expended anything?

Q. Yes; had you anything that would justify any such sum as that? A. I think that sum there is too large. I think at the time, if I remember right, that the actual expenses up to that date were about eight or ten thousand dollars, but there were a few accounts that were unsettled, and that was Mr. Travers' suggestion to make it $16,000.

Q. And that, it was agreed, should be paid out of the funds of the bank, not by Travers personally. A. No, that was to be paid out of the receipts.

Q. It says, "to be paid out of the funds of the bank." A. Yes.

Q. Was your objection to sign at all connected with that item? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it connected with the fact that they were agreeing that Travers should be the General Manager, at a salary of $4,000 increasing and a pension? A. No objection to that; it was on account of Mr. Travers being a perfect stranger to me.

Q. You overcame that objection; whatever it may be, in July? A. Yes.

Q. And these other agreements are all signed by you? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know anything, or did you know anything about the books at that time? A. The books of the Bank.

Q. Yes, the figures? A. Nothing any more than what was told to us from time to time.

Q. Who did you look to to tell you? A. Mr. Smith.

Q. He was the original organizer, was he? A. Yes.

Q. And he got you to come on? A. Yes.

Q. What do you know about the preparation of these July agreements, had you anything to do with the instructions for them? A. Not in the least.

Q. Who presented them to you? A. They were presented at the Board meeting.

Q. Had you been consulted as to the terms? A. Not until they were laid on the table.

Q. They all knew you had been objecting to sign a previous one? A. Yes.

Q. They did not consult you until they laid them on the table of the Board? A. At the meeting, yes.

Q. On the 4th July or thereabouts? A. Yes.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Did you read them?  A. Yes.
Q. You are familiar then with the provisions?  A. Yes.
Q. And that was to annul the 12th March agreement, to allow Travers to sell all the capital stock now unsold at par, and a premium over $500,000 and to allow him a commission of 10% thereon for expenses of selling same, payable one-half on the signing of the subscription and payment of deposit and the balance on allotment. Prior to that time the question of taking notes for the shares had come up?  A. Yes.
Q. And you had an opinion upon it?  A. Yes.
Q. You were familiar with that?  A. Yes, led to believe that the opinion of Messrs. Urquhart & MacGregor was thoroughly reliable and that we could do such a thing.

Mr. Commissioner: The Bank?  A. Yes; the Bank, they were to pay Mr. Travers 10% on all stock sold; it did not seem to make any difference whether it was put in by note or cash, the full amount.

Mr. Hodgins: He was to get his commission?  A. Yes, the full amount.
Q. And out of the cash that came in?  A. Yes.
Q. This also provided for his engagement as General Manager at an increased salary of $5,000 for the first year?  A. Yes.
Q. And also the pension which remained the same?  A. That was his own suggestion.
Q. The provision then as to the $20,000 was apparently changed?  A. Yes.
Q. Not only were the expenses to be paid out of the funds of the Bank, but this $20,000 to the Directors for their services was to be paid in the same way?  A. Well, when Mr. Travers came in there as Acting Manager or to be General Manager, he said: "the amount of work you men have done for the last two years you should get $25,000 or $30,000 for it as a remuneration" and he says, "I will get a Board elected to pass that amount for you". Now, the first agreement there was to go before the shareholders and if they confirmed that then we would get $20,000; if they did not confirm it we would not get anything. But some way or another the second agreement was changed after lunch and when I came in they said, Mr. Travers had agreed to assume the liability of the $20,000 and pay that money himself if we would pay him $10,000 today on his commissions, that he would take the chance of getting it from the permanent Board or shareholders.
Q. There was a meeting then before lunch and a meeting after lunch?  A. Yes, one in the morning.
Q. That accounts for these two agreements?  A. Yes, on the same day.
Q. Did you think it was a proper thing to vote as much as $20,000 to the Directors out of the funds of the Bank before its organization?  A. We were not doing that.
Q. Who were?  A. Nobody that I know of.
Q. You were signing an agreement that it was to be paid out of the funds of the Bank?  A. Providing it was passed by the shareholders.
Q. Did you think that that was fair?  A. It was at Mr. Travers' suggestion that it was done.
Q. Had you any justification that you know of for you Directors claiming that amount?  A. I don't know as we had.
Q. Why did you sign the agreement?  A. At Mr. Travers' suggestion.
Q. Did you think it was fair to the subscribers?  A. If they passed the agreement why it was fair enough, for they then knew what they were doing.
Q. Did you ever see the stock subscriptions?  A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever see the power of attorney?  A. Yes.
Q. Did you know that that power of attorney was to be used for voting at the meeting that the provisional directors were going to call to ratify, or rather to organize the bank?  A. That it was to be used as a voting power?

Q. Yes?  A. No, sir.

Q. What was your idea, who would ratify this, agree to pay it?  A. The shareholders themselves.

Q. The payment of Travers of his commission was not conditional on any vote of the shareholders?  A. No.

Q. So that in any event you knew that he was to get that?  A. Yes, sir.

Q. But your payment of $20,000 was to be conditional on the vote of the shareholders?  A. Yes; afterwards agreed to by—

Q. So that after lunch apparently there was a change, and Travers agreed to accept your claim and take the responsibility of it?  A. Yes.

Q. And to pay the full $20,000?  A. Yes.

Q. I do not see anything here as to the agreement that he was to be paid $10,000 on account of his commissions, was that a verbal understanding?  A. Yes.

Q. That is the real consideration for this second agreement, for his assuming the $20,000 he was to be paid $10,000 immediately?  A. He said, “I will assume the $20,000 and take the chance of getting it from the shareholders, and if you will pay me $10,000 today I will pay you $10,000 on account of the amount due you out of my commission”.

Q. So that you four or five directors and Mr. Travers became, from that time on, equally interested in having the shareholders confirm the payment of $20,000?  A. It did not make any difference to me or to the other shareholders.

Q. You could not get the balance of the $10,000 without confirmation?  A. We did not get it.

Q. You could not get it without confirmation?  A. We could have held Mr. Travers, I suppose; it was a personal matter with him, the way I looked at it.

Q. He became the only one you think interested in getting the confirmation?  A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything about his financial standing?  A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know he was worth $10,000?  A. No, sir.

Q. You did not have much confidence in his assuming that, did you?  A. I thought he would have lots more money coming to him through the sale of his stock and he would be gentleman enough to pay it.

Q. You still intended however that it should be confirmed at the shareholders’ meeting?  A. We had nothing to do with that.

Q. You received on the same day your share of that $10,000, I suppose—I suppose your signature is here?  A. Yes, sir, I got $1,000.

Q. $1,500 was it not?  A. If the whole $20,000 had been paid I was to get $1,500.

Q. Only $10,000 was paid and you got how much that day?  A. $1,000.

Q. Why did you get more than your share?  A. I don’t know. They just gave it to me, that was all. It was agreed I would get $1,000 that afternoon after dividing it up.

Q. Was that arrangement made before you signed the new agreement after lunch?  A. No, afterwards.

Q. You settled later on, didn’t you, the balance?  A. Yes, I got $100. I was going past the Imperial Bank in Listowel one day and one of the clerks came out and called me in, and he says, “The manager wants to see you,” and I went in and I asked him what it was, and he says, “We have a receipt here for you to sign and also a cheque, which I will give you when you sign the receipt, from Mr. Travers, in full settlement,” and so I took the $100 and signed the receipt.

Q. The date of that would be July the following year?  A. Yes, somewhere about that time.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Look at those two receipts and say if they are your receipts for $100, and also an order? A. Yes.
Q. The receipt is not dated, I see, but attached to it here—and perhaps you will tell me if they were signed the same day? A. I think so.
Q. Here is an order on Robertson & McLennan, dated 23rd July, 1907, to deliver to Travers an agreement lodged with them on or about the 4th day of July last? A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what that agreement was? A. I do not know, I forget what that was.
Q. Probably was this very agreement? A. I do not know which one it was; I know there was an agreement or some paper placed there in care of Robertson & McLennan, in their charge, and what it contained I cannot tell you.
Q. Mr. Robertson has been examined, and he says he does not know anything about what the document was? A. I cannot tell you.
Q. You cannot identify it? A. No.
Q. Did you leave it with him? A. No, sir.
Q. Who did? A. I don’t know.
Q. Why did you settle for $100; why did you not make your claim against him; did not the shareholders ratify it? A. I don’t know whether they did or not.

Receipt of John Watson for $100, with order on Robertson & McLennan to deliver to W. R. Travers Agreement, filed as Exhibit 16.

Q. Were you at the first meeting of the shareholders, the organization meeting of the bank? A. In a way I was and in another way I was not. I came down to attend the meeting to see that everything so far as the provisional board was concerned was satisfactory to the shareholders, and when I went to the head office of the bank where the meeting was to be held Mr. Travers ordered me out, and so, being a stranger in the city and not wanting to make any fuss, I left the place.
Q. Explain why he ordered you out? A. Because I was not a shareholder.
Q. How was that? I thought you had taken stock, hadn’t you? A. No, sir, never had a dollar.
Q. Never subscribed for any? A. No, sir.
Q. And acted as provisional director throughout? A. Yes, I was told it was not necessary for me to take stock.
Q. Had you been asked to take it? A. I told the party that asked me to go on the Board in the first place that I would not take any stock. I says, “If you want me on your Board you will have to have somebody who has stock, if it is required, to transfer it over to me”.
Q. You had no financial interest in the matter from beginning to end? A. No, sir.
Q. And you got $1,100? A. Yes.
Q. Is that all you got? A. I got my travelling expenses and director’s fees.
Q. The directors’ fees that were paid to the provisional directors amount to $11,760; have you any idea how much you got out of that? A. About between three and four hundred dollars, I think.
Q. That would be all you got? A. Yes.
Q. I suppose we can verify that from the books? A. Yes; that is as near as I can remember.
Q. Who made the arrangement with Travers to sell the charter to him? A. I could not tell you.
Q. That was the idea, that he should take over the charter? A. I think so.
Q. From the 4th July on your people had no substantial interest in it at all, had you? A. No, sir, no more than—
Q. Travers and Travers’ sub-agents got the subscriptions taken up? A. Yes.
Q. And handled them, I suppose? A. So far as I know.
Q. Where was the money placed; had you anything to do with that? A. I never handled any of the money at all.
Q. Did you ever sign cheques? A. No, sir, nothing to do with the money at all. It was placed, I understood, with the bank, the bank account was kept with the Traders Bank of Canada.
Q. You finally signed a power of attorney to Mr. Travers to endorse the notes? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you present at the meeting on October 8th at which that resolution was carried? A. I think I was there, I am not sure.
Q. You, I suppose, became aware before signing that it would be necessary to use those notes in obtaining money enough to make the deposit? A. I don't know that I was aware of the fact of how he was going to raise the money before we had given him power of attorney, but as I understood the matter that it was legal for us to receive the notes for payment of stock that it must surely be legal for us to use them for the interest of the bank. I did not know how he was going to get the money or where from or anything about it.
Q. The 8th October, 1906, I see, you are down as being present? A. Yes.
Q. And the resolution I speak of:

"That the provisional directors execute a power of attorney to W. R. Travers for the purpose of endorsing all notes in their names as provisional directors, and of signing their names to a note or notes for the purpose of raising funds to put up a deposit with the Government; and we authorize the Secretary to hand over all notes to W. R. Travers for the said purpose."

Who would have possession of those notes up to that time? A. I could not tell you.
Q. Were they ever produced at any meeting of the provisional board of directors? A. Not that I am aware of.
Q. And you cannot speak as to their custom? A. No.
Q. Did you know W. J. Lindsay? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Had you been acquainted with him long? A. About 25 years.
Q. You knew he was a stock seller? A. When I first knew him he was a commercial traveller.
Q. What became of him after that; when did he take up stock selling? A. I did not know he was stock selling till he was selling for Mr. Travers.
Q. When did you know he became connected with the organization of the bank? A. After Mr. Travers' engagement in March.
Q. Then you knew that Mr. Lindsay was— A. Selling stock for Mr. Travers.
Q. Who was the one, so far as you know, that was taking over from the provisional directors the charter? A. The shareholders of the bank, that is what I understood.
Q. Who was going to supersede you people? Who was to be the— A. To be the next board of directors?
Q. Yes; was any arrangement made about that? A. No arrangement, so far as I know or remember.
Q. It was understood you all would drop out, was it not? A. I don't know whether it was understood that way or not; there was nothing said to me.
Q. At all events, you were quite sure of it when you went to the meeting and were turned out? A. Yes, but before that, I have a letter from Mr. Travers, but I have not got it with me—
Q. Telling you that? A. Asking me to be a director.
Q. And you declined? A. Yes, sir.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Was any one associated with Travers in March or in July when those agreements were made; they are made with him personally? A. They were made with him—do you mean anybody else in the room with him?

Q. No, any one associated with him in the affair? A. No, they were all with Travers; so far as I know, the provisional board did not know anybody else in the transaction but W. R. Travers.

Q. You mean you did not know any one was associated with him, you thought he was doing all of this? A. So far as the agreement was concerned.

Q. Did you know that anybody else was associated with him in the matter, did you recognize Lindsay as one of his associates? A. No.

Q. Or any one else? A. No.

Q. Were you aware at the time that resolution was passed on the 8th October of the amount of commissions that had been paid out by your co-directors? A. No, I do not remember.

Q. Would you have been surprised that that amounted to $21,000? A. I would not have been surprised.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not quite understand what the reason was of Mr. Travers treating you the way you say he did, had it anything to do with your refusal to become a director? A. I don’t think so.

Q. Had you no words together, nothing to lead up? A. Mr. Travers and I we never had any words; while he did not take very kindly to me after I did not sign the agreement for a while, but the more I saw of the man the more favorably impressed I was with him, and Mr. Smith being a brother-in-law of mine, he had some feeling towards Smith, and I suppose he thought that probably I was there to try and spy and see what was going on and then carry the news to Mr. Smith; I had no intention of that at all.

Q. That is Mr. C. H. Smith? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Can you say where Mr. Smith is now? A. So far as I know I think he is in Vancouver. I have not had any communication with him since last November.

A. S. LOWN, Recalled by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. In the accounts of the provisional directors I want to ask you about an item which appears charged to you and that is an item of $560; is that any part of your fees, or is that a loan or what is it? A. No, it was mostly for travelling expenses.

Q. It appears as a separate and distinct item quite apart from these items in the books, it seems to be carried through as a special item? A. It is made up I think of a number of small items, and I think it was mostly for travelling expenses as far as I can remember.

Q. The travelling expenses of the provisional directors are all charged up at the sum of $1,057, and their fee likewise, and so on, and then comes these items; furniture $327, and A. S. Lown $560—can you throw any light on that item? A. I was at Ottawa twice or three times, and I was a great number of places, and I think that $560 was allowed me for my time and my travelling expenses.

Q. Why would it be charged in a separate account? A. I don’t know.

Q. Are you able to say that does represent travelling expenses and it is not included in the $1,057? A. The $1,057 would be travelling expenses of directors to and from home, and this was separate travelling expenses.

Q. Where to? A. I was in Ottawa, Woodstock, Embro—

Q. How would that differ from the travelling expenses of any other director? A. I don’t know why it was charged that way.
Mr. Commissioner: What is the date of that?

Mr. Hodgins: I don’t know, you can trace it up.

Mr. Commissioner: The books will show that. A. I think it is made up of a number of small items.

Q. Did it include your travelling expenses to Ottawa? A. I cannot just recollect off hand. I remember the matter came up before the Board of Directors and the item was passed.

Q. You have a distinct recollection of the item? A. Yes.

Q. That it was passed for travelling expenses? A. I think for travelling expenses.

Q. You were down, were you, in Ottawa, several times for the charter? A. Yes.

Q. Were you down on the last occasion 1906? A. Yes.

Q. Would it have included the expenses there? A. I don’t know what the last date of that—

Q. I won’t spend any more time now; we may have Mr. Clarkson give us the details of that, and if it is of any importance I will get you to speak of it again. I thought you could tell me offhand.

JOHN FERGUSON, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. You have lived in Toronto and are a physician? A. 37 years I have lived in Toronto.

Q. And you were one of the original provisional directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who got you into the directorate? A. Through my acquaintance with Mr. Smith and Mr. Lown.

Q. Had you any stock? A. No, sir.

Q. You never had any financial interest in the matter? A. As an incorporator and provisional director only.

Q. You had no financial interest in it? A. I took no stock, although I may say here by explanation, it was intended I should have done so, but close to the end of our provisional work and nearing the time of calling the shareholders together Mr. Travers expressed to me his feeling in the matter that he thought if he got business men associated with him on the Board that it might perhaps be of better interest to him. I said “Anything that will assist you most will suit me also.”

Q. You had the intention? A. That was my intention at that time up till that conversation occurred, and that relieved me of becoming a subscriber and going on with him further.

Q. During all this time since the incorporation until the end of 1906 you had never been asked to take any stock? A. Not further than that understanding with Mr. Travers that I should do so; just as the time came about when he then interjected this—

Q. I understand that; did you know that your other provisional directors were in the same position that they had not taken stock? A. I think none of them had taken stock but Mr. Lown, and I think just a small amount he had.

Q. He is down as a subscriber for one share? A. Yes.

Q. What was the modus operandi of getting stock subscribed for? A. That was done through Mr. Travers.

Q. Before Travers came on the scene at all? A. Mr. Smith had disposed of a considerable amount of the shares of the bank and then subsequently we had a Mr. Beith, an old experienced banker with us for some time. I do not know how much was disposed of during his term, and then Mr. Travers came on and completed the organization.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Up to Mr. Travers coming on had Mr. Smith been paid a commission or was he on commission?  A. Yes, he was receiving a commission.

Q. What commission were you paying Mr. Smith?  A. I think it is the same, speaking from memory, I think it is 10%.

Q. During Mr. Smith's time there were no notes taken for stock, were there?  A. Not at that time.

Q. It was all cash subscriptions?  A. Payments of cash according to the terms of the subscription.

Q. No notes were accepted?  A. No.

Q. Who was the one who, so to speak, ran the matter for the provisional directors?  A. Travers almost solely—

Q. Before that?  A. Mr. Smith, he would be the principal one. He was in the office.

Q. Had you an office?  A. Yes.

Q. Where was it?  A. We had offices in rooms in the North American Life Building, King Street.

Q. I thought you had an office at Aurora?  A. No.

Q. There was a meeting held out there?  A. No, office there, no meetings held.

Q. You are familiar with the minutes, you know what occurred from time to time?  A. Generally so.

Q. You came to the conclusion, you and the other directors that you could not put it through?  A. I don't know that we came to that conclusion, but we came to the conclusions that are minuted there. One resolution was that we would return such moneys as shareholders had paid and discontinued the effort.

Q. That resolution was actually carried, was it not?  A. No, that did not meet with the majority of the provisional directors.

Q. You were the one who moved that?  A. I moved that resolution.

Q. But that was not acceptable?  A. The record is there, two to three.

Q. I see that is on the 13th February, 1905, you moved, seconded by Mr. Fraser, that all moneys paid on shares now placed be returned and the expenses up to date be defrayed equally by the provisional directors—that was lost?  A. Yes.

Q. You moved, seconded by Mr. Fraser, that application be made to extend the time?  A. Just so.

Q. After that had you success during the following year?  A. Well, no, the success was not very great, there was still some stock being sold, but Mr. Beith did not seem to push it with marked success, and we arranged with Mr. Travers.

Q. Am I right in saying that you had practically given up any idea that you could succeed in it when Mr. Travers came along?  A. No. I do not think that was in our minds, because if we had not arranged with Mr. Travers there were several other very promising and experienced banking men whom we had in view as being able to take the matter over and succeed, but he impressed us favorably, and the arrangement was made with him.

Q. That arrangement was in short to turn over the charter to him together with the benefit of the subscriptions?  A. Turn over the organization of the company to his hands so that we would co-operate with him as provisional directors, but he would do the work on a commission basis.

Q. And he was to have the right to organize the bank, as he thought well?  A. Yes, as arranged in those agreements. They set forth the terms that we understood each other.

Q. I don't know that I need go over those with you; you were aware, I suppose, soon after Travers took hold that he was taking notes for the subscriptions?  A. That became known to us, and we refused to accept them till we had legal opinion.

Q. And you got legal opinion?  A. Yes.
Q. And thereafter you raised no objection?  A. Oh no; we were guided by good legal opinion.

Q. And that opinion was got shortly before the agreement of the 4th July?
A. Yes, it was about that date, shortly before.

Q. Then it had been got I think between the 12th March and 14th July?
A. Yes, it was close up to somewhere in the middle or latter part of June that the note question came up.

Q. Had that anything to do with enlarging the amount that was to be paid to the provisional directors?  A. Not the slightest. There is here a point that has perhaps not been brought out as clearly as it ought to be and just as it should be; the agreement of the 12th March in which $16,000 is mentioned arose in this way: a certain amount had been expended, an unknown indebtedness probably had been incurred by agents in the sale of stock of one way or another and Mr. Travers says, “now, give me some sum sufficiently large that will cover the disbursements of the provisional directors”;—no emoluments for us whatever,—“to cover your legitimate disbursements, and if it is too much it will be so much the better for me, because I will have less to pay out, but put it at some sum that you won’t have to come back to me for more”, and that is the reason for that $16,000 being put in there. I think at that time, if my memory serves me, there were probably ten or eleven thousand dollars, I don’t know exactly, that we had reasonable knowledge of having been expended and there might be something out that we did not know of, still incurred; that is the explanation of that $16,000.

Q. He did not want you to come back to him for more?  A. No.

Q. Why did you go back to him on the 4th July?  A. We did not go back to him whatever; there was no connection. The first was a provision for disbursements; the other was provision for compensation to us, wholly different issues, and it was not raising the question at all, it was not climbing up the ladder.

Q. Excepting as a matter of figures?  A. It was not climbing up the ladder even as a matter of figures; they were two different questions.

Q. $16,000 in the first instance and $20,000 plus all those expenses in the second?  A. That is not the true position. The $16,000 was a provision for legitimate disbursements, such as office rent, stationery, telephone, small commissions and travelling expenses.

Q. Directors’ fees?  A. Not a cent whatever for directors’ fees excepting some Board meetings that might have previously been attended were included as disbursements, but the other agreement was a specific provision outside of these office expenses for compensation to the provisional directors and to Mr. Smith.

Q. You have a pretty good knowledge of it; what was the reason for the claims of compensation for $20,000 which had not been in the first agreement?  A. There was nothing in the first agreement for compensation at all; get that cleared away. This other was almost solely, as has been stated already, Mr. Travers’ own suggestion. He said he was well acquainted with banking matters and with organization of banks and provisional directors who had spent so much time as we had were entitled to compensation, and he mentioned twenty-five to thirty thousand dollars frequently as a reasonable sum to put in for that purpose.

Q. He was buying the bank from you?  A. Never mind, that was his suggestion. But here again let us be fair and make a statement or two; Mr. Smith was to have been an employee of the bank, he was giving up that position and relieving himself of that; he had an undertaking also for the sale of some stock for a certain block of stock on which we would have made considerable money, and he was surrendering that over and which would go through Mr. Travers’ possession, and in lieu of that he was to get out of that amount $5,000. He was not a provisional director at all, but Mr. Travers was to protect him to that extent out of his own emolument.

Q. That was an additional payment beyond the $20,000?  A. Not at all, it was part of the $20,000.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. But the $20,000 is specifically, I think, in the agreement for the benefit of the provisional directors? A. Yes, but there is an agreement that $5,000 of that was to go to Mr. Smith, $2,500 at the time and $2,500 later.

Q. It was not with Travers? A. No, it was coming out of the fund just the same.

Q. But it was not an agreement with Travers? A. Probably not.

Q. He had to pay you? A. Yes.

Q. You mean you were taking care of Smith? A. Yes, that was the ultimate distribution in that way.

Q. To the extent of $5,000? A. Exactly so.

Q. You of course saw a pretty good thing in it when Travers made you the offer of twenty-five to thirty thousand dollars. A. Not at all, for the amount I received out of it I would not go through the same amount of trouble again for—

Q. I am putting it to you this way: it was generous for Travers to give you twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars for what you have done, you and the others, you did not regard it as a generous offer? A. So far as I was personally concerned I did not.

Q. Then you must have divided up the sum in your own mind in order to judge that? A. How?

Q. You said, "so far as I am concerned it was not"? A. So far as the amount coming to me was concerned I did not look upon it.

Q. What was the amount? A. I got $1,500 out of that first division.

Q. Was that arranged at the time Travers agreed or offered the $25,000 or $30,000? A. I do not know how far that arrangement was made with Mr. Travers.

Q. What I want to get at is this, see if I am right, I was suggesting it was a generous offer of Travers to give you people, who had practically failed in organizing the bank, twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars for your own work up to that date; I was going to ask you whether in view of that offer you, the provisional directors, did not agree to take care of Mr. Smith who was not a provisional director, and did not negotiate with him and get him to come in and agree, is that a fair statement? A. He was not a provisional director, and for that reason he was not in the agreement.

Q. But you could not carry through the agreement and hand things over to Travers unless Smith was settled with? A. Yes, because you see we were the provisional directors, we could bargain as we pleased; we were not held up by Smith in any way, but we felt it a proper thing to do.

Q. I thought you said Mr. Smith had an agreement with you? A. Yes.

Q. For a block of stock? A. Yes, and he was quite willing to surrender that and come in

Q. On getting $5,000? A. Well, no, he had two understandings; he had two conditions; first of all he was to get his permanent situation, and secondly, he did not arrange for a block, and this was in lieu of that; this was all done as a matter of perfectly fair, frank conversation and discussed amongst us.

Q. It was a matter which ultimately resulted in a bargain after talking it over? A. It did, ultimately it resulted in that agreement.

Q. And the result of the agreement was that the provisional directors got Smith to agree to take so much in full of all his claims, so that they could turn the thing over to Travers? A. Well, of course, it gave Smith what we thought was justice, and out of that total sum of money—

Q. Out of the money which was offered by Travers? A. By Travers, out of Travers’ own income.

Q. What had you done to justify your making that agreement on behalf of the provisional directors to get $20,000 for their services for two years? A. As far as I was concerned I attended the bank offices very, very frequently, not only meetings, but was in instant communication with those in charge of the work.
Q. Nothing more definite than that?  A. I have no detail. I kept no minute, no record personally of my visits to the bank offices, and conversations with them, and seeing the people and so on.

Q. What were the financial results of your efforts to the bank?  A. Oh, well—

Q. Did you produce any subscriptions?  A. No, I took no subscriptions.

Q. Did you get any commissions?  A. No.

Q. What amount did you get out of this $20,000, or rather out of the $10,000 that was paid?  A. $1,500.

Q. All told?  A. Outside of the small amount off directors’ fees paid.

Q. Did that include both your share of the $10,000 and the settlement for the balance of the $10,000?  A. The settlement of the balance of $10,000 was in July of the following year, and was for $200.

Q. It would be $1,700 you got?  A. Yes.

Q. What director’s fees did you get?  A. Probably a couple to $300, I don’t know exactly from memory, it was a small amount.

Q. $200, I see your receipt is dated June 19th, 1907?  A. Yes, that is the settlement on the remaining one-half of the agreement.

Q. Why did you settle in that way—allow me to put this to you; Travers had undertaken with you in July that he would pay you $20,000?  A. Yes.

Q. Irrespective of whether the bank sanctioned it or not?  A. Yes, he was to pay that out of his own.

Q. He had succeeded in getting the bank up?  A. Yes.

Q. And it was in a flourishing condition in June, 1907?  A. Yes.

Q. And he was getting a salary of $5,000 a year?  A. Yes.

Q. What was the reason for the settlement?  A. I had met him occasionally, and in conversation he said he would like if I would, and he thought the rest would be easy with him, he had difficulties and the disbursements had been somewhat heavy in one direction and another, and I wished him every success, and was quite satisfied to practically forgive my claim to him and settle for that amount.

Q. I suppose you realized you had not any claim, you could not have enforced it?  A. I looked upon it as valid.

Q. You all seem to have taken the view you had better take a few hundred dollars and get out?  A. No, it was not scalping it because I thought I had no claim; but I wished Mr. Travers to succeed. He said he had had heavy expenses, and I was perfectly willing to assist him in every way.

Q. Did you know what the expenses charged up as spent by the provisional directors were?  A. Not from the books, I did not investigate the books.

Q. Did you ever go over them to see?  A. No, I did not add them up.

Q. Did you know they amounted to $44,000?  A. From the information furnished me from the books, about that.

Q. Did you know that that included the $10,000 which Travers was paid?  A. Yes.

Q. And which you and the other directors got back?  A. Yes: that was included in the disbursements to Travers as a commission and then payment back to us.

Q. Did you think that was fair to the in-coming shareholders, that arrangement you made that he should get the commission and pay it back to you?  A. We did, otherwise we would not have entertained it for a moment; I thought we were doing him a perfectly fair thing when we paid him a commission.

Q. You did not realize the extent to which the expenditure had gone, did you?  A. We were assured by him it was not heavy for the promotion of a bank, about forty odd thousand dollars.

Q. Were you astonished when Mr. Lown read out that report stating the expenses were $44,000?  A. Oh, no.

Q. Did you know that that included $11,000 odd of directors’ fees during that time?  A. That would include that $10,000 as well.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. No it would not, would it? A. There was no $11,000 directors' fees in addition to that $10,000.
Q. You think not? A. Positive.
Q. It must either be in the one item or in the other, commissions or directors' fees? A. I do not know how the $10,000 was entered up in the books, that I cannot tell you.
Q. I understand you to say that either commissions or directors' fees would include the $10,000? A. Yes.
Q. That would make $32,000 altogether, including that sum? A. No, no.
Q. Commissions are $21,000 and the directors' fees $11,000? A. Yes, but not to us I mean.
Q. Oh, no, you did not get any commissions? A. No, our directors' fees were probably about $1,500 all told.
Q. Outside the $10,000? A. Yes, making eleven or twelve thousand dollars total going to the directors.
Q. You do not know anything about the payment of any other sum to him on account of his commission, to Travers? A. Later on?
Q. Yes? A. No.
Q. Did you attend the organization meeting? A. No. You see I was not a shareholder, and I understood for that reason I could not attend, but there was another reason; Mr. Gallagher, who was a provisional director at that moment was practically in a dying condition, and I with two other medical men were attending upon him that day.
Q. Do you know anything about Travers borrowing from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. I knew he was raising money on the notes but I did not know where.
Q. That was clearly understood by the provisional directors that he was doing that for the purpose of making a payment? A. He had told me so.
Q. And you, of course, realized that it was you as provisional directors that had to make the deposit out of the moneys? A. We made the deposits.
Q. You had to make the deposit out of the moneys, paid on account of the subscriptions? A. We had to receive money on the subscriptions.
Q. Were you aware that he was not doing that, but was raising money outside, paying in money raised outside and not money paid on the subscriptions? A. Yes, I knew he was using those notes, but my understanding of the transaction was this, that a certain person made a note which we had accepted under legal advice. That note was made to the provisional directors and endorsed over by him to deposit somewhere to get the money for these people we looked upon that as a perfectly legitimate transaction.
Q. Did you realize that the list of shareholders to go in would have to show the amounts that each shareholder had paid upon those subscriptions? A. No.
Q. That that list would have to go to the Department of Finance? A. No, I do not know that I knew that in those specific terms, but even if so they would get credit for the money that would come from the notes; the bank was not obligated in that transaction.
Q. Obligated in what? A. In these notes.
Q. Why not? A. Because the people made the notes to the provisional directors and the provisional directors turned the notes over to Mr. Travers.
Q. Then you are familiar with the Bank Act, are you not? A. I did not pay a very great deal of attention to it.
Q. Who owned the notes that were given by these shareholders? A. They were made to the provisional directors.
Q. Whose property were they? A. They were made to the provisional directors endorsed over to Mr. Travers.
Q. I did not ask that, whose property were they?

Mr. Commissioner: You are asking him perhaps a difficult question of law; he is not bound to answer.

Mr. Hodgins: I did not mean to put it that way. A. My understanding was they were not the property of the bank.

Q. Did you understand that your duties of provisional director were limited to receiving subscriptions and payments on account thereof? A. That is what it said, but I do not know that I or any one else can say what that means.

Q. You are not to be blamed for not knowing the law or otherwise, but did you know that the money which came in on the subscriptions was something to hold in trust and that you could not deal with except under the Bank Act? A. Generally, that would go for granted.

Q. Did you regard the notes in the same way, as held by you in trust? A. We would regard the notes as received by us in trust for those people to be used in a proper way, and we believed—

Q. What way did these people authorize you to use the notes? A. They gave the notes to the provisional directors.

Q. Is that correct, as a matter of fact, Dr. Ferguson? A. I think so.

Q. Were they not payable to the Farmers Bank originally? A. There may have been a few of them that way, probably a few.

Q. And were they sent back and made over again payable to the provisional directors? A. I believe some were, but what few I do not know.

Q. From that on they were all taken to the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. There is no doubt you knew they were from shareholders and subscribers? A. We knew that.

Q. You knew then you had no right to use them to raise money upon them? A. We did not know anything of the kind; we thought we had a perfect right; why should we not?

Q. Why did you not raise money on them? A. Money was raised on them.

Q. Why did you not? A. Mr. Travers was managing the bank and we endorsed them over to him.

Q. Did you assume he was raising the money on those notes? A. Yes, he was getting money advanced on those notes.

Q. He was getting it for the purpose of the bank only? A. For the purpose of supplying for these people in payment on their shares.

Q. He would have no warrant for saying he was borrowing personally upon those notes? A. I do not know whether he says that or not.

Q. Supposing he did, is that your understanding of it? A. I could not say; that might be a legal question that I have no means of answering.

Q. You either knew they were handed over to him to do as he liked with or handed over to him for a specific purpose, which was it? A. To get money.

Q. And not to borrow money personally upon the notes for his own benefit? A. Certainly not for his own benefit but to apply it back to the credit of these people who had made the notes.

Q. It was intended when you endorsed those over to enable him to raise money upon the notes for that purpose? A. Yes, he was to use the notes for that purpose.

Mr. Commissioner: Do you know why it was that the change was made from making them payable to the provisional directors? A. Mr. Travers told me himself, "I have been legally advised this is the proper way to do; the bank is not authorized, it has not a Permanent Board, and if it could not in its own right negotiate its own notes, and if you will do it this way it will put it in a position that it is negotiable paper".

Q. When did you settle with Smith that he was to get the $5,000? A. That would be about the 4th of July, 1906.
Q. It appears that about the time that the certificate was being obtained from the Treasury Board, Smith was in Ottawa pressing a claim of $1,800, part salary and part commission; from what you have already said I judged you thought his claim had been settled in full? A. He was to get $5,000; he got $2,500 on that July date; then there would be $2,500 left to him out of the remaining $10,000; it might have arisen somewhere under that, that he was pressing for that $1,800, but on that I cannot give you any definite information.

Q. Did he agree with you that he would give up all his claims against the bank for the $5,000 that you were providing he was to get? A. Yes, he was giving up his claims to any position in the employ of the bank, and also returning to the treasury the block of I think $100,000 of this stock that he had to sell.

Q. Supposing he had sold stock on commission, and that salary was due to him, was that included at all? A. No, any commissions earned at that time, would not, I do not think.

Q. Nor his salary? A. No, nor up to that date his salary.

Q. It was simply those two items? A. Yes, of $100,000 of capital stock that he had a right to sell, and his prospective situation; just those two items.

Q. Why was it important to get rid of his right to sell that $100,000? A. Mr. Travers wished it; he said that he must have the absolute control so that "I can direct the whole thing and be absolute in control".

ALEXANDER FRASER, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You were one of the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. You live in the City? A. Yes.

Q. And were living here in 1906? A. Yes.

Q. Who got you into the bank? A. Dr. Ferguson suggested.

Q. I suppose, however, he said to you to come on and you need not take any stock? A. No.

Q. Was not he giving you his own medicine? A. No, I think on that point it was the intention at the beginning of all the provisional directors to take some stock.

Q. They had all the intention? A. But not till near the end to see what would be required in the final close up; I think that was the general understanding of the conversations regarding when we should take a little stock each.

Q. You never did any way? A. No.

Q. So that you are another of those who had no financial interest in it? A. Yes.

Q. During the two years you attended the board meetings, I suppose? A. Yes.

Q. And I suppose when these agreements came along, when you felt you had failed and the agreement came along and Travers offered this amount you regarded it as a good windfall? A. No, I would not like to put it that way.

Q. You did not do any work? A. Yes, I did a great deal.

Q. You were paid commissions? A. Not for the work—commissions were paid to me in connection with the selling of stock.

Q. That is really all you did except attending board meetings? A. Oh no.

Q. Was not Mr. Smith the one who did the active management of the bank affairs? A. No, Mr. Smith did the outside work, the field work, and I did the inside work for considerable time; I acted as secretary.

Q. You were paid for that as secretary? A. Not a cent.
Q. Was there no salary at all? A. No, that was entirely gratuitous in view of the final settlement with the shareholders' meeting.

Q. The amount you got as commission was $800? A. That is wrong.

Q. How far wrong? A. It is wrong by one-half.

Q. Do you mean you had to pay sub-agents? A. That was on account of sub-agents.

Q. You do not dispute the figure that you got $800, but you had to divide it up with some one else? A. No, I did not get the money; but I had to give a receipt for $800; the agents did not hand in their commission with the money they sent in on payment of the stock; so that I did not get the money, but I gave a receipt for it, because I have their receipts for it.

Q. I have the provisional Board's ledger here, in which you are down for various items aggregating $800, how much did you get? A. I got $400.

Q. Who got the balance? A. The agent in the field.

Q. He had no bargain with the company? A. No; he had with me.

Q. Or with the directors; you would be entitled to draw it upon the subscriptions, you would be bound to pay him one-half? A. Yes.

Q. That is what happened? A. That is not the way it was done, but to the same effect.

Q. You only netted $400 out of $800? A. Yes; that was on account of Mr. Smith's stock, and I acted for Mr. Smith's stock.

Q. What do you mean by on account of Mr. Smith's stock? A. There was an agreement with Mr. Smith that he should have the right for the selling of so much stock, and he asked me to communicate with people that he thought might act with me in selling that stock.

Q. However, whatever you did you got paid for, and Smith got paid for his? A. Smith had directly nothing to do with that himself; I reported to him, however.

Q. You know, of course, about these agreements? A. Yes.

Q. You knew about them and signed them all? A. Yes.

Q. How much did you get out of the $10,000? A. $1,500. There is the explanation there. I got a cheque for $3,000 out of the $10,000 and that cheque is on record, but that cheque was divided between Dr. Ferguson and myself equally.

Q. Why was it necessary to do it that way? A. Because we did not expect any money that day, and it came on us by a surprise.

Q. What? A. $10,000, and we had not settled what proportion ought fairly to go to each one, and we left the final adjustment for the second payment, which was expected. That also accounts for Mr. Watson—

Q. You say it came on you of a sudden? A. Yes.

Q. Why should they make a cheque to you and not to Dr. Ferguson? A. There was no reason why that should not be done except that it was not done.

Q. You were to get $3,500 out of the $20,000? A. Yes.

Q. So that your half of that would be $1,750? A. Yes.

Q. How much did you get? A. I got $1,500 and $200 subsequently in settlement of the second $10,000 which was settled for, as explained already by the others.

Q. Dr. Ferguson is down for $3,500 out of the $20,000 and you are down for the same thing, making $7,000 in all, so $3,500 would be your share and his together out of the $10,000? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not get that full share? A. I am not very clear as to that; my impression is that we thought it would be rather large in proportion to what the others would get.

Q. Who got the $500 that should have come to you and Dr. Ferguson? A. I think that part of that was given to Mr. Watson and part to Mr. Gallagher; they were under heavy expenses of travelling, and I think they put it that way themselves, until the final settlement; that would be the more decent thing to do at that time, to give them a little more.

Q. I thought you said you had a claim for your time? A. Yes, I acted for, I suppose, a year as secretary; practically for three or four days a week at noon hour; we had a regular office and a stenographer, and I carried on the correspondence with the people throughout the country, interesting them in the bank, and then I prepared the notices for the newspapers and advertisements, and did a good deal of work, and I travelled ten or twelve times out of town. These things were services that Dr. Ferguson thought were fully as valuable as those he gave; I thought his services were more valuable, and at this very disposal I suggested that he should have more than I should have. There was very good feeling in the whole matter.

Q. I should think so, dividing up this amount? A. That explains the difference in the amounts paid.

Q. I suppose it was Mr. Travers that put it into your minds that you ought to be paid for your time; you had always intended to take stock and always intended to give your service for nothing in consideration of what the stock would be worth? A. Oh, no.

Q. You always expected to have remuneration? A. Yes, from the shareholders.

Q. Even before Mr. Travers had suggested it? A. Yes.

Q. But you had not his exalted ideas of the amount? A. It was suggested to us several times that this bank would likely do for its provisional directors what other banks were said to do, that a certain amount of honorarium would be given to them for their trouble.

Q. Dr. Ferguson seemed to indicate that Travers' ideas were a good deal bigger than his? A. So they were, and we reduced on that.

Q. You held him down? A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean to state you really told Travers you would not take the amount he offered? A. We told him in plain terms, I remember perfectly well, I was one of those who said to him that we did not think the bank could stand $30,000; that the expenses would be too high, and he said they would not be out of place at that figure, and he asked that instead of that they pay $20,000.

Q. This was at the time that he was buying you people out and you were transferring things to him; when you were handing it over to him? A. I don't think we handed anything over to him.

Q. You gave him complete control? A. That was merely a matter of management.

Q. It makes Travers general manager, gives him the right to sell all the stock and gives him a pension; you knew you were handing that all over to him? A. No, I do not think that was handing him over anything beyond the fact he had that position.

Q. What did you retain? A. We retained the right of doing the executive actions that we only could do.

Q. Doing the work? A. Doing the provisional directors' work.

Q. You just retained the privilege of doing the work, and he had all the profit? A. No, he did the work in the field; we did the work that was required by alloting stock and doing the work that legally could be done by the provisional directors, but he agreed and required that all the field work, the getting of stock and also the selecting of permanent directors should be placed in his hands, the first four only being subject to our approval.

Q. He got the benefit of all you had taken up in the way of stock up to that time in cash; he was to have the benefit of that in organizing the bank? A. I do not understand that.
Q. If you had $100,000 subscribed and part paid up, he got the benefit of and only had to fill up to $500,000?  A. He could not touch any of that money for his organization.
Q. But he was, so to speak, that far ahead?  A. Yes.
Q. Then he got any notes that were taken in the same way?  A. I do not think so.
Q. Perhaps there were not any notes taken at that time, you might be right there; he got the right then to sell all the balance of the stock?  A. No.
Q. The agreement says so?  A. The agreement reserves to Smith and to Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor certain blocks set forth.
Q. That is the first agreement?  A. Yes.
Q. I am speaking of the July agreement; that is the time when he came to you and offered you this $20,000?  A. Yes.
Q. Really you had nothing left when you made this deal with Travers—did you have anything you can think of left?  A. If you mean the responsibility we should be very welcome, but we have still, and I think it is set forth in the agreement to do our part to help him, and at any rate to do the part that was necessary for him to do.
Q. "The directors agreed to allow Travers to sell all the capital stock of the said bank which is now unsold, the first $500,000 of the capital stock at par, and the balance thereof at such a premium as may be decided upon up to the time at which the duties of the said provisional board cease, and to allow him a commission of 10% thereon for expenses of selling same...... and the said directors bind themselves to allot all the stock on the application of the party of the third part (Travers) and to make all legal calls thereon, etc." Then the directors engaged him for five years at $5,000 a year increasing $1,000 a year, and a pension of $1,500; and the literature, and so on, is to be paid by the bank, and it is to confirm all acts done by Travers and all accounts incurred by him as general manager up to the date of this agreement. Smith give up his rights under the agreement of the 12th March and you get $20,000 and then, "The said Travers to have full control of the office of the said bank and all the affairs pertaining to the organization thereof immediately after the signing of this agreement, and it is further agreed that until the organization of the bank all cheques are to be countersigned by him".
Don't you think it can be fairly said that that meant you handed the whole thing over to him?  A. I do not think we at all thought that we renounced our responsibility as provisional directors. I think we understood by that, I am speaking for myself, but I think the others agree that I can speak for them, that we believed that was merely giving him full charge of the organizing of the bank.
Q. Giving him the business end of it and you keeping the responsibility?
A. We kept what was necessary for us to do, which course was comparatively small providing the stock was sold.
Q. Did you realize that responsibility right up to the end and down to the time when you handed the notes to him and endorsed them?  A. Yes.
Q. Did you understand thoroughly that money was borrowed on those notes to pay the deposit?  A. No, I did not know personally of that at all.
Q. But you understood that that was to be done, that that was the purpose of handing the notes over?  A. I did not understand it that way.
Q. Did not you read the resolution?  A. Yes; the resolution reads differently in my mind now from what happened at the time; I understood it was merely discounting the notes for the makers.
Q. The resolution anyway says, you hand them over to him for the purpose of raising this fund to go into the Receiver-General's hands, you knew broadly speaking that was the idea?  A. Yes.
Q. Was he doing that for the provisional directors?  A. Yes, I suppose he was.
Q. You understood he was completing the organization for you? A. For instance, the Receiver-General will not take notes; we regarded those notes as money, we were so advised, and the Receiver-General will not take notes. and we must then change it to money by discounting them and putting the money to the credit of the shareholders; but as a matter of fact I knew nothing until a year ago as to the transactions when the thing came out in Court, I had no idea. I wish to say in connection with the agreement and if I have no right to say you need not take it, but it has not been explained, today; but it may not be material.

Q. Go on and tell us? A. The agreement of the 4th July arose from trouble between Mr. Smith and Mr. Travers; it was not one of the directors seeking at all, nor I believe of Travers.

MR. COMMISSIONER: The first or second agreement or both? A. The first; I am willing to explain that as much as I can. The agreement of the 12th March when Mr. Travers came in left the field in the hands of three parties, Travers himself, Smith and Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor, each having large blocks of stock to sell, Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor $100,000, Smith a great deal more, and Travers the remainder. Each of these had their agents in the field under the control of each of these three, and there was conflict in the field between their agents; Travers' men would go to a place like Georgetown and Milton only to find that Smith's men had canvassed the place, and the trip there was of no avail, it was too late; and Travers said, "I cannot sell the stock required if Smith is to come in with inefficient canvassers of the whole field?" We said: "We have an agreement with Smith that is as valid as yours" and Smith refused to give it up. Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor, when the difficulty was pointed out to them said, "Now, we have sold through our agents pretty much all we expect to do, and we will do no more, so that we will be out of the field". When we came together on the 4th July the date of this agreement, it was to compose—we had two things to do, to consider Urquhart, Urquhart & McGregor's letter regarding the taking of notes for stock instead of cash, and to compose, if possible the differences between Mr. Smith's and Mr. Travers' agents. This brought a feeling between Mr. Smith and Mr. Travers, Travers claiming that he, as manager, thought that Smith was subordinate to him, and ought to take instructions from him, and Smith told him he should not, he was independent of him. We had a great deal of difficulty in getting the two together. The result was we said to Smith, "You get out altogether, you are jeopardizing the success of organizing the bank?". There was one time when we thought, Dr. Ferguson and myself, that we could not bring the bank through, and while we could out of our own means pay back to the shareholders the money expended we tried to do it, but we were overruled by our colleagues; that is the meaning of that minute where Dr. Ferguson moved and I seconded that we hand back the subscriptions to them. We felt anxious about the bank becoming a fact, and the expenditures which we thought we were perfectly legitimate in incurring, paying, should not become a debt on the shareholders. We then pressed Smith very much and said: "Out of whatever will come to us as our amount we will see that you will be paid for your sacrifice of your contract in Travers' favour"; that is the meaning of the first. Then after lunch hour Smith said, "I have no security, I have made a mistake". We tried to get him to leave it as it was, because it was very hard to deal with Travers when he decided a thing, very hard to get him to re-open it. When we went back we said: "Smith thinks he made a mistake, that he is not secured at all, that we may get nothing from the shareholders; if not, we fall to the ground also. Could not something be done to satisfy him?" "What does he want? Does he think the shareholders will throw you down for the service you have been giving or does he think I will"? Out of that conversation came the second agreement in which Travers, independent of the shareholders, personally undertakes to pay $20,000 and to pay it out of his commissions. We thought he was legally entitled to his commission, and that the money coming to him as commission was his money, and he says, “I will reimburse myself for that from the shareholders when they meet.” That was the whole story of the second agreement, and of the two agreements on the same day.

Q. That is not carried out by the documents; there are two agreements of the 4th July, one made before and the other after lunch, is it not? A. Yes.
Q. The second one was for division, was it, a division up of the claim? A. No, the second one was transferring—
Q. I see, the responsibility to him? A. Yes.
Q. Did he stipulate you should pay him $10,000 in commission before he had agreed to the second agreement? A. No, that is what came unexpectedly on us.
Q. The second agreement is the one that bears the receipt at the bottom? A. Yes.
Q. So that it evidently was not considered when the first agreement of the morning was considered? A. No, it was not.
Q. Is it part of this agreement that he would agree to assume that if you paid him the $10,000? A. No. That was an after thought of his own.
Q. I understood Dr. Ferguson to put it that way—
MR. COMMISSIONER: That is not quite the way he put it; if he got payment of $10,000 in cash on account of his commission, he would turn it over to them on account of the $20,000.
MR. HODGINS: Just give us your view? A. I think Travers was realizing at that time that he was meeting with difficulties he did not expect; he certainly brought to the provisional board a splendid list of substantial men, and we believed that those men were behind him, genuinely behind him, and we thought that that would guarantee his success.
Q. Your idea is there was first the agreement before lunch? A. Yes.
Q. And secondly there was the agreement after lunch by which Travers took the burden? A. Yes.
Q. And after that as an after thought he said give me $10,000 out of my commissions and I will give you $10,000—is that significant? A. Yes, but the motive is not there. Mr. Travers wanted that money paid to him that day anyway; it was due to him anyway, and more; he said there were thirteen or fourteen thousand dollars due to him that day, and he said he wished to pay out of that, and the money would have gone to him that day whether the money would have come to us or not.
Q. Did you make any investigation that day as to whether the $10,000 was due to him? A. Yes.
Q. What investigation did you make? A. We asked Mr. Smith who was the bookkeeper.
Q. Did you know at that time that Travers was taking notes for the stock? A. Yes.
Q. You had been advised only that day I think you said it was legal? A. That the advice was considered only that day; we had it a day or two before but not all of us.
Q. Then you knew that? A. Yes.
Q. You say you investigated through Smith, asked Smith about the subscriptions? A. Yes.
Q. Did you consider you were bound to pay him over $10,000 on those deferred subscriptions, those notes? A. We did not consider that as deferred subscriptions; we considered them as genuine subscriptions.
Q. But deferred, they had not been paid in cash? A. Yes, that is so.
Q. Did you know the terms of them, did you know how long they ran? A. No, I never saw any of the notes.
Q. Did you take up any position with regard to that? A. No.
Q. Travers on the one hand was offering to guarantee you practically this $20,000 if you made this agreement and got Smith into line? A. Yes.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. That is right? A. Yes.

Q. When he said "I will pay you this on account if you give me this $10,000", was that an after thought and after the agreement was signed? A. Yes, that was an after thought of Travers.

Q. The provisional directors paid him then on the spot, on the same day, without considering the question as to their liability? A. I do not understand that point.

Q. You did not go into the question as to whether you were bound to pay him on the amount secured by these notes? A. We understood all along that we were bound to pay him commission on all stock, because he had to pay his men in the field.

Q. You had up to that date a doubt in your mind as to whether they had a legal right to take notes? A. Yes.

Q. Then the legal difficulty was removed? A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider the point or were you advised in any way as to whether you were bound to pay him the whole commission on the whole subscription on the amounts deferred? A. No, we did not doubt.

Q. He said, "You pay that to me and I will hand it back to you"? A. Yes, that was done but not in that way.

Q. You may be quite right in putting it that way; it looks as if another interpretation might be put upon it; you put the interpretation on that it was a perfectly natural and reasonable arrangement? A. We had no doubt at the time that we had to pay the full commission to Travers and to any other agent for stock accepted by the provisional Board.

Mr. Commissioner: Whether it was paid either wholly in cash or not? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Had you accepted those as subscriptions on that day—your minute shows that? A. Yes.

Q. You do say you had accepted subscriptions on which he would be bound to get $10,000 from the 12th March to the 4th July? A. I do not know that I understand.

Q. I want to know whether you knew that you were legally bound to pay the $10,000 that day—had you approved and accepted the subscriptions? A. I do not think we went into the matter in that way so minutely as that.

Q. What do you mean by saying you knew you had to pay him?

Mr. Commissioner: He knew, he said they owed him $14,000? A. We asked Mr. Smith, who kept Travers' account, how much we owed Travers on account of commissions up to date, and he said somewhere between $13,000 and $14,000; it was two or three thousand dollars more than the ten thousand dollars.

Mr. Hodgins: I quite understand you taking his word for it; did you take anything else? A. No.

Q. Can you say whether you had approved of subscriptions up to that time taken by Travers? A. Of course the inference is if not we would not owe him that commission, but Mr. Smith kept the books.

Q. What had the course been with regard to Travers' subscriptions, those he brought in? A. That is before the 4th July?

Q. Yes? A. I am not familiar with that; after Travers came in I merely attended the formal meetings that were called and knew very little about the details of the work or the office.

Q. You want us to accept the statement that this money was properly due to Travers and I am only asking you to ascertain what steps you took to verify that; can you tell me between the 12th March, 1906, and 4th July, what the course of the Board was with regard to Travers' subscriptions? A. I cannot.

Q. The minutes will show that? A. Yes, the minutes will show.

Q. Had you seen these notes? A. No.

Q. Had you seen a list of the names? A. No.
Q. Did you know any of them were not good? A. No.
Q. Did you know anything about them? A. No.

Mr. Commissioner: As I understand you the early agreement was one by which you were to receive a certain sum when it was voted by the bank? A. I do not understand.

Q. The provisional directors were to receive the sum stated in the earlier agreement of the 4th of July on vote of the shareholders giving it to you? A. Yes.
Q. As I understand Smith, although he had at first assented, feared that the vote might not be favourable, and so he would lose his money? A. Yes.
Q. And it was in consequence of that that the arrangement was changed into one by which Travers took the risk of the shareholders confirming, and he agreed to pay you $20,000? A. Yes.
Q. You agreeing to pay out of it $5,000 to Smith? A. Yes.
Q. What did you understand was the course, or did you know anything about that with regard to crediting to Travers or Smith or anybody else who was selling stock his commission, when was that commission credited, or did you know anything about that? A. Not definitely perhaps to answer, but I believe the books will show. They ought to show that there was so much credit at the time of the subscription, and then so much at the time of allotment.
Q. What do you mean? A. That is to say that the agent could retain a portion instead of remitting it.
Q. Explain a little more fully what you meant by your statement as to your understanding with regard to the notes that were discounted; what was your understanding of that, that is the subscribers notes that were discounted; what did you understand was being done with those notes? A. I understand it this way—
Q. What did you understand at the time? A. That the notes were kept to the credit of the subscribers until the bank opened and after the bank opened that it would proceed to use those notes as part of its business, that is to collect them, the bank itself.
Q. You are not grasping what I mean to ask; You were asked about the discount of these notes in order to raise the balance required. A. That is at the time of the power of attorney?
Q. Yes, what was your understanding as to how this money was being raised? A. I understood that the notes were to be discounted, probably in a bank or wherever they could be properly discounted, on behalf of the subscriber, who gave his note instead of cash, and we were utilizing his note instead of cash for him.
Q. And the proceeds? A. The proceeds would go to the Traders Bank to the credit of the Farmers Bank to be ultimately sent to Ottawa with the deposit.
Q. To whose credit would go the proceeds of the discount in the books of the provisional directors? A. To the bank's credit, the same as if the notes were cash; the cash was deposited in the bank to the Traders Bank.
Q. You are not understanding my question; a man owed $100 less 10% he had paid; he had given his note for the balance, who would get the benefit in the books of the bank of the monies raised by the discount of his note? A. I do not understand.
Q. You said the notes were discounted for behoof, as you Scotchmen would say, for the makers? A. Yes.
Q. How was the money to be treated as you understood it? A. The money would be deposited on the books of the Farmers Bank; I never thought of that before.
Q. You had not considered that? A. No, but I suppose it would have to take the place of the note.
Q. You do not know how the accounts were kept between subscribers and the bank or the provisional directors? A. No.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Mr. Hodgins: Did you know anything about what was to be done with the notes after the money had been raised on them and when they came back? A. No, I did not.

Q. You do not know what was actually done with them? A. No. Mr. Travers, I may say, in his Police Court evidence said that he thought that I was one of those who knew that, but as a matter of fact I had not spoken to him for six or seven weeks before; I did not know at all about them.

The Commission adjourned at 4.30 p.m. to 11 a.m. to-morrow.

The Commission resumed its sittings at 11 a.m., March 20th, 1912, at Osgoode Hall.

ALEXANDER FRASER, recalled.

Mr. Hodgins: I just want to ask you a question which was suggested to me by going over the provisional ledger again; I asked you about the amount of directors' fees, and you said the $11,750 included the $10,000? A. I do not know about that.

Mr. Commissioner: It was Dr. Ferguson said that.

Mr. Hodgins: I thought it was Mr. Fraser that I asked about that? A. No.

Q. Are you aware, we discussed yesterday that $10,000 payment and the fact that it was taken out of commissions? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know at all that was charged in as part of the directors' fees? A. Only what came out in the Police Court investigation.

Q. You do not know personally then about that? A. No.

JAMES G. FITZGIBBON, recalled by—

Mr. Hodgins: You were employed in the Farmers Bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the beginning, pretty well? A. From the 19th November, 1906.

Q. You joined in what capacity? A. I was chief accountant.

Q. Would that be next to the general manager? A. Practically, at that time, yes.

Q. You had been a banker of experience before? A. Yes.

Q. For how many years? A. I was about 20 years in actual chartered banking, and some years in private banking.

Q. You filled positions of importance and knew thoroughly the working of a bank? A. Yes, the details.

Q. And the entries that would be made and how bank books are kept? A. Yes.

Q. And what they mean? A. Yes.

Q. You took up your duties about the 19th November? A. Yes.

Q. What did they consist of, speaking generally? A. The first work I undertook was making up the list of subscriptions in order to prepare for the organization meeting on the 26th November.

Q. When was the organization meeting? A. I think it was the 26th November.

Q. Did you make up that list in writing or typewriting or how? A. It was typewritten.
Q. Tell me if you recognize that list as the original list? A. That is a carbon copy of the original list that was filed at Ottawa, so far as I can judge from the fact that the totals are carried forward afterward on the machine itself.

List of subscriptions filed at Ottawa, marked as EXHIBIT 17.

Q. That you recognize (Exhibit 17)? A. That was a carbon copy of the original list.

Q. Do you know anything about that figuring attached to it there on that little green leaf? A. No, sir; they are not my figures.

Q. You do not know anything about that? A. No.

Q. You know this was the document used in the County Judge's Criminal Court and in the Police Court? A. Yes.

Q. You were giving evidence? A. Yes.

Q. You know this was the document used? A. I do not think that was submitted to me at that time.

Q. Tell me about the preparation of this list, how you came to prepare it or where you got this information? A. From the stock subscription book, where the subscriptions were entered as they came in.

Q. Can you tell me what that contained? A. It contained the application for stock in the order in which they came in, apparently. They were all taken in before I joined the service.

Q. Would you look at that and tell me if that is it? A. That is the book.

Stock subscription book filed as EXHIBIT 18.

Q. Look at that book, Exhibit 18, and tell me if that is the book from which you made up the list? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are these entries in that—I notice cancellations there; were those there at the time or have they been put in since? A. Some of them were in at the time.

Q. That would give you information as to the subscriber, his residence and address; number of shares. A. Yes, and the amount of the shares.

Q. This list contains that information and also contains the amount paid; what book did you go to for that? A. That was taken from an alphabetical arrangement of the subscriptions in which the payments were entered from time to time as they were made.

Q. Where would that be? A. It was in the hands of the liquidator. Here it is, this large book.

Large stock subscription book, alphabetically arranged, filed as EXHIBIT 19.

Q. This was an alphabetical list? A. Yes.

Q. Under whose instructions did you prepare the list? A. The general manager's, Mr. Travers.

Q. However, you had access to those two books? A. Yes.

Q. Did you take the items in that list from that book? A. The most of them, yes.

Q. What items did not come from that book? A. When the notes that were referred to yesterday were discounted and the cash received from them the proceeds were spread on some of the stock subscriptions for which the notes were held.

Q. That is, when you were making up the list? A. Yes.

Q. When were the notes discounted? A. I could not say; it was before my joining the service.

Q. Before the 19th November? A. Yes, I presume so.

Q. Then were the notes in the book, Exhibit 19, the stock subscription book, showing payments? A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. Where did you get that information? A. I had a list of the notes that had been hypothecated.

Q. From whom did you get that? A. From Mr. Travers.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. How did you go about, then, making the allocation of payments with regard to those notes? A. So far as I remember, the then president of the bank and Mr. Travers and myself went over them, and they knew who the farmers were who had given the notes, and they instructed me as to how to make the entries.

Q. Did they put that on any list for you? A. No, I jotted it down as I went along how much to put on each note.

Q. They had a list of the notes, you say? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see that? A. Yes.

Q. Had that before you? A. Yes.

Q. The notes, you say the list of which you had, did they go over that? A. Yes, I think they did.

Q. Who named the figure for each one to put down? A. That is more than I can say at this time.

Q. Who was the president you alluded to? A. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt.

Q. Then Beattie Nesbitt, Travers and yourself went over the list and made up the list of payment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with Exhibit 16, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are quite aware that in that there are payments credited to people as being paid which have neither paid nor given notes? A. Yes.

Q. What you have told us about going over the lists and putting down what was stated or agreed upon as to those who had given notes, of course, would not apply to the other payments that had been put down? A. No.

Q. How were those figures arrived at? A. I was instructed to place so much on those subscriptions.

Q. Did you realize what you were doing? A. I do not say that I did thoroughly at that time.

Q. I do not understand you? A. I do not think I realized it at the time; I do now, of course.

Q. Did you know what the purpose of the list was? A. Yes.

Q. And what was it you did not realize? A. I did not—Mr. Travers had said that he could pay up the stock list from monies that he had received, and he assumed all responsibility in the matter.

Q. And you had just joined the bank? A. Yes, I had just joined.

Q. One illustration will do I think just as well as a dozen; I will call Mr. W. J. Lindsay in a little while; do you remember a subscription of his? A. Yes.

Q. For a large amount? A. Yes.

Q. How much was it? A. 500 shares.

Q. There was no note in the case? A. No.

Q. How much was put down and paid by him, do you remember? A. I think about $3,800, if I remember rightly.

Q. At all events, you put an amount opposite that for which there was no note? A. Yes.

Q. And there had been no payments? A. No.

Q. When was his subscription for that amount actually made? A. I could not say.

Q. When did you see his subscription? A. Shortly after I went; I could not say exactly what day.

Q. Did you see it in either of the books that have been put in as Exhibits? Mr. Commissioner: That is not as this document shows it is, $500 paid.

Mr. Hodgins: I want to look up here and see what explanation he has.

Mr. Commissioner: You see his name is there, $500? A. I think you will find that was for fifty shares, $5,000; I think you will find the other near the end of this list. (Exhibit 17). Here it is: 500 shares; there is $5,000 marked as being paid.
Mr. Hodgins: What does that letter "W" in pencil opposite it mean? A. I could not say.

Q. Was that on it when you finished the list? A. No, sir.
Q. You put down this $500 in the way you have mentioned? A. Yes.
Q. You said about $3,800 was credited? A. I did not remember just exactly the amount.
Q. Looking at the list? A. I would say five thousand.

Mr. Commissioner: $5,500 in the two places? A. Yes, in the two subscriptions that is on 550 shares all told.

Mr. Hodgins: I have a list of those that were treated in that manner. Perhaps you can say, looking over, whether this would show you the numbers that were treated in that; I suppose you could verify that by carefully going over these books, but you may remember some of them, and if so I will put in the list and prove it later by Mr. Clarkson? A. Yes, I should say that was a fairly correct list, so far as I can say. There are one or two names there that I do not recognize, but I am quite prepared to take Mr. Clarkson's figures because we have gone—
Q. Because you have gone over them with him? A. I know he has gone into it very closely.

Mr. Commissioner: Do not let us trouble with that.

Mr. Hodgins: May I put in a copy of this list, subject to Mr. Clarkson's evidence.

Mr. Commissioner: You had better wait for Mr. Clarkson's evidence.

Mr. Hodgins: Well, the total of those amounts to seventy-five thousand nine hundred and ninety-five dollars? A. Yes.
Q. That would be about correct? A. I think so.
Q. Taking the larger ones, who was T. Cox, did you know him at all? A. He was a farmer out in Halton County; we had a note for the full amount of that.
Q. W. B. Nesbitt, would be Dr. Beattie Nesbitt? A. Yes.
Q. G. Denoon was one of the directors, was he not; became a director afterwards? A. No, sir; he was a Halton County farmer; he was one of Mr. Laidlaw's clients in the action, if I remember rightly.
Q. That was the way in which the list was completed? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you say at all just about when you completed it in that way? A. It was completed in time for the organization meeting on the 26th of November.
Q. You joined the bank on the 19th, and the organization meeting was on the 26th, and it was prepared between those two dates? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who knew, outside yourself and Mr. Travers and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, the way in which that list was being prepared in that way? A. I do not know of anybody except the bank's solicitor, Mr. Hunter; I think he was there at different times while it was done.
Q. Am I right in saying that the list consists, as far as the payments are concerned, of three classes: one correctly taken from the bank books where payments were made? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Second, where there were notes made, certain amounts credited to these shareholders who had given notes, who had not paid money? A. Yes.
Q. And, thirdly, this seventy-five thousand dollars-odd spread over those who had not paid anything? A. That seventy-five thousand dollars included a very large number of those that we had actually notes for.
Q. How many, outside of that $75,000, would have credits here for notes—
Mr. Commissioner: Included in it? A. Included in the $75,000 are those who had given notes in full or in part.

Mr. Hodgins: All those who had given notes included? A. Not all, but all that were considered good: there were some notes that were not used at all and they were collected after the bank's organization.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Taking this list, does that $75,000 include all those payments that were incorrect, either because no payments had been made or because they had given notes instead of paying? A. Yes.
Q. Then outside of the $75,000, was the list correct? A. Yes.
Q. Quite correct? A. I think so.
Q. We will have to verify that; I just want to get your view of it; I must say I understood it differently? A. Of course, some of the money that was borrowed to pay up the capital was spread on stock upon which no payments had been made.
Q. There was $100,000 borrowed, you know? A. Yes.
Q. And this only accounts for $75,000? A. Yes.
Q. What about the other $25,000? A. I do not know; I could not say anything about that.
Q. Was this list certified to by you? A. No, sir.
Q. Who did you give it to? To Mr. Travers.
Q. You were responsible for the figures in it and the additions, I suppose? A. Yes.
Q. And it corresponds with the list put in to the Government? A. So far as I know.
Q. That, you knew, was the purpose of getting it up? A. Yes.
Q. You did not go to Ottawa? A. No, sir.
Q. Who did? A. Mr. Travers, so far as I know, and I do not know positively whether Mr. Hunter went with him or not.
Q. Do you know when they went down? A. I think Mr. Travers went down on the night of the organization meeting, on the 26th or 27th November; I could not say positively as to the date; I think they went down immediately after the organization meeting.
Q. The organization meeting was on the 26th; the declaration is sworn in Toronto on the 27th, so that they were evidently here on the 27th; probably they went down on the night of the 27th, shortly after the meeting? A. Yes.
Q. Did you have anything to do with the declaration which was put in? A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever see it? A. No, sir.
Q. Who drew it? A. I could not say.
Q. It was not drawn in the bank there? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Do you know what instructions were given about it and who got them? A. No, sir.
Q. At all events, you were not asked to take any part in it? A. No, sir.
Q. Had you any interview with Mr. Hunter, as solicitor for the bank, in connection with the drawing of the application? A. No.
Q. Am I right in assuming that you made any objection? A. I questioned the matter once and was told that it was perfectly justifiable to turn the notes into cash and apply them on the stock.
Q. Who did you make the objection to? A. To Mr. Travers.
Q. And was it he who told you that? A. Both he and Mr. Hunter, I think, said that if they got the cash for the notes they could apply them on the stock.
Q. I would like to know about that; you have been examined several times already, and you probably know what you have stated; what was your objection and who satisfied it, if it was satisfied? A. It was between Mr. Hunter and Mr. Travers, they satisfied me. I made inquiries outside as to the feasibility of taking notes for stock and discounting and applying them on the stock and found that it had been done in previous cases.
Q. You did not say that on your previous examinations? A. No, the questions were not put to me in such a way as to draw it out.
Q. Inside the bank was Travers the only one who satisfied your objection?
A. No, I think Mr. Hunter assisted in satisfying me.
Q. Was he called in because of your objection?  A. Not that I would swear to.
Q. How did it come up before him?  A. That is more than I can say.
Q. At all events you said before in the examination in the Watson case that you were present when this list was got up and did the clerical work, and that "Dr. Beattie Nesbitt part of the time and our solicitor upon whose advice we were advised".
Q. "Mr. Hunter?  A. Yes, he advised us Mr. Travers had the right or the privilege to pay up any subscriptions he wished". Was that advice before the list was completed in the way you speak of?  A. Yes.
Q. When did you see Mr. Hunter again after he went away as we understand to Ottawa?  A. I do not remember the exact date; it would be the date of the letter I wrote to Mr. Travers, and that was the 29th November or the 30th November, while Mr. Travers was in Ottawa.
Q. The letter is dated the 29th November?  A. Yes.
Q. And it says Mr. Hunter had arrived or called this morning?  A. Called this morning.
Q. What was the purpose of his calling so far as he expressed himself?  A. He wanted to look over the applications for stock as he said the Finance Minister might call for them and he would like to look at them to see that they were all in order.
Q. What was it that you showed him, the original subscriptions?  A. Yes, the original subscriptions we had them all on the file alphabetically arranged.
Q. Those subscriptions did not accord, did they, in terms with the promissory notes that were given; was not the stock subscription and agreement to pay in all cases $5 a share and $15 per share upon allotment and eight equal monthly payments?  A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did the notes differ from that?  A. They did in this fact that they were for the full amount of the subscription. However, if I remember rightly they were taken along before I joined the service, some of them were for a year.

Mr. Commissioner: That does not accord with this form in this stock subscription book. Here it is $10 on signing and $20 on allotment, and seven payments of $10.

Mr. Hodgins: They appear to have used different ones in 1905 from what they did in 1906?  A. Yes, that was before Mr. Travers took hold of it; the previous organizers had their own forms.
Q. At all events I want to know whether you can say whether the notes correspond with the forms in use either in the early or in the later stages which I understand were drawn for a payment down and specified monthly payments?  A. They certainly were not in accordance with the terms of the application.
Q. Then when Mr. Hunter inspected these applications he saw only the applications, did not he?  A. That is all I know of.
Q. Had he knowledge, do you know, or did you discuss the question of the notes being given with Mr. Hunter in the preparation of the list?  A. I did not discuss the matter with him in the way of discussion. I knew he knew the notes existed.
Q. Did he know they were discounted?  A. I think so.
Q. They had been discounted at that time?  A. I think so, they were discounted prior to my joining, if I am rightly informed.
Q. He expressed himself apparently as you stated in your letter?  A. Yes.
Q. After going over those subscriptions perhaps you can remember what he said?  A. No, I cannot remember what he said, but that he was satisfied they were in first class order, if they were required.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. And then he suggest to you the sending down of the cheques we spoke of yesterday?  A. He told me Mr. Travers asked him to tell me to send down some blank cheques out of the cheque book.

Q. That is what you did?  A. Yes.

Q. Did he mention how many cheques?  A. Three, if I remember rightly.

Q. Is this right, just referring to the interview with Mr. Hunter: "I showed him the file of the subscriptions arranged alphabetically and he looked over that and said they were all in order, they could be checked over with the list that was sent down of the subscriptions". Of course that has nothing to do with the payments?  A. No,"

Q. The file you speak of is not the book we put in, but the actual subscriptions?  A. Yes.

Q. There are some, probably a dozen or more subscriptions, which are dated on the 22nd October, which I would like to know about, do you remember the subscriptions I refer to?  A. I know there are some there, I could not say when they were taken or when they were dated except one for myself for one share that I know was dated back; I could not say as to the others.

Q. Did you take that in any formal way, or did you just put it down in the stock subscriptions?  A. No, I made out an application the same as the others.

Q. And when was it you made out the application?  A. A day or two after I went into the service.

Q. That would be when?  A. The 21st of November.

Q. That was for one share?  A. Yes.

Q. Did you enter that in the book?  A. I did not enter it myself, it was entered by the stock clerk.

Q. In which of these books would it be?  A. It would be entered in that little black book and then transcribed into this afterwards.

(Exhibit 18).

Q. Then transferred to the other one?  A. Yes.

Q. How many subscriptions were made at the same time, what was the purpose of your subscribing at that date?  A. Mr. Travers said he wanted to justify me coming into the bank. He said he had lots of applications and he said every officer of the bank should be a shareholder, and I took one share.

Q. Why was it dated back?  A. At his request.

Q. What was his explanation on that?  A. He said they required to be taken 30 days prior to the asking for the certificate.

Q. Prior to the asking for the certificate or prior to the meeting?  A. Prior to going down for the certificate.

Q. What date was put on it then?  A. If I remember rightly, it was the 22nd October or the 25th October.

Q. Who had charge of the entries in those two books?  A. Mr. Shaver.

Q. Had you at all?  A. No.

Q. In going over that list with Mr. Travers and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, was it after you had subscribed for this one share or before?  A. Afterwards.

Q. Did you see the books at that time containing the subscriptions and did you notice whether yours was in there or not?  A. Yes.

Q. Yours was in?  A. Yes.

Q. Under date October 22nd?  A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me about the other subscriptions which all appear to have been taken under that date; there is the one we have spoken of Lindsay's; do you know the date at which that was actually subscribed?

Q. There are three people named McCorquodale?  A. Yes.

Q. Do you know the date of their subscriptions?  A. I could not swear positively.
Q. Could you tell by looking at the book at all in the order in which they come as to whether they were similarly ante-dated? A. I could not tell by the book. Those last on the list were all ante-dated, but when they were actually taken I could not say.

Q. The meeting was on the 26th November? A. Yes.

Q. You took yours on the 21st November and it was dated back to the 22nd October? A. Yes.

Q. The other names are Mr. Gallagher, Mr. Luxton, Mr. Bradley, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, A. W. Thomas, A. S. Lown, and J. Gilchrist.

Mr. Commissioner: Gallagher is not here on the 22nd October; it is the 22nd November (in large stock subscription book, exhibit 19). Here are these you speak of Lindsay; there is one the 15th November. There is Mr. Lown October 20th, and then the three McCorquodales are over here, only one share apiece.

Mr. Hodgins: October 22nd.

Q. Were you present at the Board meeting when those were allotted? A. No, sir, I never attended a Board meeting the whole time I was in the bank.

Q. I think Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is one of those.

Mr. Commissioner: Yes, October 22nd.

Mr. Hodgins: Would this smaller book, Exhibit 18, be the book of original entry with regard to those? A. Yes.

Q. And carried from the subscriptions? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: There is McCorquodale, and there is Gilchrist, October 22nd. (In Exhibit 18). W. J. Lindsay 500 shares, the 22nd October.

Mr. Hodgins: (To Mr. F. A. Clarkson). That is one of those subscriptions that would be on the referee’s file, would it?

Mr. F. A. Clarkson: We never found the Lindsay subscription.

Mr. Commissioner: That means application.

Mr. F. A. Clarkson: Yes. There never was any subscription for Beattie Nesbitt.

Mr. Fitzgibbon: There was one for 100 shares.

Mr. Commissioner: This (Exhibit 18) shows the allotments were made on the 24th November? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Were what you call the spread payments, which is a very euphemistic way of putting it, were they applied to those we have just gone over, those subscriptions of the 22nd October? A. On two or three of them.

Q. What about yours? A. There was nothing spread on mine.

Q. There were a number of shareholders amounting to twenty one thousand odd dollars that had begun a suit against the bank through Mr. Laidlaw, you know the ones I mean? A. Yes.

Q. And are their names on that list we have put in sent to Ottawa? A. Yes.

Q. The names I have gone over on the 22nd October, are on that? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know that those parties had been settled with and the notes had been returned to them and their subscription practically cancelled? A. The list was made out prior to the settlement with them so far as I remember.

Q. I do not think that is the case; have you any independent recollection of it? A. No.

Q. Look at those two cheques, they contain a date that is important and that may tell you something about it? A. No, sir.

Q. That is prior to your time? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know when you came into the bank that they had been settled with and litigation had been done away with? A. I understood it had.

Q. Did you have a list of the names? A. Yes.

Q. Why were they put down upon the list then that went to Ottawa? A. Mr. Travers instructed me to leave them there in the meantime and we would strike them off after the bank was organized.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Was that done? A. Yes, they were eliminated from the list that went to the Government on the 31st December, the regular annual list.
Q. At the end of the year? A. Yes.
Q. They were on the list sent down to Ottawa? A. Yes.
Q. Whom did you discuss that with other than Travers? A. No one that I can recall.
Q. Had you any talk with Mr. Lindsay about it? A. Not that I remember.
Q. I suppose you are quite aware that if those had been cancelled and done away with they should not appear upon the list? A. Yes.
Q. But Mr. Travers was the one who took the responsibility? A. Yes.
Q. Who dictated the letters in connection with the stock, was it Mr. Travers or yourself? A. Which letters?
Q. The letters to those shareholders we have just been speaking of? A. Certainly not myself.

Mr. Commissioner: I see a subscription for 4,492 shares by the Continental Securities Company.

Mr. Hodgins: That will have to be gone into later. These subscriptions we have been going into were cancelled afterwards and some of the stock sold to the Continental Securities Company.

Mr. Commissioner: This is nearly half a million they subscribed for.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, that, the Lindsay subscription and some others will have to be taken up.

Mr. Commissioner: I see on the 18th March 440 of Lindsay's shares were cancelled and the Luxton shares also; what is that item (referring to Exhibit 18)?

Mr. Hodgins: "J. G. Fitzgibbon in trust twenty-five shares". It appears to have been cancelled in 1909; what about those twenty-five shares? A. A man named Sunstrom in Ottawa subscribed for 25 shares and withdrew his application after allotment, and he was subsequently sued I believe, for payment, and the bank was beaten, and he gave a transfer of the stock, and it was put in to my name in trust. There were no payments made on it at all, it was put in my name in trust until the Board cancelled it.

Mr. Commissioner: Was that after the organization of the bank? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: You say that in the statement to the Government on the 31st December what we may call as the Laidlaw clients subscriptions were omitted? A. Yes.

Q. Had any change taken place, anything occurred in the interim about them? A. No.

Mr. Commissioner: How many shares?
Mr. Hodgins: 219 shares. A. I don’t remember the exact amount but I thought it was more than that.

Q. That is the amount we have been instructed was the actual amount; we will have them checked up? A. I think I am including in my memory one or two conditional subscriptions that were struck off. The one of Lieutenant-Governor Forget, Regina, who subscribed conditionally upon being a director of the Bank, and afterwards withdrew the subscription.

Mr. Commissioner: Give me one of the names of the 219 shares? A. Gastle.

Mr. Commissioner: He apparently paid $100 on ten shares? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Speaking of the Lieutenant-Governor Forget's subscription you speak of that as conditional? A. Yes.

Q. Was that known and spoken of at the time you were preparing the list? A. Yes, it was endorsed on the back of the application.

Q. It was? A. Yes.

Q. Conditional on what? A. On his being appointed a director of the bank.

Q. And that notwithstanding that went in as a regular subscription? A. Yes, there were no payments shown, it was simply a subscription.

Q. Did R. R. McLennan of Cornwall go in? A. Yes.
Q. $5,000; $3,000 paid; had he in fact paid anything?  A. I think so.
Q. Had he paid anything more than $500 at that time?  A. I could not swear positively.
Q. Did you look at that time or could you tell from looking at the books what was the correct amount?
MR. COMMISSIONER: This book shows he paid $500 of subscription March 19th, $1,000 on allotment, April 30th, $500 on the 1st September, and it looks as if he had paid in full ultimately (referring to stock subscription book 19)?  A. I am quite satisfied that Colonel McLennan had paid his full stock not before the organization but afterwards; it was all paid in cash and there was no note for it.
MR. HODGINS: But at the date of this list had he paid $3,000?  A. Yes, sir.
Q. You think he had?  A. I am almost sure of it.
MR. COMMISSIONER: What is the date of the list?  A. 26th November.
Q. According to this book, he had (Exhibit 19).
MR. HODGINS: Were there any other conditional subscriptions included in that?  A. Not that I can recall.
Q. Were there any other subscriptions which had been repudiated previous to that time included in the list?  A. Not that I know of.
Q. The reason I asked you about Colonel McLennan is that long before that list he had raised the question as to misrepresentation and had determined to fight, according to the correspondence; but I think as a matter of fact he died and his executors paid it.  A. No, the stock was all paid before he died, and the executors sold it.
Q. Were there any others in the condition of not being willing to take their stock at the time, and you having knowledge of that fact?  A. No.
Q. Those notes, there was some question as to their form, and you gave some evidence as to their being—you were asked before the referee, "Did you see any of the notes?" and you said you did, after they came back from the Trusts & Guarantee Company?  A. Yes.
Q. You were asked how they were payable, how was that?  A. As far as I remember, they were payable to the Farmers Bank of Canada or the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank, I could not say positively.
Q. Your answer was, "Payable to the Farmers Bank of Canada," and then the referee asked you again, "Did you see the notes?" A. After they came back from the Trusts & Guarantee Company.
"Q. They were payable to the Farmers Bank of Canada?"  A. Yes.
"Q. How were they endorsed?"  A. They were endorsed individually by all the provisional directors?"
A. Yes, that is my memory of it.
Q. They were payable to the Farmers Bank?
MR. COMMISSIONER: We had better have the notes themselves.
MR. HODGINS: There was one note put in; I think Mr. Clarkson has the balance, has he not?
MR. F. A. CLARKSON: There are only two notes we have; there may have been renewals.
MR. HODGINS: What became of those notes after they came back from the Trusts & Guarantee Company?  A. They were sent out to the branches: most of them collected. They were renewed from time to time, the makers of the notes paying interest on the renewals; at each renewal paying something.
Q. Were they all in the same form, according to your recollection?  A. Nearly all; I do not think there was any difference in them.
MR. HODGINS: Perhaps you will remember when in Ottawa Mr. Boville produced as part of the file one of those notes, and we were to have a copy of that. The copy is not here.  A. I will put that in later on.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Mr. Commissioner: What form did this settlement with Mr. Laidlaw’s clients take, the stock had been allotted to them, how was the stock dealt with? A. It was subsequently cancelled.

Q. What was done at the time, did they execute any transfer or power of attorney or anything?

Mr. Hodgins: I have those papers; I was going to prove them by another witness.

Mr. Commissioner: Because I see shares were transferred to somebody else, according to this book.

Mr. Hodgins: These papers I propose to prove. Probably Mr. Fitzgibbon can say as to what was done in the books? A. There were formal transfers entered on the books, but they were never posted from the transfers, if my memory serves me right.

Q. Never accepted by anybody?

Mr. Commissioner: They were transferred, according to these documents, to Lindsay? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: And whatever was put in the books was never accepted? A. No.

Q. And were never posted? A. Not if my memory serves me.

Q. And that was done? A. After the organization meeting.

Q. After what organization meeting? A. After the organization meeting of the bank on the 26th November; I think that was the date.

Q. Was it shortly after that; was it before the certificate was issued or afterwards? A. I could not say as to that.

Q. Would the books show it? A. The books should show the date.

Mr. Commissioner: I had not looked at this, Exhibit 17, before. I see in a number of cases in this return of shareholders it appeared that nothing had been paid up on the shares? A. Yes.

Q. And you mentioned with regard to Mr. Forget, his subscription appeared no payment? A. That would be one of the early ones.

Q. The amount of the stock subscribed, according to this return, exceeded by $79,200 the amount requisite? A. Yes.

Q. And the payments showed $291,310 on the shares? A. Yes.

Q. That was $41,310 in excess of the required amount? A. Yes.

Q. I would like you to make a little clearer what you did with regard to making up the payments that were entered in that list; as I understand you, all the notes that had been taken, with the exception of some that were thought not good enough, were discounted somewhere? A. Yes.

Q. What was done with the proceeds; supposing Mr. Jones’s note for $500 had been discounted, what was done with the proceeds of that note? A. Some of it would probably be spread on his own note, if not all of it, and some would be spread on somebody else’s payments.

Q. What justification was there for taking Mr. Jones’s money and applying it to the credit of Mr. Smith? A. None whatever that I can see now.

Q. That was done? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said in some cases where nothing at all had been paid, money was applied? A. Yes.

Q. Where was that money gotten from? A. Part of the proceeds of the discount of notes.

Q. According to the figures Mr. Hodgins stated to you, the amount that was so applied was considerably in excess of the amount raised by the discounts; where did the difference come from? A. I do not catch that.

Q. What was the amount that was raised by discounts of the notes? A. All told, I believe $100,000; I could not be positive.
Q. Then I misunderstood you; it was the proceeds of the discounted notes that was either applied to the credit of the people whose notes had been discounted or partly to their credit and partly to the credit of persons who had paid nothing?
A. Yes.

Q. Or who had not paid that money?  A. Yes.
Q. They had nothing to do with the note?  A. No.

Mr. Hodgins: Will you just say whether these are the transfers, these first twelve in the book which you have put in?  A. Yes, those are the ones, and they are marked on the 22nd December. I knew it was long after the settlement.

Q. The 22nd December, 1906, is the correct date?  A. Yes, I should say so.

Q. And they are signed by W. J. Lindsay as attorney?  A. Yes.

Q. And witnessed by you?  A. Yes.

Q. You had written in an acceptance?  A. Yes.

Q. There is no acceptance in any of those cases?  A. No.

Q. And you say they were cancelled afterwards?  A. Yes.

Q. They were never posted to begin with, into the book?  A. Not as being transfers; they were marked off in the book as being done away with, got out of the way anyway.

Q. They stood, as I understand, just where they did in the books?  A. On the 26th November, yes.

Q. Never were covered up as being transferred to anybody else?  A. No.

Q. Were they cancelled?  A. Yes, and ruled out of this book altogether.

Transfer book filed as Exhibit 20.

DR. JOHN FERGUSON, recalled.

Mr. Commissioner: Is there anything in the books of the bank to show how the $11,000 was made up?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: What is the use of asking Dr. Ferguson's memory of it?

Mr. Hodgins: I want to ask him whether he can tell me, from looking at this, whether his answer was correct.

Q. You said yesterday that in that eleven thousand-odd dollars of directors' fees that that $10,000 which was paid on July 4th was included in it?  A. Well, I understood so, yes.

Q. You know what I am asking?  A. Yes.

Q. Now, I find in the provisional directors ledger that the $10,000 included is credited on November 17th, and that that corresponds with a cheque for $10,000 paid to Lindsay and I wanted to ask you, had you ever seen this book or this entry when you made your answer, and did you know anything about it, because if not, I will have to go somewhere else?  A. That would have no application to us; any entry made then was after this event and the payment of this sum would be wholly of a different nature and for some other purpose.

Q. I find there that the $11,760 which was the amount that I was questioning you about, and which you said included the $10,000 of July 4th, is made up of a ten thousand dollars not credited till November 17th?  A. That was a reverse entry, I think you will find, charging it back to another account.

Q. I do not think so?  A. After our time it was reversed.

Mr. Commissioner: That is not the original entry, is it?

Mr. Hodgins: This is the original book.

Mr. Commissioner: Is it a loose leaf system?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes?  A. I could have no knowledge or control how it could be entered at that late date.
Q. You do not know? A. I understood that came out at some one or other of these investigations, and that that is the reversal of another entry, charging it back to another account altogether.

Q. If you know that I am quite satisfied with your answer? A. That is my impression.

Q. If you do not know it I think I am not far out in saying you are mistaken; however I got what I wanted. Seeing this entry does not change your idea that the $10,000 you got was included in directors fees? A. I wish to make this perfectly clear, all we got altogether, divided amongst the six of us, was the ten thousand dollars in addition to the small amount paid when we occasionally attended meetings or that was paid for as meetings. The total of that would be somewhere about $11,000.

Q. I do not wish to go into that? A. I do not wish to go one word further than to say that this entry in November is a reversal of the July entry charging it back from the commission account to another account.

Q. Somebody has told you that? A. That came out in evidence, and was stated.

Q. Whose evidence? A. I do not remember now; it came out in the investigation at the Police Court.

Q. Did you verify that to see it was true? A. I had no chance to verify it.

Q. I am calling your attention to it? A. And I still state that the position I took yesterday is the correct one, and that is the reversal of the same sum to another account.

Q. That is you have heard? A. No, my own knowledge of the fact that we did not get another sum of money.

Q. I see the sum I mentioned included apparently another ten thousand dollars from the one you speak of—

MR. COMMISSIONER: Is not Dr Ferguson right? Here is $10,000 on the fourth of July?

MR. HODGINS: Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: This $10,000 is charged up as commission to Travers and Travers paid $10,000 out of his commission.

MR. HODGINS: There is no dispute as to that, but if you look at the commissions account, the amount I spoke to him about, $11,760 includes a different ten thousand dollars, that is all? A. It cannot, because we did not get it.

Q. There are lots of things in this book that you think cannot be, but we know they are.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Here is the cross entry on the 17th November; there was credited to the stock commissions the $10,000 and debited to directors fees, that is what Dr. Ferguson is trying to explain.

MR. HODGINS: Yes, no doubt, but there was a difference of several months? A. That refers back to the July sum.

Q. I understand that it is quite possible that that is so, but I do not want you to come here and say so if you do not know. I point out that there is that difference, if you can throw any light on it yourself, I have asked you to come here and do it? A. The light I can throw on it is that we had no transactions whatever in November, that no sums of money were then paid, that that is the same sum as the other, and was stated somewhere in the investigation that it was but re-entering a cross entry or a correcting entry of the original sum of $10,000.

Q. I understand your position quite, and I am not saying it is wrong, that there is only the one ten thousand dollars when it got into the account, but it is my duty to find out why the ten thousand dollars you speak of was not entered in the directors fees at the time. A. Because it was properly charged in the commission account in the first instance, and this was charged back to directors fees without our knowledge.
THOMAS URQUHART, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: You are a practising barrister in Toronto? A. Yes.
Q. And you have had some little to do with the early stages of the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.
Q. Fortunately got out of it before its later stages? A. Yes.
Q. You gave an opinion which was referred to yesterday; have you got a copy of that? A. Yes. ( Produces copy of opinion dated June 26th, 1906, which was filed as Exhibit 21).

MR. COMMISSIONER: Was that you or your firm? A. It was given by my firm, it was signed by myself with the firm’s name and my own name.

MR. HODGINS: In the bill of costs on the same day the charge is fee for special opinion in connection with this matter, and also on question of grant to provisional directors? A. That grant to provisional directors was a personal opinion I gave to them, to Mr. Travers, Mr. Lown and Mr. Smith, that I expressed to them personally.
Q. It did not form part of the written opinion? A. Not in the writing.
Q. It is not in the written opinion? A. No.
Q. Was there any written advice given? A. Not with that; I had better make an explanation. On the evening of the 23rd June, I think that was a Saturday evening, if the date is correct here, Mr. Travers had called me up in the afternoon at my house, and I was not at home, and when I got home there was a message there for me asking me to call him up on the telephone at the Queen’s Hotel, I think it was, and he advised me over the phone that the provisional directors proposed to grant money to themselves to cover their expenses, and I advised him over the phone, that I thought that that would be a breach of trust, and on the following Monday morning I had an interview with Mr. Travers, Mr. Lown and Mr. Smith and I than advised them, not in writing, that they could not grant money to themselves, and then they asked for this special opinion in regard to the allotting of stock for which they had taken notes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Who were the three, Travers, Lown and Smith? A. Yes, I did not advise any of the other parties, but just those three.

MR. HODGINS: What was Mr. Travers explanation which is down here as “Advising him the provisional directors discussed making cheque to themselves out of the money subscribed to cover their expenses in connection with organization of the bank”? A. I could not remember his explanation.
Q. The directors had been paying right along the expenses of advertising and various other things which ultimately amounted to some $44,000 shortly after this? A. My recollection is now he told me they were going to make a special cheque to themselves for expenses.
Q. Expenses in what sense, their own time and trouble? A. I think there was some, I cannot say what really the expenses were.
Q. At all events you certainly would not have advised that the provisional directors could not pay ordinary expenses? A. No, they could pay the ordinary expenses; this was something to cover their own personal expense.
Q. And you advised Travers, and then these three, on the following Monday, that that could not be done? A. That could not be done.
Q. That was on the 23rd June, 1906? A. Yes.
Q. Then on the 28th you have an entry, “Having been advised by Travers that he had made special agreement with provisional directors, two interviews with him regarding same and advising him as to legal effects”? A. He brought a form of agreement in to me to settle, which I went over with him; I remember that quite clearly. I told him it was a very onerous agreement that he was making with the bank and I advised him as to the effect of it; I do not know whether I made any changes in it.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Had you not better identify that agreement? A. I do not think that agreement that I saw on the 28th June went through.

MR. HODGINS: “Making alterations and settling agreement and advising as to legal effect of it.” Perhaps you can tell whether this exhibit 12 (The first agreement of July 4th) was the one? A. I do not believe that is exactly identical with the agreement that I saw; it is partly the same.

Q. What was the onerous part of it that struck you? A. My recollection is that the agreement that I saw was more onerous than this one.

Q. Against whom? A. The final cost of organization would be greater than this.

Q. Does that state any final cost? A. No, but you could make up pretty nearly what it may be. There is $500,000 and there was a commission on that, and this provides for $20,000 in addition to the commission; that would be $70,000 at least I suppose; and my recollection is it was more than that, because I remember a statement that Mr. Travers made in reply to me, he said “We will cover all those organization expenses by a sale of the unissued stock at a premium of 25 through the agencies of the bank”. I could not identify that as the agreement I saw, but it may be.

Q. They were advised by you at all events, Travers, Lown and Smith, that the provisional directors could not grant money to themselves? A. Yes, that is for their own services at that time.

Q. Did you tell them the shareholders would have to ratify that? A. I told them the permanent directors would have to ratify that.

Q. Did you tell them the shareholders would have to? A. I do not recollect that point, but I know I always had advised that the permanent directors would have to ratify all their agreements that had been made.

Q. Then there is a certain agreement there on the same day under which if I recollect right Travers himself assumes the risk of the rejection by the permanent directors and practically guarantees that this $20,000 would be paid; it is dated on the same day? A. I never saw that.

Q. That is evidently something subsequent to your advice to them? A. It must have been.

Some reason must have been interposed; however, your advice to them was purely verbal on the point? A. As to payment of directors.

Q. And he seemed to accept it and be satisfied with it? A. Yes.

Q. This opinion have you read it? A. Just recently.

Q. It does not seem to me to be what I understood it was from the witnesses, namely a question of whether they could or could not take notes in payment of stock subscriptions? A. I had not been asked that question; they had already taken notes and they came and asked me if the provisional directors should or could allot the stock subscriptions for which notes had been taken.

Q. Let me read you what seems to me to be the point that was in your mind: “We have considered the questions submitted by you to us regarding the power of the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada to accept stock subscriptions where the parties have given notes in payment of the stock in place of, or in addition to giving their subscriptions in the usual manner, the notes maturing at a time different from the payments in the subscriptions”? A. There is the letter under which I was asked—

Q. I just wish you would direct your mind for a moment to that? A. Very well.

Q. Was the question that the notes matured at a different date from the installment plan provided for in the subscriptions themselves? A. That was one of the points.

Q. You say you considered that question; how do you deal with it there in that letter: what is your answer to it? A. That they could allot the stock to the subscribers, it being a matter which would come within the reasonable discretion of the directors, and I went on to tell them that they were simply trustees of this money and of the promissory notes.

Q. Did you deal with the question of the variance of the note with the terms of the stock subscription? A. I did not deal specially with that at all, but I advised them that they could allot the stock.

Q. On the terms of the subscriptions, did you say, or on the terms of the note? A. I cannot say now at this date; the opinion will have to speak for itself as to that. We gave the opinion that they had the power to accept those subscriptions and I think so still, they have the power to accept subscriptions but they cannot use the notes.

Q. However, they had clearly in mind from your letter and you had clearly in mind, that they matured at different dates? A. That was one of the points.

Q. Did you subsequently advise them again at any time upon that point? A. Mr. Travers came to me and asked me once, some considerable time later than that, as to whether those notes could be discounted, and I advised them they could not be discounted.

Q. How long after was that? A. I think it was in September, but I am not sure as to that, but he was talking of the deposit at that time.

Q. "Re deposit, interview with Mr. Travers and advising him in connection therewith"? A. I advised him at one time whether that was the time or not; that was a personal opinion.

Q. That must have given him such a shock that I see you only acted for him for a couple of days after that and the bill terminated? A. My work practically terminated when the charter was granted.

Q. We heard you had given Travers a letter to Mr. Calvert in Ottawa when he went down about getting the certificate? A. I cannot remember whether I did or not; if he had asked me for one I would have given it to him.

Q. I see according to this bill you had written to Mr. Calvert, when the extension Bill was up? A. He introduced the Bill for us. I wrote him asking him to do so and he wrote me saying there was some opposition to the Bill and I replied to that letter and told him I would go down before the committee, and I appeared before the committee personally.

Q. There was no later advice given by you on the question of the certificate? A. September 25th was the letter advising. There was one little matter about some one who had a claim against them that I wrote a letter or two afterwards but there was no advising. Some Montreal man had a claim against the bank.

Mr. Commissioner: You say you advised these three gentlemen it would be a breach of trust? A. I advised Mr. Travers it would be a breach of trust; I don’t think I used those words when I was speaking to Mr. Low.

Q. I gathered from what you afterwards said unless the shareholders sanctioned the payment—? A. I told them all along all their acts would have to be sanctioned by the permanent board.

Q. Did you advise them that they could be paid by the shareholders? A. If the permanent directors were willing, that was my understanding, if the permanent directors were willing they should be paid this money, but I do not know that the permanent directors came up just at the time, but I advised them at other times.

Q. Your advice was not that the bank when organized could not recognize and pay these claims? A. Oh, no.

Q. Your advise was contained in that letter but Mr. Hodgins seems to draw some distinctions as to different points in it; was not your opinion to them intended to convey to them the idea that having taken the notes from the shareholders they were justified in alloting the stock, accepting that as payment? A. They were justified in alloting the stock; I do not think the question of accepting it as payment came into question.
Q. How could they allot the stock? A. As I understand the Banking Act you have to give notice of an allotment before you can collect the installments and then go on and collect.

Q. Did not your opinion involve the proposition that the provisional directors might take notes for the stock? A. My opinion involved this, that notes having been given as well as subscriptions for stock they could go on and allot the stock and then proceed to collect the notes.

Q. Did not that involve the proposition that it was lawful to take notes? A. Perhaps it did, yes; I see no objection to it still.

Q. The other point you thought they had no right to discount notes? A. No, because I did not think there was anybody could endorse them as I understand they were payable to the Farmers Bank of Canada, and the Farmers Bank of Canada was not organized.

Q. Was that the only difficulty in the way of their discounting them? A. There might have been another difficulty; I think that was the difficulty in my mind that the provisional directors could not discount them.

Mr. Hodgins: Upon what terms did you come to the conclusion that they could allot, on the terms of the subscriptions or the terms of the promissory notes? A. I should think the promissory note would have to govern, but I say in my opinion I did not consider that question very much.

Q. I think you do not just deal with it? A. Perhaps not. I say "If these subscriptions are not paid, the allotment could and no doubt under the by-laws would be cancelled by the directors, to be elected, and the stock could then be resold."

Q. If what was not paid? A. If the subscriptions were not paid. Of course it is six years, and it is hard to remember everything that was before a man's mind.

WILLIAM H. HUNTER, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You are a practising barrister in Toronto? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been for some years? A. Yes?

Q. You went out with W. J. Lindsay to settle some actions against the Farmers Bank? A. I did not.

Q. That is incorrect? A. That is quite incorrect.

Q. Mr. Lindsay made the trip himself, did he? A. I do not know as to that.

Q. So far as you are concerned you did not go? A. I did not accompany him.

Q. Did you know he went? A. I knew he was intending to go.

Q. Did you advise him as to what he would have to do? A. I think the advice was given by another firm of solicitors. At that time I wished to remain free to act for the lender, who had introduced me to the question.

Q. I do not understand your answer; I did not ask about a lender? A. But I am saying when the question came up as to the litigation with Mr. Laidlaw's clients, that when I was asked to act by the directors or by Mr. Travers I said that I had been introduced to this matter as acting for the lenders; there might be a conflict of interest and I advised them to get another solicitor.

Q. To be a little more definite who was the lender your are referring to? A. I refer to Mr. Warren’s company, the Trusts and Guarantee Company.

Q. Introduced to what matter? A. To the whole matter of the Farmers Bank.
Q. When were you retained by the Trusts and Guarantee Company? A. The first I had to do with the matter would be about the middle of October of that year.

Q. Was that in connection with the loan of $80,000 and $20,000? A. The only loan I knew of was the $80,000 loan.

Q. It was in connection with that? A. Yes.

Q. You were asked to act for the directors of the Farmers Bank were you? A. I was asked to take charge of that litigation that Mr. Laidlaw had started.

Q. Who asked you? A. I think it was Mr. Travers, sure of it, because I had not met anybody else in connection with the bank.

Q. You discussed it with him? A. Certainly I did.

Q. And were fully aware of the situation created by the Laidlaw writ? A. Yes.

Q. He told you I suppose that that writ had gone to Ottawa? A. No, I do not think so; the way the matter arose, as far as I was concerned, was an article in one of the evening papers containing two or three columns. Mr. Travers asked me to come down and see him. His immediate instinct was to ask me to issue a writ for libel against the paper.

Q. Of course you would not do that? A. I preferred to understand the circumstances first. Then I suggested that he call Mr. Lindsay and find out what Mr. Lindsay knew about it. My recollection is that I met Mr. Travers, Mr. Lindsay, and Mr. Warren, and discussed the matter, that the question came up who should act, and that I advised them to go to an independent solicitor.

Q. Was that Mr. McCarthy—Mr. McCarthy was with Mr. Laidlaw, was not he? A. I did not hear Mr. McCarthy's name mentioned.

Q. Who did they go to? A. Messrs. Watson, Masten, Smoke and Smith.

Q. To Mr. Watson's firm? A. Yes.

Q. At that time I think that probably Mr. Masten was not in it? A. That I could not be sure of.

Q. You did not act for the Farmers Bank? A. Not in that litigation.

Q. Was Mr. Lindsay a party to the writ? A. That I do not remember.

Q. Had you a retainer from any one else? A. No.

Q. Did you drop out of it completely and absolutely? A. I would not say that; I was in touch with Mr. Watson throughout.

Q. It was after, was it not, the loan of $80,000? A. I had a notion that the payment by Mr. Warren's company had been made the day after the interview with Mr. Warren and myself and Mr. Travers in Mr. Warren's office, but after the suspension I learned it was some time later, so I cannot say.

Q. What was some time later? A. The payment of $80,000.

Q. Speaking of that interview was that before or after the loan had been negotiated? A. The loan had been negotiated and the papers drawn before I was brought into the matter.

Q. Before you were brought in? A. By Mr. Warren.

Q. And in consequence of Mr. Warren's retainer you felt a difficulty when this matter came up of acting for the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.

Q. You were of course advised by Mr. Warren exactly what the situation was with regard to the deposit? A. With the amount of his loan?

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. That he was discounting notes, that his company were discounting the notes and producing the money? A. As I understood the situation, he was making an advance of $80,000 upon $100,000 of notes and assignments of monies paid under stock subscriptions.

Q. For the purpose of putting up the deposit to the Government? A. Certainly.
Q. That was Mr. Warren's instructions to you? A. He told me he was making that loan.
Q. Then when the Farmers Bank writ was presented I suppose you read the endorsement on it? A. I think I did more than that; I think I read the affidavits that were filed.
Q. You are fully aware then of what they were seeking to do? A. As aware as I could be from the reading of the papers.
Q. That was awkward litigation both for the Trusts & Guarantee Company who had arranged the loan and for the Farmers Bank, was it not? A, I could not speak as to the Farmers Bank, but I should not think it would be awkward as far as the Trusts & Guarantee Company are concerned; it was a question whether they had their security or not.
Q. Was not your security attacked in that action? A. I do not think so.
Q. Was it not impeached? A. I do not think so. The Trusts & Guarantee Company were not a party to the litigation.
Q. Did you know the right to pledge those notes for the loan was questioned in that action? A. The propriety of it was questioned.
Q. The legality of it? A. We would not be called upon to answer in that litigation.
Q. But it was in question?. A. Yes.
Q. And you recognized that and I suppose told Mr. Warren so? A. I do not remember specifically mentioning that to Mr. Warren. Mr. Warren I think knew all that I did in connection with the matter; he was present when we read the papers.
Q. Did you ask him whether the loan of money had actually been paid over? A. I think there would be no question it had been paid over then, though as to the exact date of payment I am not aware.
Q. Was Warren pretty anxious about it? A. No, his attitude was he had his security for his money.
Q. Did you really decline to act for the Farmers Bank? A. I have said.
Q. I know you have; you said you declined, but I said did you really intend that to be the fact? A. Certainly.
Q. Why did you keep in touch with Mr. Watson? A. I think that was quite natural.
Q. Not if Mr. Warren's attitude is right, that he was perfectly satisfied, that he got his securities and it was not awkward litigation for the company? I do not see what made you apprehensive? A. I was not apprehensive, but I was keeping in touch.
Q. Why? A. To know what was going on.
Q. How were you interested? A. We were interested in this way at that time, that if the result had been that the bank did not go into operation we wanted to be ready to step in and get that money if we could.
Q. Get what money? A. The money we had advanced.
Q. Then it comes back very much to the same thing you were apprehensive; who suggested buying off the men who were promoting the litigation? A. I think it was either Mr. Lindsay or Mr. Travers; it was not a question of buying them off as I understood at the time, it was a question of offering to take transfers of their shares and giving them the money they had paid on them.
Q. Were you aware that Mr. Laidlaw felt aggrieved in the matter of the Farmers Bank at all? A. No more than I heard Mr. Travers say on one occasion.
Q. You were not solicitor for the bank, were you at that time? A. It appears to me I had drafted the advertisement in the 'Gazette' calling the meeting and I think that was antecedent to this.
Q. Is there any doubt about it you were acting for Mr. Travers and in that sense for the Farmers Bank before Mr. Warren retained you? A. No, I had never met Mr. Travers until I was employed by Mr. Warren.

Q. Under whose instructions had you drawn this advertisement? A. Mr. Travers, after the matter had been arranged between him and Mr. Warren.

Q. Then that must have been subsequent to this interview over the litigation. A. No, the notice in the 'Gazette' was current when this litigation came up.

Q. I am trying to get at when your first relations with the Farmers Bank started; that was before this interview when you and Lindsay and Travers and Warren were together? A. Yes.

Q. Was it before your retainer by Mr. Warren; which came first, the Farmers Bank or Warren? A. Warren, I knew nothing of the Farmers Bank until Mr. Warren had employed me.

Q. After he had employed you the Farmers Bank employed you? A. After the advance was made Mr. Travers asked me if I would act in drawing the papers for the 'Gazette' calling the shareholders meeting, and preparing the other formal papers. I asked Mr. Warren if he had any objection and he said no.

Q. What had you to do in arranging for the taking over of the shares; you did not go with Mr. Lindsay? A. My recollection is that Mr. Travers got a personal advance from the Trusts & Guarantee Company or Mr. Warren upon the security of his life insurance policy intending that that money should be given to Mr. Lindsay to be paid over at the time of taking the transfers; my recollection is that I prepared the assignment of that life insurance policy.

Q. The loan being some $2,380? A. I forget the exact amount of it.

Q. Who made the arrangement with Warren or with the company to advance that money upon the life insurance? A. I think Mr. Travers must have.

Q. What instructions did you get about it? A. I got an instruction from Mr. Warren to prepare an assignment of that life insurance policy and the policy was given to me by Mr. Warren.

Q. At that interview we have already spoken of, when Travers, Lindsay and Warren and you met? A. No, I think not. I think it was subsequent to that.

Q. Are you sure? A. I can only speak from recollection, I think it was subsequent to that.

Q. You have no entries of these? A. I may have.

Q. You have not looked at them? A. No.

Q. I would like to see the entries? A. All right.

Q. Travers was reduced to pledging his life insurance at that time, did you understand that? A. I do not know how far he was reduced, he pledged his life insurance at that time.

Q. But there had been a loan upon these notes by the Trusts and Guarantee Company of $80,000 you knew that? A. Yes.

Q. This was only a small, trifling, additional thing? A. Yes, this was a loan to Mr. Travers personally.

Q. Did not he ask that it be advanced on those notes at the same time? A. I do not know.

Q. He did not ask you at all events. A. No, he did not ask me.

Q. Whatever he may have stated to Warren you do not know about, Warren did not discuss that phase of it at all; he brought you the insurance policy? A. He gave me the insurance policy and asked me to draw an assignment of it.

Q. Was it only on the insurance policy or stock in the Dominion Permanent? A. I do not know of any stock.

Q. You drew the assignment? A. I drew an assignment.

Q. Do you know then as to what course the matter subsequently took, or did you just hand back the paper you drew and did they have it executed themselves? A. I was not present at the closing.
Q. At all events you knew the idea was then to hand the money to Lindsay? A. I understood that Mr. Lindsay was to be furnished this money to offer the complainants to take transfers of their shares.

Q. Did you prepare the papers for him? A. No.

Q. Would you just look at those and tell me if they were prepared in your office or with your knowledge? A. They were not prepared in my office. It is not the typewriting of the typewriter in my office.

Q. They were possibly then prepared in Mr. Watson’s office I take it. A. I cannot say.

Q. He was acting at that time for the Farmers Bank? A. He acted in that litigation.

Q. You do not know whether he did or did not prepare these documents? A. No, I do not.

Q. We are told that Mr. Lindsay went out and around the County of Halton, did you know anything about that? A. No, except I think they were got because Mr. Watson told me he was going to move to dismiss the action.

Q. After they were got you heard from Mr. Watson? A. That he was going to move to dismiss the action.

The Commission adjourned from 1 P.M. to 2.30 P.M. The Commission resumed at 2.30 P.M., March 20th, 1912.

WILLIAM H. HUNTER, Examination continued—

MR. HODGINS: When did you learn the result of the Lindsay visit to the shareholders? A. I have no possible way of fixing the date.

Q. 26th October is the date of the signatures of the various shareholders who were plaintiffs in that action, the plaintiffs dealing with their stock? A. I have no recollection of how I heard it; I think it must have been in Mr. Watson’s office.

Q. Shortly after I suppose? A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware of the dismissal of the action? A. I was aware he was going to move, but I was not up at the time it was dismissed.

Q. I suppose you learned that shortly afterwards? A. I think so.

Q. Kept yourself informed? A. Yes, as far as I could.

Q. Are you prepared to say you knew it shortly after the time at which the action was dismissed, the 27th October? A. I understood that there was a settlement between Mr. Laidlaw and Mr. Watson, at least minutes of settlement entered into, I do not know the actual dismissal of the action, I understood there was some minutes of settlement.

Q. Did you inform yourself what those were, and on what terms the stockholders in that action had been got rid of? A. No.

Q. You were satisfied with the result? A. I understood generally their shares were transferred or were to be transferred.

Q. To whom? A. That I did not know. The obvious difficulty was there was no transfer book in existence at this time, and there could be no transfer book opened until after the organization of the bank.

Q. You were alive to that? A. Yes.

Q. So that you saw a difficulty of getting rid of the subscriptions? A. It would have to rest on the undertaking of somebody that the powers of attorney to transfer would be exercised, and I presume that would be covered by the minutes of settlement.
Q. Did you not satisfy yourself as to the real position they occupied? A. No.

Q. Just left it in doubt? A. As far as I was concerned, I was charged with no responsibility in that matter.

Q. But acting for the Trusts Company you left it as you say without full knowledge of the details? A. I do not think the Trusts Company are interested in these subscriptions, I do not think any securities that moved to them were involved; I would not be clear on that either.

Q. Had the Trusts Company obtained the original subscriptions, or did you understand they were loaning upon notes alone? A. I understood that they were loaning upon notes, and an assignment of the monies payable under the form of subscriptions.

Q. So that the two would go together? A. So I understood, but I was informed after suspension by Mr. Warren that they had no assignment; that is the way I understood the transaction at the time it was opened to me.

Q. What steps did you take to see that the Trusts & Guarantee Company, that is your clients, had got what you thought was a proper security? A. That was not the question that was put to me; when the matter was talked over with me, Mr. Warren asked me to ascertain and give him an opinion whether the Provisional directors of the Farmers Bank had such a propriety in those notes, that they could endorse them over so that the Trusts Company would be holders for value.

Q. That was it? A. He also asked me when I met Mr. Travers to size the whole proposition up as to the outlook for Mr. Travers, and he also asked me when I was looking through the thing to give him a general idea of the character of the subscription lists.

Q. Was this your first retainer by him? A. It was the only retainer by him.

Q. And that was prior to the meeting in the office where the four of you were together? A. Yes, this would be about the middle of October.

Q. Then did you about that time see the subscription list? A. I went over to the office of the Farmers Bank, I think it was then opposite the Rossin House or King St., Mr. Travers at first declined to talk with me; after a little while he showed me—he had the subscriptions as I recollect them on a letter file and showed me the form of subscription; he ran through the subscriptions, leafed them over, telling me who this one was and who that one was. He had not the notes. I understood the notes were in the possession of the lender at that time.

Q. The Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Yes, but he showed me a form of the notes. We had a general talk over the transaction and the shape in which it was to be put through.

Q. Did you form any opinion as to the validity of the notes, as compared with the subscription lists, they differing in the date of payment? A. I did not have any opportunity of comparing the notes themselves with the subscriptions, but I think probably I assumed they agreed.

Q. I thought he showed you a form of note? A. He showed me a blank note.

Q. Do you know the form of promissory note quite well, was that all he showed you? A. He just showed me one of the notes they were using, as I recollect it ran "I promise to pay to the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada or order", and then the payment. My general recollection on the subject is that it gathered together the last seven or eight payments that would have been under the form of the subscription.

Q. And made them due at a specific date? A. Yes.

Q. That question appears to have arisen, the question as between the subscription and the notes that they differed, early in June sometime as between the provisional directors and Mr. Travers, you did not as I understand go into it further than you have told us? A. No, I know nothing about that.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Did you size up the situation otherwise? A. I looked through, I heard what he had to say about the subscriptions and I thought it was an unusually good list of subscribers; it seemed to have been pretty well placed.

Q. That was his statement? A. And I think any one would agree who has gone over it that as a rule they were fairly small subscriptions, the stock was very well divided, and in places where he would naturally expect to get considerable support for his branches.

Q. So that you reported favourably? A. I reported favourably upon that, that I thought it was a good list of subscriptions.

Q. The only point left of importance would be the validity of the deposit, the way in which the money was raised for the deposit with the Receiver-General? A. I do not think that would enter into the matter as far as the Trusts & Guarantee Company were concerned.

Q. At that time Travers had made his deposit with the Dominion Government? A. No, he could not have made his deposit with the Receiver-General at that date, because as I understood it, though the cheque was drawn it had not been turned over.

Q. That was probably some days before the 23rd October? A. It was around the 15th or 16th October.

Q. After that this difficulty with the Laidlaw subscription comes up and they are got rid of? A. The date of the writ would be—

Q. I have not the date of the writ; the fact is that the settlement that was made, was made on the 26th October, so that it was prior to that; then you saw Mr. Laidlaw's affidavit? A. I saw the affidavit that was served with the writ, I forget whose affidavit that was.

Q. You realized yourself that if the certificate was not granted by the department that the subscriptions with these notes would have to be returned to the various subscribers? A. Less the expenses, I suppose.

Q. And then did you further realize that in every case the loan by the Trusts & Guarantee Company would not be paid? A. No, I would rather take the other view, that if the Treasury certificate had not issued we would have got our money back from the Receiver-General.

Q. You thought that? A. That would be my view; I do not think it came up precisely in that form. Under the Act, as I recollect it, there was no provision if the certificate did not issue that he should return that money; I presume there would be a liquidation, and ultimately he would have to return that money through the liquidator.

Q. Did you consider that question as to the position the Trusts & Guarantee would be in if the certificate was not issued? A. Yes, that was considered but not in connection with the specific money in the hands of the Receiver-General.

Q. What was it considered in relation to? A. It was considered in relation to the fact that the Trusts & Guarantee Company would be holder of these notes for value, and that each individual maker of those notes, or the promisor in the subscriptions which had been assigned to them would have to pay the then holder.

Q. Was that your view? A. That was my view.

Q. Was that your view under the provisions of the Bank Act which limited the rights of the provisional directors to taking subscriptions and receiving the money? A. I cannot say that I considered that in connection with the Bank Act at all.

Q. What was the phase of the matter that brought it to your consideration at all? A. The question of whether they could realize on the note if the certificate was not issued, and my view was that they could.

Q. Was your opinion asked formally about that? A. In discussion by Mr. Warren.

Q. In your instruction was that prior to the discussion about the Laidlaw writ? A. Yes.
Q. And your opinion was that as the notes were in the hands of the holder for value they could be collected irrespective of whether the certificate issued or not?  A. Yes.

Q. Quite apart from the question of whether the lender had notice of the circumstances?  A. I would think so, though that specific question was not put to me.

Q. You depended upon the value having been advanced?  A. Yes, and that the whole advance was going into the funds of the Farmers Bank and becoming part of the capital.

Q. Your view would be that when it was returned by the Receiver-General the Trusts & Guarantee Company would be entitled to part of that money?  A. I thought so; they might have to file their claim with the liquidators.

Q. I am speaking of the fact of going into operation, was that your view then, if it did go into operation?  A. If the certificates were issued?

Q. That the money would come back and pay you off?  A. No, on the contrary I had the impression wherever I got it, that the Trusts & Guarantee Company would hold those notes and would be paid as the man paid his notes. I did not know anything about they were going to get a bulk sum repayment.

Q. But the question then was confined to the possibility that the certificate would not be granted?  A. It would not be granted, and whether they could collect the note.

Q. Your client’s position with regard to that; you became solicitor of the bank after that?  A. After the organization meeting, I understand there is a resolution of the Board appointing my firm solicitors; the retainer itself was not fixed until the following June, if I recollect right.

Q. And after the passing of the resolution did you continue to act as solicitor of the bank?  A. Yes, we continued to act as solicitors of the bank, and I think we were solicitors down to the time of the suspension.

Q. Were the documents that were got in settling with the Laidlaw shareholders handed to you to advise as to what should be done?  A. No, I do not remember ever seeing them.

Q. Did the matter of those shares, or what had been done come before you at all up to the 27th November?  A. No, the provisional board were in authority until that time, it did not come at all.

Q. It did not come before you; you say the provisional board--?  A. The elected board would be elected at the meeting of the 26th November; until that time it would be the provisional directors that would have charge.

Q. The organization meeting then was after the issue of the certificate when the permanent directors were elected?  A. No, the certificate could not issue until after that meeting and the election of the directors.

Q. That is what I thought, it preceded the issue of the certificate?  A. Yes.

Q. Prior to the issue of the certificate you were acting as the solicitor of the bank?  A. That I could hardly say. I was acting under Mr. Travers’ instructions in preparing for the organization meeting, but I do not think there was any resolution appointing me until after the organization meeting.

Q. It may be in the other set of minutes then?  A. I should hardly think so; I had no communication at all with the provisional directors.

Q. I suppose you are aware of the resolution which was passed on the 8th October, directing the provisional directors to honor a power of attorney to Travers for the purpose of endorsing all notes?  A. I knew nothing of it.

Q. Did you prepare the by-laws that were passed at that meeting?  A. Of the 26th?

Q. Yes?  A. I assisted in the preparation of them.

Q. You think there was a resolution passed by the regular directors?  A. So I was informed.
Q. That I suppose is how you came to be consulted prior to the 27th November, with regard to the application for the issue of the certificate? A. No, I think I have already said that Mr. Travers asked me if I would act and prepare the papers, and I mentioned the matter to Mr. Warren, and he said he had no objection.

Q. You prepared the declaration which Mr. Travers swore to I think before you on the 27th? A. Will you let me see the declaration?

Q. I can show you a copy of it? A. My recollection is that I dictated the formal parts of that declaration to some stenographer in Mr. Travers' office, leaving blanks for him to fill in.

Q. I would like to know whether you prepared it? A. In that way I probably can be said to have prepared it.

Q. Prepared in your office? A. No, I think it was in Mr. Travers' office I dictated it.

Q. What had you to do with the preparation of it? A. I think I dictated the formal parts of that, leaving the blanks to be filled in.

Q. And he filled them in, you think, in his office? A. His stenographer did; he gave the information to the stenographer I suppose.

Q. Then it was—? A. It was declared before me in Mr. Travers' office if I recollect right.

Q. And I suppose after the blanks had all been filled in and completed? A. Certainly.

Q. Did you look at the exhibits that were then marked? A. I presume they may have passed through my hands, but I do not remember giving any examination of them.

Q. You did not inquire from Mr. Travers as to whether the gentlemen named as directors had agreed to take—? A. I knew nothing of that.

Q. You did not inquire from him? A. No; I probably in the dictation as I recollect would come to that point and then go on with my dictation and he would fill in the blank.

Q. There was a good deal set out in the prospectus. I want to know whether you had any knowledge of it? A. No, I had no knowledge at all.

Q. The list of subscribers, Exhibit D, what had you to do with that? A. With the actual list?

Q. Yes? A. With the list itself I had nothing to do.

Q. When did you see that first? A. I fancy when I marked it as the exhibit to that declaration.

Q. The first time you saw it? A. I think so.

Q. What had you to do in its preparation? A. The only thing I recollect is that the day after the organization meeting being in in connection with getting the papers ready for the application at Ottawa, and Mr. Travers introducing me to Mr. Fitzgibbon—I think Mr. Fitzgibbon came into the room, and Mr. Travers asked me to explain to Mr. Fitzgibbon the way in which he, Mr. Travers, had dealt with the note that was discounted.

Q. What note? A. A shareholder's note that was discounted with the Trusts & Guarantee Company. Mr. Fitzgibbon did not ask me any question, but I said as I understood the transaction, the note that had been given by the subscriber had been endorsed to Mr. Travers without recourse to the bank, that Mr. Travers had obtained a loan of the amount of the note, and that Mr. Travers was paying in that amount upon that subscriber's subscription, so that the effect of the transaction, as I understood it was, that as between the bank and the shareholder the bank admitted that the share was paid or part paid to the amount of the note, but as between the subscriber and Mr. Travers or the then holder of the note the subscriber was liable on his own personal obligation. That is what I said to Mr. Fitzgibbon.
Q. You just came in and Mr. Travers asked you to tell Fitzgibbon?  A. To explain what had been done.

Q. You must have known of course what had been done?  A. I knew that he was applying the monies, the proceeds of these notes upon the subscriptions, of course.

Q. How did you know that?  A. Mr. Travers told me he intended to do that.

Q. You are speaking of one individual note in this conversation?  A. Yes, that is as far as it went with Mr. Fitzgibbon.

Q. You are speaking of him of one individual note?  A. I was just taking the instance to make it clear to Mr. Fitzgibbon; I thought from what Mr. Travers said that Mr. Fitzgibbon wanted to know in what relation the bank would stand to that shareholder and in what relation that shareholder would stand to Mr. Travers who held the note.

Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon was interested in those legal questions?  A. I do not know if he was interested; he looked intelligent; he did not make any comment or ask me any questions.

Q. You must have had some conversation with Mr. Travers as to the subject before to be able to give that?  A. At the time of my first interview with Mr. Travers.

Q. Tell us what conversation you had with him which prompted this remark to Fitzgibbon?  A. I did not know I was going to be asked to meet Mr. Fitzgibbon.

Q. Tell us what had occurred previously that prompted this remark to Fitzgibbon when you were asked to give it?  A. I could not tell you that. Back in October when I first met Mr. Travers, Mr. Travers had explained to me how he proposed to apply the money he was obtaining?

Q. What was his explanation?  A. His explanation was just as I was repeating now, that he proposed to apply the money that he received in payment on the subscriber's share, and I asked him the question and brought out the answer from him that as between the bank and the shareholder the share would be either fully paid or part paid depending upon the amount, but as between the shareholder and the person who held his note, the shareholder would still be liable to pay his note.

Q. Would be liable to the Trusts & Guarantee Company?  A. Yes.

Q. It was with reference to discount there you were discussing?  A. Yes, I wanted to know how he was going to get this money into capital.

Q. You of course knew that $110,000 of notes had been pledged for an advance of $80,000?  A. No, my information was that there was $100,000 of notes and monies payable under subscriptions; I understood it covered both; I did not know that there were notes to the extent of $100,000.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You mean not to $110,000?  A. What I mean is that I did not know there were notes to the amount of $100,000. I thought the security from my information was notes and assignments of specific subscriptions and the monies payable under them were those subscriptions not represented by note.

Q. Notes to what amount?  A. I did not know how many notes, how many subscriptions.

MR. HODGINS: Do you mean to say then that neither from Travers nor from Warren did you learn the true transaction, the way in which it was being carried out?  A. I only know what I am saying and if the transaction is different as it appears to be then I did not know the true transaction; I was not brought in at the beginning of it.

Q. You do not appear to have got from Travers any distinct idea as to how many notes he was putting up, how many stock subscriptions, in what form they were being handed over, and the exact amount of money to be advanced?  A. $80,000 was the amount and $100,000 of security given.
Q. And in what form? A. I did not know how much of it was note and how much of it was assignment of subscriptions.

Q. Did you not know that from Travers? A. No.

Q. Did you in advising Mr. Warren's company ever ascertain exactly what had been done between Mr. Travers and the Trusts & Guarantee Company, to get this money? A. I had no discussion with Mr. Warren.

Q. Is that the position you occupied? A. Yes.

Q. That being solicitor for the Trusts & Guarantee Company— A. I was not solicitor for the Trusts & Guarantee Company generally.

Q. Being asked to advise Mr. Warren upon this transaction that you did not, either from Travers or Warren, get the exact details of what was being done? A. As I understood what Mr. Warren was asking me was whether he was getting proper title to these in that way; as to the amount, it was a matter of indifference to that question.

Q. You must have been in considerable haze as to the exact situation when you sat down to advise Mr. Travers on his application for the certificate? A. I did not advise on that, I knew it was being done; it was the only way in which it would become capital.

Q. When you went into the office and saw Fitzgibbon? A. I thought Fitzgibbon came into the room where Mr. Travers and I were.

Q. Had you the list with you? A. No, sir, I saw no list.

Q. What were you discussing? A. That is I say Mr. Travers asked me to explain to Mr. Fitzgibbon the relation in which the bank would stand to that shareholder whose note had been discounted and the proceeds applied.

Q. Did you know that the notes had been individually discounted and specific sums advanced by the Trusts & Guarantee Company against each specific note? A. No, I do not know that, and I do not think that was the case.

Q. How were you advising or giving an opinion to Mr. Fitzgibbon about the relation of one shareholder to Travers and one shareholder to the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. It appeared to me obvious that if Mr. Travers had applied upon the subscription the amount of his note, paying up that subscription—

Q. The face of the note? A. Yes, paying up that subscription, and had it so entered in the books of the bank, the bank could not afterwards say to that subscriber his share was unpaid; that seemed to me obvious.

Q. Now, you did not even know there was $100,000 of notes and did not know how much was made up by an assignment of the subscriptions? A. That is true, but I am told since that there was no assignment of subscriptions.

Q. How were you in a position to advise Mr. Fitzgibbon or anybody else that Mr. Travers had obtained upon any specific note the face value of that note and pretended to pay it upon the share? A. I did not think I was undertaking to advise Mr. Fitzgibbon, I was explaining the transaction as I understood had taken place between Mr. Travers and the Trusts & Guarantee Company and the bank.

Q. And you have already told us what knowledge you had to found that advice on? A. Yes.

Q. Although Mr. Travers and Mr. Fitzgibbon have told us that in addition to crediting certain amounts, which by the way did not pay the notes up in full, I am instructed at all in any case, they spread a number of payments as they call it on subscriptions on which nothing had been received, and they say that that was communicated to you and that you advised that that was all right? A. I do not understand that they put it precisely that way, but if anything was said to me it would be in this connection: there was more security given than the amount of the advance and it seemed to me it was open to Mr. Travers to apply so much of that advance upon part payment of any of these and not treat the whole of it as paid. He was giving more security than the advance he was getting.
Q. If so he would not have enough to go around? A. If he had the assignment of a subscription, $500, if he had the assignment of that, or that had been assigned to the Trusts & Guarantee Company, Mr. Travers could apply $100 and the first hundred that that man paid would belong to the Trusts & Guarantee Company.

Q. What about the balance? A. The balance would belong to the bank.

Q. Could Travers apply that on anything he liked? A. I do not think so.

Q. How far do you differ from these gentlemen who have spoken to your knowledge? A. You will have to tell me what they have said.

Q. Before we go through that your position is you understood and told Fitzgibbon that the money raised by Mr. Travers upon a note could be applied to pay that as between the bank and the subscribers up in full? A. Could be applied by Mr. Travers, could be paid in by Mr. Travers and the bank would have to give credit for it to the shareholder. It seemed to me in the result that the shareholder was in the position of having a share paid, but still owing his debt to a third party.

Q. Were you in the room and did you hear Mr. Fitzgibbon’s evidence? A. Part of it only.

Q. Mr. Travers says this; he was asked, “Did that $291,300 include the $100 you told me you borrowed?”—that $291,000 is the amount shown on the list as paid up? A. “Yes, that would include that.”

Q. So that then it would not be true they had not been paid? A. It had been paid by the subscribers themselves.

Q. “How did you fix that up, Mr. Travers, if I may put it that way, to put in that $100,000 where did you show it? A. We spread it over various subscribers who had not paid anything, but had given their notes.

Q. “To that extent it is not true? A. It is not true to that extent.

Q. “You say ‘we’, whom do you mean by we? A. I presume I was the most responsible one, but there were others that were assisting me.

Q. “Who were they? A. Dr. Nesbitt, J. G. Fitzgibbon and our solicitor Mr. Hunter.” Then a little lower down: “Did Dr. Nesbitt know they were false? A. He knew that we had used monies that I had borrowed to pad out the statement.

Q. “Did Fitzgibbon know? A. Fitzgibbon knew that.

Q. “Did Hunter know that? A. And Hunter knew it.” Then further down: “When you speak of spreading, what do you mean? A. We took the $80,000 and filled out opposite various names”.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I notice there he first speaks of $100,000; that is a mistake, is it not?

MR. HODGINS: No, because he borrowed not only $80,000 but also an additional amount.

Q. “Anything spread in that—the $100,000 spread in that one? A. The spreading was done in the other one I think.

Q. “When you speak of spreading, what do you mean? A. We took $80,000 and filled out opposite the various names.

Q. “Money they were supposed to have paid in cash? A. Exactly.

Q. “Did anybody know that was being done? A. I do not think it was known outside of the parties I have named.

Q. “That is which ones? A. That was Dr. Nesbitt, Mr. Fitzgibbon, Mr. Hunter and myself”.

Q. How far is that correct? A. That is correct to this extent, I knew that the $80,000 that was being obtained by Mr. Travers from the Trusts Company was reaching the capital stock as payments in for various shareholders, but as to what was paid on any one shareholder I had no means of knowing and never did know.

Q. Did you know that they were attributing to people who had not paid at all monies borrowed from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Not unless they had something of that subscriber that they had discounted.
Q. If they had his stock subscription?  A. If there was an assignment of the monies under a stock subscription I would consider it was perfectly open to Mr.
Travers to use part of the bulk sum he had obtained and apply it as part of that subscription.

Q. You and Fitzgibbon and Travers agree practically?  A. Except I do not wish it to be assumed that I was present and took part in the adjustment of the amounts. I knew that the capital when that transaction was finished included $80,000 of money that had been procured by Mr. Travers and paid in for the shareholders, and I understood he was going to do that at the time of my interview in the middle of October.

Q. I want to make it quite clear, you did know that the amount which was being raised was being applied partly on the outstanding liability of those who had given notes for it, and also upon the outstanding liability of those who had given no notes, but who had subscribed for stock?  A. I would not say that, but in each case I understood from what Mr. Travers said that they had money in their hands, which they were able to transfer from the lender, and that the proceeds of that was being applied, but as he was giving security in excess of the actual amount he was receiving he had the right to choose which he would pay in full and which he would only part pay.

Q. Then you do not vary very much?  A. I think that position was sound as a matter of law, as I understood the facts.

Q. Then you do not disagree with the statements they have made?  A. If that statement does not go farther than I have said we certainly do not disagree.

Q. The statement goes this far, that the application of those monies was not merely upon those whose notes we discounted, but also upon those subscriptions upon which nothing had been paid?  A. If there was an obligation in their hands that they had transferred to the lender.

Q. You have said you understood there were subscriptions transferred and notes. A. I understood there was an assignment of the monies payble under these subscriptions, but I did not understand what Mr. Fitzgibbon said this morning that in the case of particular subscriptions that had been taken after that date and cated back that there were monies applied out of this advance, I did not know that;
I understood it was applied in the case of existing subscriptions and where something had been placed in the hands of the lender which was available for the loan to collect from the subscriber.

Q. You limit yourself to those which had been transferred to the Trusts Company on the $80,000 loan?  A. Yes, on which the liability had been transferred to the Trusts Company such as they could collect.

Q. You would think that they had done what was perfectly proper?  A. As far as I knew at that time they did what was perfectly proper.

Q. I explained what they did?  A. If what Mr. Fitzgibbon said this morning they did do, then they did something that was improper.

Q. In what respect?  A. That in respect of certain subscriptions that were taken after the date of the transaction with the Trusts Company, dating these subscriptions back and applying a part of the proceeds of this advance to those specific subscriptions, I do not see what authority they would have to do it.

Q. You mean that was improper because it was after the time when you gave them that advice?  A. No, the lender had nothing in his hands to show the liability of these people to pay; there is where the hinge is.

Q. If the Trusts & Guarantee Company had an obligation from a shareholder on which he had not given a note and if that obligation were assigned you think it would be quite right to represent that to the Government as being a payment of part of the $250,000 under the Bank Act?  A. I do not like the question in that form; if you will allow me to answer with this qualification: it seemed to me that the section of the Bank Act was only concerned with the quantum of capital that was paid in, that they were not concerned with who paid it in.
Q. I did not understand from what you said that you had considered that section of the Bank Act?  A. Certainly I had considered that section of the Bank Act.

Q. You had given him an opinion?  A. No, I was talking that matter over with Mr. Warren, I was not advising Mr. Travers at that time.

Q. Did you give that as an opinion to Mr. Warren?  A. I said that that was my view of that section of the Act, that the Act was only concerned with the quantum that had reached capital account and was not withdrawable from the capital.

Q. I cannot ask you to construe an Act of Parliament, but would you mind if I read you that section, and then see if you are still of that opinion?  A. Yes.

Q. (Reads section of the Bank Act.) Do you think that “Thereof” had any significance?  A. It means of the capital bona fide subscribed.

Q. And was the money that they were spreading over these lists part of that $500,000 subscribed?  A. As I view it Mr. Travers had paid in for the amount of the subscriber’s obligation; then that certainly was paid in in respect of subscribed capital.

There is no other way in which it would become capital. It had to be received in respect of some shares of the subscribed capital to reach capital.

Q. Would you say Mr. Travers or anybody could put up a certain amount of money to get a certificate from the treasury and if he chose to say I apply this on A.B. or Mr. C.D. that satisfied the Bank Act?  A. That satisfied that section of the Bank Act.

Q. You would not see anything improper in getting a certificate that way?  A. I did not see anything improper; I thought that was all right.

Q. So that if Mr. Travers and Mr. Fitzgibbon acted in that way they have got your countenance?  A. Mr. Travers explained what he was going to do before he got that money; I could not see there was anything wrong in what he was proposing to do, as I understood the matter.

Q. And you had told Mr. Warren that?  A. I told Mr. Warren that, certainly.

Q. You went down with Mr. Travers to Ottawa?  A. Yes.

Q. Whom did you see in connection with the issue of the certificate?  A. Mr. Travers asked me to go down to argue this same proposition of law on that section if the question arose.

Q. Who with?  A. If the question arose to argue it with the Department of Justice. I told him the usual proceeding was, as I understood, if questions arose they were referred to the Department of Justice.

Q. Did you argue it with them?  A. I was not asked to. When I went down Mr. Travers and I walked up to the Department, that is the Finance Department and if I recollect right it was Mr. Ross we met, the chief clerk—I have forgotten whether he was chief clerk—Mr. Travers produced his papers and laid them down; Mr. Ross told him there could not be any meeting of the Treasury Board to consider this matter for four or five days at the earliest, so I said to Mr. Travers, “I will go back and I will come down again on a telegram.”

Q. What day did you get there?  A. It would be on the 28th I was there.

Q. Were you aware that Mr. Boville submitted all those papers to the Department of Justice that day?  A. No, I knew nothing of that.

Q. You were not asked to see him?  A. No.

Q. The question you had feared was not raised?  A. I could not say that I feared the question.

Q. That you anticipated?  A. Mr. Travers anticipated the question to be raised; and he asked me if I was prepared to argue it, and I said I was; and he asked me if I would go down and argue it if raised.

Q. What made you go and look over all the original subscriptions?  A. I think Mr. Fitzgibbon is wrong there; I do not think I looked over the original subscriptions, but I thought if I had to argue that thing that I would have to show substantively that this money that had been received from the Trusts & Guarantee Company had reached capital account, and the only way, as I say, in which it could reach capital account was that it be received in respect of shares subscribed, and I went in to see Mr. Fitzgibbon to say to him that in support of that argument when it came up we would probably have to produce the shareholders ledger, and I wanted to be assured by him that those amounts had been placed to the credit of the respective shares. I do not remember seeing the subscriptions at all.

Q. He says you went over the original subscriptions which are produced? A. I have no recollection of that. It would be the foundation that it had reached the shares.

Q. This sort of thing is what we showed to Mr. Fitzgibbon? A. I do not remember asking about that at all; it was the other matter that was present to my mind.

Q. What was the other matter? A. That the amount that had been borrowed by the discount of the notes had actually been placed to the credit of particular shares.

Q. Did not it strike you as somewhat peculiar you should do that when the very list that you and Mr. Travers took down contained that allocation? A. But in support of the argument it is altogether likely you would have to produce the original books of entry in which those were entered.

Q. And did you find that allocation made in the books that you saw with Mr. Fitzgibbon? A. He produced some book to me in which he showed me a column of figures and said that was it; I had no means of checking it up.

Q. What was the use of looking at it? A. I wanted to know it had been done.

Q. What was it? A. It would be one of those large books; I think this is the book. (Exhibit 20).

Q. Show me the columns? A. (Shows).

Q. Total payments? A. Yes.

Q. Would that be the column, the last column but one on the page that was filled in? A. That is what I think he showed me that included in respect of each of the shares upon which the proceeds, the discount had been applied included the amount to the credit of that share, and that it had reached capital account in other words.

Q. But would not it be of very great importance to you to know that payment had actually been made? A. I knew that payment had been made.

Q. How did you know the payment had been made? A. Because the proceeds of the money were in the hands of the Bank of Montreal.

Q. But that is arguing in a circle, that is assuming it had been made and was applied; you are here now looking at the book to see if that is so which had occurred before you went down? A. But you do not quite understand what I am at; they might have made a bulk entry in their books that so much had been received in respect of capital stock; that would not seem to me to satisfy the requirements; it must be received in respect of specific shares; no bulk entry would carry it.

Q. Do you say that that book—because we can compare it afterwards—do you say that that book is the book you relied upon and saw in November, 1906? A. That seems to me to be the book subject to what Mr. Fitzgibbon will say.

Q. Which column? A. The column of total payments.

Q. But that is total payments up to the time the bank failed.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Look further back on the other page. A. Is Mr. Fitzgibbon here?

MR. HODGINS: No. A. I think that is the book. (Exhibit 20.)

Q. Tell me the column you speak of? A. It would be the total payment column as of the date I looked at it.
Q. Take it there "L", this would be something around the time; but you notice here a date in 1907 on that first column on the second half of the page? A. I would have to ask Mr. Fitzgibbon what book he showed me; it looked like that book.

Mr. Commissioner: It is simple enough; these entries are made in 1907; that is the book as it was completed up to that time with those two first columns; the first two columns were the subscription payment and allotted.

Mr. Hodgins: There is one dated there in February, 1907.

Mr. Commissioner: As I understand he did not attempt to check all those. He was trying to ascertain whether that had been done, and Mr. Fitzgibbon produces this book and says "Here is the book which shows I have done it." A. That is so. I expected if the matter came up in that form they would have to produce what corresponded to their stock ledger to show that money had reached capital account.

Mr. Commissioner: You want this to be the book as an indication that that had been done, and the assurance of Mr. Fitzgibbon that it had been done throughout? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Did you get his assurance? A. He told me it had been done, and it looked to me that it had been done as far as I could tell.

Q. Did you compare the stock list that went down with the book at all? A. Not at all.

Q. Did you ask any one? A. No.

Q. Did you ask any one if the stock list down in Ottawa corresponded with the book? A. No; I assumed it did.

Q. Did you ask him? A. No.

Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon's letter is dated November 29th, that you had called to see, and had gone over all the applications and informed Mr. Fitzgibbon that they were all in first class shape—? A. I do not remember going over the applications at all.

Q. This is November 29th, and it was written the day you were in? A. Yes.

Q. Would not he probably be more correct? A. I do not know, I am speaking from my recollection that that is what I went in to see, and what seemed to me material to the case.

Q. Did you take any pains to see whether the shareholders, known as the Laidlaw shareholders had been included in that list? A. No, I did not know whether they were or not.

Q. You did not ask about it? A. But looking back upon it and reasoning I would expect they were, if that list speaks as of the date of the notice calling the meeting. I do not know as to what date the list speaks of, but if that is the governing date, it would include those.

Q. And properly so? A. I think so.

Q. Why? A. Because if the declaration or the list speak as of a date anterior to the row with Laidlaw's clients, it ought to include them.

Q. They ought to be represented as bona fide subscribers on the 27th November? A. If the governing date is the earlier date then it would not be the 27th November.

Q. That is they should be put in that declaration if the declaration set out that they were bona fide subscriptions on a certain date? A. If the governing date—and my recollection is that Mr. Travers was obstinate upon that point that the governing date was the date of the notice in the 'Gazette' calling the meeting of the 26th November; that would be one month prior.

Mr. Commissioner: The statement in the affidavit is, "On the 23rd day of October there had been actually bona fide subscribed."

Mr. Hodgins: That is what you mean? A. Yes, if that is the governing date. I disagreed with Mr. Travers there and I tried to argue with him and he was obstinate and he thought the Act spoke altogether as of the date when the notice started to run.

Q. Well, that is perfectly correct that he says on the 23rd October there had actually been bona fide subscribed $507,057 in shares—the list. Exhibit D we are discussing is said to be a list of the subscribers correctly setting forth as to each subscription, the name of the subscriber, his address, the number of shares subscribed for by him, the amount of such shares, the amount paid thereon. Each of said subscriptions is a bona fide subscription to the capital stock of the said bank?

A. Again speaking of that governing date.

Q. It does not speak of the governing date, it speaks of the date of the declaration?  A. Is the list dated?

Q. No, it does not appear to be. You were only the one day in Ottawa?  A. Yes, I expected to go back again.

Q. Had you occasion to advise Mr. Travers while there upon the subject?  A. Of this?

Q. Yes?  A. No; the talk we had had was the day before.

Q. In Ottawa you did not have to advise him at all?  A. No.

Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon’s letter refers to those three cheques that were sent down; do you remember what Mr. Travers said about that?  A. I was trying to recollect; it runs in my mind that he had, when he got through in Ottawa, to go down to Montreal on some business; I think there was some mix-up about a lease that some agent had taken for the bank, and he had not the money with him for what he would do in Montreal, and he told me when I was in seeing them, to tell them to send him down some cheques, whether it was one, two or more, I do not know, but I did not know what the purpose of the cheques was.

Q. You had no part in connection with the issue of the certificate; you did not go back to Ottawa?  A. The first I heard was the certificate had issued.

Q. You heard that from Travers?  A. I think Mr. Travers telegraphed his office.

Q. And then he came up here?  A. Yes, but I think he came by way of Montreal; it was some days afterwards and then I saw him.

Q. Did you learn from him that the Minister had pointedly asked him whether the money had been borrowed?  A. No, I am almost certain that that did not come out. What Mr. Travers told me was a matter that was rather different. He said he had got a good introduction to Mr. Fielding, that he had produced to Mr. Fielding his testimonials as a banker, that Mr. Fielding expressed himself as pleased to find the affairs of the bank were in the hands of an old and experienced banker, and Mr. Travers said to me that he had his Treasury certificate in twenty minutes after his interview with Mr. Fielding, and that that was the ground of the decision, the affairs of the bank were in good hands.

Q. What Mr. Fielding wrote Mr. Travers I will read to you: “We have been told that in some cases the subscribers did not actually pay in cash but gave notes to the provisional directors which were used to raise the money....I shall be glad to have an assurance that nothing of the kind has taken place in relation to the subscriptions for the Farmers Bank, but that the amounts set forth in the application as having been paid up have in every place been bona fide cash payments.”  A. The first I knew of that was when the papers were produced in the House.

Q. Mr. Travers never told you at all?  A. No.

Q. And his answer would be written in the light of the conversation with what he knew you had done, and the conversation with you as you told us advising him?  A. I do not see how he could answer that on any advice I gave him, because my advice was to argue the law.

Q. He got rid of you?  A. No, I do not think he got rid of me, I think he expected me back, but it looks to me as if he took the line of least resistance when the thing came up.
Q. He said he got it in twenty minutes? A. That is what he told me, after he had the interview with Mr. Fielding he had his certificate in twenty minutes; that the point Mr. Fielding was making—Mr. Travers had shown me previously some of these letters, a testimonial from the General Manager of the Merchants Bank, and some others, I have forgotten whom, as to his long and successful experience as a banker; and what seemed to be troubling Mr. Fielding according to the way Mr. Travers spoke to me was that the affairs of the bank might be in the hands of a man who was not a banker, and therefore would give the Government trouble sooner or later, and his anxiety was relieved,—I think those are the words Mr. Travers used in quoting Mr. Fielding—that his anxiety was relieved when he found out the affairs of the bank would be in the hands of an old and experienced banker.

Q. Did he mention what introduction he had had? A. Yes.

Q. What did he say? A. He said, the chief Liberal Whip had introduced him.

Q. Did he draw any money when you were down there? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you know as to any of the subscriptions said to be ante-dated; you have confined your evidence so far to the $50,000 loan? A. Yes.

Q. There was subsequent to that from the Trusts & Guarantee Company a $20,000 loan? A. I did not know that until after the suspension.

Q. You were not consulted in any way? A. Not consulted at all with regard to that.

Q. You did not know, did you, about these subsequent subscriptions? A. No, and I heard some evidence this morning that I can hardly agree with.

Q. What is that? A. That is as to a $50,000 subscription of Lindsay’s; my recollection is that at my first interview with Mr. Travers that I came across that subscription in looking through the subscriptions and asked him about it.

Q. What did he say about it? A. He said first of all that he had at that time subscriptions to the amount of five hundred and sixty odd thousand dollars and that that fifty thousand dollars was not part of the five hundred thousand dollars needed under the Act, and then he explained that subscription that Mr. Lindsay had been canvassing various people whom he had been unable to close with, but had promised stock at par, and he was subscribing for $50,000 to be able to carry out the promises he had made, and that in any event the first installment upon the subscription would be paid, because the bank were going to be owing him considerable sums of money for commission; so that my recollection is that that $50,000 was in at the time I saw that subscription, about the middle of October.

Q. You see the subscription dated the 22nd October? A. Again that subscription would have been dated after the time I saw it, if that is the subscription I saw; but I have a distinct recollection of discussing a Lindsay subscription for that amount with Mr. Travers in his office on King St.

Q. He may have had the document; was it in application form? A. An application.

Q. He may have had that and not put it in, not intended to use it? A. I do not know about that. It was on the letter file of the subscriptions, because that was the large subscription and that is the one I asked about.

Q. You think it was before the 22nd October? A. My interview would be before the 22nd October; that is correctly dated the 22nd October, I could not have seen it when I was in Travers office.

Q. Look at it and see? A. Yes, this is dated October 22nd.

Q. Is that the one you saw? A. That I cannot say; I do not think I could have seen that one on the day I am speaking of.

Q. Was the one you saw dated? A. That I cannot say; I think I remember clearly the amount 500 shares, but I do not remember anything else because it would be a matter of considerable importance to me at that time if there was a subscription of $50,000 to be counted to make up the $500,000.

Q. Why would it be important? A. Because the basis of it was $500,000 subscribed, and $50,000 by a stock solicitor might not be assumed to be bona fide subscribed.

Q. That was your impression? A. Yes, I wanted to know something about his means and why he was subscribing.

Q. Did you inquire about his means? A. From Mr. Travers and Mr. Travers said the first installment, the commissions that the bank would be owing him would answer the first installment.

Q. He did not go further as to that? A. No, but then he went on and made the explanation that there were parties to whom Lindsay wished to be able still to transfer some shares at par.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Do you happen to know any special reason why you were retained by the Trusts & Guarantee Company in this transaction? A. I hardly looked upon it, sir, as a retainer by the Trusts & Guarantee Company. Mr. Warren and I had discussed a like transaction that had taken place in connection with an insurance company some time before.

Q. You think that is the reason? A. Yes.

Q. It had nothing to do with your connection or supposed connection with the Farmers Bank? A. I had no connection with the Farmers Bank.

Q. Any connection or supposed connection you had with the Farmers Bank—it had not? A. He knew I had no connection with that.

Q. I do not quite understand how you work out the idea that nobody would be hurt; it would be impossible for anybody to be hurt by the transaction that was entered into in the way in which the credits were given. Supposing a man that had given his note for $1,000 had got credit for $500 on his own transaction and $500 had gone to the credit of John Smith who was not worth a brass farthing, how would he be helped when he was called upon to pay the balance of his note after he had paid his $1,000 to you, where would he be as to your clients? A. I looked upon it my people were advancing only $500 of the $1,000 in the first instance.

Q. I am not talking about security of the lender; I am talking about the fairness to the subscribers; one subscriber has given his note for $1,000, money is borrowed upon that, half of the money attributable to that note is applied in payment of his stock, the other half is applied in payment of stock of somebody else who has paid nothing? A. I did not understand the transaction was taking that shape; I understood that where the whole amount was not applied that the lender was only loaning the amount that was applied on that particular note.

Q. I thought it was a bulk loan upon all the notes? A. It was a bulk loan but it would have to be distributed; for example, if in the case you quote, the man had given his note for $1,000 and only received credit for $500 in my view the Trusts & Guarantee Company could only collect the $500; they held security in excess of the amount of their loan.

Q. I thought the idea was that the Trusts & Guarantee Company were bona fide holders for value of these notes and could collect the full amount; it seemed to me there would be a difficulty there? A. In practice that ought to have been solved with Mr. Travers filing with the Trusts & Guarantee Company the amounts he had appropriated to the particular shares, and the share certificates should have been lodged there, showing the amounts paid, and as the man came in to the Trusts & Guarantee Company he should have had the obligation handed back and the share certificate.

Q. The Trusts & Guarantee Company had not very much security if they had simply the subscription for the stock, had they? Supposing the bank had not gone on? A. I think: the promise to pay could be collected; it could be collected by a liquidator.
Q. Collected by the bank?  A. It could be collected by the liquidator of the bank.

Q. Don't you think Mr. Travers, when he was putting in the hands of the Minister a declaration that on the 23rd October there was so much bona fide subscribed and so much actually paid, ought as an honest man to have communicated to the Minister the fact that with regard to 210 or 219 shares these shares had been practically repudiated and the bank had recognized the right to repudiate—did not that look like a dishonest transaction?  A. I would not like to characterize it as dishonest.

Q. If a man had thought about it, would not he have thought it his duty to have communicated?  A. The Finance Department according to all I have seen since had the whole correspondence with Mr. Laidlaw in their office at that time.

Q. All that was said by Mr. McCarthy in withdrawing his protest was that his clients had been settled with; there was nothing to indicate that they had been bought off—not using that in any offensive sense—that they had been settled with by taking the stock off their hands?  A. It would have been better at the end of the share list to have added the note that as to 219 shares they would be in the hands of other holders.

Q. Had you any acquaintance with Mr. Travers before you came into communication with him about this bank?  A. No communication at all, no knowledge of him.

MR. HODGINS: There is evidence that was given—I do not know that it was of very much importance, but it was given by Mr. Hughes Charles of Montreal. It is in reference to a conversation he had with Mr. Stratton. I do not know whether to bring him here or not, because it is only as to a sentence, a short conversation, and I do not know whether you would care to use the evidence that he has already given. If so I can put that in.

MR. COMMISSIONER: How is that relevant, a statement of something that Mr. Stratton may have said?

MR. HODGINS: It will have its relevancy when we come to investigate the Trust & Guarantee Company.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You had better wait till we reach that. Is Mr. Stratton to be called?

MR. HODGINS: Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It would be better to examine Mr. Stratton about it and put it in in contradiction if necessary.

MR. HODGINS: Would there be any objection to putting it in and reading his evidence; or would you rather have Mr. Charles here?

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not think there is any objection. When Mr. Stratton is examined, if he has any view about it that he would prefer to have him here, we can deal with it then.

MR. HODGINS: I will mention it again before putting it in.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not see any object in bringing him here.

MR. HODGINS: However, I would rather, I think, mention it afterwards.

The Commission adjourned at 4 P.M. to 11 A.M. tomorrow, March 21st, 1912.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

The Commission resumed at 11 A.M. March 21st, 1912, at Osgoode Hall.

PRESENT:

THE COMMISSIONER, Hon. Sir William Meredith.
FRANK E. HODGINS, K.C. and J. THOMPSON, K.C.
I. E. WELDON.

ARTHUR R. SHAVER, Sworn, examined by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. What was your position in the Farmers Bank? A. Transfer Clerk.

Q. What banking experience had you? A. None prior to that.

Q. When did you join the Bank staff? A. About the end of October, 1906.

Q. Employed by Travers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What had you been doing before that? A. Accountancy.

Q. Then you were familiar with figures at all events? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did the writing out of cheques, didn’t you? A. For a short time.

Q. For how long? A. A few weeks.

Q. Beginning about when? A. Just about the time I speak of until the organization.

Q. The organization meeting? A. Yes.

Q. It would be about a month? A. Yes, something like that.

Q. You kept this cheque book and wrote out the cheques in it? A. For the most part, yes.

Q. Do you remember three blank cheques being torn out and sent to Travers? A. I recall it now.

Q. Just look through and see if you can tell where those were taken from? A. No, I cannot trace them.

Q. Look at the cheque I show you, number 23, do you find that? A. Yes.

Q. What do you find that to be for? A. Here it is expenses W. R. Travers and W. H. Hunter to Ottawa and Montreal re Treasury Certificates $100.

Q. Is that the cheque corresponding to it? A. That should be, yes.

Q. Is it in your handwriting? A. Yes.

Q. Would the three cheques be after that? A. I could not say.

Q. What do you remember about it? A. I don’t remember anything about it.

Q. You see the stubs are written in your handwriting? A. Yes, very likely afterwards.

Q. Quite probably; that would tell you something about it; you see the stub of number 25 has the date altered and the stub of number 26 has the name altered; can you tell at all which were the three cheques? A. I would not think 25 was; that is a local cheque for salaries.

Q. Why was the date changed on that? A. I could not say.

Q. Have you looked at the cheque? A. No.

Q. Take the next number, number 26, that was formerly drawn to one McCorquodale.

Q. Have you any recollection of that? A. No.

Q. Who was McCorquodale? A. He sold some stock for the Provisional Directors.

Q. Why is it changed to Guthrie & Pringle? A. I could not say.

Q. In whose handwriting is the change made? A. Mine.

Q. Take the next cheque No. 27, marked “Cancelled,” is there any explanation at all of that, do you know anything about it, why is it marked “Cancelled”? A. I could not say.

Q. You have no memory at all? A. I cannot recall.
Q. You are the man in charge of that book, who did all the writing in it?
A. Yes, most of it.
Q. The next cheque is December 4th, $10? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And at the bottom, cheque 30 is also marked "Cancelled"; you can throw no light on it at the present time? A. I cannot recall why those things were done.
Q. Perhaps before you go you will look at the cheques which are in and compare them with the book; I will perhaps speak to you about it later on; did you know C. H. Smith? A. Yes.
Q. And do you know anything about the terms of the settlement with Smith?
A. Nothing.
Q. What had you to do with the matter? A. Nothing.
Q. Nothing at all, not even carrying out instructions as to his payment? A. Well, I heard afterwards; I handed him money on only one occasion, and I heard afterwards there was a settlement of some sort, but at the time I knew nothing about it.
Q. On whose instructions? A. Mr. Travers.
Q. What instructions did he give you? A. None, further than what I have said.
Q. What were they? A. As I said to hand that to Mr. Smith.
Q. You knew Mr. Smith? A. Yes.
Q. And did you take the cheque and get the money? A. Yes.
Q. You had taken the cheque and cashed it, had you? A. Yes.
Q. Can you find it in the book; how long after Travers came back from Ottawa was it? A. I cannot say.
Q. Is this the stub, on the 19th December? A. Yes, that is it.
Q. That is $1,800; is that the date you gave it to Smith? A. I gave it to Smith immediately upon cashing it; I could not swear to that.
Q. Travers endorsed it and you drew the money? A. I drew the money.
Q. Farmers Bank circulation I suppose? A. No, sir, there was no circulation at that time; the Farmers Bank was not opened; I went down to the Traders Bank and I got this money and I walked down from the Traders Bank into the elevator and I met Mr. Smith and I handed him the money.
Q. What was the reason of handing the money instead of the cheque? A. I do not know.
Q. Did Smith give you anything? A. He gave me nothing.
Q. He did not return an I.O.U.? A. No; any more than he said he expected this.
Q. You did not know what it was for? A. No.
Q. What is the number of that cheque? A. 52.
Q. Is that the cheque (Part of Exhibit 8)? A. Yes.
Q. Endorsed by you? A. Yes.
Q. How was that $1,800 charged up, was it to Commission Account? A. I think so.
Q. Yes, I see that is charged to Commission Account in the ledger; the only thing I want to ask you about this morning is certain cheques that were given to Mitchell; do you remember those cheques? A. Yes, Mitchell is a broker.
Q. What cheques did you take over to him? A. I did not take over any cheques to him; I drew out some cheques to his order.
Q. I suppose you cannot remember the amounts of those cheques? A. Not off hand, no.
Q. Were they large cheques? A. Yes.
Q. How many were there all told? A. Two I think, certainly not more than three.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You drew them up and what did you do with them?  A. I gave them to Mr. Travers.
Q. Did he instruct you as to why he wanted them?  A. No, simply asked me to draw them.
Q. Is that all you had to do with it?  A. Yes.
Q. Did you see corresponding cheques given back from Mitchell?  A. No.

Mr. Hodgins: That is all in the meantime.

Mr. Commissioner: Would these cheques go into your Cash Book?  A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: You could probably turn up your Cash Book about McCorquodale; perhaps there will be some explanation of that; you may have paid him cash.

Mr. Hodgins: You might look at the Cash Book and look at the cheques in the meantime.

_________________________________________________

WILLIAM J. LINDSAY, Sworn, examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. You are described as a stock seller in the papers I have, would that be right?  A. Yes, sir, at times.
Q. How long have you followed that occupation?  A. Occasionally for the last ten years thereabouts.
Q. Previous to this had you been getting up insurance companies?  A. No, sir.
Q. Subsequent to this?  A. No, in a retail dry goods and travelling.
Q. Subsequent to getting up subscriptions for the Farmers Bank you had been in retail dry goods?  A. I had promoted another company in the interval, sold stock for another previous to that.
Q. I am asking you if before you promoted the Farmers Bank you were getting up an insurance company?  A. No, sir.
Q. Was that afterwards?  A. No, sir.
Q. Never had anything to do with the promotion of an insurance company?  A. No, sir.
Q. How long before you started with the Farmers Bank had you been selling stock?  A. Possibly for three years.

Mr. Commissioner: I thought you said ten?  A. Three years, and since the Farmers Bank would be just about ten.

Mr. Hodgins: You have been a stock seller ever since you started three years before the Farmers Bank matter?  A. Yes.
Q. You kept it up ever since?  A. Yes.
Q. And of course you knew Travers?  A. At the time, yes, I had known of him; I never met him until November prior to the time that he entered in the Bank; I had known of him.
Q. Can you give me the date and the year you are speaking of?  A. November or December, 1905.
Q. You and he were boarding together?  A. Yes, he came in from Winnipeg, he drifted in there.
Q. You were talking of your abilities as a stock seller?  A. No.
Q. At all events you undertook to sell stock, did you?  A. When?
Q. At the time when you met Mr. Travers?  A. Not when I first met him; we had been in the boarding house for five or six months before anything was done.
Q. Would that bring you to the summer of 1906?  A. No, some time in March or April, the beginning of April.
Q. Then at all events you made the arrangement you were going to get stock taken up for the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.
Q. The commissions you got all told amounted to over $25,000 according to the books of the bank? A. No, sir, I did not.
Q. How much will you admit you got? A. That is altogether from the time that I started to sell until the time I quit?
Q. Yes; I said your commissions as found in the books of the banks amounted to somewhere around $25,000? A. Somewhere around $21,000 as near as I can recollect.
Q. That would be 10%? A. No, sir.
Q. On the par value of the subscription? A. No, sir.
Q. What would it be? A. Up to the time the bank was organized I do not think I cleared quite 3 1-2%.
Q. Who did you divide it up with? A. Travers.
Q. Did he get half of all the commissions? A. He got a good deal more than half; he had full control.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Half of this $21,000? A. No, sir, altogether.
Q. He got half the commissions you earned? A. No, sir. Before the Bank was organized I was supposed to get half the commissions; after the organization I got 10%, $10 per share on the stock sold at 125.
MR. HODGINS: Prior to the organization were you dividing up with anybody?
A. Yes.
Q. Who? A. With Travers.
Q. After the organization were you dividing up? A. No, sir.
Q. Was there 10 per cent. prior to organization, so that you would get five and Travers five? A. He had a contract for 10 per cent.; he made a contract with me for 10 per cent., which he afterwards side-stepped, and said that was not the understanding.
Q. What was the arrangement, did you get 10 per cent. and divide half with Travers, was that the arrangement, according to your idea? A. No, I did not; I was only to get half.
Q. Of what? A. Of what he was getting after the expenses had been deducted.
Q. The expenses were your expenses, you mean? A. Yes, and he also put in his expenses.
Q. That is travelling and so on to get stock subscribed? A. Yes.
Q. When you say over $21,000 is that what you got yourself? A. About that amount, as near as I can remember.
Q. And that amount you did not divide up with anybody, that was your share? A. A portion of that I had to divide with sub-agents again.
Q. But that was your own look-out? A. No, that was not my own look-out; that should have been deducted out of the whole; that should have been part of the expenses.
Q. That was your contention anyway; but what I want to get at is the $21,000 was what you got personally and was not subject to division with Travers? A. No.
Q. Although you had to give some to your sub-agents? A. Yes, and my expenses were to be taken out of that $21,000; and they were very heavy.
Q. How much would that amount to? A. My expenses, I don't know; the first trip I went to England it cost me probably between $1,000 and $1,500, and the second trip——
Q. Have you ever made up what your expenses were? A. My expenses were around $5,000.
Q. Did you ever make them up? A. It was made up in the suit that is now pending——
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Of Lindsay v. Farmers Bank and W. R. Travers?

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Your expenses were about $5,000? A. Between $1,000 and $5,000.

Q. Without the sub-agents? A. Yes.

Mr. HODGINS: You don't mean you paid out four or five thousand dollars apart from what you paid your sub-agents? A. You cannot go to England and spend six months there——

Q. If you say so? A. As far as I can remember.

Q. You say you spent $5,000 apart from what you paid your sub-agents? A.

Somewhere around those figures.

Q. Have you any way in which you can verify that? A. In the brief I presume it is there still.

Q. That is in the brief in the Lindsay suit against the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.

Q. And that was made up from something you supplied? A. Yes. I do not know whether that is on file in the solicitor's office or not.

Q. You will get that? A. I will try to.

Q. You were out selling stock from about March, 1906, till the close of 1906 on down to the organization? A. Yes.

Q. And bringing in the subscriptions? A. The greater part of the time.

Q. Travelling all over? A. Yes.

Q. And of course you know there was a great deal of dissatisfaction with a great many of your subscriptions? A. Yes, after the Ontario Bank failed.

Q. You give us that date, that is the first objection to your subscriptions? A. Largely so, as far as I was concerned, yes.

Q. Had you been successful towards, say October, 1906, in getting the full amount of the Bank's capital? A. In September the 15th or the 18th, according to Mr. Travers' statement there was $485,000 subscribed.

Q. That was a letter from him? A. Yes.

Q. And that gives us a pretty good date to start from? A. That is only speaking from memory as to date.

Q. Have you looked up your letters recently? A. Not since last November.

Q. You have a pretty good memory? A. It was fairly well impressed on my memory at that time.

Q. That is his letter to you (letter of the 24th September)? A. Yes, $489,000.

Letter 24th September from W. R. Travers to W. J. Lindsay filed as Exhibit 22.

Q. So that on the 24th September there was registered and allotted stock to the amount of $489,500, and "there is only $10,500 that we can now sell at par so if any of your friends out there would like to obtain a few shares of the stock they will have to do so quickly. We are making a great effort to put up our Government deposit next week and a little generosity on the part of our subscribers will enable us to do so. If you can induce some of the people out there to pay up to the extent of fifteen to twenty thousand dollars I will guaranteed that the Government deposit will be made next week and we will have an office of the Farmers Bank open and doing business in Milton thirty days thereafter." He speaks of your friends out there, are you a County of Halton man? A. I was working out there at that time.

Q. That does not answer the question? A. That is as far as I was associated out there, the work I had done out there.

Q. Your friends there, who was he alluding to? A. I had made a great many friends out there.

Q. Selling stock? A. Yes; I had as much as five and six and seven of them at the foot of the stairs before eight o'clock in the morning; before I was out of bed in the morning waiting to subscribe for stock.
Q. Waiting to subscribe for stock? A. There was one morning I took $15,000 before I had breakfast.

Q. What time did you breakfast that morning? A. About 10.30.

Q. I thought a stock seller had much more difficulty? A. After the second week the smallest week I had was $18,000 or $20,000.

Q. What time was that? A. It was May, June and July.

Q. In September they were cooling off a bit? A. Yes.

Q. You were breakfasting earlier then. In consequence of that letter what did you do? A. I was selling stock and getting the subscriptions.

Q. You kept on selling stock and getting subscriptions? A. Yes.

Q. How many did you get between that date and the 22nd October? A. I could not say.

Q. Where will we find that, in the books of the Bank? A. I don’t know.

Q. Did you hand in the subscriptions on printed form? A. Yes.

Q. And you always initialled them? A. No.

Q. Did you keep a list? A. No.

Q. How would you know what you were to get commission on? A. That would be an easy matter in the Bank.

Q. Explain how if you did not keep a list, how would you expect to find out what your commission amounted to? A. The books of the Bank would show.

Q. We have to look at the books of the Bank to see? A. Yes.

Q. Is that your sole record? A. Yes.

Q. You were pretty familiar with these subscriptions? A. No, I am not any further than when I obtained them and handed them in, I do not think I ever had the opportunity of seeing them scarcely.

Q. You were familiar with the terms on which all your subscriptions were made? A. Oh, yes.

Q. And the representations made to the people? A. Yes.

Q. You had occasion some time later to examine the list of subscribers, had you not? A. No, sir.

Q. Or the list of stockholders, which was it? A. You mean when the suit was pending?

Q. I don’t mean to give you any date at all. I want to know if you can remember that you ever did examine the list of shareholders? A. No.

Q. Just look at this letter, it is a copy of a letter, perhaps you will say that is a copy of one of your letters to Mr. Travers, November 13th, 1907. A. Yes.

Letter November 13th, 1907, filed as Exhibits 23.

Q. It says: “Dear Mr. Travers: I find on looking over Bank blue book that you have included therein several names that are not or should not be on the list as shareholders. Is this not a most serious violation? You have to sign such I would say as being correct, it looks and listens like as though you were taking a chance. Pardon me for making any reference to this, as you can rightly say it is none of my business; so therefore I apologize. Yours truly, W. J. Lindsay.” That is your letter; what was the Bank blue book you looked at? A. Published by the Government.

Q. Up to what time would that show the list of shareholders? A. I do not remember just up to what time.

Q. Would it not be the 31st December, 1906? A. I presume it would.

Q. Who were the shareholders you alluded to in that letter?

MR. COMMISSIONER: You had better get that Blue Book.

MR. HODGINS: To what subscribers did you refer when you said he was taking a chance? A. There were two subscriptions over in Flint, Michigan, that were only conditional subscriptions.

Q. Give me their names? A. Matthew Davidson and Flint P. Smith.

Q. Amounting to how much? A. $5,000 each.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You say those were the ones you referred to? A. Those were the ones, yes.

Q. The only ones? A. I don’t remember; I think there is a possibility that those were the only ones that I remember; those are two that I knew were conditional.

Q. You do not say so in the letter? A. No.

Q. “Several names,” you say? A. Yes.

Q. That would mean more than two? A. Yes, it might; several might be two and might be more.

Q. Which did it mean? A. I was only speaking in a general way there.

Q. What does it mean? A. I could not say.

Q. “Is this not a most serious violation,” can you tell me what led you to use that expression? A. I understood in furnishing a list of names to the Government that a man had to make an affidavit to it, and he was sworn to it, that was all.

Q. What was the occasion of your writing this letter to him? A. He had said something about these two names, and I looked it up and I found they were—well I don’t know exactly what brought it about. I did not know that I had it; I did not remember having written that letter until I was going through my files last year.

Q. This was produced at your trial? A. Yes.

Q. You knew all about it from then on? A. Yes, I did not know until Mat Cameron had uncovered it in my papers.

Q. You throw no light on this deal except as to the two names? A. Those are the two I remember of.

Q. What happened after that letter telling him he took a chance, what arrangement did you make with Mr. Travers? A. I do not remember of anything ever having been said about it.

Q. He never replied? A. I never got a reply scarcely from him.

Q. How long did you continue selling stock after that? A. For two months or three months.

Q. And you made no new arrangement in consequence of that letter? A. As far as that was concerned it was past and gone.

Q. You made no new arrangement subsequent to November 13th, 1907? A. No. That may have come out—I don’t know what was the cause of it.

Q. Look at this letter dated the year before, December 7th, 1906, did you get that letter from Travers? A. Yes.

Letter December 7th, 1906, from Travers to Lindsay filed as EXHIBIT 24.

Q. In that letter of December 7th, 1906, he says: “At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Bank held on the 26th November last a resolution was passed placing the balance of the stock of this Bank up to a million dollars in your hands for sale at a premium of 25%. It was understood, of course, that a certain amount of stock now on our books which has to be replaced, could be done so by you at par. You are to be allowed $10 per share for selling it payable on payment of the 25% premium.” What stock was that? A. I don’t know.

Q. He says it was understood that a certain amount of stock now on our books which has to be replaced could be done so by you at par? A. That was not understood by me.

Q. Did you act under this letter? A. Yes, but I did not sell any at par.

Q. Did you act under this letter? A. Yes, but I say I sold no stock at par.

Q. You sold no stock at par after that, after December 7th? A. No.

Q. The books won’t show that? A. I don’t think so; there were ten shares that I took a subscription for in Strathroy, if I remember correctly, which never was filed for some reason or other, I don’t know what the cause of it was.

Q. What was the name of the man? A. Bulley or Wolley, I don’t remember.

Q. You did not understand that reference in the letter to the stock which had to be replaced? A. I never paid any attention to it, never took it up with him.
Q. You never enquired what it meant? A. No, and I never sold any stock at par.
Q. Why did not you enquire when he said it had to be replaced, why did not you find out what he meant? A. That letter I got it and I lost it, it was misplaced until the fall of 1908 or 1909.
Q. Your statement is that you did not understand or that you did not speak to him about it, and that you did not act on it? A. Selling stock at par, no.
Q. Replacing certain other stock? A. No.
Q. Had it any reference to certain shares, what we may call Mr. Laidlaw's subscriptions? A. That I do not know.
Q. Perhaps you took care not to enquire? A. I never made any enquiry.
Q. Had it any connection with the letter that you wrote a year afterwards, on November 13th, saying you had seen it in the Blue Book? A. I could not say.
Q. Is that the best answer you can make? A. Yes; I had no recollection of what really brought about the writing of that letter until, as I tell you, some time in 1908 when it was resurrected out of my papers.
Q. You mean you found out since what was the cause of it? A. No, I found the copy of the letter.
Q. You do not suppose Travers would write to you to replace stock which you had not had subscribed; the letter looks to me as if it was some of your own stock, some stock for which you had obtained subscriptions that was being replaced? A. In that letter it may possibly have been in connection with my subscription of $50,000 of stock which I subscribed for, as I had one man who afterwards became a Director and who was going to take $30,000 or $40,000, and I said I would endeavor to retain that for him so that he could get it at par; he had not made his financial arrangements whereby he could finance $50,000 or $40,000, but he said he would take it and become a Director of the Bank as soon as he could straighten himself away.
Q. Who was that man? A. Mr. Menzie.
Q. You naturally must have understood that letter? A. Unless it was referring to that.
Q. I don’t want you to guess at it? A. I am not guessing, and I am not saying the actual facts; I may have read it over and passed it up with that in my mind, because I never saw the letter again until away along in 1908.
Q. Are you saying now that that is what that letter refers to? A. I could not say.
Q. This appears to be the Blue Book; will you look at that list and tell us what names you noticed in it? A. This is not the Blue Book; is there not another Blue Book than this?
Q. You know when the Bank was organized? A. Yes, 1906.
Q. Do you find those, what are called the Laidlaw Shareholders on that list? A. There is one there.
Q. That is Smith, of Flint, you are referring to? A. Yes. You want to know now if I find the Laidlaw ones?
Q. Yes? A. I don’t remember the names.
MR. COMMISSIONER: They do not appear to be here, and I think one of the witnesses said they were not in this.
MR. HODGINS: You do not find what we know as the Laidlaw Shareholders there? A. No, the Flint people are there.
Q. It could not be in reference to the Laidlaw Shareholders? A. No; apparently the Flint people.
Q. Those had been got out of the way before that? A. I could not say.
Q. Did you know anything about them? A. No, sir.
Q. You did not know anything that had been done with it? A. No, sir.
Q. You spoke of that letter possibly having reference to Mr. Menzie’s subscription? A. To my own subscription.
Q. You were giving an account of your own subscription? A. Yes.
Q. How much was Menzie going to take up? A. He was going to take up thirty or forty thousand dollars; he afterwards took up forty thousand dollars and paid for it in full.
Q. Who was Menzie? A. A gentleman who resides here in the city.
Q. What was his business at that time? A. The Menzie Wall Paper Company.
Q. He failed disastrously shortly afterwards, did not he? A. I could not say.
Q. This, I suppose, is your subscription? A. Yes, 500 shares.
W. J. Lindsay’s subscription for 500 shares filed as Exhibit 25.
Q. You do not pretend you were able to pay that stock up in full? A. If everything had gone along all right, but I did not take it with the object of paying it up in full; I took it with the object that Mr. Menzie assured me he would come in for thirty or forty thousand, and out of my commissions I could quite easily afford to handle the whole ten or fifteen thousand myself.
Q. You know the date of it? A. Yes, I see when it is dated there.
Q. When was it signed? A. It was signed about September or first October when I made arrangements with Mr. Travers, and he said he would endeavor to hold it in that way for me.
Q. Signed when do you say? A. About the end of September.
Q. Then this subscription was put in at a time when you knew only $10,000 was needed in subscriptions? A. It was after that had been obtained. I was out in Milton and I made up my mind that the amount had been secured and it was after the $500,000 had been subscribed, I felt there was about $500,000 subscribed, but it was subsequent to that letter, and having had an interview with Mr. Menzie—
Q. Is Mr. Menzie here now? A. I could not say.
Q. You don’t know where he is? A. He is in the city quite frequently.
Q. You say that at the time you made the subscription $10,000 had been subscribed? A. That was my recollection.
Q. And that you signed this towards the end of September? A. Yes.
Q. Why was it dated the 22nd October? A. It was not dated at the time.
Q. Whose writing is the date in? A. It is not mine.
Q. Whose is it? A. W. R. Travers.
Q. Why did not you date it, you were a stock seller and taking subscriptions every day in the week, why did not you put the date in? A. Because I was not sure whether they would let me have it or not.
Q. You did not know whether it was going to be used or not? A. I did not know whether I was going to get it or not at par.
Q. You did not know whether they were going to need it? A. It was not that at all, it was for the object that I have just stated, that I signed for it, and that Mr. Menzie, as I stated before, took the $40,000 and it was not transferred.
Q. Did you ever pay that up, or was not that subscription cancelled? A. It was afterwards cancelled. I tried to have it transferred at various stages when I was selling stock, when I discovered it had not been transferred to Mr. Menzie, and I endeavored to have a portion of it transferred from time to time and Mr. Travers would not permit it.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Transferred to whom? A. To various subscribers that I was placing the stock with.
MR. HODGINS: Did you ever transfer it to Menzie? A. No.
Q. That was the man that you had in view when you took it? A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember when it was cancelled, how soon it was cancelled? A. It was cancelled when he would not allow me—I got a letter from him, I do not know where that letter is, you will probably have a copy of it in the bank—I was down north of Brockville selling stock, and I had sold. I have forgotten two or three or four thousand dollars worth and I wanted to commence to transfer it then, and he said no, that the directors would not permit it. I think it was 1908. I had a letter from London where they wanted to take the balance of the stock, and I got a letter from Mr. Travers——

Q. I do not want the letters unless I see them. I would like to see them? A. You will have them in the bank; I may be able to dig them up.

Q. You had subscribed for fifty shares as well? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: They were cancelled on the 18th March, 1908, according to this book (EXHIBIT 18).

MR. HODGINS: That is your subscription for 50 shares? A. Yes, sir.

Subscription of W. J. Lindsay for 50 shares filed as EXHIBIT 26.

Q. Did you put the date on that? A. No, sir.

Q. Who did? A. Mr. Travers.

Q. Who signed your name to that subscription? A. I guess I did.

Q. And put nothing else there? A. I filled the fifty and I signed W. J. Lindsay and William John Lindsay.

Q. In taking subscriptions did you always leave the date out? A. Not as a rule.

Q. Always put it in? A. Yes.

Q. Very important is it not? A. I do not know just what importance is attached to it.

Q. That makes 550 shares all told? A. Yes.

Q. That is $55,000? A. Yes.

Q. The record is that 440 out of that were cancelled? A. Yes.

Q. Is that right? A. I was not there when it was cancelled I could not say. I got a letter and I am not just sure of the figures, but I think it was 440 or 445.

Q. They could not have collected $44,500 from you? A. If everything had gone along smooth in the bank they could; if I could have sold the last four or five hundred thousand as easily as I sold the first three or four hundred thousand there would not have been any trouble.

Q. Cancelled 18th March, 1908; you had had a year to sell stock? A. Things had not gone along; there were two banks had gone by default, and it had changed the color of the investment of a bank security.

Q. So that in March, 1908, they could not have collected that money from you? A. No.

Q. You transferred the balance to Mr. Travers? A. I think there was fifty shares transferred, I would not be sure of the number.

Q. Just a little prior to the suspension? A. Oh, no, surely not.

Q. It was within sixty days after? A. Oh, no.

Q. Yes, I see it is prior to the sixty days; it was about the 18th March? A. That was signed in blank; I don’t know just when it was.

Q. Did you pay anything upon the 550 shares? A. That was discussed and afterwards Mr. Travers stated there was $9,150 credited up to my account out of commissions.

Q. Did you pay anything on these shares? A. Only in that way.

Q. The statement of Mr. Travers that there was so much credited on them? A. Out of my commission due me.

Q. Have you found out since that is not the case? A. No.

Q. And that there was nothing ever paid upon those shares? A. I have not had an opportunity to find out.

Q. Not inquired from the liquidator? A. The liquidator gave me notice, the $9,150 that we discovered, that is in the examination in my case against Mr. Travers and the bank.

Q. The liquidator put you on the list for 550? A. Yes.
Q. And showed no payments? A. He showed no payments but $500 on the five shares.

Mr. Commissioner: Apparently disregarding this transfer.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, the liquidator disregards this as being a proper cancellation.

Mr. Commissioner. The transfer, 50 shares.

Mr. Hodgins: 100 shares? A. I could not say how much.

Q. The record is two transfers of fifty shares each? A. I could not say what it was.

Q. What did you sign? A. He asked me to sign the transfer, he wanted some of it for some purpose.

Q. Travers never made any attempt, and the bank never made any attempt to make you pay up on those shares? A. No, sir, but I tried to have them transferred.

Q. Was there an understanding on which you were to take out and get other people to replace? A. There was no understanding.

Q. I thought that was the understanding you communicated to Travers? A. There was no understanding. I said I wanted $50,000 worth of stock at par, that I had some friends that were coming in and I wanted to be able, and I had promised to give it to them at par when they were ready.

Q. I would have thought that was communicating with Travers? A. The way you asked the question I thought it quite different.

Q. Then there was no understanding that that should be done? A. I made the request what I wanted it for.

Q. And did Travers assent to that? A. I signed it and he said he would try and put it through with the provisional Board.

Q. He assented to it conditionally on it being put through? A. He said he would try.

Q. He understood thoroughly what your idea was? A. Yes.

Q. And that was the time it was handed to him? A. Yes.

Q. And he had the privilege of using it later had he? A. I did not attach any privileges to it.

Q. When did you learn whether your condition had been accepted or not? A. I do not know just when.

Q. Did you learn any dealing had taken place with the stock any time in October? A. I do not know just when.

Q. You do not know? A. No, I know that it was arranged that it should be given to me at par, I know that.

Q. Between the 24th September and the end of September when you say you signed that had you had $10,500 of stock taken up? A. I could not say.

Q. You said you understood it had been taken up, who did you understand that from? A. I think I came in and Mr. Travers said whatever it was made five hundred odd thousand dollars, five hundred and eight thousand dollars or something.

Q. You came in from where? A. From being out in the field securing stock.

Q. You came in towards the end of September? A. I do not know just when.

Q. The end of September, 1906, and he told you then that had been taken up so that the list was complete in your idea? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know anything about the application for the certificate; did you attend the organization meeting as a shareholder? A. Yes, I was there.

Q. November 26th that was? A. Yes.

Q. You attended that meeting? A. Yes, I was there.

Q. You heard the report of the provisional directors read I suppose? A. Yes.
Q. You knew the election of directors took place? A. Yes.

Q. You remember the amount of the stock taken up was read out then?

A. I presume it would be possible.

Q. Did you realize the amount; you knew the $500,000 had to be reached and you tell me it had been reached before you gave this subscription for these later shares, 500 shares? A. I know it was either completed or about completed.

Q. If it was read out at about $572,000 you would know your shares were included? A. I think they had arranged I should have it.

Q. You knew they had been included? A. Yes, before that.

Q. You knew before that that it had gone through? A. Yes.

Q. You were considerably interested in the certificate being granted, were you not? A. I don’t know where the interest was—it was none of my business.

Q. Why not? A. Why?

Q. Where were you going to get your commissions if the bank never opened for business? A. I suppose I considered a man does business that his commissions are due and payable as soon as he has done his part.

Q. Did not you sue the Farmers Bank for these commissions? A. I did later.

Q. Your idea all along was that the Farmers Bank should be responsible to you as soon as they opened for business? A. Yes.

Q. You have so alleged? A. I have so alleged that Mr. Travers and the bank are responsible.

Q. You knew at that time your getting commissions depended upon the bank going into operation? A. No, I considered after I did my business whether the bank had gone or not gone into business I was entitled to my commission; I had not taken any advice on it, that is the usual agent’s consideration.

Q. Who had you agreed with? A. I had an agreement I was to get so much commission with Mr. Travers.

Q. Had not you agreed you were to get so much commission with some one? A. Yes.

Q. Who was that some one? A. Travers.

Q. You had no claim against the bank? A. Not up to that time.

Q. And did not care whether it went into operation? A. I was quite anxious to see it go into business; I had done my part.

Q. You did take a part in helping the certificate through? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you the one who got these Laidlaw subscriptions taken out? A. Yes.

Q. If it is the case you did not take any interest in getting the certificate why did you start round and get these subscriptions out of the way? A. Just the same as Mr. Watson came in to do his part.

Q. Who is Mr. Watson? A. Watson, Smoke Smith, and I put in a bill for $1,000 for the work I did. I understood he had got $1,000.

Q. That is Mr. George H. Watson came in? A. I expected to get pay; when I was first called in I demurred and said I would not do anything of the kind.

Q. Did you meet with Mr. Hunter, Mr. Travers and Mr. Warren? A. I did, about 8 o’clock one evening.

Q. Had you been served with a writ at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Had any one of the four been served with a writ? A. I don’t think I was ever served.

Q. Don’t you? A. No.

Q. You were a party? A. He said I was.

Q. You knew that the proceeding prevented the issue of the certificate? A. That is what I understood.

Q. That would completely put the thing out of business? A. It is different.

Q. At all events you knew the end of the bank was in sight, that was the object of the suit? A. Yes, if they got a winding-up order.
Q. This took place at 8 o'clock at night? A. Yes.
Q. Who told you the winding-up order was being asked for? A. An injunction and winding-up order.
Q. Who told you that? A. I forget, it was discussed.
Q. Mr. Hunter? A. It was discussed among the four of us, Mr. Watson, Mr. Hunter, Mr. Warren and Mr. Travers.
Q. Was George H. Watson there? A. We met at the Dominion Permanent and went right down to Mr. Watson's office; they had an appointment with him that night.
Q. Before that interview you four, Warren, Hunter, yourself and Travers had had an interview, is that right? A. They were practically concurrent. We walked from the Dominion Permanent office I think down to the other.
Q. That was the connecting link, you had had the interview at the Dominion Permanent before? A. It was only just a matter of calling to meet Mr. Warren there to go to see Mr. Watson.
Q. That is probably quite correct, but I want to find out if there was a meeting, and did it take place in the Dominion Permanent, and did you discuss the matter? A. It was discussed, it was put up to me: Would I do so-and-so, and go out and take them out, and I at first refused, I demurred, and said I would not, they were good and legitimate subscriptions. So then they went on to thrash the matter out and they said, it was the only way, that is to take Mr. Laidlaw out and leave him completely—
Q. Are you mixing up the two interviews? A. Oh, no.
Q. I am trying to confine you to the one before you went down to Mr. Watson's office for the moment? A. No, I am telling you what happened.
Q. What happened before you went to Mr. Watson's? A. Yes, in a general way as I remember it.
Q. In this writ these people charged fraud and misrepresentation in getting their subscriptions? A. One-half of the people that are included there had not given instructions to Mr. Laidlaw at all when I went out to see them.
Q. That is not the point? A. How could they allege fraud when they had not instructed him.
Q. You admit there were some who had instructed Mr. Laidlaw? A. There were some.
Q. And did those allege fraud and misrepresentation? A. I don't know; there was no fraud and misrepresentation as far as I was concerned.
Q. Did they allege it? A. I don't know whether they alleged it or Mr. Laidlaw alleged it.
Q. You say at that interview that night that nobody said they are alleging fraud and misrepresentation and these are your subscriptions? A. Yes. I said they were good and valid, every one of them, and I demurred at first and refused to go.
Q. You knew the charge was made against you in connection with these subscriptions, that they were obtained by fraud? A. Yes.
Q. Did you know that they alleged that quite a number of gentlemen—Major Beattie for instance—that these parties were alleging that he had never promised to be a director, and that his name was on your prospectus? A. Yes.
Q. Did you know that that was involved in it? A. That was not true.
Q. Major Beattie says it was true? A. That is not true. I have a letter.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: You can put that in later.
Mr. HODGINS: Did you discuss the fact that the subscriptions had been changed in amount, that this was charged in the writ? A. Yes; I refuted that.
Q. You denied everything that was charged? A. Yes. I might say I think Mr. Laidlaw's apology on that matter can be—
Q. I only want to get at what occurred at the meeting, and if you want to make a general statement now that you denied all the charges there is no objection to your making it, but I want to get what was the matter of discussion that night: "An injunction to restrain the Bank, and so on, from using, drawing upon and paying or transferring any money, notes, or other obligations received from the Plaintiffs. An injunction to restrain the Bank, the Provisional Directors, the General Manager and their officers, servants or agents from publication of a notice to call the meeting of the alleged subscribers of the shares of the capital stock, from making application to the Treasury Board for a certificate under section 14 and 15 of the Bank Act. The appointment of a Receiver; and an order for administration"—you knew that A. I did not go into the details.

Q. You knew sufficiently of it? A. They told me what the affidavit consisted of and I said I would not have anything to do with it.

Q. They urged it was up to you to get rid of this? A. They urged that was the proper way out of it and asked me if I could do it; I said I could do it.

Q. They based it upon the ground that you had been the one who had got the subscriptions? A. Yes, and that I could go and take them up and take them out.

Q. Then you walked down to Mr. Watson's office? A. Yes.
Q. And had a conference with him at which the others were present? A. No, they had a conference; I sat to the one side and let them do the conference.

Q. You were down there? A. Yes.
Q. Did you sulk in a corner? A. No. I sat outside, I was not paying any attention; I was listening to it.

Q. It was none of your business? A. It was none of my funeral.
Q. When did you go out to Milton? A. I went out in the early part of the week.

Q. I would like to get the date if I could?
Mr. Commissioner: What date was this? A. I do not remember.

Mr. Hodgins: Can you give me the day of the week? A. I think it was Monday or Tuesday probably subsequent to that.

Mr. Commissioner: You went out? A. Yes, either Monday evening or Tuesday evening.

Mr. Hodgins: Then what evening in the week was it you had this meeting?
A. I could not say.

Q. Was it Saturday? It is just possible that it was.
Q. You went out very soon afterwards? A. Yes; I returned on the following Saturday morning of the week I went out.

Q. It took you how long out there? A. I had only two drives, two days' drives.
Q. This writ is dated 22nd October? A. What day?
Q. I could not tell you the day of the week; and the order dismissing the action was on the 27th, that would be just five days? A. It would be longer than that.

Q. You say you only had two drives? A. Yes, three drives.
Q. Did you get the documents signed the day they bear date? A. That I could not say.

Q. Did you get these documents? A. I did.
Q. After sitting in the corner and saying nothing that evening you were the one who went out and did the work? A. Yes.
Q. Did you take any one with you? A. No.
Q. Who is Mr. Dewar? A. He is a resident of Milton.
Q. He is not there now I understand? A. No, and in fact he took his own horse the first day that we went out.
Q. Did you go out in the day time or night time? A. In the day time.
Q. And you had three drives and got these documents which I am going to put in signed? A. Yes.
Q. They had been prepared for you? A. They were prepared here before I went out.
Q. In Mr. Watson's office? A. I think so.
Q. Where did you get them? A. I think I got that in Mr. Watson's office.
Q. Did you agree that night to go out and get them? A. Yes, I said I would go out and try.
Q. You made no bargain that you were to be paid for it? A. All I said was, I said, "I will go out and try and do anything as long as I get paid for it."
Q. You say you made that statement in Mr. Watson's presence? A. I think so.
Q. I would like to know? A. I do not know whether it was in Mr. Watson's presence or whose.

Mr. Commissioner: You are not examining him for discovery in this suit.
Mr. Hodgins: He has no suit against Mr. Watson.
Mr. Commissioner: He has a claim against the Farmers Bank, I think?
Mr. Hodgins: I don't care whether he has one against the Farmers Bank or not; I only want to know the conditions on which he went out and whether he told them to anybody? A. I went out expecting to get paid for my work.
Q. I want to know what you said to these people; are you able to say you made that statement at all to any of these people that night? A. I made the statement to some of them; whether it was in the room or where and I put in my bill afterwards.
Q. Give me the names of the people you think you said it in front of or to? A. It was in the office.
Q. What office? A. It may have been in the Dominion Permanent that I said "Well, I can try and do anything as long as I get paid for it."
Q. It may be in the Dominion Permanent? A. It may have been, but I went out with the impression that I was going to get paid for my work.
Q. You are not clear really that you said it at all? A. I must certainly have said it, that is my recollection of it.
Q. Are these the documents that you got? A. Yes.
The assignment referred to procured by Mr. Lindsay filed as Exhibit 27.
Q. They all bear same date? A. Yes.
Q. Were they got on three different days? A. They were got on two or three days.
Q. On two or three different days? A. Won't be positive about whether they were two or three days or how; I only had three drives.
Q. On three different days? A. I would not be sure of that; I wound up at 11.30 o'clock at George Denoon's house, I remember that—I went away in the morning at six o'clock and went out towards the foot of the mountain, towards Hamilton way and I came back and went the other way and came into town and got another team of horses. If you will write to Anderson I think he will verify I had three different horses from him that day; it may have been all the same day. I was out there three days.
Q. That is the first day you went out? A. No, I was out there two or three days just lying around expecting to find some of them in the town.
Q. What had happened? A. I was waiting to find some of them in the town.
Q. In Milton? A. Yes.
Q. Not finding any of them you got them all put through in the one day, starting at six o'clock in the morning and ending at 11.30 at night? A. Yes.
Q. And that was the 26th? A. Yes, I think that is right; I would not be absolutely clear on that.
Q. What money did you take with you? A. I did not take any money with me; I took a cheque book with me, took a few cheques.
Q. Did you sign cheques out of that cheque book? A. Yes.
Q. In whose name, whose account were you signing on? A. On my own.
Q. Had you at that time got any money? A. I had some money.
Q. Who from? A. And Mr. Travers was to deposit between twenty and twenty-five hundred dollars, I have forgotten the amount he was to deposit, to my credit.
Q. Then these payments were made out of your own individual money? A. No, he deposited there; he assured me it would be deposited there the day I went out, which it was.
Q. You cannot fix that date, was it two or three days before the 26th that these bear date; the papers bear date the 26th October, was it two days or three days before that you had gone out; you said you laid around for two days? A. I think you will find the 26th was on Friday.
Q. If you laid about two days and then got an assignment on the 26th it would mean you went out on the 23rd, would not it? A. I went down in the early part of the week, I do not know just what date.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: I think he said he went Monday or Tuesday? A. Either Monday night or Tuesday night.
Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Travers did not get that loan till afterwards, till after you had made those payments? A. I do not know that.
Q. What was the arrangement between you when you went out? A. There was no arrangement whatever further than he was to deposit that amount to my credit in the Bank of Montreal.
Q. And in the meantime till that was deposited you were to pay it out of your own funds? A. No, he assured me it would be placed to the credit of my account, to go ahead.
Q. When was it to go to your account? A. Practically the next day.
Q. Why was it to be paid out, if that be the case, out of your account? A. I do not know what amount would be required, whether it would all be required or anything, and I went out there.
Q. Why was your Bank account to be used as the medium? A. He was to give me the money and I said I would not take it with me; he was going to give me the cash and I said: "No, I won't take it; deposit it to my account, I am not going to go out and carry two or three thousand dollars in my clothes, it is not business". He said: "Maybe they won't take it unless you have the cash". I said "If they won't take the cheque they can stay in".
Q. Do you know what date the money was deposited in your account? A. No.
Q. When did you arrive in Toronto with the documents which have been put in? A. Somewhere about 8.30 or 8.45.
Q. I understood you were out till half past eleven that evening, the 26th? A. The morning and evening are different.
Q. The next morning you got back? A. Yes, Saturday morning between 8.30 and 9; I think it was 8.45 the train was due.
Q. Was W. A. Dixon one of those you settled with? A. He was.
Q. Look at that letter, tell me if you know anything about the fact that those letters were sent to the various parties? A. No, sir, I do not.
Q. You cannot identify that? A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know that the action was dismissed by Mr. Justice Anglin the day you arrived here with those papers? A. I do not remember exactly; I remember I was told that case had been traversed over or something, I don't know what it was, I could not say.
Q. You knew the thing was in a hurry? A. I knew the thing was in a hurry! That is a strange way to put it.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Did you go straight to Mr. Watson's office? A. I went to Mr. Watson's office and I went home to breakfast; I handed them in.

Q. Handed them in before breakfast? A. I don't know that Mr. Watson was in the office.

Q. You cannot say whether you heard it was dismissed the same day? A. No, I do not just remember.

Q. You do not know anything about a subsequent letter which was written to those that had been settled with; were you buying those shares yourself? A. No, sir, I was taking a transfer of them, an assignment of them I think it was.

Q. For whose benefit? A. Mr. Travers was to look after them; I did not go into the details of it.

Q. For whose benefit, I did not ask for details? A. I do not know for whose benefit.

Q. Who would benefit by it, who did you understand was benefitting by getting rid of this suit? A. It would be the Farmers Bank.

Q. When you took those assignments in your own name it was not your idea that you were in any way becoming a shareholder? A. They were to be transferred.

Q. To whom? A. That was for Mr. Travers to deal with.

Q. You did some transfers in the book yourself though? A. If my memory serves me right, and it is very hazy, I think I did sign something to take care of these.

Q. At whose request? A. Mr. Travers.

Q. Who wrote out the transfers? A. I could not say, I do not think it was filled in at the time.

Q. Did you afterwards sell these shares to anybody? A. Not to my knowledge. As I said before I think I had not sold anything only ten shares, and that was not delivered at less than 125 to my knowledge.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Travers; you had handed the papers in to Mr. Watson's office, did you see Travers that day? A. I presume I did.

Q. And told him what had occurred and what you had done with the papers? A. Very likely.

Q. How did he express himself? A. As entirely satisfied I presume.

Q. That seemed to remove any difficulty about getting the certificate out? A. I don't know.

Q. Did Mr. Travers say anything to you about the importance of time in getting this matter straightened up? A. Mr. Watson asked me whatever I did to come in, get it done during the week.

Q. Did Travers say anything to you as to the importance of time in the matter? A. It was discussed amongst them that is all; I do not remember just what was said.

Q. Was the reason given to you? A. I have no idea; that is going back five or six years.

Q. When the certificate was issued you learned of it pretty soon, didn't you? A. I don't know that I learned very soon, I think I saw it in the paper.

Q. Did you get paid a large sum immediately after the certificate was issued? A. It depends on what you call a large sum.

Q. It would be a large sum to me, $10,000? A. No.

Q. You were not paid that? A. No, sir.

Q. Who got it? A. I got $5,000 of it; there was a cheque issued for $10,000, of which I got the proceeds of $5,000, which I deposited in the Traders Bank.

Q. Is that cheque right, your signature? A. The face of it is there.

Q. And it is endorsed by you? A. Yes.

Q. And you drew the money on it, drew the $10,000? A. I deposited $5,000 to my credit and the other $5,000 I handed over to W. R. Travers.
Q. Why? A. As his portion of that cheque.
Cheque dated December 6th, 1909, for $10,000 on Farmers Bank account in the Traders Bank, payable to W. J. Lindsay, filed as EXHIBIT 28.
Q. Is that what he was entitled to? A. Yes.
Q. Why were not the expenses deducted that you had been to up to that time? A. That was a matter of adjustment; there was very much more than that coming and anything I did as regards commission I wanted to make it plain—
Q. You knew where that money came from? A. I knew it came out of the Traders Bank.
Q. You knew the Bank had not started operations yet and that all it had was the money paid in on subscriptions? A. That cheque is dated 6th December, 1906; what date was the organization meeting?
Q. 26th November, the certificate issued on the 30th? A. I see “The Farmers Bank, W. R. Travers, General Manager”. It must have started operations.
Q. No, it did not open for business till the 2nd January, 1907? A. I think you will find they were doing business right along.
Q. I don’t think I will find it at all; are you prepared to swear they were open for business on the 6th December? A. I would not say; it is signed “Farmers Bank of Canada, W. R. Travers, General Manager.”
Q. Marked commissions; did you know where it came out of? A. It came out of the Traders Bank.
Q. Did you know what moneys the Farmers Bank had on that date out of which it could come? A. No, sir.
Q. You are not suggesting the Bank was operating at that time and it came out of the funds of the Bank acquired after it had opened its doors? A. I do not know.
Q. What did Travers do with the $5,000? A. He put it in his pocket.
Q. You did not pay up any shares or any subscriptions with this $5,000? A. No, sir.
Q. You put it in the Bank? A. Yes.
Q. Keep it and use it? A. Yes.
Q. For your own purposes? A. Yes, I used it up largely in going to England the following spring and that was in the interests of the Bank.
Q. Kept it there till the next spring? A. Part of it.
Q. You took notes for the subscriptions? A. Some of them.
Q. A good many of them? A. If it was convenient for the subscriber.
Q. Irrespective of the terms of the written application? A. Yes; I took it under instructions.
Q. Making all the deferred payments come due at one particular time? A. I have never sold stock that I have not taken good notes in lieu of the cash.
Q. I ask you the way it was done; he would pay so much and take a note for the whole of the balance at a particular time? A. Yes, or if he had a mortgage coming due and did not pay anything I would take a note for the full amount.
Q. Did you receive the cash? A. What cash?
Q. That the subscribers paid, or did you just take the subscription and the note and hand it in and let the Bank or Provisional Directors get the money? A. In some cases I received cash, that is where they had the money in the house; I put that money in my pocket, and I would send my personal cheque to the Bank for the same amount, writing on the corner of it what it was.
Q. Did you deduct your commission? A. No, sir.
Q. Why not? A. Because I never have done it.
Q. You I suppose were aware that subscribers to the Bank are not stockholders till after its organization? A. I am not.
Q. You were not aware of that? A. No.
FARMERS BANK INQUIRY

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You were not aware that if the Bank never went into operation the subscribers were entitled to their money back again? A. No, sir.
Q. That did not operate in your mind in handing it all in? A. No, sir.
Q. And you never deducted the commission from the cash you got? A. I never deducted a penny piece or a brass farthing.
Q. Can you give me your reason for that? A. I have never done it in any transaction because I don’t think it is right. I have always felt that any moneys received from a stockholder is not mine until after it has reached the Company and becomes their property.
Q. What had you to do with the getting up of the list of subscribers? A. Unfortunately I had this to do with that, that I secured probably 80 or 85% of the subscribers whose applications I never practically set eyes on afterwards.
Q. I mean preparing this document? A. Nothing at all.
Q. Were you consulted at all? A. No.
Q. In no case? A. In no case.
Q. You had made no payment of the amount stated in this list opposite your name, had you paid $500 on your first stock subscription? A. It was credited up to me out of my commission, I understood.
Q. Had you paid at any time $5,000 on the second subscription? A. I understood there were $9,150—
Q. I did not ask you that; had you paid $5,000 on that second subscription of yours on the 27th November, 1906? A. You understand I understood that $9,150 had been transferred from my commission account to the credit of my stock subscriptions.
Q. That was long afterwards; I am speaking of the 27th November, 1906? A. I understood my commissions would pay part of it and I would go on and replace it.
Q. You had never paid $5,000? A. I had no jurisdiction—
Q. You never allocated $5,000 to that subscription? A. I never issued a cheque, and I never issued or authorized the five shares to be paid up but it was paid up.
Q. You never arranged with any one that they were to credit that $5,000 upon your shares? A. No.
Q. And you did not know it had been done when the list went in to the Government? A. No, I had absolute confidence in whatever Mr. Travers did at that time.
Q. Is the suit against the Farmers Bank still going on? A. Still in the Courts.
Q. Travers or the Bank never made any effort to collect that last subscription of yours? A. No; they gave me the regular notice, when they would not transfer it they gave me the regular ten days’ notice; I have the letter signed by the Bank.

Mr. Commissioner: What do you mean by the letter? A. Notice of cancellation.

Mr. Hodgins: I mentioned Major Beattie’s name and I think you wanted to produce something. I just want to say I have a letter too from Major Beattie, and if you have, it would be just as well to produce it? A. It has been said about the provisional directors not having given their consent to be directors, if elected. I notice every one of those gentlemen ran for shelter, they did not run for shelter merely but they galloped for shelter after the failure of the Ontario Bank. I might say that A. G. McKay, D. M. McLeod, William Calvert, Major Beattie all promised, and were quite anxious and satisfied with the idea of becoming a bank director at that time.
Q. At what time? A. When I approached them; every one of them.
Q. What more do you want to say about Major Beattie? A. I went to London to see Major Beattie and here are some letters. (Produces copies of letters). One thing I have never done, and that is to associate a man on a prospectus where he had not given his consent.
REPORT OF COMMISSION

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Q. Do you want these to go in? A. No, not necessary.

Mr. Commissioner: Are these all? A. They are touching that; they are not direct or indirect.

Mr. Hodkins: I have not the slightest objection to your putting them in, if you wish. They are correspondence with Major Beattie; and I can close it with the last letter to Mr. Travers. Perhaps you can tell generally speaking what you had to do with him or any of these Directors who have given evidence here? A. Take W. S. Calvert.

Q. Take Major Beattie first? A. I called up Major Beattie from my house, and Mr. Travers was in the house. I got Major Beattie on the phone, and he practically, that is to me, decided that he would go on the Bank Board.

Q. A long distance message from here? A. I said "Mr. Travers is here, he will speak to you", and I said "I will run up to London to-night and see you", and I wired when I would arrive. He met me at the Tecumseh House. He also talked with Mr. Travers over the phone. I got to London and he met me at the hotel and we remained there until quarter to ten, and he went up to meet his son who was coming down from Mount Hope—he had been taking French lessons there. In the course of the evening after we got over the amount that was necessary to qualify he said "Yes, $3,000. You know, Lindsay, I have not got any more money than enough, and I do not want to lose any, but" he said "$3,000, we will be a lot of numbskulls if we let the bank get away from us, and the double liability called on". He said "I will tell you who I would like you to get; I would like you to get Rory McLennan." "I have the Colonel on my list, and I am going down; and so I left I think on the early morning train at 4 o'clock and I came through here, and went right through to Cornwall and interviewed Colonel McLennan and got his subscription for $3,000, and 10% payment, $500.

Q. Using Major Beattie's name? A. Yes. I says "I was in London last night and Major Beattie spoke of you".

Q. Can you give us the date of this, because I have a letter here and I want to see if it is prior or subsequent to that? A. They are all dealing around about March, April or along there.

Q. 1906? A. Yes.

Q. The Major says he was telephoned to and spoke to Travers over the telephone, and mistook him for some other Travers, and he says he saw you the following morning? A. Yes.

Q. These letters you have are subsequent correspondence with him in March or April, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. Would this letter be correct to W. R. Travers? A. Then he commenced to draw away; but in the first place he agreed and his name had gone to the people. A. I am not interested in that? A. I am only interested that I do not want any person to think that I went out and put names on my suggestion on the prospectus without any authority.

Q. Listen to my side of the story: I do not know or care whether you had any arrangement with any of these Directors whose names are mentioned in the prospectus; all I am interested in is whether on the 27th November, 1906, they could properly be handed into the Government as people who had consented to go on the Board? A. I did not know anything about that.

Q. Would this be right; this is Major Beattie's letter to Mr. Travers, dated 16th August, 1906: "I am somewhat surprised at your letter. It is fully one month since I wrote Mr. Lindsay that I could not see my way clear to accept seat on the Board; and some ten days ago he was in London, when I repeated the same to him in person. Yours truly, Thomas Beattie". Would that statement be correct? A. Yes.
Q. Therefore on November 27th, 1906, he was not a person who then was willing? A. I would not say so in view of that letter.

Q. Will you say with regard to these other gentlemen that you say galloped to safety whether on the 27th November they had agreed to it? A. I have no idea whatever.

Letter from Major Beattie to Mr. Travers, 16th August, 1906, filed as Exhibit 29.

Mr. Commissioner: At the time you took the subscriptions, had you the prospectus with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time had these gentlemen you say had promised to become directors of the company, any of them intimated their change of mind and they desired not to be directors? A. No.

Q. In other words when you were carrying that prospectus about and showing people, had you been informed that any of these gentlemen whose names you mention had decided not to become directors? A. Not to my knowledge; the prospectus ran out about along the middle of the summer and they did not have any more printed.

Q. In this letter of Major Beattie's (Exhibit 29) he says about a month before he wrote Mr. Lindsay, that is probably July he communicated with you? A. Yes. The heavy end of the stock was placed by that time.

Q. You did not mention Mr. Ivey's name? A. On the 16th March, 1908, I wrote to Mr. Calvert: "Your name has been inserted on the list of directors of this bank with the following gentlemen: The Honourable Mr. Forget, Major Beattie, London; Thomas Charlton, H. J. Anthes, W. S. Calvert, Colonel Munro, Hon. A. G. McKay, George H. Neely, M.P.P., Thos. Urquhart, B. N. McLeod, Parkhill; John Ferguson, M.D., Toronto. Now, if Mr. St. Denis Lemoine of the Senate, will subscribe for $10,000 I will also have him put on the Board. This I can arrange, and would like to have his decision by wire Saturday, as they are holding the printers for his answer, at my request. See him upon receipt of this".

Mr. Commissioner: Did you get any answer to that? A. No, sir, but I was in Ottawa a short time afterwards to look up St. Denis Lemoine and was there and talked it over several times.

Q. With what result? A. With the result that there was not anything said by Mr. Calvert about getting out; I never got any reply; and I wrote the same letter to D. N. McLeod, at Parkhill—I called him by phone, and he was quite enthusiastic and he went out and even got his father-in-law through another agent.

Mr. Hodgins: Since the writing of that letter to Mr. Calvert, did you up to the end of November, 1906, hear of his withdrawal? A. No.

Q. How did that apply to Hon. A. G. McKay, had he agreed? A. Yes.

Q. And had he withdrawn to your knowledge up to November, 1906? A. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Commissioner: Mr. Lindsay, if you desire to give any explanation or make any statement with regard to these matters, so far as they are relevant you will have an opportunity of doing it when we meet at half past two.

The Commission adjourned at 1 p.m. to 2.30 this afternoon.

The Commission resumed at 2.30 p.m., March 21st, 1912, at Osgoode Hall.

WILLIAM J. LINDSAY examination continued:—

Mr. Hodgins: There are some documents in connection with Mr. Lindsay I would like to put in. Three letters in July and August, 1906, between Mr. Travers and Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Travers and Mr. Spence, who was your solicitor at that time? A. Yes.
Q. I put those in, they show the position in August.
Three letters, one Travers to Lindsay of the 28th July, 1906, and two from Travers to J. H. Spence, dated respectively August 23rd, 1906, and August 25th, 1906, filed as Exhibit 30.
Q. This is your agreement with Mr. Travers in August, 1906? A. Yes.
Agreement dated (blank day of August, 1906, between Travers and Lindsay, filed as Exhibit 31.
K. It does not bear any specific date in August; would it be after that correspondence? A. Yes.
Q. This batch of correspondence? A. I think that belongs to the suit that is now pending, and I had no advice on it, but I do not think it should go in here; I think it is irrelevant; I do not know.
Q. You are suing the bank and you want to have access to these?
Mr. Commissioner: Whose documents are they now?
Mr. Hodgins: These documents are handed to me by the liquidator.
Mr. Commissioner: They are not in Mr. Lindsay's possession? A. No, sir.
Mr. Commissioner: You can get access to them? A. It would seem almost as if you were trying that case here.
Mr. Hodgins: No, not trying the case at all here; just dealing with the position in 1908, under the agreement— A. Under the agreement which I am suing under.
Batch of correspondence between Travers and Lindsay, in 1908, filed as Exhibit 32.
Mr. Commissioner: Now, if you desire to add anything you are at liberty to do so? A. Immediately after that writ with all the allegations in it of fraud and misrepresentation there is an apology which should be in these papers from Mr. William Laidlaw, acknowledging the fact that after having seen all the subscriptions in question of his clients, that he was misinformed, and that they were all in good order and had not been altered in any way whatsoever, and he wished to withdraw any and all statements that were derogatory in any way to me. I issued a writ for $25,000 against him, and that was the settlement.
Q. While Mr. Thompson is looking for that if there is anything further you can proceed? A. I do not know of anything further.
Q. Was there any ground for the allegation that these stockholders represented by Mr. Laidlaw made as to the way in which their subscriptions were obtained? A. No, sir. Their subscriptions were all taken and in fact many of them, some of the parties who were included in that writ, had never given Mr. Laidlaw instructions to join them in it.
Q. As they told you I suppose? A. And they almost some of them practically took the stock themselves, almost asked for it.
Q. I did not find Mr. Menzies' name in the list of shareholders, not this Menzies that you say took $40,000; when did he subscribe? A. Some time after the organization of the Bank, I think in the spring.
Q. Ought his name to appear in the published list? A. It would be in the following year.
Q. It would be 1907? A. Yes, in the spring of 1907, I think he came in during the time I was in England.
Q. Did he pay anything? A. He had his certificate and showed paid up $40,000. He first gave his cheque for $3,000.
Q. You do not know the facts? A. Yes, sir, he told me; I saw the facts embodied in his letter from the General Manager.
Q. Was that paid-up stock then? A. Yes.
Q. You said something about the failure of the Ontario Bank and another bank, you did not finish? A. The Ontario Bank failed some time along about.
The middle of October, 1906, I think it was October and after that time everybody got scared so far as bank shares were concerned.

Q. What bearing has that upon the matter you were testifying as to? A. That was one of the features that brought about the dissatisfaction of the shareholders around Milton which caused the issuance of this writ.

Q. You spoke of another bank, what bank? A. The Sovereign Bank failed. I was in England in 1907, and if I remember correctly it was either in April or May or thereabouts that the Sovereign Bank failed, when the balance of the shares, the Prospectus and everything, was ready to launch there to raise the balance of the stock, and they had to withdraw or withhold.

Q. The balance of the Farmers Bank stock? A. Yes.

Q. Was any of the Farmers Bank stock sold at a premium? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what amount? A. Offhand I should say somewhere around the neighborhood of $80,000 to $100,000, I am not sure.

Q. How late? A. I was selling it up to January, 1908; whether I sold any in February or not I am not quite clear.

Q. With regard to the 500 shares that you subscribed for, I understand your idea was that Mr. Menzies would take thirty or forty thousand dollars of that, and the remainder what? A. I intended holding a portion of it myself, and I had some other parties whom I had promised to.

Q. Had the opportunity that you supposed you had of taking that stock at par special value in your eyes? A. Yes, sir, in consideration of the fact that all the balance of the stock was going to be sold at 125.

Q. What was the advantage you were getting? A. Not any further than what I decided to hold myself, it would cost me $100 a share, and on the other hand it afforded Mr. Menzies the opportunity of getting his at the same price which I had promised him.

Q. Instead of paying the premium? A. 125.

Q. You were getting in, as it is popularly said, on the ground floor? A. Yes.

Q. You said you wanted to take part of the stock and that Mr. Travers would not allow you to do it, what was the reason? A. To transfer a part of it.

Q. To transfer it to your nominees, what was his reason? A. He said that the directors would not permit of it.

Q. Why, what was the reason, that you ought not to get stock at par, or what? A. No, that was all that was said.

Q. What did you understand it to mean, if he was looking for subscriptions why would not he be glad to get somebody to take it? A. He was getting them any how, no matter whether that was taken or not. Then later on, it was just about the time that he went to Winnipeg or got into negotiations with some people in Winnipeg and took the balance of the stock out of my hands entirely.

Q. Was your idea that with what Mr. Menzies did not take, if he took what was talked about taking, that you could place that at 125 and make the difference yourself? A. Yes, or place it with my friends that I had promised at par.

Q. And give them the benefit of getting it at par? A. Yes.

Q. You have contradicted several gentlemen who have been examined here as to their having promised to become directors here; is it not quite likely that you looked rather optimistically at what they said with regard to joining the Bank? These gentlemen all say they had it under consideration, you had approached them, they were considering it, and you had said that if they took the stock they would be on the Board; they never did consent, the furthest they went was to take it under consideration; is not that more probably what the position was than a definite promise by these gentlemen to allow you to use their name? A. Well, I at once in each case wrote to each gentleman when the Prospectus was out and confirmed it.

Q. Did you write to Mr. McKay? A. Yes.
Q. You did not say that before? A. I wrote to all of them, I said, the same style of a letter as I wrote to Mr. Calvert.

Q. You see these gentlemen have not subscribed at all, they were not shareholders? A. The idea is this, they asked how much they would have to subscribe. "$3,000". "When"? "When you take your seat at the Board; before you can be a director you have to pay up in full in cash thirty shares."

Q. You do not differ very much from most of the canvassers for stock who take a pretty rosy view of half of any promise they get, do you? A. Yes. I am.

Q. A little more conservative? A. I think so. I knew these men, had known them for some years.

Q. At all events you desire to be acquitted of any intention to mislead with regard to it? A. Yes, quite so; there was not any intention as far as I was concerned, that is when I went to any of them, and I was in touch with them— I went over to Tonawanda—Mr. Thomas Charlton who had signed for thirty shares on conditions that he was elected a director, he went over to Buffalo with me and interviewed some parties there. Mr. D. N. McLeod of Parkhill, I had known him possibly for 25 years, and all I had to do was to call him up and he said "Yes, all right", and he got his Prospectus in the same way, and when the man went up there he went out and interested a number of his friends.

Q. Did these letters that you wrote to these gentlemen, Mr. Calvert and the others, call for an answer? A. No, they were all just the same as this one I read this morning.

Q. Was that put in?

Mr. Hodgins: No. I would like to see that letter to Mr. Calvert? A. (Produces letter). I was in Ottawa in touch with him for several days.

Q. It speaks of a reply from Mr. St. Denis Lemoine in that letter; have you the letter to any of the others just telling them that they were on the Prospectus? A. I don't know whether there are any of the others or not.

Q. Have you a copy of the letter to Mr. McKay? A. No, I do not know how that one happened to get in amongst the Bank's stuff.

Mr. Commissioner: This is your own? A. Yes.

Q. You said got among the Bank's stuff, what do you mean about that? A. In the suit for commissions.

Mr. Hodgins: That bears Beatty Blackstock's stamp? A. It was in the suit.

Mr. Commissioner: In the prosecution? A. Yes, from Mr. Blackstock's brief.

Mr. Hodgins: Where did you get this from? A. I don't know.

Q. How did your counsel get it? A. Amongst my papers, and I don't know where.

Q. How would he find it? A. Very likely Mr. Cameron took it, of Messrs. Masten, Starr, Spence & Cameron.

Q. Will you enquire? A. Yes, I will try and get it.

Q. You said Mr. Starr had that letter from Mr. Laidlaw? A. I have telephoned to Mr. Starr and to Mr. Hugh Rose and they are going to try to send up the letter right away.

Q. I would like to get it, I have read something, and my idea was that that letter is entirely confined to some charge that was made that the subscriptions had been altered.

Mr. Commissioner: That is what he said, that he withdrew that.

Mr. Hodgins: It did not deal with anything else than that, is that the letter you refer to? A. Yes.

Q. I think that ought to be produced, I would like you to let me have it.

Mr. Commissioner: Do you agree with Mr. Hodgins that it was confined to the statement that these documents had been altered? A. I do not know just, I think so.
Mr. Hodgins: However, the document will speak for itself? A. Yes.
Q. It was an action brought against the World and Mr. Laidlaw? A. I don't think the 'World' was included I think it was just Mr. Laidlaw.
Q. Were not all these subscribers known as the Laidlaw subscribers called as witnesses in the prosecution against you? A. No, sir.
Q. Were any of them? A. Some of them were I think.
Q. Were they questioned as to misrepresentations? A. Yes.
Q. I thought that was the case and I wanted to know? A. Yes, there was one of them said he understood he was getting 25 shares for $250.

Mr. Hodgins: I proposed to go on with Mr. Travers' examination, but, just as he told me yesterday, he is very anxious, in fact insists upon seeing Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C. before giving evidence.

Mr. Commissioner: Mr Dewart is in town, and has been all day.

Mr. Hodgins: Mr Dewart has been in town and Mr. Travers has seen him so he tells me, for ten minutes, but Mr. Dewart will not be able, according to the message given to me by his partner Mr. Hodgson, to see Mr. Travers until Saturday. He wants to have as he says a couple of hours conversation with him. I do not profess to know why he wants to see Mr. Dewart.

I do not think we need go into it; if Mr. Travers does not want to be examined until he has seen Mr. Dewart, and you do not want to press him, there is nothing to be done but to adjourn.

Mr. Hodgins: I do not think I can press him until he has seen Mr. Dewart. I do not think there is anything to go on with today or tomorrow, until the next sitting.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not suppose Mr. Dewart thinks he has any status here.

Mr. Hodgins: I do not think so.
Mr. Commissioner: Is Mr. Clarkson preparing us a statement showing exactly, from the books of the bank, how the provisional expenses were made up?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: How much stock was actually paid for and by whom paid?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: With the details of the disbursements?

Mr. Hodgins: I will be able to give all that after we have had Mr. Travers in the box, and in the interim I am going to have copies which can go in by themselves. At present they are part of a much larger book.

Mr. Commissioner: Do any of these items require independent investigation, or is Mr. Clarkson giving us exactly what the books show? Is it from the books and from some information he has derived outside as well?

Mr. Hodgins: That I am not quite sure of.
Mr. Commissioner: Because if it is the statement should be so marked, so that we can see what the books show and what he has ascertained outside, if there is anything.

Mr. Hodgins: That is why I thought of taking Mr. Travers evidence, and that will practically give us most of the facts upon it, and then Mr. Clarkson can speak of what the books show.

Mr. Commissioner: You are not going to examine Mr. Travers at present except upon the first two questions which form the subject of the enquiry.

Mr. Hodgins: That is all.

Mr. Commissioner: Not going into the general question.
Mr. Hodgins: Not yet.
The Commission adjourned at 4 p.m. until 11 a.m. Wednesday, March 27th, 1912, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

The Commission continued its sittings, at Osgoode Hall, at 11 a.m.

PRESENT:—

THE COMMISSIONER, HONOURABLE SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH;

Owing to some misunderstanding Mr. Travers was not present, Dr. Chambers, Governor of the Toronto Jail, requesting that an Officer be sent to the Jail for Mr. Travers. Arrangements were made to do so, and the Commission adjourned until 2 p.m.

The Commission resumed at 2 p.m., May 14th, 1912.

WILLIAM G. MITCHELL, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You are a member of the firm of W. G. Mitchell & Co., Brokers, Toronto? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you brokers for the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. We generally act for them.
Q. You produce here a copy of your ledger showing three items, December 6th, 7th and 17th, 1906? A. That is correct. This is a copy of our ledger.

EXHIBIT 33—Copy of ledger account of J. J. Warren, with W. G. Mitchell & Co.
Q. Would you just explain those entries; they appear to be in each case a cheque marked "Traders Bank", apparently received by you and a cheque paid out marked "Trusts & Guarantee"? A. One day Mr. Warren called me on the phone and said, "We are receiving some money to-day from a customer. He is rather anxious that the bank on which these cheques are drawn, and I am not quite sure but what he said the Clearing House, should not know where they go to, to whom they are paid or to whom the money goes; have you any objections to our sending you over cheques, or having these cheques made payable to you?—The cheque will be marked good,—and you just hand the boy out your cheque for the same amount"? I said "why certainly, it does not make any difference to us".
Q. Who is Mr. Warren? A. He is the Manager of the Trusts & Guarantee.
Q. Was this prior to the date of these entries? A. Just the same date as each of these entries would come; that is he called me up on the following dates and said: "I am sending you over another cheque the same as the last".
Q. What cheques were these you received? A. I did not know anything about them; I did not know what they were for or who they were for; I did not ask any questions. The cash book clerk when the cheque came in he said he could not quite read Mr. Travers' signature, he was not familiar with it, and he just put in "cheque Traders Bank".

Q. The cheques were paid to you? A. Payable to W. G. Mitchell & Co.

Q. Individual cheque? A. I could not say that; the cheque was drawn on the Traders Bank; I never saw the cheque till here a few months ago. The cheques are just put with the office stamp on the back and put right into the bank.

Q. Are those dates correct, December 6th, 7th and 17th? A. No doubt you will see on the backs of those cheques the bank's stamp and the dates they go in.

Q. Are they correct so far as dates you receive them are concerned? A. Yes.

Q. Did you pay over your cheque to the Trusts & Guarantee Company on each occasion? A. The same boy who brought the cheque in took our cheque away.

Q. And that is all you know about it? A. Yes, I did not know it had any connection with the Farmers Bank until later, quite recently.

W. R. TRAVERS, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: You were General Manager of the Farmers Bank? A. Yes, I was.

Q. From the time it began operations until its suspension? A. Yes.

Q. And you had a great deal to do in getting it up? A. Latterly, yes; not from the time that the charter was authorized.

Q. Did you and Lindsay take over the charter? A. No, Lindsay had nothing to do with that; Lindsay was working for me.

Q. You had made an arrangement, had you, about taking the charter over? A. I made an arrangement with the provisional board by which I should organize the bank and become its Manager.

Q. You were to do that for the provisional board? A. I was to get sufficient stock subscribed to complete the requirements of the Bank Act.

Q. That was some time in 1906? A. It was March 12th, 1906, that I entered into the arrangement with the provisional board.

Q. That arrangement then continued for some time, did it not? A. It continued till the permanent board was elected in November, 1906.

Q. You had a written agreement with the provisional board? A. I had.

Q. In March, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. And you had another one later, as I understand it in July, 1906, with the provisional board? A. Yes.

Q. At all events from March till July you acted under the March agreement? A. Yes.

Q. Lindsay says he began work in about April, 1906? A. Yes, I should think he did.

Q. Had you known him before? A. I met him casually in a house where I was staying in.

Q. And you made an agreement with him? A. I did.
Q. In fact made two or three I understand from what I have seen? A. I made an informal agreement with him which was cancelled afterwards by a regular agreement drawn up by a solicitor, I think in July or August.

Q. This will probably be it (Exhibit 31)? A. Yes, that is the agreement.

Q. And that will be the one under which you say he worked? A. Yes.

Q. That the net commission after payment of expenses and sub-agent's commissions on any and all stock placed by either you or him be equally divided between both of you? A. Yes.

Q. "This agreement to include all stock now placed since March 13th, 1906, and to be hereafter placed up to the first $500,000 of the capital stock of the said Bank." The 12th March, 1906, was probably the date of your first Lindsay agreement? A. About that, I could not say what date it was.

Q. Then it provides, that so soon as your contract with the bank is confirmed by the permanent directors, or you accept the office of General Manager, a contract for the selling absolutely of the second $500,000 of stock at a commission of 10% on the amount sold, payable 5% when first payment is made, 5% when stock is allotted, stock to be sold at such premium and on such terms of payment as the Board may determine—that provides that you shall obtain for him an arrangement after you had become General Manager to sell the balance of the stock? A. Yes.

Q. Generally speaking that was the situation? A. Yes.

Q. Did you and he start in to get subscriptions? A. We did.

Q. And had you trouble with Lindsay? A. I had trouble over some people complaining about their subscriptions, yes.

Q. How extensive was that? A. I could not say exactly, there were a great many of them, particularly after Mr. Laidlaw brought a suit to endeavour to dissolve the institution.

Q. That suit was not brought till October, 1906, you know, that is about the time it is all completed? A. There were some complaints before that, I could not say offhand what they were.

Q. Were they extensive at all? A. There were a number of them, I could not say how many.

Q. I do not want to go into the details, what was the substance of the complaints being made as affecting subscriptions? A. There were various complaints made, some said that they were promised and guaranteed a large dividend, and they had found out that it would be impossible to pay a large dividend the first few years. Others said that their subscriptions were taken under misrepresentations; and I cannot remember exactly what the other complaints were.

Q. Were any of the complaints respecting the taking of subscriptions under a misapprehension, believing that they were signing for a Branch to be opened? A. I hardly think at that time those objections would have been raised.

Q. What do you say down to the time say of the Laidlaw suit was the situation of the subscriptions, taken by Lindsay? A. I do not exactly understand your question.

Q. Were you familiar with the subscriptions? A. I was.

Q. Was Lindsay taking them in the country and sending them in directly to you? A. He was.

Q. And reporting from time to time? A. He was.

Q. And you I suppose were anxious to see that the subscriptions were got? A. I was.

Q. Will you say, seeing what you knew about the subscriptions, whether you understood there was trouble, dissatisfaction, say up to the time when Laidlaw brought his suit with regard to the subscriptions taken by Lindsay? A. I knew that there were a number of people who were dissatisfied with their subscriptions.
Q. For the reasons you have given us? A. As far as I can remember, yes.
Q. Did you make Lindsay acquainted with those? A. I did.
Q. Was he as familiar as you were with the complaints made down to that time? A. Everything I knew he knew.
Q. Was he in town continually or did you usually correspond? A. He usually came in about Friday night of each week.
Q. And what would he say regarding the subscriptions, what would he and you do? A. He would hand the subscriptions over to me and we would look them over and talk them over, and the following day they would be registered in the books and he would call at the office and get a revised list of the subscribers up-to-date.
Q. Then down to the time when Mr. Laidlaw brought his suit to what extent had he and you got subscriptions taken up? A. I could not exactly answer that question offhand.
Q. Was it pretty nearly finished? A. Yes, nearly finished; I could not say exactly how far it was, though; the books would show that.
Q. Would you say there were probably 100 people involved in complaints about Lindsay's subscriptions? A. I could not say there were 100 people involved, I could not answer that as directly as that.
Q. Not to an exact number I suppose? A. No, I would not think there were near that number.
Q. How many would you put it at? A. There might have been fifty of them; half of that number.
Q. Was anything done by Lindsay to remove the difficulties which had cropped up down to that time? A. No particular move. Lindsay would say he would call on these people again and straighten it out.
Q. I suppose you could not give me at all offhand probably till I have given you something to refresh your memory what subscriptions those were? A. I could not now, at the present moment.
Q. Were you aware that quite a number of the subscriptions were conditional subscriptions? A. I was.
Q. Had they been so reported by Lindsay? A. They were; they were generally marked right on the applications themselves.
Q. Would you be good enough to look at that letter of the 7th December, 1906, which is signed by you? A. Yes, I remember that (Exhibit 24.)
Q. The middle sentence there, you will see what that says, that it was understood of course—A. "That a certain amount of stock now on our books which has to be replaced could be done so by you at par."
Q. "Which has to be replaced", to what did that refer? A. It referred to a subscription of Mr. A. H. Hoover's for one thing, $5,000, and a subscription of a man named Davidson of Flint, Michigan, for $5,000; another one, a man named Smith at Flint, Michigan, for $5,000; one of Honourable Mr. Forget of Regina, for $5,000; I cannot go much farther.
Q. Did that refer to Laidlaw's subscriptions? A. Yes. I think I had those in mind when I wrote that letter.
Q. Had you in mind any subscription of any of the McCorquodales? A.
No, I don't think Lindsay had anything to do with those McCorquodale subscriptions.
Q. These were what Lindsay had to replace, were they? A. These that I have mentioned just now are the chief ones that I remember he had to replace.
Q. Was he to replace them because he and you had agreed that those subscriptions must be put right? A. Not altogether; he had nothing to do with some of those; the Forget subscriptions, for instance, which was on the books, he had nothing to do with.
Q. That was got by you, was it? A. No, that was got before I took charge of the institution.
Q. The others were got by him? A. Yes.
Q. "A certain amount of stock now on our books which has to be replaced could be done so by you at par"? A. Yes.
Q. The statement that you have made I would like to ask you if it is correct: "I said there were numerous letters on file making complaints about the way he got them"—that is Lindsay—"but that in my visits around the country I had run across I said perhaps 100 people who had said their stock was got by fraud and deceit and everything else". Then you go on further: "After the bank was organized Lindsay got subscriptions around Kerwood, etc"—would that statement be correct? A. Not altogether.
Q. How do you qualify it? A. The statement I made there that I was around about the country would refer more particularly to the time after the bank had opened for business when Lindsay—I had been out through the country, but I could not say there were 100 people then complaining.
Q. Can you say what subscription was referred to, when had they been got? A. They were chiefly those that were taken after the organization of the bank and were around about in the neighborhood of villages where we intended to open branches.
Q. I did not perhaps read you the whole of it; I thought perhaps it was not necessary. You say: "In my visits around the country I had run across I said perhaps 100 people who had said their stock was got by fraud and deceit and everything else. After the bank was organized Lindsay got subscriptions around Kerwood and several other places" (naming them) "by saying, We, the undersigned hereby agree to subscribe for the number of shares in the Farmers Bank of Canada and on the terms of the application herein, and then the application was passed there; and this was ruled for the number of shares and his address and a column for the witness. A considerable number of people told me that when they signed that it was folded down, that they were signing an application to establish a branch bank". You were referring I thought to two classes of subscriptions, those got before and those after; what do you say about that? A. I would have to change that a little and say I could not say there were 100 people prior to the organization of the bank that complained; there were letters on file there, but how many I do not remember.
Q. I think you said Lindsay knew of these complaints just as well as you did? A. Yes, I really believe he did.
Q. Coming down to the time of the Laidlaw difficulty I think some one said that the writ was issued and was not served until after the first deposit of $150,000 had been made, do you remember how that was? A. The first $150,000 had been deposited through the Bank of Montreal with the Finance Minister at Ottawa in accordance with the Bank Act. The writ was issued at the closing hour one Saturday, at Osgoode Hall, and the first notice I had of it was when it appeared in the Sunday 'World,' the next morning in its entirety.
Q. You say the $150,000 had been then deposited? A. $150,000 was up then, deposited then, I should say.
Q. Those subscriptions known as the Laidlaw subscriptions, were those a difficulty in your way at once? A. They were.
Q. And what steps were taken to get rid of the writ? A. We bought off Mr. Laidlaw's clients.
Q. Who undertook that part of the work? A. Mr. Lindsay went out in the country and got the transfers of the stock and paid over the money.
Q. And that was done very promptly, was it not? A. Done over night, I think.
Q. The deposit I think of the $150,000 was made on October 16th, and the dismissal of the action took place on October 27th, that would be 11 days afterwards; see if that letter is one of the letters which you wrote after the action was disposed of? A. Yes; I remember writing that letter; I think that was in reply to either a written or verbal request from somebody demanding his notes back.

Q. Would a similar letter be written to the other shareholders? A. No, I do not think I wrote to any of the others; I remember that one because I had a fuss with that one.

Q. I suppose those statements would apply to them all that you made in this letter; Dixon was treated just as all the others were treated? A. The others had not given notice, I do not think they had given notice; there might have been one or two of them, but the majority of them had paid the cash 10% deposit upon their subscriptions.

Q. All those who had not paid would be treated just the same as Dixon? A. The understanding with all those shareholders was that they should be relieved of further responsibility.

Q. That is what I say. This is the clause in the letter: "You will understand, however, that you are relieved from all responsibility under your application for 50 shares of stock in this bank, and while we regret that you are not now one of our subscribers we are pleased that you are entirely satisfied". A. Yes, that would apply to that.

Q. That was the basis of the arrangement? A. Yes.

Q. That removed that difficulty from the way? A. Yes, that removed Mr. Laidlaw from taking any further steps to apply for a winding-up order.

Q. There was nothing then to prevent you going on and completing your organization? A. Nothing then, no.

Q. At the time the Laidlaw writ issued had the notice been given for the meeting of the permanent directors? A. I could not say positively as to that, it was near that time, the 26th October—no, I think that was the 19th October, was it not, the writ of Laidlaw, but I do not think the notice was put in till the following week.

Q. That having been got out of the way there was no further difficulty in the way of organization? A. Nothing then, no.

Q. I suppose you had not positively $150,000 with the Bank of Montreal until you had got enough shares subscribed to make up the $500,000? A. No, I do not think we had the $500,000 at the time that I deposited the $150,000.

Q. You must have been pretty close in sight of it? A. We were very close to it, but I could not tell you what it was.

Q. There is a letter which has been put in showing, if I recollect the figures right, that you had something like $489,000 subscribed? A. Yes, I saw that letter in the other Court.

Q. That is to Mr. Lindsay; would that remind you about how near you got to the point? A. I could not say positively, but when that letter was shown to me in the other Court I was doubtful about the figures.

Q. It was your own letter? A. Yes.

Q. What made you doubtful about the figures? A. I don't think we had that much.

Q. But you wrote and said so? A. I did.

Q. What made you doubtful? A. I saw the books after that and I was not quite sure, and I am not sure yet whether we had—

Q. You saw the books shortly after writing that letter? A. No, when the trials were on at the other Court.

Q. After the bank had failed? A. Yes.

Q. You had not any doubt about it at the time? A. At the time I was quite sure it was right.

Q. And that $489,000 would include these shares that there had been difficulty about? A. Yes.
Q. You finally got the money and deposited it in the Bank of Montreal and got a receipt?  A. Yes.

Q. Having done that what was the next thing to be done?  A. The meeting of the subscribers.

Q. The meeting of the subscribers would come as soon as you had made the deposit in the bank, would that be the time to give notice?  A. Thirty days after deposit had been made after due notice was given in the local newspapers.

Q. Your meeting was on the 22nd of November?  A. The 26th, I think.

Q. So that the deposit would have been made thirty days prior to that?  A. Yes, between the 22nd and the 26th October.

Q. And that meeting was duly held?  A. It was.

Q. Did Lindsay attend it?  A. No, I don't think he did, I could not say positively.

Q. By the way, did he charge you a fee for getting those Laidlaw subscriptions out of the way, as far as you know?  A. I did not understand it at the time he was to charge anything.

Q. He did not attend the meeting you think?  A. I don't think so, I could not say positively; my recollection is that he was not there; the minute book will show every person who was in the room.

Q. Were those who attended all bona fide subscribers?  A. I thought so.

Q. And at the meeting I understand you and I think some one else, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, voted by proxy, did you not, for a large number of subscribers?  A. I did; I cannot speak off hand as regards Dr. Nesbitt.

Q. You did at all events?  A. I do not think there were any proxies in his name though.

Q. How had you got proxies from the subscribers?  A. The application form contained a clause in it appointing a proxy; there was a blank left there to fill in a name, and I filled in my own name in a great many cases, and in others there were other people filled in.

Q. A large number of these subscribers had subscribed while the provisional directors were in office, in fact all of them?  A. Yes.

Q. And I suppose before you took hold at all the subscribers with the provisional directors had given powers of attorney, had they not?  A. Yes.

Q. That is in all those as well as those Lindsay and you had got taken up that you filled in your own name?  A. No, it was only those I took after I took charge of the Bank.

Q. Who was proxy for the others?  A. C. H. Smith, if I remember right.

Q. He was secretary of the provisional directors?  A. Yes.

Q. And was one of them?  A. No, he was not a director, a hired servant.

Q. A hired servant of the provisional directors?  A. He was.

Q. He, however, participated with them in the amount that they got from you?  A. I believe he did.

Q. And you and C. H. Smith then would have had enough votes at that meeting acting on all those proxies to carry anything you wanted?  A. I had enough to carry anything I wanted.

Q. And you exercised that power and carried what you wanted?  A. I did.

Q. After the meeting what was the next step?  A. The next step was to take a list of the subscribers together with an affidavit verifying the same, and the evidence of the notice of the calling of the meeting by way of copies of newspapers, and wait on the Finance Minister requesting a certificate.

Q. And that was duly done?  A. Yes.

Q. You took Mr. Hunter down?  A. I did.

Q. The solicitor of the bank?  A. He was.

Q. And your visit to Ottawa was a short one?  A. No, it lasted a week, nearly so.
Q. Mr. Hunter did not wait? A. No, he waited there two days and then went home and left me there.
Q. He settled with Smith too? A. Yes.
Q. He was there while that was being done? A. Yes.
Q. How many days were you and he down there together? A. About two days.
Q. Then he left? A. Yes.
Q. After Smith was settled with and came home? A. Yes.
Q. Did he return at all? A. No, he did not.
Q. And you got the certificate? A. I got it the end of the week after he went away; I don’t remember, I think it was Friday I got the certificate.
Q. You went down when? A. I went down the early part of the week, I could not say exactly what date it was.
Q. You, I think, had to wait, had you not, in Ottawa for a time before you were able to see the Finance Minister, Mr. Fielding? A. We first saw the Deputy Finance Minister, Mr. Boville, and at that time Mr. Fielding was preparing his budget, and he could not see us for a day or two.
Q. That is what I say; when did you finally see the Finance Minister? A. I saw him two or three times.
Q. Notwithstanding the preparation for the Budget? A. Later on in the week, not in the early part.
Q. On one day or more than one day? A. I think I saw him twice in one day, I am not sure.
Q. That is all you saw him, was it not, just a couple of times? A. My recollection is I saw him three times.
Q. On the same day? A. No, twice on one day and once on another day.
Q. Once on the following day to the two interviews? A. Yes, I saw him one day once and the second day twice, or the first day twice and the second day once; I cannot remember exactly.
Q. Would your statement to Mr. Hunter be right that you got your certificate in 20 minutes? A. After I had satisfied Mr. Fielding, the last interview lasted about 20 minutes when he gave orders for my certificate to be issued.
Q. That was the last interview? A. Yes.
Q. After you delivered your letter to him in reply to his? A. I followed the letter; I sent it over by messenger.
Q. After you had delivered your letter to him in response to his? A. Yes.
Q. Your interview lasted 20 minutes? A. I would say about that.
Q. And at the end of that time you got your certificate? A. Yes.
Q. And came away with it? A. Yes.
Q. Were you requested to return it later on? A. I was not.
Q. By Mr. Fielding or anybody else? A. Never had any hint of such a thing.
Q. Until you got this certificate I suppose no moneys could be paid to anybody? A. Well, as a matter of fact they were, and as a matter of law I found out afterwards it was wrong.
Q. Did Lindsay, for instance, get any money before the certificate was issued? A. Yes.
Q. Who from? A. From me.
Q. To what extent? A. Could not say offhand.
Q. Where did you get the money? A. I got it from the provisional board.
Q. I have the minutes here of the first meeting in which it appears that a number were present representing 1,807 shares in person, and that the following subscribers were present by proxy, W. R. Travers, Toronto, 1,333 shares; W. G.
Lindsay, 1,899 shares, and one or two others amounting to 3,401. Who was elected at that meeting as president? A. At the directors' meeting following the subscribers' meeting Dr. Nesbitt was elected.

Q. I am speaking now of the subscribers' meeting.

MR. COMMISSIONER: They would not elect the president.

MR. HODGINS: No, they would elect the directors.

Q. I see you prove the notice of the meetings, appointed scrutineers, and the directors elected were Colonel McLennan, Colonel Munro, Robert Noble, Allen Eaton, W. G. Sinclair, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, N. M. Devean and John Gilchrist. I see the secretary read the provisional directors' report; was that Mr. Smith? A. No, I was the secretary that time.

Q. You read the report of the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. And they reported: "The Board have to report in the first place that they have the sum of $579,200 bona fide subscribed and out of the subscriptions thereon they have paid into the Treasury Department of the Dominion Government the sum of $250,000, and that the expenses of the organization up to date, as far as has been paid by the Board amounts to the sum of $41,291." I have the original report here of Mr. Lown's in which that figure is considerably more; will you tell me how that came to be altered at that meeting? A. There is a difference of $3,000 according to that.

Q. Yes, do you know how that happened? A. No, I suppose there has been some mistake in entering up that amount; I could not tell you now.

Q. Could you tell at what figure that was carried into the permanent books of the bank when it was opened? A. The books would show that; $41,000 it reads there, and $44,000 here (in Exhibit 15).

Q. You cannot explain the difference? A. No. Some director may have taken some exception to some item of $3,000 that did not belong there. I could not say what it was.

Q. Following the giving of the certificate what payments were made to Mr. Lindsay? A. I made several payments to him, I do not remember.

Q. Do you remember making a payment to him of $10,000? A. I think there were several payments made to him.

Q. I mean immediately afterwards? A. Yes, I remember issuing a cheque to him for that amount.

Q. Out of what moneys was that money paid? A. Out of the funds of the bank that the subscribers had paid in.

Q. I suppose it could not very well have been paid out of anything else? A. No other moneys to pay it out of.

Q. I will just get you to look at these cheques and see if these were paid and paid out of that amount—would these cheques all have been paid out of that amount (7 cheques)? A. Yes, all these were paid out of the funds that were on hand paid in by the subscribers.

Exhibit 35—Seven cheques referred to.

Q. Would you look through these earlier ones for me and tell me which you refer to when you said you paid Lindsay $3,000 prior to this date? A. Part of that cheque, and he got part of that cheque.

Q. Dated May 23rd, 1906, for $3,000? A. He got $1,956 of that.

Q. Is that right? A. Yes, there is a deposit I made to his credit.

Q. Then there is this cheque of June 5th, 1906, for $1,805, of which he got $1,189.50? A. Yes.

These two cheques of May 23rd, 1906, and June 5th, 1905. were made part of Exhibit 35.

Q. What became of the $10,000 that was paid; was that paid to you immediately after the certificate was granted, or was it paid to Lindsay? A. I think there were two $10,000 cheques, I do not know if they were paid to Lindsay or not.
Q. Here is a cheque which is Exhibit 28, Travers to W. J. Lindsay, $10,000? A. Yes, this was charged up to my commissions and paid to Lindsay. Lindsay drew the cash for it at the bank.

Q. What did he do with it, do you know? A. I want to understand why you ask that question.

Q. Because I think I know what he did with it, and I want you to say? A. I would rather not tell it unless I have to.

Mr. Commissioner: What bearing has it on this Inquiry, what he did with it unless that came back to Travers?

Mr. Hodgins: It went to a third person, and I want to ask him about it.

Mr. Commissioner: Has it anything to do with this Inquiry?

Mr. Hodgins: I think so; I think it is necessary to trace up what has become of the money that has gone into the Bank that they got from the subscribers and what was done with it immediately after the charter was issued?

Mr. Commissioner: I suppose if you take the responsibility of saying that the question is proper. A. Mr. Commissioner, there might be a dispute over that, and I would rather not answer it. Of course if you say I must I will.

Q. A dispute between whom? A. As to part of that cheque.

Q. As to what became of it? A. Yes.

Q. You might differ from somebody else? A. Yes.

Q. I think you should answer it? A. You think I should?

Q. I think you should, Mr. Hodgins says he thinks it is relevant to the Inquiry? A. $5,000 of that was paid to Beattie Nesbitt.

Mr. Hodgins: Q. To your knowledge? A. Yes.

Q. Was the cheque drawn with that intention? A. I thought so, yes.

Q. This is dated December 6th, when was he appointed president? A. On the 26th November, the day of the organization meeting.

Q. And this was charged against your commission? A. Yes. Lindsay had no account whatever with the bank; he was entirely a sub-agent of mine and everything he got passed through my account to him.

Q. There was a check for $6,000 to Lindsay which I am looking for, do you remember that? A. I could not say.

Q. That check (Exhibit 28) you say was drawn by Lindsay in cash? A. Yes, Lindsay drew the cash at the bank for that himself.

Mr. Commissioner: Was Lindsay asked about this check? A. Yes, sir, I heard him deny the evidence that I was prepared to give.

Mr. Hodgins: Where; here? A. Yes, I heard him deny what I would swear to.

Q. What you have stated? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what that was paid for? A. It was paid for Dr. Nesbitt's stock; he subscribed for $5,000 and afterwards for $5,000 more, and he had some arrangement by which Mr. Lindsay paid his first $5,000, and there was a round about way of doing it to get it squared up.

Q. Had he subscribed for $5,000 or for $10,000 before the organization meeting? A. His first subscription if I recollect properly was $5,000 and then it was changed to $10,000, that is to say one was destroyed and another one put in its place.

Q. What did Dr. Nesbitt do with the money? A. You will have to ask him that.

Q. I thought you said it was paid on his stock; I want to know who got it? A. That was the intention; Lindsay paid the money over to Nesbitt, and Nesbitt paid it over to the bank.

Q. Who did he pay it to? A. I exchanged another cheque of $5,000 with Nesbitt for it.

Q. On what bank? A. That is to my recollection——

Q. Do I understand that Dr. Nesbitt brought you in this? A. We were there together.
Q. This money that Lindsay had drawn out of the bank and given to him, did he bring it in to you? A. I was there when it was paid to him.
Q. Where was he? A. In the office of the Farmers Bank on the corner of Bay and Adelaide Sts. upstairs.
Q. And what did he do with that cash? A. Who, Nesbitt?
Q. Nesbitt? A. My recollection is he gave it to me and I gave him back another cheque for $5,000.
Q. What did he do with that? A. That paid his stock up.
Q. What did he do with the cheque? A. It was passed into the Accounting Department to pay up his stock.
Q. Why did not you pass in the cash? A. We had a reason for not doing it at that time.
Q. What was the reason? A. I do not remember.
Q. It looks to me as if he had given you the money and you had made a cheque which he afterwards got? A. Yes, that is my recollection of it.
Q. And he afterwards got the money on that cheque? A. He got credit for his stock on it.
Q. What became of the money, did you keep it? A. I do not know, I think I used it for some other purpose.

Mr. Commissioner: It did not go into the bank. A. No, sir.
Q. You exchanged your cheque for it? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hodgins: Your own personal cheque? A. No, it was another bank cheque I exchanged for it; that is my recollection. My memory is not quite so good as it was then, but that is my recollection of it. It has been so contradicted that I am puzzled to say what were exactly the facts.

Q. Mr. Commissioner: This was $10,000 on account of your commissions practically? A. Yes.
Q. You handed it over to Lindsay, Lindsay cashed it; he must have gone out of the office to cash it? A. He did; he went out to the Traders Bank.
Q. And brought back $10,000? A. Yes.
Q. And gave $5,000 to Dr. Nesbitt? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which he handed to you, and gave him the bank's cheque for it? A. For $5,000.
Q. Why the bank's cheque. A. To pass through the Accounting Department, a cross entry.
Q. He just bought a cheque from you? A. Yes.
Q. And that cheque he used to pay up his stock? A. Yes.
Mr. Hodgins: That cheque was drawn on whose account? A. On my account.

Mr. Commissioner: Which cheque are you speaking of? A. $5,000, another cheque drawn to me for commission.

Mr. Hodgins: You say he gave you $5,000 in cash? A. Yes.
Q. You gave him a cheque which you said was a bank cheque? A. Quite so.
Q. Payable to yourself? A. Yes.
Q. And that cheque you handed to him? A. Yes.
Q. And on whose account was it drawn? A. On the Farmers Bank account on the Traders Bank.
Q. What was it charged to? A. To my commissions.
Q. In addition to the $10,000 which Lindsay drew out, there was an additional $5,000 from the Traders Bank? A. Yes, there was $15,000.
Q. $5,000 of that went to the credit of Dr. Nesbitt's stock? A. It did, that is my recollection.
Q. Leaving $5,000 in your hands? A. Yes.
Q. And of course you had kept one-half of the $10,000 yourself? A. No, I did not.

Q. Who had the other half of it? A. Lindsay.

Q. So you got $5,000, Lindsay got $5,000, and Dr. Nesbitt got $5,000 and paid up his stock with it, that is what it comes to? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Then we will find that $5,000 cheque on the same date? A. You will find it that date or the next day.

Q. Did not you give Dr. Nesbitt your cheque that day? A. Yes, but my recollection is the cheque of $5,000 that was given to Nesbitt was dated a day ahead.

Q. What was the purpose of that? A. I cannot say that.

Mr. Commissioner: He suggested that they did not want to show how the transaction took place? A. There was some reason for concealing or for hiding the exact transaction at that time, I don’t remember what it was.

Mr. Commissioner: I rather gathered that was what the witness meant by a round about way? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: It is a fact that not one of your cheques would show anything as to what they were used for, that you never drew a cheque that should tell in any way what it was for? A. No, I did not. Not all my cheques, a great many cheques.

Q. All except your grocery and other accounts, did not you make that statement in regard to it? A. Yes, I think I did.

Q. Is it right? A. I should say so, I think to a large extent.

Q. You know how this cheque was payable? A. Yes, my recollection is it was payable to myself.

Q. And endorsed by you? A. Yes.

Q. Was it handed over to Dr. Nesbitt? A. It would have to be handed to him. Why would he give me the money if he did not get the cheque?

Q. Was it handed? A. That is my recollection, yes, but I am not sure.

Q. Who would be the accountant or person who would get that cheque? A. Mr. Fitzgibbon can tell whether that was the entry made for the stock or not, I cannot tell.

Mr. Commissioner: Does the book show that on that day the stock was paid up?

Mr. Hodgins: I cannot recollect that for the moment; I will verify that.

Mr. Commissioner: Where is the cheque he is now speaking of?

Mr. Hodgins: I have not seen it? A. I have seen that cheque a dozen times at the different trials.

Q. It will be produced in due course, but I do not recollect ever having seen it and I have not if here. I will have that cheque you speak of hunted up and all the entries about that.

Q. You had an agreement with these provisional directors at the start, had not you? A. I had.

Q. And you remember a letter being got, don’t you, by one of them, from Mr. Urquhart, in reference to the notes being taken for stock subscriptions? A. Yes, I remember a letter coming in from Mr. Urquhart.

Q. That is said to be a copy of it (EXHIBIT 21)? A. I heard Mr. Urquhart’s evidence and that was correct.

Q. Do you notice the date of that? A. The 26th June, 1906.

Q. The provisional directors have all been examined and they seem to think it was a perfectly proper thing for you to have made that agreement with them on July 4th; will you just give me the history of it from your point of view? A. Between the time that the first agreement was made with me, that would be on the 12th March and the 4th July everything ran very smoothly until one Saturday that Mr. Lindsay brought in an unusually large number of subscriptions and then they refused to allot them unless I made a new agreement with them; that was the origin of the second agreement.

Your agreement of March, did that contain the provision that they should allot? A. I do not think so.

Q. Were you to be paid on allotment your commission? A. I was to be paid half on the payment of 10% by the individual shareholder, and the other half when the stock was on allotment.

Q. I see at a meeting of the provisional board dated 23rd June, it was moved by Mr. Fraser, and seconded by Mr. Gallagher: "That instructions be given to Mr. Travers that no notes be accepted in lieu of cash for payment of stock, and that no agent or sub-agent employed by him accept the same, but the conditions set forth in the form of application be adhered to on a cash basis unless otherwise specially ordered by the Board." Were you notified of that? A. I was notified of it, yes.

Q. And I see the letter from Mr. Urquhart is dated after that; was it got in consequence of that notification to you or how did it come to be considered together? A. I think that when they found I was willing to make the new agreement to pay them more money that they were satisfied to get legal advice on it and make it satisfactory, that is my recollection.

Q. They would not allot them the large number? A. They refused to allot them.

Q. What was their objection? A. I cannot say which one of them told me that they would not allot them, one of them certainly did, because I would have control and would put them on the outside.

Q. What is the meaning of that? A. It meant to say I would have the voting power at the shareholders' meeting and could do as I wished; that is what I understood from the conversation.

Q. Is that conversation prior to this agreement of the 4th July? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And was anything further said to you beyond the fact that they would not allot because you would have the balance of power? A. They said they wanted $10,000 on account of the new agreement.

Q. This is before the agreement at all? A. I do not remember anything more than that; there might have been, I cannot recall it just now.

Q. You agree in the agreement to pay them $20,000? A. Yes, half down and half after the bank was organized.

Q. One or other of the provisional directors stated something to the effect that they were much more moderate than you; that you wanted to give them a much larger sum, or that they were entitled to a much larger sum? A. I contradict them all on that point; I heard their evidence here.

Q. What do you say about that? A. I say I was unwilling to give them as much as $20,000, but I was practically forced to do it.

Q. What hold had they on you? A. I would have been down and out, that would have been all the hold they had on me; I could not have gone any further.

Q. This agreement of the 4th July, part of Exhibit 12, recites your 12th March agreement and its annulment, and they to allow you to sell what is still unsold, and to allow you 10% commission, and then it makes provision for engaging you at $5,000, which was $1,000 increase over the old one? A. I think so.

Q. And a pension. And then Smith agrees to surrender certain rights he had, and you agree to accept the legitimate accounts as they now stand upon the books for expenses of the organization to date, and to allow the directors and Smith the sum of $20,000 as remuneration for their services, surrender of charter, etc., to be paid out of the funds of the bank, provided the same be confirmed at a meeting of the subscribers; you to have full control of the office of the bank and of all its affairs immediately after the making of this agreement. Up to that time and the making of that agreement was there any agreement between you that you should pay the provisional directors for their services? A. No, I had no say whatever, I did not attend their meetings, I knew nothing of what was going on beyond the fact that I was getting stock and was getting near the mark which would comply with the written agreement.

Q. Out of what was that $20,000 to be paid? A. To be paid out of the subscribers' money, it was paid out of that, I mean to say $10,000 of it, not the $20,000.

Q. How is it the same day another agreement is drawn reciting the prior one and you accepting the responsibility for the $20,000 instead of leaving the responsibility really with the subscribers; how does the second agreement come to be drawn? Would you like to look at it? A. Yes; I would like to see it. Mr. Lown was a solicitor, and I was just trying to recall the reason he had for this. Mr. Lown wished this second agreement made for the purpose of having a receipt attached to it signed by all the provisional board, if I remember right, and I read it over and I did not see anything that conflicted with the other agreement and so I passed it.

Q. I understood that under that one, perhaps I am wrong,—that this $20,000 was subject to ratification, and in the other that you took the responsibility of getting that ratification, and if you did not get it you were liable for it? A. I did not understand it that way; I found that in the minutes after I got them, but I knew nothing of that at that time.

Q. You found that was their impression afterwards? A. Yes, after I got the minutes; I had not seen the minutes up to that time.

Q. How was it that that agreement having been signed was deposited with a third party and you did not get it until later on? A. It was suggested by Mr. Fraser I think, if I remember.

Q. Was it to be an effective agreement? A. I do not remember the terms of the agreement; I did not keep a copy of it.

Q. It was left anyways with Messrs. Robertson and MacLennan and was not to be delivered up except on the order of the provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. What was the object of that? A. I suppose the object was to have something to bind me to carry the matter through for them was all I could make out of it.

Q. You paid them $10,000 on that same day? A. I did.

Q. And how was that money procured? A. It was procured from the Traders Bank out of the funds that were paid in by the shareholders.

Q. Who signed the cheque for that? A. Mr. Lown, I think, and myself.

Q. Under the earlier agreement of the 4th July you were to countersign all cheques? A. Yes.

Q. So that you and Mr. Lown signed the cheque for $10,000, was the money drawn out or a cheque handed over? A. They were drawn out to my order and I endorsed them and handed them over to them.

Q. Were there more cheques than one? A. There were four cheques; I saw them here a minute ago.

Mr. Commissioner: Was that charged to your commissions account? A. They charged it to my commissions account.

Q. What right had they to do that? A. I did not think they had any right; I thought it was understood under that first agreement that it was out of the funds of the bank, and they were holding themselves responsible for it and I was to be held personally liable for it.

Q. There is a statement somewhere, I thought it was on the back of this, of the amounts paid to the various parties, and I just want to ask you one question about that—I don't know just where the memorandum I saw is—out of that cheque Smith got $2,500 and the others varying sums— I will be able to tell that exactly a little later on when I put my hands on the memorandum? A. I do not think you can prove that by those cheques, how that money was divided up.
Q. I am not asking that; I am telling you I am in a position to prove Smith got $2,500 out of that? A. I am satisfied he did.

Q. I just want to carry you for a moment down to Ottawa; when you got down to Ottawa you found Smith there? A. Yes.

Q. And his demand was for $2,500. A. Yes, so Mr. Hunter told me.

Q. And if he got $2,500 out of this cheque, it would probably be the $2,500 for the balance, would it not? A. Yes.

Q. You settled with him, didn’t you? A. Yes.

Q. How much did you give him? A. $1,800.

Q. Was that paid in cash? A. No, I gave him an I.O.U. for it to Mr. Smith at that time, and then exchanged it for a cheque later on.

Q. How was it you paid Smith so large a sum as $1,800 when none of the others got anything beyond a few hundred dollars? A. Mr. Hunter and his solicitor arranged that.

Q. You cannot give any reason for that? A. I have my own reasons, yes.

Q. Were there any reasons expressed down there that led you to settle with him on a different basis? A. Yes, I understood he was going to put a protest in with Mr. Fielding regarding some of the subscriptions.

Q. He was disposed of there, and you afterwards settled with the other provisional directors? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not pay them the balance—— A. I did not think they were entitled to it; I got rid of them as easily as I could.

Q. In other words you had to pay the $10,000, but you did not have to pay the other? A. I did not have to pay the other and I did not.

Q. I would like to ask you about the subscription of W. J. Lindsay; the subscription is apparently dated on the 22nd October for $50,000? A. Yes.

Q. If your letter to Lindsay that I have already quoted is correct there was no necessity for $50,000—when was that subscription made and when was it dated and used? A. Lindsay left the subscription signed in blank with me to be used to complete any amount that we needed, that is my recollection of it, and I filled the date in.

Q. When did you fill the date in? A. I filled the date in on or about near the meeting time, near November 26th, prior to the meeting; I cannot just say what date it was.

Q. You say the 26th November the meeting was? A. Yes, and I dated Lindsay’s subscription the 22nd October if I remember right, to comply with the notice that was in the paper.

Q. It would be about a month back? A. Yes, I ante-dated it a month.

Q. When did Lindsay know his subscription had gone on? A. He knew what I was doing all the time; I could not say when he knew it was registered on the books; he must have known of it prior to the meeting.

Q. He does not admit he did? A. I heard his evidence about it.

Q. I would like to see to be as definite as you can about it; was any attempt made in the books to make them appear as if this was the correct date; it looks to me as if there was? A. No, I do not think so; I think you will find the subscriptions break off about October 22nd.

Q. Look at this, for instance (Minute book, Exhibit 9) you will see that Lindsay’s subscription is the very last and the impression is entirely different; do you see his is the very last? A. Yes.

Q. And the minute is dated October 26th, and apparently allotted on that date? A. Yes.

Q. So if what you tell us is right, it is added there, that must have been put in afterwards. Did Mr. Lown, the Chairman, know that? A. I think he could explain that.

Q. Do you know whether he did or not? A. Mr. Lown should know all about it.
Q. We have a duplicate of that list which does not have Lindsay's name on at all; do you know anything about the addition of that in typewriting to that list? A. It has all been typewritten at the same time.

Q. I will be able to show you that that is not the case, but I want to know what you know about it. Who instructed his name to be put in there under date October 26th? A. I could not say; I may have done so.

Q. Look at this book (Large subscription book, Exhibit 19) what date does that bear for allotment? A. Here is 500, October 26th. A. That is written in typewriting, the ones before that are both November 24th; do you remember anything about the instructions as to what appeared in this book? A. This book is copied from the other book; I cannot tell you unless I saw the original book.

Q. What is the original book? A. That one, (Exhibit 18).

Q. That appears to be dated? A. The 22nd October.

Q. Whose handwriting is that? A. That is in Mr. Shaver's handwriting.

Q. Did you instruct him to put it in the books? A. I presume I did.

Q. He must have written it in sometime close to the November meeting? A. My recollection is that from there on up to and including all under October 22nd, that those were written in just prior to the meeting.

Q. And were they ante-dated? A. Some of them were, yes.

Q. Tell me which of those were; there is Lindsay you have spoken of; what about Dr. Nesbitt 100 shares? A. $5,000 was ante-dated; Lown is ante-dated; Hunter's, I could not say for sure; McCorquodale's ante-dated, the next McCorquodale, and the next McCorquodale; Fitzgibbon was ante-dated, Gallagher was ante-dated; Luxton was ante-dated; Bradley was ante-dated, at least that is my recollection; I am not sure about Mr. Gilchrist.

Q. What about Linton, Richardson, Mitchell and Gilchrist? A. Richardson I think was; I could not say positively about the others.

Q. Luxton was a stock seller at Milton? A. He was working for Lindsay, sub.

Q. Who was Bradley? A. That is another sub.

Q. You think the handwriting of all those was Shaver's? A. It was all Shaver's handwriting, yes.

Q. Under whose instructions? A. I cannot say I gave him instructions about each one of them; we handed over the subscriptions to him and he entered them up, but he was doing his general work under my instructions of course.

Q. Of course if they were all ante-dated he might be merely a copyist putting them down as they were? A. I do not think he copied those in until a few days before the meeting; that is my recollection.

Q. Would that have been after the Laidlaw subscriptions had been got out of the way? A. Yes, it would.

Q. Who is Gilchrist? A. John Gilchrist is an officer in the Crompton Corset Company.

Q. Can you tell and does that book show the amount up to Gilchrist's name, the total amount of stock subscribed? A. Yes, 5,448 shares it shows there if the additions are correct, here, I think they are.

Q. $596,200 of shares would indicate that there were some 500 shares got after that, would it not? A. Do you refer to the list that was filed with the Government?

Q. Yes? A. I would have to see the list and see why it does not correspond with this; I cannot answer just off hand.

Q. You took the list right down to the time you went to the Government? A. Yes, the list was supposed to be an exact copy of this book.

Q. That was in November? A. Yes.

Q. What had you got according to this book down to? A. According to this it was 5,448 shares.

Q. And the next date in that is December 22nd? A. Yes.
Q. So that those you have given us are the concluding ones of the whole list?
A. Yes, I should say they were.
Q. Prior to getting the certificate? A. Yes.
Q. Is this the list, Exhibit 17, that went in to the Government, do you know?
A. That is a copy of it.
Q. You do not know whether it is the original? A. It is a copy of it; I am sure it is not the original.
Q. In that book of yours where does the Lindsay subscription come in, after whom? A. After M. Beattie, Campbellville.
Q. The one immediately after that in this list is W. Beattie Nesbitt, 100 shares? A. That might be.
Q. I just want to know because I do not see any reason why it should be put there; why is this Lindsay one put out of its order and away up perhaps two or three places ahead and out of its legitimate order according to that book? A. I could not answer that question. Fitzgibbon ought to be able to answer; he is the accountant that prepared this statement.
Q. It does appear, I am right, am I not, it does appear out of its order; if you look at the original book you are referring to? A. Yes, it should be near the end.
Q. You will find the Beattie Nesbitt, the Lown, and these others all in their proper order a couple of pages over. In the prospectus filed in Ottawa there are a number of names given—one on the prospectus that was filed with your application—a number of names given as directors that have sworn they had not agreed to be directors: Major Beattie and Calvert? A. So far as Major Beattie is concerned I think he had a poor memory when he gave that evidence. I called him up on the long distance phone after he had been approached by Mr. Lindsay, or perhaps I should say Mr. Lindsay called him up and then allowed me to speak to him and he asked me who I was, and I told him "You ought to know me; you have known my people for 25 years; we have dealt hundreds and thousands of dollars in your store"; and he said "Oh, yes, that is all right", he said, "I have no objections". He did not exactly tell me I could put his name down but I inferred that he intended that I should, but later on he objected to it.
Q. And before this prospectus was filed at Ottawa? A. Yes, that was before that.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: Which was,—the objection before or the consent before?
A. The objection was raised before I had filed the subscription list in Ottawa.
Mr. HODGINS: What you tell us about speaking over the telephone was the original talk you had? A. That would be about March or April, 1906.
Q. And before this prospectus was filed in Ottawa with the Finance Minister, Major Beattie had withdrawn his consent, whatever it was, to be a member of the Board? A. Yes, he had refused to subscribe for stock to qualify as a member of the Board; therefore, he could not be elected.
Q. But he had declined to be a director? A. Yes, he declined to subscribe so that he could not be a director.
Q. He might have consented to be a director and then declined to subscribe?
A. I understood Major Beattie when his name was put upon the provisional prospectus to have consented to have it there.
Q. I am only asking now with regard to the date, which is the 27th November, when you verified the prospectus which contains the statement: "The following gentlemen consented to act as directors if elected", whether at that time you did not know that Major Beattie had withdrawn consent he had given, whether by refusing to subscribe or otherwise? A. I knew that, yes.
Q. Would that apply to John D. Ivey? A. Yes.
Q. Would it apply to W. S. Calvert? A. Yes.
Q. Thomas Urquhart? A. Yes.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. When you were in Ottawa were you asked anything with regard to the truth of the statements made in the prospectus? A. I did not think they were untruthful at that time.

Q. Were you asked anything about their truthfulness? A. Yes, Mr. Fielding discussed the subscribers' list with me.

Q. What names did he mention? A. He mentioned those Laidlaw names and he mentioned some others that somebody had been kind enough to call his attention to, and I told him there was no provision in the Bank Act to take those names off the list until after the Bank had organized, but that we had sufficient over and above that.

Q. Laidlaw's subscriptions amounted to $21,300? A. Yes.

Q. What were the others he referred to? A. I cannot say exactly which ones they were; if I remember rightly it was Smith and Davidson of Flint, and Hon. Samuel Merner.

Q. How much was that? A. Five thousand dollars.

Q. That would be fifteen thousand more? A. Then Hon. Mr. Forget, that is $5,000; and then A. H. Hoover's five thousand more; and he spoke about Lindsay's $50,000, but he made no objection to it; that is my recollection of it.

Q. Was that at one of the interviews with him, I suppose? A. Yes.

Q. On the first day? A. I think it was immediately after Mr. Calvert introduced me to him.

Q. That was the first interview? A. I think that was the first interview we had, I am not sure about that though.

Q. Then you think somebody had been telling him about the difficulties regarding this list? A. There was no doubt about it that he had been communicated with or been spoken to by numerous people.

Q. Did he ask you about the truthfulness of the prospectus so far as the names was concerned? A. No, I do not think we spoke about that, in fact I am sure we did not.

Q. You know that Mr. Forget is mentioned as one of the directors; did he ask you if he was going to be a director notwithstanding his stock was questioned? A. No, that was not spoken about.

Q. The point was he was getting information from you as to the stock subscription list? A. Yes, the question was as to whether the list of stock subscribers was bona fide or not.

Q. The amount you have mentioned comes as nearly as I can make it to $41,300; there are four of them of five thousand each, and the Laidlaw's subscription $21,300? A. Yes.

Q. And then there is the Lindsay one, the fifty thousand; those were the ones he asked you about? A. Yes; my recollection is that all of those or some of them at least he asked me about. I could not swear positively every single one was; I know he went over a few of them.

Q. Those are in your mind? A. Yes, those are in my mind as the ones he likely questioned me about.

Q. What explanation did you give about the Laidlaw ones? A. I simply said I left them on the list because I could not take them off, because I did not need them.

Q. What did he say to you? A. He had been served with a letter from Mr. Leighton McCarthy explaining the whole matter to him, so I did not have to tell him anything.

Q. That they had been settled with? A. I think so; I did not read the letter, but that is what I understood was inferred there.

Q. You mean he had been told what had become of the subscriptions? A. Yes, he had been told in the first place about the writ, and in the second place he had withdrawn his objections, and he explained why he had withdrawn them.
Q. In discussing that did he speak as to the statement in Mr. McCarthy's letter as to the way in which the deposit was being raised? A. No, he did not speak about that at that time.

Q. "I received information," Mr. McCarthy says, "that alleged subscribers for shares paid a large sum of money in cash and have signed notes for other large sums of money and that the persons professing to act in the name of the Bank have transferred notes and received proceeds, and that a deposit either has been made or will be made of the cash received and the proceeds of those notes or a sufficient amount to make up $250,000." Was that element of it discussed? A. The first I heard of that was Mr. Fielding wrote me a letter.

Q. On the first occasion there was no discussion of that? A. No, my recollection is there was nothing said about that at that time.

Q. He was discussing with you the getting rid of them, he took that up with you? A. Not as to detail, just in a casual way that we had settled it.

Q. He just treated it in a casual way? A. Yes.

Q. Did you assure him they had? A. I told him it was arranged.

Q. Why did you volunteer the remark you were leaving them there in the list? A. Because there was nothing in the Bank Act which would permit me to take them off the stock list once they were put on there.

Q. Did he assent to that? A. I do not remember; there is nothing that enables us in the Bank Act to take them off.

Q. Therefore you were obliged to send them in? A. I had them sent in, they were in.

Mr. Commissioner: They were in; he could not get the thing back to change it; it was there.

Mr. Hodgins: Is that what you meant, because you had sent it in to him you could not change it? A. Yes.

Q. I understood you to mean after the subscription was once taken you could not change it? A. I will say that as well.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him there was no provision in the Bank Act to remove those subscriptions.

Q. From what? A. From the subscription list, from that book.

Q. After he had the list that you had sent him in, is that what you mean? A. Yes, exactly.

Q. Did he assent to that view? A. I do not think he expressed any opinion about it.

Q. Why did you say "we have enough without that"? A. I called his attention that we had more than five hundred thousand dollars, that even if those were eliminated we had sufficient left.

Q. How much had you then? A. The subscription list shows $579,000, I think.

Mr. Commissioner: $579,000 is what this document shows (Exhibit 17).

Mr. Hodgins: The printed one is $578,900, and there were thirty five hundred shares, but those were taken afterwards? A. What list are you referring to?

Mr. Commissioner: Those are on separate paper; they are apparently included in that lot.

Mr. Hodgins: You see at the bottom, you will find the total (in printed return)? A. This is a true copy of the list I sent in (Exhibit 17).

Q. At that time if you had deducted Lindsay as well as those others you would not have had over $500,000? A. No, we would not.

Q. What was the discussion with regard to the Forget subscription, what did Mr. Fielding say about that? A. I cannot swear that he said anything directly about that, but he said there were some conditional subscriptions, he understood, and I said that those would be replaced, but in the meantime we had enough without them; that is my recollection of my conversation with him.
Q. Were the names mentioned that you have given me here?  A. There were some names mentioned, but I cannot swear to each one of them; there were some mentioned.
Q. The Forget subscription was a conditional subscription?  A. Yes, it was written on the face of it.
Q. Two men in Flint were conditional subscriptions, were not they?  A. There was nothing to indicate that they were conditional.
Q. But you knew it?  A. Yes.
Q. And Hoover's was?  A. Hoover's was written on the face of the subscription itself.
Q. Is that one of those you mention?  A. Yes. My recollection is I mentioned that; the original subscriptions were sent to me at Ottawa.
Q. Original subscriptions?  A. I had them all there.
Q. Do you mean the whole bunch?  A. Those papers like that that represented every subscription that was on the list. (Similar to subscription form in Exhibit 25).
Q. Was that after your conversation with Mr. Fielding?  A. After first one.
Q. Did you telegraph for them?  A. Mr. Hunter came back and had them sent down.
Q. Mr. Hunter came back and had them sent down to you?  A. Yes.
Q. That is the subscriptions which are similar to this exhibit 25?  A. Yes, the original subscriptions signed by the subscribers themselves.
Q. You would get that naturally a couple of days after Mr. Hunter left; if he left at night and got here in the morning you would get it on the following morning?  A. Yes.
Q. You were prompted I suppose by Mr. Fielding's interview to get those?  A. Yes. I think I told Mr. Hunter that there might be some questions come up. I think he advised me to get them, and said he would attend to it when he went back.
Q. And they actually reached you in Ottawa?  A. They reached me in Ottawa.
Q. Had you promised Mr. Fielding to get them?  A. I could not say.
Q. Did you show them to him?  A. I showed them to somebody, I do not remember whether it was Mr. Fielding or Mr. Boville, or somebody else in the Department, I could not say. My recollection is I showed them to somebody.
Q. You showed this pile of papers?  A. My recollection is I showed them to somebody.
Q. Nobody suggested that; is your recollection clear upon it?  A. I remember having the subscriptions there, and somebody looking at them; I do not know whether it was at the Department or whether it was Mr. Guthrie; I do not remember that now. My memory is not as good as it was a few months ago.
Mr. Travers: Mr. Commissioner, in bringing me up could not you see that they give me refreshments?  I have had nothing to eat since 7 o'clock?
Mr. Commissioner: That ought to be seen to; it ought to be done by the Commission.
Mr. Hodgins: I had no idea of that, and if you had mentioned it before I would have seen to it. Mr. Thompson will see that the officer is provided with money for that purpose.
The Commission adjourned at 4 p.m. until 11 a.m., tomorrow.
The Commission continued its sittings at 11 a.m.

W. R. TRAVERS, Examination continued—

Mr. HODGINS: Look at this cheque and see if that is the cheque you spoke of yesterday as being made out after you got the cash from Dr. Beattie Nesbitt? A. Yes, I think that is the cheque.

EXHIBIT 36—Cheque dated December 7th, 1906, for $5,000 to W. D. Travers signed "The Farmers Bank of Canada, W. R. Travers, General Manager".

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Do you keep your slips to show the deposits? A. They should show.

Q. To trace this up, because apparently it must have gone through the Clearing House? A. Yes, I think it went through as a cross entry, sir.

Q. It was paid on the 7th December, the same day it was dated. Have you that book here?

Mr. HODGINS: No, those will be in Mr. Clarkson's possession. I will be able to trace that up when I have Mr. Clarkson here. This I note is accepted by the Traders on the 7th December, who took it over? A. Oh, I think it was deposited, I think it would appear on the deposit slip.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: It would hardly be likely. It is marked paid on the 7th and accepted on the 7th.

Mr. HODGINS: Your signature on that is duplicated.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: He has made a mistake.

Mr. HODGINS: It would look as if somebody had objected to the signature you put on first? A. No, I had a bad pen and I wrote it the second time for fear they might object.

Q. Can you throw any light on it of what became of it? A. It went through in the ordinary banking business and back again at the end of the month; my recollection is it is just a cross entry.

Q. Would this letter have any bearing on that transaction signed by Dr. Nesbitt? A. Yes, that refers to it.

Q. That is a letter to yourself dated May 10th, 1910: "Dear Mr. Travers: Referring to our conversation of yesterday, I remember well being in your office, then upstairs, on December 6th, 1906, and W. J. Lindsay coming in and handing me a parcel of Traders Bank notes to the amount of $5,000; they were hundred dollar bills, if I remember rightly. This was in accordance with a private arrangement I had with him. Yours truly, (Signed) Beattie Nesbitt." What was the conversation of yesterday to which he refers? A. I had spoken to him about it.

Q. That is three years after the event? A. Yes, I was to go under an examination, Lindsay brought a suit against me for commissions and I was to go under examination and I wanted to know exactly the facts of the matter.

Q. Had you any doubt about them? A. No.

Q. What was the object of this letter? A. I had no doubt about it; I wanted Nesbitt to put it in writing for me.

Q. Wanted to produce it on the examination? A. I did not produce it.

Q. Was that the idea you should? A. My solicitor thought it would be wise for me to get that letter from him.

Q. Who was your solicitor? A. Mr. Hunter.

Q. This speaks of a private arrangement he had with Lindsay; did he explain what that was? A. No.

Q. Or did you know? A. No, not at the time.
Q. At what time?  A. At that time.

Q. At the time of the letter?  A. At the time of the transaction I did not know it.

Q. Did you learn it afterwards?  A. I think as Dr. Nesbitt is going under a trial, I do not think it is fair to me—of course Mr. Commissioner knows better than I do, but I feel a little reluctant to answer these questions as he is coming up before the Criminal Court and I have to give evidence.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not suppose that is a reason for stopping the inquiry. You have endeavoured to protect him from any unfair results; I think you have done all you can and must answer now. A. What is your question?

Mr. Hodgins: Did you learn it afterwards?  A. Yes, I learned it from the Doctor in conversation that Lindsay had agreed if he went on the Board and became President, that his stock of $5,000 should be paid for. I did not approach Dr. Nesbitt, I never knew Dr. Nesbitt, till a week or two before the meeting of the shareholders, never heard of him except to know him as a politician and a leader of the Conservative party in the City, and beyond that I did not know him.

Q. Do you mean to say that you, the prime organizer of the bank, allowed Lindsay to dictate who should be President, his name to be mentioned only a week before he was elected?  A. I did permit that.

Q. Lindsay must have had a considerable amount of power in connection with the organizing of the bank?  A. He had power to get the subscriptions and he brought a good many of those names on the provisional Board to me; I did not see the men.

Q. How do you account for his being able to name the President?  A. There were several men named for the President and they fell down after the Laidlaw suit, and we were in a fix at that time.

Q. Who was in a fix?  A. I was.

Q. And Lindsay?  A. Lindsay no doubt felt he would be unable to collect the balance of his commissions if anything happened that the bank did not go on.

Q. This arrangement was then come to?  A. Yes.

Q. And Lindsay did not tell you he had arranged to qualify Beattie Nesbitt?  A. No, I did not ask that.

Q. That was not stated to you?  A. No.

Q. Did you know that the by-laws passed at the meeting required that $3,000—

Mr. Commissioner: Had not you better get whether that $500 came out of Lindsay's or his commissions?  A. At the present time it is out of Lindsay's; that is the dispute between Lindsay and myself.

—Exhibit 37: Letter May 10th, 1910, from Beattie Nesbitt to Travers re $5,000 handed to Nesbitt.

Mr. Hodgins: We got up to the point yesterday that Beattie Nesbitt got $5,000, that you got $5,000, and that Lindsay got $5,000?  A. There was $15,000 drawn.

Q. There is no doubt that Lindsay got away with $5,000 quite apart from this $5,000; is not that right?  A. Yes, and I charged him with $10,000.

Q. The cheque to you was for $10,000?  A. Yes.

Q. Of which half was yours and half was Lindsay's?  A. No, I would not say that; I was paying him $10,000, that was my intention at that time.

Q. Out of which we found yesterday you got $5,000 and Lindsay got $5,000?  A. I did not get $5,000 out of that cheque, that was wrong. I said I got $5,000 out of the next cheque; Nesbitt simply cashed that cheque for me.
Q. We at all events got that far that each of you got $5,000? A. Yes.
Q. And then you say that this $5,000 which Beattie Nesbitt got came out of Lindsay? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: It was charged to Lindsay.
Mr. Hodgins: What I mean is it had come out of whatever was coming to Lindsay? A. I do not know what you mean, I am trying to tell you the transaction but I am not on trial.
Q. How did it come out of Lindsay? A. The cheque was drawn to Lindsay for $10,000, and I charged $10,000 against Lindsay’s commissions; $5,000 of it went to pay Nesbitt’s stock. I did not propose to have the $5,000 come out of my commissions.
Q. When was that charge made? A. The day the cheque was drawn.
Q. The books will show that? A. No, there were no books kept of that; it was a matter between Lindsay and myself.
Q. What do you mean by the charge was made the day the cheque was drawn? A. Charged it in my own mind if you wish it that way. I did not keep any books with Lindsay beyond the registering of the stock; I could figure up from there from time to time.
Q. When you say charged you will understand that, speaking as a former banker, it is likely to be understood you mean charged in the books? A. Yes.
Q. And if you mean it in your mind, say so. Then there was no actual memorandum except in your own mind for some time afterwards? A. Nothing at all but the cheques which were issued to me.
Q. We have so far as the records go the cheques and who got the money? A. Yes.
Q. That is all? A. Yes.
Q. We can make up our own minds as to who it should be charged to? A. Quite so.
Mr. Commissioner: Ask him if there was any trace kept, any entry made of the sums he paid to Lindsay out of the cheques he drew to himself.
Mr. Hodgins: To begin with was the system of drawing cheques out that they were payable to you, and you were the one who was entitled to the commission and you paid Lindsay out of what you got? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: Did he get any voucher or make any entry of payments? A. The cheques that were issued to him were endorsed by him, that is the receipt I had for those amounts, and I made certain deposits to his credit in another bank, which speak for themselves.
Mr. Hodgins: We put in two of those yesterday; then as between you and Lindsay where do we find, where does any one find any trace of what was done with that particular cheque of $10,000? A. We cannot find any trace of it.
Q. It is in dispute between you and Lindsay? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: What is the dispute? A. He claims he has not been paid that $5,000 and many other five thousand dollars, I think he claims $36,000.
Q. Does he claim that $5,000 should have been paid by the bank or by you, the qualification money? A. He claims he paid that $5,000 to me as half the commissions on that cheque.
Q. And that you gave it to Nesbitt? A. And that I made it a present to Nesbitt.
Mr. Hodgins: If that be the case, that letter must be wrong that Lindsay came into the office when you were there and that Lindsay gave Beattie Nesbitt $10,000? A. No, it is not; I have told you several times that Lindsay came in and paid it to Nesbitt in my presence.
Q. And his contention is you paid it to Nesbitt? A. He contends he paid it to me.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

MR. COMMISSIONER: I have forgotten whether you asked Lindsay about that; I don't think he gave any account about that? A. Yes, he swore to that; I heard him swear to it here.

MR. HODGINS: If Lindsay claims that you paid that it must be upon a basis that you had agreed to qualify Beattie Nesbitt and not him? A. Yes, I believe that is the contention.

Q. And your statement today is that you did not know Beattie Nesbitt until a week before he was elected? A. I would not say a week, it might be two weeks before, shortly before.

Q. And that his name came forward entirely through Lindsay? A. Yes, that is as I understood it.

Q. Did you ever agree to qualify Beattie Nesbitt? A. I did not.

Q. Had not Dr. Nesbitt come to your notice in connection with the loan that was got for the $80,000 from the Trusts and Guarantee Company early in October, 1906? A. No, I don't think I had any conversation at that time with Dr. Nesbitt.

Q. You cannot recall that at the moment? A. I did not know the man at that time; he called on me at the Queens Hotel where I was living after Laidlaw had entered that infamous suit.

Q. He called on you? A. He called on me himself.

Q. In reference to the presidency? A. In reference to taking stock and becoming a director.

Q. Perhaps you will recognize this application of his for stock? A. Yes, that is his application.

Q. Is that the one that was ante-dated? A. Yes, I think it was the only one I think that is on record now.

Q. That was taken by you or taken by whom, that subscription? A. I could not swear to that.

Q. Whose writing is the date in? A. The writing is my handwriting, but the name of the proxy is written by some other handwriting, I don't know whose.

EXHIBIT 38—Application of Beattie Nesbitt, dated October 22nd, 1906, for 100 shares of stock.

Q. These cheques I think would be the ones paid to the provisional directors? A. Yes, those are the cheques.

Q. I see they are all payable to you, signed by the Farmers Bank by A. S. Lown, Chairman, and G. H. Smith, Secretary Treasurer? A. Yes.

EXHIBIT 39—Four cheques dated July 4th, 1906, signed "The Farmers Bank of Canada, A. S. Lown, Chairman; G. H. Smith, Secretary Treasurer", for $2,500, $2,000, $3,500, $3,000, all payable to W. R. Travers.

Q. Exhibit 13 already in is the power of attorney to you from the provisional directors, together with a memorandum as to the division of the money, and endorsed on the back of it is what I could not find yesterday, the statement of how much each of these gentlemen got. There are two cheques which have just been put in of $2,500 each, Mr. Smith appears to have got one, and Mr. Lown the other, from that endorsement? A. I could not say as to how they distributed that money, with the exception of the endorsement of Mr. Fraser on one of the cheques, which speaks for itself.

Q. Will you just look at Exhibit 16 and tell me if that is the document under which you finally got that agreement from Robertson & Maclennan, the agreement which you and the provisional directors had signed? A. That was the order to obtain the paper; I am not sure whether I ever got it or not.

Q. Here is Lindsay's statement of claim in that action in which he admits that up to December 7th, 1906, he received from the Farmers Bank, either directly or through the defendant Travers, on account of commissions, the sum of $13,527.50; that is up to December 7th, would that include, in your view, that $10,000 or only $5,000 of it? A. That is his statement of claim; he never was examined under that statement of claim; I disputed the figures.
Q. At all events this is in your favour so to speak, for an admission he got so much money; and he further says, "On and after the 7th December, 1906, there was placed to his credit by the defendant Travers and he received the sum of $7,000"—that would make $20,527.50. Would that—of course I do not mean to bind you any way, but speaking generally—would that be fairly accurate as to the amount he had actually got? A. No, it would not.

Q. He got more than that? A. Yes.

Q. You claim he was overpaid? A. Yes, I claim he was overpaid.

Q. At all events that was his statement at the time; I suppose from his point of view that would not admit any more than needed. Probably it is right that from the 5th June or some time, say 4th July, till December you had made no deposits to his credit for commissions? A. I had; they speak for themselves.

Q. From June, 1906, to December, 1906, you had made payments to Lindsay for deposit to his credit? A. Yes. !

Q. And that has come out of the subscriptions? A. Yes.

Q. There is a copy of a letter addressed by you to Lindsay, dated April 27th, 1906, which ends up: "I am enclosing you a new form of application leaving the proxy blank. Kindly take all your subscriptions without putting the name in at all. I have a new wrinkle and will explain it to you when I see you". Mr. Lindsay replied to that on the 1st May: "Mr. Luxton and I have adopted the plan, and I now enclose you a cheque for deposit in Bank of Montreal, and my personal cheque for $300 to the credit of Greenles, together with notes for $700; we are retaining the subscription of which I send the copy only"—what was the new wrinkle? A. I did not like the subscriptions going into Smith's hands with the proxy blank; I wanted to fill them in myself with my own name or somebody else's I could have confidence in. What letters are those? From Lindsay's files?

Q. No? A. I would not put any confidence in his file.

Q. These are from the liquidator's file of what was found in the bank? A. That is all right.

Q. There is a letter of December 28th, 1906, I would like an explanation on one paragraph of; it is addressed to Lindsay, at Kerwood, and it says this: "In taking subscriptions from now on until, say the middle of January, Mr. Hunter has suggested that you leave the date blank so we may make use of them in any way that may suit best when making up our next list"—what is the meaning of that suggestion? A. Well, I think we had in our mind at that time that a lot of those subscriptions that you referred to yesterday should be eliminated from the statement before making a new one to the Government, and that the subscriptions that he refers to there would take the places of them as near as we could arrange it.

Q. The return would be one dating up to the 31st December, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. But it would not go until after the middle of January? A. We would have to make it up to the 31st December, and then we had 14 days in which to send it in, and the idea was, if I remember right, that we would not show any reduction in our total subscriptions if possible.

Q. The idea was each of these subscriptions which we would get between that date and the middle of January would be left blank and could be used to replace those that objection might be taken to? A. That is my recollection at the present time.

Q. What particular subscriptions was that in reference to? A. The Laidlaw, for instance.

Q. And what else? A. Others that I mentioned yesterday; Smith of Flint, Michigan, and Davidson, and several that I knew should come off.

Q. And was that suggestion acted upon? A. I think the Government return as compared with the other one, will show it was to a certain extent.

Q. Looking at this letter of Lindsay's which has gone in as Exhibit 23, letter from Lindsay to you, will you kindly read that and tell me what list that refers to, and what subscriptions? A. What is this?
Q. That is a copy of a letter from Lindsay to you?  A. Is it a genuine copy?
Q. I think so; when you read it you will be able to tell probably?  A. Yes, I remember getting something similar to that; probably it is the same thing exactly.
Q. When he was here we questioned him with regard to what bank blue book that would be; you see the date of the letter is November 13th, 1907, and we came to the conclusion that the blue book would be the one up to the 31st December, 1906?  A. Yes.
Q. Would this reference in his letter: "Several names that are not or should not be on the list as shareholders" refer to that list of December 31st, 1906?  A. Yes, I should say it did.
Q. Do you know at all what his reference is?  A. His reference was a bluff to frighten me that he would make a complaint to the Government if I did not settle with him; that is what he had in his mind when he wrote that letter.
Q. Was his statement true that there were several names that should not have been on the list?  A. Yes, he is quite right in it.
Q. You think this was his bluff to frighten you?  A. Yes.
Q. I suppose it could not have any effect?  A. I am not bluffed as easily as that.
Q. Did you alter the list of December 31st, 1907?  A. The list was sent down exactly as it should have been according to our books.
Q. I want to ask you now about that loan of $80,000 that was got from the Trust & Guarantee Company?  As I understand you found yourself short and you had to raise a loan of $80,000?  A. Yes.
Q. In order to make the deposit; this is the cheque which you finally got, is it not, dated 11th October, 1906, for $80,000 payable to the Bank of Montreal?  A. Yes, that is the cheque. —EXHIBIT 40:—Check, Trusts and Guarantee Company to Bank of Montreal, dated 11th October, 1906, for $80,000.
Q. Application for that $80,000 was made to whom?  A. Mr. Warren of the Trusts and Guarantee Company.
Q. And solely with him?  A. Yes.
Q. What was the bargain, what were you to pay?
Mr. COMMISSIONER: Was it in writing or verbal?  A. It was a verbal application. I called on him and talked the matter over with him.
Mr. HODGINS: You finally gave him a hypothecation?  A. I gave him the usual hypothecation that is taken in such cases for the notes that I deposited as collateral security.
Q. Just tell me what the verbal arrangement was?  A. The arrangement was he should loan me $80,000 for the purpose of putting up to the Government and make the Government deposit in accordance with the Bank Act on the security of $103,000 or $104,000 of good Farmers notes.
Q. As far as I know these are the only papers we can find showing the arrangement between you; will you just look and see if there is anything further?  A. The arrangement was the loan was made to me personally under legal advice; it had nothing to do as far as I knew at that time with the provisional Board, and the notes having been endorsed over to me personally I had hypothecated them personally to the Trusts Company and received this $80,000 for which afterwards the bank paid 7% and $1,000 bonus.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: The Farmers Bank?  A. Yes.
Q. 10%?  A. Yes, and $1,000 bonus.
Mr. HODGINS: I want to know what your arrangement with Mr. Warren was?  A. My arrangement with Mr. Warren was to borrow that money and give the security.
Q. You explained what these notes had been given for?  A. Yes.
Q. That they were stock subscription notes? A. That they were given on account of the subscriptions, yes.

Q. And you wanted to deposit them with him and get this money to make up the Government deposit? A. Yes.

Q. What was the necessity for legal advice? A. The legal advice was whether those notes could be collected or not when they were given for subscriptions.

Q. Collected by whom? A. Collected by the holder.

Q. By the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Yes, they would be the holder at that time if they advanced the money.

Q. Who gave the legal advice? A. Mr. Hunter, I think.

Q. You stated it was given under legal advice; do you mean to say you do not know who the solicitor was? A. My recollection is Mr. Hunter; I do not know whether it was Mr. Hunter or Mr. Urquhart.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Hunter in connection with it? A. I did.

Q. Did you explain the situation to him? A. It was talked over.

Q. Who was he acting for? A. Warren.

Q. Was it thoroughly understood what we understand now, that they were stock subscription notes? A. I am satisfied it was.

Q. They were to be paid back out of moneys deposited after the granting of the certificate? A. That is where Mr. Warren and I differ. I have to contradict him. He said the money was to be paid back from the payment of the notes; I was under the impression I was to pay it back out of the deposit.

Q. How long was the loan for? A. Thirty days.

Q. And the bonus was for thirty days, that was the arrangement? A. Yes, the bonus was for the transaction.

Q. And in fact did you pay the money back out of the moneys you got back from the Government? A. I did.

Q. To Mr. Warren or to his company? A. To the Trusts Company.

Q. And was that made in three payments? A. It was.

Q. Would the dates Mr. Mitchell has given be right, December 6th, 7th and 17th? A. I think so. I did not see the cheques he was handling, but I considered he told what were the facts.

Q. What bank was your bank at that time? A. The Union Bank.

Q. It would appear to be in the Traders Bank, this deposit on December 3rd, $245,000, would not that be what you got back? A. That is the money that came from the Government.

Q. $245,839.80? A. That $889.80 would be some odd cheques added to the $245,000.

Q. Probably gave you some interest? A. We got some, not very much; we got very few favours from them.

Q. Would you tell me—? A. The cheques are here themselves; I saw them here the last time you held your sitting; they would speak for themselves, would they not?

Q. I have them here? A. I was wrong in saying the Union Bank; I transferred my account to the Union Bank soon after the bank opened, and I thought when I said that, that the cheques were on the Union Bank.

Q. Look at this, this appears to be a statement, you can tell whether it is from your books or the Trusts Company's books? A. This is made up by the Trusts Company.

Q. Can you identify in that three cheques? A. $30,000, $25,000 and $25,605.81.

Mr. Commissioner: That is repayment? A. Yes.—Exhibit 41: Farmers Bank book with the Traders Bank.

Mr. Hodgins: This appears in this book? A. Yes, I see such entries there and I presume they are the ones.
Q. $30,000, $25,000 and $25,605.81?  A.  Yes.— Exhibit 42: Statement re payment of $80,000 loan.

Q. That cheque that I gave you for $80,000 October 11th, 1906, was deposited immediately, was it not in the Bank of Montreal?  A. Which cheque?

Q. The cheque for $80,000?  A. Yes, the book will show the date it was deposited; I do not know whether it was exactly that day or a day or two afterwards; it was very soon anyway after the issue of it.

Mr. Commissioner: Was the $80,000 cheque of the Trusts & Guarantee Company deposited in the Bank of Montreal, or did you put your own cheque in?  A. No, I deposited their cheque. The Trusts Company drew it to the order of the Bank of Montreal so that I could not make use of it in any other way.

Q. At whose request?  A. It might have been mine, I could not say; Mr. Warren I think says so; I would hate to contradict him.

Mr. Hodgins: Had you dealings with any one but Mr. Warren in the matter?  A. I saw Mr. Stratton once.

Q. In connection with the $80,000 loan?  A. Yes, before it went through.

Q. Explained it to him?  A. Partially.

Q. To what extent?  A. Mr. Warren introduced me to him, if I remember correctly, and beautifully outlined the transaction, and I added a few words to it, and he said whatever Mr. Warren would do, he would be satisfied with it.

Q. Who fixed the bonus you were to pay?  A. Mr. Warren.

Q. What was the necessity of paying a bonus on a loan of that kind?  A. That is a usual custom; people do not make loans, banks or loan companies or any other institutions without having a little more than the interest.

Q. Without a bonus?  A. Without a bonus, very few of them.

Q. What was the reason given to you for having the bonus of $1,000?  A. Profits to the Trusts Company.

Q. On account of the dangerous transaction?  A. I do not think they looked at it that way, I thought they looked at it as an accommodation to me it was worth $1,000, and I considered so.

Q. You thought it was?  A. Yes.

Q. There was some doubt as to the legality of the transaction in their mind, that they were taking a risk?  A. At first, but not always.

Q. Mr. Hunter was not the bank’s solicitor?  A. No.

Q. He was acting for whom?  A. He was acting for Mr. Warren I understand.

Q. You did not identify these documents, I would like you to do that; one dated October 11th, signed by the Trusts & Guarantee Company per Warren: “Received from W. R. Travers, Esq., notes amounting to the sum of one hundred thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars as per list furnished us by the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank of Canada. A cheque will be given to you for the sum of $80,000, the amount of the loan to be made by this company on the security of said notes to-morrow. The Trusts & Guarantee Company, per James J. Warren.”

And then October 10th, 1906, which was the day previous, this letter: “W. R. Travers, Esq., Farmers Bank of Canada, City. Dear Sir: I wish to put on record our understanding of to-day that the $80,000 has been available since yesterday, and that the rate of interest agreed upon will be payable in respect of it from this time on. Yours truly, J mes J. Warren, Manager.” We have not been able to find the list of notes anywhere?  A. I saw the list of notes here or some place else.

Q. The liquidator says he is unable to find them?  A. I had them in my hands; they are marked as an exhibit somewhere.
Q. We do not find any list; at all events there was a list which that said was given by the provisional directors?  A. The Provisional Board did not give the list; I made the list up myself.
Q. Without consultation with the Provisional Board?  A. I did not consult with them at that time, very much beyond the allotment of stock.
Q. This says first, that is as it was written first, "Furnished us by the Farmers Bank of Canada", and then it is put in, by the "Provisional Directors".
—EXHIBIT 43: Letter 10th October, 1906, Trusts & Guarantee Company to Travers and receipt for notes from Trusts & Guarantee to Travers of October 11th, 1906.
Q. Did you note the terms of that letter.  (Of October 11th, 1906, Exhibit
43)?  A. Yes.
Q. You noticed the change?  A. Yes, I noticed he had provided the funds and wanted the interest—no, I cannot say that I noticed that.
Q. In your conversation with Mr. Hunter, did he see the list or notes?  A.
No, I don't think he did.
Q. There was nothing but notes being hypothecated?  A. Nothing but notes.
Q. No. subscriptions at all?  A. All I had were hypothecated, the subscriptions as well. I am quite sure there was another document that carried the subscriptions with the notes that they referred to.
Q. Have you ever said so in any single one of your examinations from the time of the failure of the bank up to now?  A. I am not sure, but I think I did.
Q. In what case?  A. In the case against Warren and Stratton; I am not sure about it, but my recollection is I did mention that.
Q. You think then there was an hypothecation of subscriptions?  A. I feel certain there were.
Q. You would have made up an additional list would not you?  A. No, there was no list made of the subscriptions, I am quite certain of that, but the hypothecation was made, if I remember right, to read that the subscriptions which these notes referred to were hypothecated.
Q. That is something quite new on the evidence you have given so far; you may be quite right?  A. I have answered every question I was ever asked; I did not volunteer anything.
Q. How is it that this letter does not say so?  A. I could not say.
Q. Notes amounting to $100,955; there must be another paper which the Trusts & Guarantee Company got at that time?  A. There may be, I could not say.
Q. You said you remember a list?  A. I say my recollection is—I did not say there was any list of subscriptions; you twist it around and try to make me say something I do not wish to say. I said my recollection is that there was another document that carried the subscriptions with those notes.
Q. If that be so, it has never been produced in any of the cases in which you have given evidence?  A. No, I don't think it has.
Q. Has it ever been mentioned by you or Mr. Warren?  A. I answered you a few minutes ago that I thought I had mentioned it in a previous case.
Q. Although it was not produced; did you hear Mr. Hunter's evidence when he was being examined before this Commission?  A. Yes, I did; I don't think that question was asked him.
Q. What subscriptions were those that you think were hypothecated?  A.
The subscriptions that referred to each one of those notes.
Q. And apart from that there was no hypothecated subscriptions unless the subscribers had given notes which you handed to the Trusts Company?  A. No.
Q. That is right is it?  A. I think so.
Q. I would like to have quite a definite answer upon that, and I will ask the question again; I say, were there any subscriptions which you claim were hypothecated other than those of subscribers who gave notes whose notes were handed to the Trusts Company?  A. No, there were not.
Mr. Commissioner: Did you not keep a copy in your letter book of the hypothecation paper? A. All the paper should have been in the bank.

Q. When it was drawn out, the hypothecation paper, and handed over did you not have it copied in your letter book? A. No, I signed those in their office; I wanted the cheque for the money, I did not pay much attention to anything else; I knew I would pay it back.

Mr. Hodgins: How is it there was nothing signed by you at all, it is all signed by Warren? A. All documents I signed were returned to me after the loan was paid off; they should be on file in the Bank, but as they arrested me a few hours after the Bank failed I had not a chance to see the papers were protected.

Q. When you say “after the loan was paid off” what do you mean? A. It was paid off later on; those cheques you speak of, December 6th, 7th and 17th I think they were.

Q. It was handed back immediately after that? A. No, they were not handed back to me then, the transaction was reversed after that, and it ran on again for a few months.

Q. And then they were handed back, were they? A. I think so; my recollection is they were.

Q. Look at that document and please tell me what this is? A. I do not know what it is; it purports to be a list of notes that were returned from the Trusts Company to the Bank.

Exhibit 44: List of notes purporting to be returned from Trusts Company to Farmers Bank.

Q. Are they some of the notes that are hypothecated? A. Yes, I should say were a great many of them.

Q. Look at those papers and tell me if those relate to the same notes? A. Yes, I should think they were some of the notes, sure of that.

Q. I do not find any statement that there were any subscriptions returned to you? A. The subscriptions were not handed over to them, not the subscriptions themselves.

Q. That is why no reference to subscriptions appears in any of the letters or papers that I show you? A. I should fancy that is the reason.

Exhibit 45: Receipt, Travers to Trusts & Guarantee Company for notes received, dated February 26th, 1907, and correspondence between Warren and Travers.

Q. (Referring to Exh. 44). You will notice these three notes which are struck out, P. W. Stair, W. J. Lindsay, and W. R. Travers, $9,000, $2,500 and $81,000; you know that the first two were in connection with the subscription loan of eighty thousand dollars? A. Yes, twenty thousand was referred to.

Q. What about W. R. Travers, $81,000? A. That was the note I gave for the $80,000 loan and the bonus of one thousand dollars.

Q. Did you not get that back? A. Certainly I got it back after it was paid.

Q. What does this mean, the striking that out of that list? A. I do not know what that list is.

Q. It says “List of notes”? A. Yes, but anybody could make up that list; it looks to me like a list of the notes.

Q. It looks to me like an exhibit produced in the Stratton and Warren case, the property of the Trusts Company. I am asking you what you know about it? A. I do not know anything about it.

Q. You cannot account for that being struck out? A. No.

Mr. Commissioner: They apparently total the sum of $166,000 if the pencil is right.

Mr. Hodgins: You have said that this was a loan made to you personally. You were asked in previous inquiries whether you had the right to sell those notes whether you were the owner of them and could sell them; what do you say to that? A. I thought I had at the time.

Q. You answered then that you did not think you could sell them, that all you understood was that the provisional directors had resigned their trusteeship to you? A. I don't think I made such an answer as that.

Q. I would like to get the basis on which this loan was made? A. The facts are very simple.

Q. They are not so very simple as you put it; you endeavored to make this a personal loan to yourself, and the question you were asked was: Q. "Was it an absolute sale to you by the provisional directors of these notes? A. I did not look at it that way. Q. How did you look at it? A. I looked at it that they simply resigned their trusteeship to me and left me in power. Q. Were you prepared to sell these notes? A. No, I don't think it would have been lawful for me to sell them." A. I did not sell them.

Q. I know you did not; now are you satisfied that that is your view? A. I acted under Mr. Hunter's advice at that time and we considered the proper way for me to make the loan was to make it personally; what was the effect in law I do not know.

Q. It was Mr. Hunter's advice that led you finally to settle on the idea of a personal loan, was it? A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. In fact it was first to be made in the usual way upon those notes, and at the suggestion of Mr. Hunter was finally settled down into a personal loan to you? A. Yes, that is the way I recollect it.

Q. So that I suppose you and Mr. Hunter quite knew what your title to the notes was and the purpose for which the loan was being got? A. Yes, I should think so.

Q. The power of attorney from the provisional directors to you which has been put in as Exhibit 13, appoint you attorney to endorse their names on all notes made by any one payable to the provisional directors, and the endorsement shall be valid just as if they had endorsed it, and to hypothecate said notes so endorsed and signed for the purpose of raising funds thereon, we personally guarantee said notes—the date of that is 8th October, 1906? A. Yes.

Q. And at that time it was quite understood by them that your hypothecation was to raise money to get the charter put through? A. At that time, yes.

Q. So that they would get the balance of their $10,000? A. I don't know if they had that in their minds, they might have.

Q. Likely? A. It seems reasonable.

MR. COMMISSIONER: He cannot answer that.

MR. HODGINS: Did they say anything about it? A. Not at that time, they did not say anything about the $10,000 at that time; that was never acted on; when I first tried for a loan the matter came up that it would be probably necessary to have that power of attorney and it was never acted on.

Q. Did you endorse all those notes? A. I think not; I think they endorsed them themselves, if I remember right.

Q. Did you endorse the notes as attorney? A. No, my recollection is I did not.

Q. We have one of these notes that we got down at the Department, I think it was sent down there from the Milton Branch (Exhibit 3). A. I endorsed that note under that power of attorney, but my memory was that they had signed them themselves, each one, so I have to withdraw that; that is all. I did not think I had acted under the power of attorney.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Are any of these other notes that were hypothecated to the Trusts and Guarantee Company available?

MR. HODGINS: Yes, if they have not been collected they will be and I will have Mr. Clarkson produce them.
Q. Where did that note come from? A. This note was sent out to Milton and was discounted.

Mr. Commissioner: Which note is it? A. The note of Robert L. Brown for $4,500.

Mr. Commissioner: That does not appear to be in this list (EXHIBIT 44).

Mr. Hodgins: No, because that note was got from the Trusts Company much earlier than the 12th March, 1907, and was sent out to the Milton branch and gave rise to Mr. VanKoughnet’s letter, that with others.

Q. I see in the evidence which you gave in the Stratton case, you were asked this question: Q. “Then when you saw Mr. Warren the loan you applied for was a personal loan to yourself giving these notes as collateral security? A. I won’t say I put it that way in the first place, it was finally made in that shape”? A. That is exactly what I say now.

Q. That is what it finally came to as being a way of getting the loan through and avoiding some difficulty? A. Exactly.

Q. What was the difficulty? A. The difficulty which would arise in Ottawa.

Q. What was that? A. As to whether the money was borrowed on the shareholders notes or not; no doubt that is what the difficulty was.

Q. You think we ought to be able to find in the Trusts Company some other paper referring to subscriptions, some hypothecation signed by you? A. No. I do not think it would be in the Trusts Company. It should have been among the bank papers, if at all; I must have got those back.

Q. It should have been transferred back at some time? A. Yes.

Q. And so far as you know you left it in the bank? A. I did.

Q. If it does not appear there and has never been mentioned from that time down to the present time, perhaps your recollection may be wrong about it? A. It might be; a lot of important papers have disappeared since this thing started. I am at a loss to know where they have gone to, myself.

Q. The $80,000 was not enough, you had expected it would be enough and you found later on that you wanted $20,000 more? A. Yes.

Q. And that was raised upon the same company, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. And on the hypothecation for that; this is the cheque with a copy attached? A. Yes, that is the cheque for $20,000.

EXHIBIT 46:—Cheque of Trusts & Guarantee Company, payable to the Bank of Montreal for credit to Farmers Bank of Canada, with Finance Minister and Receiver General, $20,000, dated the 23rd October, 1906, with copy attached.

Q. What was the security given for that? A. The security was $20,000 worth of Canada Loan & Savings Company stock and $9,000 note of F. W. Stairs, and a $2,500 note of Lindsay’s, which note I borrowed for the occasion; that is as far as I remember, there may have been one or two other notes.

Mr. Commissioner: The Canada Loan & Savings Company, where is that company? A. It has gone out of existence now.

Mr. Hodgins: Was it absorbed by the Dominion Permanent? A. I could not say, being out of business so long, I have lost track of it.

Q. Did any subscription notes go with that? A. Yes, I have just mentioned that F. W. Stairs, $9,000, that was a subscription note.

Q. That was one of the ante-dated subscriptions? A. I do not think this was. (Refers to Exhibit 19). Application, October 9th—so that is before.

Q. That was the stock subscription note and was Lindsay’s? A. Commissioner: He says Lindsay’s was an accommodation? A. Lindsay’s was an accommodation note.

Q. What else was there besides those two notes? A. That stock.

Q. Were not there as a matter of fact notes belonging to the shareholders? A. I think there were, but I cannot say positively, I do not remember.
Q: I will be able to get that; we cannot lay our hands on it for the moment, but I know there were a few of those notes? A. Yes, I think there were two.

Q: How did Lindsay come to join in giving you an accommodation note?

A. At my request.

Q: Why should he do it? A. He was helping me in every way he could.

Q: He was I suppose as interested as you were in getting the certificate? A. He was as much interested as I was, and he wanted his commissions and he wanted to go on selling the bank’s stock after we were organized.

Q: You got the $20,000 and paid that in? A. I did.

Q: And that completed the amount? A. That completed the $250,000 that was required under the Bank Act.

Q: So that down to that time you had no anticipation you would have any trouble? A. I had not.

Q: Then came in the Laidlaw difficulty? A. Yes.

Q: And we know how that was got rid of; I would just like to ask you a question about some statements in the affidavit you filed then. The date of the writ of summons I see is the 22nd October, 1906; in that affidavit just to get that in proper sequence, you say: “About half past one o’clock of Tuesday, the 23rd October, inst. I was served with a copy of the writ of summons”—this is the affidavit you made for the purpose of getting rid of the action? A. Very likely.

Q: You say it was done for the purpose of preventing, “if possible to prevent the complete organization of the bank”? A. It was done because Mr. Laidlaw came to me and asked to be solicitor of the bank and divide the commissions, and if I did not accede to it, he would burst it up; that was the reason it was done.

Q: You knew his purpose in the suit, at least you thought you knew, was to prevent the bank being organized? A. That was his purpose; he wrote to these people and invited them to bring suit. I wanted to bring it before the Law Society.

Q. Well, there is nothing to prevent you doing it yet. You were served at half past one on the 23rd, and the deposit of the last $20,000 was on the 23rd; which took place first, the service of the writ or the deposit of the last $20,000? A. I could not say.

Q: In this writ, I am not going to go through it, but you set out in detail each of the subscribers, the date of his application, and whether or not he paid or did not pay any money, and whether he gave notes and their date and due date and so on; those were all accurately taken at that time? A. I should say they were.

Q: And you say that on or about the 22nd October, the total subscriptions for stock in the Farmers Bank of Canada as duly entered in the books of the company amount to the sum of $566,700—where did you get that from? A. I suppose we took it from this book. (Stock subscription book).

Q: Did you go over those with Lindsay carefully before he went out to get rid of these subscriptions, each of these subscriptions? A. As I have sworn before and many times, and I swear now, Lindsay got a revised list of all subscriptions every time he came into the office.

Q: I see you state you deposited the final $20,000 at 12 o’clock noon, on the 23rd, so that it would be an hour and a half ahead of the writ? A. That must be right. I stated the facts to Mr. George H. Watson, K.C., and he prepared the affidavit for me and I swore to it.

Q. "The deposits before referred to were made and the receipt from the bank obtained before I had any notice of the proceedings in this action by the plaintiff and the draft before referred to payable to the order of the Receiver General was also duly obtained and posted before I was served with a copy of the said writ."

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You had to borrow money to get rid of the Laidlaw subscriptions? A. I did.

Q. To the extent of $2,380; what was the security given for that? A. I gave the security of my own life insurance, which my wife endorsed over to the company.

Q. Did you call on Lindsay for anything more then? A. No.

Q. You were insured in the Excelsior Life? A. No, the Canada Life.

Q. This is the Excelsior Life; look at that? A. Yes, that is one of them, but I had two or three policies.

Q. Did you assign more than one? A. My recollection is that I assigned this one and the Canada Life. The Canada Life I took out when I was a young man and it was very valuable, and it is yet; that is the one I think we put the most dependence on.

Q. That loan according to the particulars here did not go through until 27th October, and that is the very day you got the action dismissed; who advanced the money in the meantime? A. I borrowed the money from Mr. Warren, the Trusts & Guarantee Company, and the money was deposited to Lindsay’s credit in the Bank of Montreal. Lindsay went out and gave his own personal cheques to each of these people as he settled with them.

Q. Do you know at all whether you got the money from Mr. Warren in advance of this loan being completed? A. In advance of the $20,000 loan.

Q. No, in advance of the date at which the money was put to your credit by the Trusts Company? A. No, I cannot say that. My recollection is that I got it just the same day I deposited it to Mr. Lindsay’s credit, which would be the same date as this paper; I am not sure about that.

Q. Apparently you did not get it till the 27th, which was the day you got the action dismissed, and the payments had been made several days before that; I was wanting to know whether you could recollect whether you borrowed that money or had it actually on hand? A. No, I had not the money till I borrowed it from Mr. Warren, whatever date it was I could not say exactly now.

Q. I will put in these papers: I see Lindsay was a witness to this assignment of policies, so that I suppose he knew about the transaction? A. Everything I knew, he knew until the date we parted on the Commission.

Q. That was the following year after the bank was organized? A. About that I should think.

Q. Look at that and tell me if that indicates correctly the loan and its repayment? A. Yes, I should say that is a statement of the loan I made, $2,380.

EXHIBIT 48:—Statement re loan of $2,380, assignment of Excelsior Life Insurance policy and certain notes together with correspondence between Mr. Travers and the Trusts & Guarantee Company.

Q. Lindsay actually paid these people back the money that they had paid on their Laidlaw subscription? A. I presume he did, he brought the assignments in.

Q. He brought the assignments back and so it would appear in his bank that he had actually made the payments? A. That is what I understood.

Q. And were those payments, although made to these people by Lindsay, paid back, left on the list which finally went down to the Finance Minister? A. They were.

MR. COMMISSIONER: We have all that proved and the list shows it.

MR. HODGINS: Proved by whom?

MR. COMMISSIONER: Lindsay was asked that, and the list shows it.

MR. HODGINS: I want to get the fact from the man who knows it.

MR. COMMISSIONER: The proper way to get the fact is from the documents.

MR. HODGINS: I have found the papers connected with the twenty thousand dollar loan; see if that is correct; those are the papers, are not they, relating to that? A. Yes, I will have to qualify my statement now that we put in other stock besides the Canadian Savings & Loan: I see also we had thirteen shares of the Dominion Permanent which I had forgotten.

Q. Whose shares were those? A. They were taken on account of subscriptions to the Farmers Bank, turned in as cash.

Q. Do you know to whom they belonged? A. My recollection is they belonged to W. G. Sinclair. I think they were in W. G. Sinclair's name, endorsed in blank; that is to say that the power of attorney on the back was endorsed in blank.

Q. In addition to the two notes you have assigned, there was a note of M. M. Devean "held as collateral to the above referred to shares of the Canadian Savings Loan and Building Association for $15,000"? A. Yes.

Q. How had you acquired that note? A. Devean subscribed for twenty thousand dollars worth of stock, and turned in the Savings Company's stock in payment of it.

Q. And had given you a note for fifteen thousand dollars? A. And he gave me a note as well.

Mr. Commissioner: Is that quite accurate? Had not he turned in as collateral security?

Mr. Hodgin: This is held as collateral to the above referred to shares—? A. Turned over from the Bank to the Trusts Company he is referring to now.

Q. "The following promissory notes, M. M. Devean, Toronto, held as collateral to the above referred to shares of the Canadian Savings Loan and Building Association for $15,000"? A. That refers to the hypothecation to the Trusts Company, does it not?

Q. No, I should take it that Devean had given you this note and you held these shares as collateral for the payment of the note? A. That is not the way I understood it then. My recollection of it is I sat him to give me the note afterwards to satisfy Mr. Warren's ideas about it; I do not think at the time he subscribed twenty thousand dollars stock that he gave the note; I think we accepted that stock. He is here and he will be able to tell that for himself.

Q. You think you accepted that stock in payment? A. Of the shares.

Q. And took no note? A. And took no note at that time.

Q. Did you get it for the purpose of this loan? A. Yes.

Q. To satisfy Mr. Warren? A. That is my recollection.

Q. There were no subscriptions transferred in this case? A. No, I see nothing there.

Exhibit 49.—Agreement between Travers and Trusts & Guarantee Company for loan of $20,500, and correspondence between Travers and Warren and others.

Mr. Travers: After seeing that document it seems to me it was something similar to that that they took the assignment of the subscriptions.

Q. After the loan had been got and the money sent down and Laidlaw got rid of the 27th October, the next thing was the meeting which we dealt with; immediately after the meeting you started in to get the certificate—

Mr. Commissioner: Before you pass to that perhaps it would be just as well to find out when the loan was paid and what money paid this loan on policies?

Mr. Hodgin: I think we have dealt with the payment of the eighty thousand dollar loan; then how and when was the twenty thousand dollar loan paid? A. The Trusts Company opened an account with the Farmers Bank after we opened our doors for business, and we also opened a current account with them. I placed the twenty thousand dollars to their credit at various times in various amounts; I would have to see.

Mr. Commissioner: In the books of your bank? A. Yes, which they chequed against.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

MR. HODGINS: Here is the statement of the payment of that twenty thousand dollar loan charging interest and showing payment, would that accord with your recollection (Exhibit 50)? A. It may be, but it does not appear the same to me at the present moment.

EXHIBIT 50: Statement re $20,000 loan.

Q. You think that is not quite accurate? A. It does not strike me as so; I have in mind at the present time that it was paid differently from that.

Q. We will be able to tell probably when the books are gone through; your recollection is that it was not paid in one sum like that? A. No, my recollection is that it was paid in half a dozen different sums; that is my recollection.

Q. Through what years? A. It would be in January, February and March, 1907, or February, March and April, 1907; I think it spread over two or three months.

MR. COMMISSIONER: There should have been the two accounts—

MR. HODGINS: The first three months of 1907 have some very curious entries in them and I will have to go into that later on? A. That looks like a statement of the loan, not a repayment of the loan.

Q. Yes, there is the date of re-payment, December 10th, 1907.

MR. COMMISSIONER: The item is C. 1193? A. I may be wrong about the time that was paid, along in January, February and March, but I know the bank books will show the amount went to their credit in different amounts.

MR. HODGINS: You got twenty thousand dollars, but the loan appears to be twenty thousand five hundred dollars? A. $500 was a bonus.

Q. Who arranged that? Mr. Warren.

Q. What did he want a bonus on that for? A. For the accommodation giving me twenty thousand dollars in cash.

Q. Was there any difficulty in that as there had been in the previous one? A. No, he did not hesitate about that loan at all.

Q. Nor did you hesitate I suppose about the commission? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did Mr. Hunter intervene at all in connection with that? A. No, I do not think Mr. Hunter had anything to do with that at all.

Q. The transaction of the $2,380 loan, was any commission paid on that?

A. Nothing but straight interest.

Q. When was that paid back? A. The bank books will show that.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I thought the statement put in showed that?

MR. HODGINS: Oh, yes, there is a statement. Just look at that which is part of exhibit 48—it is a curious thing, but it has the same date for the re-payment of that loan as the twenty thousand dollar loan, as I read it? A. I do not make that out; it looks as if it was a statement of the Trusts Company regarding that $2,380 loan.

Q. What do you say as to its re-payment? A. The only thing I can say about that would be to look and see the date in the bank’s books when it was paid.

Q. Was it paid by you personally or out of the funds of the bank? A. It was paid out of the funds of the bank.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What was it charged to? A. My recollection is it is charged to organization expenses, I could not say positively about that now without looking at the books.

MR. HODGINS: To deal with the question of making up the list, who took part in making up the list that went down to the department? A. Mr. Fitzgibbon compiled it from this stock subscription book (Exhibit 18) and it was looked over by Mr. Hunter, and before it went down to Ottawa, Dr Beattie Nesbitt took a hand in it.

Q. Who else? A. And myself, of course; that is all.
Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon was the accountant of the bank, was not he? A. He was.

Q. He had joined, I am told, on the 19th November? A. Yes, and here let me contradict some evidence that he gave; he swore to this Court that he had protested against me raising the money on those notes; how could he protest against my raising the money on those notes when he did not enter the bank till the 20th November, and I raised it on the 19th October?

Q. We will see how far that is a just observation a little later; he did join on the 19th, and the list went down to Ottawa when? A. Soon after the 26th, I think on that same night.

Q. I suppose you will agree that anything Fitzgibbon knew he learned from someone in the bank when he started to compile the list? A. Yes, certainly, acted under my instructions.

Q. But the information he had with regard to the subscriptions would be what he would get when he joined? A. What he would get from the books.

Q. Only from the books? A. The books speak for themselves.

Q. I am asking the source of his information? A. He would certainly get information from me.

Q. And from any one else? A. No, he would have no right to ask information from anybody else.

Q. You do not know of his getting information from anybody else? A. I saw him speaking to Mr. Hunter once or twice; he must answer for himself about that; I do not know.

Q. He made up a list, and he submitted it to whom? A. The list was looked over by Mr. Hunter.

Q. Before you saw it? A. No, I saw the list from time to time as he made it up.

Q. Just tell me this, is it not the case that you and he and the others you have mentioned sat about and either you had the list or arranged what credit should go on them? A. Are you referring to the borrowing?

Q. No, I am referring after the borrowing was over, and the meeting was over, and you were getting the list up to send down to Ottawa? A. Yes, quite so; the list of names were taken from the book just as they were in the book, the amount paid on them was arranged between Dr. Nesbitt, Mr. Hunter and myself, as to the amount that we should pay out on each one.

Q. How was the information got on which you and Dr. Nesbitt and Mr. Hunter acted? A. I do not understand your question.

Q. Who would know how much was to be appropriated to each subscription? A. That is the matter we arranged ourselves, some suggested one thing and some suggested another; we finally came to a conclusion as to just how we should make it up.

Q. Was the list that went in the result of your joint work? A. Yes, it was.

Q. There are on that list without going into particulars the names of people who had never paid anything at all in cash, who had given no notes? A. Yes, I am sure there was.

Q. How were those treated? A. I will have to compare them to see; my recollection was in giving evidence before that we did not put any payments against those.

Q. I would like you to compare that? A. I am not sure about that; I will have to compare it; we may have done it.

Q. I would like you to compare that list? A. If I have the list and the time I will be very pleased to help you all I can.

Q. The only other way is for me to ask you to look at the list and verify probably two dozen names? A. It is pretty hard, about 800 names, to remember every name on it.
Q. Probably we can shorten it up by giving you the list ourselves. Look up T. Cox?  A. Yes; what do you want to know.

Q. I want to see what it shows in the return to the Government, if he is in?
A. The return to the Government he is in it, $5,000 and $500 paid up, I think.

Q. How is the truth as to that?  A. My impression is he gave a note; you would have to look in that list of notes to the Trusts Company.

Q. Can you tell me if he paid anything up?  A. I cannot tell you.

Q. What do the books show?  A. This book shows the whole thing, amount paid $5,000.

The Commission adjourned at 12.45 to 2.15 P.M.

The Commission resumed at 2.15 P.M., May 15th, 1912.

Examination of W. R. TRAVERS continued.—

Mr. Hodgins: After discussing the matter with Mr. Travers I think we can give subject to verification by Mr. Clarkson, a list of all those who had given notes at that time. A list has been made of the notes which were withdrawn afterwards from the Trusts & Guarantee Company, and were transferred to the Milton branch and probably another branch; Milton seems to be the one chiefly used, and that accounts for all the notes that were used on these three loans.

Mr. Commissioner: You had better verify it before you put it in. Mr. Clarkson is here, is not he?

Mr. Hodgins: One of the Mr. Clarkson is here.

Mr. Commissioner: There will be time enough to verify that and put it in right.

Mr. Commissioner: What does the witness say about it? Does he know anything about it?

Mr. Hodgins: I have shown you, Mr. Travers, this memorandum which states the amounts of the notes handed the Trusts and Guarantee Company on the three occasions

Mr. Commissioner: In gross.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, and then the gross number of notes charged to the Milton branch, and then the details of each of those charges to the Milton branch

A. Yes.

Q. You have looked over those I think?  A. I have.

Q. Are you able to say whether those appear to be properly taken from the books of the bank they would account for all the notes that were on hand at the time these loans were made?  A. I would.

Q. And at the time this list was sent in to the Government?  A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: Is that quite so, because I notice among the papers receipts for notes returned to the bank?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: That would not show all those?

Mr. Hodgins: It would include those.

Mr. Commissioner: In some cases there were one or two notes handed back according to one of these exhibits.

Mr. Hodgins: Practically all the notes were handed back, and then sent by the head office—

Mr. Commissioner: Were they all discounted at some office of the bank?

Mr. Hodgins: There are three notes; the Denoon note was returned to the bank—perhaps if I show you this, you see those are the amounts of the notes in the first line, and that in the second and that in the third. These are the charges to the Milton branch; there were three disposed of otherwise; leaving this balance accounted for by those, and an unexplained balance of $520.

Mr. Commissioner: Take, for instance, this, Joseph E. Bate, $500; Geo. A. Bell, $270; apparently they were taking them out and discounting them.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, at the Milton branch.

Mr. Commissioner: I see those notes were falling due; that was probably the reason. The witness says that accounts for all the notes he thinks.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes; this would account for all the notes; you saw the list of notes that had been in the hands of the bank and were extant when the list of shareholders was prepared to go to the Minister of Finance? A. Yes; I would say I would feel confident that this list as prepared by Mr. Clarkson is correct.

Q. And would show that fact? A. And would show all the notes that we had on hand at that time.

Exhibit 51: List of notes.

Mr. Commissioner: That went through the Trusts & Guarantee Company?

A. Yes. I remarked before the Commissioner took his seat that I thought there might be two or three notes on hand that did not go to the Trusts Company for which the accountant—

Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Fitzgibbon could give us those? A. He should be able to tell you that.

Q. Subject to that this would apparently account for all the notes on hand at the time the list was made up? A. Yes, I would say it would.

Mr. Commissioner: Not simply those that went to the Trusts & Guarantee Company, all that they received from the subscribers.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes; the list itself which was deposited with the Trusts & Guarantee Company originally does not appear to have been ever discovered.

Q. I notice in going over the list of payments which are credited upon the list sent to the Minister of Finance that there is quite an amount of cash credited to almost every subscriber on the list? A. Yes.

Q. Some of those were undoubtedly paid and are correctly shown? A. Yes.

Q. Some of them had given notes? A. Yes.

Q. How did you treat those who had given notes? A. We showed a certain percentage of the subscription as having been paid in cash.

Q. In the list which I have and which I will have to verify by Mr. Clarkson it would appear that in quite a number of cases the full value of the note is marked as paid up in cash, and in some cases a very much smaller amount than the face value of the note is credited in cash; why was that difference made? A. I could not answer that.

Q. Just to illustrate; there is W. R. Kennedy, who had a note for five hundred dollars; he is put down as having paid $250 in cash; take another illustration, G. W. Sinclair, there were notes for six thousand dollars and you put him down as having paid up only $500. In most of the cases you show the full amount of the note as being paid in cash? A. We tried to put ten per cent on as nearly as we could, but in order to distribute the hundred thousand dollars we had to allocate different amounts here and there to different subscribers; that is the only way we could account for it.

Q. There are some, for instance, W. Beattie Nesbitt and E. H. Honeywell for which you held no notes, they are put down as having paid in cash three thousand dollars, and $2,500 respectively? A. Three thousand dollars shown on account of Nesbitt, I am not sure whether we have the note or not; I could not say so.

Q. There is no note shown? A. No, we have no note for that; I remember now there was no note for that.

Q. W. H. Honeywell is another credited with having paid twenty-five hundred dollars and no note for that? A. No, I do not think there was.
Q. J. Sproat, one thousand dollars, there was no note for it? A. That is ten thousand subscription is it not?
Q. That was one of the Laidlaw ones? A. Yes.
Q. There is Patterson, Beatty, Campbell, also Laidlaw subscribers, were they not? A. Yes.
Q. Hume, Dixon, McLeod and Sinclair? A. Sinclair was not.
Q. McLeod was and Dixon and Hume. W. J. Lindsay is shown as a payment of five thousand dollars; there is no note from him? A. Nothing but that twenty five hundred dollars which he put into the Trusts Company, but I did not take that with any idea that it was on account of—
Q. That was an accommodation note? A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember a subscription from a man named Witham, thirty five hundred dollars? A. Yes, twenty five hundred dollars was it not?
Q. Yes, thirty-five hundred dollars, I am instructed? A. I think it was twenty-five hundred dollars.

Mr. Hodgins: I am instructed that to your knowledge was not to be allotted until Lindsay had sold certain lands of his? A. I did not understand that it was not to be allotted; I understand it was subject to a payment.

Q. You knew it was conditional? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: What was conditional? A. It was conditional upon Lindsay selling some real estate for him, if I remember right.

Q. The subscription was conditional? A. The payment.

Q. He was not to be called upon to pay? A. Until Lindsay had completed some real estate transaction.

Q. There are five subscriptions for five thousand dollars: Joseph E. Bate, Jennie B. Geer, T. L. Cox, D. C. Kemp, and George Storey, each for five thousand dollars, which I am told were known to be worthless; what do you say to that? A. I say that is the fact.

Q. Were they known to be worthless at that time? A. Not just at the time that the subscriptions were taken but before the list was sent to the Government—

Q. That is a copy of letter dated March 29th, 1906, to Witham, it appears on the file here; had you knowledge of that letter? A. It is the first time I have seen that letter or ever heard of it.

Mr. Commissioner: You may as well mark it.

Exhibit 52: Copy of letter W. J. Lindsay to A. J. Witham, March 29th, 1906.

Mr. Hodgins: Then there are a number of subscriptions included in the list which were afterwards cancelled. I would like you to say whether cancellation was in pursuance of any previous arrangement, in other words whether they were subscriptions to be put on the list but with the full knowledge that they would be cancelled afterwards or not: There is Neil Stewart? A. Neil Stewart is one of the Laidlaw ones I think.

Q. No, Shuert; this is Neil Stewart? A. All I can say to that is we found from time to time that there were certain ones it would be difficult to collect and we cancelled them; there were, as I stated, a number that we had to cancel, such as those you have gone over with me before.

Q. I will just read this list and if you listen to them all, probably some name will strike you: Neil Stewart, $2,500; Thomas Aitkin, $1,500; Robert Bell, W. T. Beatty, $2,000; G. Daniels, $500; Ella M. Beatty, $100; T. Elliott, $500; T. Hunter, $2,500; Alice Hamilton, $500; G. Laird, $1,000; A. Matthews, $500; J. Pell, $900; E. C. W. Snelgrove, $1,000; Eliza Weir, $300; L. Cheyne, $500; R. W. Fox, $1,500; H. F. Johnston, $200; M. Beattie, $500; T. Cawey, $200; E. Church, $100; J. Dewar, $500; J. Fortier, $300; P. Sayers, $100; Eliza W. Harton, $300; J. Sunstrom, $2,500; T. Elliott, $500; T. Alderson, $500; J. G.
Fitzgibbon, $100; G. H. Thompson, $3,500; J. Walker, $2,000, making $29,100 in all; those were afterwards cancelled? A. Yes. They were subscriptions on which no payments had been made, and in many cases their notes had been given that we could not collect, and I wanted to get them out of the road for a deal with some people in Winnipeg, I think, if the dates correspond rightly.

Q. Later on? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Some of these are credited with amounts paid? A. Yes.

MR. HODGINS: I think what I want to do is to make up a list of those which are correct, a list of those that had notes showing amounts credited and list of those who paid nothing and are credited; I can make that now from information I have.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Yes, that would be useful for reference.

MR. HODGINS: Before I just go into the matter of one or two things that occurred in Ottawa I would like to say I have gone over your printed evidence in the Stratton case, and I do not find that anything was said by you at all in that either in examination in chief or in cross-examination about subscriptions; what you said was: "We took certain promissory notes from subscribers to the amount of about one hundred and nine thousand dollars I think, and I thought at the time that I needed eighty thousand dollars, and I approached Mr. Warren to loan me that sum of money with collateral security on these notes." And later on the question was: "That is they were to advance the $80,000 on the notes, these farmers notes, for which they were to get the bonus and interest specified? A. Yes. Q. Did you tell him (that is Warren) what the provisional board had done? A. I told him I had power from provisional board to endorse notes over to him." There is nothing in the power of attorney that I see to authorise you to do anything, to endorse notes or assign notes over? A. No, I believe not.

Q. This was on the 11th October. You had explained, had you, to Mr. Warren, about these notes furnished by the provisional directors? A. Yes. I explained to him that they were notes taken by the provisional directors on account of the subscriptions.

Q. "Then did you state how long you wanted that loan for? A. Yes, thirty days or thereabouts."

Q. Then on cross-examination, Mr. Watson reminds you that, on the 8th October the provisional directors gave a power of attorney to you for the purpose of endorsing notes in their names as provisional directors, and authorised the secretary to hand over all notes to W. R. Travers for the said purpose." And then there is at page 81 these questions:

Q. "You had obtained the loan at the time? A. Yes, I had obtained the loan. Q. You had used the notes and obtained the loan? A. I had."

Q. I do not find there is anything further about that? A. When you brought the matter up this morning it just came to my mind that there was an extra document attached hypothecating those subscriptions, and as I stated this morning I am not absolutely positive about it, but it is very strongly impressed upon my mind at the present time.

Q. This was the list, exhibit 19 on the King v. Stratton and Warren trial (now Exhibit 17)—kindly look at that—"You identify that in all case as being a copy"? the Crown Counsel asked you? A. I identified this yesterday as being a copy.

Q. That is the same one? A. Yes; we took care the first time it was produced to see it was correct.

Q. You see quite a number of pencil marks on it; the Commissioner has called attention to it that there is the letter "w" opposite some of them, and other pencil marks; do you know who has made those? A. I think that is my own as far as I can tell; worthless, is what I think I intended it for.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. When were those pencil marks made?  A. One of the officers of the Court I think—

Q. It was after the suspension?  A. Yes, it was after the trial commenced that I think these marks were made.

Q. Look at that cheque, I am instructed that that paid off the $20,500 loan and also the $2,380 loan, and probably something else, but that it certainly included those two?  A. Yes.

Q. It is marked exhibit "14" in the Stratton and Warren case, is it not?  A. Yes.

Q. Could you say what that included?  A. That would be $20,500 and $2,380 and interest.

EXHIBIT 53: Cheque of March 12th, 1907, for $25,344.80, to the Trusts & Guarantee Company or order, signed "Farmers Bank of Canada, W. R. Travers, General Manager".

Q. Look at this $500 cheque payable to yourself and say what that was for?  A. That was the Commission on the $20,000; that was taken out immediately the loan was made, endorsed over just for convenience.

Q. Is it made payable to you; whom did you endorse it to?  A. I endorsed it and handed it back to him.

EXHIBIT 54: Cheque of the Trusts & Guarantee Company to W. R. Travers, Esq., for $500, dated 23rd October, 1906, endorsed by W. R. Travers, and also by the Trusts & Guarantee Company "James J. Warren, Manager".

Q. Can you tell me what this memorandum is, in whose handwriting it is, and when it was compiled?  A. That is Mr. Fitzgibbon's handwriting.

Q. When was that compiled?  A. I think that was a memorandum he made up at the time we were spreading that money over the subscriptions.

Q. Was that the occasion in November or was it on the following May for the purpose of that special return?  A. Now I have changed my mind by going a little more carefully into it; I think that was a special return prepared in May, 1907; Mr. Fitzgibbon can answer that.

Q. After the list was prepared I suppose it was added up to show the amount that was paid?  A. Yes.

Q. Was there that amount in the bank?  A. No, there would not be that amount; there would be including—

Q. You had got $150,000 from the provisional directors, did you get any more from them?  A. $150,000; there was about $42,000 that was spent, and the $100,000 that we borrowed would be $292,000; it was very close to that amount taking that altogether.

Q. So that the way in which the amount paid up in that list that went to the Finance Minister was made up would be $150,000 which had been handed over by the provisional directors, $42,000 odd which they had spent in expenses, and one hundred thousand dollars borrowed from the Trusts & Guarantee Company?  A. Yes, that is the way the amount was made up.

Q. When that list (Exhibit 17) was prepared was it signed or initialled by anybody?  A. By myself only I think; looking at this and seeing this certificate on it signed by myself I would say that it was signed by myself alone only.

Q. The results had been arrived at, what we have described as the spreading process, in conjunction with the others you have named—?  A. What is that?

Q. Had the result been arrived at in the spreading process you have described in conjunction with the others?  A. Yes, Mr. Fitzgibbon first drafted out his idea, and he passed it on to me, and I formed my opinion, and Dr. Nesbitt had a look at it and he formed his, and Mr. Hunter ran over it and he formed his, and after a while we worked it out; that is all I can say about it.

Q. After you went down to Ottawa you say you had three interviews with the Finance Minister; could you tell us about one—you were introduced by Mr. Calvert on that first occasion, were you not?  A. Yes.
Q. I judge by some papers I have here that you may have known him, or some one connected with the Bank must have known him for some time prior to that? A. I did not know him prior to that very long; he was supposed to be a warm friend of Mr. Lindsay's.
Q. Your letter of introduction came from Lindsay or Mr. Urquhart? A. No, I met Mr. Calvert before I went down there, but Mr. Urquhart gave me a letter to him, as he said he was influential, to urge his assistance.
Q. He had been assisting, had he not, in the early part of 1906 in seeing people in Ottawa with regard to taking stock? A. I heard so, I did not know it.
Q. That would be through Lindsay? A. Yes.
Q. Was there anything definite arrived at in that first interview with Mr.
Fielding where you discussed the various subscriptions as to which you said he appeared to be informed? A. No, there was nothing settled; he said he was very busy, I would have to come back again, and let me know when to come; he also said that there had been so many irregularities about other banks' transactions with him with reference to their getting their certificate and he had to use a little caution.
Q. Any reference made to the Budget speech at that interview? A. Yes; they told me he was busy; that is the excuse he made for putting me off, that he had to deliver his Budget in a day or two, in fact I think he set the day; I cannot recall the day just now—that he was too busy. I know I went to the House and listened to it.
Q. You went to the House, and it was after the Budget speech you had the second interview? A. Yes.
Q. Where did that occur? A. Occurred in his office.
Q. On the last day of all? A. The day I got the certificate.
Q. It must have been earlier in the day? A. If my memory serves me right it would be about eleven o'clock.
Q. A letter has been put in from the Finance Minister stating that he would see you? A. Is that letter regarding the raising of the money?
Q. It is a letter dated 30th November stating: "I regret that owing to pressing engagements yesterday, arising out of the Budget, I was unable to meet you to consider your application for the issue of a certificate to authorize the Farmers Bank of Canada to commence business. I shall be glad to see you to-day at my office, at any time before one o'clock if you can call. Or I might be able to see you later, between four and five, at the House of Commons, if that will be more convenient."
Q. That is the date on which your letter in reply is dated; what time of day did you have your second interview with him? A. I was over there first; after receiving that letter I went over to see him then. He put me off till the afternoon; in the meantime he wrote me another letter asking me whether I had borrowed any money on notes, and then I answered that letter and followed it myself soon after.
Q. At the second interview, where you state he put you off till, afternoon, was anything discussed? A. No; the meeting was very brief; he said he had not had time to give it any attention.
Q. He says "If you call at my office any time before one o'clock"—was it before one o'clock on November 30th? A. Yes, I called there either about eleven or between eleven and twelve.
Q. Then you came back, or rather I understand from you that you say you got a letter from him? A. Yes, there was another letter followed that.
Q. This letter goes on to say—there is only the one letter produced—"It has been represented to us that in some previous instances where an application was in all respects apparently regular, there was actually an evasion of the intention of the Bank Act in relation to the paid-up capital. We have been told that in some cases the subscribers did not actually pay in cash, but gave notes to the provisional directors which were used to raise the money". That is the letter which I read you the beginning of? A. That is the letter I had reference to then.
Q. Would that alter your recollection, and would you say you got that letter before you called on him in the morning? A. Yes, I got that letter, and I called on him, and he was too busy to see me, and I went over to Mr. Guthrie's office, and answered that letter, and then I called on Mr. Fielding again later in the day, I should think it would be four o'clock, and then I got my certificate.

Q. And you had your answering letter in your hand? A. No, I sent it over before I got there.

Q. Prepared in Guthrie's office? A. Yes.

Q. Was Guthrie there? A. Yes.

Q. Guthrie said you came over, but he did not remain? A. I read his evidence, I think he is mistaken.

Q. He said he was just going out and was putting on his overcoat and you wanted to use the office, and he said, 'Use it', and he left you preparing that letter which he never saw, and you did not consult him in the matter at all with regard to the question raised by the Finance Minister? A. I told Mr. Guthrie that I had made that loan personally, and that I had made the loan personally so as to get over any such letter as I expected to get, and he told me I was perfectly justified, and it was quite honest on my part to answer it the way I did.

Q. You had gone down with your solicitor, Mr. Hunter, and owing to the questions the Finance Minister had raised he came back to Toronto and he sent you down the subscriptions according to what you said? A. Yes, I got them there, I am quite satisfied he did.

Q. He did not come down again? A. He did not come down again.

Q. Why did you go to Guthrie? Guthrie had been representing Smith? A. Guthrie was acting for Smith and we made up friends; I did not want to get the business too public.

Q. And you went to him? A. So I went to him.

Q. On your return to Mr. Fielding was anything said, was the question of the subscriptions raised again? A. No; the last time I got my certificate it was very brief; we hardly touched on the matter at all; we were talking about other things.

Q. Did he ask to see any of the subscriptions which you had sent down? A. No he did not, but I am under the impression that Mr. Boville or Mr. Boville's assistant looked at some of them; I remember taking them over.

Q. They are all here, a pretty large bundle? A. Yes, but they were not in that shape. We had them all in condensed form.

Q. So that it was possible to carry them about? A. Yes.

Q. What is your recollection of any one in the Finance Department looking at them? A. My recollection is I think it was Mr. Boville.

Q. What day did you see him then? A. I saw him the day after Hunter left—no the second day after Hunter left, after I got the subscriptions; Hunter got back the next morning, and I got them the following morning. Could I ask Mr. Fitzgibbon to jog my memory?

Q. No; I am taking your memory now. Just look at that letter which I wish to put in; that letter you got, did you not? A. Yes, I got that letter.

Q. That is dated the 29th November? A. Yes.

Q. And as you got your certificate on the 30th I suppose if Mr. Boville saw those subscriptions he would have seen them on the 30th? A. On the morning the first time I went over.

Q. Is that the morning you went over and just saw Mr. Fielding for a moment and was put off till the afternoon? A. Yes.

Q. You took over your subscriptions with you? A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. Who asked you to show them to Mr. Boville? A. I do not think anybody asked me; I was speaking to him as I passed in, and laid them down.—

Q. You said you laid the subscriptions down when you were speaking to Mr. Boville; what did you do that for? A. I just invited him to look at them.

Q. The Minister had not raised any question, had he? A. No, but I was preparing myself to be ready.

Q. I do not see why you tendered them to Mr. Boville if he did not ask for them? A. When we went in the first time we showed everything to Mr. Boville, all our notices and affidavits and everything.

Q. You could not help doing that, he had them; did he take any time to look at them? A. Yes, I think he turned up one or two.

Q. He has not said a word about that? A. I read his evidence, but I am positive that we looked at two or three of those subscriptions.

Q. Do you know which ones he looked at? A. No, I could not swear positively, but I think he looked at Lindsay’s.

Q. Asked anything about it? The Finance Minister had spoken about it? A. The Finance Minister had spoken about it beforehand, and I suppose that is the reason he looked at it.

Q. Anything said about it? A. He said it was a large subscription; he says, “That is a very large one, that is the only large one you have; it looks a fine list to me”, as he looked at the list and held it up this way and then I explained to him about Lindsay’s subscription.

Q. What explanation did you make? A. That certain subscriptions I had on the list there should really have been taken off and no provision in the Bank Act to take them off and I put on Lindsay’s subscription to make a larger amount, to swell up the amount, and that Lindsay would be able to replace that afterwards.

Q. You say you stated that both to the Finance Minister and to Mr. Boville? A. No, I did not tell Mr. Boville that.

Q. I asked you as to the conversation with Mr. Boville? A. You go around in different kind of ways and I cannot understand you; I give you Mr. Fielding’s interview. Mr. Boville’s was very different altogether. I saw Mr. Boville as I passed through in the first place; I had no discussion whatever with Mr. Boville regarding any subscription on that list or anything about the subscriptions, but I had the second day when I went in; he looked at them but did not pay very much attention to them, that is my recollection of it.

Q. In order to make it quite clear you went in to Mr. Boville’s office with the subscriptions? A. The second day.

Q. The day you got the certificate? A. The day I got it, yes.

Q. Did you discuss any subscriptions with him? A. No.

Q. Did he hold up the list and say it looked like a very nice list? A. No, I say that was Mr. Fielding.

Q. You do not say Mr. Boville discussed the various subscriptions or in fact any one of them? A. Not a single one.

Q. Did he look over the subscriptions? A. No.

Q. You made no comment on them yourself? A. No.

Q. Did you take them into his office? A. We deposited the list and the papers in the first place, and the second day I went there I laid the subscriptions down. I thought they would look at them while I was away.

Q. Did you tell him what they were? A. Yes.

Q. Did he see where you left them? A. He could not help it.

Q. Did you ask him to look over them? A. I did not.

Q. What remark did he make when you said “These are the subscriptions?” A. I do not think he paid very much attention to it, he just left them lying there.

Q. That would be in the morning between eleven and twelve? A. That would be the first time I went there that day, the day I got my certificate, November 30th.
Q. Mr. Boville apparently did not raise any of the questions that the Finance Minister raised? A. Mr. Boville did not go into the matter at all.

Q. On your second interview with the Finance Minister that day, you say it was brief? A. Yes.

Q. You had sent over your letter, which is here, that the provisional directors did not raise any money in the way mentioned by him, that is by notes—you had sent over that letter? A. Yes.

Q. Denying what the Finance Minister had said was done, had been done, in your case? A. Not exactly denying it, rather putting it in a different way I thought.

Q. He said, "We have been told in some cases the subscribers did not actually pay in cash but gave notes to the provisional directors, which were used to raise the money"? A. Yes.

Q. That fitted your case exactly? A. I took it that the provisional board did not use those notes.

Q. "The subscribers did not actually pay in cash but gave notes to the provisional directors which were used to raise money", and your answer was, "the provisional directors did not raise the money in the way mentioned by you"? A. Yes.

Q. Was that intended to be disingenuous? A. I thought that would answer the letter and not require any further information.

Q. You followed the letter up by going over? A. Yes, I followed the letter up and had perhaps ten or fifteen or twenty minutes interview with him and got the certificate.

Q. Was that about between four and five? A. Yes.

Q. You got that from him or from Mr. Boville? A. No, I did not get it from him; I got it from either Mr. Boville or a clerk there; I do not know which. He said he had given orders.

Q. How long did he keep you waiting? A. I had it handed to me as I passed out.

Q. What became of the subscriptions? A. I took them with me, I am not sure whether I took them then or took them the first time, I took them with me.

Q. I thought the first time you left them with Mr. Boville? A. Yes.

Q. You thought he would look at them when you were gone? A. Yes, but I could not say whether I took them away or not and I could not swear positively on that, whether he looked over them casually and I took them away or I left them and got them the second time.

Q. This letter (Exhibit 55) does not say anything about subscriptions being sent, it speaks of three blank cheques? A. I got the blank cheques by letter, but the subscriptions came I think in a separate parcel by parcel post.

Q. What were those three blank cheques for? A. In case I needed any money.

Q. Did you need it? A. As it turned out I did not.

Q. Did you use any of those cheques? A. I do not think so, the cheques will speak for themselves.

Q. Did you pay any money when you were down there to anybody? A. The only money I paid was to Mr. Guthrie, $110.

Q. What became of the two other cheques? A. I do not know, the cheques will speak for themselves.

Q. Were they used? A. I could not say.

Q. Did you use any of them down there? A. I do not remember doing so.

Q. Did you use any of them some time afterwards? A. I could not say; the cheques I think were used but they will speak for themselves I do not remember them.

Q. They would if we had them? A. I have seen them since I have been giving evidence.
Mr. Commissioner: We had certain stubs? A. I am quite satisfied I have seen the cheques themselves during these trials.

Q. Payable to whom? A. I think one was marked with a C on it, $3,000.

Q. What was that? A. I will take the responsibility of that.

Q. Who was it paid to? A. I could not say what it was paid for.

Q. When was it used? A. I could not say when it was used, the cheque will speak for itself.

Q. What did the “C” on it indicate? A. I have forgotten now what it is, some memoranda; perhaps Mr. Fitzgibbon can tell, I do not know.

Q. That is one you have seen since? A. Yes, I think that is one of those cheques.

Q. Those cheques are all there—there is the Guthrie & Pringle cheque? A. The next one is cancelled, that will be no doubt one I had marked cancelled; then I am wrong about the one marked “C”.

Q. What did you mean by your reference to the $3,000? A. I thought it was one of these but I see it is not.

Q. Did you find it later on? A. It may be but I have not found it so far.

Q. Do you remember whom it was payable? A. I remember the cheque.

Q. Do you find it in that bundle, Exhibit 35? A. No.

Q. You think you have seen that cheque? A. I have seen the cheque several times during these trials.

Q. Not here? A. No, I have not at this investigation.

Q. Can you tell anything more about it; you said you would take the responsibility about it? A. That is all I can say, that is all I can remember.

Q. Is that because you do not want to disclose what was done with it? A. Yes, I do not.

Mr. Commissioner: Don’t you think, witness, it would be better to disclose? A. I have got to take a certain amount of responsibility, Mr. Commissioner, and I cannot undertake, I do not think, to tell those matters.

Q. The oath you have taken is to answer all questions touching this inquiry? A. You know that I would like to do anything that you would ask me to do or require me to do, but I hardly think it is fair to me to be forced to say where certain money might have been paid to for assistance from friends, and I would rather not do so.

Q. Don’t you think, looking at it from the standpoint of your own interest, that a full disclosure of everything is more likely to further it? A. I cannot see, Mr. Commissioner, what good it would do. I would rather stay where I am for the term and twice as much more than to injure anybody.

Mr. Commissioner: If that is your final answer I suppose that is all we can do.

Mr. Hodgins: Was it paid out at that time? A. I would rather not, Mr. Hodgins; I would rather not go into it at all.

Q. Was it paid before the bank went into operation? A. I would have to see the date of the cheque; I have forgotten just at the moment.

Mr. Commissioner: You might consider it witness, in this aspect; you may by concealing it or not disclosing it, rather reflect upon somebody who ought not to be reflected upon? A. Ask me the question as to who is in your mind.

Q. I am not suggesting anybody? A. I will answer that.

Q. A good deal of suspicion is thrown or endeavors to be thrown upon the action of the Department granting this certificate? A. Well, it did not go to Mr. Fielding, I will answer that; he never got a cent from me or any promise or anything of the kind.

Q. That may make it worse, that statement may make it worse for somebody else unless you go further? A. That is the reason the last time that I was here, not having seen any newspapers, being shut out from the world, that I desired to see my solicitor to talk matters over with him; I do not wish to put myself in a bad light; I want to do what is right.

Mr. Commissioner: I suppose the witness will be here at the next meeting?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: You might think it over in the meantime. Of course it is open to you to consult your solicitor again about it if you desire to do so? A. I want to give you the fullest information that I possibly can give.

Mr. Commissioner: Don't you see that what you have said now may make suspicious people think that somebody in the Finance Department got this money? A. There was nobody in the Finance Department got this money.

Mr. Commissioner: That is satisfactory? A. Not a single one, never was thought of.

Mr. Hodgins: It is not satisfactory to have negative information, because you might say that of everybody without disclosing anybody. However, I think what the Commissioner has said is quite right; I think you ought to think it over? A. I will, and have been thinking it over; I will think it over again.

Q. At all events you came away with your certificate? A. I did.

Q. And the bank began business on the 2nd January, 1907? A. Yes, opened our doors then; we really did a little business before that.

Q. I think I asked you this yesterday, were you asked by anybody to return the certificate, or did any one see you with regard to the fact that you got it and should not use it? A. The certificate was never questioned.

Q. Did Mr. Stratton see you between the two dates? A. He did not.

Q. Did you see him? A. No.

Q. Were you down in Ottawa between the 30th November and the day the bank opened for business? A. I was not.

Q. On the night of the 30th did you see any one after you had got your certificate before you left? A. I saw a lot of people there.

Q. Did you see any one in connection with the certificate? A. No.

Q. Did any one come down to the hotel to see you and miss you? A. Not to my recollection.

Q. You got no message from anybody before you got off with the certificate? A. No, sir.

Q. You came back here and you remember a visit of Mr. Knight? A. I remember Mr. Knight calling some time in December.

Q. The date he got here was the day after the final payment to the Trusts & Guarantee Company of December 17th, was it not? A. Yes, I believe it was.

Q. The loan had been paid at that time to the Trusts & Guarantee Company through Mitchell? A. I considered it was paid, yes.

Q. Mr. Knight came up and you and he had some conversation? A. Yes, Mr. Knight came to the office and said he was sent by the Finance Minister, and had I known at the time it was false I would have thrown him out of the office.

Q. He seemed to think you very nearly did it? A. I am sorry I did not now.

Q. What did he see? A. He saw the subscription lists, this book, (Exhibit 19), and we laid all the subscriptions in front of him, and told him to go into them to his heart's content.

Q. Who are we? A. Mr. Fitzgibbon was with me at the time.

Q. Any one else? A. No.

Q. What did he say he wanted to see? A. He wanted to know where the money had gone to that we had returned to us from the Finance Department; he wanted to know where it had gone.

Q. You knew where it had gone? A. I certainly knew where it had gone.

Q. Did you tell him? A. I did not.
Q. Did he ask to see the books to see where it had gone? A. I gave him a certificate of deposit from the Union Bank and one from the Trusts & Guarantee Company, which made up the amount very closely.

Q. Supposing that that money which you got back from the Government had been paid to various people how would that affect your right to circulate? A. We could not have got any money out in that short time.

Q. If it had been paid back between the 30th November and the 2nd January how would it have affected your circulation? A. We could circulate money up to the paid up capital, and we considered the notes were payments.

Q. If the paid-up capital in fact had been depleted would that affect your right to circulate? A. To that extent, to the extent of the depletion.

Q. You considered the money you got back from the Department as paid up capital, did you not? A. Yes, certainly it was.

Q. Treated it for the purpose of getting the certificate as paid up capital? A. Certainly.

Q. As a matter of fact the Trusts & Guarantee Company had been paid off out of it? A. Yes.

Q. And you had got a cheque for $10,000 which has been described? A. Yes.

Q. And other cheques had been paid which probably will be mentioned later, and in fact if those were paid out of the paid up capital it was depleted? A. It was depleted, yes, certainly.

Q. Did he make inquiries in order to ascertain what had become of the money that the Department had returned to you? A. No, he did not; his idea I thought was to find out whether we borrowed this money or not to put up, that is what I gathered from his conversation.

Q. A very good answer to that of course would be to show him? A. To show him the certificate of deposit.

Q. Still better answer to show what you had paid out of it up to date? A. Yes, but I was not anxious to do that.

Q. Instead of that you showed him this certificate—these are the two, from the Traders Bank and the Trusts Company? A. I think it was the Union at that time.

Q. I think not? A. Well, I am getting mixed on that; I thought I transferred my account the next day I came from Ottawa, but I find I did not; then it is the Traders and the Guarantee Company.

Q. Are those what he saw? A. He got copies of those.

Q. The Traders Bank speaks of the evening of December 17th as having $153,576 on deposit and the Trusts & Guarantee Company is dated on the 18th December certifying that they had got to your credit the sum of $80,605.81 with interest at 31/2% on the following sums from the dates opposite such sums, and then it sets out the three cheques? A. Yes.

EXHIBIT 56: Certificate of Traders Bank showing that the Farmers Bank had at their credit December 17th $153,576.81; and certificate of the Trusts & Guarantee Company that the Farmers Bank had to their credit with the Trusts Company $80,605.81 on the 18th December, 1906.

Q. These were got during an interval—he came in and went out again? A. Yes, he came in in the morning and went away, in the meantime I went down to the Trusts & Guarantee Company and told Mr. Warren that it would be necessary to have that money back to our credit again.

Q. And explained why? A. I did not tell him that Knight was there; I told him I had good reasons for it.

Q. Did he ask you why? A. No, he did not ask me why at all. He knew I would not ask that unless it was very important.

Q. Did he ask it? A. No, and I did not tell him, he did not ask me anything about Knight.
Q. Did he ask you what? A. He may have asked me what was the matter, and I did not tell him that it was Knight that was there, but I told him it was very important, I do not remember word for word what passed between us.

Q. You did not tell him because of why it was important? A. No.

Q. Did you tell him this money had been paid back to him out of the deposit and it was very important not to show it? A. No, I did not say anything about that; I said it was important to show it on hand.

Q. He was alive to the fact that it would not do to have the loan repaid out of the money that the Government had returned? A. I do not know whether he was or not.

Q. Did Knight do anything more than go through the stock subscription book? A. He worked at that for two hours and thought it was too big a job.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It is not quite clear as to what was done about the $80,000? A. The three payments that I had given cheques for were reversed and put back again to my credit.

Q. The loan was set on foot again? A. Yes, that is exactly it.

MR. HODGINS: I have a statement here which I will show you from the Trusts & Guarantee Company’s books, showing the three payments which you had made struck out of your books and the amount then put to your credit; it was put to your credit apparently? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What became of the notes; had the notes been returned to him or were they still——

MR. HODGINS: After the payment on December 17th, the final payment of that $80,000 loan, did you get the notes back? A. No, we did not; the last payment was that very day, and the cheque had been sent down and we had not received the notes when I went down right after it to check it off.

Q. So that you left everything standing as it was except that you reversed all the entries? A. Yes.

Q. And then that was carried in the books of the bank until some time early in 1907 as if the Trusts & Guarantee Company owed you that money? A. Yes.

Q. As if you had made a deposit? A. Yes, representing a deposit with them; of course they did not owe us the money.

Q. As a matter of fact you had not made any such deposit? A. No, we had not made any such deposit.

Q. What did you do in the books of the bank itself in connection with the same matter? A. Mr. Fitzgibbon had charge of the bookkeeping.

Q. What instructions did you give Mr. Fitzgibbon? A. I instructed him to charge the Trusts Company with $80,605, and show it as a deposit to them in the government statement.

Q. Was it or was it not shown in the government statement of December 31st? A. Yes, I wrote a letter to Mr. Fielding asking Mr. Fielding what to do about it.

Q. About what? A. About that eighty thousand dollars.

Q. Do you mean to say you wrote to him and explained how it was done? A. No, I asked him how I would show the eighty thousand dollars that was on deposit with the Trusts Company; I certainly did not tell him the transaction. The answer came back to show it under 29 of the statement.

Q. I have not the letter? A. I have not seen the letter, but it was there on file when I left the bank.

Q. I did not see any such letter in the department file? A. I left it in the bank when I went away.

Q. When was the letter written? A. Just for the January statement, I think.

Q. It was written after Mr. Knight’s visit and before the 2nd January, 1907? A. Yes, about then.
Q. You must have stated in the letter that you had this on deposit? A. Yes.
Q. And asked the Department's view as to where you should show it? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: That is not quite clear; after the entries had been reversed showing the repayment of the loan what took place with them in the Trusts Company's books, did they credit the bank with an equal amount as a deposit with them? A. They did.
Q. Did you get the deposit receipt for it? A. No.
Q. Did they credit it to the bank? A. They credited it in their books.
Mr. Hodgins: Are you quite sure of that? A. Yes, I am quite sure of it, because I have seen in the court at these trials where they have proven that they did; that is why I am so positive about it.
Q. Here is a copy from their books showing the way it was done——
Mr. Commissioner: This does not necessarily show that there was no entry in their books.
Mr. Hodgins: They just struck them out.
Mr. Commissioner: There would have been a credit of that to the Farmers Bank or somebody to make their books balance? A. Yes, certainly.
Mr. Hodgins: We will have to get that.
Mr. Commissioner: There must have been a cross entry to meet that.
Mr. Hodgins: I won't put that in now.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Warren that you paid him back too soon? A. I might have, I do not remember.
Q. I think that is what you said on another occasion? A. Very likely I did; I would not tie myself down so closely as that.
Q. You afterwards purported to pay that back, didn't you. you made entries in the books of the bank to show payment? A. We issued cheques to show payment of it, yes.
Q. As a matter of fact the Trusts & Guarantee Company got the money and that wiped out the loan, and you had to do something with the books of the bank in order to make it look as though you were paying back that? A. It was not for that that I did it, it was because of the opposition of the other banks, and they were watching me very closely; I just put it around in another way so that it would not show very closely.
Q. At all events you put it through in such a way that it would look as if the transaction was being closed up later, did you not? A. Yes, I think you can put it that way.
Q. I do not know how far the details of that are important? A. The cheques all tell the story; you have them there.
Q. Will you look and see if those are the ones? A. Yes.
Exhibit 57: Seven cheques of the Trusts & Guarantee Company.
Q. The Trusts & Guarantee Company received those cheques, or did you receive them from them? A. I received those cheques from them in payment of that $80,605.81; I think that is what they will all figure up to.
Q. Who did you deal with? A. Mr. Warren.
Mr. Commissioner: That is not very clear; what does that mean?
Mr. Hodgins: The only way to explain that will be through Mr. Clarkson.
Mr. Commissioner: He ought to explain in some way; as it stands now.
A. In the other side of that I put the same cheques through my books, the same amounts to their credit. It was simply changed——
Mr. Hodgins: In your savings bank or in the current account? A. In their current account with us.
Q. You gave them credit for $80,605? A. Yes.
Q. And they credited you with a corresponding amount, did you say? A. They charged us with those cheques checking out the deposit, and we built it up the other side in our books, that is my recollection. Of course they take a different view of this transaction than I do. I say that was just a means by which we twisted the thing back into its original form again.

Mr. Commissioner: The cancelling of those payments was in December, Mr. Hodgins?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes.

A. The 17th December.

Mr. Hodgins: Q. I am instructed that this is what was done in regard to that loan, that on February 27th, 1907, the charge was made in the account as an amount withdrawn from the Trusts Company of $30,300—one of the entries made, in order to make it look as if you were getting back from the Trusts Company what they were showing as a deposit from you, is that right? A. That is after the entries have been reversed?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, that is right.

Mr. Commissioner: Are you speaking of the Farmers Bank books?

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, of $30,300. I am told that that really covered promissory notes which the Trusts Company gave you back and which you discounted out at Milton? A. There may have been that many notes returned at that time.

Q. There were exactly; and the entry made is $30,300? A. Yes.

Q. And you got that money by the discount of these notes at the Milton branch, and received them at the head office, making a charge as if they came back from the Trusts Company? A. We got no money out of them.

Q. I ask you if this was the method adopted, withdrawing notes, discounting them at Milton, and putting them to the credit of the head office at the head office as if they had been paid to you by the Trusts Company? A. No, I could not say that; the transaction through the Milton office and the head office would be to get it into capital account.

Q. You recollect it, do you not, because Mr. Clarkson has worked it out, and it comes out to a cent in that way according to the books? A. I do not view it in that way.

Q. March and April there were three other sums all treated in the same way, discount of notes in Milton, money credited in the head office as having come from the Trusts Company amounting to $80,605.81——

Mr. Commissioner: Would not that be quite consistent with what the witness was saying, that these notes, coming from the Trusts Company, were discounted in the bank and then carried to the credit of the capital account and treated then as if there had been so much paid on the subscribers' stock? A. That is right.

Mr. Hodgins: I am only dealing with what entries they made to make it appear that the loan which did not exist was repaid to them by the Trusts & Guarantee Company. I am indicating that they got their own notes from the Trusts Company, and discounting them made these false entries——? A. The act of discounting them was simply to get them into the right account; but the fact of the case is this, there was no entry made for those notes at all going to the Trusts Company; their returning them so many on each cheque was their own idea, not ours.

Q. The fact was there was no such deposit and the entries made were fictitious entries? A. I would not like to go that far in the face of the evidence Mr. Warren gave. He considers that he reversed that, he actually gave us back the money again. I looked upon it simply as a reversion of the matter and no new transaction at all.

Q. From your point of view there was no such deposit with the company and therefore you had no right to get it from them? A. No, there was no such money ever deposited with the company.
Q. And any entries which looked as if they had paid you back during February, March and April during 1907 were fictitious entries? A. I would not like to go so far as that; they were not exactly entries that represented any new money.

Q. From your point of view the entries were unnecessary? A. The entries were unnecessary.

Q. Were they put in in order to suit Mr. Warren's view? A. No, they were put in to suit myself.

Q. That it was unnecessary? A. No, I wanted to conceal the payments from the Clearing House.

Q. What is that? A. I wanted to conceal the payments back to the Trusts Company.

Q. I understand the Trusts Company never did pay you those moneys as represented by those four entries in February and April, 1907? A. They gave us cheques on the Bank of Montreal for $80,605, which would go to show that we had that money there, but on the other side I gave them credit.

Q. You gave them cheques, didn't you? A. Yes, cheques or credit, I have forgotten which, one or the other.

Q. The Trusts Company and you did join together in making those entries? A. Yes, undoubtedly we did.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Cannot you get from the witness at this point how was the money that was borrowed from the Trusts & Guarantee Company treated in the books of the bank? I do not think there is any evidence as to that.

MR. HODGINS: The money you got from the Trusts & Guarantee Company amounting to $100,000, how was that treated in the books of the bank, to what account was it credited? A. Paid up capital.

Q. We will find that in the capital account of the bank.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Was it credited to the subscribers to whom you had allotted it in this division that you made? A. I could not explain that exactly.

Q. Or any lump sum? A. I think it was in a lump sum; I could not say positively.

MR. HODGINS: Do not let there be a misunderstanding about that; you do not suggest the amounts you spread were afterwards credited to the subscribers as payment up of their notes or stock? A. No, but as each note was discounted at Milton the matter dissolved. What sediment there may have been I do not know how it was treated.

Q. Up to the time you began business, December 1st, 1907, there was no such credit to the shareholders? No, there was not.

Q. As would indicate payments of their notes or their stock? A. No.

Q. Was the lump sum credited in capital account in any way? A. Only in so far as making up the Government statement.

Q. Was it credited in fact? A. There was no entry for it.

Q. It was only credited in your own mind? A. Just by way of memorandum for making up the Government statement.

Q. Not in the bank books? A. No.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Apparently this transaction was treated as if it had not occurred as far as the bank was concerned? A. Yes, that is the way to look at it.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Before we adjourn I would like to ask you what check is there upon a bank over-issuing its notes? A. The only check is that the Bankers' Association send their man at irregular intervals and compare the circulation with the books.

Q. There is no supervision by the Department of Finance? A. All the notes that are printed at Ottawa for the banks require to be reported to the Bankers' Association, and then as those notes are signed and put into circulation we have to report to the Bankers' Association from the bank and they have the right at any time to enter any bank and check that up.
Q. Their interest being they are guaranteeing—? A. They are guaranteeing the circulation of each of the banks or rather the larger ones guaranteeing the smaller ones.

The Commission adjourned at 4 P.M. until 11 A.M. Tuesday, May 21st, 1912.

Toronto, May 21st, 1912.

The Commission continued its sittings at Osgoode Hall, at 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

HON. SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH, Commissioner.
FRANK E. HODGINS, K.C.
J. THOMPSON, K.C., representing the Dominion Government.

W. R. TRAVERS, Examination Continued:

Mr. Hodgins: These cheques that were put in as Exhibit 57—just look at them—are payable by the Trusts & Guarantee Company to the order of the Union Bank of Canada, aggregating $80,605.81; they were issued by the Trusts & Guarantee Company after getting these cheques, were they not, from your bank? A. Yes.

Exhibit 58: Cheques last shown witness, from Farmers Bank to Trusts & Guarantee Company.

Q. What is the connection between the two? A. Those on the Bank of Montreal issued by the Trusts Company are repaying the deposit of $80,605.81.

Q. That is the so-called deposit that was created as it were after Mr. Knight's visit? A. The reversal of the original entry.

Q. That is you gave your cheques in favor of the Union Bank of Canada, did you? A. I did.

Q. To the Trusts & Guarantee Company, or was it on them? A. This is drawn on them. (Exhibit 58).

Q. To whose credit were their cheques deposited? A. Their cheques were deposited to the Farmers Bank.

Q. Do those cheques appear in this Toronto Office Ledger at page 300? A. Yes, they appear.

Q. Out of what were they paid—this account headed Trusts & Guarantee Company, where were the credits got out of which those were paid? A. We made deposits with the Trusts & Guarantee Company from day to day.

Q. As shown on page 300 in this ledger? A. Yes.

Q. Commencing January 7th, 1907? A. Yes.

Q. Deposits of what nature? A. I could not say exactly what they were; sometimes they were our own notes, and sometimes our own notes and cheques combined.

Q. You mean when you say your own notes, circulation? A. Yes, circulation notes of the Farmers Bank.

Q. That account appears to be closed on April 8th? A. Yes.

Q. You appear to have deposited from January 7th, 1907, to April 8th enough to cover these cheques which the Trusts & Guarantee Company gave you? A. Yes.

Q. So that you supplied the funds in other words for the cheques which they gave you, and it came back in the Union Bank to your credit? A. That is the way I understood it.
Q. Are there any other entries connected with that in the head office ledger; this is the Toronto branch?  A. No, I do not think so.

Q. These cheques appear to bear Mr. Stratton and Mr. Warren’s signatures in some cases (Exhibit 57), and Mr. Stratton and Mr. Stockdale’s—who did you do the business with?  A. My recollection is with Mr. Warren; the deposit should be made in the ordinary course there, and whatever officer was behind the counter.

Q. Was there any arrangement made before this account was opened in January, 1907, as to the use which was to be made of it?  A. We made the arrangement we would deposit with each other, they with us and we with them.

Q. How does it come that on April 8th it appears you just came out exactly even?  A. My recollection is we were making those deposits for the purpose of paying off the loan.

Q. Paying off what I have said is the so-called loan?  A. $80,605.

Q. Who did you make the arrangement with?  A. With Mr. Warren.

Q. You identify this as being in Mr. Fitzgibbon’s handwriting; I think you said it was for the purpose of making up the special return to the Government, made in May?  A. That is my recollection of it.

Exhibit 59: List of certain shareholders and subscriptions.

Q. You remember being called on for a special return?  A. I do.

Q. Special return called for by the Honorable Minister of Finance in a letter of May 2nd, 1907,—it is printed here; I suppose you could probably give us your recollection of it?  A. Yes, I should say that was a copy of it.

Q. Do you know where that original return is?  A. That is with the Finance Department.

Q. It purports to be the portion of the $375,473 paid up capital of the bank as per return of 30th March, 1907, represented by promissory notes of the shareholders held by the bank amounts to $59,110; the following is a list of the notes—you are accounting then for the notes held by the bank on account of the paid up capital of the bank?  A. Yes.

Q. Amounting to $59,000; this is supposed to be a list of those notes; it appears to be signed by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, as President, and yourself as General Manager, and Mr. Fitzgibbon as chief accountant?  A. Yes.

Q. That letter that you refer to is printed here somewhere; what was the occasion of it; was it not some letter from your Milton branch?  A. I learned afterwards that one of the managers who was annoyed at something had written down and complained about the notes being under discount.

Q. This letter is printed in this return at page 29, from Van Koughnet; would you just read the letter and see if the statement that Mr. Van Koughnet makes is correct: he says, “Our General Manager sends to the different branches lists of notes given in payment of our capital stock; these notes he makes the managers put through as discounts, crediting the amounts to head office; this is figured in the government return as paid up capital and circulation issued to that amount”?  A. Well, there were notes sent out to the branches for discount, and the proceeds were credited to capital account in head office, but we would have to have the means of circulating the notes before we could put out notes. I considered that was paid up capital, and we could issue up to that extent.

Q. The statement is true any way that the notes sent out to Van Koughnet, for instance, were notes given in payment of capital stock?  A. Yes.

Q. And that they were put through as discounts, the amount being credited to the head office?  A. Yes.

Q. And that that was figured in the government return as paid up capital?  A. Yes.

Q. And circulation issued to that extent?  A. Well, we cannot say the circulation was issued to that extent; we would have the privilege of issuing to that extent.
Q. And did you take advantage of that privilege? A. As far as our business permitted it, yes.

Q. The letter of May 2nd, which is referred to in the return, is printed here, page 30, asking you what portion of the $375,473 paid up capital as per return of 30th March, 1907, is represented by promissory notes; is that return sent to the government correct? A. No, I do not think it was fully correct.

Q. Mr. Vankoughnet in a later letter printed in this return, page 30, says that the amount under discount at his office, that is the Milton office, was $111,885? A. Yes.

Q. Would that be right? A. I should think so.

Q. And the return I see only gives the amount of notes held by the bank representing capital stock as $59,110? A. Yes.

Q. A difference of about? A. $52,000; that $52,000 I think the chief accountant carried in as contingent account; the books will show that.

Q. At all events the return was out to that amount? A. Yes, notes under discount as compared with that return there would be a difference of that amount.

Q. I am speaking of the portion of the capital stock referred to by the Minister of Finance that is said in the return to be $59,110 in notes, but it should have been at least $111,000? A. I cannot say from memory whether it should have been $111,000; I would have to take the books and compare that.

Q. We will do that; it would depend on the books? A. Yes.

Q. Why was the amount of $59,110 selected as being the total? A. My recollection is that we showed those to correspond with the credits in the original list of November, 1906.

Mr. Commissioner: What does that mean? A. So the two statements jibe.

Q. I understood that: but were those notes on account of shares taken subscribed subsequent to—— A. Not subsequent to the original statement.

Mr. Hodgins: These were original subscriptions? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: Included in the subscriptions that are in that schedule sent to the Department? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: The amount in this Special Return in May, the amount of the notes as given would correspond with the amount shown as paid in that Government Return? A. I think so; I am not quite sure whether it tallies to it exactly that way, but I think that was the intention.

Q. You had been asked apparently by the Finance Minister for a return on March 30th; I do not think that is printed here at all; did you send in a return on the 30th March? A. I have no recollection of sending in any others but the usual monthly return. I saw Sir Richard Cartwright regarding the notes and he told me if we could not issue circulation against good farmers’ notes he did not know what we could do against it.

Q. Just look again at this special return; it begins with “Special Return”; it says, “Portion of the $375,473 paid up capital of the bank as per return of March 30th, 1907”—that I suppose was the monthly return? A. Yes.

Q. That showed that amount as paid up capital, and you are accounting for the paid up capital that was represented by notes? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any further correspondence after you sent down that special return, or did that end the matter? A. That ended the matter as far as I remember.

Q. Was it after that that you had that conversation with Sir Richard Cartwright? A. About that time.

Mr. Commissioner: Had you not better make that a little clearer about notes; do I understand the witness to say the other notes had not been used, the other fifty-two thousand? A. No, sir, they were all discounted and credited to capital account, but part of the proceeds was carried to a contingent account.
Q. And not included as payments on the capital in the return? A. I am not sure about that, but I do not think they were; the books will have to show that.

Mr. Hodgins: Is that what you really mean; on the 30th March, 1907, the paid up capital was shown as appears there at $375,000 odd? A. Yes.

Q. Then was not that represented by something in the neighborhood of $111,000 of notes? A. No, I do not think there was.

Q. How much would you say it was represented by? A. To my recollection, it was more than the fifty-nine thousand that was in that special statement, but more than more I cannot tell off-hand without looking at the books.

Q. What book would you look at to tell that? A. The head office book; I do not know whether I could find it then; I think the chief accountant could explain that better than I could.

Mr. Hodgins: (To Mr. Fitzgibbon): Can you suggest what book that would be in?

Mr. Fitzgibbon: It would be in the Head Office Ledger.

Mr. Commissioner: If you are right that $59,000 was less than the amount, what was the object of putting it in at less than the amount? A. To correspond with the original statement we sent down.

Q. I do not understand how that is; why did not the original statement show it? A. They were not discounted at that time at the Milton Branch.

Mr. Hodgins: Not discounted by yourselves with yourselves? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: They were in the hands of the Bank or the Trusts Company? A. Yes.

Q. As security for that loan, as you say, made personally, not on account of the Bank? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: It would look to me as if when you sent down that original return in November you did not say anything about promissory notes at all? A. I did not.

Q. In this return you give the details of $59,000 odd of notes, give the due date and so on? A. Yes.

Q. Then in what respect would that return correspond with the original return? A. Wherever we showed the proceeds received on account of the notes hypothecated with the Trusts Company on that return we showed a note in the special return.

Q. That is, if you credited a man $1,000 as paid in cash you would show $1,000 note? A. Yes, on that list.

Q. Are the notes correct as notes or are they misleading? A. No, there is nothing misleading; they are all genuine farmers’ notes.

Q. I know, but is the amount of each note correct? A. Yes, as far as I can remember I think it is.

Q. You only showed those notes that would correspond with the November return? A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. And amount? A. Yes.

Q. You had others which you think went to a contingent account? A. Yes.

Q. By whose instructions? A. It would be mine I suppose; nobody else could give instructions.

Q. If only $59,110 was represented by notes how was the balance of the $375,000 of capital stock made up, what was it represented by? A. Nearly $200,000 paid in in cash.

Q. You got only about $150,000 from the provisional directors? A. Yes; there was $40,000 paid out for expenses; that would be $190,000.

Q. But that was all gone? A. It had not gone, that had not gone; we brought back from Ottawa $?15,000, of which $100,000 was borrowed; that was $145,000, and $5,000 left with Ottawa, would make $150,000; but there was $40,000 paid out before that.
Q. Were you carrying the paid-out expenses of the provisional directors as part of your capital account? A. We were.

Q. How much, I ask you again, of the $375,000 was represented by anything else than notes? A. There was no part represented by anything else but notes and the cash.

Q. $150,000 cash? A. Is not that $200,000 cash? If you receive the cash on capital account you could not credit anything but capital account with it.

Q. Take it that way, $200,000 that would leave $175,000 more of capital account? A. Yes.

Q. And you only show $59,110 of notes? A. Yes.

Q. That would leave about $115,000? A. Then $100,000 was left by the Trusts Company, and it would show it was paid-up capital.

Q. At that time at all events the $80,000 had been paid; had the $20,000 been paid back to the Trusts Company? A. No, the $80,000 was not paid back; it was left in the same position as it started.

Q. The $80,000, we have gone over that; it had been paid back by December 17th? A. Yes.

Q. When was the $20,000 paid back? A. In about March I think, 1907, three or four months later.

Q. At the time you made that return that $100,000 would have been paid back? A. Well, of course I could not answer that with the credit that the Trusts Company showed to the credit of the Bank still remaining there.

Q. That would account for $80,000? A. The $20,000 would be still carried in capital account.

Q. I do not hear anything about $20,000 being returned? A. It was $100,000; $80,000 and $20,000 made the $100,000 that was borrowed.

Q. The entries you reversed amounted to $80,000 only? A. Yes; well, the $20,000 was left standing in its original position.

Q. But you tell me that was paid in March? A. That was paid about March.

Q. Then on May 2nd when you made the return both these sums had been paid back, although you had this so-called credit in the Trusts Company for the $80,000? A. Yes.

Q. What would the balance, which would be $35,000, be represented by? A. Represented by notes.

Q. By those notes in contingent account? A. I presume so. I could not say without I looked at the books.

Q. Then apparently the Department took no further action, as you said, or said nothing further; they were satisfied with your explanation? A. Yes.

Q. When did you have that conversation with regard to the notes with Sir Richard Cartwright? A. About the time we made the special return. I was on the train going east and I saw Sir Richard sitting in the dining car, and I sent him over my card, and he called me over, and I spoke to him about these notes and explained the matter to him, and he said he thought they were quite good enough to issue circulation against.

Q. You only discussed that feature of it with him? A. That was all.

Q. Had you sent in the special return? A. I think I had; I think it was just about the time I sent it in. He was Acting Finance Minister at the time.

Q. I would like to know the time? A. I could not fix the date, but my memory is it was about the time I sent it in.

Q. Did you discuss that with him, the fact that you had sent it in? A. I could not say that.

Q. You had been asked for it directly, and prepared it with care and sent it in, if you saw him immediately afterwards—? A. I cannot say whether I saw him immediately after it was sent in or during the time it was being prepared; it was about that time.
Q. That is something new; you do not suggest you consulted him as to what you could or could not do in sending in your return?  A. No, I did not, certainly not.

Q. Do you suggest that or do you not, that you informed him of your view on the subject and that he assented to it?  A. I do not understand your question.

Q. That you could issue circulation against shareholders’ notes?  A. My idea in speaking to Sir Richard was to make myself satisfied that it was all right to issue the circulation against the notes, if necessary.

Q. You had been issuing circulation?  A. We had a right to issue circulation up to the amount that was paid in; no matter what the money was paid in for; we had a right to issue it to the amount of the paid-up capital.

Q. You had been doing it, and you were feeling a little in doubt about it?  A. I felt a little in doubt about issuing circulation against those notes that were discounted up to that time.

Q. And were you reassured?  A. I gave you exactly what he said. He said if we could not issue notes against good farmers’ notes, he said, “What can you issue them against”? That is the answer he gave me.

Q. What does the Bank Act say? Does not it say to issue it in certain relation to your paid-up capital?  A. If says you can issue notes to the extent of your paid-up capital. There is nothing in the Bank Act to say if you pay out any of your paid-up capital that the notes that you have issued against it have got to be recalled.

Q. But you are now speaking of a different view; you are supposed to have these notes, and you are issuing them against those notes, that is what you were discussing with Sir Richard Cartwright?  A. I was discussing with Sir Richard Cartwright the issuing of the Bank circulation against the notes which we took from shareholders, which we discounted and showed to capital account.

Q. Did you explain that feature of it to him, that you discounted them?  A. So far as I have spoken now, yes.

Q. Did you tell him they were discounted that your Bank discounted them?  A. I cannot say I did.

Q. Did you tell him you had put part of them to contingent account?  A. No, I cannot say I did that.

Q. How did you represent to him you had done in order to elicit his opinion?  A. I referred to the special return which spoke for itself; I asked him whether it was irregular to issue circulation against that amount of farmers’ notes and I told you the answer he gave me.

Q. Was the emphasis on the farmer or on the notes; does that explain what you said in your evidence on the last occasion that you had written to the Department about these notes?  A. I do not think I said that I wrote the Department. What you are referring to is I wrote the Department about showing the $80,000 deposited with the Trusts Company.

Q. Was that letter which you spoke of, which I have not seen anywhere, before or after the interview with Sir Richard Cartwright?  A. It would be before; I think it was about the time we made up our first Government return after the 31st December, 1906. Mr. Fitzgibbon and I discussed the proper heading under which that should be shown.

Q. And you were told to put it under—A. Item 29, “Other assets”.

Q. Was that letter with the correspondence when the Bank failed?  A. I left it there to the best of my recollection.

Q. You always had the idea that the repayment of the amount you borrowed to make up capital would be made to those who lent it to you, had you not, immediately it was got back from the Government?  A. That was in my mind, yes.

Q. I notice in looking over your correspondence, your correspondence with New York bankers and others with regard to this—A. Very likely—
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. ——That in September, 1906, you say to the Cashier of the Merchants National Bank—— A. It could not be September, 1906.

Q. September 4th, 1906, that would be an appropriate date; you did not borrow here till October, 1906? A. We did not open the Bank till January 2nd, 1907.

Q. I know; but you had been trying to raise the loan in New York which you afterwards got from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. I might have, I do not recollect that.

Q. What you say in the letter—perhaps you will say whether this gives an indication of what your mind was: “If you can see your way clear to advance $100,000 for thirty days I can transfer $150,000 to our credit with you in New York, and then you deposit with the Canadian Government $250,000, and as soon as the meeting is held and the directors elected, thirty days thereafter the Government will have to return this money to you in accordance with the Bank Act” ?

A. I remember that.

Q. “You can then take out your interest at any rate you think proper and a commission on the transaction”? A. I remember that now.

Q. You did not however get the loan there? A. No.

Q. They failed to make arrangements; who is A. J. Luxton, Banker, in Milton? A. Ex-Manager of the Bank of Hamilton, sub-agent of Mr. Lindsay in canvassing for stock.

Q. Would you look at that letter and the enclosed application, and look at the respective dates, and tell me who dated the subscription? A. I could not say.

Q. Looking at the accompanying letter, the letter is dated November 23rd, 1906, and does it enclose a subscription from Luxton and one from Bradley? A. So it says; it is in the same handwriting.

Q. Luxton’s subscription for ten shares; what is the date of that subscription? A. The 22nd October, 1906.

Q. Is that one of those that you described as being ante-dated subscriptions? A. I believe it is.

Q. Who wrote in the 22nd October, 1906, was that you? A. It was not.

Q. You think those are both in the same handwriting, the letter and the subscriptions? A. I would say so.

Q. The subscriptions is for ten shares, number 554, signed by Arthur George H. Luxton, Banker, Milton, dated October 26th, 1906. The letter is headed “The Farmers Bank of Canada, Milton, the 23rd November, 1906, addressed to the General Manager of the Farmers Bank, Toronto. "Yours of the 22nd to hand with enclosures. I enclose my application for ten shares; also A. B. Bradley’s. Will explain fully on Monday about A. B. Bradley, who is assisting me in more ways than one”. The rest of the letter is unimportant. "Yours faithfully, A. H. Luxton". Did you send them the application form? A. I presume I did.

Q. Which he returned in this letter. I think that is all I want to ask you at present. There is that other matter; have you thought over that matter that was brought up on the former occasion? A. Yes, I have given it serious consideration and consulted my solicitor, and he said that if it had anything to do with the Finance Department or anybody in connection with it that I should tell it, but if it is a personal matter he would not advise me. Now, I stated it had nothing to do with the Finance Minister or anybody in connection with the Finance Department; it was a personal matter of my own and I do not wish to say anything more about it.

Q. There will be an opportunity later on.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: What does that mean, a personal matter of your own? A. It was money that I paid out of my own.

Q. Your own money? A. It was money that was due me on commissions, yes.
MR. HODGINS: There is in the account here a special charge to Mr. Lown, who was one of the provisional directors; it seems to have been carried as a separate item quite apart from his share of the money that you paid him, or separate from the expenses; can you throw any light on that; he could not? A. What is the amount of it? Do you remember if it was $300?

Q. $560; it is in the provisional directors' statement of receipts and payments, would you just look at the payment starting with commissions and so on, you will find A. S. Lown, I do not know what that is? A. Does this refer to the provisional board's books?

Q. Yes? A. I think the provisional board ledger will show that was for legal services.

Q. Mr. Lown could not throw any light on it.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Has Mr. Clarkson got that ledger? A. If you have ledger I can probably assist you. (Ledger pages produced).

MR. COMMISSIONER: It was a modest ledger? A. The reason they are in that shape is there were so many examinations and the big book was carried up and down so many times we took out the leaves.

Q. It is loose-leaf? A. Yes. There is the entry in the ledger; you should have to turn up the cash book for an explanation of it.

Q. Would not there be a voucher for it? A. There should be.

MR. F. C. CLARKSON: The cheque is made payable to A. S. Lown, and no memorandum. In the cash book it is just charged A. S. Lown.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Is there no voucher?

MR. F. C. CLARKSON: Just the cheque for it. A. It just says A. S. Lown, $50.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Would the stub of the cheque show? A. The cheque itself might show.

MR. F. C. CLARKSON: The cheque is just made payable to A. S. Lown.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Have you the stubs at all?

MR. F. C. CLARKSON: No.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Does the witness say his impression is that that was for legal expenses? A. Yes, that is my recollection of it; I could not swear positively to that.

W. J. LINDSAY, Recalled:—

MR. HODGINS: There was a cheque produced here as to which you were examined, for $10,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Paid out on December 6th, 1906? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I do not know whether you were here when Mr. Travers gave his explanation of it? A. No, he started to give it and I just left.

Q. Will you tell me again what your explanation of the cheque is; in the first place it was payable to Travers, was it not? A. Yes, I think it was.

MR. TRAVERS: You are wrong on that. A. I would not be positive.

MR. HODGINS: This is the cheque, payable to W. J. Lindsay, Exhibit 28. Tell us what you did with that cheque when you got it? A. I think it was on a Saturday, if my memory serves me right, and I got it about noon. I walked down to Front Street; the Traders Bank at that time were in the old McMaster Building, on Front Street, in the rear of the Bank of Montreal; there was a gentleman with me and we walked down. I deposited $5,000 of it to my own credit and the other $5,000 I got in bills, and I put them in my pocket and put my hand in the pocket with the bills in it, and I walked up to the Bank on the corner of Bay and Adelaide Streets and I handed the $5,000 to Mr. Travers. There was a gentleman with me walked down to the bank, saw the money, and I do not know but he saw me hand it to Mr. Travers in the office; he can speak for himself.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. This cheque does not appear to have been deposited in any way? A. No, it was handed in and the half of it was credited and the other half I took the money.

Q. Had you a private account in the Traders Bank? A. Yes.

Q. And you I suppose got the whole of this in cash and you deposited $5,000 in cash? A. Yes.

Q. You do not seem to have needed identification? A. No.

Q. The $5,000 went to your own personal account there? A. Yes.

Q. Had you more than one account in the Traders? A. It was I think W. J. Lindsay in Trust, if I remember.

Q. Why was it put in trust? A. I think that was the way Mr. Travers opened up—I would not be positive.

Q. Had Mr. Travers opened your account in the Traders? A. I do not remember whether it was a running account or not, whether it had been there before.

Q. You just spoke of it being in trust? A. Yes, I think it was in trust.

Q. You rather indicated Mr. Travers had opened it? A. I would not be sure whether it was there before he commenced to deposit there or whether he opened it.

Q. If he opened it and opened it in trust what would it indicate? A. I do not know. I think it was there before but I would not be sure.

Q. And in trust? A. I think it was in trust.

Q. What is it in trust for? A. I don't know.

Mr. Commissioner: Do you mean to say you do not know whether it was in trust or not? A. I always carry an account in trust.

Q. Don't you know whether it was in trust or not? A. I am not quite clear on it. Q. Although you were drawing thousands of dollars of cheques on it? A. I don't know whether that was in trust or not; I will look it up.

Mr. Hodgins: You drew $5,000 and immediately deposited that to this account in the Traders Bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what became of that? A. Which?

Q. The amount you deposited in your account? A. It was used for various purposes; I presume for other business, and expenses; I presume I used about $2,000 of it in England, that is in connection with the Bank's affairs when I was over there.

Q. Your Bank account I suppose would show, would it? A. Quite.

Q. Who has the cheques on that Bank account? A. I don't know if I got them all or not; I made a request the other day for them, and I have been away for quite a long while, and they said they would try and get them for me.

Q. Have you enquired since? A. Yes, they are going to try and get them located.

Q. When did you make this enquiry? A. About two or three weeks ago.

Q. What did you want them for? A. I thought it was wise to get them.

Q. Will you produce them here anyway? A. If it is possible, yes, if I can get them.

Q. You drew $10,000 and you kept $5,000 of it? A. Yes.

Q. In bills? A. Yes.

Q. What size bills—kept them? A. No, I did not keep them, I took them over—I carried away the $5,000 from the Bank.

Q. In what size bills? A. I would not be sure, I think they were in fifty's.

Q. What was your object in drawing it in cash that Saturday afternoon? A. Mr. Travers wanted it. He said "Bring me back my portion of it; I will wait here for you to come back."
Q. What was his portion of it? A. It was considered half up to the organization.
Q. I understood you were sub-agent to Mr. Travers? A. Yes.
Q. He was sharing half his commissions with you? A. Yes.
Q. And this was for W. J. Lindsay's commissions, this would be all your own commissions? A. No.
Q. Why was it payable to you if it was not your commissions? A. He had to make it up in some way to be out of the Bank I presume.
Q. That does not seem to me to be reasonable; were you to make some payments out of it that were not to be shown in the Bank account? A. No, sir, there was nothing any further than I was taking him back his portion of it.
Q. This was the only cheque that was payable direct to you? A. Yes; well, from that on my commissions were paid by cheque.
Q. Had you earned $10,000 in commissions on December 6th? A. Yes, considerably more.
Q. This would be your own share of it then? A. No.
Q. If you had earned it why did you not insist on it being paid? A. Any moneys that were drawn, it was the custom, I understood from Mr. Travers, that one-half of it was divided up.
Q. He was to divide half with you? A. Yes.
Q. Why was this cheque made out to you for $10,000 and you give back Travers $5,000 of it, instead of as you had always done, had cheques straight to Travers and he gave you half? A. The Bank was in business then, I presume, and he can answer better than I can.
Q. No, he cannot; I want to know how it was you reversed the method of doing business, and walked down to the Bank and got the money and gave it to him? A. I presume that was at the first stage when Mr. Travers was in shape to issue a cheque.
Q. Had not he issued cheques before? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. To you? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Had not he deposited money to your credit? A. Yes, but that is quite a different thing.
Q. Was the different thing done? A. Yes.
Q. Then he must, if he deposited money to your credit, have been able to draw cheques? A. I don't know anything about that.
Q. You took this back, did you? A. Yes.
Q. This gentleman with you? A. Yes.
Q. Who was he? A. I gave you his name.
Q. I have forgotten it now? A. I asked you if you would have him subpoenaed.
Q. Did you? A. Yes.
Q. When did you give me his name? A. The second to last day you were sitting here.
Q. Is that McCorquodale? A. Yes.
Q. And is that the gentleman who walked down to the Bank with you? A. He did.
Q. Is he subpoenaed, Mr. Thompson?
MR. THOMPSON: I think so.
MR. HODGINS: Is Mr. McCorquodale here? (Mr. McCorquodale was not present.
MR. HODGINS: Q. What did you take him down for? A. I did not take him down.
Q. Did he walk down to the bank with you? A. I told him where I was going, and he said "I will go down with you."
Q. He wanted some of that money, didn't he? A. No.
Q. Did he get any? A. No.
Q. He saw you draw this out and put it into your pocket, and he walked back to the Bank? A. Yes, he did.
Q. Into the room with you? A. And he stood at the desk, and Mr. Travers came out of the inside office, and he had his coat and hat on, was waiting for me, and he came out and went downstairs, the three of us together.
Q. Who came out? A. Mr. Travers.
Q. He was upstairs in the bank when you got there? A. Yes.
Q. What time of day was this? A. Along around one o'clock.
Q. What time did the Bank close that day? A. Around twelve or one; I don't know what time it closed.
Q. Anyway you got in before the Bank closed? A. Yes.
Q. And went straight back to the Farmers Bank Building? A. Yes.
Q. And you saw him about one o'clock? A. Somewhere around there.
Q. You gave him this money? A. I did.
Q. No doubt about that? A. Not the slightest.
Q. What did you give it to him for? A. Because I considered it his portion of the commission. It was talked over before he gave me the cheque. He told me, he said, "Now, I give you the cheque, and you go down and get it and bring me my portion back."
Q. You and he appear to have been pretty close in business? A. Well, I had confidence in him.
Q. I should think he must have had confidence in you; he gave you the cheque and you were to bring back the money? A. Yes.
Q. What occurred after you gave it to him, did you get a receipt? A. No.
Q. Did you charge him with this in this suit of yours? A. I did.
Q. How; would it appear in the statement of your claim against him? A. Quite so, all the way through.
Q. I know; but from your knowledge of your own case would it have been mentioned in it? A. Quite so; it was mentioned in fact.
Q. This would really be on the face of it a payment to you for commissions, and you claim to have refunded half of it to Travers? A. I treated the transaction exactly the same as he had been treating various transactions up to that time, to my knowledge.
Q. There is no doubt about this, if you could not prove he got it back you would be chargeable with the $10,000 on that view? A. I did not get it.
Q. I am asking you if that is not the case? A. Well, I presume unless it was proven there that I couldn't—
Q. I want to know why you did not take the precaution of getting a receipt? A. He had never taken a receipt from me for a dollar of money that he deposited to my credit.
Q. I should not think he would want to; did he take a receipt for what he paid you? A. No.
Q. How is it that you two seem to be such bosom friends? A. It is not a matter of bosom friends, it was a matter of confidence; if you have confidence in a man—
Q. You know and he had been fighting like cat and dog in August, 1906, calling each other all sorts of names? A. From time to time he had got straightened out and I had still confidence in the man's honesty of purpose.
Q. You do not expect to believe in view of the correspondence that was in that you had quite changed your view of him and he of you and gone into this transaction in the way you have spoken of? A. I did not consider that any man in the position that he was in, a man in possession of a letter which he showed me from Mr. Fish, I thought that it was just as good as though I had a receipt.
Q. When did you see that letter? A. Before I went out to sell stock.

Q. It was after that you and he commenced to have such an acrimonious correspondence; what did Mr. Travers do when he got this money? A. We parted shortly afterwards and I went home, I presume.

Q. What did he do, I ask you? A. The three of us went down and out of the Bank on Bay Street.

Q. Then what? A. We went across the road and we had a drink.

Q. Then what? A. I do not know anything more; as far as I am concerned I left him there.

Q. Did you see any one other than McCorquodale and Travers when you gave that money over? A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Who proposed Beattie Nesbitt as President of the bank? A. I do not know.

Q. You did not? A. I did not.

Q. I am told he is a great friend of yours? A. Well, I do not know how you could term him as a great friend. I had had the pleasure of meeting him several times, but I was never in the gentleman’s home in my life until after the Bank was organized. I went over there one Sunday afternoon with Mr. Travers, I have forgotten what it was for; we were out for a walk, and we dropped in and were in for a few minutes; outside of that I had never been in Beattie Nesbitt’s home up to that time.

Q. You do not say you were good friends? A. We were friends to say, Good morning, Good day, Good afternoon.

Q. No more intimate than that? A. I do not know as you can call it more intimate than that.

Q. I do not know what you call it? A. We were friends as friends go, to say “Good day.”

Q. Who suggested his name as President? A. I think it was Mr. McCorquodale if I remember right.

Q. To whom? A. To Mr. Travers.

Q. Were you there too? A. I was not.

Q. How do you know? A. Mr. Travers told me.

Q. Mr. Travers told you that McCorquodale had suggested it? A. Yes.

Q. About a week before the meeting? A. I do not know what time it was.

Q. Just think for a moment? A. I cannot think on a thing I am not interested in.

Q. When he told you did you support it? A. I had nothing to say about it.

Q. Do you dispute what Mr. Travers says altogether, that Beattie Nesbitt was a friend of yours, and that the suggestion that he was to be President came from you? A. It certainly did not.

Q. Do you deny absolutely what he says? A. Yes.

Q. Between you and Mr. Travers we do not know how Beattie Nesbitt came, if you are both to be believed? A. I think you will find out that Mr. McCorquodale was the man who did the whole transaction with Beattie Nesbitt.

Q. Is he the man who sold stock—A. He sold—I did not have anything to do with Beattie Nesbitt or Beattie Nesbitt’s subscription. Beattie Nesbitt’s subscription was taken by McCorquodale. I met Beattie Nesbitt on King Street one day, and I don’t know just what time or what stage it was in the game, and he stopped and asked me about the Bank and how it was getting along, and he said he had been approached? Those are facts you cannot get away from.

Q. You and Travers were the two most interested people in getting this Bank started, is not that right? A. I was selling stock.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Answer the question. A. I was a sub-agent for Travers.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You were not asked that; answer the question that is put to you?  A. I presume I would be the most interested, in fact I felt interested all the way through, as much interested almost as though every dollar of it had been my own; from the fact of having gone out and interested many, I was very much interested.

Mr. Hodgins: Q. In round numbers how many dollars did you get by way of commissions after the Bank organized?  A. After the Bank organized I think it was something around, I would not be certain whether it was $17,000 or $19,000.

Q. You could not get that unless the Bank became organized?  A. I do not know about that; I had done the work, I do not know whether I could or could not get it.

Q. Who did you look to for these commissions?  A. I was looking to Mr. Travers and the Bank.

Q. When do you date your acquaintance with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt?  A. I have known him from being around the Parliament Buildings, that is all.

Q. How long?  A. Probably a year or two or three years; I do not know just how long.

Q. Had you made use of him during the spring and summer of 1906 in interesting people in the Bank?  A. 1906?

Q. Yes?  A. And 1907?

Q. No, I did not say 1907; had you interested him in getting people; had you employed him or got him to interest men in getting people to take interest in the bank?  A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You absolutely say you did not?  A. Yes; some time along about towards the fall I met him on King Street and he told me he had been approached and that is as much as I know.

Q. That would be before the certificate issued?  A. Yes, some time before.

Q. About a week before?  A. I do not know how long.

Q. What do you say to what Mr. Travers says, that this money was paid to Beattie Nesbitt?  A. I have told you everything that I know about it.

Q. Do you know anything about it?  A. I know I paid it to Mr. Travers, and when I paid it to Mr. Travers I did not see any paid to Nesbitt in the Bank.

Q. Did you know it was being paid?  A. I did not.

Q. What do you say about Mr. Travers' statement that Beattie Nesbitt told him that you had arranged to pay up, to qualify and pay up his shares?  A. I never talked to Beattie Nesbitt on that score.

Q. Never did?  A. No; why should I?

Q. Then you and Mr. Travers differ completely on this episode?  A. I cannot help that.

Q. I say you do differ?  A. Yes.

Q. And you differ with him as to how Beattie Nesbitt became President?  A. I tell you the facts as I know them.

Q. Who did select the President?  A. I do not know. I understood Mr. McCorquodale was the man that interested him and brought the two of them together.

Q. Did Travers say anything to you afterwards about this payment paid Nesbitt?  A. I did not know anything about it until after I had instituted suit against Mr. Travers for commissions, and the bank.

Q. Then what?  A. The Examination for Discovery will show what he said.

Q. Do you remember were you present?  A. No. Some of the examination I was present at and some of it I was not.

Q. What did he tell you on that examination, or tell your lawyer?  A. As I understand that I had paid it to Beattie Nesbitt by some arrangement.

Q. He swore you understood that you had paid it to Beattie Nesbitt?  A. Yes.
Q. And that he had handed it to Beattie Nesbitt pursuant to your arrangement? A. I do not know, I would not be sure of that.

Q. Which was the idea you got? A. The impression is just as I tell you.

Q. That he swore? A. That I paid it to Beattie Nesbitt.

Q. You gave him $5,000 on a subsequent occasion, didn’t you? A. No, sir, not at any time; not one dollar at any time.

Q. How can you account for this hallucination of Mr. Travers about Beattie Nesbitt’s stock and this $5,000? A. I do not try to account for it.

Q. You were pretty active, were you not, in March and April, 1906, in getting stock taken up and seeing people about the Bank? A. Yes, sir, I worked day and night; I would go out on Monday morning and come in Saturday night invariably.

Q. Do you remember trying to interest people in Ottawa? A. Yes, I went down there.

Q. How long did you spend in Ottawa? A. I don’t know, I was probably there two or three days.

Q. Who were the influential friends that were referred to in one of the letters that you had down there? A. Let me see the letter.

Q. You do not recollect that? A. No.

Q. Can you tell me any influential friends you had? A. If you show me—

Q. You remember who you knew in Ottawa? A. Yes, I knew—

Q. Who did you see about coming on the Board or taking stock? A. I telephoned to Mr. Calvert, if that is what you have reference to.

Q. Did you know him? A. Yes.

Q. Is he an old friend of yours? A. I have known Mr. Calvert for twenty or twenty-five years.

Q. You telephoned him? A. Yes; I have know him in business.

Q. Did you do anything more than telephone him? A. When I was down again, subsequent to my telephoning I was in Ottawa and I dropped in to see him and have a chat with him.

Q. What did you ask him to do? A. I told him, in fact I went in in connection with the Prospectus and handed it to him and told him it had been issued and he asked me—

Q. Was this Prospectus with his name on it? A. Yes, I think it was issued with his name—

Q. You went in with the Prospectus and showed it to him? A. Yes, I have the Prospectus; I asked him if he could give me any assistance in a general way.

Q. To do what? A. To get subscribers.

Q. That was when? A. I do not know.

Q. Was it as early as March or April? A. It may have been along there; it was in the early spring.

Q. From then on, did you ask him to interest himself? A. I do not know that I ever discussed it with him again; he had been back and forth here and discussed the matter with Mr. Travers, been in touch with Mr. Travers.

Q. Since when? A. Since that time he had been in Toronto.

Q. The earliest telegram I have got is dated March 17th, 1906, to you, signed by Mr. Calvert, “Party referred to in letter declined; writing”? A. That was I think J. B. St. Denis LeMoine of The Senate, and I presume that was one of them. On the telephone I asked him to see him to see if he would subscribe for ten thousand or twenty thousand.

Q. Who else did you see down there? A. I called on a number of people.

Q. Senator Domville? A. I talked to Senator Domville I think and Senator Merner, and I think I talked to Willis Bennett; I saw him there, and I do not know how many more. I think I left there on Saturday night.

Q. Was Mr. Emmerson a friend of yours? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see him? A. I do not remember now how many I did see.
Q. What were you down in Ottawa seeing so many people for? A. To get stock subscribed.
Q. Was that all? A. I do not know.
Q. You wanted some one to go on the Board? A. It was not left in my hands altogether.
Q. What were you doing it for then? A. I was told if I could get some good men to go on the Board—if all the men had gone on the Board, as one of them said, the Bank would never have got away from shore.
Q. What is that? A. If some of the good men had remained on the Board who promised to go on and promised to subscribe for stock, if they had remained on the Board the Bank would never have got away from shore, it would have been on the rock yet.
Q. It is certainly on the rocks? A. It is a different kind of rocks now.
Q. You had been down in connection with the extension of the Charter? A. I had not, no, sir.
Q. Did you write about it? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Did you ask any Members of Parliament to interest themselves in having it extended? A. Not that I remember of, may have; I don't know; I don't think I did—I may have said in a casual way, they may have said something about it, and I may have said I guess there should not be any trouble, or something of that kind, to my knowledge.
Q. Had you any business dealings with Mr. Calvert? A. I have had.
Q. During that twenty or twenty-five years? A. Yes.
Q. Knew him pretty intimately? A. Fairly well.
Q. Ask him to go on the Board? A. Yes.
Q. Which he declined? A. No, he did not decline then.
Q. He declined in July? A. Well, I was not aware of that; I do not remember anything of it.
Q. Travers did not tell you that? A. I do not remember anything of it.
Q. You asked to see this letter; it is dated 27th April, 1906? A. I remember something of this letter, but I got this letter after I got back home; I remember that distinctly.
Q. That is all right; you asked to see the letter which mentions the influential friends you had there, you thought perhaps you could tell me if you saw the letter? A. I remember now since I saw it, I remember the letter coming back to me from Ottawa.
Q. Who did it refer to? A. It is a myth, I do not know; I presume one of them; I had several friends there.
Q. Who were they? A. I do not know; it was not acted upon, because the letter came back, and it does not interest me.
Q. The letter asks you: "I wish you would get one of your friends there to find out from the Receiver-General's department whether a deposit receipt of one of the banks for $250,000 would be accepted as our deposit held by them for the thirty days, without asking to have it cashed. Kindly look into the matter because through some of your influential friends there you might have this agreed to even if it was an unusual departure"? A. Yes.
Q. That is written by Mr. Travers to you; cannot you tell who your influential friends were? A. I remember distinctly that that letter came back to me a day or two after I had got back home; so that it was not acted upon in any way.
Q. I did not ask you that; you did not make the inquiry because you did not get the letter; but who had you told Mr. Travers were your influential friends that you thought you could get something done? A. He knew I had a number of friends, I have good business friends there, I have friends in politics in Ottawa.
Q. Who had you told Travers were your friends? A. I had not told him; he knew I had a lot of friends.

Q. Have you mentioned them all? A. No, sir; I told him I was going to Ottawa, and I thought I could get some subscriptions there. You take Fred Heney on the Richmond Road, a man probably worth one and a half million dollars, and I went and laid the matter before him, and he is one of my friends.

Q. In that letter Mr. Travers says: “I am enclosing you a new form of application leaving the proxy blank. Kindly take all your applications without putting the name in. I have a new wrinkle I will explain it when I see you.”

Mr. Commissioner: You asked him about that before, and he gave you his explanation.

Mr. Hodgins: Did you get that letter from Mr. Travers after the charter was issued suggesting that the date should be left blank in the subscriptions? A. I do not remember; there were many letters went out and came back again to the bank that probably never reached me at all.

Q. “In taking your subscriptions from now on until say the middle of January Mr. Hunter has suggested that you leave the date blank so that we may make use of them in any way that may suit best on making up our next list?” A. If you look over the applications you will find possibly there are a great many not dated at all, that is even from the inception.

Q. You got that letter? A. I do not remember.

Q. It is addressed to you at Kerwood? A. I do not remember whether I got it or not.

Q. Did you act on it? A. Not to my knowledge, I do not know; I do not remember of having got it. I was jumping around a good deal. I may have got it or may not.

Q. If you got it you acted on it? A. I do not think I ever dated any, if you look at the whole list of subscriptions.

Q. We will look up? A. I do not know; I followed instructions; I was simply selling stock.

Q. Another point I want to ask you about is with regard to this subscription of yours for 500 shares: Mr. Travers says that this was signed by you without a date and carried around for some considerable time; is that the case? A. No, I understood that he said it was signed just before the Bank organized and dated back.

Q. Well, how was it; we will have your story? A. I understood that was the way.

Q. Which was it? A. It was signed subsequent to a letter I received when there was $485,000 and when I thought there was about the amount—I subscribed for $50,000 shortly after having talked with a gentleman—I think I explained it all to you before, that he was coming in and going to go on the Board and take thirty or forty thousand dollars—

Q. Yes; let me get that; you say you signed that after a letter in which he told you there was how much subscribed? A. I think four hundred and eighty-five or eighty-nine thousand dollars.

Q. This is the letter (Exh. 22)? A. Yes.

Q. It was after that you signed it? A. Some time subsequent to that, yes.

Q. You did not date it? A. I do not think I did, no.

Q. When did you first know that it became operative? A. I knew that it had gone through.

Q. When did you first know it became operative and had gone through? A. Not until after the bank was organized.

Q. You did not know it until after the Bank was organized? A. No, at least I did not know whether it had gone through or not, but I told this gentleman
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

I would secure for him, and I presume when I signed it for it had gone through just the same as any other subscription.

Q. You had a prior agreement that you were to get the selling of the second five hundred thousand dollars of the bank stock? A. Yes, that was the second agreement that I had.

Q. Was that prior to this application? A. Yes.
Q. And that was to be placed at 125? A. Yes.
Q. You never intended to pay up those 500 shares? A. I intended to transfer thirty or forty thousand dollars of it to a gentleman who afterwards went on the board.
Q. I am asking if you ever intended to pay it yourself? A. I intended to take a portion of it.

Q. But not to pay the whole thing? A. No.
Q. If they had $489,500 on the books on September 21th, what was your object in making this subscription? A. In securing it for this gentleman so that he could have it at par.
Q. What was his name—Menzies? A. That was threshed out here before and it was misquoted in the paper, so that I do not wish to hurt any person's feelings.
Q. Was it Menzies? A. Yes.
Q. Did you attend and vote on that stock at the meeting? A. I did not vote.

Q. You were there simply as a proxy for others, were you? A. I do not think I voted anything.
Q. You are recorded as being there as a proxy, you and Travers controlling the meeting? A. I do not know that I voted; if you have got the votes, that is with my name signed to it, I will say I voted, but I do not remember having done so.

Q. You were at the meeting? A. Yes.
Q. And as a proxy? A. I was not aware of that.
Q. You are down for some 1,900 shares representing those shares as proxy? A. 1,900.
Q. That does not astonish you, does it? A. It does.
Q. Were you at the meeting? A. Yes, I was at the meeting.
Q. And you knew that you and Travers controlled it? A. I was not aware I had voted; I do not remember having voted.

Q. Did you know you and Travers controlled it? A. I did not know it.
Q. You went to that organization meeting not knowing that you and Travers controlled it? A. I did not know that my name was on any proxy; I did not know that I had been filled in any way on a proxy note.
Q. "Proxies representing 1,807 shares of capital stock and the following subscribers were present by proxy: W. R. Travers 1,333; W. J. Lindsay 1,899 shares;"—do you say you did not know that? A. I did not. They will have the ballots as they were cast.
Q. I am asking you if you knew that at the meeting? A. I must confess I did not.

Q. Up to that time had you made any arrangement with Travers as to who was to be President? A. I did not have anything to do with who was going to be President or who was not.

Q. Will you answer the question? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Did you go there not knowing whom you represented and not knowing who was to be president? A. I did not know I was in any such position as that.
Q. You seem to have been singularly innocent of your powers? A. I did not act upon it to my knowledge.

Q. You want us to believe that? A. I would like to have where I signed my name; there should be a record of that.
Q. And you did not know who was to be the president? A. I understood he was going to make Rory McLennan president up to the last minute, and he refused and finally he was made honorary president, and then Beattie Nesbitt was made president. Colonel Munro was to be president from the start, I understood but it was afterwards arranged and he stepped back; it had been arranged for some time before that Colonel Munro was to be president and felt very much hurt.

Q. Did you nominate any of the directors? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You nominated none of the directors; did you vote for any of them? A. I was not aware of casting my vote.

Q. Your position at that meeting was you did not know anything, did not do anything? A. That is news to me.

Q. Did you after the meeting obtain a contract or arrangement that you were to take up the balance of the stock at a premium of 25? A. They were inside and I was out in the outer office, and I was called in and I was asked how long it would take to place the balance of the stock, and I said it might take three months or six months, it might take three years, and might take six years; it depends entirely upon the conditions. I said I will place it as quickly as possible. Mr. McLennan said, "do you think you can do it in six months or nine months or a year"? I said, "I could not say until it is done," and I retired then. Sometime afterwards I got a little note saying it had been placed in my hands, from Mr. Travers, and that is all there was to it.

Q. That is the letter? A. Yes.

Q. Is that date correct December 7th, 1906? A. I presume it is.

Q. You said the 6th December, 1906, was a Saturday? A. I think it was, I am of the opinion it was.

Q. This letter dated the 7th, would in that view be on Sunday? A. I could not say, but I was under the impression it was a Saturday; it was at the close of banking hours anyway.

Q. How did you come to get that letter from Mr. Travers? A. I do not know whether I got it from him in the office or whether it was mailed to me.

Q. Would you try and remember whether you went in and saw him on that day and got that letter? A. I would not be sure, I have no idea.

Q. You cannot recollect? A. No.

Q. Did you nominate Mr. Gundy? A. I would say so if I signed the nominating paper, Mr. Hodgins, but not unless; I have no recollection.

Q. You would not admit it unless I confronted you with something signed by you? A. Yes.

Q. You have so little recollection of that? A. Of that meeting, that is quite right.

Q. You knew Mr. Travers was going to use that subscription of yours, didn’t you? A. Will you let me see the cheque again, please?

Q. Yes. (Handing cheque Exhibit 28); you knew Mr. Travers was going to use that subscription of yours? A. I did not pay any attention to it at the time.

Q. Did you know he was going to use that to get the certificate? A. I signed it in the regular way; I did not know a certificate had to be got at that time.

Q. You did not know a certificate had to be got? A. No.

Q. At what time? A. At the time I signed that; I did not know what the technicalities of the bank was, or what form they had to go through before they started business.

Q. You did not know that? A. No.

Q. Did you know he was going to use that subscription as one of the bona fide subscriptions? A. I signed it in the regular way; that is all I know.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You knew he was going to use it? A. I expected that it would go through in the regular way and be allotted to me.

Q. And it is a genuine subscription, is it? A. It was a genuine subscription, everything considered.

Q. It was? A. At that time.

Q. When did it become an irregular subscription? A. When he would not transfer it to Mr. Menzies.

Q. It was conditional, was it? A. It was not conditional at the time; I took it for the purpose, and then I tried to sell it afterwards.

Q. At par or at 125? A. Some of it at par and some of it at 125; he would not transfer it at any price.

Q. At this first meeting on November 26th, it seems you were authorized: "Balance of stock up to a million to be placed exclusively in the hands of Mr. W. J. Lindsay for one year at a commission of 10% per share payable on payment of premium, said stock to be sold at a premium of 25%"—that would be the date you say they had the meetings, and you were called in, November 26th, 1906? A. I presume that was the day.

Q. In that suit of yours against Travers and the bank, did you see Dr. Beattie Nesbitt in connection with that? A. I did not make any special effort to see him. I met him on the corner right opposite the Prince George and there was something said about it; that was all.

Q. What did you discuss with him? A. There was not anything much said. He said you had better come away up to the bank and get it straightened out and get it settled.

Q. Get what settled? A. Just what you asked me, the suit, the amount of money that was owing me.

Q. He knew about the suit? A. I presume he did.

Q. Did you tell him? A. Not up to that time.

Q. He did not know it from you? A. No.

Q. He wanted you to go right up and get it settled? A. Yes, and I said, "Mr. Travers has the books there and he knows what is due me and he can easily adjust it."

Q. Did you discuss then the payment of $5,000? A. It was not mentioned at all.

Q. How long did you talk? A. We did not talk more than three or four minutes. I said "there is no use in our discussing it, doctor."

Q. Had Travers been examined before that? A. I do not know whether he had; I cannot fix the date.

Q. Do you know whether Travers was examined? A. I do not know whether it was before or after we had started in to examine Mr. Travers or not. I have just this recollection of meeting him on the corner; it was only a few minutes, I was waiting for a car.

Q. Was the letter Dr. Beattie Nesbitt wrote to Mr. Travers produced on the examination? A. I think not.

Q. When did you hear of it? A. I heard of it when it was presented to my solicitors in their office.

Q. During what time, during the pendency of the suit? A. I do not know; I think it was during the time they were trying to get together, his solicitor and my solicitor, to get together to adjust it.

Q. Was not that before the suit? A. No, I think not.

Q. When it was presented to your solicitors did you discuss it with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt? A. No.

Q. Did you deny it, what Dr. Beattie Nesbitt said? A. I certainly did, I told my solicitor.

Q. Did you write to any one denying it? A. No, I simply told my solicitors; I do not know why I should write.
Q. Who did you tell? A. My Counsel and I discussed it.
Q. Who was it? A. Messrs. Masten, Starr and Spence.
Q. You did not tell all three? A. Yes, I guess they all knew and it was discussed.
Q. Who did you tell? A. I told Mr. Starr, and I think it was talked over with Mr. Masten, I would not be sure, I think they all knew.
Q. Tell me who you denied it to? A. Mr. Starr.
Q. Have you any doubt about it? A. No, not the slightest.
Q. You were not examined in that action? A. No.
Q. Had you any talk with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt after you knew about it? A. I do not think so.
Q. You never interested yourself in it? A. No.
Q. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt says this (Exhibit 37): "Referring to our conversation of yesterday, I remember well being in your office then upstairs"—that agrees with your view, that the office was upstairs—"On December 6th, 1906, and W. J. Lind- say coming in and handing me a parcel of Traders Bank notes, to the amount of $5,000"—is that true, that statement? A. It is not.
Q. You said that you recollect these were $50 bills? A. I do not think they had $100 bills in the bank; I asked them for the largest they had.
Q. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt thinks they were $100 bills? A. I do not think so. I said, "Give me the largest bills you have got" and I think fifties were the only thing they had; it was quite a large roll.
Q. You have a very distinct recollection of it? A. Yes.
Q. I am glad to know that, because it may help us to find out just what the facts are? A. A person could not carry $5,000 in their pocket without knowing they had it.
Q. I think I could carry $5,000 in my pocket if it was in $100 bills. "This was in accordance with a private arrangement I had with him"—had he any private arrangement with you? A. No.
Q. These statements in this letter are wholly false? A. As far as I know they are.
Q. You deny them all? A. Yes.
Q. And deny all that Mr. Travers says? A. Relative to that $5,000, yes.
Q. I see it was Mr. Spence and Mr. Cameron on the 31st May, which is three weeks after this letter was written, were your counsel and were examining Travers; did you not tell Mr. Spence anything about the Beattie Nesbitt Statement? A. Mr. Hunter brought that letter down to their office and I happened to be there at the time and Mr. Spence and Mr. Cameron knew about it and I said to let me have that, I wished to take it out, I said, to show to Mr. Starr, and I showed it to Mr. Starr and there was a copy made of it.
Q. Do I understand you did not say to Mr. Spence and Mr. Cameron that letter was untrue? A. Yes, I did.
Q. You did tell them? A. Yes, Mr. Hunter will be able to tell you that.
Q. Mr. Hunter will be able to tell me that you denied it at that time? A. Yes.
Q. And you also denied it to Mr. Starr? A. Yes.
Q. There is no mistake about that? A. Not the slightest.
Q. Did you instruct Mr. Travers to be questioned about that letter? A. It was discussed, yes.
Q. What did you tell your counsel was the truth about this transaction? A. Exactly as I have explained it to you here to-day, word for word.
Q. There was not any private arrangement of any kind whether it is regarding this $5,000 or not, between you and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt? A. No, sir.
Q. That is all? A. There was something said the second to last day that there were something like fifty disgruntled shareholders before the organization of the bank or during the early stages of the bank. I wish to state that is not correct, that the only disgruntled or only dissatisfied shareholders up to the time of the failure of the Ontario Bank I think were something like three or four; one Leslie who had gone to the bank to get their money and something had been said, and they were a little bit timid and frightened and they refused to take their subscriptions. They afterwards took the subscription, and the bank manager at Georgetown apologised to Mr. Travers through—Mr. Starr took it up, he apologised, and said if there was anything else that was necessary for him to say, he was willing to sign a letter to that effect, if that letter was not satisfactory. There was another case where they had gone to Brampton to get money and the shareholder was frightened—I forget the party's name—this was probably along in the month of May or thereabouts; the matter was taken up again by the solicitor and the same thing happened there that he said the gentleman had not said anything detrimental in any way to Mr. Travers. That was done through Mr. Starr or Mr. Travers. Outside of those until that hornet's nest was stirred up there by Mr. Laidlaw at the time he was out defending Mr. Dixon in a case that he had and the failure of the Ontario Bank, there was no one dissatisfied; so that the fifty or one hundred all came after the failure of the bank.

Mr. Commissioner: Am I to understand you to say that you knew nothing and heard nothing about the shares of Mr. Nesbitt being paid for by anybody? A. Not until after the—it never was discussed with me until after the organization of the bank.

Q. Had not you heard of it? A. Not until after the organization of the bank.

Q. How soon after the organization? A. Some time afterwards, probably a month or two.

Q. From whom? A. Mr. Travers said that I should pay half of it and I said "No, I would pay no portion of it."

Q. Half of what? A. Half of the amount that Beattie Nesbitt was to get, $3,000.

Q. Was it spoken of as something to be done or something that had been done? A. It was spoken of as something that had been done.

Q. That he had been paid? A. Yes.

Q. And he wanted to get half back from you? A. And he wanted to deduct half out of my commissions.

Q. Do I understand your statement about this cheque correctly, that you took it to the Traders Bank and got $5,000 in money, you think in fifty dollar bills, and that the rest of the cheque was placed to your credit or to the credit of some account of yours? A. Yes.

Q. Who wrote those words "10,000" on the back of it, does not that indicate it was all paid out in cash? A. That is something of the bank.

Q. You do not know what it means? A. No, sir.

Q. Was it not a very peculiar transaction that you would get a cheque payable to your order which was a voucher that you had received $10,000 from the Farmers Bank on account of your commissions and you would go and upon the word of Travers get $5,000 in cash and hand it to him without getting any voucher or receipt; does not that seem a pretty strange business transaction? A. No, sir, not the way we had been doing business.

Q. Why did not he make this payable to bearer if he had so much confidence in you and you in him; why was it made payable to order? Bearer is struck out and order substituted? A. That I could not say.

Q. Do you mean me to understand that you were not curious enough to find out what he wanted the $5,000 for? A. No, sir.

Q. Made no inquiry? A. No, sir, made no inquiry.
Q. He simply asked you to go and get it?  A. Yes. He said some time before, "Now I will be able to pay you a portion of that commission as soon as that money comes back from Ottawa.

Q. What has that got to do with what I am asking you; I am asking about $5,000 which you say you gave him; did you not ask any question as to why he wanted $5,000?  A. No.

Q. Who suggested it, did anybody suggest what bills it should be got in?  A. There was not any one suggested that.

Q. How did you come to suggest that?  A. I asked the teller in the bank to give me the largest bills he had.

Q. Why did you not get a cheque of the bank?  A. I did not think of that.

Q. What did you suppose that on Saturday, as you say it was after banking hours, he would want $5,000 in fifty-dollar bills, what did he want that for?  A. I did not stop to think.

Q. And you did not ask?  A. No, I did not ask.

Q. And you expect me to believe that?  A. Those are the facts, my Lord.

Q. Did you discuss with McCorquodale what this $5,000 was wanted for?  A. No, sir.

Q. It seems to be just an ordinary business transaction? A. He had credited half of all the commissions that I understood he had received—

Q. You are evading my question; what I want to know is why you went down and got this money and brought the money in fifty-dollar bills and gave it to him, as you say you did; that is the point, not about the division of the commission; why was that done?  A. I never gave it any thought.

Q. Did not it look as if some kind of under hand thing was to be done?  A. No, sir, not as far as I was concerned in the matter.

Q. People do not usually go and draw $5,000 on a Saturday after banking hours in fifty dollar bills unless they are going to use it for some special purpose do they?  A. Well, I do not know.

Q. Do you make the statement that you did not know it was necessary before the bank opened its doors that it should get a certificate from Ottawa?  A. I thought it had to get a charter.

Q. You did not know anything about the other?  A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know anything about the necessity of paying into the Department money before they could commence business?  A. Yes, I understood that $250,000 had to be paid.

Q. That does not comport very much with your statement that all it wanted was the charter?  A. That is all that I understood.

Q. All that was wanted was that?  A. The completion of the $250,000.

Mr. Hodgins: I would like you to ask for those cheques at the bank and come back this afternoon?  A. If I can get them.

Q. I would like you to attend here anyway at two o'clock, whether you have them or not.  A. All right.

The Commission adjourned at 1 P.M. to 2 P.M.

The Commission resumed at 2 P.M.

W. J. Lindsay, recalled:

Mr. Hodgins: Whose handwriting is that in (referring to a paper containing columns of figures)?  A. I do not know; it looks like Mr. Travers writing.
Q. Is it yours? A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever see it before? A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Have you been able to get those cheques from the bank? A. No, sir, I was down there; they have not got them yet.
Q. I have a copy of your account in the Traders Bank, have you the Traders Bank book? A. No, sir, I left it there in December when I went away.
Q. December what? A. A year ago last Christmas.
Q. Left it in the Traders Bank? A. Yes, and I have not been able to get it since.
Q. I see a deposit on December 6th, of five thousand dollars? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that the five thousand dollars you spoke of? A. I presume it will be.
Q. December 7th, I see cheque to A. T. H. Luxton, was that your cheque?
A. Yes.
Q. Dated December 7th? A. Yes.
Q. December 10th, cash, personal, three thousand dollars, what is that? A. That was an amount that was transferred to another account.
Q. What other account? A. Some money that I owed.
Q. That is not telling me about another account? A. It was an account that I owed three thousand dollars to.
Q. What account was it? A. I have forgotten just for the moment.
Q. Can you look that up? A. I think it was moneys that I owed my wife that I gave her.
Q. Moneys you owed your wife? A. I think it was.
Q. I did not understand you owed your wife any money? A. Well, you never asked me.
Q. Did you? A. I did.
Q. And December 10th, you say you transferred it to another account? A. I think I transferred it to her account if I remember correctly.
Q. Drawn out in cash? A. I have forgotten whether it was drawn by cheque or not, I guess it was cheque.
Q. How was the Luxton payment, December 7th, made? A. That was commissions.
Q. How was that paid, in cash or cheque? A. Cheque.
Q. You remember that? A. Yes, I remember having it marked.
Q. Don't you remember this three thousand? A. I think it was paid by cheque.
Q. What account was it put into, this three thousand dollars? A. I think that is where it went to.
Q. Where? A. No, I would not be positive but I think that is where it went to.
Q. You have not told me yet? A. Yes, I have told you, I think I transferred it by cheque to my wife's account.
Q. In what bank? A. I do not know if it was in the Bank of Montreal or the Bank of Commerce.
Q. She had an account there? A. Yes.
Q. In either one or the other? A. Yes; she had an account both places; or it may have been a payment on property I owned in Fort William; I am not clear on it.

Mr. Commissioner: What are you reading from?
Mr. Hodgins: Copy of W. J. Lindsay's account in the Traders Bank? A. Those are papers in connection with my suit against the Bank and W. R. Travers. I presume that is what they are.
Q. You had a copy made for the use of the other side? A. I think that is a possibility; that is what they are; I do not know.
Q. Do you know anything about this cheque, exhibit 36, dated December 7th, 1906, and payable to W. R. Travers? A. No.
Q. You do not know anything about that? A. No.

Q. Never heard of it? A. No.

Q. What is this cheque which is part of exhibit 35, dated December 8th, to you for one thousand dollars? A. I do not know; I presume it was on account of commissions.

Q. Do you know anything about it; have you any recollection about it; it is just two days after you got the ten thousand dollars that you profess to have an excellent recollection about? A. My signature is on that, I presume; that I got it all right; I have an excellent recollection of the other.

Q. You did not draw that in cash? A. No, I deposited that.

Q. Where you evidently had an account as well as in the Traders Bank? A. Yes.

Q. You cannot account for what that was paid for? A. No, I do not remember; there was never any statement of what the individual cheques were issued on, what subscriptions they were issued on.

Q. You had no claim except for commissions? A. That was all, with the exception of a claim— I put in a claim of I think— I put in a fee for the work done in connection with the Laidlaw people which you will probably run across some place.

Q. That is all; I would like you to come back to-morrow with the cheques from the Bank? A. I will come back with or without them.

Q. I should like you to make inquiries? A. I will do so again.

Mr. Hodgins: I have looked up the charges of these various items in the provisional ledger.

Mr. Commissioner: Is that with reference to the $506?

Mr. Hodgins: No, with regard to the ten thousand and five thousand; those are charged under the head of stock commissions and organization expenses; they are each charged under the heading of Travers. Then in the Provisional Directors' cash book the ten thousand dollars is charged to stock commissions W. J. Lindsay, and the five thousand dollars stock commissions W. R. Travers, respectively on the 6th and 7th—the permanent books the ten thousand dollars is charged on December 6th, to organization expenses, and the five thousand dollars on the 7th, to the same; and they are so carried into the permanent ledger.

W. H. Hunter, recalled:—

Mr. Hodgins: You already have been sworn in the matter? A. Yes.

Q. I see a cheque dated December 6th, 1906, to you for $350, do you know what that was for? A. For legal expenses.

Q. In connection with your trip to Ottawa? A. And the general work I had been doing.

Q. Was it in full up to that date? A. There had been no account rendered; Mr. Travers handed me that cheque.

Q. December 6th appears to be quite a day in the history of the bank? A. I did not know about any other cheques issued that day.

Q. Mr. Travers said you went down to Ottawa with him on the occasion of getting out this certificate? A. Yes, I said so.
Q. And that you came back before he did?   A. Yes.
Q. And that you sent him down the subscriptions?   A. Well, that I think he is mistaken in; I do not think the subscriptions ever left the head office of the bank.

Q. Mr. Travers was pretty circumstantial about it; he even recollected taking them to Mr. Boville’s office?   A. If they were sent down I did not send them down; I did not know they had gone.
Q. You remember being examined before?   A. Yes.
Q. And I pointed out to you that letter of Mr. Fitzgibbon’s?   A. Yes.
Q. Which said you came in and went over the subscriptions?   A. Yes; and what I said on that occasion I would repeat now is that I thought that I went in to examine the shareholders’ register to see that the amounts had been applied upon the shares in respect of which the notes had been discounted. I did not see what advantage to me at that time the subscriptions would be, it would not help me on that end of it.

Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon writes you went over them and Mr. Travers says they came down from you; now, in view of that, do you still say that you neither looked over the subscriptions nor sent them down, did not know they were gone down; I will not say I did not look them over, but I have no recollection of looking over them; that is not what I was there for that day.
Q. You were there when Mr. Travers first saw the Finance Minister, were you not?   A. No.
Q. Had you left before he had had his first interview?   A. Yes; my recollection is the only party that I saw with Mr. Travers or without him was the Chief Clerk, Mr. Ross.
Q. When you came back you think all you looked at was the book with the stock entries in it showing how much had been paid?   A. That is my recollection.
Q. You have shown us the book you thought you must have looked at?   A. Yes.
Q. And it was for what purpose?   A. To see that the money had actually been applied in respect of the shares. If we had to make the argument that I expected we would have to make in Ottawa on that subject I wanted to be sure that the fact was right that it had been received in respect of shares, of specific shares; it seemed to me that was the ground work of it.

Q. Did you realize when you looked over that book that that book does not show anything at all about notes, it shows nothing but the stock subscription, and when money was paid?   A. I would like you to ask Mr. Fitzgibbon as to that, whether those sheets were re-written, because I remember referring to the outer column, and I still think I was looking at the outer column of that book.
Q. As showing whether there was a note?   A. No, as showing the amount that had been received in respect of that share.
Q. That does show that and shows the date of its receipt, but does not show anything about the note; so that if you wanted to see whether the amount was credited as against a note you would not see it in the book?   A. Yes, but the total that was shown would have to be made up of the amounts that were credited to individual shares?
Q. Yes?   A. I did not want to be landed in this position if we were to argue that point, that there was a bulk transfer entry received in respect of capital stock. It should be received in respect of particular shares in order to become capital.
Q. But as I understand it, the point in your mind was if a man gave a note and a certain amount was stated in the list to have been received from that man you wanted to know that that amount had been pledged as against the note?   A. No, that the proceeds of the discount had been applied on his shares; you are reversing it.
Q. Then I say again you would not find a trace of that in the book that you looked at?   A. I would find the whole of it there; I would find that the total of that column would agree with the amount that had been represented by the papers as having been received in respect of capital stock, and that it would have been distributed over the shares instead of being, part of it being received in a bulk item.

Q. Take a concrete case; supposing in the list that went down to Ottawa, A.B. they credited with having paid two hundred dollars, you would look in the book to see whether there was the credit to A.B. of that two hundred dollars?  A. Yes.

Q. Then if that book that you looked at does not show in the cases we object to any such payment what would you say then?  A. I do not quite follow your question.

Q. If the printed list or the list which was sent down to the Government showed two hundred dollars paid on A.B.'s stock, and the book that you looked at showed that A.B. had paid nothing?  A. I do not think that book showed that. I think the book that I saw on that occasion corresponded name for name and amount for amount with the list that had been prepared by Mr. Fitzgibbon.

Q. If the book that you spoke of on the last occasion does not show anything of that kind it would not be the book you looked at?  A. That is why I am suggesting that you might ask Mr. Fitzgibbon whether those particular sheets were re-written.

Q. Would you mind just looking at the book again?  A. You showed me on the other occasion it included payments after that date, that is why I think—it is a loose leaf ledger book—that he kept his accounts, brought them up to date at different dates.

Q. No doubt; then that book, the sheets of it, would take in a dozen years in payments, but it does contain the column for 1906?  A. Yes.

Q. And that would be I suppose all that had been written up at that time?  A. I cannot say; my impression is those are not the sheets I saw bound in that book at that time.

Q. (Shows witness Exhibit 19)?  A. This is not the one, is it, you showed me before?

Q. Is this the book?  A. I do not think this is the one you showed me on the last occasion; was it not typewritten?

MR. COMMISSIONER:  This is one of the things you saw, I suppose (Exhibit 17)?  A. As I understood Mr. Fitzgibbon the day I went into the bank the book that I saw corresponded in every particular with that list he sent in.

MR. COMMISSIONER:  He did not verify it; he took Fitzgibbon's statement.

MR. HODGINS:  It was a book different from this book (Exhibit 19)?  A. It was like that book.

Q. It was not this book?  A. It may have been that book, but the sheets may have been different. That is a loose leaf ledger. They may have been re-written a dozen times before this particular one; if this is down to the date of the closing of the affairs of the bank it may have been re-written a dozen times.

Q. At all events it would be one similar to this (Exhibit 19)?  A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. And it contained payments?  A. It contained the dates just as this one does as I recollect, the date of application, the date of allotment and the date of payment.

Q. This first page ends with the payment of the first stock, which would have been all that would have been up to that time?  A. No, other people had paid more than one call; there were subscriptions taken that were payable so much each month.

Q. Then it would contain columns?  A. That is my recollection of it; and then it was gathered up in the outer column.

Q. All that you were interested in was in seeing that that book of the bank corresponded with the statement to the Government?  A. Yes.

Q. You were not at all interested in finding out anything about the notes?  A. How about the notes?
Q. Because the payments in that book, and I presume in the book you saw, did not show anything about any notes being taken? A. I do not think it showed anything about any note being taken.

Q. I thought the question you were interested in was the question as to whether when a man gave a note and the note was discounted the payment was allocated to him exactly in the amount of his note, or the amount raised on his note? A. The point that was interesting me was I did not want to be confronted with a bulk entry in their capital account, and that was the only thing I was interested in; if the money had been distributed I could not tell whether it was distributed to John Smith his correct proportion or not.

Q. You wanted to see the plan? A. Yes, the method of applying the advance that had been obtained.

Q. They had assumed to apply it to individual shareholders? A. Yes.

Q. At all events you satisfied yourself there was no bulk sum to some bulk account, but they had assumed to apply it to individual shareholders? A. Yes.

Q. Whether the shareholder had given notes or not? A. I could not tell from that whether a man had given a note or not.

Q. When you had been called in to advise was not your advice based upon the idea that notes were being discounted? A. On what occasion?

Q. By the Trusts & Guarantee Company originally? A. The Trusts & Guarantee Company, Mr. Warren asked me to call upon Mr. Travers and to talk the matter over with him. Mr. Travers explained to me at that interview how he was going to apply it; I gave him no advice, but I reported to Mr. Warren that it appeared to me to be sound.

Q. What was it he said he was going to do? A. He went through the matter; he told me that the notes were being discounted without recourse to the bank, that he was paying in for the shareholder the amount of his note, that as between the bank and the shareholder the bank could not say to the shareholder that the share was not paid, but that the shareholder would still owe personally the man who held his obligation the amount of the note.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What do you mean by held his obligation? A. Note. That seemed to me to be sound; Mr. Travers explained how he intended to apply it.

MR. HODGINS: You so reported to Warren? A. Yes, that I thought his method was sound.

Q. When the preparation of the list took place you were acting as solicitor for the bank? A. I was acting as solicitor as I understood it for the provisional directors.

What if any part did you take in the preparation of the list? A. In the preparation of the list itself?

Q. Yes? A. Nothing more than I have told you, answering in front of Mr. Fitzgibbon a question put to me by Mr. Travers.

Q. You gave us that I think on the last occasion? A. Yes, I took no part in the preparation of the list as a list.

Q. Travers said when it was finally made up and the payments finally put down on it it was submitted to you? A. I have no doubt that the completed thing passed through my hands because it was marked as an exhibit to Mr. Travers' declaration, but I think that would be all that I would see of it, and I certainly made no examination of it.

Q. Then of course you would never think of looking over it when you were marking it as an exhibit when he said it was submitted to you as solicitor for the bank? A. I am telling you as far as my recollection goes, and my recollection is distinct upon it, what I had to do with it.

Q. That it was submitted to you? A. In the sense of my approving how much was put to this man and how much to this man?

Q. Yes? A. Certainly not.
Q. That I understand is Mr. Travers' statement? A. I have not seen it nor heard it.

Q. At all events it is not so if he does say so? A. I may point out just in that connection that I did not know of the further advance that was made by the Trusts & Guarantee Company, so if it was submitted to me I would have to check it up, I would check it up on the basis of an eighty thousand dollar loan, not a one hundred thousand dollar.

Q. Certainly: I do not suppose you would undertake to do the checking of the figures; but you of course knew this amount was being distributed, and you saw it was being distributed in separate sums, and that had your approval? A. The method appeared to me to be sound.

Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Hunter has just mentioned to me that he relies on some passage in some work that probably in fairness to him he might be allowed to state?

Mr. Hunter: If you would allow me in that connection to state, during the earlier part of that Fall I was discussing with Mr. Warren a matter in which the Trusts Company was not interested at all, relating to an insurance company that came before the Royal Commission, and in connection with that I gave him an extract from Thompson "Commentaries on the Law of Corporations" that seemed to say that was a sufficient compliance with a statute of that sort, and that was in my mind when Mr. Travers was explaining to me how he intended to apply this.

Mr. Hodgins: Perhaps you can give me the reference to it?

Mr. Hunter: I think I can lay my hands on it without any trouble, and will be glad to do so.

ALEXANDER S. LOWN, Recalled by

Mr. Hodgins: Q. There is a statement here showing the amount of $560 that was paid to you; it was kept as a separate account altogether from the organization expenses, and appears to have been paid to you in sums of $85, $25, $10 and $100, etc.? A. It is part of the organization expenses.

Q. It is not so charged? A. My recollection was this: Myself and Mr. Smith were at that time practically in charge of the bank; those cheques were drawn for travelling expenses and other expenses. At the meetings of the Board accounts were rendered and passed; the details of that $560 I cannot remember.

Q. You do not know why it was kept separate? A. I don't know why it was kept separate.

Q. Who would know what it was for? A. Mr. Smith had full charge of the bookkeeping, and I never concerned myself with the bookkeeping in any way whatever.

Q. And just charged up to you as if it was advances to you? A. Yes.

Q. You cannot account for it yourself? A. No, excepting, for instance, I went out to quite a number of different places for the bank, and I would get a cheque for $25 for my expenses, and that was apparently charged up to me.

Q. You were the President or Chairman of the Provisional Board? A. Yes.

Q. And you signed all the cheques? A. Yes.

Q. Was any account kept of the expenses of the Provisional Directors, which appear to have reached between forty and forty-four thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. Who kept that? A. That was kept by Mr. Smith; it will all be in here.

Q. There is nothing in that; that is the ledger? A. It is all kept very carefully in some of the books.

Q. You were how many years in charge? A. I should say a year and a half.

Q. And you spent $44,000? A. Yes.

Q. In commissions? A. Yes.
Q. Travelling expenses? A. Yes.
Q. Directors' fees? A. Yes.
Q. And that was all? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: Did that include any of Lindsay's commission? A. Yes.
That would include a portion of Lindsay's commissions.

Mr. Travers: Salaries?
Mr. Hodgins: That would go right down to December, 1906, meeting? A.
Yes.
Q. However, the bulk of it was spent before Mr. Travers had to do with it? A. I do not think so, I should say—
Q. Who kept an eye on whether the expenses were fair and legitimate or not? you were all in receipt of directors' fees and salaries? A. I do not suppose any one did.
Q. Did any one check them over when the bank was taken over? A. They had been checked over half a dozen times.
Q. Did any one check them over with a view of seeing whether it was a fair amount or an excessive amount? A. Mr. Travers I understood had them checked over once or twice.
Q. You say Mr. Travers did? A. Yes.
Q. He is the only one that did anyway? A. Yes.
Q. There was no official charged with the duty of seeing that the Provisional Directors were only spending what was fair and reasonable under the circumstances? A. I do not see how there could be any official.
Q. It is a matter of interest if banks are organized in this way that there should be some check; there was no auditor appointed by the subscribers? A. No.
Q. And it appears Mr. Travers took the thing over, just accepted the figures and let it go? A. I think that the figures were checked over afterwards and all the vouchers; I think they are on the minutes, statements there that the accounts had been checked over and found correct in accordance with the vouchers.
Q. By whom? A. I don't remember.
Q. It would make all the difference in the world who did it; Mr. Travers says that the Provisional Directors refused at one time just previous to the 4th July, 1906, to allot the stock that had been subscribed because it would give him the control? A. No; there was a dispute between him and some of the directors with regard to the question of taking notes.
Q. Of taking notes? A. Yes.
Q. But apart from that Mr. Travers says broadly that he was practically held up by the provisional directors, they refused to allot, and that he had to come to their terms and agree to pay them $20,000? A. That it not correct.
Q. Have you any other explanation of how that $20,000 came to be agreed upon? A. Mr. Travers had been promising the directors to make some provision for them. At that time there were several causes of friction, and this was a sort of a general meeting to remove all causes of friction.
Q. There was friction? A. Yes, and especially between the agents and Mr. Smith.
Q. Friction was removed by this payment of $10,000? A. Yes.
Q. Which was made to directors out of moneys received from the subscribers? A. Yes.
Q. Why was the agreement deposited with Robertson & Maclennan and not to be withdrawn except on the signature of the directors? A. I think as a matter of convenience.
Q. There is no convenience about storing it up with a solicitor that was not acting for anybody? A. We thought about putting it in a deposit box, and it was afterwards considered we would just leave it with Mr. Robertson.
Q. What was the object; people do not usually lock up agreements of that kind?
Mr. Commissioner: Was it in duplicate? A. I think so.

Mr. Hodgins: I do not think so. A. This was a matter of private arrangement amongst the directors.

Q. Mr. Robertson, who gave evidence in another case, said he did not know anything about it, did not know why, it was simply left with him to be delivered up on the signature of the directors? A. I think that was a matter of arrangement amongst the directors.

Q. Can you explain that? A. I think for the convenience of the five different directors.

Q. Convenience in getting money from Mr. Travers? A. No, I do not think so. You see the money was obtained, and the money, all the money that was ever obtained from Mr. Travers was obtained before that was deposited with Mr. Robertson.

Q. Oh, no. It was not got out till after he made his final payments on account of the last $10,000? A. The final payments were very small.

Q. But it was kept there till he made those final payments and you agreed to hand it over; you think it was a matter of convenience; that is the way you put it? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think it was in this connection, but he spoke of not wanting him to get control of the stock; I don't think it had anything to do with this particular thing. Would it not be likely that the Provisional Directors would not want Travers to get control of the whole of the stock; would not that be a likely thing? A. I don't think the matter was ever discussed amongst the Provisional Directors about Travers getting control of the stock.

Q. What was your idea when the bank was started, were you to have a place on the Board or were you to drop out entirely? A. In the first place I was to have either the solicitorship of the bank or I was to have some place in the bank. At the time of the agreement myself and Mr. Smith were both dropping out entirely.

Q. And the others? A. The others were all dropping out.

Mr. Hodgins: The real point as I understand it was this, that the agreement to pay them this amount of money was conditional on the assent of the subscribers and that they thought if Travers got control of the whole thing he could control the whole meeting and it would never be ratified.

Mr. Commissioner: You have not put it that way to this witness; put it that way and see what he says.

Mr. Hodgins: What do you say to that; the position appears to be this, if you allotted to Travers, allotted the stock that Travers had got, and he was proxy for it he would then be able to control the meeting and elect his own Board and that Board of course would have to ratify any payment to you and any payment of expenses, and you people did not like to put yourselves in his hands to that extent, and therefore you refused to allot to him until he signed that agreement with you and paid you $10,000, and left the agreement where he could not get it until he paid the balance: and then and only then did you agree to allot; that is the view he presents? A. It is rather mixed up; there are several things mixed up in the question as far as I see. Our objection to allotment, as far as there was an objection, was the question of these notes: that was the only question that we had.

Q. What was the difficulty there about the notes? A. About June stock subscriptions began to come in accompanied by notes, and some of the directors were of the opinion that we had no right to allot stock accompanied by notes which varied the payment from the terms of payment in the application. An adjournment was made until we got advice on that matter. I do not think we ever had any—there was no holding up of the matter with regard to Mr. Travers, we were quite willing to take Mr. Travers' word for the matter.

Q. The agreements rather seem to bear his construction; you do not think there was anything like that about it? A. No.
Q. You do not think the payment of $10,000 made any difference in your views as to taking notes? A. We depended on Mr. Urquhart's letter.

Q. Relying on the agreement you handed over everything to Travers after getting the money to keep the agreement and pay the balance? A. Yes.

Q. And you did not care whether the subscriptions were any good or not, that was his side, his lookout; that is what it came to? A. Yes, that is what it came to.

Q. Who was the man Travers had to deal with, you or Smith or Fraser? A. Most of the negotiations were conducted between Mr. Travers and myself.

Q. We have your explanation about it then.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: The first agreement provided that what you were to get was to be subject to ratification by the Board? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Hodgins has asked you it would not be plain that if Travers, who was to pay this, controlled the stock list and controlled the Board, he might make his agreement worthless to you? A. Yes.

Q. He wants to know had that anything to do with the action you took when you changed it into something by which Travers became personally answerable? A. Why certainly.

Q. The only point of difference between you is Travers says that you forced him to this position by refusing to allot the stock; do you agree or differ from that? A. I differ from that.

Q. What was the lever you used, persuasion would not do much, would it? A. Of course there was this lever that the sale of the larger portion of the stock was in the hands of Mr. Smith, not Mr. Travers.

Q. What difference does that make, if the Power of Attorney were in Mr. Travers' name? A. It might make differences as to future stock.

Q. At all events you did take the position you would not allot stock, whatever the reason was? A. Yes.

Q. You think it was because of this difficulty about the note? A. Yes.

Q. And you ultimately did decide to allot? A. Yes.

Q. And was that contemporaneous with your getting the agreement by which Travers became personally answerable and paid you the $10,000? A. Yes.

FREDERICK W. STAIR, Sworn, Examined by Mr. Hodgins: Q. You live in Toronto? A. Yes.

Q. And own the building which the Farmers Bank rented? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your name is found on a note in connection with a loan which Mr. Travers or the bank got from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Likely.

Q. The note was $9,000, I think? A. Yes.

Q. How did you come to give it? A. I subscribed for $10,000 worth of stock and I gave a cheque for $1,000 and they were to carry the rest of it, renew it for a year if I required it.

Q. Did they do so? A. Yes.

Q. Did you pay the note up afterwards? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How? A. I think I paid partly cash and part applied on rent.

Q. When you made that note did Mr. Travers tell you what he wanted it for? A. No, I was not taken into any of the secrets of the organization; I paid him $1,000 cash and gave him my note for the balance which I had subscribed.

Q. Who took your subscription? A. Mr. W. J. Lindsay.

Q. When did you make your subscription? A. It was in the fall of 1906; I can give you the date of the cheque.
Q. Very well? A. I was looking for the notes; I don't know where the original note is; there are some renewals; there is the cheque and here is the stub of it. I issued the cheque to my Attorney.

Q. Curry & Eyre? A. Yes; and in the stub I noted down what it was given for.

Q. Dated October 9th, 1906: the note then would be dated the same day? A. I think so.

Q. And that is all you paid during that year; was the note taken at a year? A. I won't be sure; I hardly think it was.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You have one of the renewals? A. There are both renewals.

Q. May 1st, 1907, six months; $9,000? A. I gave the original note I am quite sure at the time I gave this cheque; this was before the bank had got organized, before they started business in my corner down there Mr. Travers came to me and wanted me to change that note for a personal note to him for I think it was sixty days, and then he would give me this note and take my note again for the six months or whatever it was, I forget now; anyway there were two notes given after, and I cannot find the original note nor the one I gave Mr. Travers.

MR. HODGINS: Did you ever hear from the Branch out in Milton or any place but the Head Office about your note? A. No, sir.

Q. Who did you deal with, Travers all through? A. Yes.

---

W. P. TRAVERS, Recalled:——

MR. COMMISSIONER: Have you got through your head, Mr. Hodgins, what Mr. Travers' explanation of this $10,000 is? Will you ask him again about that? Here is what he says at page 417 of his evidence. (Reads portions of pages 417, 418, etc.)

Q. What became of the $5,000 in money? A. The $5,000 in money went to me; I got the $5,000 and I gave a cheque for it charged to my commissions; there is $15,000 charged to my commissions.

Q. Does that $5,000 cheque say for commissions? A. No, but it is charged up to commissions. I said he brought back $10,000; after hearing this evidence of his I am wrong in that because he says he put $5,000 to his credit.

MR. HODGINS: There is a $10,000 cheque and a $5,000, $15,000 is accounted for; and $5,000 according to the witness went to pay Nesbitt's stock? A. The Cash Book will show that.

Q. And that represents this cheque, EXHIBIT 36? A. Yes.

Q. Where is the entry on the other side, the debit of the $5,000? A. There it is, Nesbitt's stock, $5,000 (in Provisional Directors' cash book).

Q. December 7th? A. Yes.

Mr. Travers refers to EXHIBIT 19.

Q. Does that book show $5,000? A. It shows $5,000; $3,000 October 22nd, and $2,000 December 7th; the $3,000 is put on there.

Q. On the discount? A. Yes.

Q. How did they balance the books when these applications were made out, how did it show in the books when you applied the moneys that had been got from the Trusts & Guarantee Company on the shares? A. We made no entries in the books for that at all. We made no entries in that until the bank was organized on the 26th November and a regular set of books.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Then what did you do? A. Then we brought it forward; I am not quite sure how Mr. Fitzgibbon brought that forward; I think he will have to explain that himself. There was an entry made for it but I cannot tell exactly what that was, but I think it was capital account though.

Mr. Hodgens: I will ask Mr. Fitzgibbon about that.

Q. Were there any notes or cheques in your private desk when the failure took place? A. I think there were some.

Q. What became of them? A. I sent them in a box, I think, over to Mr. Owens' office with some of the Keeley Mine papers.

Q. Is that E. J. W. Owens? A. Yes.

Q. Would he have them yet? A. I could not say.

Q. However, you sent him a box which you think contained these. A. My recollection is I sent him a box with some Keeley Mine books and papers and some private cheques of my own.

Q. Cheques of your own would be for $6,000, $4,000, and $3,000? A. No, I do not think so.

Q. What would they be for? A. They were grocery accounts and livery accounts and such things.

Q. Were there any cheques such as I mention or notes such as I mention? A. My account will show it.

Q. Were there any in your private box held by you or private desk? A. What do you mean?

Q. I am suggesting that there were notes signed by somebody else? A. There were some notes, I would not say they were in that box, but there were some notes left in my desk.

Q. What became of those? A. I don't know.

Q. Whose signatures were on them? A. I think Dr. Beattie Nesbitt's note was there if I remember right.

Q. How much would that be? A. I could not say exactly now; I think it was $10,000 or something like that.

Q. Was that something he borrowed from you or from the bank? A. No; I think something in connection with the Keeley Mine, I cannot recall now. I will have to refresh my memory by looking at some of the documents.

Q. Was there only the one note signed by him or more? A. It seemed to me there were two notes there, but Mr. Clarkson did not find anything. You were asking me about that the other day, and you puzzled me about it; I cannot say exactly what until I look into it more carefully.

Q. You have not been able to? A. No.

Q. Were there any one else's notes there? A. I could not say that just now; there might have been.

Q. George Wishart's note? A. There might have been.

Q. What was that in connection with? A. Blackmail, if you want to know the truth.

Q. I would like to know the truth about that? A. I am not prepared to-day just to go into that question. I want to think about it; I did not expect it.

Q. I did not expect it either; I thought we would have been able to get on with the other branch; I want to ask you in a general way about Wishart; who is George Wishart? A. He is a promoter in New York.

Q. An American? A. Yes.

Q. And how did you come in contact with him? A. I was crossing the Atlantic ocean on the "Lusitania," after making banking arrangements over there, and I met him on board ship.

Q. When did you have business relations with him first? A. After the Keeley Mine was offered to me.

Q. Who was it offered it? A. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt.
Q. What occurred between you and Nesbitt and Wishart? A. Really, I don't think it is fair for me to go into that when Dr. Nesbitt is on trial; of course if the Commissioner says I have to do it I will do it.

Q. It has nothing to do with his trial? A. I don't know what is coming up there and I do not like to go into that transaction to prejudice his case or influence the Judge or Jury; I don't think it is fair.

Q. I suppose you realize we have to go into the history of this Keeley Mine and the money that went into it, and I don't see how it is possible—— A. Can you not go into that without taking up those points so specifically with regard to Dr. Nesbitt? I can answer in regard to the investments of the bank and the Keeley Mine.

Q. The books show all that; I want to get your testimony on it? A. I will be glad to give you everything but I really don't think it is fair to hurt a man's case in any way; I don't know whether it will or not.

Q. I think you are unnecessarily sensitive; he is not indicted for anything in connection with the returns, the Keeley Mine does not come into it? A. Ask me the question and I will see.

Q. I am asking you what was the arrangement made when this was offered to you by Dr. Nesbitt? A. Dr. Nesbitt brought the proposition to me to buy this mine for $300,000; $50,000 was to be paid down, and $50,000 a month I think until it was paid.

Q. Had he an option? A. Yes, he had the option.

Q. In his own name? A. Yes.

Q. Was he president at that time? A. No, he was not president of the bank then; he had ceased to be president six months I should say.

Q. You saw the option I suppose in writing? A. Yes.

Q. And he was turning it over for just its face? A. It was not intended that he should turn it over to the bank; the intention was to organize a company and that the payments were to be made by the bank or by somebody else that we could get into the company.

Q. Were you to pay it individually or what was the proposition? A. The proposition was that we should float it; that is the common term I think.

Q. Who are “we”? A. Nesbitt and the Bank, put it that way, for a profit to the bank.

Q. The bank was to make a profit? A. Yes.

Q. And Nesbitt? A. Yes, and Nesbitt was to make a profit, certainly.

Q. Was he turning it over to the bank at a profit? A. No, he did not turn it over at that time at all; he held the option; the question was how the payments were to be made under that option, whether——

Q. Was he to turn it over——however, it was arranged so that he would make a profit out of the option? A. Yes, certainly, he intended to make a profit eventually.

Q. The point then was as to taking up the option and making the deposit? A. Yes, the payments.

Q. $50,000? A. That was the first payment.

Q. How did Wishart come in? A. Wishart had told me when I had made his acquaintance on board ship that he was a rich man, and he said to me if there was any proposition in Canada that he could handle at any time he would like to have a chance at it. He took me out and showed me his elegant residence outside of New York, which I thought was worth one hundred or one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and I came over here with the idea that he was a very desirable man to work with in case we should have any proper deal to put through, and after Nesbitt brought the option to me I went to New York to see him and he said he could make the first payment without any difficulty.

Q. Well? A. Then I came back and the matter was closed then. I agreed to make the payment of $50,000 if I remember right, and when the date came for payment Wishart said he could only give a note, $25,000. Nesbitt and he agreed to put up half of it.

Q. I understood you to say you agreed to make the payment? A. To the people who owned the property, the original owners, the prospectors.

Q. When you say you agreed, do you mean the bank would put up the money? A. I spoke for the bank as General Manager, yes.

Q. They agreed to put it up, the Board did? A. No, I did not bring it before the Board at that time.

Q. Had you got Wishart to come in in writing? A. No, there was no writing at that time.

Q. Just verbal? A. Yes.

Q. He said he would pay the first payment? A. He said he would make the first payment; then when he arrived in Toronto to complete the first payment he had not any money. Dr. Nesbitt said he would put up $25,000 and Wishart would put up $25,000.

Q. That is what you think they had told you previously? A. Yes.

Q. Neither of them did so? A. No, but Dr. Nesbitt supplied me $25,000 of a deposit that enabled me to loan the money to a company that was formed.

Q. Had you got so far as to form a company? A. Not at that time, no.

Q. But there was to a company formed? A. Yes.

Q. Who was to form the company? A. The company was to be formed of Dr. Nesbitt, George Wishart and myself.

Q. Wishart was to join with Nesbitt in making the first payment, was that it? A. Yes, that was the understanding.

Q. And you were to supply what? A. I suppose that I was to supply $25,000 as against the deposit that Nesbitt got for me.

Q. You did not do that? A. I supplied the whole $50,000.

Q. That is you supplied Wishart’s? A. I supplied Wishart’s and Nesbitt’s both.

Q. What was your contribution to be in the three, were not you to come in on equal terms? A. When we formed a company the bank was to have one quarter for profit; Wishart was to have a quarter; Nesbitt was to have a quarter, and I personally was to have a quarter myself for the work that I was putting in it.

Q. The net result of the arrangement was that you found you had to put up $50,000, and you discounted Wishart’s note? A. For $25,000.

Q. Did you discount Nesbitt’s note? A. No, I did not.

MR. COMMISSIONER: He said something about a deposit.

MR. HODGINS: Nesbitt got a deposit, you say, which enabled you to do that? A. To lend the first $25,000 to the company that made the payment to the prospector of this Mine.

Q. The deposit was a legitimate deposit? A. Yes.

Q. Nothing to do with the Mine, had it? A. No.

Q. But you thought it came in through Nesbitt’s influence? A. I thought so, yes.

Q. Therefore you were willing to lend him the money? A. Our Treasury was not out anything at that time as I thought the investment was a good one.

Q. Where you were out was in supplying the $25,000 for Wishart? A. In the end; more than that, I am sorry to say.

Q. He came here and he could only put up a note instead of the money? A. That was all.

Q. The bank put up that? A. Yes.

Q. No kind friend arranged any deposit which would put you in funds with regard to that? A. Not a cent.

Q. The first payment was made and was the company formed? A. The company was formed, yes.
Q. What was it called? A. The Keeley-Josie-Wood Mining Company; those were the three names of the three men who discovered the prospect.
Q. They ought to be immortalized? A. They should indeed.
Q. Were the four shares allotted in the way you speak of; quarter interests?
A. Yes, they were.
Q. Held by whom for the bank? A. I, as General Manager in trust.
Q. And then held a quarter for yourself? A. I held a quarter in my own name, a quarter in my name in trust for the bank, a quarter for Wishart and a quarter for Nesbitt; that is my recollection of the matter as near as I can tell; there may have been a variation of some shares one way or the other.
Q. When the second payment came due what happened? A. No money; I had to put it up.
Q. Who had agreed to put up the second deposit? A. Wishart agreed to float the concern and supply all the money that was necessary, verbally.
Q. Had not you been a little suspicious when he came along with a note the first time? A. No, I was not.
Q. How long was the note? A. I am not sure but I think it was thirty or sixty days.
Q. Did not it come due just about September, the second payment came due?
A. About that time, yes.
Q. When the second payment came due the company was formed with the quarter interest to you each? A. Yes.
Q. Had the option turned over to the company? A. Yes.
Q. So that the company was liable to pay? A. Yes.
Q. The option had been accepted and had become a binding contract? A. Yes.
Q. Who made up the second payment? A. The Farmers Bank.
Q. Who defaulted? A. Everybody but the bank.
Q. That is you, Wishart—— A. I never agreed to put up anything, not myself personally; I did for the bank.
Q. You were to have a quarter interest? A. Yes.
Q. But you were not to pay for that personally? A. No.
Q. The bank was to pay for its quarter? A. No, the bank was paying nothing; the bank was supposed to get this money back with interest and a bonus of one-quarter of the stock for doing the business.
Q. That would be you, Nesbitt and Wishart? A. Yes.
Q. Were you three to put up the money? A. No, Wishart and Nesbitt were to find the money.
Q. You got your interest for nothing, the bank got it for putting up the money which it was to get back, and it was to get the quarter interest as additional profit? A. I kept the book and managed that end of it.
Q. Wishart and Nesbitt defaulted on the second occasion? A. Yes.
Q. Then did the bank put it up? A. Yes.
Q. What securities did you take then? A. Nothing.
Q. How did you come to make that second payment in that way if Wishart and Nesbitt would not put it up? A. Because I was in $50,000 and I had to go down with a loss of $50,000, and I thought the property was good, and I went on the second $50,000.
Q. Did Wishart come over here? A. Wishart was over here sometimes two and three times a week and I could not tell you just exactly.
Q. Was he displaying any interest in it? A. Yes, considerable interest in it.
Q. But not displaying any money? A. He had not any money.
Q. What conclusion did you come to when the second default was made? A. The second payment I was not quite sure whether he was a fakir or not, but when the third came along I was sure of it.
Q. You still had his note? A. No, I had to give up his note?
SESIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Before the third payment came due? A. Yes, I think it was, I am not sure, but we had a re-organization.

Q. How did you come to give up his note? A. It was necessary to have a re-organization—I cannot tell you just at this moment—and he would not consent to it unless I gave up the note and released him.

Q. What re-organization, what does that mean? A. We formed a new company entirely and took over the old company.

Q. Was there a necessity for that? A. Yes, there was a necessity for it.

Q. What was it? A. To try and float the stock, to unload it on the suffering public and get from under, if you want to know the truth.

Q. But you might just as well unload the Keeley-Josie-Wood Company? A. We could not do it at that time; Wishart thought it would sell then—not that I considered that it was wrong, because I considered the mine was rich then, and I consider it rich to-day, just as rich as it ever was.

Q. I am only trying to get at your reason at this juncture? A. I will tell you; it was one million dollars capital, and if I remember right Wishart and the rest of his—or some friends of his—thought the capital should be two and a half millions for the purpose of floating in Scotland; that is where the re-organization came in; and we formed a new company with a capital of two and a half millions, and we bought out the old company, amalgamating the debts and distributing the stock in the same proportion as we did originally.

Q. Wishart must have agreed? A. He agreed when I gave him up his note.

Q. You say he thought it was necessary to have it re-organized by making the capital two and a half millions? A. Yes.

Q. If he did, I do not understand why you say you had to give him his note? A. Because he would not consent to the change in the company.

Q. I thought he proposed it? A. I do not know whether he proposed it or not. It was a question at that time in my mind that something had to be done; I do not know whether he proposed it or the Doctor proposed it, or some of his friends proposed it; there was a whole lot of parasites there all the time.

Q. I would like to know how you came to give up the note? A. I have just explained it to you; he refused to consent to the re-organization at that time without the surrender of his note and the bank becoming responsible for the entire loan.

Q. And you gave him back his note and gave him a quarter interest? A. Yes, I did; he and the doctor transferred a little further stock to the bank at that time I think.

Q. There must be some other explanation about that; I do not understand you giving him the same interest? A. I did not expect these questions, but I can explain it to you to the letter exactly, but I would want to refresh my memory.

Q. You want to go over the minute book? A. I would like to go over the minute book of the Keeley Mine and look at it; I know that the time the Wishart note came up it was a question of a block and the bank losing the money there and then, or going ahead.

Q. I would like to have you go over that? A. I can explain that thoroughly.

JAMES G. FITZGIBBON, Recalled:

MR. HODGINS: Q. You were here and heard what Mr. Hunter said? A. Yes.

Q. He seemed to think that that book we showed him was not the book he saw when he came back from Ottawa, but that it was a book similar to that? A. Those are the only two books we ever had. (EXHIBIT 18 and 19).
Q. That big one with the yellow leaves (Exhibit 19) will you just look at that and tell me whether at the time the list was made out the left hand page in each case was the same as it was then? A. All the same.

Q. I mean up to the first payment? A. They were all the same. This book has never been altered except having additions made as time went on and new subscriptions came in after organization.

Q. The same book, the same pages? A. Yes.

Q. And same entry as the stock was paid up? A. Yes. Later on when we got our regular book going we abandoned this altogether (Exhibit 19) because we have our regular stock to post them in.

Q. At the time the list was made out at the time Mr. Hunter speaks of the only books that would relate to the stock would be these two, Exhibits 18 and 19? A. Yes. This is the book from which the list to the Government was made out. (Exhibit 18).

Q. I did not think of showing Mr. Hunter this Exhibit 18; that does not show any payments? A. No, but I will show you here; taking from this (Exhibit 19) that was the work I did, was to check up the total of the payments to date—Q. In this book Exhibit 18 there is penciled under the printed heading "Witness" the date of the allotment and the amount paid up to that date? A. Yes.

Q. Does that go right through the book? A. Yes, that goes right—Q. Would this be the book that Mr. Hunter saw? A. This is the book he saw (Exhibit 18).

Q. That does show then the payments made apparently up to that date? A. There was the total up to that date.

Q. Totalling $391,310, that is in your handwriting in Exhibit 18? A. Yes; from the simple fact that the Laidlaw shares were struck out before the end of December when we sent in our second statement; but the list was made up then alphabetically from our stock ledger—Q. These pencil figures show what? A. They show that amount actually paid in and the amounts which were allocated from the Trusts & Guarantee Company loan on notes.

Q. One may say that this book, Exhibit 18, is the original document? A. That is the original document.

Q. Which afterwards went in to the Government? A. Yes.

Q. And shows the way it was done? A. Yes.

Q. Under whose directions were those pencil entries made? A. Mr. Travers instructed me to make out a list, find out how the thing stood, and that was the first work I did was to go over these amounts, checking the various payments, and I put them in pencil here for ready reference.

Q. Take this as a prominent example: W. J. Lindsay, 500 shares, you put $5,000 opposite him as paid? A. Yes.

Q. Which forms part of the total? A. Yes.

Q. How did you come to do that? A. Under instructions from Mr. Travers to allocate a portion of the loan on that.

Mr. Commissioner: He explained that before.

Mr. Hodgins: We have been looking for this original and I was not aware—Mr. Commissioner: The witness Travers showed that book to Hunter as he was leaving, at least I think I saw him showing it to him.

Mr. Hodgins: I did not know that.

Mr. Travers: Yes, I noticed he was not giving his evidence from that book: if he had had that book he would have given his evidence differently.

Q. Mr. Hodgins: Then this is in your handwriting, Exhibit 59? A. Yes.

Q. Is that the basis of the special return of May 1907? A. No, sir.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Travers thought it was; what is it the basis of? A. This was just a calculation to make up to see what amounts had been spread on the notes; this was solely for our own office use.

Q. Was it not the basis of the return? A. It may have been in connection with that statement. This was got out probably for information for Mr. Travers just to know what had been done with the proceeds of the loan, but so far as I can see it is not the statement itself. There is no date to that; it was just a memorandum for office use; I do not know what it was for or just the occasion for it.

Q. Do you know anything about the payment of Dr. Nesbitt's stock? A.

No, sir.

Q. Can you explain anything further as to the way in which the charges were made? A. No.

Q. Do you know about that $5,000 that was credited upon his stock? A.
No, that was done in the Provisional Board book, part of it; the only ones I saw were payments made after the Bank was organized.

Q. We are told no separate account for the various shareholders in the Provisional books? A. No.

Q. How did you make out the book you have in front of you, Exhibit 19? A.
This book was made up long before I went in; this was made out from time to time as the subscriptions came in.

Q. During the Provisional Directors' regime? A. Yes.

Q. Whose handwriting is that? A. The first part is typewritten with the name of Smith, who was the Secretary of the Provisional Board. He witnessed them as being genuine; and subsequently after Smith left the rest of the book was in Shaver's handwriting. He was the Transfer Clerk, in fact he was with the provisional directors for a few weeks before the Board was organized; how long I do not know.

Q. You came into the Bank on the 19th November? A. The 19th or 20th.

Q. Just two or three days before the return was sent in? A. Yes.

Q. Did you at any time yourself check over the expenses of the provisional directors? A. No, sir, I had nothing whatever to do with the provisional directors' books or accounts in any shape or form.

Q. Do you know anything about this $3,000 cheque which has been mentioned?
A. All I know is that Mr. Travers instructed me to draw out a cheque after the Bank had been organized and just remarked "C" on the stub and sent it down to him. I signed all the official cheques after the Bank was organized.

Mr. Commissioner: Down where? A. Down stairs; I was in the Head Office, I had nothing to do with the Toronto Branch.

Mr. Hodgins: You did it? A. Yes.

Q. Is that all you know about that? A. Yes.

Q. Did you not see that it came back or was paid? A. Of course it naturally came back when it was paid, but it was changed up to Mr. Travers either to his commission account or—

Q. After the bank was organized? A. Yes.

Q. What time? A. I could not say; I could tell by the stubs of the cheque book.

Q. Is that it? A. No, it was a yellow stub book.

Mr. Travers: You are wrong, that is the book.

Mr. Hodgins: Just look at this stub book and see.

Mr. Travers: Have you not the cheque?

Mr. Hodgins: Not with me.

Mr. Travers: I have seen it two or three times.

Witness: It is not there, not the cheque I refer to.

Q. Which of these books will tell you the date of that cheque? A. I do not know.
Q. You speak of the $3,000 cheque charged to Travers after the organization?
A. Well, I could not say whether it was charged to organization expenses or to Travers' commission account. I might identify it if I knew the date of it, but I am pretty satisfied in my own mind that it was after the first January.

Q. What bank was it drawn on?
A. Our own bank.

Q. What was it?
A. The Farmers Bank.

Q. After you started business?
A. Yes. It was cashed downstairs or used downstairs and charged up to the Head Office and came to us in the ordinary routine. I know, I remember putting the "C" because I drew up the cheque myself. Those cheques are all drawn out by Mr. Shaver.

Q. What does "C" mean?
A. I do not know, I was just told to put "C" on the stub to identify it; that is the only way that I know it is the cheque that Mr. Travers referred to, because he said he had marked it "C". I was speaking to Mr. Travers, and I want to correct a statement he made in his evidence as published in the papers, and he tells me to-day that he saw the statement in the newspaper; he said that I had sworn that I had taken exception to his making the loan with the Trusts & Guarantee Company, which was an impossibility, seeing that I did not join the service till a month after the loan was made. I do not think in any of the evidence that I have ever given you will find I made such a statement, What I did say was that I raised the question as to the distributing of proceeds of the loan when I went into the bank, and it was only after the assurance of Mr. Hunter and Mr. Travers that they had taken advice, and I took outside advice, that we were justified in turning the notes into cash and applying the proceeds on the stock of those parties who had given their notes, but I certainly did not swear that I had taken exception to the loan.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not remember any such statement; it was Mr. Travers mentioned it to contradict it?
A. I saw that Mr. Travers had made the contradiction and I happened to read it in the newspaper.

Mr. Hodgins: You did not protest against him raising the loan?
A. I could not, I did not know anything about it; I was not there.

Mr. Commissioner: It was a mistake in the newspaper report if you saw it there; it will be correct in the evidence here. It is right to make that explanation.

The Commission adjourned at 4 p.m. to 11 a.m. to-morrow, May 22nd, 1912.

Toronto, May 22nd, 1912.

The Commission continued its Sittings at Osgoode Hall, May 22nd, at 11 a.m.

PRESENT:

Hon. Sir William Meredith, Commissioner.
Frank E. Hodgins, K.C. and John Thompson, K.C., representing the Dominion Government.
I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., representing the Trusts & Guarantee Company.

W. J. Lindsay, Recalled:

Mr. Hodgins: Q. Have you applied to the bank to get those cheques?
A. I have.

Q. Have you got them?
A. I have not.

Q. Why not?
A. They have been unable to locate them.

Q. Who did you apply to?
A. The General Ledger-keeper.
Q. Of the Traders Bank?  A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: I think you had better subpeona somebody at the Bank, Mr. Hodgins.

Mr. Hodgins: Very well.

Q. Have you found out where that $3,000 was deposited that you claim you paid to your wife?  A. No, I have not.

Q. You were to find that out?  A. No, you did not ask me.

Q. I asked you yesterday about that $3,000 and you could not tell me about it definitely, and I asked you to find out and you said you would?  A. Well, I will go up to the Bank of Montreal and find out if possible.

Q. I would like to find out what became of that $3,000 because the amount interests me?  A. On the matter of the $5,000, since yesterday in thinking the matter over the ex-Manager, General Manager, will be able to tell you if he used that to pay for bonds in a terminal company down in Pittsburgh or in an electric road somewhere between New York and Rochester, down in New York State. It just occurs to me that that was the urgency of that $5,000.

Q. You thought that since yesterday?  A. It just came to mind.

Q. Did you learn that from Mr. Travers?  A. I learned that from Mr. Travers at the time.

Q. And he told you that is what he was going to use it for?  A. That is my memory of it. There was something said, and I think that is what the urgency of the money was for.

Q. You did not know whether it was either in Pittsburgh or New York?  A. Both were discussed, because he had asked me to put some money into the same thing and I said No, I know nothing of it.

Q. And he was in such a hurry that you had to bring it back in bills?  A. It was not a matter of such hurry, he wanted the money, and I do not know, he asked me to bring him the money—

Q. Will you tell me who you paid to help this organization of the bank through out of your commissions?  A. I paid no one.

Q. Notwithstanding all these influential friends of yours you paid no one?  A. No one, nor did not approach any influential friend to help anything through.

Q. Did not hear of any payments made for services rendered in getting the certificate through?  A. No, sir.

Q. Can throw no light on any such payment?  A. No, sir, I do not know; that $3,000, I think that doubtful cheque that was supposed to have gone to some of his personal friends was possibly used in the horse business here, a partnership that he had with Count Gregory.

Q. Do you know about these things?  A. I do not know, it was newspaper talk.

Q. I do not ask you about newspaper talk, I want to know what you know yourself?  A. Nothing any further than he had a string of horses up here.

Q. You need not draw a herring across the trail because nobody has suggested that, and if it is only newspaper talk it is not interesting?  A. He had a string of horses about that time.

Q. If you will account for what you did with your $5,000 it will be quite sufficient?  A. You have the ledger account and those papers that I got from the Traders Bank about the time and some time during 1908 for the purpose of the suit against Travers and the Bank.

Q. I have got what?  A. You have a copy of that.

Q. I am asking you to find out what you did with the $3,000; the $3,000 appears to be paid to somebody, I want you to account for it in some way that I can verify it?  A. That was simply a transfer to another account; I will find it for you.

Q. I want you to bring me the evidence of that?  A. I will find it for you.
W. R. TRAVERS, Recalled:—

MR. HODGINS: I asked you yesterday about the deposits in the beginning of 1907 which were made and out of which apparently that so-called loan was paid back by April 8th, 1907; you began business on the 2nd January, 1907? A. We opened our doors for business then, although we were doing a little business a few days before that.

Q. At that time what had you in actual money to begin with? A. About $145,000—$150,000. $5,000 left in Ottawa.

Q. For the note circulation? A. Yes.

Q. And you would have then about $115,000? A. In cash.

Q. But out of that there had been several payments made; would not it have been nearer $75,000. Just look at that Traders Bank book (Exhibit 41) you see the end of December, 1906, shows only a small balance in the Traders of $264, but I think the $74,000 was chequed out into the Union Bank? A. It would be difficult to verify it from this unless you made an addition of the cheques at each date, but the book of the bank ought to show every dollar as it stood then; they had office books.

Q. I have no doubt they will; but I should think you would have some idea as to what you had in cash when you opened your doors? A. I brought back $245,000; that would be $145,000 and the $100,000 that I had borrowed; then those cheques were paid there for $80,000.

Q. And then this $10,000 cheque and $5,000? A. There were several cheques drawn; I could not say exactly what the aggregate was.

Q. What is that $50,000 towards the end there? A. Oh, I know what that is now I think; that was a transfer for a deposit receipt with the bank.

Q. I see that $50,000 was payable to the Union Bank of Canada, and so was the $74,579? A. Yes, that is the transfer of the account from one bank to the other.

Q. That would make it about $125,000? A. $125,000 and $10,000 would be $135,000.

Q. But that had been paid out; I am speaking of what you had in actual cash to begin business; it would look to me as if you had about $125,000? A. Deducting the amount that was borrowed I should say I had more than that; we had borrowed money at our credit representing cash at that time.

Q. That is a moot point; I think it was paid off and the cheques went through the bank and paid it off? A. There is no use denying the fact that I thought it was paid off too; it was a reversion of entries.

Q. I want to ask you to be more definite than that; it would be about $125,000? A. I think it was more than that; there were some payments came in on the stock in the meantime.

MR. COMMISSIONER: He says he thinks it was about $145,000? A. Yes, I should say so.

MR. HODGINS: When did you begin dealing again with the Trusts & Guarantee Company in the way of either deposits with them or money received from them by way of deposit? A. That ledger showed it here yesterday, 7th January, we made the first deposit with them.

Q. What was the amount of that? A. $3,655.

Q. We went over that yesterday? A. Yes.

Q. That is the deposit which began the account which ended on the 8th April, and was used to apparently pay off this so-called loan? A. That account was started for the purpose of paying off that loan; that is my recollection.

Q. That ends on the 8th April? A. Yes.

Q. When did you begin again to deal with them; either depositing with them or they depositing with you? A. I could not give you the exact date.
Q. Was it not the beginning of the following year? A. Some time elapsed: this ledger apparently has been transferred into another one; we will have to have that ledger.

Q. What do you call that ledger? A. The Toronto Branch general ledger.

Q. You had been doing a general banking business during 1907? A. Yes.

Q. Had you any need of money or did you find the cash capital you had sufficient to do business during that year? A. Yes, all the business that was offered us was not very much, we were able to take care of it.

Q. No stringency at all? A. No, I had money when the other banks were short.

Q. During 1907? A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: Have you that other ledger? A. I heard them say one day when we were talking about that the ledger was up in the Court House.

Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Clarkson says he has never been able to get that since it was produced in connection with one of the trials, that it has apparently been mislaid in somebody’s office.

Mr. Commissioner: Where did you say you saw it? A. I overheard Detective Guthrie saying it was in some office there, that he had seen it.

Q. At the City Hall? A. Yes.

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: It turned out to be the ledger of another bank.

Mr. Commissioner: To whom did Mr. Clarkson give it?

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: The Crown Officers got it.

Mr. Commissioner: What particular Crown Officer?

Mr. Clarkson: I cannot tell you that; I can ascertain that.

Mr. Commissioner: I suppose you got a receipt for it?

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: No, I do not think so. I think it was at the inception when they came down and got them; they were used at the trials and this ledger was seen at the trial.

Mr. Hodgins: I think if you would ask Mr. Clarkson or direct Mr. Clarkson to make enquiries and get that probably it would be done. It is so difficult to find anybody who is responsible that will take the trouble to look for it.

Mr. Commissioner: It would be in the hands of Mr. Corley, would it not?

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: Or the County Officials; it was seen on one of the trials; I think the trial of Mr. Warren before the County Judge, Judge Denton, I understand. We have got back all the rest of the books but not that ledger and nobody seems to know anything about it. The only points it will deal with particularly are those concerning circulation.

Mr. Hodgins: Would it assist you at all if you were told it was wanted for this Inquiry?

Mr. Clarkson: I think it would; I have done all I can but there does not seem to be any great activity to find it.

Mr. Commissioner: Who would be the Clerk at the trial before the County Judge?

Mr. Hodgins: Some one from the office of the Clerk of the Peace, Mr. Irwin.

Mr. Commissioner: I think you had better write Mr. Irwin a letter.

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: It is the general ledger of the Toronto branch for 1909 and 1910?

Mr. Hodgins: You made a loan to the Trusts Company in December, 1907? A. Yes, I remember making a loan.

Q. That would be the first loan, resumption of business with them, would it not, after April, 1907? A. It may have been, I could not say for certain; I know there was a long time elapsed between paying off the loan.

Q. Is it because you cannot find the ledger that you say that? A. I know those are the facts but I cannot give you the exact time.
Q. Is that because you cannot find that ledger, you cannot see that ledger?
A. No, I do not need the ledger to remember that.
Q. To get the date I mean?  A. Yes.
Q. Is it not there?  A. December 16th, $25,000.
Q. That would be the first, would it not, you had to do with the Trusts & Guarantee Company afterwards?  A. I presume it was, I know it was a long time.

Q. Apparently on December 16th, 1907, there is a deposit marked “Deposit $25,000”; what does that indicate, is that a deposit in your bank put to their credit?  A. Put to their credit, yes.
Q. And interest is credited up, is it?  A. Yes, from time to time.
Q. Does that mean that it is charged to them? How does it appear in your entry there?  A. We credit them with interest.
Q. How do you explain that if you made the loan to them, how are you crediting them with interest?  A. They left the money with us on deposit, to be drawn out as they required it, my recollection is.
Q. What security did you get?  A. I had a letter from them giving me an interest in some Canada Central Railway Bonds that they were floating at that time.

Q. Giving you an interest in it?  A. Yes, in proportion to the amount of our loan of $25,000; I have forgotten the exact amount of the bonds.
Q. You were advancing the money to buy those bonds and you got an interest in it for the bank?  A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever realize anything out of that interest?  A. No.
Q. Why not?  A. I do not think it turned out as profitable as they expected.
Q. They did not put any of this money into it?  A. I could not tell you what they put in; I only know what I let them have.
Q. Did they make use of it—it does not look like it there?  A. Yes, I am quite sure they drew the money out.
Q. On December 31st there was a balance to their credit of $25,000?  A. Yes.
Q. It had not been used up to that time; where is the continuation of that account, is it not here in this other ledger, page 62?  A. I would not think so; there is no reference made here to it; possibly it is.
Q. What does “44” on this ledger refer to?  A. I do not know.
Q. You understand these books, don’t you?  A. Yes, but I cannot explain what is not here to give me any information; that to me would look like a new deposit.
Q. That is January 29th, 1909, you think there would be a new deposit by then?  A. That was in our Savings Bank Department.
Q. That would indicate, if you had no further explanation, that on December 31st they had a balance of $25,000 standing to their credit, and on January 28th they had another $25,000, making $50,000 in all?  A. That is the way it appears to me; it does not seem to me probable, but it may be so; we had the voucher for the closing out of that, and it must be on file.
Q. It shows a balance, and it must be carried somewhere?  A. It is either cheeked out or carried over in here, but the records here do not show it.—W. R. Travers.
Q. That is the two dates do not tally?  A. They do not tally.
Q. Have you no other ledger that that would appear in; would that first $25,000 appear in the missing ledger?  A. It was transferred over to the other ledger; the ledger that is missing will account for this $25,000; this one looks like a new transaction entirely. I know they put some special estate money in with me at that time.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. What estate was it, was it the Hamilton Estate?  A. Yes.
Q. They deposited money with you for the Hamilton estate, and how long did that remain with you?  A. I could not say, I should think a year probably.
Q. Was it increasing?  A. No, I think it remained stationary.
Q. How much was it?  A. I think about $50,000.
Q. On that deposit did you allow interest?  A. Yes, 4%.
Q. Was it credited up and drawn?  A. Credited to the account, my recollection is.
Q. Did they draw on that Hamilton deposit account with you at all?  A. No, not till they had closed out the estate, a long time after it was made.
Q. That was two or three years?  A. A couple of years, anyway.
Q. Was there any of it on deposit at the time of the failure?  A. I could not say if it was the Hamilton estate; we had a deposit before the failure with them of about $120,000.
Q. That is when you failed their credit balance with you was about $120,000?  A. Before the failure.
Q. And was it at the failure?  A. It had been transferred over into a loan; the deposit had been wiped out and it had been consolidated into a loan.
Q. At the time of the failure it was in the shape of a loan?  A. Yes.
Q. Did that 4% arrangement continue right up till it was transferred over into a loan?  A. My recollection is that it did.
Q. And the loan bore what?  A. 6%.
Q. It was made into a loan by them to the bank bearing 6% interest?  A. Yes.
Q. Was there any other account opened by them by way of deposit in the bank other than the Hamilton estate?  A. Yes, they had a current account with us as well.
Q. What was that called, Savings Bank?  A. No, just an ordinary current account, chequing account.
Q. Was not there a savings account; was it not so called?  A. There may be, but my recollection is it was just a current account to cheque against.
Q. Was that fairly stationary too?  A. No, we would have to refer to the books for that; I think that was active.
Q. Aggregating much in the course of a year?  A. I could not tell you; those books would not come under my eye from day to day; I saw the totals once a month; I could not tell you what was moving in them.
Q. You began to deposit your own circulation with the Trusts & Guarantee Company?  A. Yes.
Q. How early did that begin?  A. I think it was in the early part of 1908; in my examination before Judge Denton in that suit all those facts were brought out, verified by the books.
Q. I will verify these by the books, but I want to get the general course of dealing from you; if it began about the beginning of 1908 it would be just about the same time as they made that $25,000 deposit?  A. Yes, I should say so.
Q. Just look at that page, 62, does that deposit of $25,000 bear date January, 1908 or 1909?  A. 1908.
Q. Mr. Clarkson thinks that those books show differently from what you say?
Mr. COMMISSIONER: I do not understand when the bank was lending the Trusts & Guarantee Company $25,000 where that transaction appears; because this is a credit to them; they apparently handed the money back to be drawn out from the same bank or to stay in the Savings Bank; where is the debit to them of the $25,000; you lent them $25,000?  A. Yes, that was the first transaction.
Q. Where is the debit of that to them?  A. The debit appears in this book, as I understand it.
Q. Is not that a credit to them of the money, that is what I understood you to say?  A. When we made the loan we had to credit their account with the $25,000; we charged our Loan Account with $25,000 and credited their account with $25,000 to draw against.

Q. Surely if you loaned them $25,000 they owed it to you?  A. They owed it to us in the shape of a note.

Q. You had a note from them?  A. Yes.

Q. And that appears in another account?  A. Yes, that is where I am confused here.

Q. What became of that note?  A. That note was paid off in due course.

Q. Was it just one wiped off the other; just a cross entry?  A. No, the proceeds of the note went to their credit; they chequed that out, if I remember right, in $5,000 items.

Q. Went into that account or into the current account?  A. It went apparently in this account.

Q. There is no chequing out that, as I understood it; it all remained until the end.

Mr. Hodgins: That remained to the 31st December, 1907, and then Mr. Travers was unable to say just what became of that owing to the other ledger being missing.

Mr. Commissioner: How did they pay the note?  A. I think they paid it by a cheque on one of their own accounts.

Mr. Hodgins: Mr. Clarkson tells me that it was transferred and carried as a Savings Bank deposit afterwards?  A. This book would not carry that out.

Q. I am not speaking of that, that is in 1909, that page 62; I am speaking now of 1908; he says that during 1908 it was carried in the Savings Bank Account.

Mr. Commissioner: Just as it was in 1907; that, as I understand, the book evidently is the Savings Bank?  A. There was some change of accounts; it went out of one account into the other; I could not say what it was without the book.

Mr. Hodgins: I am instructed it remained there till January, 1909; would that be right, according to your recollection?  A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. That was separate and distinct from the Hamilton deposit?  A. Yes, that was a separate transaction.

Q. And I find that on the end of January, 1909, that the Hamilton deposit was $25,000 and the Savings was $25,000, making a total of $50,000?  A. Yes, I should think that was about right.

Q. You began depositing circulation early in 1908?  A. That is what I said.

Q. To what extent?  A. $1,000 a day.

Q. Kept up all through the year?  A. Yes.

Q. Sent it regularly?  A. Every morning sent down $1,000 to go to our credit there.

Q. There would be a total, according to these documents, on the 30th January, 1909, of $33,500 of circulation that had been sent down; on the Hamilton and on the Savings you were paying 4%?  A. Yes, that is my recollection.

Q. What were they paying you on the circulation?  A. They paid us 3% for a while, I don't know how long, and then the interest ceased.

Q. You had some arrangement with the company when you began depositing the circulation?  A. Yes.

Q. Will any of the books show a payment of interest on circulation?  A. Yes, the bank account with the Trusts Company will show the interest that we paid them.

Q. How long would it have borne interest?  A. I could not say exactly, it must have been a year.

Q. Mr. Commissioner: Interest that you paid them?  A. No, interest they paid us; they credited our account with interest.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Mr. Hodgins: With 3%? A. Yes.
Q. And you were paying 4% on your deposit. Mr. Clarkson thinks you paid 3 on one and 4 on the savings? A. Yes, I think that is right; I thought it was 4 on each one; the chequing account would be 3 and the savings account 4.
Q. Is your recollection that you got interest on deposits of circulation from the beginning for a year or till when you commenced to make what is called the Special Circulation Deposit? A. I could not answer that; the books will have to show that.
Q. You can tell us who you made the arrangement with? A. I made the arrangement with Mr. Warren.
Q. Regarding the deposits of circulation? A. Yes.
Q. They had a deposit with you; what did you deposit your circulation with them for? A. For the purpose of getting it out; they were paying out money over their counter every day and it was an advantage for us to use our bills.
Q. Why did you not pay it out yourself? A. We had not the chance; we had not the customers to pay it out to; you cannot give it away.
Q. You cannot? A. I mean you cannot shovel it out without something to return for it.
Q. You could not have been doing a very large business? A. We were not doing a very large business, no.
Q. During 1908; you made up your mind you would get circulation out anyway in the beginning of 1908? A. Yes.
Q. Just tell us what made you introduce the matter to Mr. Warren, because it is a little unusual? A. Not a bit; it is a very general thing all over the country; formerly they did it through private bankers.
Q. Did they do that in the bank you were connected with? A. Yes.
Q. Whose certificate you hold? A. Yes; they have their circulation paid out by other banks sometimes and by private bankers.
Q. I suppose you will agree with me that unless you get interest on it it would be no benefit to you? A. Yes, it would; the bills would be worth 5% interest to the bank all the time they are out.
Q. Tell us what the arrangement was with Mr. Warren? A. The arrangement with Mr. Warren was that in order to assist me in getting the bank circulation out that he would pay out over his counter, for cheques drawn upon his institution and for which the money would remain at our credit, that we would not draw on him for that money, he would allow us 3% on it; I think it was 3%, I am not quite sure; it might have been 2½%.
Q. He would allow you whatever you put in 3½ on, whatever you put in as circulation, irrespective of whether he paid it out or not? A. Yes.
Q. Is that the arrangement? A. Yes, that was the arrangement.
Q. That if you deposited $1,000 a day? A. He passed it to our credit the same as if it was gold went in there.
Q. That would be in round numbers $25,000 a month; you would be getting 3% interest on that $25,000? A. Yes, that is my recollection.
Q. There is no trace of interest on it in the bank book; did you say it began with interest being paid upon it? A. Yes, that is my recollection.
Q. Why was the payment of interest discontinued? A. It was discontinued, my recollection is, after about a year. Mr. Warren thought that the accommodation that he was giving us was sufficient without paying interest.
Q. What accommodation was he giving you? A. When we were short in the Clearing House for gold he would give us his cheque on the Bank of Montreal and let us get gold for it.
Q. For nothing? A. Yes.
Q. Just go down and ask him for a cheque and he would give you a cheque?
A. Yes, he gave me a cheque several times.
Q. Irrespective of the state of the accounts? A. No, in respect to our balance there.
Q. Your balance of circulation? A. It was circulation we deposited, yes; but that was cash; we had to redeem the circulation.
Q. I am asking you whether you meant it was in addition to your circulation deposit? A. For deposit circulation and otherwise.
Q. Because you know they had a deposit with you, very large sums? A. Yes.
Q. And if you set one off against the other there would not be much balance to your credit? A. At times like that when we needed money one was not set off against the other.
Q. It was, however, arranged that they were to be kept pretty well even? A. That was the understanding without any arrangement.
Q. That is, that they would deposit with you this Savings Bank and the Hamilton estate and you would keep them supplied with circulation about to balance it? A. We would keep our balance up with them about the same figure as near as possible.
Q. And you would pay 4% and 3% on what you owed them, and they would pay 3 on what they owed you in the way of circulation? A. Yes, that is my recollection.
Q. In other words, this circulation was treated as a debt from them to you? A. Circulation was treated as a deposit the same as any other person would go and make a deposit.
Q. A debt to you? A. Yes.
Q. Could you get it at any time? A. Yes, we could draw any time, although there was an understanding between Mr. Warren and myself that we would not draw suddenly on them for it.
Q. You say it was a benefit to you? A. Yes.
Q. What benefit would it be, outside of whatever interest you got from it? A. The benefit was as long as those bills were in the pockets of the people it was worth 5% to the bank.
Q. I would like to understand why? A. Simply because they were free deposits; circulation of the bank means free deposits, it costs us nothing except the printing of them.
Q. If you give it to the Trusts Company? A. They paid out the circulation to the people over the counter.
Q. You gave them to the Trusts Company and they paid you 3%, they would reap all the benefit of the circulation? It would be the same as any person else depositing with them, they would allow their regular customers 3% on their deposits; ours was no different; we were depositing cash with them.
Q. And you were getting interest on your deposits? A. We were.
Q. You cannot pretend you got any benefit from the circulation, you transferred that benefit to them? A. I certainly did get benefit; no banker can deny the fact that his circulation is a valuable asset to him, valuable profit.
Q. If he issues it? A. We did issue it.
Q. Either for a loan or in case of some deposit in the bank; but you would not for a moment say if a banker took circulation and gave it to somebody who would then pay his own debts with it that that would be any benefit to the bank? A. It certainly would; they paid it out for us and left the money at our credit, and that credit showed in our statements as cash reserve on hand.
Q. That is not benefit from circulation? A. Yes, it is.
Q. It is benefit from having put something into the bank? A. When they paid this circulation over the counter it was a profit to the bank.
Q. I fail to see it? A. Because you do not understand the business. If you get a note in your pocket of $1,000 for which you pay no interest on it, you are making money on it, are you not?

Q. I thought they were paying you interest for this? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: But you see he used paper not bearing any interest, he used it as money? A. Yes.

MR. HODGINS: He did not use it as money.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Yes, he deposited it as cash with the bank; they took it as cash, and that was non-interest bearing paper.

MR. HODGINS: Eliminate the question of interest on that, what possible benefit does it do to the bank to deposit its circulation with anybody? I quite understand if I had $1,000 to my credit, and get circulation from the bank and use that around that is benefit to the bank; but it is no benefit to me if you give it to me and I do not owe you anything? A. If you take a thousand dollars of bank bills and keep them in your pocket, I have a thousand dollars to loan to somebody at 6%.

Q. Why? A. I have that thousand dollars.

Q. What thousand—the thousand dollars that you have given me? A. Yes.

Q. Not unless I owe it to you, if I have given you a note for it? A. I got a note from the Trusts Company in the shape of a pass book.

MR. COMMISSIONER: This is academic; apparently you cannot convince him.

MR. HODGINS: I fail to see how you can use your circulation handed to somebody else to pay their debts with and pretend that the bank was getting the benefit of it by circulation.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It seems to me very plain, as it seems to the witness? A. It is hard to explain these things to a man who does not understand banking.

MR. HODGINS: You are the man who understood banking and look where the bank landed? A. It is a pity I had not had you for a solicitor.

Q. I do not find that other banks in good standing give their circulation to other people to pay their debts with? A. They certainly do not give it away; but, take a private bank, they will give the bank a note for ten thousand dollars and they will take the bank’s circulation out and pay it over the counter to their customers, and all the time while that circulation is not called upon, while the bank is not called upon to reduce its reserve by paying it back or clearing it, it is worth 5%.

Q. You had no circulation from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. I certainly did; I got a bank deposit.

Q. That is the benefit you are speaking of, not the benefit of circulation? A. And the benefit of circulation.

Q. I see benefit in one way? A. We got two benefits from it; it was all one sided as far as we were concerned.

Q. Let us take a concrete case, because I have not been able to understand this method of banking; take the case of a thousand dollars, you deposit that circulation of a thousand dollars with them? A. Yes.

Q. What benefit, apart from their circulating, did you get from that? A. I will tell you in a few words; they place that thousand dollars to my credit, which is equal to a thousand dollars in gold, if I needed it.

Q. Why? A. Because I could draw upon them for it if I needed it.

Q. That is you could get it back?

MR. COMMISSIONER: Get the money.

MR. HODGINS: Yes? A. I could then take one thousand dollars out of my gold reserve and loan it to you if you came in; and if I had not that thousand dollars down there I could not do it.

Q. Why? A. Because good banking you are supposed to keep a certain amount of cash on hand, and I would not wish to deplete the amount; you might come in for a loan and I cannot give you money; we cannot go any lower; but if I had one thousand dollars deposit in circulation down there if they would pay me it I could reduce my reserve to the extent of those deposits.

Q. You mean you had a bank book showing you had a thousand dollars on deposit there, and you could use it in a bank statement?  A. Yes, I could use it, because I could draw it any time I wanted.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Not in the bank statement, he could use it in money.

MR. HODGINS: I think it is playing upon words.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You could draw a cheque upon it?  A. Do you mean to say if you have a thousand dollars in your bank book it is not worth anything to you?

MR. HODGINS: If he has had a thousand dollars on deposit he can get that back from the Trusts & Guarantee Company.

MR. COMMISSIONER: He does not get back circulation, he gets money?  A. No, I get cash.

MR. HODGINS: Was the arrangement that you were to get back money?  A. Whenever I needed it.

Q. You were to get money instead of circulation?  A. Actually get gold from the Bank of Montreal for it.

Q. You will agree with me this far that the Trusts & Guarantee Company might have kept that in their vaults and not circulated, and you would have had that benefit?  A. Just the same.

Q. Then what benefit did you get by their circulating?  A. Because I had not to redeem it until it reached the Clearing House, and as long as it was so it was a free deposit to me.

Q. If they had not circulated at all?  A. Just the same we would have the money to draw if they did not pay it out, it made no difference to us whether it was in their pocket or yours.

Q. If they did not circulate it you gained no benefit in that way?  A. It made no difference to us.

Q. It made no difference whether they circulated it or not?  A. No.

Q. Would it not come back if they circulated it?  A. Yes, we would have to meet it through the Clearing House.

Q. If they did not circulate it—you got no benefit by their circulating it—?  A. Yes.

Q. What benefit did you get?  A. Advertised the bank for one thing, kept our bills circulating around. It would be better for us if they had locked it up in the vault.

Q. I do not see how the getting of your circulation out was a benefit to the bank?  A. It was a benefit to the bank; it did not make any difference whether it was in their vault or in your pocket.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It was to their interest to get it out.

MR. HODGINS: Whose interest

MR. COMMISSIONER: The Trusts & Guarantee Company.

MR. HODGINS: It was not to the Bank's interest to get it out  A. Yes.

Q. We will have to leave it that way; I still think I am right?  A. You will have to argue stronger than that to change me.

Q. Did you pay it out?  A. They used to pay it out regularly every day as far as I know.

Q. It used to keep coming back to you?  A. A certain amount of it; the life of a bill is five weeks.

Q. You had to pay it?  A. Through the Clearing House.

Q. And still the amount remained to your credit that you had deposited?  A. If we had the funds on hand we would not disturb that account, if we had not we would go down to them and get a cheque on the Bank of Montreal and get some gold.
Q. Did you always do that, get gold? A. The same thing.
Q. Or get their cheque? A. Just the same thing.
Q. Will you say you did that continuously? A. We frequently did it.
Q. What was the usual course, to get back circulation? A. No, we never took the circulation back.
Q. What did you get then? A. I told you, I cannot make it any plainer; I got a cheque on the Bank of Montreal, which was gold.
Q. That was the invariable course? A. Always when they paid us the money they gave us a cheque on the Bank of Montreal.
Q. You never got circulation? A. Never got circulation back from them.
Q. At any time? A. Not that I remember, never got a dollar's worth back.
Q. Do you still say that the interest ceased upon the deposit of circulation about the end of the year? A. I do not know; you will have to look at the books.
Q. About the end of the year? A. It ceased at some time; the books will speak for themselves.
Q. From that time on you got no interest on the circulation? A. I do not remember.
Q. But you still paid interest on the deposit? A. I think so.
Q. There is no doubt about that? A. The books will speak for themselves. I cannot remember those dates.
Q. The account went on in 1909, went on during 1909 and 1910, didn't it? A. I believe it went on up to shortly before the bank failed.
Q. Then you would be paying interest on the total amount of the Hamilton Estate and the Savings? A. Yes.
Q. If the accounts were set off against one another the balance would be comparatively small, would it not? A. That is my recollection, yes.
Q. Why was the interest discounted on the circulation? A. I explained that to you a little while ago.
Q. Would you mind giving it to me again? A. I told you Mr. Warren thought it was one sided, and I did too, and we stopped it.
Q. What was one sided? A. Paying us interest on the deposit, and paying out our circulation made it one sided.
Q. Was not that a benefit to the Trusts & Guarantee Company to pay out your circulation? A. No. What benefit to them? They could pay out Bank of Montreal bills.
Q. Was it a benefit to them? A. Not to have our circulation, not a dollar except for the deposit at the credit.
Q. They had this circulation deposited by you at regular intervals, and they could use that to pay their own debts.
Q. And they thought that benefit was not worth paying you interest upon? A. Yes.
Q. Do you say so far as the books are concerned throughout it would show a balance in the Savings and in the Hamilton Estate and a debt in the circulation accounts? A. I suppose the books will speak for themselves.
Q. There was no withdrawal from the circulation account was there? A. I do not remember; the books will speak for themselves; I think we did draw practically as I said before, when we were short we drew on them and they never made any objection.
Q. That was by sending a cheque on the Trusts & Guarantee Company, and they would give you a cheque on the Bank of Montreal? A. Yes.
Q. In those cases they would be charged against the circulation account? A. Yes, that is what I recollect.
Q. The interest would amount to a very large sum on the daily balance if the total in circulation account was set off against the deposits they had with you; you realized that, did not you? A. I did not quite catch what you said.
Q. The interest on the daily balance as between the two accounts would amount to a very large rate?  A. It would amount to a certain amount of money, the average balance there.

Q. The average would be three and a half per cent., and on the total in the Savings and Hamilton Estate it ran up something like at one time to over two hundred thousand dollars; whereas the circulation account ran up to one hundred and twenty thousand; there is one case they ran up to over two hundred and eighteen thousand dollars; what was the object of keeping that up all the time? there must have come a time in the history of the bank when you had business enough to do it if you were doing a legitimate business, to want all your circulation?  No, we were not; we were falling behind.

Q. Was the reason that the cash had been so depleted in one way or another by investments that the bank had made?  A. Yes.

Q. Such as the Keeley mine, and others?  A. Yes.

Q. When did that state of affairs intervene and make it necessary to continue this deposit of circulation?  A. During the last year of the bank’s existence, more particularly, than otherwise.

Q. That would be 1910?  A. Yes.

Q. I understood from the evidence given on some of the other occasions that the Trusts & Guarantee Company made objections from time to time to giving you cheques when you sent down for money on the ground that the two accounts, their deposits and your circulation deposit with them, were to be kept about even, and that they did not want to part with the money, and that you had to go down several times and straighten it out with Mr. Warren?  A. Yes, I had to go down several times to get a cheque for the money.

Q. And put it on personal grounds with him owing to the understanding?  A. No, I do not know that that was exactly put that way. Mr. Warren would want to know why we were drawing so freely; usually people carrying deposits with other people want to have some warning before they are drawn out, and we would drop on him suddenly, and one of his officers would object, and as soon as I would hear of the objection I would go down and see Mr. Warren and explain matters and it would pass through.

Q. What explanation would you offer him?  A. I could not tell you now, probably the withdrawal at some branch suddenly, a sudden withdrawal of money that we would require to meet; I would get notice from the branch that they had issued settlement cheque on Toronto for a certain amount of money, I would know I would be short in the Clearing House next day.

Q. He must have realized that keeping this sort of thing up meant the bank was in poor condition?  A. I could not say that; Mr. Warren had confidence in me.

Q. You realized it?  A. I realized we were sailing against danger, and could not help realizing it.

Q. Did you not tell him so?  A. No, I did not see any chance for him losing anything.

Q. What loans were made by the Trusts Company to you during the pendency of this arrangement?  A. At what time do you speak?

Q. You began depositing circulation in 1908, and they began depositing with you in 1909?  A. Yes, the first loan I made with them was $75,000, I do not remember the date of it, on the security of $120,000 of the American Piano Company. The next loan was for $100,000 on the security of the Keeley mine bonds; and then that was all consolidated into a new loan of $295,000 or $300,000.

Q. I see I was in error; it was in December, 1908, that the deposit account in the bank by the Trusts Company began, and it was not until January, 1909, that you deposited circulation. I put the dates the other way. I am instructed by the liquidator that no interest was received on the circulation except on what is called the special circulation account, which was an additional one to the circulation account, that except on that account no interest was received on circulation? A. The liquidator is a very careful and correct man, and if he finds this state of affairs in the books I am not prepared to contradict that; but my recollection is we were getting interest and it may be some fault of the branch office in not collecting it.

Q. What branch office was this done in? A. Toronto branch.

Q. Who was the manager? A. I had several managers during that time.

Q. Who did you put it down as being the fault of? A. I do not say it was the fault of anybody; I say it might have been.

Q. I suppose from the standpoint of statements to the Government you would use what appeared in the Bank's books and the Trusts & Guarantee Company's books as indicating you had a large deposit with the Trusts? A. We would enter it under item 29, which says, "Other assets not included in the foregoing heads," and at the bottom of the statement I would make a memorandum, "This includes eighty thousand dollars," or whatever the amount might have been deposited with the Trusts Company; that was in accordance with instructions I got from Ottawa, if my recollection is right, when I first wrote them about it.

Q. That is with regard to that reversed entry; but I am speaking of the circulation which commenced in 1909, and which crept up at the rate of a thousand dollars a month, would you show the aggregate of that from time to time as being among the deposits of the bank? A. As I explained before, circulation went to our credit, and whatever balance was there was used with the Government to show a reserve.

Q. When you say balance you mean whatever total that circulation account showed? A. The balance at our credit.

Q. Not the balance between the two accounts? A. No, the money they had with us we showed as deposits.

Q. The loan was seventy-five thousand dollars; on what security was that taken? A. The American Piano Company stock, 1,300 shares, $120,000 worth.

Q. What was the reason why that loan was made? A. It was the withdrawal of our deposits at that time, I cannot say just where it was.

Q. From where? A. I think it was from Haileybury; the Manager there went over to another bank and carried away some fifty or sixty thousand dollars of our deposits with him.

Q. You mean he transferred them to another bank? A. He had the people transfer them.

Q. It was not a case of defalcation? A. No, simply transferring.

Q. At that time you had about one hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars of deposit with the Trusts Company? A. Yes.

Q. Why did it become necessary to make a loan? A. Because I had drawn the seventy-five thousand dollars out of my deposit, the cash reserve would have been depleted that amount, and it would not look well.

Q. This $123,000 was treated then as part of your cash reserve? A. Yes.

Q. They lent you seventy-five thousand dollars, did they put that to your credit? A. Yes.

Q. In actual money? A. Actual money.

Q. You owed them at that time on their deposit account about one hundred and seventy-two thousand dollars? A. Very likely.

Q. Which would make it altogether about $247,000? A. If that is the state of the books it must be right.

Q. Where did you get this one hundred and twenty thousand dollars of American Piano Company's stock? A. I exchanged it for stock in the bank.

Q. That is known as the Tevis—? A. Yes, the Tevis-Knabe transaction.

Q. At all events you had this $120,000 piano stock and you pledged it to them? A. Yes.
Q. And did you agree to pay interest on that? A. Yes.
Q. At what rate? A. Six per cent I think.
Q. That was about the 4th February, 1910? A. Very likely.
Q. The same year that the bank failed? A. Very likely.
Q. Who did you arrange that loan with? A. Mr. Warren.
Q. Did you explain the situation of the bank at that time? A. No, I explained the situation of why I needed the money only.
Q. What was your explanation? A. As I told you a few minutes ago, there were withdrawals from our branch if I remember right at Haileybury.
Q. You explained that to him? A. Yes.
Q. And told him you wanted this put in the shape of a loan? A. Placed to our credit, yes.
Q. Why did you not draw the amount from the circulation account that you had on deposit? A. I have just explained that to you; I cannot make it any clearer.
Q. If you had drawn a cheque on it for seventy-five thousand dollars they would have honored it, would not they? A. Yes.
Q. That would have been just as good to you as making a loan? A. No, my balance at the end of the month of available assets would have been reduced to too low a figure altogether; it was only a question of selling that stock or making a loan on it.
Q. The result, however, would be misleading to an outsider? A. I do not think so.
Q. When was the next loan made? A. If I remember right it was in July of 1910.
Q. Was it not in April? A. The one hundred thousand?
Q. The next loan? A. I do not think so.
Q. Was not that the case of a deposit receipt being issued, four per cent, for $120,000? A. That was a cross entry in the books; that is the deposit of the Trusts Company with us.
Q. What was the occasion of that? A. I could not answer that; they wished to have it transferred from one account to the other; I saw no objection to it.
Q. I am instructed Mr. Warren was leaving for the West and wanted to put the indebtedness of the bank into a different shape? A. Yes, I remember something about that.
Q. And you had in the savings account and the Hamilton account some $123,000? A. Yes, very likely.
Q. And that for that or for the largest part of it you issued a deposit receipt? A. Yes.
Q. What was the object of that as explained by Mr. Warren? A. The deposits as they stood then were subject to call; the deposit after we issued the deposit receipt was subject to fifteen days notice, it was an advantage to the bank to have them in that shape.
Q. It was not Mr. Warren’s suggestion? A. I cannot say whether it was Mr. Warren’s suggestion entirely.
Q. What would you say? A. It may have been mine, knowing he was going away and not knowing who would have the say down there regarding the withdrawal of the deposit, very likely it was mine—I do not know what Mr. Warren says on that point, but I would not like to contradict him.
Q. It would seem to me rather a dangerous thing to go to a manager of a Trust Company and say to him, “Now, you are going away, and I do not want this deposit suddenly withdrawn”? A. I do not think so at all; every banker is sensitive about his deposits, and naturally would take every means he could to prevent their being taken away from him, withdrawn.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. These had been with you a very long time on this same arrangement that you speak of? A. Yes; if you had ten thousand dollars in the bank, and the banker heard you were going to take it off somewhere else and he called on you and begged of you to leave it there, you would not think the bank was wrong, would you?

Q. I am not saying you are wrong; I want to get the point of view? A. The point of view was a change of the deposit from being payable without notice to being paid after notice.

Q. And the deposit receipt was issued for the $120,000? A. I believe it was.

Q. And handed to Mr. Warren? A. Or some clerk that called for it.

Q. It was arranged with Mr. Warren, anyway? A. Yes.

Q. Did he inquire as to the condition of the bank? A. He never inquired as to the condition of the bank from start to finish; I do not think he ever doubted it.

Q. He must have had some of your optimism? A. Very likely he did; it was a good thing he had in one way, and a bad thing in another.

Q. You had become good personal friends by this time? A. We were good friends always.

Q. Then how long was Mr. Warren away? I could not say how long.

Q. Was he away for the summer? A. He was away for a few months.

Q. Any length of time? A. I do not remember, I did not keep track of it.

Q. What was being done with your circulation during that time, was it being deposited? A. Yes; my recollection is we went on depositing the same as usual.

Q. Was it being withdrawn. did you have any sudden calls that you had to send down cheques to the company while he was away? A. We had calls on our deposits, yes.

Q. Had you to send cheques down to the company? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any difficulty then? A. Sometimes.

Q. Who was making difficulty? A. I understood Mr. Morden, the new manager.

Q. He was acting in Mr. Warren's place? A. Yes.

Q. And who else, did you see any one else but him during that time? A. No, I do not think I ever had any business with anybody else there.

Q. Had you to go down and persuade Mr. Morden to allow you to withdraw? A. Yes.

What was his reason for objecting? A. If I remember right, he took the ground that we should not withdraw our balance if they did not withdraw theirs from us; in other words, they should be kept at the same level.

Q. So that from their point of view they were doing you a favor in cashing a cheque? A. They were.

Q. But they did it, nevertheless? A. Yes.

Q. When did trouble begin down at the Lindsay Branch of the bank? A. It would be, I think, in July, 1910.

Q. Had Warren returned? A. Warren was at home at that time.

Q. Did you inform him of the situation created by the Lindsay trouble? A. I did.

Q. And the bank would have to look to the company for assistance? A. I did.

Q. That would be in July, 1910? A. I believe so.

Q. The state of affairs at that time was that there was the American Piano Company's stock put up as security for the amount that was due represented partly by a deposit receipt? A. Seventy-five thousand dollars; we followed the usual custom when securities are deposited that way, collateral security, one loan to make them run with the others—
Q. Would that mean American Piano Company's stock had been made collateral with the deposit receipt for one hundred and twenty thousand dollars?
A. No, it had nothing to do with that whatever.

Q. It would only stand for the $75,000?  A. For the seventy-five thousand dollars, and whatever the clause in the document was worth covering any other debts.

Q. There was no new hypothecation made of the piano stock at the time the deposit receipt was issued?  A. No.

Q. What was the result of your informing Mr. Warren of the state of affairs?  A. They loaned me one hundred thousand dollars.

Q. In addition to what you already owed them?  A. Yes.

Q. How many bonds of the Keeley mine?  A. One million dollars, the bonds were.

Q. Who was the holder of these bonds?  A. They were held by the bank as collateral.

Q. What other security?  A. Nothing at that time.

Q. What bonus was given?  A. No bonus.

Q. None at all at that time?  A. Not at that time.

Q. Was there any stock given as security?  A. I think it was after the loan had gone to our credit.

Q. Immediately after or some time after?  A. It seems to me it was twenty or thirty days after.

Q. Had it any connection with the loan?  A. Yes.

Q. What connection had it?  A. I have to take back something I said. You asked me if I had seen anybody else at that time.

Q. Yes?  A. I had spoken to Mr. Stratton; I had been up to Peterborough one Sunday and had a conversation with him; that was the origin of the stock of the Keeley mine that you are referring to I suppose being transferred?

Q. Yes; you saw Mr. Stratton before this hundred thousand-dollar loan?  A. I would have to see the date the loan was made; it seems to me, as far as I can recollect, it was about that time. If my memory is right, Mr. Warren had advanced me a certain amount and wished to have it confirmed by Mr. Stratton.

Q. In consequence of that, you saw Mr. Stratton?  A. I went to Mr. Stratton's house one Sunday; I think it was in July.

Q. The loan went through?  A. Yes.

Q. The security being a million dollars of bonds of the Keeley mine?  A. Yes.

Q. In addition, anything else?  A. We transferred twenty-five thousand dollars of the Keeley mine stock to Mr. Stockdale in trust as a bonus, and fifty thousand dollars to Mr. Stratton in trust, as I understood it, as an additional security.

Q. Who is Mr. Stockdale?  A. He is local manager of the Trusts Company.

Q. You speak of that as being a bonus?  A. Yes, a bonus on the one hundred thousand dollars; I was wrong, it had not come to my mind at the time you asked me first; I was thinking of the cash bonus.

Q. Bonus to whom?  A. Bonus to the Trusts Company.

Q. What was the fifty thousand dollars of stock to Mr. Stratton?  A. Mr. Stratton suggested that being down as an additional security.

Q. For whom?  A. I do not know who it was for, it was in trust; it was not explained to me; it was in his name in trust.

Q. And the bonds of the Keeley mine were put into whose name?  A. They were hypothecated to the Trusts Company.

Q. Why was the difference made between the bonds and the fifty thousand of stock, one put in the name of the company and the other Mr. Stratton's name in trust? A. The bonds were issued in the usual course to secure the bank, and the bank—
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Secure the company? A. Well, they were issued to secure the bank for the bank’s loans, that is as originally issued.

Q. Why in dealing with the Trusts Company was the million dollars of bonds put in the name of the Trusts Company, and the fifty thousand dollars of stock in the name of Mr. Stratton? A. Stock and bonds in the company, as you ought to know are two different things altogether; the stock is very little use until the bonds are paid off.

Q. I am asking why one was put in one name and another in the other? A. Bonds were issued for the purpose of protecting the bank, and when the bank needed money it transferred them to the Trusts Company as security.

Q. If this fifty thousand was additional security, why was it put in a different name? A. I cannot answer it.

Q. Did it originate out of your talk with Mr. Stratton? A. Yes, it originated that way; he suggested it and I did it.

Q. Was that part of your arrangement with Warren? A. No, he never suggested it.

Q. What became of this stock? A. I do not know; I heard it was transferred back to the liquidator.

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: No, but it will be if I want it transferred; it is in the same position still.

Mr. Hodgins: That provided you with one hundred thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. How was that paid to you? A. By cheques on the Bank of Montreal for which we got gold.

Q. To the full amount? A. I believe we withdrew every dollar of it.

Q. Would that apply to the previous seventy-five thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. That would be $175,000 which they gave you as equivalent to gold and in your own circulation? A. We never got any of our circulation for that; I keep telling you that from time to time.

Q. Did you get further assistance from them? A. Yes, we got further assistance from them.

Q. In what shape? A. We deposited larger sums of our circulation after that, and they gave us a cheque on the Bank of Montreal in return for it.

Q. Is that an isolated case? A. Yes.

Q. What was the amount of that? A. I could not tell you, sometimes it was five and sometimes ten thousand dollars; I could not tell you exact.

Q. What months was this in? A. I should say the last few months prior to the bank’s failure.

Q. It failed what date in December? A. The 19th December, 1910.

Q. During August and September, were you still depositing circulation? A. Yes.

Q. You largely increased the amount per day? A. Yes, we did, so I should say; we made two deposits if I remember right; we deposited the usual thousand and then we would deposit occasionally a larger amount.

Mr. Commissioner: In another account? A. No, sir, the same account.

Mr. Hodgins: What use did you make of that, getting cheques from them? A. Got gold for it.

Q. Would the two balance each other during that period? A. My recollection is that those transactions one offset the other.

Q. Any objection from the Trusts Company? A. Mr. Morden, if it was during his time, I think it was some of it was done, he objected to it.

Q. With what result? A. Without any particular result; it never ended in their stopping us; they still continued to assist us that way up to the very last.
Q. You had to overcome Mr. Morden's objections; how did you do it? A. I think they overcame themselves; I think he saw it was reasonable to help us.

Q. You did not have to see anybody? A. No.

Q. Did you not see Mr. Warren or Mr. Stratton? A. Later on just before the bank failed I did.

Q. That would be in October, would it; I am told it was October 26th, 1910, that you made a new loan, or thereabouts, the final loan? A. Of how much?

Q. Did you never make a loan subsequent to that one hundred thousand dollars? A. I consolidated all the loans together including the deposit that they had with us.

Q. Was I right in mentioning that as the end of October? A. I would think so.

Q. Who did you negotiate that loan with? A. I negotiated that loan with Mr. Morden, Mr. Stratton and Mr. Matthew Wilson, of Chatham.

Q. Was that consolidation brought about by any pressure from the Trusts Company? A. Yes; Mr. Morden, if I remember rightly, he either sent us word verbally or wrote to us that he wished to withdraw the one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

Q. Gave you fifteen days notice? A. Gave us notice.

Q. And that brought about? A. That brought about the consolidation.

Q. What form did it take? A. The consolidation?

Q. Yes. A. We gave them a new note for two hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars, if I recollect, I am not sure whether it was two hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars or three hundred thousand, I think it was two hundred and ninety-five thousand, and they put that to our credit and we chequed out and paid off the old loans with that.

Q. What security did you give them for that? A. I gave them all they had previously and farmers' notes and others of the bank that the bank had under discount, I do not remember the amount. It was a large amount though.

Q. That would be the Keeley mine's bonds one million dollars? A. Yes.

Q. The American Piano Company stock one hundred and twenty thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. And then I am instructed that it was one hundred and eight thousand dollars of farmers' notes? A. Yes, all of that.

Q. They still were to the fore, these farmers' notes? A. Not the same notes at all.

Q. More farmers? A. Those were notes for money we had loaned to farmers to buy sheep and cattle and hogs and other things.

Q. That loan then consolidated practically the whole thing and gave you the additional credit, in other words you did not owe them any two hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars, would that be right? A. I believe there was a balance in our favor; the books will show what it was.

Q. I am told there was a credit of about sixty-eight thousand dollars? A. I would not dispute that.

Q. At that time had you any idea, was there any discussion about the amount you had on deposit with them; was any account taken of it, in the way of circulation? A. They had on or about that time a certain amount of circulation that they had not paid out.

Q. Do you remember about how much? A. I should say it was fifty or sixty thousand dollars.

Q. Was anything said about setting it off? A. Mr. Morden wanted it out of the road; he did not care about carrying it.

Q. What was done with it? A. We redeemed it from time to time by cheques on our balance.

Q. After the loan was consolidated? A. After the loan was consolidated, that is my recollection, I cannot speak positively on that.
Q. In dealing with the loan there was no credit taken for the amount of circulation on hand? A. No, that was a special matter.

Q. It had never been taken into consideration in making any one of these loans? A. Yes.

Q. Always treated as if it did not exist so far as the amount of the loan was concerned? A. Yes.

Q. Had they when the bank failed a large amount of your circulation? A. I believe they had.

Q. How much do you think they had?

Mr. G. T. Clarkson: Five or ten thousand dollars, I understood? A. They had all of that any way.

Mr. Commissioner: What was done with this balance at the credit of the bank in the circulation account as it is called; was that deducted when consolidated? A. No, those special deposits.

Q. The account that had been running all the time that was intended to be kept even with their deposit account, how was that dealt with in this consolidation? A. After the consolidation was completed we practically had the same amount to our credit as before.

Mr. Hodgins: A very large sum? A. Sixty or seventy thousand dollars, I do not remember.

Q. In the circulation account?

Mr. Commissioner: That account stood at over one hundred thousand dollars? A. It did at one time, not at that time, that is when we were being drawn upon.

Mr. Hodgins: The total in the circulation account appears on the 31st October, 1910, to be $73,161? A. I presume that is right.

Q. And the totals of the loans and deposit, you having put part of the credits into the form of a loan, would be two hundred and ninety-nine thousand dollars? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Then the seventy-three thousand dollars was not taken into account at all but left outstanding? A. It was left outstanding to our credit.

Q. After that you had as far as I can see in the neighborhood of sixty-eight or seventy thousand dollars to your credit in the circulation account? A. We had that at our credit; I cannot say it was exactly on circulation account.

Q. From that point of time when the last consolidation took place did you draw against that circulation account? A. I believe we did.

Q. Did you draw freely or had you to put up security to get it? A. Yes, we had to deposit various things with them in order to get it, sterling exchange and drafts on New York and drafts on Buffalo, and drafts on Chicago, and different places.

Q. Did you get this out in gold or in the form of your own circulation? A. I got it out the way I have told you, through a cheque on the Bank of Montreal.

Q. Then when the end of the bank came there would be very little in the circulation account then? A. I believe the figures given you, ten thousand dollars, would be nearly right, although I thought it was higher than that.

Q. So that the Trusts Company came out with their whole debt secured? A. Absolutely, I would say so.

Q. And you pledged in order to get the balance of your circulation back from them, or the equivalent of your circulation, you had pledged other securities or handed them over? A. Some of that circulation was taken back in this way; special circulation that you refer to was in large denominations, and they had to ship to Calgary and to Brantford and I believe some other points, and we would go down and take up this circulation by sending the smaller bills, five thousand dollars at a time, to Calgary and getting the larger bills back again.
Mr. Commissioner: Why should you give them these drafts and sterling bills? A. In order to get a cheque on the Bank of Montreal in order to get some money for the Clearing House.

Q. If they were fully secured why was that needed? A. At that time we had to deposit as much as we wished to withdraw every day, Mr. Morden was unwilling for us to reduce that balance for some reason or other; if we needed ten thousand dollars say to-day we would have to provide practically ten thousand—

Q. Was that because they were unable to get the circulation out? A. Yes, I would say so.

Mr. Hodgens: In addition to the securities you put up for that loan they would get practically cash for any cash they gave you? A. Yes, I think my recollection is we deposited the equivalent of cash each time.

Q. And if they had none of your actual circulation on hand they must have used the difference between what was left in their hands and what the account showed? A. I do not quite understand you.

Q. If the account showed about sixty or seventy thousand dollars to the credit of that circulation account they would not allow you to draw on that and give you gold for it? A. I think as a matter of fact they did allow us to draw.

Q. That is what I do not understand? A. The books will show that; I cannot remember those things down to every item; my recollection is we drew against that account right up to the date of the failure.

Q. I understood you to say in order to get them to honor your drawings you had to put up other securities? A. Yes, we did.

Q. To the same amount? A. Yes; I cannot tell you how that balance was on the day of the failure.

Q. That does not seem that they ought to have reduced that circulation account at all; they had no business to charge it up; Mr. Clarkson probably knows more about that, the details of that; he thinks they allowed you to draw in addition to amounts you put up so that the circulation account was gradually reduced? A. That was my recollection; I think you are mistaken on that, because I think we only drew what we deposited, and the other withdrawals was for circulation we shipped away; for instance, if we drew fifteen thousand dollars, ten thousand would be for an equivalent of cash that we deposited, and five thousand would be of our own circulation to be shipped to Calgary office; that is my recollection of it.

Q. That is they would have that five thousand back? A. Yes.

Q. And you shipped it off to Calgary, and staved off the evil day in that way, it would not come back so soon? A. It helped, yes.

Q. That was the case that I thought had occurred, where you got back actually your own circulation from the vaults of the Trusts Company? A. I misunderstood you. While that came back in that way it is still paid out by them.

Q. They shipped? A. No, we shipped smaller bills, charging them with it and got back the other bills.

Mr. Commissioner: Why would you charge them with it if you got the large bills and sent the small bills to your own agent; that did not help them? A. It helped us.

Q. Would not they reduce their owing to you by the amount of the large bills they returned; if they gave you ten thousand dollars of large bills back that reduced their indebtedness by that amount, didn’t it? A. We would have to draw on our account, our circulation account reduced that ten thousand dollars in order to get that; then we would rebuild that again by the shipment to Calgary.

Q. You would not charge that re-establishment to the Trusts Company? A. Yes.

Q. Why, they did not get it? A. It is their office up there.

Q. Oh, it is their office? A. Yes.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

MR. HODGINS: What was the highest point that your circulation reached during the currency of the bank? A. I could not say, I think it was in the neighborhood of half a million; I do not know the figures at the present time exactly.

Q. If this circulation account with the Trusts and Guarantee Company ran up to over two hundred thousand dollars—? A. It never did; we were redeeming it and redeeming it all the time; we never had that amount of our circulation in their hands.

Q. That is what the records show? A. No, it does not show that at all; they might have ten thousand dollars; at one time they had about fifty or sixty thousand dollars on hand, but they have paid it over their counter, and it filtered through the Clearing House; we were taking it up from time to time.

Q. You remitted this circulation through them? A. Yes.

Q. And if that ran up to one hundred thousand or one hundred and fifty thousand or two hundred thousand that shows the circulation went out through them and not over the counter of the bank? A. It meant they paid that out to the public, and it was in the pockets of the people.

Q. I am not disputing that at all; I am simply indicating the proportion you got rid of through this Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Yes.

Q. And that was a very large proportion of your circulation? A. It was a certain amount.

Q. A very substantial amount? A. It helped us very much.

Q. It grew larger instead of smaller as the business of the bank went on? A. No, it did not grow any larger except for the special deposits that I spoke of in circulation; the thousand dollars a day went along from the time it started until the end of the bank.

Q. The circulation account would increase? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It would be turning over and coming back again? A. Certainly.

Q. It would not be the whole of that necessarily? A. Certainly not; the average would be twenty-five thousand dollars.

MR. HODGINS: What do you mean by the average? A. The average that they were paying out for us.

Q. You mean you kept about twenty-five thousand dollars going the rounds, you depositing with them and they getting it out and then getting it back again? A. They pay out twenty-five thousand dollars in one month and we would have redeemed through the Clearing House that twenty-five thousand dollars by the time they paid out another twenty-five thousand dollars.

Q. The net result you think would be that about twenty-five thousand dollars of circulation could be kept revolving in that way and yet produce an account which you could show in the bank returns of something between one hundred and two hundred thousand? A. Certainly, with the borrowing I made from them.

Q. That is good banking? A. I think so; you may not think so, but I thought so.

The Commission adjourned at 1 p.m. to 2.15 p.m.

The Commission resumed at 2.15 p.m.

J. G. FITZGIBBON, recalled:—

MR. HODGINS: Is that the three thousand dollar cheque which was spoken of that you drew? A. No, sir, that is not the one I recall; if I saw the stubs I could tell more clearly; but my impression was that it was a Farmers Bank cheque.
Q. That cheque is dated on the 7th January, 1907, and is entered on one side of the bank cash book, Union Bank, W.R.T., cheque number 12, $3,000; on the other side it has, charged, Bank premises, $3,000? A. As I remember the cheque that was drawn out I drew out myself; that was drawn out by Mr. Shaver.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Have you not any idea of the date? A. No, I have not the faintest idea of the date.

MR. HODGINS: Q. Not relatively to the time you went in? A. It was shortly after—

Q. Was it shortly after the bank commenced to operate? A. Yes.

Q. It commenced to operate on the 2nd January, and this is dated 7th.

MR. COMMISSIONER: This one was supposed to have a "C" on the stub; there is the cheque, it was six thousand dollars the one that was marked C.; that is the cheque I have reference to; I did not remember the amount, but when Mr. Travers says—

Q. That is dated the 20th April 1907? A. That is the cheque I referred to; when he said the stub was marked "C" I remembered that I had drawn out the cheque myself and had marked "C" on the stub.

Q. In the bank cash book it is organization, commissions, six thousand dollars; is this stub in your handwriting? A. Yes, and I drew out all those cheques myself after the organization of the bank.

Q. Those are stubs and cheques on what date? A. On our own bank.

Q. Which one? A. The Farmers Bank; these were issued by the head office, and they were paid by the Toronto—

Q. This three thousand dollar cheque I show you of January 7th, 1907, is payable to W. R. Travers, endorsed by him, on the back of it you notice the sized bills it was paid out in? A. Yes.

Q. Was there any justification you know of for charging that to bank premises? A. No, none beyond instructions from Mr. Travers.

Q. What would it mean charging it to bank premises? A. It might have been paid out on the purchase of property.

Q. That would be the only justification? A. Yes.

Q. Had you bought any property at that time for bank premises that you know of? A. We were fitting up bank premises in Toronto here; we leased the building from Stair and we were making all the alterations ourselves.

Q. It would not be quite likely it would be drawn out in bills if it were being drawn to pay accounts for furniture? A. That cheque was drawn out by Mr. Shaver, who was the head office bookkeeper, and probably he got instructions from Mr. Travers himself to draw it out, because I do not recall it at all beyond seeing the cheque when it came through.

MR. COMMISSIONER: The stub of cheque for six thousand dollars, number 105, 20th April, 1907, in favor of (blank), is that account "C"? A. Yes, account "C".

Q. Six thousand dollars, in whose favor was it drawn? A. I think it was drawn to Mr. Travers' own favor.

Q. Why was not that filled out? A. Because he instructed me just to mark the stub just account "C".

If you wrote the cheque you must have made it payable to somebody? A. I do not recall how the cheque was payable, whether it was payable to him personally or to bearer.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I suppose the cheque itself can be got?

Mr. Clarkson: We are sending for it.—EXHIBIT 60: Cheque for $3,000 payable to W. R. Travers.

Mr. Hodgins: Were the subscriptions sent down to Ottawa at the time the certificate was being applied for? A. Not that I can recall.
Q. Your letter that is in speak of Mr. Hunter going over subscriptions, and does not say anything about sending them down? A. When I heard Mr. Travers say that I tried to recall if they had been sent, and while I would not swear positively that they were not sent I do not recall ever sending them, I do not think they left the office, and I think if Mr. Hunter from whom I got the instructions about sending down the three blank cheques, and in writing to Mr. Travers to report he had been in and had passed his opinion on them that if he had asked me to send them to Ottawa for him I would have mentioned in the letter how they were to go down, whether by Canadian or Dominion Express or registered mail.

MR. COMMISSIONER: How does he say he got them?

MR. HODGINS: I think he said parcel post.

MR. COMMISSIONER: They would probably have been registered? A. Yes, if they went by mail they would have been registered, but I have not the faintest recollection, I do not remember being asked to send them down, because the instructions I got in the letter were from Mr. Hunter when he came back from Ottawa, he asked me to let him see the subscriptions, as he would like to go over them to see they were all in order, and they were on one of those files alphabetically arranged, and he took them into Mr. Travers' room and glanced over them rather carefully, and handed them back, and said "They are all right, if the Finance Department want them you need have no hesitation in sending them down," but I have no recollection of sending them.

MR. HODGINS: Did he look at any book? A. He may have done so.

Q. You were here when he gave a description of the book? A. Yes.

Q. I think I asked you about that? A. Those are the only two books we ever had in connection with the stock subscription, and if he looked in any book to verify any of the entries on the list that went to Ottawa it would have been the small book from which the list was made up.

Q. Would the subscriptions themselves show anything about the notes? A. No.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Is that all you can say about this cheque? A. Yes.

Q. Your position was accountant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ought not you to have known the purpose for which the cheque was issued? A. No, sir, I took my instructions from the General Manager.

Q. How could you know to what account to charge it? A. That was also from instructions from him.

Q. Why was not it put in account of organization commissions? A. He said just mark the stub "C" and charge it up to organization commissions.

Q. I see on the 14th June there is another cheque for the same amount, W.R.T.; what is that?

MR. HODGINS: It is charged Organization C. I. List? A. That is cash item list. That came up from the Toronto Branch.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What does that mean? A. It would probably have been cashed or placed to somebody's credit down in the Toronto office and come up to us.

Q. To what account is it charged? A. Organization.

Q. What were you paying organization expenses at this time for? A. That is more than I can say, Mr. Commissioner.

MR. HODGINS: Those two cheques appear in ledger in page 23 under an account called "Organization Expenses"? A. Yes, sir.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What is that account composed of? Does it include the provisional directors expenses?

MR. HODGINS: Yes, it begins with Guthrie & Pringle $110, Masten Starr & Spence $10, making $120. Then McCorquodale $7.50; and then comes December 6th $10,000; December 7th $5,000; then a little later on $1,800 that was paid to Smith; and then Dr. Webster $50; and then a cheque on March 12th of $25,344.80 which I think an explanation will have to be given of, but it included the loan of $2,380 made to Travers, and the $20,000 loan and some other items? A. Yes.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: Why were those charged to organization expenses? A. I could not say; we in that office simply carried out instructions.
Mr. Hodgins: It winds up with the payments made to the provisional directors on account of that second ten thousand dollars.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: What is the total?
Mr. Hodgins: $121,000; that includes an item of thirty-two thousand which begins the account, November 26th, 1906? A. Yes, that was the amount taken over from the provisional directors.
Q. That was taken over at about ten thousand short? A. Yes.
Q. What was done with that ten thousand? A. I could not say.
Q. At all events the organization expenses as appearing in the provisional directors books were not carried correctly into the—? A. We did not open the books from the provisional directors books; the figures were given to us upon which to base the opening entries.
Q. By whom? A. By Mr. Travers.
Q. You know enough to know, I suppose, from the figures that is about ten thousand short? A. Yes, from subsequent things.

EDWARD B. STOCKDALE, Sworn, Examined by:—

Mr. Hodgins: What is your position? A. Manager of the Trusts &
Guarantee Company for Ontario.
Q. In 1907 and 1908? A. 1906 and 1907 I was, I think, known as accountant or acting manager of the company, accountant for part of the time and acting manager for other portions of the time, probably assistant manager, manager of estates, portions of that time.
Q. You of course knew Mr. Travers the manager of the Farmers Bank? A.
I met him in the fall of 1906.
Q. In connection with that loan? A. Yes, the $80,000 loan.
Q. The only instruments produced here are two letters from Mr. Warren, one respecting the date at which interest begins, and the other reciting that he has received notes as security? A. Yes.
Q. You have seen those two letters? A. Yes, I have seen both of them
(Exhibit 43).
Q. Were there any other documents connected with the loan you had ever seen?
A. Yes, they were produced in the other courts.
Q. What were they? A. In connection with the $80,000 loan we produced a copy of our loan ledger account in respect of the $80,000 loan.
Q. I have not got so far as that; I mean with regard to the making of the loan, were there any other documents connected with it or indicating what the security was other than those two letters that are put in? A. No, not that I recollect at the minute.
Q. Mr. Travers seemed to have some idea that there was another document?
A. We have the hypothecation agreement, of course; that was produced in the other court, put on file.
Q. I do not think so? A. It was.
Q. Of the $80,000 loan? A. Yes, it was produced in my evidence.
Q. What other court? A. It was before Judge Denton, I think, if my memory does not fail me.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. That would be in the trial of Messrs. Warren and Morden? A. No.
Q. Judge Denton tried those two? A. I remember it was in the County Sessions Court; I do not know whether it was in connection with Mr. Morden's case; it was in connection with the case against Mr. Stratton and Mr. Warren; I do not know whether it was Judge Denton or Judge Winchester it was one or the other.
Q. Judge Winchester tried Messrs. Stratton and Warren? A. Then it would be Judge Winchester.
Q. You think it would have been produced there? A. It was produced there and filed.
Q. I have never seen it; I have looked for it carefully? A. It is there, we did not get it back; I have a copy of it here, if it would be of any use to you.
Q. I would like to see it? A. At least, I think I have.
Q. Did you produce it? A. I produced it in my evidence; I thought I had a copy of that, but I do not see it just at the moment.

Mr. Commissioner: You have a copy somewhere? A. I thought I had, and probably will have one somewhere.

Mr. Hodgins: In your evidence, the letter dated the 11th October, 1906, is read, and you are asked to explain the transaction; the letter was put in and marked as Exhibit 2. Then this letter of October 10th is put in and marked Exhibit 3; then the cheque, Exhibit 4; then a statement copied from the mortgage ledger was marked as Exhibit 5; and then the questions go on to the $20,000 loan? A. I was positive that hypothecation agreement went in there; I can remember the agreement quite distinctly.

Q. You put in an hypothecation agreement regarding the $20,000 loan? A. Yes, I remember that.
Q. You have not got a copy? A. I have not got a copy of it just here; I thought I had a copy of it. I remember what was in it, though.
Q. Do you think you would have a copy at your office? A. We might have; I remember seeing a copy of it not very long ago, unless my memory fails me very badly.
Q. Would you look for it? A. Yes, certainly; anything we have we will be glad to produce.
Q. You got a list of notes, or did you compile a list of notes? A. It runs through my mind there was a list of notes; I think that list was filed; I do not think I had a copy of that.
Q. That is another document I have been unable to see any witness refer to; have you a copy of that? A. That is a list of notes given to us at the time?
Q. Yes? A. My recollection is that was filed; I may be wrong in that.
Q. I would be glad to have you read over your evidence and say if you are correct in that? A. There is so much evidence given, it is hard to remember all.
Q. That loan, you did not negotiate it, you simply prepared the papers? A. I was assisting Mr. Warren generally at that time and the first connection I had with it was when I was called in, and if I remember rightly, instructed to make out first a receipt for the notes which were given. (The receipt you referred to a while ago is in my handwriting), and to make out a cheque for $80,000.
Q. That letter of October 11th, 1906 (part of Exhibit 43), is that in your handwriting? A. Yes.
Q. I note a little change in there. You originally wrote it in a particular way, and you added the words "Provisional directors of"—what was the cause of the change? A. I have the habit of putting down a thing exactly when I put it down in writing, and that is no doubt the reason why I put that in there; that was my understanding at that particular moment what the transaction was.
Q. You wrote it out? A. Yes.
Q. And I suppose wrote it correctly as you understood it?  A. That is what I inferred. I was corrected immediately afterwards.

Q. Was that in consequence of Mr. Warren's instructions?  A. No, I do not think so; I am positive it was not.

Q. Why did you do it?  A. Because I inferred that list of notes was furnished by the provisional directors. No doubt, why I inferred that, was, that the notes, if I recollect rightly, were in favor of the provisional directors.

Q. You had not heard anything of it being a personal loan to Travers?  A. I always understood it as such.

Q. Why did you put it in?  A. I was in the next office to Mr. Warren, and he called me in and I was instructed to make out a receipt for a bunch of notes handed me along with a list of notes, check them over and make out a receipt, and I was told to make out a cheque; there was no discussion at that particular moment.

Q. When did you understand it was a personal loan to Travers?  A. Immediately afterwards.

Q. After you had written that out?  A. It might have been the next day or a couple of days after that; when I saw the hypothecation agreement I saw it was a loan to W. R. Travers.

Q. You did not draw any hypothecation agreement?  A. I do not remember about that.

Q. Would you say it was a couple of days afterwards?  A. It might have been a couple of days afterwards when I was put right as a mistake in referring to this list as a list furnished by the provisional directors.

Q. Who put you right?  A. Probably Mr. Warren or probably I put myself right.

Q. Do you remember?  A. Well, if a man has a thinking apparatus—

Q. Do you remember?  A. My knowledge at the moment is I was put right either by Mr. Warren or by mental process of my own that it was W. R. Travers' loan; I always understood it as such as soon as I got familiar with it.

Q. If it was a mental process—?  A. I did not say so: either Mr. Warren told me or I put myself right. No doubt, I was told it was W. R. Travers' loan; the hypothecation agreement would show it was W. R. Travers' personal loan.

Q. You are unable now to recall whether you were put right by Mr. Warren or by a mental process?  A. Or by the documents.

Q. When you made this letter of October 11th, 1906, you took it in and had it signed. I suppose?  A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with it?  A. No doubt, it was then copied in our letter book and handed over.

Q. To whom?  A. To Mr. Travers.

Q. Did you do that?  A. No, but I could almost swear positively that the document was handed over.

Q. It was undoubtedly handed over, but I do not know whether you did it?  A. I did not do it personally, I do not expect.

Q. At all events, a couple of days afterwards you were sure it was a personal loan to Mr. Travers?  A. I say it might have been the same day or the day after or two days afterwards; it was immediately afterwards.

Q. We can put it a margin of a couple of days, that after that you always believed it was a personal loan?  A. I probably knew that it was a personal loan as soon as I got the hypothecation agreement, at the time I made out that list there, the list indicated what was in my own mind.

Q. And you remained under that impression, I suppose, thereafter?  A. As a personal loan?

Q. Yes?  A. Yes, positively.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Had you to do with reversing the entries on the 17th or 18th December? A. That would come under my supervision; the office generally was under my supervision.

Q. To what extent? A. The giving of instructions to subordinates.

Q. Who did you give instructions to? A. I could not tell you now; we have a number of bookkeepers and I could not tell you whether it was Jones, Smith or Brown; I could not recall that.

Q. Did you give the instructions? A. Yes, all instructions as regards bookkeeping were given by me.

Q. Did you give the instructions as to the reversal of the loan on the 17th or 18th December? A. Undoubtedly.

Q. Then you did not make the reversal entry yourself? A. No, I do not think so.

Q. What instructions did you give? A. Sometimes I would make an entry in the books, but very seldom.

Q. It is quite unnecessary to tell me that; did you give the instructions? A. Undoubtedly.

Q. What were they? A. That the credits to the W. R. Travers' loan account should be reversed so that the moneys which were originally applied to the W. R. Travers' loan would appear as a deposit to the credit of the Farmers Bank.

Q. If it was a personal loan to Travers the reversal made it a loan to the Farmers Bank? A. No.

Q. What did it make? A. We had securities satisfactory to us in our hands. Mr. Travers said, "Let my loan stand and put my money to the credit of the Farmers Bank of Canada".

Q. Did he say that to you? A. I can almost swear positively he did; I think I was called in at the discussion.

Q. Will you repeat that? A. "That you have your security, I want the money placed to the credit of the Farmers Bank, rather than remain to my credit, hold my securities, the securities you have got now and you shall be safe."

Q. Do you recollect that conversation? A. I would not say the conversation was with Mr. Warren or not; that is my recollection of the whole thing; that is what I understood at the time, whether Mr. Warren told me in Mr. Travers' presence, or Mr. Travers told me in Mr. Warren's presence, or whether it was told me when Travers was not there; I was given my instructions to do it.

Q. And he preferred it should be transferred to the Farmers Bank instead of to his own credit? A. No, I did not say that.

Q. What did you say about it? A. My instructions, or the conversation I overheard was, that the moneys which originally had been credited to the W. R. Travers loan would be placed to the credit of the Farmers Bank of Canada, we retaining our securities.

Q. Did you have these securities in the name of W. R. Travers? A. We had notes endorsed in blank without recourse to the provisional directors.

Q. It was all in the name of W. R. Travers? A. Yes.

Q. Your entry in your books? A. Yes.

Q. And the loan account stood in his name? A. Yes.

Q. Will you turn up that ledger entry you have there, how was that headed? A. Headed "W. R. Travers, Toronto".

Q. That is the original entry? A. Yes.

Q. Is that the same as your copy there? A. Yes.

Q. Then the moneys that had come in had come in on three separate dates? A. Yes.

Q. What were they? A. December 6th, $30,000; December 7th, $25,000; that is all the money that went to the credit of that particular loan account; the other twenty-five thousand odd dollars went direct to the credit of the deposit account.

Q. This is headed in your ledger, 289, name, W. R. Travers, address, Toronto; security notes amounting to $100,955—is that entry correct? A. Yes.

Q. "Rate of interest 10% payable November 22nd, and bonus $1,000; terms due November 22nd, 1906"? Yes, I have no doubt that is entirely correct.

Q. That would be then practically a month’s loan, a little over a month’s loan? A. Yes.

Q. Have you any other loans upon similar terms with a bonus of $1,000 and 10%? A. It was not unusual at that time to get a bonus. I do not remember whether we have any other loan on which we got a bonus or not; this matter took place six or seven years ago.

Q. How long were you in their employ at the time this loan went through? A. I have been with the Trusts Company since 1900, 12 years.

Q. In whose writing is the heading of this account? A. One of our bookkeepers’ at that time.

Q. You could not be expected to remember his name? A. No.

Q. December 6th, $30,000 and December 7th, $25,000 were actually credited upon that loan? A. Yes.

Q. And left on December 7th, only how much due? A. $25,000 and some interest; then there is the $1,000 bonus which was not charged up in our account.

Q. What entries did you reverse? A. The entry was cut out, the credit of $30,000 and $25,000 in the Travers loan account, No. 289, were scored out and credited to the Farmers Bank of Canada deposit account.

Q. Show me that account? A. That is in the other ledger.

Q. It looks to me as if there was a third one scored out, December 31st, $32.88, and the total of $80,032.88 scored out? A. That little amount is scored out, $32.88.

Q. When was that made? A. I do not remember that at all.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting the entries are in? A. In some of the bookkeepers’; we have different bookkeepers.

Q. Where is your cash book which shows the date when the last item was received; will you turn that up too? A. Speaking of the $30,000 received on December 6th, cash book folio 879, the credit originally made was showing a payment from W. R. Travers on what we call loans account of $30,000.

Q. That is struck out now by some one having put a pen through? A. Ruled out in red ink.

Q. And the word W. R. Travers ruled out in red ink and the 289 ruled out in red ink? A. Yes, that is the ledger folio.

Q. Who scored those out? A. No doubt scored out under instructions.

Q. From whom? A. No doubt from carrying out my instructions.

Q. Did you give detailed instructions as to how much of the entry was to be struck out? A. I could not say, it is six years ago.

Q. And you struck out W. R. Travers and the folio? A. That is all that is necessary to be struck out in order to carry out the reversal.

Q. Was that done at the time? A. Undoubtedly.

Q. What time? A. You mean was it done on the 6th December?

Q. No? A. It was done about the 17th or 18th December.

Q. Can you fix the date? A. Yes.

Q. When was it? A. I am not positive whether it was the 17th or 18th; I fix the date by the fact firstly by the last payment from Travers having gone direct to that deposit account of the Farmers Bank of Canada, and of the issue of a certificate of deposit.

Q. What date do you fix having regard to those two elements? A. I would not be positive whether it was the 17th or the 18th.
Q. This receipt of this cheque must have been either on the 17th or 18th?
A. Yes.
Q. Whatever date it was received on would be the date of the entry, the reversal? A. Not necessarily. A cheque may come one day and be entered the next day.
Q. If I show you that receipt on the 17th, would that be the day the change was made? A. It might be the next day; before that went through our books.
Q. It would be the next day? A. I would not say it was the next day or the day you are speaking of, the 17th December.
Q. Carried forward at the bottom of this 879 does not contain that $30,000; when are those totals carried forward? A. At the end of the month; they are inked in at the end of the month; in the meantime they are carried forward in pencil. The pencil totals are also erased after audit; that is the common custom in bookkeeping.
Q. Will you turn up the next cheque, $25,000; that is similarly credited W. R. Travers, Farmers Bank of Canada, 289? A. Yes.
Q. And the call loan is scored out? A. It is reversed in identically the same manner as the one of the sixth.
Q. Is it scored out? A. Yes.
Q. But it is left in the column marked deposit as the $30,000 was? A. Yes.
Q. So that there is no doubt as to its receipt by you and as to its deposit in your bank? A. No.
Q. Does the total of $70,300 include that $25,000 or does it not? A. No, it does not.
Q. These totals would be at the end of the month? A. No, those are totals of the items appearing on this page and preceding pages during the month of December.
Q. But put in at the end of the month? A. Yes; during the month we carry the totals forward in pencil and then rub out the pencil.
Q. Where is the next one? A. There.
Q. This on page 884, there is credited on December 17th, Farmers Bank of Canada, $25,605.81? A. Yes, that is a credit to deposit account.
Q. That is shown in deposit account? A. Yes.
Q. When was that put there? A. The credit is under date December 17th.
Q. But prior to that you find the 18th? A. The entries in our cash book at that time do not go to say that the money was received, not necessarily.
Q. Who put in this as the date, the 17th? A. That is the date we actually received the money, undoubtedly.
Q. Who put it in? A. That would be put in by our bookkeeper.
Q. What is his name? A. I do not know.
Q. Is he with you now? A. I do not imagine so; it looks like a man who was with us at that time and left to go West.
Q. What is his name? A. That I cannot recall; we have had many men pass through our office.
Q. At all events that does not appear to be entered in regular sequence? A. You can say that about almost any entry you pick out there.
Q. What is your explanation of that appearing on the 17th? A. That we received the cash on the 17th, and the cash comes into our bank on the 17th.
Q. How is it the entries preceding that are of a later date and also an earlier date? A. Our system of entry at that time called for the credit of items to be first made out on slips called credit slips or debit slips depending on whether the money was received or paid out; then these slips would be accumulated and posted into our cash book, in other words the original entry is on a slip of paper.
Q. Do you keep those slips? A. We used to keep them, we keep them for probably a year or two years.
Q. Did you keep the credit slips for this? A. I do not know, we may have them.
Q. I would like you to look and see. Where was that entry on the 17th carried into? A. Into the Farmers Bank deposit account.
Q. You contend I judge from what you are saying now, that the item $25,605.81 was never credited on this loan? A. Never went into our books of final entry as a credit to the loan; it went direct to the deposit account.
Q. Please answer the question as I ask it; I want to know whether it indicates that was never credited on the loan? A. It never was credited upon the loan in our books.
Q. That is the position you are taking? A. Yes; the books show that. There is the credit.
Q. This does not appear to be carried into any particular page? A. No, the deposit ledger is almost invariably posted from the deposit slips. In order to get the entries of money in or money out into the deposit account effected as quickly as possible, and intermediate entries are put through—
Q. The first two items did have the page in the ledger? A. Yes.
Q. But this one does not? A. This is different.
Q. When was this transferred to this account No. 1100 when was it transferred to the account; you show me now and say it was put into? A. It would be posted up directly into this account as the books show.
Q. When, I say? A. The books show the 17th December.
Q. When were the two prior entries, December 6th, and 7th, posted up? A. They were undoubtedly posted up at the same time, that is what the books show.
Q. Where were they posted from? A. From the facts as they were given at that time; there may have been a deposit slip made out for those two items, or there may not, because they did not come into our deposit account, Farmers Bank of Canada, in the regular way. They are first credited to loan account and afterwards reversed and put to credit of the Farmers Bank of Canada deposit account.
Q. Is that No. 1100 a true entry? A. That shows credit to the Farmers Bank of Canada $80,605.81.
Q. And it shows that accumulation beginning December 6th? A. The first credit went to that account as of the 6th December.
Q. You charged interest on it from that day? A. We would not charge interest, we would credit interest.
Q. On that date? A. Yes.
Q. Did the amount $25,605.81 exactly pay that loan with interest up to the 17th December, if it had been applied on the original loan? A. I think I worked that out from our books that way.
Q. And a statement had been sent to Mr. Travers after that memorandum, how did it come that that cheque was given for that amount? A. I have no recollection of that: I know it figures up, I do not remember, but this is only one transaction in many; I would be superhuman if I could remember the details.
Q. Is that the only entry connected with that loan? A. Except the entries covering the payment of the loan, and of course the closing of the deposit account.
Q. You had lent this $80,000? A. Our company had lent the $80,000.
Q. And these two first items had paid it off to that extent when received? A. Yes.
Q. And on December 17th, there was exactly that balance due, $25,605.81; when that transfer was made, was it all made on the 18th? A. The books would show it was made on the 17th.
Q. That is these two books? A. Yes, but then there was the letter dated the 18th.
Q. It was on that date that the reversals were made? A. I cannot say that; I have answered that before.
Q. You cannot tell? A. No.
Q. If it be the fact that Mr. Knight was here on the 18th? A. I do not know when Mr. Knight was here.
Q. I say if it is the fact that he was here on the 18th and that day Mr. Travers came down and got the certificate and got the items reversed, what appears as the result in your books would have taken place on the 18th instead of on the 17th? A. I would not want to express an opinion upon that.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I should not have thought there was much difficulty, if it happened on the 18th it happened on the 18th; that would be the position? A. If it happened on the 18th, yes.

Q. Mr. Hodgins: Who gave you the instructions to make those changes? A. I have answered that to the best of my ability.
Q. Would you mind telling me again who gave you the instructions? A. I would say I do not recall whether the instructions were given to me during a general conversation in which both Mr. Travers and Mr. Warren were there, or if Mr. Warren gave me the instructions.
Q. At all events, whatever date it was, money was received by your company as a payment on the Travers' loan, obviously, $25,605.81? A. If that came in on the 17th I would say that quite obviously it was received with the intention of crediting it to the Travers' loan, but before the entries went into our books in any shape or form we got the other instructions.
Q. You got a cheque? A. Yes, on the 17th and went into our bank on the 17th.
Q. In payment of that loan? A. Yes.
Q. But before you were able to make entries in your books some one changed its destination? A. Yes, its destination was changed.
Q. And so this reversed the whole thing; you are basing that of course wholly upon the fact that your books show that that was received on the 17th? A. Basing what?
Q. Your idea about reversal taking place on the 17th? A. Yes.
Q. You have no independent fact beyond the entry to tell you about that? A. No, I could not place the date. I also refer to the fact that that certificate was issued at that time, so that I know the entries went through on the 17th or 18th; they are the two factors.
Q. You are in doubt as to the real date at which the entries went through? A. Yes, I could not say which day it was.
Q. Travers says the 18th? A. I would not contradict him if he says the 18th.
Q. The cheques that you got, those three cheques, came through Mitchell, are you aware of that? A. I have heard of it, I think, during the different court proceedings; I have no personal recollection of cheques having come through Mr. Mitchell.
Q. They would not have passed through your hands? A. I would not know it, because as far as we were concerned, it was only so much money we were receiving, no matter whether it was Jones, Smith or Brown, or Travers' own cheque.
Q. I am only asking you do you know anything about Mitchell in this connection, you do not say so. What was the method adopted whereby that loan was paid off which you professed to put through the Farmers Bank? A. I do not profess to put through anything so far as that; this loan and the $20,500 loan and the $2,380 loan were paid off by two cheques, one for $25,344 and the other for eighty thousand and some odd dollars; the exact amount of that deposit account, No. 1100, the Farmers Bank deposit account.
Q. Just look at this statement and tell me if that will help you, a copy from your books?  A. This is not a copy from our books, at least, I do not think so; it is certainly not done on any typewriter in our office.

Q. Look at that and tell me whether those credits that appear there beginning with some $3,500 appear in your books?  A. These entries appear in one of our deposit accounts, deposit account No. 158 of the Farmers Bank of Canada; at least, I should say so.

Q. And certain of these items, at all events beginning January 7th, 1907, with a deposit of $3,600 going on to April 8th, do your books show what the general ledger of the bank shows, deposits made to the Trusts Company to that extent, totalling $25,605.81?  A. That is not the total; that is the balance at a certain time. We start our deposit account No. 1114; it starts off with a credit of $3,655 on January 7th, 1907.

Q. What is there to its credit on the 30th January?  A. $37,710.

Q. You agree then with the bank's books; then on February 14th, what do you find?  A. The balance of $35,485.

Q. That is, after deducting $3,000?  A. This is after we paid and charged up $3,000.

Q. What is this account you have open for me?  A. This is the deposit account of the Farmers Bank of Canada.

Q. What were they depositing with you, do you know anything about it yourself?  A. They were making ordinary deposits with us, as far as I can recollect.

Q. You say you do not know any difference?  A. No, I do not recall any difference.

Q. Did you have any intimate knowledge of the account; did you know anything about it?  A. No more so than I would of any account.

Q. So that at the moment you can throw no light on the details of it?  A. Not that I can recall for the moment.

Q. What was the balance of that account on the 3rd April?  A. $50,950.61; our books do not agree with theirs at that point.

Q. I would like to see; what was it on February 19th, after deducting the $17,000?  A. $22,930.

Q. On the 19th?  A. Just a moment, there is another item, $23,745.

Q. You agree with the bank there; take the 26th February after deducting $10,000?  A. A credit of $32,140.

Q. That is right; take March 12th?  A. We have a credit of $40,680.

Q. That is right; and you deduct an item on the same date of $25,344.80?  A. No, that cheque was not charged up in our account until some time afterwards.

Q. When was it charged up?  A. Not charged up till the following December, 1907.

Q. The 20th March?  A. After payment of $15,000 cheque we have a credit balance of $41,880.

Q. That would be the same as mine, plus this $25,344.80; that will account for the difference?  A. Yes.

Q. Going down to the 3rd April after paying $25,605.81 what balance did you have?  A. There are two cheques making up that total, one cheque $10,000 on the 9th, and one for $15,605.81 paid on the 8th; and the balance would exactly equal the $25,344.80, which should have been charged up on the 13th March.

Q. Does that cheque which you have just mentioned which paid off the $25,000 loan, the $2,380 loan and some other amounts?  A. That is the balance of those loans after applying the eighty thousand some odd dollars, in account No. 1100 I think it was.

Q. That item was $25,344.80 with the deposit account of your own beginning in January and ending in April shows deposits by the bank exactly equal to the
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

$80,605.81 which was the amount of the loan as reversed on the 17th or 18th December? A. I had not noticed that before; probably it does. It amounts to about one hundred and five thousand some odd dollars I see by the pencil totals in here.

Q. You deduct $25,344 and tell me what that deposit account amounted to?
A. We do not keep books that way.

Q. I ask you to do it? A. I will total these up myself if you wish.
Q. The balance is there in pencil? A. I see a total in here, I cannot say as to its correctness.

Q. How much? A. It looks to be $105,950.61.
Q. Figure it out? A. It would make a difference of $80,605.81.
Q. That is exactly the amount which the $80,000 loan stood on December 17th? A. That is a coincidence I had never noticed before.
Q. Do you know how those various cheques in that account were made, $3,000, $17,000 and $10,000?

Q. Yes, the Farmers Bank drew cheques on us for those various amounts, and cheques were paid by us.
Q. And you paid your cheque to them? A. We did what they call cleared those cheques by issuing cheques on the Bank of Montreal, the Bank of Montreal would pay them in legal tender, bank tender.
Q. What connection is there between that account and the account No. 1100?
A. No connection whatever.
Q. Merely a coincidence that it exactly pays the amount that was reversed on that day? A. I termed it a coincidence.
Q. At all events from your books it would appear that they deposited that amount with you plus this $25,344.80, and drew it out? A. Yes.
Q. Then that account No. 1100 would still be to their credit? A. Yes, that was closed up.
Q. How was that paid? A. My recollection is that it was paid by way of a cheque; I have not located that cheque.
Q. Look and see how it was closed up? A. That was closed out December 17th, the same as the other.
Q. No, that is the time it began? A. I am speaking of a year later.
Q. I am speaking of No. 1100? A. I was too.
Q. How was that account closed out? A. That was closed out by the balance at the credit being applied on the loan account, that is the effect of it.
Q. How was it marked closed in your books? A. Through debiting an amount equal to the credit balance.
Q. Where is the debit from? A. The debit is to the deposit account of the Farmers Bank of Canada.
Q. Account 1100 shows to the credit of the Farmers Bank of Canada eighty thousand odd dollars? A. Yes.
Q. How did they get that from you? A. My recollection is there is a cheque issued in favor of the Trusts & Guarantee Company signed by the Farmers Bank for the amount of this account, that is $80,605.
Q. You think there was a cheque? A. Yes, that is my recollection, but we have not located the cheque.
Q. Signed by the bank on your account? A. The account with us.
Q. That cheque would be presented to you, you would give the equivalent? A. No, it was given to us in our favor to retire the loan.
Q. I thought that was a credit to the Farmers Bank? A. The amount at the credit of the Farmers Bank account was a credit to the Farmers Bank.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It went to pay Travers’ loan? A. Yes.
Q. Travers’ loan was re-set up and he drew that money and paid the loan up? A. They paid the loan with it.

MR. HODGINS: That account of 1100 shows credit to the Farmers Bank, not Travers at all? A. Certainly.
Q. Is your explanation that the way that was got rid of was by a cross entry? A. It was not gotten rid of at all, it was checked out by a cheque so far as the Farmers Bank is concerned, it was checked right out.

Q. Let me see the record of that.

Mr. Commissioner: The way they were treating the transaction, Travers loan remained on foot just as it did with the $80,000 odd dollars due on it, and you had that much to the credit of the Farmers Bank; they drew the money and Travers' debt was paid with that? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: I should like him to verify that; you see this account 1100 is transferred to new ledger, $80,777.36, and that does not close the account? A. This book was in effect done away with and a loose leaf system put in; this shows the transfer into the new ledger. Referring to account, to identify it, as P. 2, that shows the transfer from page 1100 of the old ledger of the credit of $80,777.36; Then there is a debit in this same account on December 13th, 1907, $80,777.36. Of that $80,777.36 there is a certain amount for accrued interest which was at that time reversed. Our books show that.

Q. When was that paid, December 13th, 1907? A. That is when the entry went through there, but as a matter of fact it was paid on March 12th, 1907, but the entry did not go through our books, by apparent carelessness.

Q. Whose apparent carelessness? A. Of the office.

Q. Is that your explanation of it? A. Yes.

Q. From March to November it appeared in your books the Farmers Bank had a cheque for you of eighty thousand odd dollars? A. Yes, but we had their cheque for it, and a cheque for the $25,344—

Q. You say it should have been paid on the 12th March? A. The 12th March.

Q. What cheque went through? A. Both cheques, $80,000 and the $25,000.

Q. That shows $25,344, cheque went through in December; I would like to see the cheque? A. It is produced.

Q. Have you located the $80,000? A. No.

Q. Does it appear here as a cheque; you see December 13th, cheque $25,344; does it appear in F. 2 as a cheque—it does not appear to me to read that way? A. It is marked "Paid to call loans."

Q. There never was a cheque? A. My recollection is there was. I have a distinct recollection of that.

Q. That is just a cross entry? A. No, I would not say so.

Q. Did that come from anywhere—is that from call loans or transfer call loans? A. No, on a slip—. I should go back and say that in a system such as we had in vogue in our office at that time where a cheque came in drawn on the Trusts & Guarantee Company in payment of some other item, some item owing to the Trusts Company that both the credit as in this case to call loans and the debit to deposits would go through on the same slip.

Q. A slip not a cheque? A. The slip is part of the internal system of the Trusts Company.

Q. I am not interested in that particular; I am asking whether there was ever a cheque for that $80,000? A. I think my recollection is very clear that it was a cheque.

Q. And it was not put through apparently through the books in the way of entries till December 13th, 1907? A. It was not put through, no.

Q. And the cheque has never been seen? A. I have a very clear recollection of seeing the cheque at that time, but we were not able to produce that cheque at this time, no doubt it was returned to the Farmers Bank.

Q. Did you ever give evidence to this effect before in the cases you were called? A. I do not think I was ever asked the questions in the same way.

Q. Did you ever give evidence as to that? A. In these cases?

Q. Yes? A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever state there was a cheque? A. I think so, I think that is my recollection; if I were asked a question so as to bring that up, I would.

Q. What cases did you give evidence in? A. The case of The King v. Stratton and Warren.

Q. And the other case of Warren and Morden? A. No.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: I suppose you think it important, but it does not occur to me to be important whether it was done by cheque or cross entry if it was done with the consent of both parties.

Mr. Hodgins: That is where we differ as to the consent of both parties. Our belief is that it was paid in a totally different way and we think the Trusts & Guarantee Company were made use of, or made use of the bank I don’t know which, and succeeded in getting hold of a good deal of their assets by way of securities for assistance they should not have given them? A. If we made loans to the Farmers Bank we took legitimate securities, and I think we were quite justified in doing so.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: My observation was only directed to this one point, that the deposit account is closed by an entry showing that they paid the Farmers Bank; and the account of Travers is closed also by a corresponding entry to show that his debit has been satisfied? A. Yes.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: To my mind it does not make the slightest difference whether that was done by a cross entry or by cheques.

Mr. Hodgins: That does not agree with Travers’ account of how it was paid off and when.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: However, you think it important.

Mr. Hellmuth: I do not think it is quite fair that statements in reference to the Trusts & Guarantee Company should be made by Counsel that would go broadcast that we have been making money out of the Farmers Bank illegitimately.

Mr. Hodgins: I did not make any such statement.

Mr. Hellmuth: You made a statement that was certainly derogatory to the Trusts Company which I do not think ought to have been made now. A. There is absolutely no foundation for the remarks, absolutely none; that is not fair.

Mr. Hodgins: That depends altogether on your means of knowledge, which we can judge from the evidence which you have given? A. I think I am closely in touch with the situation.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: I think we had better close that incident and get on with the evidence.

Mr. Hodgins: Had you anything further to do with the loans that were made with the Trusts & Guarantee Company to the Farmers Bank? A. In what way?

Q. In any way at all, do you know anything about them; were you concerned in them in any way? A. That is a very general question; I could only answer that by going over the file in connection with each loan and pointing out what connection I did have with it.

Q. Do you know anything at all about the fact that the bank commenced to deposit with you circulation? A. No, not particularly.

Q. At some stage? A. At some stage, yes. I know we got circulation at some time, at very much later date than we are now discussing.

Q. What are we now discussing? A. The discussion is now centred upon the organization of the Farmers Bank.

Q. You do not know there was circulation deposited as early as January, 1908, making up that small loan account which we have been discussing? A. I know from our records that bills came in and I also know from my own knowledge that our understanding of the source of that money was the notes were being paid off and——

Q. Will you say you did know that that account which began in January, 1908, with the item of $3,655 was Farmers Bank circulation? A. I will say that I do know it was bills——

Q. You do not know whether Farmers Bank bills or Bank of Montreal? A. No.
Q. Who had to do with this in your office? A. Probably it would not be noticed.
Q. If you do not know, does any one else know? A. No, six years ago.
Q. Mr. Travers has testified to it, and you do not know and nobody else knows, there is no object in going into it, are you aware that the Trusts & Guarantee Company arranged to receive deposits at the rate of $1,000 a day in Farmers Bank bills? A. At some later date, yes.
Q. In January, 1909? A. Possibly around that date; I do not place the date at all. I know as a fact that we did receive deposits of $1,000 of circulation.
Q. Do you know anything about the terms on which it was received? A. The money came in and was deposited to the credit of the Farmers Bank subject to cheque withdrawal by them at any time; the money was used for the purpose of paying cheques on ourselves and other items over our counter.
Q. Do you know anything about the arrangements made under which that was deposited? A. Nothing further than I understood it was to provide us with circulation to meet our ordinary payments.
Q. Up to that date had you been unable to provide that? A. Before that date we were getting circulation required for the conduct of our business from possibly the Bank of Montreal or the Ontario Bank before they failed, or any other bank.
Q. At the same rate? A. There is no rate in connection with it.
Q. This is $1,000 a day? A. Whatever we required we would draw out, whatever we required.
Q. If you do not remember the amount it is of no consequence; I am asking if it was at the same rate as you commenced to get it from the Farmers Bank? A. We estimated that $1,000 a day would take care of our ordinary demands; before that time we would draw probably five or ten thousand dollars at a time and keep that money in our till until it was exhausted and then we would replace it by another cheque.
Q. Had you anything to do with making arrangements for getting it from the Farmers? A. No.
Q. Who had? A. Mr. Warren, I understand. Excuse me, you say did I have anything to do with arranging to get that circulation of the Farmers Bank; we did not arrange to get it from the Farmers Bank, but they arranged with us that we would pay that out over our counter; that is quite a usual arrangement for a new bank.
Q. Did you have anything to do to make arrangements under which it was received? A. No.
Q. Mr. Warren had? A. Yes, if any arrangement was made.
Q. Did he tell you what the arrangement was? A. Yes, I understood we were to get $1,000 a day.
Q. What interest were you to pay on it? A. My recollection is it was first understood that we should pay 3 or 3½%, but that as we did not get a benefit from it which would be in keeping with the benefit they were getting from the circulation of the currency it was understood later that the interest would be dropped and it was dropped.
Q. How long did the interest arrangement last? A. I cannot recall.
Q. A short time? A. I think it was a short time.
Q. After that you paid no interest on it? A. No, they were reaping the benefit, we were not.
Q. You have the same erroneous notion of benefit? A. It is not an erroneous notion.
Q. You are not a banker? A. I know a little about banking.
Q. You are not a banker? A. I do not know what definition you give to banking.
Q. Then I suppose you are not one? A. I have a great deal to do with banking.
Q. You had very large deposits had you not with the Farmers Bank? A. We had some deposits.
Q. And they reached quite a very large amount? A. That is a relative term, they reached at one time over $100,000.
Q. Would you call that a large amount? A. It is a fairly large amount.
Q. Were you getting interest upon that? A. Yes, we got interest on some of it or all of it I do not recall which.
Q. What rate? A. I think for a time a portion of it, that is the moneys to the credit of our company as liquidators of a certain company bore 4% for a time and then either 3 or 3 1-2% subsequent to that. I do not recall what our own account bore; that is what you might call current account.
Q. That lasted all the way through, didn't it, until you consolidated part of it in a loan? A. I do not recall that.
Q. You were getting interest on your balances all the time? A. I do not recall that personally.
Q. Who does know? A. I can probably find from the books.
Q. Do you not know yourself? A. I do not recall it; I do recall that we got interest on this special account, that is the liquidation account, but as to what you might call a current account I do not know whether we got interest or not.
Q. You might look that up. After the time you ceased paying interest on deposits of circulation, if you were receiving interest upon your deposits with the bank and the two accounts were pretty nearly equal, you would get very handsome interest? A. We were not getting benefit from interest on the liquidation account, that is as a corporation; the liquidation account got the credit for that interest.
Q. No part of it? A. No part of that interest.
Q. Whatever interest was allocated to that, would go—? A. To the Trusts.
Q. And you know you got interest on that? A. Yes.
Q. And accounted for that to the Trusts? A. Yes.
Q. As to your ordinary account or savings account? A. That is a matter of calculation, it does not appear on the face of our books there. I see certain entries for interest, but just what periods it would cover I cannot say. It would appear from this record that we did get interest on our current account. I have no doubt we got interest on it; I would naturally expect we did.
Q. If you were paying no interest on the amounts deposited with you from time to time, which I understand you were using and circulating, and they were about equal to the amount the bank owed you, you would be getting pretty handsome profits on the transaction? A. I have explained the principal portion of the moneys on deposit with the Farmers Bank to our credit were trust funds in which we reaped no benefit.
Q. I would agree to that to the extent of one-half? A. I would think the proportion is much greater than that.
Q. However, let that go; we can easily verify that. Even if that be eliminated you would be making a pretty handsome profit on the difference, would not you? A. In business you expect to get consideration for what you do. We knew that the Farmers Bank were making a large profit out of having their circulation out; it is a well-known fact that circulation is worth so much to every bank.
Q. We threshed that out with Mr. Travers and we do not agree to that; at all events the matter went on and it was turned into the shape of a loan afterwards, was it not? A. In November, 1910, a new advance, a new loan was made to the Farmers Bank of Canada for $295,000.
Q. Yes, but much earlier than that, did not you in the place of having an ordinary deposit, did you not have a loan, did you not make them loans? A. They applied to us for certain loans, and the security being satisfactory the loans were made.

Q. And on those interest was received? A. Yes.

Q. Did you at any time turn the current account into a deposit receipt? A. We took out a deposit receipt in respect of moneys to our credit with them in respect of the liquidation I spoke of.

Q. You must have had $120,000 in the Hamilton Estate? A. Yes. I am just told that our deposit receipt covered both our current account and the Hamilton account.

Q. How do you put it now? A. I am told by our accountant who is more familiar possibly with that end of it than I was—

Q. Who is your accountant? A. Mr. Howard.

Q. It would appear you had $64,000 odd to the credit of the Hamilton Estate and $57,000 odd to the credit of your savings account, so that the $120,000 deposit receipt would cover both? A. Yes, no doubt that is what it was.

Q. How much did that bear, 4% that deposit receipt? A. I do not recall; whatever the bank books show is no doubt right.

Q. What was the object in making that change? A. I do not know.

Q. Who made it? A. That was made by Mr. Warren, or at least I expect it was, I do not know about that.

Q. What was the next transaction dealing with the form of the loan? A. That deposit receipt has nothing to do with any loan.

Q. I did not say it had: I am asking you what is the next transaction with them connected with the loan? A. We advanced them $75,000 on certain securities and $100,000 in another case.

Q. They were both prior to this occasion, were not they? A. I do not remember the date we got that deposit receipt, so I cannot say whether it was prior or subsequent.

Q. Those were both advances in money? A. Yes, that is moneys went to the credit of the bank.

Q. Later on after this deposit receipt was given what occurred then? A. The mere fact we took a deposit receipt I do not think alters the situation so far as the bank is concerned.

Q. After that what occurred with regard to the loan? A. I attach no significance to the issue of the deposit receipt; therefore I cannot answer your question unless you put it differently.

Q. Assuming the deposit receipt has no significance, did you make any loan arrangement with them afterwards? A. I made two loans, the loans I have spoken of, and then in November, 1910, we made them an additional advance, a new loan of $295,000 in total. That money went to their credit. They issued cheques against it paying off the amount due on the $75,000 loan and the $100,000 loan, and if I remember they paid off a certain amount that was in deposit with them.

Q. Are you speaking from your own knowledge or just from the books? A. I am speaking both from my own knowledge and from the books.

Q. Had you previous to that made any loan to them? A. We advanced $75,000 to the Farmers Bank of Canada, February 5th, the year is not marked in the account here, on the security of 1,200 shares of the American Piano Company's stock preferred. We made a further loan to the Farmers Bank of Canada of $100,000 under date of August 5th, 1910, on bonds of the Keeley Mine of the face value of $1,000,000. On November 2nd, 1910, we made a loan to the Farmers Bank of $295,000.

Q. What is the date of that loan? A. November 2nd, 1910.

Q. Had you to do with the negotiation of that loan? A. No, but I was in touch with the officers through whom it was negotiated.

Q. Who negotiated it? A. That was arranged by Mr. Morden, who was then our assistant general manager, and Mr. Wilson, who was our solicitor, called in at this particular stage or shortly before it, rather, and possibly Mr. Stratton had something to do with it, I was consulted about the loan as it had to do with my end of the business.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. On what terms was it put through? A. Seven per cent interest payable on demand.

Q. On what security? A. 1,300 shares American Piano Company’s preferred stock, 10 Keeley Mine bonds of $100,000 each, and the pledge of course of the Farmers Bank of Canada.

Q. Anything else? A. I just read from the original agreement. The following security: Bonds of the Keeley Mine, Nos. 1 to 10 inclusive; par value $100,000 each, with coupons attached; and 1,200 shares of the American Piano Company’s preferred stock carrying 7% quarterly dividends, and promissory notes and bills receivable payable to the bank by customers which notes or bills receivable amount to $108,129.70, and are scheduled and delivered by the bank to the company, together with any moneys held by the company on deposit or otherwise for the undersigned or hereafter and including also any promissory notes, bills, stock, bonds or other securities which the undersigned may now or hereafter deliver to or deposit with the Trusts Company.” That is signed by the Farmers Bank of Canada.

Q. That is the whole security? A. Then they also covenant to repay this loan.

Q. Was that the whole security? A. That was the security for the $295,000 advance; then we have a demand note signed by the Farmers Bank of Canada for a like amount, dated November 2nd, the same date as the agreement.

Q. Was that the whole security you have mentioned? A. That was the whole security for that particular advance.

Q. So far as you know? A. Yes.

Q. So far as was told to you? A. I say positively that is all the security we got.

Q. Is it the case there was any Keeley stock? A. There was some Keeley stock—no, not in connection with this particular loan, at the time the $100,000 loan went through, Mr. Warren arranged for a bonus of 25,000 shares of the Keeley Mine stock, that to be in addition to the interest called for by the agreement.

Q. How many shares? A. $25,000.

Q. What was that for? A. That was as a bonus in addition to the interest; that is a consideration to us.

Q. You were to have that out and out? A. Yes.

Q. What else with regard to stock of the Keeley Mine? A. That is all I have any knowledge of.

Q. You did not know of any amount of $50,000 of stock? A. Not at that particular stage. I know there was stock handed in to the Trusts Company after that.

Q. By whom? A. By Mr. Stratton.

Q. Held by him how? A. I understood it was in trust for the Trusts Company.

Q. When did you get that? A. I think it was somewhere around that time.

Q. About what time? A. About the time of this loan being made or shortly afterwards.

Q. Which loan? A. $100,000.

Q. That was handed in by him without any reference to the loan? A. Yes, I took it that was to be further bonus, not arranged with Mr. Warren, but with Mr. Stratton.

Mr. Commissioner: Bonus or security? A. Bonus.

Q. You said security before? A. It was my mistake, I meant bonus.

Mr. Hodgins: What became of that when the $295,000 loan was arranged?

A. The stock was still in our possession at that time.
Q. It would not be considered security for the $100,000 loan or it would have been returned? A. We returned it when the loans were finally paid off, because we did not consider that any value to us.

Q. It was not taken in when you made the $295,000 loan as security? A. It was not considered by us as security at all, but as a bonus.

Q. That loan paid off the deposit receipt and interest and the $75,000 and the $100,000 loan and $5,000 of savings bank? A. It paid off the $100,000 loan, the $120,000 deposit and the deposit account with us, that credit balance of $70,000 that was checked out by them in favor of the Trusts Company as partial payment of the $75,000 loan; that left a balance due on the $75,000 loan of the principal including interest of $5,000 odd dollars; we got a cheque for that, cleaning it up.

Q. How much would that leave to the credit of the bank in your books? A. $63,000 odd dollars.

Q. Left $63,000 to the credit of the bank? A. Yes.

Q. At the time that loan went through what did you know if you knew anything about the condition of the bank? A. We regarded the bank as being in fairly good shape, subject to opposition on the part of other banks, but I think every one in connection with our company thought the bank was doing fairly good.

Q. On the 6th December, 1910? A. Yes; their statements looked good.

Q. So far as you heard from any of these gentlemen named, Morden, Wilson, Stratton, you thought the bank was perfectly solvent and was doing a good business? A. Yes; I do not say they were doing a particularly good business, but they seemed to be getting along fairly well considering the position they were up against.

Q. If they thought different at that time they did not reveal it to you? A. I do not think they did think differently.

Q. Answer the question? A. They did not.

Mr. Commissioner: Who do you mean by they? A. Mr. Morden and Mr. Wilson and Mr. Stratton. Any discussion we had, the question of the weakness of the bank was never discussed.

Q. How was that $63,000 in what shape was it? A. That was a deposit to their credit.

Q. Was it in their circulation in your vaults? A. No, I do not think so.

Q. Do you know what it consisted of? A. That $63,000 was a balance to the credit of the Farmers Bank subject to withdrawal by them at any time.

Q. And they were able to check it up without any trouble? A. With all deposits we reserve the right to demand certain notice.

Q. This specific sum were they able to check it out without difficulty afterwards? A. Sometimes they would come down with cheques for say five or ten or fifteen thousand dollars, and we would tell them they had not given us any notice according to the understanding.

Q. What was the understanding? A. That was the only difficulty that arose that understanding they should give us reasonable notice of all large withdrawals so that we could make arrangements.

Q. I understood you loaned them $295,000 and got security for it, and then this $63,000 was the balance to their credit, why should not they draw it out immediately? A. They could draw it out; as a matter of fact we had a lien on that according to this loan agreement I have read.

Q. Was that the difficulty? A. We kept in mind we had a lien on that account, and we would have more than an ordinary say as to how that should go out. All financial institutions like to have fairly reasonable notice of all withdrawals. The notice was what we had in mind particularly.

Q. You insisted on the notice? A. No, not in all cases.

Q. What was the reason in other cases where you did not insist upon the notice? A. I do not quite grasp your question.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You say you did not insist upon the notice in all cases; what reason did you give? A. When we did not insist upon the notice we had lots of money available and paid it out; it did not make a pin's difference to us.

Q. You did not ask them for additional security when they came down to cash a cheque? A. When they wanted more money than we felt inclined to give them we would ask them for more security.

Q. They had difficulty in drawing this out, this $63,000? A. I would not say they had any real monumental difficulty.

Q. Did they finally get it all? A. They had a credit in the books at the date of the failure of the bank, $4,596. It ran through my mind that they drew out all this money with the exception of 59 cents at one time.

Q. That is fine for the liquidator.

(Mr. G. T. Clarkson, the liquidator, makes a remark to Mr. Hodgins).

WITNESS: They had this balance you are speaking of down as low as 59 cents at one stage. I heard Mr. Clarkson's remark; there are two items of $5,000 each in transit to Calgary; we did not credit those up to the Farmers Bank until we got advice from Calgary that they had received $5,000 advising us in effect to charge our Calgary branch in our head office books with this $5,000 and credit the Farmers Bank of Canada.

Q. Those two items were remitted in Farmers Bank circulation? A. Yes.

Q. Were they left in your hands in the Calgary branch at the failure? A. I do not recollect; we had somewhere between $5,000 and $10,000 between the two offices in circulation.

Q. At the time of the failure? A. Yes.

Q. For which you have a claim? A. I think all that cash was distributed, nobody had any objection to taking Farmers Bank bills.

Q. You think you got rid of it after the failure? A. Yes, some of it.

The Commission adjourned at 4 p.m. to 11 a.m. tomorrow.

Toronto, May 23rd, 1912.

The Commission resumed at 11 a.m. at Osgoode Hall.

PRESENT: Hon. Sir William Meredith, Commissioner; Frank E. Hodgins, K.C., and John Thompson, K.C., Counsel representing the Dominion Government; I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., representing the Trusts & Guarantee Co.

EDWARD B. STOCKDALE, Examination continued:—

MR. HODGINS: Did you read through that evidence I gave you? A. Yes.

Q. And having read that, do you find any reference—? A. I found no reference to the loan agreement for $80,000.

Q. To what you call the hypothecation agreement? A. Yes.

Q. Have you a copy of it? A. We could not locate that. I had a thorough search made for it and we do not seem to have a copy made of it. I no doubt have that loan agreement so far as the production of it is concerned confused with the other loan agreement.

Q. There is one for the $20,000 loan, but I think I am right in suggesting that there was no formal hypothecation beyond that letter connected with the $80,000? A. I say most emphatically there was.
Q. You have, and I think produced yesterday a list of the notes, didn't you, that were hypothecated for the $80,000? A. No, but the evidence shows that a list which I then described as a partial list of the notes given us at that time was produced.

Q. Yes, we have that; I am asking you if you took at that time a list of the notes that were hypothecated? A. The letter itself would show there was a list of notes at that time; we have no list in our office.

Q. I am asking you if you took a list at the time? A. No record of ours, because we had the notes themselves.

Q. Did you take a list at the time of the notes? A. In any record?

Q. Or on any piece of paper? A. We had a list of notes produced at that time shown by the documentary evidence that is already before this Commission furnished us, as I then said in that document by the provisional directors.

Q. You are referring to that letter of October 11th? A. Yes.

Q. That you say is the list of notes; have you any independent recollection, beyond what you are speaking of as shown by the documentary evidence, that you made out a list? A. No, I would say without a shadow of doubt that I did not make out a list; I would not duplicate the list produced.

Q. You would assume from what you see that there must have been a list in order to arrive at the total? A. Yes, unquestionably.

Q. Although you cannot say whether there was or whether the total was merely given to you? A. There was a list; the documentary evidence would show that; I could not tell of my own independent knowledge; I base my present statement on the letter, on the receipt produced.

Q. You think from that there must have been a list? A. Yes.

Q. I thought you produced and said you had a list of notes yesterday, I may be mistaken, among your papers? A. No, that is a list made up in our account, but that is not a list made up at the time the loan was made.

Q. What became of the notes themselves after the loan was made? A. We would hold the notes.

Q. You held the notes? A. Yes.

Q. For how long? A. We received altogether $100,955 of notes in respect of the $80,000 loan; then with respect to the $20,000 we received $26,500 of notes and certain stock; we received $4,250 notes in respect of $2,380 loan, making a total between the notes and the stock I spoke of of approximately $150,000.

Q. Notes and what? A. That is the notes and the Canadian Loan and Savings Company's stock that was hypothecated. On March 6th, 1907, we returned $4,450 of notes; on March 4th we returned $770 of notes; on February 26th we returned $32,300, and then in addition to all this we had Mr. Travers' own personal note for $81,000.

Q. Did you have any further returns of notes; just give them in order? A. March 12th we appear to have returned the balance of the notes in our possession.

Q. Amounting to how much? A. This seems to total up to about $160,000.

Q. That is the amount you returned? A. This is headed up—I am not saying that this is what we returned at this time—but this is a list I found among our papers headed up in this way: "List of notes, re Travers loan, March 12th, 1907."

MR. COMMISSIONER: Is the last item a $5,000 note? A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: That is the same as the list, Exhibit 44.

MR. HODGINS: The question I asked you was, what was the total amount of the notes you returned on the last occasion, is that an answer to the question? A. That is the best answer I can give you at the moment.

Q. That is, this list will show as to the amount? A. I would assume so, although I cannot speak positively from my own recollection. This appears to be a list of notes as of that date.
Q. This was produced in the County Judge’s Criminal Court as being the property of the Trusts Company as produced by the Crown? A. Yes, that is a copy of what I have before me; it totals up $166,000.

Q. Was that prepared for you by the Crown in that case? A. No, it was taken out of our files and handed over for what it was worth.

Q. In whose handwriting is this, “Travers Loan” (at the left hand top corner)? A. That was a former employee of ours; I recall the handwriting.

Q. What was his name? A. I do not recall the name.

Q. There is struck out of that “delivered to the Farmers Bank,” and re Travers written in pencil? A. That is for our file. (Referring to heading of list.)

Q. Who did that? A. Part of that is my own writing.

Q. Which part? A. “Re” and “loan”; and then “Travers” is Mr. Warren’s writing, at least it looks like it.

Q. Not yours at all events? A. No.

Q. I see there is a mysterious “C” in the corner? A. I do not see anything mysterious about it. It looks like a “C”.

Q. We are interested in that letter just now; there are three notes struck out there “F. W. Stair,” “W. J. Lindsay” and “W. R. Travers,” and they appear to be deducted in some pencilling at the bottom; do you know anything about that? A. The Stair note and the Lindsay note I think related to a different loan, to the $20,500 loan and the $81,000 Travers note; I cannot say why it was struck out of that.

MR. COMMISSIONER: It was not one of the collateral notes; it was the note for the loan? A. Yes, possibly that was the reason for it.

MR. HODGINS: What is the $11,500? A. That is the amount of the Lindsay and Stair notes.

Q. Who did this pencilling here at the bottom? A. I do not know; I do not recognize the figures.

Q. This was, you say, taken from your file and handed over to the Crown Officers? A. Yes, we gave them copies of everything we could find in our office relating to the Farmers Bank.

Q. This is really a duplicate of what you have before you there as the list of notes you were telling us about? A. This appears to be a copy of that.

Q. You have before you a list of the dates at which you returned those notes? A. I pencilled that down the other day for my own reference.

Q. You gave them in reverse order of date? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say looking at this document of March 12th, 1907, all the notes that relate to this $80,000 loan were returned? A. I would not say that, not on that, but I would say Mr. Travers would no doubt see that he got all the notes back; possibly he also got that loan agreement back at that time.

Q. How much does the total of those three dates you gave me, February 26th, March 4th and March 6th amount to? A. They amount to $37,500.

Q. And this would amount, if this pencilling is right, to $63,600 (on Exhibit 44) ? A. Yes.

Q. That would be about $100,000 of notes? A. Yes.

Q. And you had originally $100,955? A. So that would practically account for them all.

Q. On March 12th? A. Yes.

Q. You had parted with all the notes before April 8th, which appears from my recollection of the books to be the date at which that $25,003.81 cheque went through? A. That is the date when the Farmers Bank closed out the deposit account you are speaking of.

Q. Before that date? A. It was before that date our notes were returned.
Q. Did you get back any of the proceeds of that $100,000 note after you handed them back to Mr. Travers? A. We got payment of our loan; we were not interested further in the notes.

Q. The deposits of circulation I suppose were kept track of in some account in your books; my recollection is it began in January, 1909, or January, 1908, at the rate of $1,000 a day? A. I do not recall the day he commenced; I do recall that we got $1,000 a day at some time.

Q. You recall the fact that an account was kept of that in your books? A. I do not think any account would be kept of it; we would take it in as so much cash and it would only form part of our general cash in the till.

Q. I thought it was credited up to the Farmers Bank in the books? A. The amount was, yes. (Turns up book).

Q. When did it begin? A. It began apparently on January 12th, 1909.

Q. It is just I suppose in the form of a credit? A. Yes.

Q. The credit increases every day? A. Yes.

Q. Will this account show the cheques that were given against it? A. It should; it will show their withdrawals and any cheques against it.

Q. I thought you said that they deposited and that you gave them your cheque on the Bank of Montreal? A. They drew on us the same way as you would draw on your own deposit account wherever you had it.

Q. How did they do it? A. By issuing a cheque drawn on the Trusts & Guarantee Company for so much.

Q. Would you give them so much money or a cheque on your bank? A. We might give them money, but usually we would clear a cheque of that nature by giving them a cheque on the Bank of Montreal.

Q. When did they first draw on that account? A. The first one is August 30th, 1909.

Q. From then up to August 30th there was nothing drawn from that account at all? A. No.

Q. The 14th September $50,000; there appears to be quite an hiatus and no further drawing for some time apparently? A. Not for some time.

Q. Till December, $50,000? A. Yes.

Q. And three in January? A. Yes.

Q. And one in February; they do not appear to have been very active in drawing for that and getting legals; it appears to have been fairly inactive account? A. Yes, at that time.

Q. During the first year then they could not have been in need of many legals? A. I do not know what they were in need of; we had a deposit to their credit, and it was subject to their withdrawal, and when they drew we paid their cheques.

Q. I thought perhaps you could tell, if not, all right? A. I knew nothing of the internal management of the Farmers Bank.

Q. Will you let me have, without going over it, just a list of the dates that they so withdrew; you can put that in afterwards? A. All right.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Put the first entry on the credit side and the last entry, and the withdrawals separate? A. Very well.

MR. HODGINS: Just to revert for the moment to that $80,000, did you find last night any cheque which you thought closed that? A. No, I have searched for that cheque before.

Q. The mode of dealing between you and the bank was that the bank would give a cheque on you and you would give a cheque on your bank, that appears to have been followed in connection with this $80,000 loan in the cheques we have here? A. No, I did not say that before, that is not shown by any evidence.

Q. I am suggesting this to you, if there had been any such cheque it would have been a cheque of the Farmers Bank on you? A. Yes.
Q. And then your cheque on your own bank? A. No, not at all; if they gave us a cheque on their own deposit account that was payable to us, so that why in the world would we issue a cheque on the Bank of Montreal and cash it in out of our account down there, and put it back again into the account in the Bank of Montreal?

Q. Look at 57 and 58, I think those are the cheques that we traced up yesterday in that account which began in January and ended in April? A. No, this is a different account I think.

Q. No? A. Yes, a different account entirely.

Q. From what? A. From the one we were discussing a moment ago.

Q. I speak of one in January? A. You spoke of circulation account.

Q. I am speaking of the account I mentioned yesterday, you know the account? A. Yes.

Q. Are those the cheques that deal with it? A. Yes.

Q. Do those cheques appear to be cheques in the first place, by the bank on you? A. Yes.

Q. And then your cheques in favor of the Union Bank? A. Clearing the Farmers Bank cheque drawn on their deposit account with us.

Q. I asked you if there was a cheque for the $80,000 would not there be one cheque of the Farmers Bank on you and the other your cheque in favor of the Union Bank to be looked for? A. No, positively not.

Q. Then you would not follow the same rule in closing out that $80,000? A. Why should we?

Q. I do not know? A. I explained it a minute ago in simple terms.

Q. I do not see why if that was the course adopted between the bank and the company that you should say now there was one $80,000 cheque to close that if in December, 1907, the Farmers Bank would not have given a cheque on you and you would not have given a cheque on the Union Bank? A. The only cheque—we give a cheque on the Bank of Montreal, not on the Union Bank as you say now.

Q. I mean in favour of the Union Bank? A. To clear a cheque drawn on us is when the cheque that is drawn on us is payable to some one other than ourselves. If the Farmers Bank had drawn a cheque in favor of the Trusts Company on the deposit account with the Trusts Company and the Trusts Company went through the same process here, that is of making out one of our cheques on the Bank of Montreal payable to ourselves, we would have drawn the money out of the Bank of Montreal and turned around and deposited in the Bank of Montreal.

Q. What do we expect to find would not be in your company at all, but a cheque of the Farmers Bank on you which would be returned to them? A. Yes, it is usual to return paid cheques.

Q. If we do not find any such cheque, there would be nothing in your record to suggest—— A. We have not got it.

Q. That it was paid by cheque? A. Well, it would not be paid by cheque, that is it would not be paid to ourselves by cheque on our deposit account in the Bank of Montreal.

Q. Are you familiar enough with the circulation account that you were good enough to procure of the entries in, to say whether towards the closing months that became an active account? A. I can give you a copy of that deposit account from beginning to end, of every deposit account for that matter.

Q. I quite appreciate that? A. You are terming a certain account circulation account.

Q. Are you familiar enough to throw any light upon it as to whether it was active or inactive towards its close? A. It was active; that is comparatively active; the ledger shows that.

Q. During the last few months? A. If you mean by active a lot of withdrawals, yes.
Q. That is what I do mean?  A. But there is no account that I identify by the name of circulation other than the one I have spoken of here, and that for a time the deposit consisted of circulation to my knowledge; but the active deposit account that ran through to the time of the failure of the bank was not a circulation account, because they put in foreign exchange and cheques and so forth as well as a certain amount of circulation; it was a mixed deposit slip.

Q. You do not want to give us the impression that circulation ceased to be deposited to the same extent in the last few months?  A. I am not giving that impression at all.

Q. It still kept up, at its usual current, but in addition to that there were other deposits made with you?  A. There were deposits made with us, consisting of circulation, foreign exchange.

Q. And various other things?  A. Yes.

Q. What I am calling circulation account is it began that way, but other matters got in towards the close owing to certain circumstances?  A. We had several different accounts, but they all merged into one another.

Q. Merged when?  A. Either closed out or merged.

Q. When?  A. Different times, the books would have to show that.

Q. What was the surviving account, the one called circulation originally?  A. There was no account in our books called circulation.

Q. What did you call it?  A. We called it ordinary deposit account, the account that was in existence at the time of the failure of the Farmers Bank is the one that was opened on November 2nd, 1910, by the deposit to the credit of the Farmers Bank of $295,000 the proceeds of a loan made at that time.

Q. Would it be from that date that other things besides circulation were deposited?  A. I think that would apply to the account generally speaking for the last two or three years.

Q. What would apply to the account?  A. That is that there was not only what you call circulation but also foreign exchange, other items, cheques and one thing and another.

Q. Will you kindly look at your account and see if you can find anything at all that gives the slightest warrant for that assumption?  A. It is not assumption on my part.

Q. It is knowledge then?  A. Yes.

Q. Then point out an item in the account from the beginning until the close months that would show foreign exchange?  A. I have a slip here right before me dated July 22nd, 1910, showing a cheque of $10,000 which was deposited with us.

Q. That is 1910, and the bank closed December 19th, 1910; you said it would apply to two or three years?  A. I would have to hunt through a host of deposits.

Q. I would be glad to give you the opportunity of verifying that statement?  A. I will have to look back over these accounts.

Q. I think you could probably do that later on?  A. 1909 there is one account here showing I would say from the face of it practically always in the nature of what you call circulation.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not think it is well to take up a lot of time examining these things; let the witness inform himself?  A. I can say now the accounts would show it was circulation up to 1910. I thought it dated back beyond that, but it is 1910 that the other items apparently commenced coming in. Prior to that the items were very small amounts.

Q. The time would be just about the item you have given us in July, that was near the time when the $100,000 loan was made. Going back to the $80,000 loan was anything supplied to you except the notes?  A. I do not recall anything else.

Mr. Commissioner: What does that C in the corner of one of those documents mean?  (Exhibit 44).  A. That C was not put on in our office. I handed these documents myself to Inspector Duncan and I know for a fact that was not on then.

Q. When you handed it to Duncan? A. Yes; I think that is who I handed it to in the first place.

Q. This correspondence shows that changes were made in the notes from time to time, notes withdrawn and others substituted? A. Yes.

WILSON S. MORDEN, Sworn, Examined by:—

MR. HODGINS: Were you connected with the Trusts & Guarantee Company in 1906? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you join it? A. 1st September, 1910.

Q. What had you been doing previous to that? A. Practising law.

Q. I suppose you knew nothing of the affairs between the company and the Farmers Bank till you got there? A. Nothing whatever at that time.

Q. You interested yourself, however, in the matter? A. Not for some weeks, no. I went there on the 1st September and I went there primarily to look after the estates and so on, and I went at a time—I commenced my duties at a time when Mr. Warren, the general manager, was absent to the Coast, and I simply broused about for a few weeks to get in touch with the office and it was not till some time in October that I remember the Farmers Bank came to my attention in any way there.

Q. What was your position in the company? A. Assistant General Manager.

Q. When did you first learn that circulation was coming in on deposit? A. I should think about the time that I looked into the general situation, sometime in October. I knew from the fact that I drew cheques on the Trusts & Guarantee Company from my personal account that I was paid Farmers Bank bills in that way.

Q. That is prior to your coming there? A. No, at the time after I came in; but with the details of the banking I did not know anything about this for some weeks.

Q. You became aware that circulation had been deposited with your company, Farmers Bank circulation? A. Yes, I knew they had to use some bills, I knew as a matter of fact the first thing that came to my knowledge was that they were paying to customers principally at least anyway Farmers Bank bills.

Q. You learned they were making regular deposits every day with you of their circulation? A. I should say I did, some time in October, yes.

Q. Had you anything to do withdrawals. cheques sent down by the Farmers Bank which had been paid by your company as against the deposit account? A. I was occasionally consulted about a cheque, if it was a large amount, the accountant would speak to me.

Q. Who was the accountant? A. Mr. Howard.

Q. Is he there in the office yet? A. Yes, he is here to-day.

Q. What was the necessity or occasion of your being consulted? A. This matter first took an active shape in my mind at least, about the 14th October. There was a meeting of directors on that date and as a matter of form the loan made on the last of July came up for confirmation, I refer now to the loan I think of $100,000; there had been no meeting of the Board apparently during vacation months until the 14th October and at that meeting the loan had been made and was confirmed as a matter of form; but the directors at that time expressed a wish that the matter of the bonds and so on be looked into;—I am speaking now of the $100,000 loan, and it was after that that I fixed that date in my mind as the time I commenced making any inquiries at all as to the position of the Farmers Bank account.
Q. What directors desired it to be looked into? A. This loan on the Keeley Bonds came up along with other mortgage loans, call loans, for confirmation on the agenda that day, and I cannot say what directors particularly spoke of it, there were probably six or seven there and in fact it has been said, and I have no doubt as a matter of personal recollection myself that some of the directors said they would like Mr. Wilson and myself also to look into that loan, it was a large loan and to look into the securities, and so on.

Q. Was anything said at that meeting about a deposit in circulation and cheques, the bank were giving as against it? A. No, I do not think anything came with the deposit account that time.

Q. In October, I think I am right in saying, it became a pretty active account, they were withdrawing considerable amounts? A. Yes; the week following the 14th October, I then looked into the position of the Trust Company and the Farmers Bank accounts, I remember that.

Q. Can you give us in a few words just what you found? A. I found at that time that there was a deposit receipt of $120,000 held by the Trusts & Guarantee Company, issued by the Farmers Bank, and that also there was a current account, I mean a current account in the Farmers Bank at the credit of the Trusts Company of $5,000 or $6,000—it has been stated here a number of times; I also found those two loans, one going back I think to February, $75,000, and the other one of $100,000, and I found a deposit account with the Trusts Company approximately $75,000. I found that position. I looked into those bonds to see if there was a solicitor’s letter with them and I mentioned to Mr. Stratton who generally came down during the week that there was not any report on them and so on. I was looking more into the formal side of the loan. That was the first time I met Mr. Travers. I know Mr. Stratton told me he did not know anything about the details, and that Mr. Travers could give them and Mr. Stratton and Mr. Travers and myself had an interview I think about the 21st October, with regard to those bonds, and so on; that is the first I knew much about the situation.

Q. Did you know then that the Trusts & Guarantee Company had a large amount on savings deposit with the Farmers Bank and had also deposited large amounts of the Hamilton Estate funds there? A. I knew nothing about the Hamilton Estate; I knew just what I have told you now on that date, on the 21st October, I think it was of the $120,000 deposit receipt, and the $5,000 current account. That was the situation then; I did not go back into the account to go through a history of it.

Q. What occurred in that interview you had? A. At that interview I asked Mr. Travers about the formalities of these Keeley bonds and who was the solicitor and so on. I had found the bond mortgage and asked him questions of that kind and I think he told me where I would get any information about that; and I also told him—I was quite green at the Trusts Company and banking business and I had come into a situation entirely new—I told him that I thought those two accounts should be balanced off.

Q. Which two accounts? A. I mean the $120,000 and the $75,000 or $80,000; I gave my personal opinion only, and I said I did not think there should be those simultaneous accounts, that wherever the liability was it ought to be placed. I remember expressing myself in that way to Mr. Travers. The way he put it I think Mr. Travers said in his evidence in one place that Mr. Stratton had said that I wanted to withdraw the deposit account; it was not that way; I thought it was an anomalous position from my personal point of view of having two accounts in that way.

Q. The bank owing you and you owing the bank? A. Yes.

Q. You wanted them set off one against the other and the balance struck? A. That is what I suggested at that time; I suggested he should I thought restrict his loans to his customers and adjust this account.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You finally did come to some arrangement with Travers?  A. That was a week later.

Q. Anything occur in the week?  A. No, I do not think I saw Mr. Travers in that week, I am sure I did not in fact.

Q. Were they withdrawing from the circulation deposit account?  A. From the deposit account, the account will show; I might or might not have been consulted. Those things went on pretty much as a matter of routine.

Q. The reason I ask you if you wanted one set off against the other you naturally would want to see which one was depleted or altered?  A. Frankly from my point of view I am speaking now again—I am not the Trusts Company or was not the Trusts Company but I was put in a position of responsibility there and I was dealing with it with my own light, I thought that that account should be drawn down, the $75,000 account, that an adjustment should be made; that is my position anyway.

Q. At all events if there was any application for funds out of that it would meet with objection by you?  A. I think so, and I fancy—well, the accounts will show whether there was any—

Q. It appears when you made the loan to have amounted to about $75,000?  A. Yes.

Q. What was the final outcome of it, did you and Mr. Wilson look into the matter?  A. No, after this general discussion I had with Mr. Travers on the 28th October, Mr. Wilson was in Toronto; I remember his coming in the office and I spoke to him that I had got what information I could about the situation, that the directors wanted looked at, and told him now it stood. Mr. Stratton was there too on that occasion. Anyway as a result Mr. Travers telephoned for and he came down and met the three of us. Mr. Travers in his evidence did not mention Mr. Stratton being present. Mr. Travers’ attention was not drawn to it or he probably would have recalled it; but Mr. Stratton, Mr. Wilson and myself and Travers were present on the 28th.

Q. And Travers?  A. Yes. The whole situation as to the position of the two accounts were gone into, I remember—I might say that Mr. Travers wanted to maintain an account with the balance as a sort of reserve as he called it, the Trusts Company; he seemed to be under the impression that he was not getting quite fair treatment from the other banks, that is the way he expressed himself and I knew nothing about that—that circulation was being dumped on him at unexpected times, and so on, and that was a sort of safety valve, and that was the object of having it—

Q. You were looking at it from the Trusts Company’s view?  A. Yes.

Q. What did you do finally?  A. What was finally done, Mr. Wilson I know objected to the appearance rather of mining bonds, but did not quite like the look of them, and Mr. Travers said he would give them other security that he wanted to maintain a balance there which he could draw upon, and as a matter of discussion the general form of that loan was worked out; he had a balance there theoretically, but it was not a balance that was available to him at that time owing to the position I was taking. Mr. Travers at that time did not feel very kindly towards me; he thought I was unnecessarily officious.

Q. You were not well enough up in banking, that was all. The net result of the loan arrangement that was put through, however, was to leave that account practically, that circulation account, practically in the same shape, was it not?  A. It left a balance much the same as the credit of the Farmers Bank, but I say it was a balance which they were allowed to draw down, and it left that available which before was not available, it was there, it was a credit—

Q. That is what I say; you put through your loan in the shape we heard of and you left Mr. Travers in a position to draw on the account, and it was just about the same amount it had been when you took hold of it?  A. Only the account as it stood before, owing to my opposition, was not such as could be drawn against.

Q. And the putting through of this loan got rid of your objections? A. It was understood then that he was allowed—I have the authority of Mr. Stratton and Mr. Wilson that he was allowed to draw down that $70,000 whatever stood to his credit, as a result of our arrangement—

Q. Roughly speaking, it was $75,000 when the loan was made and after the loan was made it was $68,000, according to our figures? A. There may be a variation of a few thousand, yes.

Q. You knew the condition of the bank at that time? A. No, I did not any more than my conversation with Mr. Travers—

Q. Did not Mr. Wilson know it? A. Not from anything he said to me.

Q. Did not Mr. Stratton know it? A. They will have to speak for themselves.

Q. From anything they said to you? A. No.

Q. Did not you realize the straits the bank was in then? A. I did not any more than I asked Mr. Travers at the time I wanted this account balanced—he was the general manager of the bank and I had not met him before, but I practically said I thought the bank should deal on their own resources larger, and I think should restrict their loans to customers; that is the position I took.

Q. That is the natural outsider's view; at all events, you were not aware that the bank was in difficulties? A. No; I had been outside of the city and only knew them as one of the banks, one of the smaller banks.

Q. The loan that was put through, we have heard it described by Mr. Stockdale that it was $295,000? A. Yes.

Q. That took up the deposit receipt of $120,000 and interest and the February loan of $75,000 and interest and the loan of $100,000 which was made in July? A. Yes.

Q. And $5,000 of what is called the savings bank account, Mr. Wilson's law costs and left the credit I have spoken of of about $68,000? A. I think that is the way. There was a cheque issued for the $295,000, I remember.

Q. After that were they allowed to draw readily? A. Yes, sir.

Q. No objections made? A. No, of course it was a disappointment when they drew, I must say; I mean calling on you for $75,000 or $10,000; it was not something that you really anticipated from what Mr. Travers said. He said, "This is getting on to the fall of the year, and my farmers will be depositing and so on, and then the account will grow up."

Q. Nothing was said about moving crops? A. I have heard that story somewhere in the papers, I think.

Q. How did you let him have this $68,000, did he draw practically daily? A. That, according to my recollection, it came in the course of the next ten days.

Q. And in answer to his demands you shipped a considerable amount out West? A. I had nothing to do with that, I did not know anything about that.

Q. Who had to do with that? A. I do not think anything left our office for the West.

Q. Mr. Stockdale said so, I thought? A. I think if you inquire that was sent direct from the bank; the Farmers Bank sent direct to Calgary—I have learned a lot of this since, I did not know of these details.

Q. Am I right in assuming your evidence is, so far as you are concerned, you sent nothing to the West; you gave it to them and what they did with it was their own business? A. No; I honored cheques on the Farmers Bank on this $68,000; I did not give it to them. What was sent to the West was not the proceeds of their cheques on the Trusts & Guarantee Company, as I understand it, but those packages of their own circulation.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. That is what I wanted to get at; I understood it was circulation they got back from you? A. No, as far as I knew anything about the circulation—

Mr. Commissioner: If you do not know anything about it, there is no use telling us.

Mr. Hodgins: Who could tell us whether that is the case or not; who would have been in the office that would have known? A. I think Mr. Howard ought to know.

HORACE A. HOWARD, Sworn, Examined by:—

Mr. Hodgins: You are now in the employ of the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you join them? A. I joined the Trusts Company at the end of 1907.

Q. In what capacity? A. Well, when I first went with the company I had no particular capacity, but in the beginning of 1908 I was appointed accountant; I have been accountant ever since.

Q. You were just attached to the office without any designated duties previous to that? A. Yes.

Q. What was Mr. Stockdale’s position when you joined? A. Mr. Stockdale at that time, I think, was assistant manager.

Q. Had you, up to the time you were appointed accountant, anything to do with the Farmers Bank matters? A. No.

Q. Did you know as a matter of knowledge there was circulation being deposited with you daily? A. No, I do not think there was any circulation being deposited at that time.

Q. Which time are you speaking of? A. When I first joined the company.

Q. Take the time you were appointed accountant, was it then they commenced to deposit? A. No, there was nothing then.

Q. It was after you were appointed? A. Yes.

Q. At all events, what was your position when they commenced to make these deposits? A. I was still accountant.

Q. Can you tell us what the course of dealing was between the two; generally speaking, the money would come in daily and when they wanted to draw against it, did they send over a cheque? A. Yes, the bank’s manager would bring down a deposit in the ordinary course of business; it would be credited to their deposit account; when they wanted money out they presented a cheque to us, and it was in due course paid by a cheque of our bank.

Q. Was any difficulty made down to the middle of 1910, in paying any of their cheques? A. I do not remember of any difficulty, I think that we paid every cheque that they presented.

Q. Do you remember any difficulty arising about July, 1910? A. No, I do not remember any specific difficulty at any time.

Q. You never knew that there was any objection to honoring their cheques? A. The only objection, there would not be an objection at all—it is a rule in our office that a cheque for any large amount usually must be shown to the manager, so that he can see where our money is going and how much of it.

Q. That is not the sort of objection I am speaking of; that would not call Mr. Travers down from the bank to urge the payment of the cheque? A. Oh, no, I do not know that.

Q. Was it your duty to see that the two accounts, that is what the bank had to the credit of the Trusts Company and what the Trusts Company had to the credit of the bank, were kept fairly even? A. Oh, no, I was not responsible for that.
Q. Who would be the one to look after that?  A. That would be a matter for the manager.
Q. If the cheques were coming in from time to time reducing the account, would not that be in your department?  A. So far as the records were concerned, they would be.
Q. Did you have a custom of reporting daily to the manager on that subject?
A. No, we did not report daily.
Q. How would he learn that the accounts varied?  He would learn by asking me, and I would give him the information.
Q. If he came and asked you; but you had no system of reporting to him?
A. No.
Q. And you kept no account to see that they did not vary, but they were kept fairly even on each side?  A. No, I kept no record except that the books showed each day what the balance of each account was.
Q. Do you know anything about the transaction of July, 1910, the $100,000 loan; do you remember that going through?  A. I put the entries through.
Q. Had you any information other than what you were told?  A. No.
Q. Did you not know of any objection to honoring cheques of the company until quite late in the year 1910?  A. No, there was no objection.
Q. That would be right down to the time Mr. Morden came in?  A. Yes, the only time, and I do not think that it could be considered an objection, was at the time after the $295,000 loan.
Q. That is what Mr. Morden speaks of; he puts it before the $295,000 loan that when he came he was the one who did the objecting?  A. I did not know anything about that.
Q. Was any one else objecting that you know of?  A. Not that I know of.
Q. It was after the $295,000 loan that you heard objections?  A. Yes, the only objection.
Q. What was the objection and who made it?  A. Well, I do not remember the details of the thing, but as I understood the balance that remained at the credit of the Farmers Bank was not to be withdrawn or only withdrawn on the order of the management.
Q. By permission?  A. Yes.
Q. And that was adhered to?  A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know when the cheques came in how they were paid after that time?  A. They were almost invariably paid by a cheque on our bank.
Q. Did any circulation of the Farmers Bank go back?  A. Back to the Farmers Bank?
Q. Yes?  A. No, I do not think so, not at that time.
Q. Would you know?  A. Yes.
Q. You do not recall any?  A. I do not recall any, I do not know that I have any way of finding that out either.
Q. There were packages sent to your Calgary office and Mr. Morden suggests they were sent by the bank; I want to find out if they were got back from you to the bank?  A. No, they did not get anything back from us. The way that Calgary matter was worked, the bank would ship $5,000 to our Calgary office; as soon as our Calgary office received it they would notify us by letter, and we would then know we had received the money and I would give the bank credit for that; but we did not give them back their bills; we simply gave them credit in their deposit account.
Q. That is probably the way it was done; I wanted to be sure it was so done after that last loan?  A. Oh, yes, in fact I do not remember any occasion when we gave back the Farmers Bank any bills for any Calgary remittance.
Q. You used them I suppose in the ordinary course of business all the time when they were deposited there in paying out over your counter? A. Yes, we were paying them out every day.

Q. Were you getting circulation from any other bank or was it confined altogether to this and what would come in over your counter from clients? A. We might possibly have got an odd lot from the Bank of Montreal; I would not say we confined ourselves absolutely to Farmers Bank bills, because I don't think we did.

Q. The bulk was Farmers bank bills? A. Yes.

VICTOR BURK, Sworn, Examined by:

MR. HODGINS: What connection had you with the Farmers Bank? A. I was accountant in the Farmers Bank from July, 1910; before that, other positions in the office.

Q. You became accountant in July, 1910? A. I think around there.

Q. What had you to do with the deposit account and the circulation with the Trusts Company? A. I made nearly all the withdrawals and a number of the deposits.

Q. Did you do that before July, 1910? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. From that on you did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there up to the failure of the bank? A. Yes.

Q. You were teller for a short time and previous to that you were discount clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And while you were paying teller you made up parcels for deposit, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And after the 15th when you became accountant you took them down yourself, did you not? A. The majority of them.

Q. The deposits were made regularly were they not? A. Every day I believe, with few exceptions.

Q. And how about the withdrawals from July on? A. Whenever we needed the money.

Q. Did you need it fairly often? A. Fairly often.

Q. Weekly or monthly occurrence? A. Practically a daily occurrence.

Q. What would you take down? A. Well different things from July on. There was the circulation to a certain extent and then we sold them exchange and cheques on other banks and sundry bank bills.

Q. Always maintaining the same amount of circulation, your own circulation? A. It varied; I know one occasion when they got too much, we cut it down to $500 a day, other times, it was $1,000.

Q. Who used to go down with the cheques for the money you wanted to get back? A. I used to go down.

Q. Had you any difficulty in getting them paid? A. I could not say difficulty, but I had sometimes long waits; I do not know what the matter was.

Q. Did that occur often? A. I could not say; some days I would get it easy enough and other days I would have to wait; I could not say how often it occurred.

Q. Were you the only one who went down with cheques? A. From July, I think so; there may have been some days when other people, went down, I do not remember.

Q. Was not Dennis? A. He was accountant before July; in July he was transferred to a branch.

Q. Who made the difficulty when you went down that required you to wait? A. I could not say that; I saw Mr. Howard and he did the transactions.
Q. Did you report to Mr. Travers the difficulties?  A. On one occasion Mr. Travers had to come down.

Q. On only one occasion so far as you know?  A. As far as I know, I know of one occasion.

Q. Is that the only time you reported to him?  A. Yes. I called up Mr. Renshaw and told Mr. Renshaw about it and he presumably told Mr. Travers and Mr. Travers came down.

Q. Was that the only occasion from July to the failure of the bank?  A. That is the only one I can recall.

Q. If that is the only one you recall, it would just come down to that one item, would not it?  A. They may have telephoned Mr. Travers and arranged it over the telephone, I could not say that.

Q. There is no one else we could look to to tell us. You used to draw out from July pretty large sums didn’t you?  A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often did you send circulation to Calgary?  A. I think about every month for a while until the Calgary office got stocked up and we did not send any more.

Q. Is that the office of the Trusts Company?  A. Yes.

Q. You used to make up parcels and send them off?  A. Our teller made them up.

Q. That was in addition to the deposits with the Trusts Company here?  A. Yes.

Q. After the loan of October of $295,000 was made did you still go down with the money after that?  A. Yes.

Q. Had you any difficulty then?  A. Well, not as long as our balance kept up to a proportion, but after we had to send down exchange—

Q. What do you mean by your balance kept up?  A. I think we had about $70,000 after that transaction went through; I think we were allowed down to about $20,000 or $50,000, and after that we had to send down exchange.

Q. Why?  A. I could not say that.

Q. If you had $20,000 there, or whatever you had, why could not you draw it?  A. Because we wanted $20,000, sometimes we would draw $20,000 a day, so that if we did not take it one day we would probably need it the next.

Q. What was the object of depositing these to draw on?  A. So that we could pay the clearing.

Q. Was money sent to Calgary after that loan was made of $295,000?  A. I could not say that; our parcel book will show that.

Q. Did you ever get back your own circulation from the Trusts Company?  A. I believe we did; I made up a circulation report which ought to show, the time before, the amount we sent down there and the amount we got back.

Q. When did you make that up?  A. I made that up at the time of the other trials for Inspector Duncan.

Q. What trial do you remember it was used at?  A. I do not think it was used; it was made up for his convenience.

Q. If we can find that—?  A. It will save going through all the books?

Q. You could probably identify that if I were to send it to you?  A. Yes.

Q. And getting them back were they given to you back in open packages or loose or closed packages?  A. We sent circulation down there and we sent it, I remember one package contained about $15,000,—that package had to be broken when we got circulation back.

Q. Do you remember from that statement you made out, have you a recollection of how much the total was of what you got back?  A. No, I have not, sir.

Q. Would it be more than $15,000 or $20,000?  A. I could not say; I know our circulation was up to the limit and we had to get it back, but how much I could not say.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

HENRY A. C. RENSHAW, Sworn, Examined by:—

Mr. HODGINS: What was your connection with the Farmers Bank? A. Manager.
Q. Manager of what? A. Of the Toronto Branch.
Q. When? A. I think it was the latter end of September, 1909.
Q. And all through 1910 until the failure? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What do you know about this deposit of circulation with the Trusts Company? A. There was an arrangement we sent down $1,000 of it every day of our own notes.
Q. In addition to what was sent to Calgary? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did that continue for any length of time? A. Yes, sir, right up to the suspension.
Q. All the time you were there? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who would take the circulation down? A. Mr. Burk, the accountant; that was after July, 1910; previous to that, Mr. Dennis.
Q. Who is Mr. Dennis? A. He was the accountant; he was transferred to Norval as manager.
Q. If you wanted to draw, who would take down the cheque? A. Mr. Burk.
Q. Was there any difficulty in getting cheques cashed when you wanted circulation? A. Yes, sir, there were at times.
Q. How often? A. I could not say; well, possibly six times; I could not say.
Q. How did the objection reach you? A. Mr. Howard would telephone me, that is the accountant.
Q. To what effect? A. He did not know whether he would be able to supply us with a cheque that morning.
Q. What was the reason? A. Our account was low.
Q. Did he mean there was not sufficient funds for the cheque? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would that be the case? A. We had the funds there; the account at this time would be about $70,000.
Q. What was the amount of the cheque? A. They would vary from $5,000 to $20,000.
Q. What did he mean by saying it could not be paid; there were not sufficient funds: you had plenty to your credit, hadn't you? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he explain what the objection was? A. No, sir; not to me.
Q. Did you understand what the objection was? A. No, sir.
Q. He gave you no reason? A. Well, he would say either the general manager was out; he could not get it, or we would have to see him about it.
Q. What did you do, report to Mr. Travers? A. Reported to Mr. Travers.
Q. Did you ever go down yourself and make arrangements? A. I think Mr. Travers sent me down once, if I recollect.
Q. Who did you see? A. I saw Mr. Warren and Mr. Stratton.
Q. And what took place between you? A. I forget what the conversation was.
Q. You went down to get money? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they were not anxious to give it to you? A. No, sir.
Q. Did they give you any reason why they would not? A. Well, yes; I have forgotten what the reason was now.
Q. Did you get it in the end? A. Yes, they decided to give it to me.
Q. Did they look up the accounts as between you and the bank? A. Not then; not before me.
Q. Did they say anything about the amount the bank owed them? A. I do not recollect.
Q. Did they say anything about the amount they owed the bank and compare the two? A. No.
Q. Do you know anything about the return of circulation? A. No, sir; there was some returned, but not very much.

Q. I suppose that is all you know in the matter? A. That is all.

Mr. Hellmuth: Mr. Hodgins, will you ask Mr. Renshaw whether the circulation that was returned was because the bank had exceeded their circulation and had to get it back.

Mr. Hodgins: How was that? A. I think that was the reason it was gotten back.

Q. When the circulation was got back they had exceeded their circulation? A. Yes.

Mr. Hellmuth: What they were authorized to circulate.

Mr. Hodgins: They got back this from the Trusts Company? A. Yes.

Q. How would that help the situation; do you mean exceeded circulation, including this from the Trusts Company? A. No, sir.

Q. This deposit with the Trusts Company was not treated as circulation? A. What is that?

Q. What you had deposited with the Trusts Company, was that treated as being in circulation? A. Oh, certainly.

Q. Getting it back would withdraw it from circulation, that is the idea? A. Yes.

Q. And that only occurred on one occasion? A. To my knowledge.

Q. When was that? A. I could not recall the date.

Q. Just about? A. I should judge it would be September, 1910.

Q. And that never occurred again? A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Q. I wish to ask you another question, at Mr. Travers' suggestion: what were the size of the bills that were got back from the Trusts Company? A. I did not see them, but I think it was twenty-fives.

Q. What was done with them; were they sent to Calgary? A. I do not remember; Mr. Travers said they were, but I do not remember.

Q. Were they large bills? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That were got back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or were sent to Calgary? A. It would be small circulation sent to Calgary, mostly five's; I think the parcel made up $3,000 in five's and $2,000 in ten's.

Q. You are speaking of this circulation what was got back from the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Those were large bills; I understand they were twenty-five's.

FREDERICK M. HOLLAND, Sworn, Examined by:—

Mr. Hodgins: What is your occupation now? A. I am general manager of the Dominion Permanent Loan Company.

Q. Were you its manager on the 26th February, 1910? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have an arrangement with the Farmers Bank to take deposits of circulation? A. Yes.

Q. That began, did it, about February, 1910? A. No, it began on January 15th, 1910.

Q. What extent was deposit made with you? A. They deposited $500 a day.

Q. For how long? A. And they would draw it out at the end of each month.

Q. How long did that go on? A. Right up till the bank closed; they deposited $500 a day and we paid out the money; we paid them no interest and had ten days' notice of withdrawal.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. The arrangement that they were to have no interest was at whose suggestion, at their suggestion? A. I think it was at mine.

Q. I have a letter here from Mr. Travers: "Re our conversation of to-day"—? Is that Mr. Travers' letter?

Q. Yes; perhaps you have it February 26th? A. It is signed Mr. Renshaw, the letter I have.

Q. Yes, that is the one; how did this letter come to be written? A. Mr. Renshaw saw me about it, and they wanted 2% interest, and I told them I would not give them any interest.

Q. Why? A. I wanted to make all the money I could. I thought I could get the money without interest and so I made an effort and got it.

Q. You judged from the conversation that this was a convenience for them? A. I knew it was a convenience to them and a profit to us.

Q. You refused to give interest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This letter says: "We wish no interest on this deposit"? A. That was in answer to my intimation.

Q. His way of putting it? A. Yes, that I would not give any interest.

Q. They thought it better to fall down gracefully? A. Yes.

Q. You paid it out over the counter and they drew it out, you say—? A. We paid any demands made on us—you see we used about $1,500 a day circulation, we have to get from some bank, and we paid out theirs over the counter and got the rest from other banks.

Q. What do you mean by saying they drew it out at the end of the month? A. They would draw a cheque on us and we would give them a cheque on the Imperial Bank for the balance.

Q. The balance would be just the $500 a day? A. Yes, sir; you see here, take for instance the 29th of January, their balance was $6,500; they drew out $6,000; at the end of April it was $13,000, and drew it all.

Q. How much did they deposit with you all told? A. I have the record here, but it will take me a long time to make it up.

MR. COMMISSIONER: $500 a day? A. Yes, for about a year, but the account was squared at the end of each month within $500.

MR. HODGINS: How did they come to make that arrangement with you; were you connected in any way with the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Are any of the directors of the one company on the board of the other? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do not the Trusts & Guarantee Company hold the largest amount of stock? A. In our company?

Q. Yes? A. Well, I do not think they have a share.

Q. How are they connected? A. Not connected in any way; I hold about ten shares of their stock; that is about the connection.

Q. Are you a director of the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you then? A. 1910?

Q. Yes? A. No.

Q. What members on your board were on the Trusts & Guarantee Company board? A. Mr. Stratton, Mr. Karn and Mr. Kloepfer.

Q. Who introduced this matter to you of the Farmers Bank? A. It was introduced to me by Mr. Warren; one day I was talking to him and he says, "Why don't you do something, you are paying out money every day, different banks, why don't you make them deposit with you?" I said none of them had shown any inclination so far and he says, "I think the Farmers Bank would do it". I said, "Tell them to come and see me". That was the end of it as far as he and I were concerned.
Q. That is how it arose?  A. At least I presume so, because Mr. Renshaw came to see me.
Q. Had Travers any stock in your company?  A. No, sir.
Q. There is some stock of the Dominion Permanent mentioned in connection with one of these loans?  A. That if I remember rightly was some stock which Mr. Travers bought out one of our shareholders, got him to trade for his stock; I do not know whether they hold it now or not, but I think they did at one time have a few shares; in the same way they got some of our debentures.

DUNCAN S. MACCORQUODALE, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: Do you believe in the binding nature of an oath?  A. I believe every person should speak the truth on all occasions.
Q. Do you believe in the binding nature of an oath?  A. I do.
Q. The oath you have taken?  A. Yes.
Q. Were you selling stock for the Farmers Bank?  A. Yes, I sold a little.
Q. Who were you working for?  A. I think the matter was introduced to me first by the provisional directors.
Q. Who were you working for in selling the stock?  A. That is to say who paid me?
Q. Yes?  A. Mr. Travers, anything I got, I got from Mr. Travers.
Q. Who employed you to sell it, Lindsay?  A. No.
Q. Who did?  A. I think the first I sold, I think it was at the instance of the provisional directors and afterwards Mr. Travers gave me authority to sell.
Q. You had no authority from Lindsay to sell?  A. No.
Q. You were not his sub-agent in any way?  A. In no way; I may say after a certain period when I wanted to sell more, having made one fairly good sale as I thought I began to think I could sell stock and I spoke to Mr. Travers about it and he refused to deal with me, referring me to Mr. Lindsay, saying that it was entirely in his hands, and Mr. Lindsay refused to give me any stock to sell at what I thought a fair commission, and so we did no business.
Q. You subscribed for stock in this bank?  A. Yes.
Q. How many shares?  A. One share.
Q. Ever pay for it?  A. No, I expected to pay for it out of commissions.
Q. There were three of you, three of the same name subscribed for one share each?  A. Yes, I subscribed for one.
Q. Just at the closing moment, was it not?  A. I cannot say now just when it was, it was some time ago and I am not as young as I was.
Q. Were you intimate with Lindsay?  A. No, only met him there at the bank.
Q. At what bank?  A. At the premises down on King St., at the North American Life when their offices were there.
Q. The offices of the bank?  A. Yes, the offices of the Farmers Bank.
Q. What was the occasion of meeting him?  A. I went to the bank because I was acquainted with some of the provisional directors, one of whom I had known since he was practically a boy.
Q. What did you and Lindsay do then?  A. Lindsay and I did not do anything.
Q. Lindsay says you did?  A. I had no trade with Lindsay at all.
Q. Did you ever go down with Lindsay to the bank towards the foot of Yonge St., the Traders Bank?  A. Yes, I met him one day and he asked me to take a walk.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Where did you meet him? A. I think I met him about the corner of Bay and King on the street.

Q. Were you in a hurry? A. No, apparently not.

Q. Going anywhere? A. He asked me would I take a walk, and I walked with him and we went down Bay St. to Front, and along Front St. to the Traders Bank; he went in.

Q. Just strolling along leisurely? A. Went along leisurely, he went in there and he had some transaction with the teller or bank official.

Q. What was it? A. He drew some money.

Q. How much? A. I do not know.

Q. Did you see the bills? A. I saw them being handed out, but I stepped a little aside, it was not my business and I was not curious; I noticed they were large bills; I think they were about fifties he got, I do not know.

Q. How did you notice that? A. I was looking, I could see them handed out, but how many he got I do not know.

Q. What did he do with them? A. He rolled them in a roll and put them in his pocket and then he walked up and went to the bank; at this time it was in the Stair Building; we went in there and my recollection of it is he handed a package—I supposed it was the money he had had in his pocket—he handed a package to Mr. Travers.

Q. Who else was there? A. I do not know who was there. There were two or three offices, Mr. Travers as I recollect it was in front of the door, as we entered a general lobby, a general open space there in front, and I think Mr. Shaver had an office to the west of that.

Q. Was Dr. Nesbitt there? A. I did not see him.

Q. What room did you and Lindsay go into? A. Entered the front room.

Q. Whose room is the front room? A. We entered one general room, and these offices were off that room.

Q. It was the general room you went into? A. Yes.

Q. Sit down? A. I could not say whether we sat down or not; I had a habit of going in there often because I was wishing to get shares to sell if possible and naturally gravitated there on a good many occasions when there was no business of any kind for me at all.

Q. Did Lindsay ask you to accompany him? A. He asked me to take a walk.

Q. After you got through taking a walk and getting the money did he tell you to go back with him and tell you he wanted you to be a witness? A. He did not say so.

Q. Did he invite you back to the bank? A. I cannot say he did; I went in with him and went out with him and we discussed some matters; I don't know what they were.

Q. How long did he stay there? A. At the bank?

Q. Yes? A. At the Traders Bank?

Q. No, at the Farmers Bank when he got back? A. I do not think we were there over a few minutes.

Q. Was Travers the only one you saw? A. I cannot say whether I saw Mr. Shaver or Mr. Fitzgibbon; I frequently saw them, but I do not know whether I saw them then or not.

Q. You saw Lindsay hand a package to Travers? A. Yes.

Q. Quite sure? A. Quite sure, certainly, no doubt.

Q. You know what it was and what was in it? A. I inferred it was the money he got down at the other bank, but I could not swear as to whether it was money or not.

Q. Was Lindsay talking to you about this the last few days? A. Yes, Lindsay talked to me about it before he was on trial for conspiracy asking me if I recalled the matter of our having taken a walk.
Q. What else?  A. He asked me if I recalled our going down and getting the package and coming up to the other place.
Q. And paying it to Travers?  A. Yes, he did.
Q. You told him you did remember?  A. I told him yes, I recalled it, because I might say that it was the first time I had seen such a large wad of money in the hands of one individual that was not behind a bank railing.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You speak of handing a parcel, what do you mean by a parcel?  A. It was something, I do not know whether he had a wrapper around it or not.
Q. Something wrapped in paper?  A. I could not say whether it was wrapped in paper or not.
Q. Could you not see if it was bills, you could tell?  A. I was not there to watch.
Q. You saw it pass from hand to hand you say?  A. Yes, but I did not think I should be called on.
Q. What do you mean by calling it a parcel and not knowing whether it was money, would not you know it was money if you saw it?  A. I would know if I saw it now.
Q. Would not you know if you saw it then?  A. I would know, but I cannot recall further than he pulled something out of his pocket, and apparently the same pocket he had put it into when he left the other bank.
Q. Was it put in a parcel at the Traders Bank?  A. I think he rolled it up and put a wrapper around it quite a large package.
Q. It would not be a very large package if you are right about the number of bills, one hundred fifty-dollar bills would not be a very large package?  A. It was so large that it drew my attention when I saw him getting it.

MR. HODGINS: What did Lindsay say when he handed this over?  A. I do not know what he said.
Q. Did he say anything?  A. I do not know what he said, I could not say; my interest was to sell stock.
Q. How long was he there with Travers?  A. I do not know, a few minutes; I think Travers proposed to go out and have a cigar or something on the head of it.
Q. Did you go?  A. Yes, went down to the place on the other corner opposite the bank.

The Commission adjourned at 1 P.M. to 2 P.M.

The Commission resumed at 2 P.M., May 23rd, 1912.

DUNCAN S. MACCORQUODALE, Examination continued:

MR. HODGINS: You received something like $1,080 in commissions?  A. Yes, probably a little more; I am not sure.
Q. Whom did you get those from?  A. I had only one large one, that was Mr. Devean, that would be 200 shares.
Q. Who paid you those commissions?  A. Mr. Travers; I cannot name the whole of them; I can recall some.
Q. I am not asking you anything more about it; what do you know about how Dr. Beattie Nesbitt became President?  A. We were in the bank, the office premises on King St. one day.
Q. You and he?  A. We, I was and Mr. Travers and Mr. Lown and Mr. Smith, I do not know who all were there, and the question of Colonel Munro being made President, Mr. Travers seemed to think that somebody who had more business advantages than he would be better as President and I recollect suggesting Dr.
Nesbitt because of his at that time strong pull apparently with the Government and the Tory organizations in the City; I suggested he would be a good man to bring in business.

Q. How long before the organization meeting was that? A. That was when we were on King St.

Q. How long before November, 1906? A. It would be some time in the summer or fall, August or September something like that, it was before they moved their offices up.

Q. And that suggestion was not accepted? A. The suggestion was made to Mr. Travers.

Q. And it was not accepted? A. It was accepted by him. He says, "Who is he and what does he do"? He seemed to me not to know him, and finally he seemed to have much doubt of my being able to negotiate it, but I undertook to see Nesbitt about it and I saw Nesbitt in the Registry Office and the result of a long talk was that he would like to see Mr. Travers. The result of that was that after a time I went with Mr. Travers up to the Registry Office and introduced the one to the other and I remained in the outer office while they went in to have a talk about it. Later I arranged a meeting at the Queen's Hotel between the two. Later I arranged another meeting and I think Mr. Travers had left the Queen's by that time; finally they made their arrangements together; Dr. Nesbitt would not sign for me, my interest was in getting a commission, he would not sign for me, said he must discuss the thing with the Manager, he would know if he would be able to give sufficient time to perform his duties as President, and it resulted in his being President.

Q. Who took his subscription then? A. I did not take it, he would not sign for me.

Q. When you went to see him? A. I went to see him.

Q. When you went to see him first did you tell him that somebody would pay up his stock for him? A. I told him nothing and I knew nothing about that at all. I negotiated him as soon as a bona fide man that was going to take stock.

Q. You never landed him in the sense of getting him to sign a stock subscription? A. No, I did not get him to sign it at all, but I got the commission for it.

Q. When was the first negotiation for him again in the summer? A. The only thing I am clear about is when we were in the office on King St., I do not know when we left that office, I cannot say.

Q. That is all you remember? A. Yes, that is all I remember of it.

Mr. Travers: Will you ask him if he was getting stock from Smith before I went in the bank?

Mr. Hodgins: Were you getting stock as a stock seller from Smith? A. I think Mr. Smith was the one; it was one of the provisional directors introduced the sale of stock to me and I sold some; I do not recall what, but I sold a few.

Q. Did you charge up or try to collect any commission on Beattie Nesbitt's stock? A. I got paid a commission of 5% on $3,000; I took Mr. Travers' word for it that he had signed for $3,000.

Q. When did you get that? A. In the Stair Building.

Q. Was that after the bank commenced active operations? A. I cannot say, I cannot recall it, but it was in the Stair Building.

Q. Was that percentage included in the $1,080? A. It would make more than $1,080.

Q. 5% on $3,000? A. No, but I got $1,000 out of one sale.

Q. I am asking you about this commission on Beattie Nesbitt's stock? A. I got $150.

Q. After the bank commenced business? A. I cannot say that.

Q. Your stock was afterwards cancelled? A. Mr. Travers told me it should be cancelled.

Q. How much was it? A. One share.
JAMES R. STRATTON, Sworn, Examined by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. You were President I think of the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. I was.

Q. During 1906 and 1907? A. Yes.

Q. 1908 and 1909 and right down to 1910? A. Yes, right down to last January.

Q. You ceased to be? A. I resigned.

Q. Are you connected with it in any way now? A. Yes.

Q. In what way? A. As a director.

Q. Were you a Member of Parliament in 1906? A. I was up to the time I do not remember the year; I resigned the Provincial Secretaryship just before Mr. Ross went to the country, whatever year that was in, I just forget for the moment the year.

Q. You were not a member of the Dominion House in 1906? A. No; it was when Mr. Whitney came into power, the year he came in.

Q. Did you know Travers in 1906? A. No, never heard of him.

Q. I thought Mr. Warren introduced you to him in 1906? A. Oh, in 1906?

Q. Yes? A. The first I knew of Mr. Travers was when he came to borrow money from the Trusts Company.

Q. Was it you who arranged the terms of the loan? A. No.

Q. Had you anything to do with that? A. No, that was arranged between Mr. Travers and Mr. Warren.

Q. The details you did not interest yourself in? A. No.

Q. Did you suggest the bonus to Mr. Warren that was paid of $1,000 on the first loan and $500 on the other? A. I don’t think so.

Q. Left entirely to him? A. Yes.

Q. Had you anything to do at all with the getting of the certificates? A. Nothing whatever.

Q. Do you happen to know whether you were in Ottawa on November 6th, 1906? A. I could not say; I might have been.

Q. At all events, you had nothing to do with getting the certificate? A. So as to put it clearly and distinctly, I had no interview with any member of the Government or any official of the Government or any Department of the Government or with any person else with regard to the certificate.

Q. No Member of Parliament? A. No.

Q. Nor with Travers? A. Nor with Travers.

Q. That is pretty broad? A. Yes, I do not want any doubt about that, because I had nothing to do with it.

Q. After the bank started, had you anything to do with the loans that were given by the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. Yes, I had; in 1910, I think it was, I saw Mr. Travers, and had two or three interviews with him with regard to the account of the Trusts & Guarantee Company.

Q. That was in connection with the last loan, $395,000? A. Yes, I had a talk with Mr. Warren with regard to the other loan.

Q. Between the time of the first loan and the time of the last loan you were the chief executive officer, you were president? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Warren was the manager? A. Yes.

Q. Did you keep pretty close touch with the business of the Trusts & Guarantee Company? A. I kept in touch with those matters that came before the board.

Q. Was that all? A. Yes; the business of the office was conducted by the officers.

Q. Yes, but you being president, had you any special duty in regard to the business? A. If there was anything of any importance they generally spoke to me about it.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. You would be consulted by the manager?  A. Yes.

Q. But you did not make a practice and did not go there day by day and really keep in touch with the work?  A. No.

Q. Were you consulted before the arrangement was made about the deposit of circulation?  A. No.

Q. When did you learn that the payments made on this $80,000, the first loan, had been reversed in the company's books?  A. I could not say as to that; I do not think I heard anything about that till it came out in the Police Court evidence.

Q. You think nothing was said to you about that?  A. I do not think so.

Q. Was anything said to you about the account that was opened in January, 1907, it ran along till April?  A. That was the account in the Trusts Company?

Q. Yes?  A. No. Have you reference there to the $20,000 loan?

Q. I have reference there to the deposits that were made from time to time?  A. No, I had no knowledge of that.

Q. Which totalled $80,506.81?  A. No.

Q. That was left in Mr. Warren's hands?  A. Yes.

Q. Did you know of the depositing of circulation at the rate of $1,000 to $500 a day?  A. Not till after Mr. Morden—Mr. Warren was away and Mr. Morden spoke to me with regard to the account.

Q. Did you know about the transfer of the loan in the form of a deposit receipt of $120,000?  A. The transfer of the loan with regard to the deposit receipt?

Q. There was a deposit receipt issued by the bank in favour of the Trusts Company?  A. The deposit receipt given by the bank?

Q. In favour of the Trusts Company?  A. Of $120,000?

Q. Yes?  A. That would be the money deposited by the Trusts Company in the bank.

Q. Yes?  A. No, I was not aware of that.

Q. You, I suppose, were aware that the Hamilton estate money had been deposited in the Farmers Bank?  A. No.

Q. Was not the Hamilton estate a Peterboro estate?  A. It was a Peterboro estate, but the business of the Trusts Company was being conducted by the manager; he did not refer to me particularly about in what bank he would deposit it.

Q. I am asking you if you happen to have known, seeing it was a Peterboro concern?  A. No.

Q. Were the Trusts & Guarantee Company the liquidators?  A. Yes.

Q. Then did you your first knowledge of the state of financial relations between the bank and the company date from Mr. Morden's coming in—I mean apart from the April loan?  A. In what way? In connection with the Farmers Bank and the Trusts Company I had nothing to do with their negotiations; if there were any negotiations; I do not know who has accounts on deposit in the Trusts Company or who has not.

Q. Had you anything to do with putting through the loan for $100,000?  A. When would that be?

Q. I think that was July 31st, 1910?  A. Was that the time that Mr. Travers came to Peterboro?

Q. Very likely?  A. Mr. Warren told me that Mr. Travers had made application for a loan of $100,000, and he asked me if I would see him if he came down, and I told him I had no objections.

Q. If Mr. Warren was looking after all these matters, why should he suggest that you see Travers?  A. I suppose it was a large loan and he wanted to have my approval of it if it was to go through.
Q. Did he submit to you what Travers proposed? A. Mr. Travers came down and explained to me himself; I telephoned Mr. Warren and I said to him that if he was satisfied with the security I had no objections to his helping him. There was a run on the bank at Lindsay, as I recollect it, and I think he had some trouble somewhere else, and the money that was being advanced was a temporary loan, and I think it was to tide him over the difficulties that he had arisen at Lindsay, if I remember correctly.

Q. What security did Warren tell you was being offered? A. He said he had bonds in the Keeley Mine, $1,000,000 of bonds, that Travers had been offered some large amount, $700,000 or $800,000, I think, or six or seven or eight hundred thousand dollars for the mine and had declined it; that it was one of the rich mines of the Cobalt District, and he felt that he was absolutely secure in making that loan, and that he had in addition to that about $120,000 of the bonds of the American Piano Company, that were quoted somewhere around 110 or 100 at that time; I just forget the additional security he had.

Q. When Travers came down to see you then did he offer the same security that you had heard of from Warren? A. Yes, talked the same security.

Q. Explained about the mine? A. No, he did not make any explanations about the mine.

Q. Did you understand it was a producing mine? A. I understood it was about to produce and it was producing; that he had refused a large sum for it.

Q. What were the final arrangements made with Travers for the loan? A. With Mr. Warren?

Q. No, with you? A. He did not make any final arrangements with me; he just spoke in a general way.

Q. The final arrangements were made with Warren? A. Yes.

Q. In addition to the million dollars of Keeley bonds, was there anything else stipulated for? A. Not with me at that time.

Q. And you do not know anything about the stock in the Keeley mine? A. What I understood was he gave—subsequently to the conversation at Peterboro I understood—

Q. From whom? A. From Mr. Stockdale or Mr. Warren, from the office from the Trusts Company that he had given a bonus of either $25,000 or $30,000 of stock on the Keeley mines for the loan in addition to the rate of interest that he was paying, but it was not looked on in the office as being of great value at this time.

Q. That was no part of your stipulation with him? A. No.

Q. You only heard it afterwards from either Stockdale or Travers? A. Yes, Stockdale and Mr. Travers—well, Mr. Travers felt that Mr. Stockdale was not friendly to him, and that Mr. Stockdale wanted more and a larger bonus than he obtained, because Mr. Stockdale put no particular value on the mine, and Mr. Travers spoke to me with regard to additional security; that he would be satisfied to place in my hands in trust $50,000 of stock of the Keeley mine; that if the Trusts Company loan was paid off the stock would go back to the bank; if it was not paid off, the stock would be the property of the Trusts Company.

Q. When was this arrangement made? A. That was made in the Trusts Company; he came down to speak to me about Mr. Stockdale.

Q. After the Peterboro interview? A. Oh, yes.

Q. After the loan had gone through? A. I suppose so.

Q. The bonus arranged was $25,000, which was transferred to Mr. Stockdale, was it not, in trust? A. Yes.

Q. The other was in trust to you. The loan had gone through? A. Yes.

Q. And then he came down and offered you $50,000 more? A. Yes, he was not satisfied with Mr. Stockdale. He said, "I willentrust you with $50,000
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

—I place in your hands in trust $50,000; you are to hold that on these terms”. I said, “All right, Mr. Travers”.

Q. What was the object of that if the loan had gone through, if he had put up the bonus? A. I could not say; that was his own way of doing it.

Q. Did you ask him what were his reasons? A. No, I did not ask him anything about it.

Q. Did you inquire from Mr. Warren? A. No, Mr. Warren was at the Coast.

Q. Did you inquire from Mr. Stockdale as to why you should be offered this? A. No, I said nothing about it; I handed it over to Mr. Stockdale afterwards.

Q. I understood from Mr. Stockdale yesterday that no entries were made at all with regard to the $25,000 of stock or the $50,000? A. I could not say whether they were or not.

Q. They did belong to the company? A. No, the $25,000 of a bonus to Mr. Stockdale was absolutely the property of the company; the other was in trust, that if the Trusts Company was paid off the amount of the loan then it belonged to bank and if they were not it belonged to the Trusts Company.

Q. That was all word of mouth? A. This was all word of mouth.

Q. No document signed? A. No document, except that I pinned to the stock certificate the conditions on which I accepted it.

Q. And that has been handed back, has it not, to the liquidator since? A. When the loan was paid off, the certificate went back to the bank with the other securities.

Q. Where was it retained in the meantime? A. In the Trusts Company.

Q. Who did you give it to? A. I do not remember, I think it was Mr. Stockdale.

Q. Did you tell him what the commissions were? A. Yes.

Q. You had pinned them on in the meantime? A. They were on in the meantime, that is my recollection of it.

Q. So that he knew from the time of the loan exactly what that $50,000, the conditions on which you held that? A. As soon as I handed it over to him I told him.

Q. Do you know where the certificate for that $50,000 was held? A. No, I do not know where that is; I think that was sent back with the other.

Q. Had you any independent knowledge about the Keeley Mine at the time you lent that money? A. No, nothing further.

Q. Than what you have told us? A. Than what I have told you, Mr. Warren was to look into the securities.

Q. Were you consulted later with regard to the $295,000 loan? A. Yes, Mr. Morden spoke to me about that.

Q. At the time of the $100,000 did you know that they were depositing circulation with you daily? A. I did not know they were depositing it daily; I knew that the Trusts Company was circulating to some extent some of the Farmers Bank bills.

Q. Did you know of the understanding that the amount deposited in the bank by the Trusts and the amount deposited in the Trusts Company by the bank should be kept about equal? A. No, I knew nothing about that.

Q. After the last loan, what position was the bank in when that loan was made? A. So far as we knew at that time the bank was in an excellent position.

Q. You heard no rumors about it? A. We heard rumors of course, but the statement of the bank was all right and Mr. Travers was very strong in his views as to the substantial standing of the bank; we had nothing before us that would lead us to doubt his statement and he was very strong with regard to the bank.

Q. Did you make any inquiries from Warren or Mr. Stockdale as to the state of the accounts between the two institutions? A. No.
Q. Made no inquiries? A. No.

Q. They never informed you? A. No, I did not know the Trusts Company until the time we made the loan, that the Trusts Company had on deposit this $120,000.

Q. Were you astonished at the state of accounts between the two institutions? A. No, I would not say I was astonished.

Q. Would surprised be a better word? A. I do not know that I would even be surprised.

Q. Interested then? A. Mr. Warren had great faith in Mr. Travers and he deposited the money there I believe as a kind act to Mr. Travers or to his bank.

Q. You have had some experience in financial institutions, were you surprised when you learned in October, 1910, the state of affairs between the two? A. I was I suppose you may put it surprised; I was not aware—

Q. I am told that Mr. Morden although he did not say so this morning felt very uneasy about it? A. Yes, Mr. Morden spoke to me about it and I said, well he had better consult the solicitor member of the Board, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Wilson happened in and we talked the matter over. We had no reason to fear anything at that time.

Q. Did you get Mr. Travers down to the conference? A. I think I telephoned him or had some one telephone him, one or the other.

Q. Yourself and Mr. Travers and Mr. Morden, and who else? A. Mr. Matthew Wilson.

Q. Was that the time that the Bank Act was brought down and read to Mr. Travers? A. It was brought down and read to him on one occasion, I won't say whether that was the occasion or not.

Q. The meetings were close together at that time, from the first time you were informed until the loan was put through? A. The negotiations for the loan were largely done by Mr. Wilson.

Q. But you had several interviews following each other in rapid succession? A. No, I had not; I had two; when you say several do you mean three or two or five? I had about three interviews with Mr. Travers all told.

Q. Five would be my selection? A. I think I had three on that occasion; I think Mr. Wilson and Mr. Travers did the negotiating.

Q. What was the occasion of bringing the Bank Act down and reading it to Mr. Travers; if it had been the Riot Act I could have understood it? A. I don't know about that—something about Mr. Morden—I recollect the Bank Act—but I do not remember that.

Q. Was there a question whether the Bank could legitimately give you this security considering the position it was in? A. I do not know the nature of the negotiations for the security.

Q. Did you take part in arranging what you should get? A. No.

Q. What part did you take in it? A. The part that I took in it was Mr. Morden pointed out to me that the Trusts Company had on deposit in the Farmers Bank a certain amount of money, and that the Farmers Bank had an open account in the Trusts Company and he thought it was a little anomalous position, and he as manager of the company thought it would be better to have one loan, one account, and he and Mr. Wilson arranged it; I think they took on deposit certain notes in the Farmers Bank and they took some other securities, I do not just remember.

Q. I think they took the security they already had over again, the bonds and Piano Company stock and some notes? A. Yes.

Q. And you consolidated the whole thing into one loan? A. Yes, it was consolidated into one loan.

Q. That did not remove the objection Mr. Morden had raised, because according to the figures it still left about the same amount to the credit of the Loan Company? A. No, it made to the Farmers Bank a loan of two hundred odd thousand dollars, which gave the Farmers Bank a credit of some seventy or eighty thousand dollars in round figures, gave them a credit which they had the right to draw on at any time they wanted.

Q. Had not they that privilege in regard to the balance they had there previously? A. So far as I know they had.

Q. And the net result was, the situation so far as they were concerned was not changed and you had a new loan with the securities attached to it? A. They had a deposit account in the Trusts Company, as I understand it, and the Trusts Company made them this loan and gave them the seventy or eighty thousand dollars of a credit which they had a right then to withdraw at any day they liked on call, just as you would check out anything else.

Q. Had not they the right to withdraw that previously? A. I suppose they had. I heard something here this morning about hesitating about cashing a cheque; that is easily explained, because sometimes they would send down a cheque for $15,000 or $20,000 on a day when we perhaps had several twenty or thirty thousand dollars to look after and we had to hesitate a little bit.

Q. Are you speaking of your own knowledge, do you recollect any such occasion? A. Yes.

Q. More than one? A. I was not there often.

Q. Do you recollect one occasion? A. Yes.

Q. Where they wanted more—? A. They wanted the same day—perhaps the person wants to collect an account from you when you have not it in your pocket.

Q. That occurred once? A. It occurred on my understanding on different occasions.

Q. To your knowledge? A. To my knowledge once.

Q. Did you take any further part in negotiating that loan than you have told us? A. No.

Q. Mr. Wilson would know the full details of the loan, how it was made and why, and the difference between the situation before and after? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. I have been informed and I am asking you so as to get the matter disposed of one way or another, did you ever tell any people in Peterboro that you had made $8,000 out of the Trusts & Guarantee transaction with the Farmers Bank? A. I never did.

Q. Or any large sum? A. Not a cent.

Q. That statement would be—? A. Absolutely untrue.

Q. You did make some statement though about having made quite a lot of money out of that original loan? A. To the Farmers Bank?

Q. Yes? A. No, no person.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Charles giving his evidence? A. Yes, I remember that jollying that afternoon, five o'clock tea.

Q. There was some criticism addressed to his having repeated it. I notice; he informed his manager about it? A. No, he informed his general manager with regard to the loan made by the Trusts Company, but he never informed the general manager that I can recollect that I made any money out of it, because I did not.

Q. That was not what you said? A. No; do you know Mr. Charles?

Q. Yes, do you? A. Yes; Mr. Charles is of a jollying nature.

Q. Did either you or the Trusts & Guarantee Company get any benefit or advantage other than what you have told us, you and Mr. Stockdale have told us? A. No.

Q. None whatever? A. None whatever.

Q. In any matter in connection with Mr. Travers or the Farmers Bank? A. No.
ARThUR R. SHAVER, Recalled by Mr. HodgiNs:

Q. I forget what your position in the Farmers Bank was? A. Transfer clerk.
Q. You seem to have written out most of the cheques at one time? A. Most before organization, none after.
Q. I suppose that is your handwriting in that cheque (Exhibit 28)? A. Yes.
Q. Under whose instructions did you write out the cheque? A. I cannot say whether it was under Mr. Fitzgibbon's or Mr. Travers' instructions, on one or the other.
Q. You marked that "Commissions"? A. Yes.
Q. What was done with it? A. I could not say.
Q. Who did you give it to? A. That I cannot say; most likely Mr. Fitzgibbon, but I cannot say.
Q. Do you think you would give it to Mr. Fitzgibbon? A. I would think so.
Q. How was it that you were writing out all the cheques at that time? A. It was just a short period at the time of organization till the bank organized and after that I drew no cheques.
Q. I did ask you before about those three cheques that were sent down to Ottawa? A. Yes.
Q. I suppose they were taken out of the cheque book? A. Yes, sir.
Q. By you? A. No, sir.
Q. Who took them out? A. I could not say.
Q. Did you afterwards, in writing up the cheque book, see that they were gone? A. Yes, I must have discussed it with Mr. Fitzgibbon.
Q. Do you remember doing that? A. Yes.
Q. What explanation did you make? A. I could not remember now; they were just explanations that they were sent to Mr. Travers at Ottawa.
Q. Was it your duty at all to get the cheques from the banks? A. No, sir.
Q. Whose duty was it afterwards? A. That came in through the local office, the Toronto branch and up into the head office.
Q. Whose duty would it be there? A. I could not say.
Q. You cannot throw much light on that cheque? A. No, sir.

Mr. Travers: Are you not mistaken about that? A. In what regard?

Mr. Travers: Getting those cheques back from the bank? A. Mr. Hodgins said afterwards; I do not remember how those cheques came to me prior to organization; after organization they all came through the Toronto office.

Mr. Hodgins: I was speaking of these three cheques that were taken out prior to organization?

Mr. Travers: Is not that dated after organization? A. That is dated the 6th December.

Mr. Travers: We were in business after the 1st December? A. Not to the public.

Mr. Hodgins: You mean after the first January, 1907? A. All the cheques came through the Toronto branch.

Q. Prior to that you were writing cheques for a short time? A. Yes.
Q. At Mr. Fitzgibbon's request? A. Yes, or Mr. Travers.

JAMES G. FITZGIBBON, Recalled by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. Look at that cheque, it is dated the 7th April, 1907, to W. J. Lindsay for $8,000, what is the occasion of that cheque? A. I was instructed by Mr. Travers to make out a cheque payable to Mr. Lindsay and give it to him.
Q. What account would that be on? A. I could not say without reference to the books what account it was charged to, but I presume Mr. Lindsay’s commissions.

Q. I suppose the bank books will show that? A. Yes.

Q. There is a cheque here on the 20th April, is that the one of which the stub was produced on the last occasion? A. I think so, I would not be positive, but I think it was 105.

Q. Look at the stub? A. Yes, that is the cheque I refer to marked “C”.

Q. That has attached to it deposit slip April 20th, 1907, credit W. R. Travers? A. That was put through in the downstairs office.

Q. That would go to his private account in the Farmers Bank? A. Apparently from the slip.

Q. Subject to his private cheque? A. Yes.

Q. Look at that other cheque I gave you there, the first one and see what the stub for that says? A. Payable to W. J. Lindsay, commissions.

Q. That is all? A. Yes.

Q. The next cheque is one of the 14th June, 1907, W. R. Travers, $6,000, No. 157; what is that marked? A. Simply W. R. Travers, $6,000.

Q. That appears to be placed according to the deposit slip to his credit in the Farmers Bank in his private account; and the next one is 272? A. W. J. Lindsay, $3,000.

Q. What is that marked? A. If I remember rightly that was final squaring up with Lindsay to date of all his commissions.

Q. Endorsed on the back in pencil “Receipt in full to date handed to Hunter & Hunter this date October 26th”? A. We had a great deal of trouble getting down to a settlement with Lindsay as to the amount of commissions paid to him, and a statement was made up to the 30th September, and on the 1st October he was given a cheque, and I took his receipt in full for all claims against the Farmers Bank or Travers and that is the receipt referred to which was attached to that cheque when it came back through the Toronto office, and that was subsequently handed to Mr. Hunter I believe in connection with Lindsay’s suit against Mr. Travers.

Q. I did not understand that law suit was settled? A. No, the law suit was not settled, but when the law suit was instituted this receipt was dug out and handed to Mr. Hunter as proof that up to that date Lindsay had been fully satisfied and had given a receipt in full.

Q. The next cheque is No. 353? A. That is marked here “W. R. Travers, balance of commissions.”

Q. $2,464? A. Yes.

Q. That appears to have been the deposit to his private account in the Farmers Bank; the next one attached is 002 dated in March 1908, “Pay to the Farmers Bank of Canada $21,675”—that is Continental Securities Company? A. Yes, that had nothing to do with the head office.

Q. Look at that, it appears also to have been deposited to Mr. Travers’ credit, although it is payable to the Farmers Bank; was that in connection with the stock deals with the Continental Securities Company? A. I presume so.

Q. It is their cheque? A. Yes.

Q. In favor of the Farmers Bank and deposited to Mr. Travers’ personal credit? A. Yes.

The Commission adjourned at 4 P.M. to Monday next, May 27th at 11 A.M., Osgoode Hall, Toronto.
The Commission continued its sittings at Osgoode Hall, at 11 A.M.

PRESENT:

HONOURABLE SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH, Commissioner.

FREDERICK CARMICHAEL, Sworn, Examined by—

Q. Is it in your branch that Mrs. Lindsay had an account in 1907? A. No, she had one at the corner of Yonge and Queen Sts.
Q. In December, 1906? A. And 1907; they asked me to come and represent—
Q. Were you in charge of that? A. No, Mr. Crawford is in charge, but I was in the office at the time.
Q. I ask you to produce her account? A. A copy of the account?
Q. Will you do it? A. I am quite satisfied if the Commission asks for it.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Yes.
A. I am quite willing to do whatever the law calls for. If Mrs. Lindsay is to be subpoenaed perhaps you would wish that we would hand over the copy of the account and the cheques to her and let her give the evidence. I will willingly if you wish go and see Mrs. Lindsay and ask her if she wishes these handed over; or are you going to subpoena her?

MR. HODGINS: It does not make any difference; I have told Mr. Lindsay I want the particulars of this account, and he can get them? A. He can get them.

MR. COMMISSIONER: They are here now and you had better have them.

(Witness produces copy of ledger account of Mrs. Lindsay in the Bank of Montreal).

MR. HODGINS: Did you bring the cheques up? A. I have some cheques, yes. You can understand, Mr. Commissioner, the natural wish of a bank man—

MR. COMMISSIONER: Quite so, you are protecting your client.—Witness produces four cheques.

EXHIBIT 62: Mrs. Lindsay’s account in the Bank of Montreal and four cheques filed together as Exhibit 62.

G. TICE BASTEDO, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. You are on the staff of the Traders Bank? A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what position? A. Assistant chief accountant.
Q. We are trying to identify who marked that cheque (Exhibit 28) will you be able to give us that information; whose initials are those on the corner? A. No, sir.
Q. I am told it is somebody named Graves who initialled this cheque? A.

We had a Mr. Graves in the service but he resigned some two years ago or more.
Q. You cannot recognize that as his signature? A. No, I was not familiar with his signature.
Q. Do you know anything about the cheque? A. No, sir, nothing.
Q. Were you in the service of the bank on December the 6th, 1906?  A. Yes.
Q. What was the highest amount of bills the Traders Bank was issuing then?
   A. $100 bills.
Q. Have you any one at present employed by the bank who can tell anything about the marking of that cheque and how it was paid?  A. Either the ledger keeper or the teller.
Q. Can you tell us who they are and where they are?  A. Mr. Graves I believe is attending the University at the present time.
Q. We are endeavoring to subpoena him; but in the ordinary course of banking business who would know how that cheque was paid?  A. I could not tell you that.
Q. The paying teller?  A. The paying teller at the time would know.
Q. Could you tell us who he was?  A. No.
Q. Could you find that out and let me know?  A. All right, sir.
Q. Who was the official at the bank to ask?  A. If it was paid in cash he would know.
Q. And your bank books would show whether it was paid in cash or not, would not they, his cash book?
Q. Not necessarily.
Q. Probably you will let me know that and find out if there is any entry?
   A. Yes.
   Mr. Commissioner: Surely your bank books will show whether it went through the Clearing House or whether it was paid over the counter?  A. Could I see it?
Q. It is a cheque on your own bank and look at the figures in pencil on the back of it; it was evidently debited to the customer's account; the initials in the corner would show it had been debited to the account of the drawer?  A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. What did the $10,000 mean on the back of it, those figures?  A. There are no particulars given; sometimes they mark cheques that way.
Q. Would that indicate it was paid out in bills?  A. No, sir.
Q. Is it not usual to put on the back of the cheque the bills paid—supposing that was paid in fifty-dollar bills or one hundred-dollar bills, is it not usual to put that on the back of the cheque?  A. As a rule.
Q. Does the teller keep a slip that is preserved that shows how he paid a large cheque like that?  A. No, my Lord.
   Mr. Hodgins: He keeps a blotter does he not?
   Mr. Commissioner: Does that show?  A. In his blotter it would not show. His cash statement book would show the balance.
Q. It would not indicate what went to meet that particular cheque?  A. No.
Q. Would not the cheque itself indicate it was paid in cash?  A. No, my Lord.
Q. Or is there anything to indicate that?  A. Nothing to indicate that at all.
Q. You find it debited to the Farmers Bank on the day it was presented, then it was paid out the same day, surely there would be something to show how it was paid?  A. My Lord, the teller at that date—Q. Surely the book would show whether it went into any account?  A. The account would show it certainly.
Q. If you find it charged to the account and do not find a debit of this cheque to somebody else, would not it indicate it was paid in cash?  A. Yes.
Q. How else would you suggest it could have been paid?  A. Looking at the cheque I thought possibly it had been deposited to Mr. Lindsay's account.
Q. You could find that out?  A. I am not familiar with the accounts at that date, because I was not in Toronto at that time.
Q. The books are there, I suppose they can be looked up?  A. Yes.
MR. HODGINS: Perhaps you will let me have the name of the paying teller at the date, and have his blotter looked up and the other books of the bank that will enable him, when he comes up, to tell the Commissioner just these questions you have been asked? A. All right.

JAMES G FITZGIBBON, Recalled by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. There are two items of stock in the Keeley Mine, $25,000 being issued to Stockdale in trust and $50,000 I think to Mr. Stratton in trust? A. Yes.

Q. What became of the certificates for that stock? A. I remember they were filled with all other certificates in the Keeley Mine box being held in trust under a general agreement that no stock was to be transferred without the consent of the Board.

Q. Where was that box with the certificates in it kept? A. In the Farmers Bank Head Office vault.

Q. Were these certificates handed out to Mr. Stratton or Mr. Stockdale? A. Not as I can recall.

Q. See if those are the ones; there are more than two there? A. Yes, I would say those are the ones.

Q. How many are there? A. Three, $25,000 each, one in favour of E. B. Stockdale in trust and the other two to J. R. Stratton in trust.

Q. What are the numbers? A. 57 is Stockdale; 59 and 60 are J. R. Stratton.

Q. What is the date? A. Stockdale was the 3rd August, 1910, and Mr. Stratton's were the 5th August, 1910.

Q. I see they are marked on the back Exhibit 18, I am instructed they were used in the litigation between the liquidator and the Trusts & Guarantee Company and that they were taken out of the package for that purpose; do you know anything about the memorandum said to be attached to them by Mr. Stratton? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any such memorandum while you were in the bank? A. No, sir.

Q. That is a memorandum showing what was to be done with them, as he expressed it? A. So far as my memory serves me, they never went out of my possession under the arrangement they had that all these were to be left in the bank until the indebtedness of the mine to the bank was paid off.

Q. At the failure of the bank, where were they? A. They were in our possession.

Q. Still in your possession? A. Yes, as far as I remember.

Q. Did you have any talk with Mr. Stratton about the certificates that were in his name? A. No, sir.

Q. Or with Mr. Warren? A. No, sir.

Q. Or with Mr. Stockdale? A. No, sir; I saw Mr. Stratton only the day that he accepted the transfer in the Keeley mine box.

Q. When was that? A. That would be on the 5th August, 1910.

Q. There is no blank endorsement of transfer on any of those, I think; I mean no signed blank transfer? A. No, sir.
W. R. TRAVERS, Recalled by—

Mr. Hodgins: Q. When you were giving evidence before you spoke of a cheque which you indicated had the letter C on the stub or some way associated with it and you called it a $3,000 cheque? A. That is my recollection, yes.

Q. Mr. Fitzgibbon identifies a cheque for $6,000 which he has marked as account C; Mr. Fitzgibbon said he identified the cheque, being a $6,000 cheque, dated the 20th April, 1907; does that correct your memory at all as to the cheque you referred to—there is the cheque (part of Exhibit 61) and there is the stub and there is the deposit slip showing what was done with it? A. That is not my recollection of the cheque that you referred to; I understood when you were examining me there you had my evidence in the Police Court in front of you, and my recollection is that a cheque of $3,000 was brought before me in the Police Court that I was questioned on.

Q. What is the date of the cheque you were referring to? A. My recollection was it was before this date, about December, 1906.

Q. That is what I thought, too; that you were referring to one of those three cheques that had been sent down to you, was I right there? A. That is my recollection.

Mr. Commissioner: What is the significance of that note there, account “C”? A. I cannot recall why Mr. Fitzgibbon marked it “C” because it went to my private credit; I do not see any necessity for marking it “C”.

Mr. Hodgins: When you were examined before, you did refer definitely to the cheque for $3,000 and you refused to say who got it or what was done with the money; you must have had a very distinct recollection of the cheque? A. My recollection is that a cheque of $3,000 was shown to me in the Police Court and I was questioned about it, my evidence would show that; that was the cheque I thought you were asking me about.

Q. I say you had a very distinct recollection of that cheque in your mind when you refused to say who got the money for it? A. Yes.

Q. You still have a distinct recollection of that cheque? A. I have.

Q. Looking at that cheque and that stub, is that the same cheque? A. I do not think so.

Mr. Commissioner: Do you come across any such thing as he speaks of in his evidence?

Mr. Hodgins: No, I have not been able to find the cheque he speaks of; it is not entered in the stubs.

Q. There is a $3,000 cheque on the Union Bank, January 7th, 1907; look at that cheque and tell us if that is the one you refer to? A. I could not say whether that is the cheque or not.

Q. You see it is a $3,000 cheque payable to yourself? A. Yes.

Q. And has on the back of it the denominations of the bills in which it was paid, so it would be paid in cash? A. It was paid in cash, undoubtedly; twenty one-hundreds and two five-hundreds.

Mr. Commissioner: What do the books show about that cheque?

Mr. Hodgins: That is one that is charged in the account to fixtures and furniture.

Mr. Commissioner: What does the witness say about that?

Mr. Hodgins: How was that cheque charged? A. I should fancy it was charged to my commissions.

Q. Would the books show? A. Should show, certainly. My recollection is in the Police Court there was a mark on the $3,000 cheque, and I cannot find it here.

Q. At whose trial are you speaking of? A. (Turns up the book of the bank.) This cheque appears to be charged to bank premises.
Q. It is pretty evident, is it not, that if that were really legitimately used for bank premises it would not be paid out to you in cash? A. Undoubtedly not.
Q. Who got the money for that from you? A. I cannot say now and I am unable to say what I did with it.
Q. The cheque that we discussed previously for $3,000 was one of the three sent down to you in Ottawa? A. My recollection, when I was in the Police Court they had those three cheques, three blank cheques that correspond, and I was confronted with one of them; that is my recollection of it, and it was marked—
Q. Well, I would like you to answer the question; when we got your evidence previously you had a very clear and distinct recollection of a cheque for $3,000, the destination of which you refused to disclose because you did not want to implicate anybody, and you said certainly the Finance Department and no official in it benefited thereby? A. Yes, I said that.
Q. Now I am asking you as to that particular cheque; I want to fix your mind on it; is it a different cheque from the one that you have in front of you now?
A. I think it was.
Q. You won't account for the earlier cheque, and you say you cannot account for this one? A. No, I cannot.
Q. Can you account then for the one of the 20th April, 1907, for $6,000 which was marked account C on the stub? A. It went to my private credit.
Q. Can you tell who got the benefit of that? A. No, I could not tell that now.
Q. It looks as if banking was pretty expensive at the start? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: Cannot you brush your memory up on that? A. I will try before you get through, but I cannot for the moment.
Q. Would not it look as if this was money somebody wanted and wanted in not too big a parcel? A. It has that appearance to me, sir.
Q. Is it not possible that that is the cheque you speak of,—if we had the stub? It is possible, I do not think it is probable though.
Q. On account of what? A. On account of the date; my mind is so fixed on December.
Q. Do you remember whether with regard to the cheque you drew the money
—I suppose you would have drawn the money? A. I am sure I did.
Q. Would not that be the kind of money you would have drawn? A. Yes, sir; it would certainly.
Q. Does not it look as if that probably is the cheque? A. It might be, but I cannot say at the present moment; I will have to think that over.
Mr. Hodgins: The three cheques that we sent down, one of them is identified because it was a cheque payable, on the stub, apparently, to MacCorquodale and then struck out and Guthrie & Pringle substituted, that is No. 26: No. 27 is marked cancelled? A. You should have those cancelled cheques here.
Q. No 30 marked cancelled.
Mr. Commissioner: It could not be any of those; they are blue cheques and this is a brown cheque.
Mr. Hodgins: My idea from his evidence is these are different things? A.
Where are the cancelled cheques? The cancelled cheques should have been kept that would correspond with those stubs.
Q. You can probably find that out from Mr. Shaver; I have failed to do so.
Mr. Commissioner: With regard to that question you have declined to answer; you will observe one newspaper has at all events made a very pointed reference to the cheque, and made a suggestion that perhaps to any one who has followed this evidence may make it appear to point to a particular person, don't you think in justice to him, if that is not so you ought to disclose? A. Mr.
Commissioner, if a certain person is named and I am asked that question I will say yes or no to it. I read that scurrilous article, I thought it was unfair to try to coerce me into it on the threat that I would probably have a further sentence, or something of the sort.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I do not know that it is the same one you mean; the one I speak of was in the World? A. No, I did not see the World. A friend of mine cut out a paragraph out of the Telegram.

Q. The World has an article in which it says that it was pretty well known that a man in business—

MR. HODGINS: A well known politician and business man who is not now a member of Parliament.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Had received the money, that is what the statement was? A. Well, sir, I am prepared to say yes or no if I am confronted with the man's name.

Q. Don't you think for your own sake, to put yourself right, that you ought to disclose? A. I cannot look at it that way.

Q. Well, you are not doing this voluntarily as if you were volunteering information to anybody; this is a public inquiry, the purpose of which is to get at the bottom of things connected with this bank, and if it was not for the position in which you are a refusal to answer a question would subject you to imprisonment? A. I understand; it is not for that reason I am refusing; I would rather go to prison than tell it.

MR. HODGINS: Do you remember the certificate I have just asked Mr. Fitzgibbon about, $25,000 and two others aggregating $50,000 stock in the Keeley Mine in favour of Stockdale and Stratton in trust; were those ever out of the possession of the Farmers Bank? A. No, they never were.

Q. Did you ever see any such memorandum as Mr. Stratton spoke of attached to them? A. No, I do not think any such memorandum was ever attached to them.

EDWARD W. J. OWENS, Sworn, Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. You are a practising barrister in Toronto? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you had a share or some small interest in the Keeley Mine, did you not? A. $5,000.

Q. What I called you here for was in consequence of what Mr. Travers has said; we have been anxious to get certain cheques or notes which were said to be in his private drawer and I understood him to say that there were some things that went to your office; I want to find out if in what went to your office there were any cheques or notes signed by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt or George Wishart or any one whose name has been mentioned at this inquiry? A. There was nothing came to my office that I knew the contents of. What did come to my office was the Keeley box papers, and that was locked and was taken by me and I think Mr. Shaver, I am not certain as to that, from my office to the Police Court and it had to be opened there; I know of no papers.

Q. How was it opened? A. I do not know whether some other officer had a key to it, probably Mr. Fitzgibbon, I am not going to be sure as to Mr. Fitzgibbon, but some other officer had the key to it and it could not be opened unless Mr. Fitzgibbon or somebody was there with the key.

Q. You delivered it over to the police authorities? A. Yes, to Crown Attorney Corley.

Q. You do not know what it contained? A. No.

Q. Never saw the contents? A. No.
Q. Did not examine them when they were opened in the Police Court? A. Did not; it was supposed to be the Keeley box of papers and Mr. Corley telephoned me had I them there and I said yes, and he said "Will you kindly bring them up to my office?", and I think Mr. Shaver or some other person came and we both carried it up to the Police Court.

Q. How did you come to get that? A. It was sent over to my office.

Q. By whom? A. I cannot say, presumably Mr. Travers.

Q. Did he communicate with you at all about it? A. That I cannot charge my memory with; I knew they came there.

Q. Had you another position than that of shareholder in the Keeley Mine? A. I was then the nominal president, after the change.

Q. Were they sent over after the failure of the bank? A. Yes, shortly after.

Q. It would be either immediately preceding or immediately after the trouble that Mr. Travers got into when he was under surveillance.

Q. Did anything else reach you from Mr. Travers or from the Farmers Bank office? A. Nothing. Of course we had correspondence about the Keeley Mine matters, but nothing further than that.

Q. Did you know anything about notes or cheques signed by Wishart or signed by Beattie Nesbitt? A. Not a thing.

Q. You I suppose were one of the directors? A. Yes, at that time.

Q. And had the company regular meetings? A. They had their annual meeting and that is about all I recollect of.

Q. What about the directors' meetings? A. I do not know that the directors ever had any meetings that I can recollect of except probably the preliminary meeting to the annual meeting; the minutes would show that I suppose.

Q. There are minutes of course? A. Yes.

Q. Did you pay any active attention yourself to the matters of the Keeley mine? A. No.

Q. Why not? A. It was a matter that Mr. Travers had supreme control of and he was managing it and looking after it; there was not much doing in it as I understood, except the original incorporation and then the transformation from the then capital to a new capitalization and the issuing probably of these mortgage bonds, that is really all the business.

Q. In connection with that were you a member or director of the original company? A. That I could not say offhand; I was one of the original incorporators.

Q. You remember the reorganization? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember Wishart's part in that? A. I cannot get the detail of that; I do not know any thing about the internal transactions.

Q. Do you remember that he was a factor in the reorganization? A. Yes, that is my impression; he had to be got rid of, I think.

Q. Do you understand he had given a note and did you hear it had been given back? A. No.

Q. Do you know anything at all about that? A. No.

W. R. TRAVERS Examination continued.—

MR. HODGINS: Continuing your evidence with regard to the Keeley Mine, you have gone over the minutes I think? A. I looked over the minutes.

Q. And can you account for the position now taken by Wishart or taken by yourself that he had to be got rid of because he would not agree to the reorganization? A. We did not get rid of him, we got him to come into line and assist us through with it.
Q. After reading the minutes how do you find that came about; it was to his interest I should judge to join in the organization; what was his objection to doing so? A. At the time he wanted to have the reorganization so that the company could be floated in England.

Q. What was there in his attitude or in his position that necessitated your giving back the note? A. He had promised a lot of people part of his stock and as I had it tied up in a pool he was anxious to get it out of the pool and have it transferred.

Q. That does not make it clear to me why you should have to give him back his note in order to get him to agree to the reorganization? A. He would not sign anything and would not agree to anything unless the note was given up. I am a little out on the date of that $25,000 note given up; I do not think it was at that date of reorganization, I think it was before that the note was given up. I could not satisfy my mind on the minutes of the Keeley mine as to the date, but my recollection is that prior to this reorganization we had talked over the matter from time to time and I insisted on the bank having a larger holding of stock, and I think that if you look at the transfer books a certain proportion of the stock from Nesbitt and Wishart was transferred about the time that his note disappeared.

Q. Just tell me what there was in connection with the note; you can describe how you got it; tell me why you gave it up? A. I gave it up because I was forced to give it up, and Wishart threatened to bring suit to dissolve the pool and to make public the investments of the bank in the Keeley Mine. I gave it up to avoid it.

Q. Did he come over here himself? A. He did on several occasions.

Q. Was he a stockholder in the bank? A. Not at that time, I do not think, but he got a friend of his to take $500 of stock in the bank, and I think it was about that time.

Q. Who was the friend? A. A man named John Costigan.

Q. Did he use the status of shareholder for any purpose? A. No.

Q. Did he say anything to you about it? A. No, he was in the background.

Q. That $25,000 note was given back and not paid, and did the bank get any benefit or advantage by giving it up? A. The only advantage the bank got was to enable me to have more control over the mine's affairs, the company's affairs.

Q. In what way? A. I had everything absolutely in my own hands then.

Q. You were not the only stockholder? A. No, but I got them to agree at that time that I would be absolutely in control, nothing would be done without my consent.

Q. Is it the case that Wishart had paid $50,000 in cash in Haileybury to Mr. Graham, who was solicitor for the Keeley-Jowsey Wood prior to the due date of that $25,000 note? A. No, he never paid a dollar unless he took my cheques and handed them over; that is the only way he would ever have paid anything.

Q. When the note came due actually on the same day, was there a transfer of stock to the Farmers Bank or to you by Wishart, $50,000? A. I cannot say whether it was the same day, but my recollection is there was a transfer.

Q. About the due date? A. I cannot say that; the books would have to show that. I remember a transfer being made on or about that time.

Q. And was that in consequence of giving up the note or the consideration? A. No, that was in consequence of my making the next payment on the mine; I refused to pay anything further unless something more was done for the bank.

Q. If, as a matter of fact, on the very due date of the note $50,000 was transferred to you or the Farmers Bank by Wishart, would the two have any connection? A. I do not think they had.

Q. Then would the reorganization have taken place some months after that? A. Yes, the reorganization took place some months after that.
Q. And would the $25,000 note have anything to do with the reorganization?
A. Well, I do not think so; no, I cannot see that it had.
Q. Then when the reorganization took place you were in supreme control?
A. Well, I was, yes, to a certain extent; I could not get by-laws passed and such matters unless they had consented to it.
Q. I thought you said nothing was to be done without your consent? A. My being in supreme control was this: no stock should be transferred, nothing could be done without my consent, but it would require the consent of two-thirds of the shareholders in order to carry out some of the schemes that we were in, that is the reorganization.
Q. Who were the shareholders at that time? A. The shareholders were Mr. Wishart, Dr. Nesbitt, the Farmers Bank and myself, and Mr. Owens had a few shares.
Q. You told us on the last occasion that there had been an advance practically of the first $50,000 by the bank, and then when the next payment came due a similar amount had to be made up and paid? A. Yes.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: Does that mean another $50,000? A. Yes, another $50,000.
Mr. Hodgins: Can you tell at all the total amount that was advanced by the bank to or on account of or charged to the Keeley Mine? A. I could not tell you the exact figures, but I think it was in the neighborhood of $600,000—
Q. Was that advanced in cash? A. In the first place the $300,000 was paid for the property; there was about $60,000 invested in machinery and about $15,000, I think, on buildings, and then the mine cost about $5,000 a month; $120,000 paid out in wages and supplies; the books would show that; I could not tell you offhand.
Mr. COMMISSIONER: How long was it operated then? A. It was operated from May, 1908, 1909, and 1910—about two and a half years.
Mr. Hodgins: The date of reorganization appears to be, as far as I can make it out, about December 14th, 1908, when there was a call loan put through for $350,000? A. That may be.
Q. December 4th, 1908, appears to be a meeting of the provisional directors of the Keeley Mine, Limited, that is the reorganized company, is it not? A. Yes, that will be the reorganized company.
Q. The president, William J. Trounce, in the chair; Hiram J. Pritchard, secretary; and William T. Taylor. This resolution was carried: “That the offer of the Keeley-Jowsey-Wood Mine, Limited, to sell out to this company in terms as follows; that the Keeley-Jowsey-Wood Mine, Limited, make an offer to the Keeley Mine, Limited, to sell, transfer and assign all its bonds to the Keeley Mine Limited, in consideration of the assumption by the Keeley Mine, Limited, of all the liabilities of this company and two millions stock fully paid up, and non-assessable in the capital stock of the Keeley Mine, Limited, the said stock to be issued to the following shareholders of this company, viz,: be and is hereby accepted”—that would be the terms on which that went through? A. Yes.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: There is nothing there about $300,000; and Mr. Owens is down for only one share? A. I transferred some more to him afterwards.
Mr. Hodgins: Up to this date, December 4th, 1908, I find there were three payments and an over-drawn account; I will just read you the items: May 29th,
SESSIOJAL PARKW No. 153a

1908, $25,000; May 30th, 1908, $25,000; August 15th, 1908, $50,000; those three would be the payments we have been speaking of? A. The first two, May 29th and May 30th, would be the first payment of $50,000.

Q. August 15th, $50,000 would be the second payment? A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. The next item is overdrawn account, December 17th, 1908, $61,374.31; speaking generally, what does that represent, operating expenses or further payment? A. Cheques of the Keeley Mine will show that; that is, June, July and August; it would not be operating expenses. But there were buildings, we built a road there that cost three or four thousand dollars.

Q. I want to find out what the situation of you and your associates was before the transfer that I have just read you of December 4th, 1908; the first two payments were made, one on the note of Beattie Nesbitt, another on the note of Wishart, of $25,000? A. No, Beattie Nesbitt never gave a note, not for that.

Q. Was it simply charged up to him? A. No, it was not charged up to Nesbitt even.

Q. What was done with it? A. It went through a special account of my own. The ledger will show that I drew a cheque and marked it special account for this transaction.

Q. Beattie Nesbitt got the stock did he not? A. Yes.

Q. In the Keeley-Jowsey-Wood Mines, Limited? A. Yes; he got the stock for putting the deal through; he had the option.

Q. He got $25,000 of stock? A. He got more than that; the original one was one million dollars, and the second one was two and a half million; and of the first million dollars Nesbitt got, I think, $350,000.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Does that mean that Nesbitt was to have his interest for the introduction of the property? A. Yes.

Q. Paid nothing? A. Paid nothing at all.

Q. He was to pay nothing? A. He was to pay nothing.

Q. I thought you mentioned previously that Nesbitt was to pay $25,000 and he did not pay? A. No, Nesbitt was to get $25,000 deposit for me so that I would not feel the drag on the bank.

Mr. HODGINS: He was not personally to pay anything? A. No, he could not pay anything at that time; he had nothing to pay with.

Q. He was to get whatever interest he got for turning over the option? A. Yes.

Q. Was the option in his own name or his and Wishart's? A. No, it was in his own name.

Q. The option was for $300,000? A. Yes.

Q. So he charged for the option and got his interest in the mine, in this million dollar capital, of $350,000 for nothing then? A. Yes, absolutely so far as paying any money was concerned, yes.

Q. The $25,000 was represented by a charge to your special account? A. Yes.

Q. $25,000 and by Wishart's note which was discounted was it not? A. Yes.

Q. And then when the second payment came to you of course Beattie Nesbitt was not to pay anything more? A. No, we did not expect at that time that anybody would have to pay anything more.

Q. Who was the $50,000 paid to? A. That was paid to Keeley, Jowsey and Wood at Haileybury at the Union Bank.

Q. Who was it charged to in the Farmers Bank? A. I cannot say whether it was charged to me in my special account or whether we had opened an account for the company at that time.
Q. It appears to be charged in an account called Keeley-Jowsey-Wood Mine Limited, just charged up to them?  A. That is where the payment was made to out of the bank funds.

Q. The two earlier payments appear in the same account as discounts?  A. After the company was formed it was transferred over from my special account in order to commence the records of the company from the date of the purchase of the option.

Q. What was put through to authorize the charge of $25,000 was to discount a note of yours?  A. No, the note of the company.

Q. There were two notes discounted on May 29th and 30th $25,000 each?  A. Yes, I believe there was, one was Wishart’s and one was the company’s.

Q. Did Beattie Nesbitt’s interest increase over the $350,000 in the original company?  A. No, it did not.

Q. To whom was the other stock issued?  A. The other stock was issued to Wishart, the Bank, Mr. Owens and myself.

Q. In what amount?  A. Mr. Owens’ was a small amount, one share, you saw that; and the others were equal amounts.

Q. $1,650,000 to be—?  A. No, it was $1,000,000, the first company was $1,000,000.

Q. You had $650,000 to divide up?  A. There was $650,000; my recollection is, the Keeley Mine Stock book would show that one-third of the $650,000 went to Wishart and one-third to myself and one-third to the bank.

Mr. COMMISSIONER: Why do you say $650,000?  A. $350,000 went to Nesbitt, that is my recollection.

Q. That was his total interest?  A. Yes.

Q. When the capital came to be increased to two and a half millions, did he still remain at $350,000?  A. Yes.

Q. Then it was divided equally, $500,000 to Wishart, $500,000 to Nesbitt, $500,000 to me and $500,000 to the Bank.

Q. That is only two millions?  A. We kept $500,000 in the treasury.

Q. His holding increased then?  A. Only nominally; we doubled the capital; it rather decreased.

Mr. HODGINS: The thing started off with Beattie Nesbitt having $350,000 of the stock in the original company as against $200,000 to each of you three?  A. $200,000 apiece, yes; the Keeley Mine stock ledger will show that exactly.

Q. What was the cause of his interest when it was turned over to the new company being decreased?  A. A general understanding that the stock was to be divided that way; my mind at that time was to increase the bank’s holdings and my holdings.

Q. You spoke of Nesbitt and Wishart having turned over an amount?  A. That would be back about the second payment.

Q. That would be in the original company?  A. Either the second or third payment. The first was in May, the second one was in August and the third one I think was a month or so later, and that is when I found out I had to go on and assume the whole responsibility of the payments I demanded more of the stock.

Q. You made after August another payment of $50,000?  A. Yes, we went on making payments at certain intervals, I do not know whether there was 30 or 60 days between, till we had paid $300,000.

Q. Payments after the first two $50,000 were at the rate of $10,000?  A. No, they were always $50,000, but we got paid something on account and had them extended; we did not pay the full each time; we would pay something, sometimes half of them, sometimes $20,000 and then ask a further extension for 30 days.

Q. You had no obligation from Beattie Nesbitt; you had a $25,000 note from Wishart, and the payments were coming due; did you get any securities from anybody else?  A. No.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Then when you parted from Wishart there was no security standing in the hands of the bank, nothing but the bank's interest in the company? A. None whatever.

Q. You formed the new company and took the transfer over in the way I have spoken of; how did you charge that $5,000 that Beattie Nesbitt got out of that $10,000 cheque that Lindsay cashed, how did you enter it up in the books? A. I did not enter it at all; I told you I exchanged that for another cheque for $5,000.

Q. Was there a payment made to Beattie Nesbitt in December later on? A. Payment made to him?

Q. Yes, of $5,000? A. I think there was.

Q. How was it charged? A. That was charged to the Keeley Mine.

Q. Why was it charged to the Keeley Mine? A. That was for Nesbitt arranging the reorganization in order to get the new company in operation.

Q. I do not see what benefit you got through that? A. I felt at that time we had to do something and the million dollars capital, it was $5 a share and we had to get a larger capital in order to float it.

Q. It does not cost $5,000 to get a new charter? A. No, the $5,000 had nothing to do with it, that was Nesbitt's demand of $5,000 at that time.

Q. What was he doing to earn it? A. He was getting Wishart into line and assisting me to get the thing through.

Q. I have been unable to understand why Wishart should hold the key to the situation; you and Beattie Nesbitt and the bank could out-vote him? A. We felt that we had to play friendly with him at that time, I did, had to give in to anything he wanted.

Q. What was his hold over you? A. His threat always to bring a suit to dissolve the pool and get the stock.

Q. Well, what would have been the result of that? A. The result of that would have been better for me if it had been done, the result would have been that the advances of the bank to the Keeley Mine would have been exposed.

Q. They had only made these two advances, had not they, May and August? A. There was more at that time, at December.

Q. $100,000? A. More than $100,000 at that time.

Q. You thought that this suit would disclose the advances to the bank by the mine? A. Yes.

Q. Did Wishart make that threat? A. Yes, he made that threat, threats to that effect.

Q. He must have made those threats prior to August 15th, because that is the date of the second payment? A. When the second payment came along, when it came due, the friction began.

Q. How long did the friction last? A. Until after reorganization.

Q. I thought you told me a little earlier this morning that you got rid of Wishart some time before? A. I never got rid of him; from the very first to the last I was trying to get him in line so that I could work.

Q. Was his position any different from any other stockholder? A. No, his position was no different, but if he had started that suit against the bank and myself and dissolved the pool, why it would have made trouble, that is all.

Q. Had he any grounds for such a suit? A. I could not see that he had.

Q. Was the pool a written agreement? A. Yes.

Q. It was his interest was it not, to have this mine reorganized and the stock unloaded, as you said, on the suffering public? A. Yes, it would be for him to get his share out of it certainly.

Q. I wish you would give me some idea how it was he was able to hold you up to that extent that you had to pay Beattie Nesbitt $5,000 to get him into line and give him back his note and give him an equal share with you in the mine? A. That is very plain. We could not possibly reorganize with one of the directors and President of the bank (the witness means company) refusing to take any action in the matter and the Vice-President—I cannot say that Nesbitt refused to do it, but Nesbitt at that time managed Wishart.
Q. Was Nesbitt acting in the same way as Wishart? A. No, I cannot say as he did; he thought he ought to get something out of it.
Q. I may be dense, but I do not really understand the situation that you got into at that time which necessitated— A. The situation that I was in at that time was I was afraid they would disclose the advances of the bank to this mine; I did not know where I was at this time.
Q. Was Beattie Nesbitt your President? A. Not at that time.
Q. When did he become President? A. The 26th November, 1906.
Q. When did he cease to be President? A. On the middle of January, 1908, about that.
Q. What position did he occupy, was he a director or vice-president, after that of the bank? A. He had no position at all in the bank.
Q. What did you mean by referring to the president of the bank or the vice-president refusing to take action? A. I meant the president or vice-president of the Keeley Mine, not of the bank; Wishart was the president and Nesbitt was the vice-president and I was the secretary-treasurer.
Q. At all events you reorganized and paid Beattie Nesbitt on December 14th, 1908, the $5,000 really for getting Wishart into line? A. Yes.
Mr. Commissioner: Perhaps you would ask him why he did not give him stock instead of cash.
Mr. Hodgins: Why did you not give him stock instead of cash? A. Because he wanted the cash at that time; I could not say why; it never entered my mind until now. He had all the stock he wanted at that time.
Q. It was money he wanted? A. Yes, it was money he wanted then.
Q. Did he tell you he could get Wishart into line for that amount of money?
A. He did.
Q. Did he tell you so before he did it? A. He must have or I would not have given him the money.
Q. You remember it? A. I cannot remember him saying he would do that, he is not that kind of a man, he never speaks out exactly what he means; he meant that anyway.
Q. You understood he meant that? A. Yes.
Q. You paid it out to him on the 14th? A. It went to his credit, you will find it in the ledger.
Q. It was paid before the transfer was actually consummated? A. I cannot speak as to that but I think it was just simultaneously.
Q. December 4th, is the first meeting of the Keeley Mine Ltd. the new company? A. Yes.
Q. The allotment of stock was made, and you and Wishart and Nesbitt were elected directors, Wishart was appointed president, Beattie Nesbitt, vice-president, yourself secretary-treasurer and then it appears to have been moved and seconded and unanimously carried that the offer of the Farmers Bank of Canada to underwrite $500,000 of the capital stock of the mine at a discount of 30% be accepted and the same be allotted in the name of W. R. Travers in trust, the said stock to be disposed of in such manner and way as the said bank may determine. The account was to be kept and you were to have the signing in your discretion of the cheques and so on? A. Yes.
Q. It was after that you signed the cheque to Beattie Nesbitt? A. No, I signed a cheque of the mining company for $5,000; I do not know whether I made it to his order or not; at all events it went to his credit in the bank books.
Q. Went to his credit in the Farmers Bank? A. Yes.
Q. And he accordingly checked it out? A. Certainly.
Q. It was not paid to him in money? A. No.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

MR. COMMISSIONER: That was part of the over-draft of the Keeley Mine I suppose? A. Yes.

MR. HODGINS: Did Wishart get any money? A. I do not remember giving him any at that time, no.

Q. What was his original interest in the mine? A. His original interest as I have explained to you before shows in the books of the Keeley Mine a certain amount of stock.

Q. When Beattie Nesbitt took over the option had Wishart any interest in it? A. He had no interest at that time; Beattie Nesbitt and myself went to New York and got Mr. Wishart interested in it, thinking that he would be able to float it, and that we could turn it over and make some money out of it; that was the origin of it.

Q. When it came down to the reorganization you had given him back his note, had he put up no money? A. Not a cent.

Q. He had over $200,000 of stock and he got on the reorganization $100,000, an equal amount with you and Beattie Nesbitt? A. Yes.

Q. What did you give him for that? A. Why?

Q. Yes? A. How could we get rid of him?

Q. I suppose if he got his note back he would hand back his note? A. No, he did not. At the time he gave his note back if you look at the transfer book of the Keeley Mine you will find an additional amount of stock was transferred to the bank, that is as I recollect it now.

Q. The three persons that were interested, yourself, Beattie Nesbitt and Wishart do not appear to have put a cent up to the time of the reorganization into the bank? A. There was not anybody ever put a dollar into the Keeley Mine from start to finish but the Farmers Bank.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Why did you not, when they defaulted, close them out, if you were going to make these advances? A. I was afraid of them.

Q. There would have been only $50,000 then invested? A. I wish I had.

MR. HODGINS: Did Beattie Nesbitt make any threats that he would bring an action to dissolve the pool? A. No.

Q. Or was he associated with Wishart in that attitude? A. No, he never made any threats.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Was there any agreement about these advances, was the Farmers Bank protected in any way? A. Yes, there was the original agreement, before the first $50,000 was paid—that agreement should be among the papers; I have seen it during the giving of my evidence—which was to the effect that if I paid this $50,000 that the affairs of the company should remain in my hands until the bank was paid off and that all the stock should be pooled until the bank was paid off.

MR. HODGINS: You having got that, you entered into it as general manager of the Farmers Bank and the money having been advanced they proceeded to make it uncomfortable and you say these payments and this stock is the result? A. Yes; I would not say that as to Dr. Nesbitt; I won't say he took that stand.

Q. He seems to have been equally favored as if he had? A. He thought he was entitled to it; we thought it was very wealthy at that time; I thought we would make big money out of it. I was in New York and I was offered $500,000 cash for it in the presence of Mr. Yarker, the manager of the Clearing House in Toronto; I took him down on purpose as a witness as an old friend of mine and I thought we had a real proposition.

Q. Did you pay Dr. Nesbitt anything more than $5,000? There is another W. Beattie Nibstitt amount charged to profit and loss and from there to Keeley Mine stock and bonds, $5,000 later on; can you throw any light on that? A. What date is that?
Q. It is not dated in the statement I have, but it is later because it is charged into Keeley Mine stock and bonds account, which was a later account? A. I cannot recall that just now.

MR. COMMISSIONER: How did that go out?

MR. HODGINS: That $5,000 when paid to Beattie Nesbitt was charged up on loan.

MR. G. T. CLARKSON: Charged up to profit and loss? A. I do not think it was charged as a loss.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Profit and loss in the bank books?

MR. G. T. CLARKSON: Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: How did it come back from profit and loss?

MR. G. T. CLARKSON: They credited profit and loss and charged Keeley Mine Stock and Bonds, then it appeared as an investment in stock.

MR. COMMISSIONER: In the stocks and bonds of the company?

MR. CLARKSON: Yes.

The Commission adjourned at 1 P.M. to 2 P.M.

The Commission resumed at 2 P.M., May 27th, 1912.

W. R. TRAVERS Examination continued.—

MR. HODGINS: In the prospectus of this Keeley Mine Ltd. amount payable to the three original owners is given as $180,000 out of the issue as stock? A. That cannot be right.

Q. It says so here in the prospectus; look at it? A. That is the balance of the $300,000.

Q. The $120,000 would have been paid before that? A. Yes.

Q. The liabilities of the company at that time amounted to $215,655 according to the prospectus, machinery, supplies, coal, pay roll and borrowed money? A. I presume so.

MR. COMMISSIONER: That borrowed money being what they owed the bank? A. Yes, sir, in fact it was all owed the bank; there was no other money came into it.

MR. HODGINS: After the reorganization there is I see a transfer here of 50,000 shares of Wishart's stock to Pakeman, of London, and Whitney, of New York; has that anything to do with the transfer of some of Wishart's shares that you spoke of? A. Those are Wishart's shares.

Q. You said Wishart and Beattie Nesbitt had transferred shares? A. Not those shares; that is a different matter.

Q. From the time of the incorporation of the new company you had practically the control? A. So far as the money part was concerned, yes.

Q. And advances were made right on through 1908, 1909 and 1010? A. Yes.

Q. What was the method adopted? A. The company gave its note and we placed the money to the credit of the company and it was checked out by the company's checks signed by me.

Q. No further security taken than notes of the company? A. Not until we took the bonds, no.

Q. Not until you took the bonds of the company? A. Yes.

Q. There are two balance sheets here shown the 30th April, 1909, and the 30th April, 1910, which show that on the 30th April, 1909, there were bills payable, call loans. Farmers Bank of Canada $355,000, as well as over-draft of $7,111; and 30th April, 1910, bills payable increased to $518,561? A. I presume that is right; Mr. Clarkson has the books there.
Q. On the 19th May, at a meeting of the directors, they appear to have authorized the issuing of a million of bonds of the Keeley Mine? A. Yes, I presume that is the date; they did so.

Q. Which are described here as secured by a mortgage to the Trusts & Guarantee Company, Limited? A. Yes, the Trusts & Guarantee Company issued a trust mortgage for one million dollars and then the debentures were made of smaller amounts; I have forgotten what they were.

Q. "The said bonds to be pledged to the Farmers Bank of Canada to secure all indebtedness of the company, present and future, to the bank”? A. Yes.

Q. Were they so held from the time they were issued in May, 1910? A. They were.

Q. Until they were pledged? A. With the Trusts Company for the $100,000 that was borrowed.

Q. That was shortly afterwards? A. That would be in August of the following year.

Q. Then was interest charged up on these payments? A. Yes.

Q. How did it increase to such a very large amount? A. The books of the Keeley Mine will show how it was paid up.

Q. Speaking generally, what was the money used for? A. The money was used for operating expenses and machinery account, interest.

Q. Did you put up buildings? A. Yes, we put up buildings; we had very fine buildings there, the best in that country.

Q. Did you put in a gas plant? A. We put in a gas-producing plant, yes.

Q. Was that very expensive? A. Yes, it started out with $29,000 and ended up with about $50,000, I think.

Q. What did your buildings cost in round numbers? A. I think about $15,000.

Q. Your machinery? A. Something like $50,000; the books speak for themselves.

Q. That was the gas producer plant? A. Yes, but through the mistake of the manager the gas-producing plant was ordered improperly; that is to say, the parts that were put in were not in proportion to the strength, and we had to send to England and get new parts for it and charge them, and that is where the additional cost came in.

Mr. Commissioner: I thought you made $30,000 before as the cost of the building? A. I think I said $15,000. The figures are all in the books. Mr. Clarkson could prepare a statement which would be exact.

Mr. Hodgins: Yes, I only want to get what the money was spent for. I see that in your prospectus you say there is being installed over $25,000 worth of machinery, half of which is now on the property and the camp is most thoroughly equipped, having two bunk houses, one mess house, office and assaying office, with full equipment, blacksmith shops, etc.; in fact, with everything necessary to carry on successful mining. Then interest was charged upon these advances from time to time? A. Yes, they were charged up to the company's account.

Q. Was this matter ever brought before the directors of the bank? A. No.

Q. In what way was it kept from them? A. They never asked anything about it and I never said anything to them about it.

Q. They did not know you were investing all this money in the mine? A. They knew that I invested it in the beginning, but as the whole of the directors were prepared to swear that they did not know about it, that they authorized $5,000 when the first payment was $50,000 and they could not remember anything else that was in the books, so I pleaded guilty to that charge that they did not know anything about it.

Q. You never reported these large advances? A. I never reported after the first payment was made.
Mr. Commissioner: That is the first $50,000? A. Yes.

Q. Is there a record of that in the minutes? A. The first $50,000 was changed from $5,000 to $50,000 in the minutes, and they indicted me for forgery for that and I pleaded guilty to it.

Q. What does that mean? A. It means that the directors were prepared to swear that that was $5,000 advance, not $50,000, and that I had changed it after the meeting.

Q. What was the fact? A. The facts were that it was changed between the first meeting and the meeting that the minutes were confirmed at.

Q. It was changed after the meeting? A. It was changed after the first meeting.

Q. Why? Because my stenographer took it down wrong and I called my secretary downstairs, which she will be prepared to swear, and I had the change made there and then, before the minutes were read at the next meeting.

Q. In the presence of the members of the board? A. No, they were not there; that is the only information.

Q. Where did you keep the minutes as the meeting went on, on a slip of paper? A. I kept the minutes on a slip of paper and had them copied in a book.

Q. And the paper destroyed then? A. It should not have been destroyed; I thought they were all there at the time my trial took place, but it appears they were not.

Q. It is quite true that the change was made? A. Yes.

Q. It was only made on account of the mistake in entering it as $5,000? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: After that? A. After that I did not report anything to them at all.

Q. I suppose when the change was made, the minutes would come up for confirmation? A. Yes.

Q. And would be read as in the changed form? A. I say that I read those minutes to the board as $50,000 and they were confirmed as that.

Q. You thought they were confirmed, and that is your idea, at that figure? A. Yes.

Q. That was in 1908? A. Yes, 1908.

Q. And the directors evidently did not know there was any change at that time? A. Why, no; there was nothing said about it at all.

Mr. Commissioner: This is June 17th.

Mr. Hodgins: Then there was no feeling between you; no reason why you should not have reported anything further? A. No, they would have granted anything I asked them.

Q. Why did you not report anything further? A. I read the $50,000.

Mr. Commissioner: Did you notice this (page 133): "The general manager explained the formation and interests in the Keelev Mine which was satisfactory to the board, and further advances were authorized if necessary". Did they say that was put in? A. Yes, that is what they said after I was arrested.

Q. That those three lines I have read were interpolated? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hodgins: What is your reason for not having reported these advances to them from time to time? A. I explained the matter to them fully at first and told them I did not know how far I would have to go; I did not think I would have to pay anything more than the first payment and that we stood to make large money for the bank out of it.

Q. I should have thought that even if you had distinct authorization, their interest in the thing would cause them to ask you from time to time how it was getting along? A. They did not do so.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I suppose you found the advances were so large you were afraid to report?
A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Were any members of the bank at that time members of the Keeley Mine Directorate?
A. None but myself.

Mr. Commissioner: What was their explanation as to what explanation you gave as to their credit; the directors were examined, were they, about it?
A. No, they were not examined about it.

Q. You do not know what their statement is?
A. No, my solicitor told me that they were prepared to swear that that change was made unknown to them, and I had not a leg to stand on; I might as well plead guilty to it; that is the way it was.

Mr. Hodgins: There were two accounts; one the Keeley Mines, Limited, account, and there was another one later called the Keeley Mine Stocks and Bonds Account, was not there?
A. Yes.

Q. Why were there two accounts?
A. Because the one account was the direct advances of cash to the Keeley Mine; the other was the $500,000 stock that was given as a bonus to the bank that was picked up as we required to cover up a loss.

Q. What do you mean by picked up?
A. Picked up, carried into the books; it was not carried into the books when it was given; the $500,000 was simply kept on hand without any entry in the books at all.

Q. Do I understand that if you made a loss in some other transaction that you would carry this into the books to offset that loss?
A. We did.

Q. A sort of dumping ground for losses?
A. I considered that the stock was worth $300,000, 60 cents on the dollar, and I was using that surplus for the purpose of making profit.

Q. Or covering losses?
A. The same thing.

Q. Is that another phase of banking, making profits and covering losses are the same thing?
A. If your expenses are greater than your profits and you pick part of that stock up and credit it to profits then you are reducing—

Q. That is what you mean by making profits, manufacturing profits?
A. I do not consider that manufacturing profits.

Mr. Commissioner: I suppose if it had been an ordinary business transaction it would have appeared as an asset of so much value at the time I got it?
A. That is what I should have done.

Q. Instead of that you used it from time to time where you were running behind, appropriated it to meet the deficiency?
A. That is exactly what was done.

Mr. Hodgins: How were the call loans and current loans charged—to the Keeley Mines Limited?
A. The call loans were the Keeley Mines Limited.

Q. Was anything else put in the account called Keeley Mine Stocks and Bonds—other losses in other transactions?
A. Advances that were made to me.

Q. To what extent?
A. $90,000.

Mr. Commissioner: What does that mean?
A. I borrowed on this stock that was in my name $90,000.

Q. That is your stock?
A. Yes.

Q. From the bank?
A. Yes, the same as other directors of other banks borrow, and it was charged up to the Keeley Mine. There was $50,000 in one transaction and $40,000 in another; there was one hundred and fifty thousand dollars of my stock at 60 cents on the dollar transferred to the bank direct.

Q. You had how much stock?
A. I had $500,000 worth; I took the stock not thinking it was a personal matter, but to protect the bank.

Q. That was after it was re-organized for the second time?
A. Yes, the second time.

Q. Because originally in 1908, in the Keeley Mine you got 100,000 shares, $5 a share?
A. No, that is not $5 a share. One hundred thousand would be five hundred thousand dollars: the first amount was only two hundred thousand.
MR. COMMISSIONER: About $200,000?  A. Yes, about $200,000.

MR. HODGINS: I am speaking December 4th?  A. Then I got $500,000.

Q. 100,000 shares at $5 each?  A. That is the original stock.

Q. I am speaking of the 4th December, 1908?  A. Yes, that would be right.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Were they $5 shares?  A. They were $5 at first.

MR. HODGINS: At this time in December, 1908 they became $5, they became $1 later on?  A. Yes.

Q. When you speak of your stock you mean that $500,000?  A. No, I mean $500,000 that was in my name personally.

Q. That is the one I am speaking of?  A. Yes.

MR. COMMISSIONER: That is what you describe as yours, it was for your trouble and your work?  A. Exactly.

MR. HODGINS: There is another 100,000 shares at $5 each in the name of the Farmers Bank of Canada?  A. Not in the Farmers Bank, myself in trust.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Follow up what that $90,000 is?

MR. HODGINS: You say you borrowed $90,000 in two sums of $40,000 and $50,000 on this stock?  A. I did.

Q. What you call your own?  A. Yes.

Q. What became of that money?  A. I take the responsibility of that, I pleaded guilty to it in the Police Court, I used it, part of the property that I used it for I turned over to the liquidator.

Q. We are interested of course to find out where that money went, because it is a very serious matter if we are not able to recover any of the money for the shareholders or depositors, it was a very large sum?  A. I cannot account for it all.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Cannot you tell in the main?  A. I think the liquidator got about $75,000 worth of property, I do not know what he sold it for.

MR. HODGINS: If you tell us first what you put it into we would have a better idea?  A. I put it into Rosedale real estate, part of it, I think about $40,000 there; it was sold for about $27,000 I think.

Q. Is that your house?  A. Yes.

Q. You put $40,000 into that?  A. I put that and the land that was there.

Q. And it was sold for $27,000?  A. $22,000 the house was sold for and the lot was sold before that went into the liquidator’s hands for $5,000.

Q. That is hardly credible since 1908, since that time property has been going up in Rosedale?  A. It is not credible; I say my house was sold for $27,000 which should have been sold for about $30,000.

Q. How do you say you put about $40,000 into real estate?  A. Because I put about $35,000 into that real estate alone; I had three lots there that I refused $16,000 for.

Q. You paid $16,000 for?  A. I did not pay $16,000 for anything, I say I refused that for three lots there.

Q. How much did you buy?  A. I bought three lots.

Q. What size?  A. One was 70 x 120 and the other was 60 x 120, and the other 60 x 120, 190 feet in all.

Q. What did that cost you?  I have just told you in the neighborhood of $35,000 with the house and everything on it.

Q. You built the house?  A. Yes.

Q. What did you pay for the lots then?  A. I paid $3,600 for one lot and $5,000 for the other, those two.

Q. What for the third?  A. The third was something like $5,000, I have forgotten just what.

Q. That would be about $15,000?  A. Yes, about $14,000.

Q. What did the house cost you?  A. The house cost me about $16,000.

Q. That would be about $30,000?  A. Yes, but I made improvements there; I sodded the place, I put in shrubbery, I improved some trees around there, I built a garage, I connected the waterworks with it; I have not got my private books.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. When did you do this? A. I did this in 1907 and 1908.

Mr. Commissioner: Q. Did you keep a book showing? A. No, I had not anything but my private cheques, I do not know what has become of them.

Mr. Hodgins: Q. The $40,000 was not drawn till January, 1910? A. I am not going to say anything about the $40,000 beyond I pleaded guilty in the Police Court.

Q. I thought we were speaking on that? A. I say out of the moneys I took I am accounting for a certain portion of it that was turned over to the liquidator.

Q. I am going a little further than that, I want to see whether we can tell what you did with the $90,000? A. You cannot, because I do not remember.

Q. I am trying to help your memory by suggesting that if you take the amounts you paid for these various things you would get a pretty good idea where the money went to; that cannot certainly refer to the $10,000 because that was not advanced till January, 1910? A. No, I say of all the moneys that were referred to the Police Court on which I pleaded guilty, every dollar that was short was mentioned to the Police Magistrate when he sentenced me, and I am taking the responsibility of it all.

Q. That is you are taking the responsibility of misappropriating it, is that what you mean? A. The charge that was laid against me.

Q. But it is of a considerable interest to know if possible where the money actually went to? A. I have not a dollar of it, it is all gone.

Q. You ought, I think, to try and help the depositors? A. There is nothing the liquidator can get back out of it, or I would be very glad to help him.

Q. Why not let him try? A. Because I know it would be no use.

Q. Did you disclose to the liquidator what you did with this $90,000 money? A. No, I did not. I was arrested so quickly and they locked me up and gave me no chance for my life and therefore I had no chance to help the liquidator.

Q. But since then, since the trial was over? A. The liquidator has talked to me about it several times and I have done what I could.

Q. Of course if you have told him what became of this $90,000 it would be quite sufficient for us to get a statement from him, but have you done so? A. No.

Q. Are you objecting to? A. I am just now.

Q. Why? A. Because I do not think it will do any good so far as I am concerned.

Q. You are the only man who has had a chance to consider that question up to the present time? A. Well, I think I have taken the responsibility and taken my sentence on it, and I do not see I should follow that up; it has gone, I have not a dollar.

Q. If you could restore it now, you would be glad to do it? A. If I had the money or could get my hands on it, I should give it back with the greatest of pleasure.

Q. Why do you not give the liquidator a chance of seeing whether he can realize it? A. I do not think he could, it was paid out in different ways.

Q. Was it put into the Welsh Mine? A. There might have been some in, I do not remember just now.

Q. Have you any stock in there? A. Not in my own name, there was some stock held in trust for the bank.

Q. Who has got that? A. I think Wishart swindled him out of it, didn’t he? Wishart was handling that.

Q. How much went into that? A. About $35,000.

Q. And did that stand in your own name or in the bank? A. No, that stood in the bank’s; that is apart from this other.

Q. It is apart from the $90,000? A. Wishart owes the bank $50,000 now.
Q. I am speaking of the $90,000, bear that in mind; I thought you said part of it might have gone into the Welsh Mine? A. No, the Welsh Mine was a separate transaction of itself; that speaks for itself in the books.

Q. What is the reason that you won’t say anything about the $90,000 because it was taken by you and appears in the Keeley Mine account? A. It was borrowed by me; I borrowed it; I did not disguise it, I showed it in the books.

Q. Who did you show it to? A. Mr. Fitzgibbon made the entries, and there was no secret about it in any shape or manner.

Q. Did the directors know that? A. They could have if they had asked about it.

Q. You did not tell them? A. No.

Q. Frankly admitting you got it, that accounts for it in that way, but the liquidator is most anxious, and so am I, that if possible, some part of it should be recovered? A. I would tell him if it could, if a dollar of it could be recovered, I would tell him.

Q. You are not able to give him the satisfaction of knowing he cannot get it? A. Not to-day, no.

Mr. Commissioner: What does that mean, that it was applied for purposes of your own? A. Some of it, yes.

Q. And some not? A. Yes.

Q. Are we up against the same snag as we were about $3,000? A. Yes, I was just about prepared to tell you the other one till I read that Telegram’s article and then I thought I would quit when they put such an article as that in, I was doing my best.

Q. You ought not to hold the community for that? A. I may tell you privately before we get through with it; I am not prepared now; I am thinking over it very seriously; it is worrying me very much.

Q. Those letters you handed me they all showed that a great many people are suffering from this; even if they cannot get any money if they got a little satisfaction in knowing what became of their money? A. It went into the Keeley Mine, practically, that is where the money has gone; if I had had three months longer, nobody would have required to have made any requests about it at all.

Mr. Hodgins: This $90,000 did not go into the Keeley Mine? A. I did not say so.

Mr. Commissioner: He means the money these people have lost? A. The depositors money went into the Keeley Mine.

Mr. Hodgins: There are two other sums of $15,000 and $20,000 in addition to the $90,000 that were taken by you, were there not? A. Yes, they were borrowed by me.

Q. On the same stock? A. Yes.

Q. And are represented now by Keeley Mine notes, are not they? A. Yes, I borrowed through the Keeley Mine by using the Keeley Mine notes for the purpose of avoiding the directors’ liabilities to the Government.

Q. Did you make a Keeley Mine note and then put it into the bank and take the money out yourself? A. I made a Keeley Mine note and then credited the Keeley Mine with it and drew a cheque of the Keeley Mine to my order.

Q. And took the money? A. Deposited it to my credit.

Q. That would make $125,000, the $90,000 and $15,000 and $20,000? A. The liquidator has the whole amount there.

Q. That is he has a detail of the whole amount? A. Yes.

Q. I am bringing that to your knowledge in order to ask you if you would let me know what was done with that or whether you would rather consider that as well? A. I will.

Mr. Commissioner: I do not understand how that was put through the books, the Keeley Mine note? A. The Keeley Mine directors passed a resolution that I could use the company's name in any way I saw fit, I think that is about the size of the resolution, and I made a Keeley note for $20,000, I credited the $20,000 to the Keeley Mine and then drew a Keeley Mine cheque.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. Credited where? A. Credited the proceeds of the note to the Keeley Mine account in the bank, then I drew a cheque of the company to my personal order.

Q. Mr. Hodgins: I do not see how that would work, the Keeley Mine borrowed from the bank $20,000, gave a note for it? A. Yes.

Q. That is the first step; the money was paid to whom for that? A. The money was paid to me.

Q. What was done with it? A. The proceeds of that note was credited to the Keeley Mine account in the bank and then a cheque of the bank was drawn to my personal order.

Mr. Commisioner: What account are you reading from, Mr. Hodgins?

Mr. Hodgins: From the Keeley Mine account; that was simply put into the account as a Keeley Mine note, that is the security which represents this advance of $20,000 and $15,000 ostensibly on account of Keeley Mine and it really went to Mr. Travers.

Mr. Commissioner: Of course it would properly appear in the Keeley Mine account the way he described it, they discounted the note.

Mr. Hodgins: You did not actually discount the note in the sense of putting it through the discount? A. I did discount the note.

Q. I thought you just left it in the bank without discounting it? A. No, you are wrong, I discounted.

Mr. Commissioner: You said you discounted and carried the proceeds to the credit of the Keeley Mine account? A. Then I drew a cheque to my personal order and credited my own account with it.

Mr. Hodgins: That was apparently November 3rd, 1910? A. Very likely. Yes, but it was not all used, the $20,000, in one moment; my personal account will show that is chequed back for two weeks.

Q. Where is your personal account? A. In the ledger of the bank.

Q. Have we access to your personal cheques? A. No, I do not know; I sent them up to my house and I have never seen them since.

Q. When did you send them to your house? A. I told you the other day; the day the bank failed.

Q. I thought you said they were sent to Mr. Owens? A. They were sent to Mr. Owens with the Keeley Mine box, that is my impression, and they were sent up from there to my house.

Q. Did you ever see them at your house? A. No.

Q. Did you ever inquire from any one whether they got there? A. I have since the failure of the bank, yes.

Q. What was the result of your inquiry? A. I have not had any chance; I have been in jail all the time.

Q. When you were arrested the first day, that was the day in which the Keeley Mine box and your private cheques went out of the bank? A. Yes, there was no question about those cheques then for some time afterwards, and when the question came up the cheques were not at my house; I think Duncan sent up for them.

Q. You had an opportunity of finding out if they had reached your house? A. I had no occasion to find out; there was nothing came up that caused me to look for them.

Q. Why did you send them off? A. Because I wanted all my papers; there were private letters.
Q. Give me the reason you sent them to your house?  A. Because I did not wish them seen.

Q. Did you pay no attention to whether they had ever arrived there safely?
A. I knew the box had arrived, but I never looked at it.

Q. How did you know the box had arrived?  A. I was told so.

Q. That is the Keeley box?  A. No, my private box.

Q. You were told it had arrived at the house?  A. Yes.

Q. Who had received it there?  A. One of the servants, I suppose.

Q. Who told you it had arrived?  A. I do not know.

Q. Did you give directions?  A. I did not think about it at all; it did not worry me; I did not think about it; I was just told there was a box there.

Q. If you did not want it to be seen and you found out it had got there, you would naturally make some inquiry, would not you?  A. No, it did not give me any consideration beyond there was some private letters and papers and other things in it that I wanted home.

Q. Did you see it after it got home?  A. No.

Q. Did you go through it?  A. No.

Q. Did you take out anything from it?  A. I never did.

Q. Did any one else at your request?  A. I don’t know, I never asked anybody.

Q. Did anybody ever tell you they had?  A. No.

Q. Do you know where those cheques are?  A. No.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Has the box turned up?

A. Yes, Inspector Duncan went up there and seized a box.

MR. HODGINS: Seized this box?  A. I believe so.

Q. Did you ask him what it contained?  A. I did not.

Q. Never made any inquiry?  A. I was shown so little consideration that I did not bother much about it.

Q. Would what you have told us about the $20,000 note refer also to the $15,000 note?  A. Yes.

Q. Did you think that was in pursuance of some resolution of the directors—

MR. COMMISSIONER: He spoke of some general resolution?  A. There was a general resolution.

MR. HODGINS: Was that in the early stages?  A. Yes, I think I could find it there.

MR. COMMISSIONER: That would mean that the Keeley Mine was lending you that much money.  A. The Keeley Mine lent me that much money under authorization of the Board of Directors of the Keeley Mine.

MR. HODGINS: I suppose neither the Keeley Mine nor the bank, other than so far as you represented them, ever realized that fact?  A. Yes, they did; the Keeley Mine did.

Q. Who knew of it then in the Keeley Mine?  A. Both Dr. Nesbitt and Wishart.

Q. Of both those loans?  A. Of everything I did in connection—

Q. Be definite, both the $15,000 and the $20,000 loan?  A. Yes.

Q. Because they are more than a year apart?  A. It does not make any difference, from the very first to the last.

Q. You say that both Wishart and Nesbitt knew?  A. Yes.

Q. That you were borrowing that money?  A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. And were putting it into your private account?  A. Yes.

Q. Did they get any money at the same time?  A. I do not care to answer that.

Q. I think you ought to answer that?  A. I have pleaded guilty to taking that money and my solicitor says that is sufficient for me; I do not want to get anybody into trouble.
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Q. I would like to know whether they were asking you to get money for them under this general authority or not? A. Well, Wishart got some of it, yes.

Q. What about Beattie Nesbitt? A. Beattie Nesbitt did not get any of that money; at least, I do not remember him getting any of it.

Q. Which money do you speak of? A. You have spoken to me about the $20,000 and the $15,000.

Q. Yes? A. Some of those amounts commencing with the $50,000; $50,000, $40,000, $20,000 $15,000; I say Wishart got some of that money.

Q. You do not remember, is it, about Beattie Nesbitt getting any? A. No, I do not think he got any of it at all.

Q. Why are you so indefinite about that? A. About Beattie Nesbitt?

Q. Yes? A. Because I do not remember giving him any.

Q. Is this resolution you spoke of about an account being kept in the Farmers Bank? A. I thought there was another one besides that.

Q. That is not the one, is it? A. That is not the one I was thinking about; I thought there was another.

Q. That is the first meeting of the new company, I think? A. I do not think so; this is the only one I see here, but it was in my mind, although that gives me authority to sign cheques.

Q. This one that I pointed out to you at the first meeting of the directors, December 4th, 1908, says, "all cheques, notes, drafts, and other documents necessary for the carrying on of the business of the company to be signed by the Secretary-Treasurer"; that was yourself? A. Yes.

Q. "And that the management of the mine be left entirely at his discretion" --you would not want any more than that to do any legitimate business? A. But my impression is there was another agreement amongst us; I thought it was in the shape of a resolution.

Q. Who was the agreement made between? A. There were only three of us that were interested in that, Wishart, Nesbitt and myself, and I acting for the bank.

Q. There are quite a number of other shareholders came in? A. Afterwards, but those shares were transferred subject to all the conditions that existed under them at the time Wishart held them.

Q. The payment of the $15,000 was October, 1909? A. It might have been.

Q. There were quite a number of shareholders had come in prior to that? A. There was stock transferred from Wishart to them, the same stock.

Q. Mr. Crompton was a shareholder, was not he? A. Yes.

Q. Did he know anything about your borrowing? A. No, I do not think he did; I am sure he did not.

Q. Did any of those to whom Pakeman assigned the shares know anything about your borrowing? A. I never told him.

Q. Did they know anything about this alleged resolution or agreement that you speak of? A. I fancy they did; I could not swear to it.

Q. You think Crompton would have known? A. No, Mr. Crompton would not.

Q. Would those Pakeman had—? A. I do not know what Wishart told them; he dealt with them entirely, I did not.

Q. At all events, you did not tell him. October 26th, 1909, I see quite a lot of stock allotted on the increase of the capital stock; and then I see Dr. Beattie Nesbitt resigned on the 5th April, 1910, as director? A. Yes, I presume so if the minutes show that.

Q. And did Wishart remain in after that or did he get out at the same time? A. Wishart went out then too, I think; the minutes show what happened.
Q. I do not find that he did at that time; I do not say he dropped out, but he was not elected a director on May 19th, 1910? A. That is the annual meeting; he was dropped.

Q. How would you say that either Beattie Nesbitt or Wishart knew anything about this November 3rd, 1910, $20,000? A. How would I say so?

Q. They had both dropped out as directors before that? A. Which one do you refer to?

Q. The advance of $20,000 November 3rd, 1910? A. I could not say that; I thought you meant the other, before they left; the $20,000 I do not know, they would not know anything about that.

Q. As I make it out, that is $90,000 and the $35,000, making a total of $125,000, and the amount paid to Dr. Beattie Nesbitt of $5,000 for re-organization, as you said, managing Wishart, amounting to $130,000, appears to have been paid out and not used for the purpose of the operations of the mine? A. No.

Q. I am right in that? A. Yes—I won't say that; no, I won't go that far.

Q. Pretty nearly that far? A. No, I cannot go that far. I will say that they do not show in the books of the company for operating the mine.

Q. My question is rather directed to the reality instead of the— A. As far as the books of the company goes, it would show the money was not used for the purpose of the mine.

Q. So far as you yourself are concerned as to the $125,000? A. I thought I was using it for the purposes of the mine to help the bank.

Q. You might leave out the words "for the purposes of the mine", would not you? A. Both the bank and the mine were so intimately associated that we can hardly divorce the one from the other.

Q. You do not mean to indicate it was spent on the mining operations at all? A. Not in sinking down in the ground and paying wages, no.

Q. Do you suggest that any of it was indirectly used—

MR. COMMISSIONER: Development.

MR. HODGINS: Can you suggest any way in which the mine or mining property got the benefit of it? A. Not without giving the complete details, which I could not do just now.

Q. How do mean the complete details? A. Where the money went.

Q. You are still back to the point you want to think over? A. I am still back to the point you started from.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Perhaps you can find out from this witness whether he kept a record of these things.

MR. HODGINS: Did you keep a record of these payments at all? A. I had one some place; I don't know where it is.

Q. Where did you keep it? A. I kept it in a memorandum book I had that went up to my house, I think, with the other things.

Q. Did you find out what became of that? A. I never saw that box from the time it left the bank; please let me be emphatic about it; I never asked anything about it or saw it, and I was in such trouble I did not think about it; the first time the matter came up was in the Police Court, and to tell the truth I did not care for it after that.

Q. I should think that would be the one thing you did care about? A. I got such swift and such unfair treatment, that really if they had waited a while they would have got everything; I was not trying to get away from any responsibility at all; the bank failed one day and they had me arrested the next.

Q. That was not the doing of any of the depositors? A. No.

Q. You understand that my interest in the matter is directed in these inquiries at all events to help them, because if anything can be recovered they are the ones that will benefit? A. I have already told you that if it was possible to get one dollar of that money back I would gladly give the liquidator the fullest information but I cannot see it will.

Q. He naturally wants to have some chance to decide that himself; before leaving this, you, I think, gave a wrong impression; you said you turned over $75,000 of property to the liquidator which he has sold as I understood for about $30,000? A. Yes.

Q. Is that not a little misapprehension? A. Not a bit, not a particle. We will just see how close we can get to that. It is not what he sold it for, it is what it cost me, I am going on.

Q. You do not mean to suggest that he sold at an undervalue? A. I think he sold for all he could get for it; I am not quarreling with him in the slightest; he is a very careful and honest man, and I am only saying I was not consulted in the matter, nobody said a word to me about the house being sold; it was in my wife's name, and I think she could have kept it, because it was built in 1907 and there was that money, commissions owing me at that time.

Q. Did you sell a lot close to the house and get money for it before the failure? A. Yes, I sold it for $1,000 to pay my solicitor.

Q. What was the size of that lot? A. That lot was 60 feet by 120.

Q. What was that worth, what did it cost you? A. It was worth over $6,000.

Q. You sold it for $1,000? A. Yes.

Q. Subject to mortgage? A. Subject to a small mortgage about $2,000.

Mr. Clarkson: I think it was $3,500? A. No, it was not; I sold it for $1,000.

Mr. Hodgins: Considerably undervalued? A. Yes, I sold it quickly to get money to defend myself with.

Q. Just give me that memorandum you are making and we can go to something else? A. Here is $68,000 I can figure up in a minute; the house and two lots cost me $35,000; the garage $2,000; the next lot $3,500 over and above the mortgage; that is $40,000. The Maitland property cost $20,000; that is $60,000 I spent that much on it; and the automobile you took and sold for $2,500, for the duty on it, the pure duty on it cost $7,500. That automobile was given me by Wishart in the first place or I would have never had it, and then I made me pay for it afterwards.

Q. He seemed to have a very winning way with him some how? A. There is $68,000 worth of stuff.

Mr. Commissioner: What is meant by the Maitland property? A. It is the old Lewis Rectory below Brockville, about 5 miles. There was a stone house and 35 acres of land; that property was very valuable down there and I bought that place.

Q. Is that the place where the distillery was? A. Yes, where my brother-in-law lived, Mr. Harvey.

Q. What did it sell for? A. $7,500; but you gave Mrs. Travers about $5,000 out of that.

Mr. Clarkson: In connection with her dower? A. Yes.

Mr. Hodgins: Did you pay $20,000 for the Maitland property? A. I did not, but I spent that much on it.

Q. You spent pretty freely on your house and Maitland property? A. Yes, I spent it whether it was free or otherwise.

Q. How do you make these amounts up? A. I am putting it down roughly.

Q. Did you keep an account of these expenditures? A. Yes, and my cheques would have shown all that, and I had a little memorandum book that was in there I think; I have never seen it since I was arrested.

Q. Are you just taking now a sort of general estimate of what they must have come to? A. No, I kept a memorandum of them, everything I did.
Q. Do you recollect what the memorandum showed? A. No.
Q. You are really estimating this is what they cost you? A. I can pretty nearly figure it up in my mind.
Q. We have no means of checking it? A. In the first place the place was $6,000, of which there was 5,000 paid. The verandahs cost $4,000 that is $9,000; a little bungalow which you gave to Mrs. Travers cost about $3,000, that is $12,000; and then there is the ice house cost $500—no, I did not pay for that. Then there was a wharf down at Maitland cost a couple of thousand, that is $14,000. There was a couple of thousand dollars spent on the stables, that is $16,000—there was a windmill, there was a waterworks, there was plumbing, there was the re-decorating the house—I cannot remember all the amounts, but I am sure it ran up to nearly $20,000.
Q. To turn a little while to another matter altogether I want to speak to you about the Continental Securities Company subscription and its effect on the Keeley Mine account and other accounts; this was a Winnipeg company was it not? A. Yes.
Q. And you negotiated with them for a subscription for stock? A. I negotiated with them to take one half million dollars of our stock.
Mr. Commissioner: At what? A. At 125.
Mr. Hodgins: Had you at the time of that subscription that amount on hand, half a million? A. No, there was not half a million on hand subscribed for at that time, but there was certain stock we could make use of though.
Q. Allotment was made on the 18th March, 1908, to the Continental Securities Company? A. By allotment or transfer, is it not?
Q. No, allotment I think? A. I thought it read by allotment or transfer.
Q. You transferred or cancelled about how much stock? A. I could not tell, the minute book will show that.
Q. At all events you transferred certain stock, the minute book will show what that was? A. Yes, it will show how that was made up.
Q. Did any of these subscriptions that were cancelled or that were transferred, figure on the original list sent to the Government? A. Yes.
Q. Apparently the total you had to get in order to make up the half million was about $139,000 or $140,000 in stock? A. I should say from memory.
Q. The Lindsay subscription was cancelled, was it not? A. Yes.
Q. For 500 shares? A. Yes, that was cancelled.
Q. And the Davidson and Smith, the two in Flint? A. Yes, I think they were cancelled too.
Q. Luxton—
Mr. Commissioner: Cannot we get all this without spreading it all out here? Cannot we get a statement of that?
Mr. Hodgins: Yes, if you prefer that I will do so.
Mr. Commissioner: I think we had better get a statement. It all appears in the books? A. It is all in the minutes of the directors there.
Mr. Hodgins: Minute book page 122 is the cancellation of 578 shares for which, the minute book says, with the balance of the unsubscribed shares of stock, viz. 3,914 shares, was allotted to the Securities Company.
Mr. Commissioner: That is nothing like the figure you mentioned to the witness, 578 shares.
Mr. Hodgins: $57,800—sixty thousand eight hundred and transfers. Page 122: "The General Manager submitted the proposition to subscribe for 5,100 shares of our stock at 130 each"? A. I thought it was 125.
Q. "A commission of $15 per share"—
Mr. Commissioner: What is that about commission?
Mr. Hodgins: $15 a share; that is payable to Mr. Chevrier for the Continental Securities Company of Winnipeg? A. Yes, he was a brother of the Senator that died up there.
Mr. Commissioner: Does that mean he was getting that personally or a discount to the company?  A. He was to get it personally I understood, and one or two men that were associated with him.

Mr. Hodgins: "That 578 shares with the balance of the unsubscribed stock, viz. 3,914, making in all 4,492 shares be and they are hereby allotted to the Securities Company, and the General Manager is authorized to procure the transfers of 608 shares to complete the 5,100 shares to give effect to this proposition"—that is the way it was done?  A. Yes.

Q. That large Lindsay subscription was cancelled at that time?  A. It will show there if it was cancelled; I think it was.

Q. Those were transferred by the company to three men, Tevis, Chapman and yourself afterwards?  A. Not to me.

Q. Were they transferred to Tevis and Chapman?  A. Yes.

Mr. Commissioner: What were transferred?  A. The shares that were held.

Q. Your bank shares?  A. Yes, 5,100 shares, $510,000.

Q. Mr. Hodgins: That was allotted to the Continental Securities Company and transferred by them afterwards by Tevis and Chapman?  A. Yes.

Q. What was the object of that transfer?  A. The object was that the Winnipeg people fell down in their arrangements.

Q. That is the Continental Securities Company?  A. Yes. That was only just a company formed by Chevrier and a lawyer named Huggard, and another man up there, so that it would not appear in their own names personally. The Continental Securities I do not think amounted to anything.

Q. Did you know that when you made the arrangement with them?  A. Yes.

Q. What was the object of making it?  A. Because they were going to sell this stock to the grain growers up there, and I went up and met the grain growers, they were just prepared to subscribe for the whole of the stock when the question came up of Chevrier's commission, and they said they did not know about that, and the whole thing fell through.

Q. The transfer to Tevis and Chapman made by the company was with your consent, of course?  A. Yes, I tried to place it elsewhere.

Q. Tevis and Chapman represented the people you were placing it with?  A. Yes.

Q. What arrangement did you make with Tevis and Chapman?  A. I made an arrangement with them that Chapman would subscribe for the full amount, if I remember right, with the idea of re-selling it.

Q. Who were Tevis and Chapman?  A. Chapman was a son of E. R. Chapman, the private banker on Broadway, N.Y., supposed to be a wealthy man.

Q. Who is Tevis?  A. Tevis is a lawyer from Louisville, Kentucky, that was friendly with them; I did not know any more about him than that.

Q. What were they to do towards paying up the stock?  A. $115,000 was taken up by $120,000 worth of American Piano Co. stock.

Q. Those Tevis shares, 1,150 shares?  A. Yes, then the rest of it was in Chapman's name, and has stayed there from that day to this.

Q. This was really devised to increase your right to your circulation?  A. No, I had no idea about that; it was to get capital; they were under the impression that they would be able to sell it, produce the money for it.

Q. Tevis on this personally got a loan did not he?  A. The company's stock was hypothecated for a loan to Tevis, giving the original owners of the Piano Company's stock a chance to take it back if they wanted to.

Q. When Tevis got this transfer of 1,150 shares he was bound to pay for them, that was your idea, that they were to be paid for?  A. Yes.

Q. They were paid up by your taking $120,000 of American Piano Company's stock?  A. Yes.

Q. That paid them up?  A. Yes.
Q. And that was so shown in the next statement that they were paid-up stock? A. Yes, it was.
Q. Did you get the American Piano Company's stock, $120,000? A. I got all the $120,000, yes.
Q. And then you loaned on that, as I understand it, $130,000 to Tevis? A. Yes.
Q. So that the transaction resulted in this, that you had 1,150 shares paid up in full, you had the American Piano Company's stock which paid it up, and then you loaned to Tevis $120,000 of money? A. I loaned Tevis $120,000 against the Piano Company's stock. Tevis gave a cheque for $120,000, and $115,000 paid the cheque, and the other $5,000 was credited to the profits of the bank, which the books will show.
Q. $115,000 was used to pay up the stock and $5,000 went as a credit to the profits of the bank? A. Yes.
MR. COMMISSIONER: How did Tevis borrow on stock that was transferred to the bank? A. He did not borrow on the bank's stock, but on the Piano Company's stock.
Q. That had been transferred to the bank as I understand it in payment for the shares?
MR. HODGINS: I had put it a little wrongly; he comes and borrows on the American Piano Company's stock $120,000.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Before he does any business.
MR. HODGINS: Yes; then he gives them a cheque on their own bank for $120,000, of which $115,000 pays up the stock, and the $5,000 goes to the profits? A. Yes.
Q. Then you have the $120,000 as security for a loan? A. Yes. The idea was he had got the Piano Company's stock from a man named Knabe, and Knabe I think had an arrangement with Tevis by which he could redeem that stock if he wanted to.
MR. COMMISSIONER: Where did it leave the bank?
MR. HODGINS: It left the bank out that $120,000 and $120,000 Piano Company's stock. A. It left the bank with $120,000 of Piano Company's stock which was sold by the Trusts Company for $95,000 cash afterwards.
MR. COMMISSIONER: What did you get for that, you paid cash for it, didn't you? A. It really boiled itself down to this, that the Piano Company's stock was exchanged for the Farmers Bank stock.
Q. It did not stay exchanged because you lent the money on that? A. No, that loan wiped out—the Tevis loan was wiped out when the Piano Company's stock was used.
MR. HODGINS: There was a loss of $30,000.
MR. COMMISSIONER: When it was ultimately sold? A. Yes.
MR. COMMISSIONER: I thought it was the other way on; you did get the Piano Company's stock for your stock? A. Yes.
Q. And no loan to Tevis—the loan was paid off? A. Yes, it was paid off down to the full amount, I think.
MR. HODGINS: $130,000 and you got $95,000.
MR. COMMISSIONER: That is by sale; if it sold for what is cost it would have paid the loan.
MR. HODGINS: In the meantime you got advantage of having that much more capital paid up? A. Yes.
Q. Against which you could issue circulation? A. Yes
MR. COMMISSIONER: Did Tevis sell? A. He was a go-between for the man named Knabe.
Q. Did Knabe get Farmers Bank stock? A. It was issued in Tevis's name and he turned it over to them; they held it, although it did not appear in their name; the transfers were never made on the bank book.
MR. HODGINS: He was a sort of stool pigeon for the other people? A. Yes, if you want to put it that way.

Q. There was really more than that $120,000 of Piano Company's stock, there was $145,000? A. Yes, something like that was the original amount; it never came into our hands though.

Q. Whose hands did it come into, the Merchants National Bank, New York? A. Not the $25,000 of stock I think; it is not fresh just now in my mind.

Q. A letter from you, dated November 12th, 1908, to the cashier of the Merchants National Bank, Mr. Byrne: "In reply to yours of the 10th, your understanding of my instruction is correct, viz.: that on delivery of the $145,000 stock of the American Piano Company preferred 7% cumulative deliver the bank's certificates representing $115,000 of our shares, and when said Piano Company's stock is put into marketable shape pay M. D. Chapman $20,000, the amount I agreed to loan him for a short time on completion of the transaction"—does that recall what was done? A. $20,000 was loaned to him, but that was paid back again.

Q. On delivery of the $145,000 Mr. Byrne is to deliver the bank's certificates representing $115,000 of shares? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Did he get that? A. $145,000?

Q. Yes, did he get that before turning that over? A. I do not understand the way you put that.

Q. Your letter indicates that Mr. Byrne is to receive $145,000 worth of American Piano Company's stock before it is to hand over the bank's certificates? A. Yes.

Q. Did he get that? A. I presume he did; I never saw it.

Q. What became of the other $25,000? A. Twenty-five thousand Chapman took for his commission on the whole transaction.

MR. COMMISSIONER: You lent him $20,000 against that? A. Yes, I lent him $20,000 against that and it was afterwards paid off.

Q. And then he got his shares? A. Yes.

Q. Look at that letter, because that looks as if that $25,000 shares went to Allen instead of Chapman? A. When those people issued their capital stock they make it into a certain name, and have him endorse in blank, with the object of not having to make so many transfers; that is what I think that is.

Q. Does that change your evidence at all with regard to what became of the extra $25,000? A. No, I knew twenty-five thousand was to go into Chapman's hands for the transaction.

Q. Chapman and Tevis were the two people to whom the stock had been transferred, and you gave him $25,000 commission, did you, for selling the Tevis shares? A. Not for selling the 115,000; it was based upon the whole transaction, on the 5,100 shares. You see the balance of the stock was sold at 130, so that had he completed the whole transaction, the transaction that he got then would have come out all right.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Everybody except the bank seemed to get in front? A. Get the best of it; it looked so easy to me, and I thought if he was a rich man he was good enough for his subscription.

MR. HODGINS: That is Chapman? A. Yes, I thought he was perfectly good.

Q. You gave him that extra $25,000 as commission on the whole transaction? A. That was an arrangement they had with him, and I did not think it affected me.

Q. You lent him $20,000 which he afterwards paid back? A. Yes, that was paid back with interest.
Q. There is a receipt from him for his commission for $50,000; is that the same or an addition? A. You see he only got $25,000 on account of that; that document is a receipt for $50,000.

Q. Fifty thousand, that was 10% on the five hundred thousand he was to get originally.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I thought it was fifteen? A. That was $15 a share, you were speaking of a little while ago. He was to get $50,000 for placing the whole $500,000.

MR. HODGINS: There is a receipt signed by him as if he had got it? A. Quite right.

Q. Did he get it? A. No, he did not.

Q. What did he sign the receipt for? A. That was so that when the balance of the stock was sold the commission would have been completed; he did not get $50,000.

Q. I really do not understand; this is a receipt, "Received from the Farmers Bank, $50,000, the par value of the 7% cumulative preferred stock of the American Piano Company, in full of charges and commissions due me or my partners for selling $500,000 of the capital stock of the Farmers Bank of Canada. Melville D. Chapman"—and who are the others? A. I did not notice who signed there.

Q. That is dated the 9th November, 1908; was that $50,000 ever paid or did he only get $25,000? A. He only got $25,000.

Q. That would be for writing 115,000 of shares? A. Yes.

Q. For selling the other 3,850 shares he would have got the other $25,000, according to that receipt; however, he did not? A. No, I do not think he ever did.

Q. He never sold the 3,850 shares? A. The 3,850 shares were never sold.

Q. In round numbers, there was a loss on that transaction of $25,000 when they realized on the American Piano Company's stock? A. No, I cannot say there was any loss on it at all, because while I was made use of the Piano-Company's stock was a matter as between them; I got 100 cents on the dollar on the $120,000 and the stock was still subscribed to be paid for at 130.

Q. When the bank failed, they found themselves with those 1,200 shares of the American Piano Company, and a loan of $120,000 to Tevis with interest? A. No, they did not; they found that transaction closed up and with Tevis owing a balance.

Q. How much? A. About $30,000, I think.

Q. Tevis owing a balance of about $30,000? A. Yes, but that $30,000 would not be on that transaction; $15,000 of that was a new loan I made to him entirely.

Q. You are looking at it from the bank's point of view as if they had paid up the stock with that and therefore it became their own good asset? A. Yes, because we cancelled this loan and cancelled the stock.

Q. The loan was $120,000? A. Yes.

Q. How much did he pay on that loan? A. He paid $100,000 of it.

Q. In cash? A. In cash, well practically so.

Q. When did you get that out of him? A. The Piano Company's stock sold for $95,000, $5,000 profit paid the Head Office, $100,000.

Q. You do not regard that as a loss to the extent of $30,000? A. Yes, I certainly do, because the Piano Company's stock was sold too cheap.

Q. That completes that particular transaction, does it not? A. Yes, that is as far as I remember.

MR. COMMISSIONER: Why, if Chapman was personally liable for these shares, why did he get money; was not a suggestion made to apply them on the shares he had? A. Because they had got Mr. Knabe into it—the arrangement of the Piano Company's stock was with Mr. Knabe; it was a side matter, and we were working the bank stock off by using part of that Piano Company's stock, and Chapman was to be responsible for the balance of the subscription, 3,850 shares, I think it was.

Q. That transaction closes itself, that was closed, you parted with so many shares and got that stock of the Piano Company; why should this man get commission in money if he was under a liability to the bank of several hundred thousand dollars? A. He was not under any liability at that time.

Q. Why not? A. Because he had—

Q. I thought he subscribed for the shares? A. Mr. Chapman subscribed for the shares; Tevis is the man who made the loan of $120,000.

Q. Yes, and Chapman and somebody else and Hunt received the $50,000? A. Yes.

Q. Why should they get that money, the $25,000, if Chapman owed all this to the bank? A. They were not entitled to all that money at that time; they were entitled to only part of it, as I understood it; they only got $25,000.

Q. They had not earned that, even at $10 a share; there were only 1,115 shares; how many shares did they get? A. They got 1,118 shares, I think, $118,000.

Q. That would be $111,000? A. Yes, I overpaid him commissions there on the expectation that the balance of stock would run right; I thought we had a good subscription there; I thought it looked pretty good to me at the time; I thought it could be paid up very rapidly when they could get a man like Knabe to take $115,000 of it as rapidly as they did; I thought the rest of it would run off the same way.

Mr. Hodgins: The Continental Securities apparently gave its cheque, did it not, for a very large amount in the bank, over half a million? A. Yes.

Q. Really $538,525, that was the difference between the certain charges you had made and the total amount they were to pay, was it not? A. No, that was for the full amount of the stock, I think.

Q. We make it $663,000 would be the full amount of the shares, and all they gave you was $538,525; the balance was made up how? A. The books speak for themselves there; it was just a cross entry, the whole business.

Q. This is one of the items that is said to be charged up against that; credited upon the total amount in order to bring out that balance; will you just look at that $21,000 cheque; I find that that cheque was credited to the Continental Securities Company on account of the amount that they were to pay for this stock on account of this $663,000. (Cheque referred to is part of Exhibit 61.) A. I presume so; the books will show that.

Q. That is payable to yourself, is it not? A. No, payable to the Farmers Bank of Canada.

Q. What became of the money for that? A. It appears to have gone to my personal credit.

Q. What was done with that; was that commissions on this stock sale? A. That was to be held by me for these chaps in Winnipeg, think.

Q. Who were they? A. Mr. Chevrier and others.

Q. That fell through and they did not get it? A. No, they did not get it, I do not think so.

Q. What became of it? A. I think I must have used it.

Q. Was there a Menzie note held by the Toronto branch at that time that was credited on that? A. There was a Menzie note.

Q. R. E. Menzie note held by Toronto branch, $40,000? A. Yes.

Q. Why should that be credited to the Continental Securities Company? A. It is not credited to the Continental Securities Company.

Q. Was it allowed against your purchase price? A. No.
Q. I am trying to account for the fact that while they had $663,000 they only paid $538,000? A. Menzie took $40,000 of the Farmers Bank stock and he gave me his note for it, secured by the Menzie Wall Paper Company's stock, and he never paid anything for it, and that stock was then transferred over to the Winnipeg people.

Q. The note was? A. Cancelled and given back to Menzie.

Q. And allowed the Continental people on their subscription? A. Well, taken up through the Continental.

Q. I do not see how that was if Menzie's note was outstanding? A. His note was not paid at all.

Q. If it was credited upon this $510,000 of stock that would be wrong, would it not? A. I do not think that is the way it shows.

Q. If it does show that way in the book? A. It cannot show that way; I do not think so.

Q. It ought not, certainly? A. The books will speak for themselves. I do not remember that transaction exactly, but I know Menzie paid nothing.

Q. And his stock went to the Continental people? A. Yes.

Q. And they ought to have paid for it. A. They paid for it through their own cheque.

Q. They should have paid for it? A. It would appear so.

Q. And if instead of paying for it you put to their credit this Menzie note, that would be wrong. A. I don't think I did.

Mr. Clarkson: You charged it up against $663,000 and they gave you a cheque for $538,000, the balance, you threw all your obligations into that pot? A. That is only a cross entry; I am sure the books will show cross entries there.

Mr. Commissioner: That won't explain? A. No, that won't show Menzie paid up a dollar.

Mr. Commissioner: It won't show why these items went to the credit of that $663,000—

Mr. Clarkson: The bank was carrying these items as paid up on its books and carrying Menzie's stock as paid up? A. Yes.

Mr. Clarkson: Q. They could not charge the Continental again with the Menzie's stock without paying it twice; that is why you put the note in against the $663,000.

Mr. Commissioner: That would not be any reason why they should not pay $663,000.

Mr. Hodgins: They agreed to pay $663,000, they give a cheque for the major part of it and they take credit for the Menzie note because they get the Menzie stock and I say that was wrong, because the Menzie note was not paid? A. They never took credit for it.

Mr. Clarkson: They are not credited, they are charged.

Mr. Hodgins: Charged, that is more correct.

Mr. Commissioner: That is a different story altogether.

Mr. Hodgins: My word is perfectly right, for I see there was credited on the $663,000 the $40,000 Menzie note, that is what the books disclose? A. I do not think they do.

Q. If they do show that it was wrong to have done it? A. I won't say that until I have gone into and examined it and saw the transaction exactly.

Mr. Commissioner: What was the bonus.

Mr. Hodgins: At 130.

Mr. Travers: At 130, 5,100 shares would be $663,000.

Mr. Hodgins: The cheque they gave was $538,525.

Mr. Commissioner: There must be another entry to meet that; there cannot be such a large slip as that.

Mr. Hodgins: It is not a slip at all.
MR. COMMISSIONER: It would be absurd to think that a man dealing with these people would give them credit for $130,000 for nothing.

MR. HODGINS: I quite agree with you.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I think it is most probable you will find another entry.

MR. HODGINS: We will drop this here till we have another look at that. A. That transaction works itself out right.

MR. COMMISSIONER: What do you mean by that? A. They stopped paying up the stock that was not already subscribed for, together with taking up the stock that had been subscribed for and nothing paid; one washes the other.

Q. They were to give you $663,000 for this stock that they got, no doubt about that is there? A. There is no doubt about that.

Q. They only gave you $538,000 according to the book, according to what Mr. Hodgins is reading from, that leaves a difference? A. About $124,000; that cannot be.

Q. That is made up by giving them the benefit of this sum that has been paid by note, but not actually been paid by the people whose stock was taken over? A. That is how I think—

Q. Where is the entry; there ought to be something on the other side to cover that $124,000 if the bank was properly dealt with? A. It is; it will be shown in the books.

Q. How do you suggest it would be; if they got credit for the moneys that had been credited on your books? A. Those were kept by the Toronto branch.

Q. Who was the accountant? A. The accountant at that time?

Q. Yes? A. I think it was a man named Spink.

MR. HODGINS: Using this as an illustration; there cannot be much doubt about what they did; these 5,100 shares of stock included Menzie's $40,000? A. Yes.

Q. He had not paid for it? A. No, he gave a note for it.

Q. How did the Continental Company pay for it? A. Giving their cheque to take up Menzie's note.

Q. Did they? A. The books I am sure show that:

MR. COMMISSIONER: That must be the form if it went through properly, the form which it took; they must have taken up this obligation of the people who had not paid for their shares.

MR. HODGINS: You do not mean the Continental Securities Company gave their cheques for $40,000?

MR. COMMISSIONER: They must have done that to make the transaction square.

MR. HODGINS: If it had been carried out as agreed well and good.

MR. COMMISSIONER: I do not think it is possible they made any such bungle as that? A. There is no question about it in the world, no.

MR. COMMISSIONER: However, the books ought to show if there is such an entry.

The Commission adjourned at 4 P.M. to 11 A.M. to-morrow, May 28th, 1912.

Toronto, May 28th, 1912.

The Commission resumed its Sittings at 11 A.M., at Osgoode Hall.

GEOFFREY TEIGNMOUTH CLARKSON, Sworn. Examined by—

MR. HODGINS: Q. You are the liquidator of the Farmers Bank? A. I am.
Q. And you have had practically entire charge of the investigation of these matters since it came into your hands? A. Yes.

Q. You are thoroughly familiar with the books and records of the bank? A. Excepting in the minor details.

Q. Have you had access to all the documents connected with the bank so far as you could collect them? A. Yes, the only documents which I have not—perhaps I had better tell you this way: the day I went into the bank I gave instructions that no papers should be interfered with or go out of the bank, and while I was up in the Head Office I was told that Mr. Travers had removed some Keeley Mine papers and another box of papers. That resulted in Mr. Travers not coming into the bank premises again. So far as those papers are concerned I got back the Keeley Mine papers, but a box of papers went away containing what he said were private memoranda, and the police became aware of it immediately, and I think that box was traced to his house and into the custody of his son. I believe that afterwards the police got hold of a box, whether it was the one in question or not I do not know, but we got some papers, but not the notes and cheques and other documents that he refers to.

Mr. Commissioner: Where is the son? A. In Toronto here.

Q. I suppose he can be got. Has he been examined in the liquidation? A. He has not sir, but we have asked for papers from time to time and—

Mr. Hodgins: Then the failure of the bank was on the 19th December, 1910? A. Yes.

Q. Having taken possession of all the books and papers of the bank you came into possession of all the outstanding assets, as I understand it? A. Yes, so far as I know of.

Q. And you have given your own personal attention in endeavouring to realize on them? A. Yes, my own personal attention.

Q. And you understand the particular situation of each asset and the transactions which produced it? A. I think fairly fully.

Q. Would it be possible for you to give from the books a statement of just how the bank stood when it opened its doors, or closely near that time? A. Yes, I have a statement here as of December 31st, 1906. That is on page 43 of that report.

Mr. Hodgins: I am going to ask that we might use this book as a matter of convenience, and then the pages of it which we refer to might be bound up separately.

Mr. Commissioner: Very well. This statement is on page 43; and the exhibit will be marked as Exhibit 63.—Exhibit 63—pages of Mr. Clarkson’s report which will be hereafter referred to.

Mr. Commissioner: Page 43 is a statement of the affairs of the Bank as of the 31st December, 1906.

Mr. Hodgins: That statement shows what is compiled from data and books of provisional directors; also as shown by the permanent books of the bank; and as shown by return to the Government, and the differences between them? A. That is right.

Q. Then the payments on capital stock in cash would represent what was left out of the amount raised I suppose and in securities? A. The first statement shows that on the 31st December, 1906, $227,034.30 had been received in cash on capital stock, that there was on hand at least put under the control of the bank, including the notes with the Trusts Company, $175,830 of promissory notes given on account of stock—

Q. That is taking in those which the Trusts Company still had? A. That is right.

Mr. Commissioner: The loan would be on the opposite side, would it not, or is it shown? A. I have shown the balance of the loan at that time.

Q. Had not you better put opposite that what those notes are, because otherwise it might seem promissory notes of customers? A. Yes (Witness inserts “Given on account of capital stock”).
SESSIONAL PAPER No. 153a

Mr. Hodgins: When the permanent books of the bank were opened the cash is shown as $300,000 instead of $227,000? A. Yes, there was I think $75,995 of spread items included in that.

Q. That accounts for that? A. Yes, the difference in the borrowing.

Mr. Commissioner: The next item there is a credit of the Trusts & Guarantee Company, is that explained in the same way?

Mr. Hodgins: The Trusts & Guarantee Company is shown among the credits of $20,894? A. It is shown on my statement as among the liabilities; that $20,894 is that amount was owing to the Trusts Company.

Mr. Commissioner: How could it be a credit? A. It is shown on the credit side of the account; the liability side of the account; anything on the credit side is a liability.

Mr. Hodgins: That item is not shown, nor were the promissory notes shown in the permanent books of the bank or the return to the Government? A. No.

Mr. Commissioner: But that was replaced to the extent of the difference by the sum that was spread over got from the loan from the Trusts Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why is premium on stock treated as liability, is not that profit? A. Yes, it is afterwards written off to profit and loss; it is a profit, but it shows the source of the item, that is why it appears in the credit.

Mr. Hodgins: On the other side, which would be the debit side of the account, would represent the assets of the bank? A. Yes.

Q. Organization and other expenses in the permanent books as opened are about $13,000 less than they really were according to the provisional directors' books? A. That is correct.

Q. Does that mean that they were improperly entered or is there any other explanation? A. It means they dropped $13,000 of expenses at that time.

Mr. Commissioner: How? A. In the permanent books the expenses as shown there are about $13,000 less than the provisional books show. There was a payment made to the Trusts & Guarantee Company I think of some $25,000 in March, 1907, which was charged to organization expenses, and that difference of $13,000 was picked up in those items. The full method of how that was picked up is shown on page 48 of my report.

Mr. Hodgins: The cheque that you speak of, that last cheque of $25,000 odd that appeared in the Trusts & Guarantee account that we went over the other day, some time in April is—A. $25,344.

Q. That is the one? A. So far as I can find out the difference was picked up in that cheque through there.
