REPORT
OF THE
FOR THE YEAR 1923

ARTHUR G. DOUGHTY

OTTAWA
F. A. ACLAND
PRINTER TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY
1924

The Hon. A. B. COPP, LL.B.,
Secretary of State,
Ottawa.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit to you a Report on the work of the Archives for the years 1922 and 1923.

During the past year the Public Archives has been fortunate in securing a number of collections of exceptional interest to students of Canadian history. The Earl of Durham has donated the remainder of the papers collected by his grandfather during his mission to Canada in 1838. These, with the gift of papers in 1907, complete the Durham Papers. They furnish in a large measure the material for the study of a momentous period in our history. A calendar of the papers is given in this volume.

Another gift of exceptional value is the Monckton Papers; miscellaneous documents and printed material, and the Van Loo portrait of Louis XV, presented to the Nation by Sir Leicester Harmsworth, Bt.—as a memorial to his distinguished brother, Viscount Northcliffe. The Monckton Collection consists of the papers accumulated by the Hon. Robert Monckton sometime Governor of Nova Scotia and Second in Command of the expedition to Quebec in 1759. Included in this collection are many documents in the hand of General Wolfe and dispatches of importance addressed to Wolfe by the military authorities. They are of particular interest for the history of the British operations in Canada in 1759-60.

The Nova Scotia Papers in this collection throw light on the period of the expulsion of the Acadians and General Monckton's administration in Annapolis. There are interesting papers connected with Monckton's Governorship of New York and with his operations in Martinique.

The Journals of Captain Bell, A.D.C. to General Wolfe, Wolfe's Order Book, letters of Montcalm and French memoranda are among the more important miscellaneous items of the Northcliffe Memorial.

There are over one hundred volumes, bound in crushed morocco, by Riviere.

Particular interest is attached to the Van Loo Portrait which was sent to Canada by Louis XV during the French régime in Canada.

A calendar of the Monckton collection and the documents acquired during the year is in course of preparation.

The Department has acquired the famous Montcalm-Levis-Vaudreuil papers, dealing with the last days of French occupancy in Canada. Letters of Montcalm are particularly scarce and this large collection will be welcomed by every student of the old régime. The calendar of this collection appears as Appendix C to this volume.

During the past year a History Society was formed in England through the untiring efforts of Sir Campbell Stuart. Its members are the representatives of families connected with this country since the beginning of British rule. A similar society has been formed in France to embrace the representatives of those connected with the history of French rule in Canada. It is hoped that the efforts of the members of these societies will result in the discovery of many sources of history. Since the foundation of the society in November last Lord Dartmouth has donated his papers to the Archives, and several families have promised to follow his example after an examination of their records.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

A. G. DOUGHTY,
Deputy Minister and Keeper of Public Records.

INDEX AND INFORMATION DIVISION

During the twenty-one months which have elapsed since my last report, the work in this division has been pursued most diligently. Forty-six volumes of the Military, or C series, have been indexed.

An index of the Quebec Gazette has also been started, and the first eight volumes (1764-1771) are now complete. When more advanced, this index will prove of great value, as Gazette contains many interesting details about prominent people and events of the early part of British rule in Canada, which are not to be found elsewhere.

Many thousand cards have also been added to various accessory indexes intended to aid the workers in this branch:—biographical, genealogical, geographical, etc. These cards are of great assistance to the department when called upon to give information about individuals or families, and they are useful for the preparation of a general index.

The number of cards prepared, typewritten, classified, and distributed in their respective drawers, is as follows:—

|-----------------------------|---------|
| Series C | 66,455 |
| Quebec Gazette | 10,858 |
| Library catalogue | 11,194 |
| Various indexes | 24,276 |
| Total | 112,783 |

SEARCHES

The work of this branch is increasing. During the year 1922, 1,033 requests were made for information from all parts of the country—many of them involving extensive research. The small staff available for this purpose is taxed to the utmost, and if the demands continue to increase it will be necessary to make provision for assistants.

It is customary in other Archives for research work to be conducted by inquirers and at their own expense. The present system, however, is of great convenience to the public.

MAP DIVISION

Among the maps received are a number which will be found valuable by the student of the period of the French Régime: There are three maps by Franquelin, of 1688, 1702, and 1710. The first contains, as an inset, an interesting view of Quebec city. Others which may be mentioned are, a map of Hudson's Bay by La Pérouse, two of Annapolis Royal, of 1741 and of 1743; and one of North America by Jean Rocques of 1761.

County atlases were received for the counties of Wellington, York, Ontario and Quebec. These maps are useful, for the amount of local information they contain.

THE DURHAM PAPERS

THE DURHAM PAPERS

The Durham Papers are of unusual importance to students of one of the most critical years in the history of Canada. An insurrection which had broken out in both Upper and Lower Canada in November and December of 1837 had been suppressed; but discontent and its moving causes still remained.

At this juncture Lord Durham was selected by the Government in England to come to Canada to study the situation, and submit a plan, which, by removing the causes of disaffection, would enable the country to enter on such a career of prosperity, as the character of its people and the extent of its resources gave ample warrant for anticipating.

The papers in this collection contain the record of his proceedings during his stay in this country, between the end of May and the beginning of November, 1838, and of the views entertained by the Government in England regarding them.

They consist of all the despatches exchanged between Durham and the Colonial Secretary and other Ministers of the Crown; of those exchanged between Durham and the Lieutenant Governors of the several provinces, and the British Minister at Washington; of papers relating to the state of public feeling in Upper and Lower Canada, and on the frontiers in the adjoining States of the Union; and of the transactions of the commissions appointed to enquire into the administration of the Public Lands, the emigration policy; and into the educational, charitable and other public institutions of the country. Besides these, there is a mass of correspondence from persons in all classes of society, written in response to an invitation from Durham, setting forth the grievances from which the people of the provinces suffered and suggesting measures for their removal.

The papers furnish the means of estimating the extent of Durham's own share in the work of administration and investigation with which he had been entrusted. During the five months of his residence in Canada, 142 despatches and letters were sent by Durham to the Colonial Secretary and other Ministers. Of these 93 are represented in the collection by the original drafts. Much the greater part of these drafts are in Durham's own hand, and practically all of them bear his initials as approved by him. As is the case with all official correspondence, the majority of the despatches relate to matters concerned with ordinary routine. The drafts of the following papers were written by Durham himself: the Proclamation announcing his assumption of the government, and the aims it was his intention to pursue; the despatch of June 29, reporting the measures he had taken with respect to the political prisoners, including the banishment of eight of the leaders to Bermuda; the despatch of the same day on the necessity for a comprehensive scheme of emigration and for some judicious plan for the disposal of the Public Lands; and the secret and confidential report of August 8 on the state of affairs in Lower Canada.

Several of the more important papers in the collection have been printed in full. The first two are secret minutes prepared by an official of the Colonial Office and privately printed for the use of the Cabinet. They give as clear an idea of the situation in Canada until the end of 1837 as could be gathered from the despatches and other documents received from this country.

The second is the report made to Durham by Colonel Grey, on his mission to Washington, which was undertaken at Durham's instance for the purpose of requiring that the Government of the United States should take measures to check the lawless raids from their frontiers into Canadian territory.

The third is Durham's despatch of August 9, 1838, setting forth the impressions which he had formed during the first two months after his arrival in Canada.

The next is a letter from Robert Baldwin, written on August 23, 1838, as the result of a conversation he had with Durham while the latter was in Toronto, on the changes which should be made in the form and spirit of the government of Canada. This was of special value to Durham, as confirming his view that no government could be successful, which did not rest on the consent and goodwill of the people.

Following this letter is one from Lord Grey containing an appreciation of Durham's Report. Its importance lies in the fact that Grey, who was Secretary at War at the time, became Colonial Secretary in 1846, and this letter furnishes a statement of the views with which he entered on the administration of this office. The co-operation of Grey as Colonial Secretary with Durham's son-in-law, Lord Elgin, who was Governor General during the period of Grey's administration and who claimed to be Durham's political heir, is an interesting and important incident in our history.

The Sketch of Lord Durham's Mission to Canada in 1838, written by Charles Buller in 1840, is of particular interest, as showing, more unmistakably than has been done elsewhere, the line of ideas which actuated Durham, in carrying on his work in this country. Buller was Durham's chief secretary, and enjoyed his full confidence.

The last document printed is a translation of the Journal of Amury Girod, which was kept in German and Italian, during the period between November 15 and December 8, 1837. It is a record of Girod's proceedings as a Patriot, in the districts of Richelieu and Lake of the Two Mountains. It contains much information on the insurrection in those districts.

SECTION 1.—LETTERS AND DESPATCHES TO LORD DURHAM FROM COLONIAL SECRETARY AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT.

VOLUME I

Lord Melbourne (Prime Minister) to Durham. A.L.S. Enclosing sketch of bill to be submitted to Parliament when it meets. Expressing earnest desire of himself and colleagues that Durham will assume government of British North American Provinces. Aware that post is not unattended with "great risk and hazard", but it gives opportunity of rendering "great and essential service" to country in great emergency. Large powers conferred by bill would not be given except to "a person like yourself, of great personal weight and of known popular and liberal principles". Desirable that Durham's decision as to acceptance should be communicated without delay. Glenelg will explain details. 1833

Sir George Grey (Under Secretary for Colonies) to Durham. A.L.S. Sending for his approval amended form of his commission, so as to avoid inclusion of Hudson's Bay Territories. C.O.
January 16.

Memorandum, respecting the Commissions to be issued to Durham. (Apparently prepared by an officer in the Colonial Office). Gosford and predecessors in government of Lower Canada were given commissions for government of each and all provinces. In each of other provinces, the Governor's commission was administered by a Lieutenant Governor, who corresponded directly with Secretary of State. The distinction therefore was merely titular. p. 1
p. 5
January 20.

If Governor had resorted in person to any of other provinces, the Lieutenant Governor's office and authority would have been suspended during continuance of Governor in that province. The Governor was therefore interdicted from going beyond limits of Lower Canada.

Though there are five provinces, there are only three commissions: one for two Canadas, one for Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, and one for New Brunswick. The reason would seem to be to save fees at Patent Office. The inconvenience is that the commissions respecting Upper Canada and Prince Edward Island were not accessible in those provinces.

The best mode of preparing the commissions would seem to be as follows:

First, a distinct commission to Durham as Governor of each province. These might be deposited at the respective provincial capitals.

Second, a sixth commission would constitute Durham Governor General, Captain General and Lord High Commissioner throughout British North America. This he would retain, and it would accompany him wherever he had occasion to repair.

The ordinary commission would authorize Durham and the several Lieutenant Governors to conduct apart from each other the common duties of the Government. The extraordinary commission would require the Lieutenant Governors to execute their powers under instructions of the Governor General. The advantage of this mode is that when Durham's functions as Governor General and High Commissioner cease, the particular commission may be revoked, and the others remain undisturbed. p. 8

Lord Glenelg (Colonial Secretary) to Durham. No. 1. L.S. Some interim instructions or rather suggestions pending the preparation of formal instructions. Abstains from reference to measures for suppression of disturbances, in hope that there will be no occasion for them. Durham's main business is to prepare way for return to system founded on principles of liberty forming base of British Constitution and Act of 1791. Agitated state of public mind may make immediate steps inadvisable. Different method of administration to be authorized temporarily. Durham's personal influence and attention expected to restore calmness. Measures based on report of Commission of 1836 being prepared for Parliament, but deferred owing to death of King and outbreak in Canada. More extensive changes now necessary than before the insurrection. Necessity of learning views of Canadians on amendments to Act of 1791. British minority in Lower Canada complain of anti-commercial and unprogressive spirit of majority. This also subject of grievance in Upper Canada. Measure for Union of Provinces introduced in Parliament some few years before, but dropped. Upper Canada Assembly petition for annexation of Montreal to that province. Imperial Parliament probably to be called upon for legislation. Importance of learning sentiments of Canadians on public questions. Suggestion of conference to be composed of 3 members of Legislative Council and 10 of Assembly of Upper Canada with equal number from Lower Canada, 3 from Special Council and 10 popularly elected. Most important subjects for discussion are the questions in dispute between the two provinces—questions of trade, intercolonial and (for Upper Canada) foreign. Suggestion of some joint legislative authority to deal with matters of common interest, local matters being left to provincial legislatures. Another subject for joint consideration should be composition of Legislative Council of Lower Canada, which Assembly of that Province desired to have elective. Other subjects for consideration of conference should be provision for expenses of Civil Government in Lower Canada—land tenure—court for appeals and impeachments. While conference is suggested, Durham to be free to choose any other means of gaining necessary information. His commission to be co-extensive with British possessions in North America, to enable him to consider their general interests comprehensively. p. 19

Results if this principle were applied in Lower Canada. Necessity of interposition of independent body between Executive and Assembly. Composition of Legislative Council in 1827, 1834, and as proposed in 1837.

In 1827, 27 members, of whom 17 were office holders in connection with Government.

In 1834, 38 members, of whom 1 was permanently absent, 2 were judges, who on recommendation of King did not sit. Of remaining 35, 7 were connected with Government, 28 were not. Of the 28 unconnected with Government, 22 were appointed by Sir James Kempt and Lord Aylmer. Of these, 12 were of French origin, and 10 of British origin.

In the Council of 1837, if Lord Gosford's appointments had gone into effect, there would have been 40 members—18 of French origin, 22 of British. Of latter 22, 9 did not or could not attend, leaving 18 of French and 13 of British origin. Of these 3 would be office holders. This shows recommendations of report of House of Commons of 1828, to have been carried into effect.

These recognize certain instructions to Lord Dalhousie, which have been transcribed with little variation since Conquest, and are in some cases inapplicable and at variance with law. Only those not obnoxious to these objections to be observed. Complete revision impossible until Durham makes his report. Attention drawn to three classes of cases, in which instructions are not conformable to law or practice:—(1) those affecting alienation of Waste Lands; (2) the standing Instructions suppose existence of Constitution of 1791; to this extent they are inapplicable; (3) having been framed before law relieving Roman Catholics from ancient disabilities, they are "in many particulars conceived in a spirit opposed to the principles of religious toleration as now understood and practised." p. 361

Glenelg to Durham. No. 21. L.S. Supplementing instructions in despatches of January 20 (No. 1), and April 3 (No. 8).

Attacks from United States borders, so far successfully repelled; United States Government making every effort to impose check upon them. He must vigilantly watch these disorders, taking care to give no cause for offence to United States Government. Measures being taken in Upper and Lower Canada regarding political prisoners. Colborne has discharged many prisoners, but is holding some more aggravated cases for trial. He was instructed to allow trials of prisoners to take the ordinary course, unless and until it was clearly shown that justice could not be obtained by this means. If this should prove the case, prisoners to be held until Durham's arrival. Policy of Government is, utmost lenity compatible with public safety. To enable Durham to pursue this policy unhampered, he is authorized to grant full pardon in cases of treason. Power to be exercised largely but not entirely without exception. Murder cases to be treated separately. Instructions to Colborne respecting procedure in trials to be followed. "By the verdicts of the ordinary juries the fate of

"Except in case of murder, capital punishments should be avoided." Transportation, banishment, imprisonment or fine should be sufficient. If quite necessary, laws regarding trials of cases of treason or insurrection may be made, but must not be retrospective. "The most important object of Your Lordship's mission is, however, the settlement of Her Majesty's Dominions in North America on such a basis as may afford the reasonable prospect of an enduring tranquillity under a form of government corresponding in its general principles with that of this Kingdom, so far as such correspondence is compatible with the essential differences which must subsist between the Metropolitan State and its Provincial Dependencies." He is left the widest discretion in considering plans. No system practicable "unless it be adapted to the affections and circumstances of the people whom it professes to benefit". Prime essential of a system is that it shall "practically work well". Full discretion allowed in constitution of Special Council. p. 371

Enclosure:

Glenelg to Colborne. Copy. Replying to request in despatch (No. 2) of January 24, for decision as to course to be adopted towards political prisoners charged with murder or high treason. Immediate amnesty and discharge of all prisoners, though easiest course, not recommended. Some prisoners should be brought to early trial. Noting opinion of Lower Canadian officers of the law, supported by Colborne, that impartial trial cannot be had before ordinary tribunals in political cases, and that trials should be held by Courts-Martial, Government cannot acquiesce, until failure of ordinary tribunals is established. Government glad to observe release of over two hundred prisoners. Expectation that careful scrutiny will show that other prisoners may be discharged. Number of prisoners should be reduced to those whose offences cannot be overlooked without danger to tranquillity of Province. Even among those held for trial, there may be some who will plead guilty and be willing to withdraw from Province. These might be released on security given. In selecting cases for trial before ordinary tribunals, care should be taken to pick out those against whom evidence is clear, and who are not strongly supported by popular sympathy. If verdicts are rendered on evidence, the other cases may be proceeded with. If not, the others should be detained. Should the law as it stands sanction a special commission to all the judges of Supreme Courts of Province, that course should be adopted. If legal objections exist to this course, they should be removed by legislation. Change of venue not desirable, except perhaps from Montreal to Quebec. No trials must take place for murder. They should be postponed until public excitement has subsided. Should any capital convictions take place for political offences, they must be reserved for consideration of Durham. p. 392

April 29. of Constitutional Act of 1791. Land held as Clergy Reserves in Upper Canada, 2,254,668 acres; in Lower Canada, 919,013 acres.
 Lands for many years practically unsaleable, and an obstacle in way of rising settlements. Act 7 and 8 George IV. c. 62 provided for sale of part of lands, the interest on proceeds to be applied either to improvement of remaining Reserve Lands or to purposes indicated in Constitutional Act. Amount then invested £79,920-15-10 for Upper Canada, and £31,085-2-7 for Lower Canada. Doubts as to beneficiaries. First interpretation of Act identified "Protestant Clergy" with clergy of Church of England. In 1819, Law Officers of Crown gave opinion that Church of Scotland was entitled equally with Church of England, but no other Protestant bodies. This view sanctioned by committee of House of Commons in 1828. After 1829, when revenues became considerable, Church of Scotland pressed claims, but Church of England continued to resist them, while other Protestant bodies, insisting on their right, demanded modification of Act. Lord Ripon in 1831 recommended the Provincial Legislatures to pass acts re-investing the Reserves in Crown. Suggestion not adopted by either

 In meantime whole proceeds in Upper Canada have gone to Church of England, and £1,350 have been paid to Church of Scotland from Casual and Territorial Revenue. In Lower Canada £500 paid to Church of Scotland from revenue of Reserves. The arrangement as regards Upper Canada rests on guarantee given in 1834 on reduction of vote to S. P. G. that salaries of English Church clergy should be provided from local revenues. Being insufficient, the excess was thrown on Casual and Territorial Revenue. Amount paid from Casual and Territorial Revenue for 1836 was £2,565. General dissatisfaction expressed with arrangement. Government anxious to have question settled. (a) Pecuniarily, the Reserves have not been and are not likely to become beneficial to Church of England; (b) in all other respects they have been hurtful; (c) participation of Church of Scotland would render Reserves still more disproportionate to their nominal objects and would bring evils of invidiousness on two Churches instead of one; (d) effective cure for evils would be to render Reserves applicable to all sects, which could only be done to advantage by devoting property to purposes of general education. State of higher education. There are 7 collegiate institutions in Lower Canada, 6 Roman Catholic, and one of lay origin (McGill). Persons desiring higher education in English language must go to Great Britain, Eastern Provinces or United States, McGill not being yet in active operation. If Reserves are appropriated to education, a generous grant should be made to McGill. Discussion of a university perhaps premature. It would require, if founded, liberal aid from Legislature. "Should however a time happily arrive when there would appear a prospect of founding such an institution with real efficacy, settling it on the most comprehensive basis, and so that not merely it should be open to all classes, but should truly hold out equal inducements to all to resort to it without distinction or preference, we should think it would be a work in which all might be proud to participate." (1) Glenelg to Sir J. Harvey. Copy. Acknowledging despatch of May 5, (No. 13) enclosing address from Prince Edward Island Assembly asking that lands liable to forfeiture be re-invested in Crown. His Majesty directed following answer be given: Evil from which colony suffers is uncultivated state of Island from want of settlers. This was anticipated when Island fell to Crown. Original grantees required on pain of forfeiture to settle lands with Protestants from Europe, (not part of British dominions), or by inhabitants, of at least two years' standing in British colonies in North America. For reasons then unascertainable, conditions remained largely ineffective. In 1802, a local Act was passed enforcing forfeiture, but it was not confirmed. In 1817, two estates, Lots 15 and 55, were re-invested in Crown, but in following year conditions were made easier. In 1832, Legislature passed act for Court of Escheat, which was disallowed. Owing to misapprehension of conditions of Island, the terms of grants could not be fulfilled for reasons mentioned. Forfeiture could not be sanctioned unless Government were satisfied of neglect of proprietors. Government cannot therefore accede to prayer of Assembly. Attention invited to measure in Upper Canada, imposing tax on all granted lands, and when taxes were eight years in arrears, directing sale of lands sufficient to cover arrears. Suggested that Prince Edward Island might try similar plan, but act for that purpose should contain clause for suspension until His Majesty's pleasure should be declared. 1836. Enclosure:

British Consul at New York to Durham. Copy. On the evils of government in Canada. Despite many advantages, Canadians are humiliatingly inferior industrially to those on the other side of border line. Position due to system of government. "The causes of the prolonged mismanagement may be traced to the fact, that all who have access to the Ministers of the Crown, and on whose counsels the Executive Government is compelled to depend are in one way or other connected with the promoters and upholders of that baneful system." Every dweller in Upper Canada convinced that his property would be of double its present value if it was separated from British jurisdiction. Loyalty of present inhabitants will diminish with each succeeding generation. Party exists in each province which has managed to absorb all places of profit and influence, and who distribute all patronage. If they acted less selfishly and more patriotically not a bayonet would be required to maintain Government. They are open in opposition to, and indecent in denunciation of Ministers of Crown. Evils of dominant Church, attended by only fraction of population. Arthur has disappointed friends of permanent tranquillity. Denunciations of Gosford by upholders of system. Violence of this party against clemency of British Government towards misguided men. No person anxious for tranquillity desirous of extending clemency to MacKenzie and his sympathizers. p. 16

Glenelg to Durham. No. 72. L.S. Respecting Gosford's despatch No. 3 of January 12, on claims of certain militia-men to participate in indulgence sanctioned respecting "six first battalions of embodied militia" by despatch of June 12, 1836. As this would involve alienation of 1,000,000 acres of land, it requires careful examination. Essential documents, however, wanting. No authority found for Gosford's statement in despatch of April 26, 1837, and in message to Assembly of March 5, respecting promise of Prince Regent previous to 1819 to grant land to embodied militia who had served during late war. Has found that at conclusion of war, land was offered to a number of regular troops, to foreign regiments serving under de Meuron and de Watteville, and as condition of enlistment to Glen-garry Fencibles and Canadian Voltigeurs; also, that Duke of Richmond in message to Assembly on April 3, 1819 stated that lands had been set apart for officers and men coming under spirit and meaning of Royal Instructions. But can find no such instructions. It would appear that some misapprehension exists, unless documents may be missing from files. The claim, however, has been recognized both by Imperial and Provincial Governments, and, however unfounded, cannot be disregarded. Government's policy must be governed not by sentiment but by duty owed to public in administration of their lands, and, in absence of pledge to contrary course, cannot sanction a claim involving an improvident and uncompensated alienation of Crown Lands. Durham, unless possessing documentary evidence not on files, or moved by other considerations, is directed to inform claimants of decision to abide by terms of despatch of June 12, 1836 as interpreted by Gosford and himself viz.:—that none but those included in list of officers presented to Assembly on April 19, 1819, and who came within two first classes in Gosford's proposal can be allowed the benefit of it. In the case of all except those mentioned in despatch of June 12, 1836, forfeiture accruing from delay in obtaining Patents, should be enforced. p. 156

Downing Street, August 18.

Glenelg to Durham. No. 89. L.S. Enclosing copy of opinion of Law Officers, on Ordinance for providing "for the security of the Province of Lower Canada." In their opinion, only part legally objectionable is that relating to treatment of prisoners beyond limits of province. Weighty opinion in House of Lords held whole Ordinance as ultra vires, but this extreme view not sanctioned in either House. More serious popular objections raised against the part subjecting refugees returning without permission to capital punishment. Government recognizing Durham's difficulties would have been content to allow this to stand, feeling assured that no act of needless severity or substantial injustice would have had his sanction. Question taken out of hands of Government by bill introduced in Lords, to declare Special Council's powers to be so narrowly restricted that the Ordinance was quite ultra vires, and to provide indemnity for all acts done under it. In spite of opposition of Government, bill received second reading, and Government, in view of partial illegality of Ordinance, and consequent difficulties in defending it, decided to advise disallowance. The bill was amended by omission of parts restricting powers of Special Council, and confining indemnity to acts done under admittedly illegal parts. The bill as amended passed both Houses. Government fears action of Parliament has enhanced Durham's difficulties, but, on other hand, the numerous strong expressions of confidence in Durham's administration, have strengthened his hands. Government determined in spite of disallowance that Bermuda exiles shall not return to Canada without permission. Suggests Ordinance subjecting exiles returning, to any punishment short of death and a proclamation that refugees returning will undergo trial for treason; also, continuance of suspension of Habeas Corpus. Indispensable that Suspension Act and Proclamation of disallowance be published simultaneously, to avoid unfairness to exiles or refugees. Government does not desire to fetter discretion of Durham in dealing with these matters; no course open to him free from objections. It is assumed that no action has been taken under Ordinance for attainder of persons indicted for treason and who have avoided trial. Matter within Durham's discretion. Object to be attained not so much severe punishment as exclusion of agitators from Province, and prevention of their interference in its affairs. Government deeply regretted embarrassment to which Durham has been subjected; and approved heartily of the spirit in which those measures were conceived, and were convinced that they "were calculated under your authority to satisfy the ends of justice, although in some respects they involved a Gosford's despatch (No. 71) of July 13, 1837, transmitting Report of Committee of Executive Council, reached him in September, but necessary delays and insurrectionary troubles prevented action until present. Durham to realize the importance of subject. "There is not one of graver importance in itself or involving obligations of a deeper or more enduring character." Report of Committee of Executive Council leaves little to be desired. Durham authorized to carry proposals therein into effect. The recommendation regarding the substitution of European mode of dress for native costumes approved; to be carried into effect without violence to feelings or prejudices of people. Practice of giving trinkets as presents to be abandoned. Agricultural implements to be substituted. Desires to know if recommendations as to wandering Indians have been carried out, and if they have evinced any intention of settling. Objections to commuting presents for money decisive. 1838.

Condition of education not creditable to British rule. Under French rule, this was carried on by Jesuit missionaries, "a class of men of whom it must be admitted that, whatever may have been their delinquencies in the Old World, they have in the New been known chiefly as the protectors and civilizers of a Race forsaken as trampled upon by all beside." Their example must be emulated. Durham to give attention to establishing schools for rudimentary education, combined with instruction in agriculture and some handicrafts. Report of Committee encouraging as to possibility of civilizing Indians. Desires to learn of progress in Agricultural School and Farm of P. Christie, and whether reports have been made as to other suitable places for similar institutions. Agrees with conclusion of Committee as to desirability of compact settlements, though liberty to be given to those preferring locations elsewhere. These latter to have presents in form of agricultural implements. Special attention invited to recommendations respecting separate tribes. This will be the easier, on account of Gosford's directions that tracts reserved for Indians or necessary as augmentations are not to be disposed of without express authority. Iroquois, Algonquin and Nipissing tribes, who are without land should have reserves assigned to them. Difficulty of question as to how reserves should be secured to Indians. Cultivation in Upper Canada somewhat retarded by want of legal title. Saleable titles objectionable as exposing Indians to frauds. As a solution, Arthur was directed, if insuperable objections did not appear, to cause title deeds to be drawn up and recorded in office of Commissioner of Crown Lands, where they might be seen by any person deputed thereto by Indians. If Indians desired to dispose of lands, Government would consider their applications. Similar course suggested for Lower Canada Indians lands. As regard Reserves, these must be inalienable except by consent of Executive, who should, also, be empowered, in event of non-cultivation, to remove them to remoter districts as settlement advances. If cultivated, reserves might be contracted to limits providing means of procuring adequate and comfortable subsistence. Recommendation that garden lots be granted to Lorette Indians approved. Periodical reports on condition of Indians required, and any suggestions which may occur to Durham on improvement. Appalling statement of Committee that the average number of children living does not exceed five for each four families, while average among whites is four for each marriage. Urges fact on Durham as motive for special exertions on his part. In general, the concerns of the Indians must continue under care and superintendence of Crown, until circumstances make it expedient to turn them over to Provincial Legislature. As regards money appropriated to Indian affairs, the Parliamentary grant should not, in general, be exceeded. But no real interest of Indians should be sacrificed or improvement deferred merely on ground of expense. Excess expenditure due to these causes might be drawn from Provincial Revenues, including Crown Revenues. Regrets that, in proposals to Provincial Legislatures, for cession of Crown Revenues for fixed Civil List, same stipulation was not made on behalf of Indians. In cases like those of Upper and Lower Canada, where subject still open, some provision for Indians might be made. Even where this is too late, appeal might be made to justice and liberality of Legislatures. This spirit should also be invoked in dealing with lands. Where it is necessary to depart from rules as to disposal of lands, this should be done.

Glenelg to Durham. No. 126. L.S. Acknowledging despatches (Nos. 66 and 68). Notes former was written before he had received official communication of proceedings in Parliament, and sympathizes with feelings expressed. Government greatly concerned, however, that "yielding to the impulse of the moment", he should have determined to resign. Regret expressed that, after receiving despatch of August 18, he should still insist on resigning; also, relief at assurance that he would not relinquish post until he had removed some grievances, or completed his enquiries, or, above all, prepared his plan for future government of provinces. Government feel assured that he will not abandon post, if circumstances arise endangering peace and safety of provinces. Disagreement with Durham's views as to suspension of Habeas Corpus Act. Belief that the fomenters of revolt will recognize that measure is directed against them, and that law-abiding people will apprehend no ill consequences. Cites beneficial effect of suspension after Revolution of 1688, and after accession of House of Hanover. Laments failure of trial by jury in Lower Canada, and directs enactment of ordinance constituting tribunal for trial of treason and murder. Composition of tribunal discussed, but Durham given free hand. Ordinance should be adopted at once, as ex post facto law very objectionable. Assurance repeated of confidence in Durham, later experience confirming Government in that confidence. Government convinced that course they pursued was the best "under the difficult and peculiar circumstances forced on them by the proceedings taken in the House of Lords," though they could not hope altogether "to neutralize the evil consequence of what appeared to them an ill-timed and injudicious interference" with the powers entrusted to Durham. But the many and varied testimonies to Durham's character and the value of his work convince Government that he over-rated the influence of those proceedings. Impressed with these sentiments, and unaware as to length of time required for completion of several objects contemplated, Government will abstain, until they hear from him again, from action bearing on appointment of successor. Government pleased at Colborne's agreeing to stay during winter. If Durham should leave Canada, he will turn over administration to Colborne. Downing Attention invited to despatch (No. 72) of July 18, on same subject of militia claims to Crown Lands. As Durham's measure is in accordance with principles set forth in that despatch, it is therefore approved. Glenelg to Durham. No. 133. L.S. Referring to despatches (Nos. 67 and 68), as to course which in Durham's opinion should have been taken by Government respecting the Ordinance of June 28. Government agrees with him, as to small part which was open to charge of illegality. As to Durham's statement that he knew that the section as to restraint of exiles in Bermuda was inoperative, and looked to Government to supply remedy, no hint of this view was contained in Durham's despatches, nor did he give Government opportunity, as prisoners were sent away a few days after ordinance issued. Government did indeed consider propriety of proposing a measure to supply the defect, but after full deliberation set aside the idea as inexpedient. Had hoped to have been able to remain silent on Turton's appointment, but Durham's allusion to it in despatch (No. 66) makes that impossible. Despatch (No. 30) was not answered because correspondence would have involved wide departure from ordinary rules of official communications; also, because it could not fail to cause needless pain to individual concerned. Durham is reminded that the selection of Turton as legal adviser was made without previous communication with either Melbourne or himself, and without knowledge of either; and that as soon as it became known, Melbourne stated his decided objection to it. Durham on Melbourne's remonstrance waived the appointment, but stated he would take Turton to Canada as his private friend. Both Melbourne and himself had firm impression that any assistance Turton might render to Durham would be given in private capacity only. p. 1059

Glenelg to Durham. No. 134. L.S. Acknowledging despatch (No. 80) of October 9, with proclamation of 8th and 9th of that month. The former approved. As to the latter the Government regard it "not merely as a deviation from the course which has hitherto been invariably pursued by the Governors of British possessions abroad, but as a dangerous departure from the practice and principles of the Constitution. They consider as open to most serious objection an appeal by such an officer to the public at large from measures adopted by the Sovereign with the advice and consent of Parliament. The terms in which that appeal has in this instance been made appear to Her Majesty's ministers calculated to impair the reverence due to the Royal Authority in the colony, to derogate from the character of the Imperial Legislature, to excite amongst the disaffected hopes of impunity, and to enhance the difficulties with which Your Lordship's successor will have to contend". Her Majesty's disapprobation is signified. His continuance as governor could be attended with no beneficial results. It is presumed Government has been transferred to Colborne. p. 1090

(2) Grey to Durham. A.L.S. Account of visit to Washington.
Interview with President: informed him of Durham's desire to cultivate cordial relations with United States, but his first duty was to give efficient protection to Canadians; 20,000 of these under arms and only prevented from retaliating the raids by confidence in Governor General. President gave assurance of strongest desire to maintain good understanding with England, and of determination to co-operate to limits of means for preservation of peaceful relations. President anticipated power from Congress to increase army, when more vigorous measures would be adopted. He denied allegations of unfriendliness, declaring that annexation would be contrary to interests of United States. Account of conversation of similar tenor with Poinsett, in which latter was even more emphatic than President. Notwithstanding expressions of good will, United States Government has shown culpable inactivity. Dates of communication from Forsyth to Fox shows this. To Poinsett's enquiry he told him the number of troops in Canada. (Printed in full on page 314). p. 89

Durham to Glenelg. No. 18. A.Dft. Initialed. Respecting trial of political prisoners. Observes that, though Glenelg was aware of improbability of securing convictions by juries, he will not consent to any other mode of trial. Difficulties of situation. On examination finds only 8 or 9 prisoners, deserving severe punishment, the others having fled to United States. Announced intention of punishing the guilty, and extending mercy to misguided. Result is that ringleaders pleaded guilty, and threw themselves on mercy of Crown, which he accepted. Summoned Special Council, a list of which he encloses; passed ordinance transporting those pleading guilty, forbidding Papineau and other fugitives from re-entering province, and releasing the others on their giving security. Issued a proclamation, announcing this last decision. Course gains general approbation. Reasons for not transporting prisoners to convict colony. Decided to send them to Bermuda. "Vestal" will take them—8 in number—on their arrival in Quebec. Murderers of Lieut. Weir not included in these measures. They will undergo trial. p. 112

Memorial. A Presbyterian congregation has existed in Quebec since Conquest, in connection with National Church of Scotland. Allowances of £50 each have been granted to the churches in Quebec and Montreal until 1835. Resolution of Government to cut off all aid to any body of provincial clergy received with regret, but without special ground of complaint. Grant made by Parliament to Anglican Bishop being continued, savors of discrimination. Case for assistance to Scottish Established Church congregations, there are 14 ministers of that communion in province; and not fewer than 30 settlements, chiefly Scotch, without ministers, through lack of means for their support.

Durham to Glenelg. No. 34. Draft in Wakefield's handwriting and copy. Acknowledging despatch (No. 35) of May 9, on plea of British North American Land Company for modification of terms. Has studied question. Is opposed to allowing modification. Serious evils to be traced to practice of not enforcing conditions attached to land grants. Effective colonization only possible, where strict performance is insisted upon. Is directing Crown Lands Department to gather in arrears; no exception could be made in case of Company. Public confidence already shaken by failure of Government to observe its own regulations respecting disposal of land. Grounds for Company's claim for indulgence—hostility of Assembly and political conditions—invalid: Assembly has long been opposed to such British enterprises. Original agreement very favorable to Company. If they should apply for release he would recommend resumption of land, as Crown could dispose of it on much better terms. p. 219

Durham to Glenelg. Secret and Confidential. No. 36. A.L. Initialed. Report on conditions in Lower Canada, which are very grave. Not political objects, primarily, but racial antagonisms extending from top to bottom of society, real ground of division. Illustrations of this fact. Real struggle is for or against retention of French laws and customs; thus British are for more responsible government, while French, calling themselves Reformers, prefer present forms or those even less democratic. Roots of antipathy to be found in arrangements made at and since Conquest. In view of ultimate predominance of those of British race, perpetuation of French institutions unwise. Representative system, used by Canadians as defence of their nationality; by British in effort to sweep away those institutions. Rebellion probably inevitable. Some of abler Canadians imbued with broader views, but hampered by the masses. Imperial Government distrusted by both Canadian and British parties. Both inclined to wish for war with United States, as best means for achieving the views of each. Distribution of population, adds to danger of situation. Sentiments of United States on subject of war with England—vast majority adverse to war. Situation disturbed by general misapprehension of Americans, as to real aims of parties in Canada. Tendency to identify cause of Canadians with that which led to Revolution. Irritation due to hostile Colonial press. Americans getting used to idea of war. Inconvenience to border States from distracted state of Colonies. Restless section of population on border. Welcome improvement in American feeling owing to his own efforts. Sentiment of British party. No goodwill between British official class and mass of British party. Local government regarded by latter with suspicion and mistrust, for which there was ample ground. Main object of British party to brush aside the obstacles opposed by Canadians to progress of British industry, and to substitute for Canadian institutions, laws and practices, others of a British character. Inconsistency of Imperial policy has irritated both parties in about the same degree. "With less antipathy no doubt, and more caution, but also with far more self-reliance, they are as little loyal as the Canadians". They declare that rather than be again subject to the French, they would prefer union with United States. Notwithstanding unfavorable symptoms, Durham has hopes of restoring satisfactory conditions. His late visit to Upper Canada has encouraged him. Urges that Government and Parliament rise to height of occasion, and sanction "such measures as will effectually provide for the abstraction of all legislation on British interests from the control of a French majority." This possible without violence to Canadian rights, and in accordance with soundest principles of constitutional government. Hopes to submit suitable measures very soon. Enclosures:

(1) Report of Charles Buller, Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands and Emigration. Rough draft in Hanson's handwriting. Grants of land to militia, who served in American War of 1812 authorized by instructions in 1818. Uncertainty as to terms of instructions, no copy extant in province. From Provincial Act 59 Geo. III c. 23, it would appear that instructions referred almost entirely to embodied militia. Under Act mentioned, several townships surveyed, and by Proclamation of November 2, 1822, all persons serving in six battalions of embodied militia, and such as had marched to frontier were directed to bring in claims. By subsequent proclamations time for receiving claims extended to August 1, 1830. Many claims made and 200,000 acres granted. Question arose as to whether sedentary militia who had served were included in instructions. Executive Council favourably disposed, Dalhousie adverse, to such claims. Two or three location tickets issued on these. All grants subject to conditions of three years' residence on property, erection of dwelling house and clearing and cultivation of 4 acres. Terms being regarded as too onerous, proclamation was issued in 1837, allowing officers and men of embodied militia, who had applied before August 1, 1830, to have lands free of all conditions, except such as were imposed on all by the laws of Province. Proclamation also constituted a board to deal with claims. Claimants were divided into three classes:—embodied militia, lodging claims before August 1, 1830; those belonging to other corps, lodging claims before August 1, 1830; those of either class who had not made claims before 1830. The numbers in classes were respectively 2195; 2598; 1669. Only claims open to doubt those of second class: first have good claim, third have none. Those in second class performing services similar to those of embodied militia seem entitled to grants. Proclamation of 1837 removing conditions from grants, founded on address of Assembly, and also on justice. Greater part of locations remote from settlements, and useless without considerable expense. Grants largely disposed of to speculators, who become sole beneficiaries of concessions of 1837. Whole effects of grants injurious to Province. Under claims of militia of 1775, over 230,000 acres granted, under those of militia of war of 1812, over 217,000 acres granted; by far largest part lying waste. Whole townships granted have not one settler on them. To provide against similar evil results in case of further grants, recommends that all valid claims be commuted for cash at current prices for Crown Lands, to be paid to claimant only or legal representative. p. 37

Loss of moral authority and prestige so serious that he contemplated resignation of his position. Durham to Glenelg. No. 68. Copy. Acknowledging receipt of despatch (No. 89). Statement of reasons for resigning. Effect of Act of Indemnity, contrasted with Brougham's bill on subject. Latter, if opposed by Government, would have been regarded as a party manoeuvre. Act of Indemnity, in effect condemnation of his most important measure. Will proclaim act. Explanation of measures of which ordinance was only a part. His purpose, as to future, British institutions; as to present, security against disaffected. Re-statement of his intentions in the ordinance, and condemnation of Home Government for failure to do its part. Measure approved in Canada and United States. Act of Indemnity makes no discrimination between those deserving punishment and others, and leaves leaders of insurrection free to resume activities. Criticism of Glenelg's proposal to effect ends desired, by new Ordinance. Fear that Government may again weaken under Opposition's censures. Objections to Glenelg's suggestion that Habeas Corpus be suspended. Had the proposition and suggestion been peremptory he would have resigned. As it is he will continue to exercise his own discretion. He does not resign immediately because both in his character of governor general and of high commissioner he has undertaken certain engagements and plans for reform, which his sense of duty compels him to fulfil. Expects to return to England in few weeks. Hopes to exercise influence for good of colony in Parliament. Defends use of despotic powers, entrusted to him.

Durham to Glenelg. No. 89. Draft and copy. Sir John Colborne coincides with his views as to alarming condition of Canada. As responsibility for conduct of government will probably rest on Colborne, Durham has requested him to take measures for security of provinces. Durham will, with Colborne's concurrence, relinquish government without delay. Civil governor could render only subordinate aid to military authorities. His sphere of utility to be thereafter in Parliament. Will sail November 3. Regrets inability to visit President of United States. Has little precise information of sources of danger, but is convinced of their existence. Rapid familiarizing of men's minds with possibility of union with United States. Feeling owes activity to disparagement of his powers in England. Designs of disaffected. Secret organizations, which will probably move on occasion of some external aggression. portation of prisoners from Canada to England must be borne by Canadian Government, while their transportation from England to their place of exile would be paid by the British Government. Provincial enactments, provided for the charges for conveyance to England; that, by despatch of May 25, 1837, the Governor was directed to commute sentences of transportation, for terms of imprisonment or such other punishment as would be practicable under provincial laws. Having no penitentiaries or power to inflict solitary confinement or hard labor, it is almost impossible to provide means of adequate punishment, when necessary. In four cases mentioned, they recommend that the sentences of transportation for seven years be carried into effect, and, in eight other cases where death sentence has been pronounced, to commute this into transportation for life.

Having had impressed upon him the importance of the subjects of colonization and emigration, and being aware of Wakefield's intimate acquaintance with these subjects, he invited Wakefield to accompany him. He had no reason to believe Wakefield's appointment would be unacceptable to Government, which had already received benefit from his suggestions regarding Public Lands. His intention was to place Wakefield at head of Commission on subject. Previous to Wakefield's arrival in Canada, Glenelg requested that he should have "no regular appointment under the Crown" but there would be "no objection to his employment unofficially." Wakefield on being informed refused to accept any public employment, but offered to co-operate with the others, in the same way as if he had been regularly appointed. He therefore gave his services without remuneration of any sort, either from the public or from Durham. If the report on this subject is as satisfactory as it seems to him, Durham felt "bound in fairness to take this means of ensuring to Mr. Wakefield the chief share of the merit."

Glenelg to Officer administering Government of Prince Edward Island. No. 52. Copy. Acknowledging despatches (Nos. 24, 26), respecting certain proceedings which took place at Hay River, with reference to Government's decision on request for establishment of Court of Escheats. Approval of Harvey's steps to counteract and suppress unconstitutional doctrines embodied in address adopted at that meeting; also, of the course pursued by Assembly with reference thereto. Regret at distress of tenantry. Government can only interfere as mediator between tenants and landlords, and hopes the letter addressed by Harvey to latter, will induce them not to press with severity on tenants. October 3. (Sir Charles FitzRoy) to The Proprietors of land in Prince Edward Island. Printed Circular unsigned. Excitement among tenantry and settlers on question of Escheat. Has visited settlements throughout Island. Found settlers obdurate in demands. Grounds of complaint undoubtedly exist. Regret at having received no communication from proprietors. Hard lot of settlers for long period of years. Many are ignorant of legal conditions, others deluded. Instances of latter: a party in Guernsey purchased lands at high price; on arrival found lands did not exist. A group of Acadians spent £1000 towards purchase of township; receiver of money had no right to make sale; these people are now mere tenants at will. People much excited. High Sheriff has been resisted. Governor, though sympathetic with settlers, insisting on obedience to laws. But general discontent promising ill-consequences. Remedy lies with proprietors. Let them grant long leases at customary rent, payable in produce, or sell on 20 years' purchase; or pay for improvements at end of lease. Plans indicated working with complete success in sections where proprietors have acted upon them. Is sending copy of this Circular to Secretary of State with other information showing causes of discontent. p. 40

FitzRoy to Glenelg. Separate. Copy. Another grievance in Island relates to Reserves for Fisheries retained in original grants. Order in Council sanctioning original grants required, in case of lands abutting on sea, that 500 feet above high-water mark be reserved for purposes of free fishery for all British subjects. The requirements of this Order complied with strictly in only case of 12 townships; in 32 townships the grants contained reservation of 500 feet "for the disposal of His Majesty, His Heirs and successors" "to erect stages and other necessary buildings for carrying on the fishery"; of remaining 23 townships, 18 contain no fishery reservations, and five grants cannot be found on records. Several grants containing reservations abut on rivers only, or (more strictly speaking) narrow arms of the sea. All islands on coast contain reservations agreeably to Order. Proprietors, however, have exercised acts of ownership over reserves by including them in leases or otherwise disposing of them in fee simple with adjacent lands. Most leases contain clause subjecting lessees to all conditions of original grant. Colonial Government has, in a few instances, in cases where the reservation is to the Crown exercised authority by granting licences of occupation to persons engaged in fisheries. He himself has granted licences of occupation in two cases where applicants were freeholders, to extent of the fronts of their farms. Has received numerous applications from tenants for similar licences, but, as it appeared that applications were for defeating landlords' claims for rent, and not for bona fide purpose of fishery, he has not granted such, but will await instructions.

Invites attention to correspondence in Colonial Office on subject, which he summarizes as follows: On March 22, 1833, Robert Stewart agreed to accept lease of fishery abutting on his property at reasonable rate. On March 25, the Lieutenant Governor was authorized to grant to Stewart or any other proprietor similarly circumstanced a lease of such portions of the space of the 500 feet reserved to Crown as may border on property of applicants. Lieutenant Governor in two despatches of May 22 explained why in many cases Crown had no power to grant leases on these reserves, and why, even where it had the power, it was inexpedient to grant leases for any but very short terms. Secretary of State approved of Lieutenant Governor's views, at the same time sending correspondence had with Stewart, in which latter had endeavoured to mislead Secretary of State in following particulars. (1) As to existence of fishing establishment; (2) as to natural obstacles which he asserted were opposed by coast to extension of fisheries; (3) as to terms of reservations; (4) as to impediments Stewart asserted these reservations caused to settlement. Stewart had no excuse for misstatements, particularly as to terms of grant of principal part of his property (Lots 10 and 47), which secured the fishery reserve to all His Majesty's subjects and not to the Crown. Considerable agitation on subject. His determination to grant no more licences until further instructed has been criticized. Asks for early instructions as applications will probably be made, with much plausibility, for renewals of licences at opening of fishing season. Urges impolicy of relinquishing reserves which are in Crown, to proprietors. Would probably weaken strong sentiment of colonists towards Mother Country. p. 67

Complaints from United States Government. Will follow advice of Head as to answer. Angry discussions in Congress. President has called out militia to protect border, and placed General Scott in command. Bill satisfactory in terms, but will depend for efficacy on good will of authorities. Intimation of dilatory conduct in Congress corrected. General Scott has reached Buffalo with Governor and other officers of New York State. Scott striving faithfully to restrain lawlessness. State officials also showing more activity. The change for better, due to recognition of hopelessness of rebel cause, and of loyalty of inhabitants of Upper Canada. Assemblage at Navy Island apparently increasing, but food shortage will probably lead to dispersal in short time. "Caroline" continues to excite feeling. United States Government evidently intend using incident as offset to complaints of invasion of Canada; are busy collecting evidence. p. 87

On 23rd and 24th, vague accounts of invasion from about Detroit began to arrive. Proceedings quite open, in defiance, if not with connivance, of State authorities. Arms and ammunition taken from public arsenals, and vessels equipped publicly. Attack failed owing to loyal resistance of Canadians. No official news had reached Government at Washington. Post tardy; also, detained by State officers. Encloses series of articles from United States newspapers. On 24th, Fox addressed remonstrance to Secretary of State, which, with reply, he encloses. United States Government helpless, has no more control over States than Turkish Sultan has over Tripoli or Algiers. Question as to redress to be demanded by Great Britain. Owing to defective institutions, no possibility of punishing delinquents. It would seem that threat of war only alternative. This he deprecates. Arthur to Durham. No. 2. L.S. Course pursued towards persons concerned in rebellion. Enclosing copies of despatches Nos. 7, 9, 14, 30 to Glenelg. Difficulty with case of Theller, British-born naturalized American. His opinion is that he should be executed, but has referred case to Government in England. Another difficulty is case of pure foreigners. They are not traitors, nor, strictly speaking, pirates, nor entitled to be treated as prisoners of war. They are being held as quasi prisoners of war and sent to Quebec, till Her Majesty's pleasure be known. Case of Sutherland dealt with in despatch (No. 7) to Glenelg. Provincial Act passed under his predecessor, not clearly applicable to case, but by clumsy, though he believes legal, interpretation, it was made to apply, and he has approved sentence of court-martial and referred the case home. Prisoners taken in action at Point Pélée Island stand in same case, and have been referred home with the case of the crew of the "Ann". Regrets difficulty in way of severe and prompt punishment, which is being attributed by these people to fear. Wishes a few had been shot when taken. Has been pondering on question of pursuing brigands into American waters; necessity of care in instructions to commanders on lakes. Regrets that Colonial Secretary has not been more prompt in expression of sentiments, the case of the "Ann" and

(1) Arthur to Glenelg. No. 4. Copy. Acknowledging Separate despatch of January 30. Disagreement with view of Colonial Secretary that there was any essential difference between the rebels in Upper and in Lower Canada. The underlying motive in each province was political, the expectation of plunder in Upper Canada being merely incidental. "In Lower Canada the right was insisted on, of the popular branch of the Legislature sullenly to refuse acting as a legislative body, and to bring to a complete stop all beneficial operations of government, and to assert a supremacy inconsistent with the relations of a colony with the parent state. In Upper Canada arms were taken up with the avowed purpose of assisting the Lower Canadians, and of asserting the same principles, as applicable to this Colony". Same means employed in Upper Canada when revolutionary party was in majority, as in Lower Canada, stoppage of supplies. They both depended upon foreign assistance. On March 24, jails being full and trials having commenced, he laid Glenelg's despatch before Executive Council. At this time the public, exasperated by injuries and privations endured, were insisting on severe penalties on leaders of rebels. Council, seeing great difficulty of proceeding to extremities with so many, considered schemes for classifying offenders according to measure of guilt. Chief Justice on March 29 reported sentence of death had been passed on Samuel Lount and Peter Matthews. On cases coming before Council on March 31, Governor intimated necessity of devising means for limiting number of trials. Chief Justice and Attorney General being heard, neither could recommend remission. Council agreed, and Governor entirely concurred, prisoners being executed on April 12. These two were most active leaders next to Mackenzie, Rolph, Duncombe and others who fled to United States. Sends copies of Minutes of Council bearing on cases, and labors to show decision was necessary. While Glenelg urges promptness in dealing with cases, Arthur shows benefit of delay in allowing public indignation to cool. There are legal difficulties restraining Executive Government on all sides; if these are disregarded for purposes of mercy, he trusts to be exonerated. Explains procedure, to correct misconception into which Glenelg had fallen. His predecessor had appointed certain commissioners of whom Vice-Chancellor was president for purpose of enquiry and taking depositions of witnesses. They, perhaps not quite legally, allowed certain of the accused to go out on bail, to be tried at any time before ordinary courts. Some of these are dangerous characters who must be tried; but in the great mass of cases, the charges might be dropped if there were any proper means of doing this. On the question of means, Executive Council, on report of Hon. Mr. Sullivan concurred in by the judges, instructed Attorney General not to prefer indictments in the case of persons who are not considered dangerous. There are next the persons who confessed to high treason, and petitioned for grace. Doubt has risen whether Act sparing these peoples' lives, did not contemplate leaving them to less severe punishment. Is satisfied Provincial Legislature could not limit power of Crown in extending mercy; and therefore presumes it was not intended. Is having a report drawn up of all cases with recommendations as to the conditions, if any, which should be attached to a pardon. This will take some time. As for secondary punishments, he inclines to belief that there are no cases as bad as those of Lount and Matthews, and therefore no further necessity for capital punishment. He favors transportation in all remaining serious cases, and unconditional pardon in all others. Executive Council not quite disposed to agree with him. They would limit capital punishment, and favor transportation. There are many, however, disaffected for years whom they would banish from Province. He sees dangerous consequences in banishing persons who would go to United States and swell the number of the enemies of country, and perpetuate discontent in the country. Noble conduct of militia decided many a waverer, and not a few disaffected. Large as is the majority of the loyal, the number of disaffected must be large, otherwise "what has become of the large majority that placed Mackenzie in the civil chair only three years ago? or more recently elevated to the same office, Morrison, who is now on bail? or where are the voters who so recently sent these men, and so many of their fellows to the House of Assembly?" These considerations and others induce the belief that those to be punished at all, short of death, should be punished with great severity; and those pardoned, should have unconditional pardon. The only exceptions he would make are the Americans who have abused the hospitality of the Province. He would banish these. The last class to be mentioned are the American citizens, who calling themselves Patriots, made descent on Point Pélée Island, and others captured in an armed vessel, after firing upon Amherstburg. His inclination was to treat them as outlaws and send them to England for trial for murder and piracy, but he did not do so, as it seemed to be a shirking of his responsibility. Anxiously awaiting views of Colonial Secretary. p. 243

(d) Minutes of Executive Council. On request of Lieutenant Governor for advice as to mode of dealing with prisoners, the Council gave following opinion: That capital punishment be inflicted in as few cases as possible; that severe secondary punishment be confined to leaders and instigators, and to those guilty of outrage independently of rebellion; that mere followers may be recommended

(g) Minutes of Executive Council. Having under consideration largely signed petitions asking for pardon for Lount and Matthews, Council "feel it to be their imperative but painful duty" to adhere to decision. Lieutenant Governor concurs. Having under consideration report of Justice Macaulay on proceedings of Special Commission of Oyer and Terminer in Hamilton on some cases where sentence of death had been pronounced, Council note none of the principal leaders had been secured, and that there had been no important outrages apart from rising itself, and recommend that all may be respited, though anticipating the severest secondary penalty on two of number. In these cases they recommend transportation for life.

second in command of "the Western Division of the Patriot Army"; took command of schooner "Ann" which fired on Amherstburg; vessel was boarded and he was captured. Tried in Toronto, convicted of high treason and sentenced to death. Chief Justice had doubts as to whether this is not an over-straining of doctrine of continued allegiance. Council and Attorney General concur in opinion that conviction is legal, and consider that guilt of piratical warfare may properly be superadded to that of treason. Chief Justice maintains that having been tried for treason, the other crimes cannot be taken into the account. Lieutenant Governor considers opinion of Council right, and is most anxious that example should be made, but in view of importance of case has granted respite until Her Majesty's pleasure be known. In view of legal difficulties in dealing with purely American citizens, who invaded country, and the fear that legally they cannot be given their deserts, he is anxious that opinion should not get abroad that their course is dictated by timidity. In state of feeling in province, there are apprehensions that if prisoners are not punished by course of law, the citizens may take matters in their own hands. p. 405

(5) Arthur to Glenelg. No. 22. Copy. Continuing narrative of proceedings regarding prisoners charged with treason. Salutory results of execution of Lount and Matthews. Nature and activities of Commission of Enquiry: functions no wider than ordinary justices of peace; appointed to ensure "the utmost possible prudent, uniform and dispassionate course in preliminary proceedings;" confusion that reigned when rebellion broke out, "all the officers of government, the functionaries of justice, and the loyal inhabitants, were actually soldiers under arms;" many proceedings necessarily lacked legal warrant, particularly in matter of arrests; when Commission was appointed, number of arrests were so great that it was unsafe to keep all in confinement; first duty of Commission was to limit number of arrests, and next to arrange for discharge of least deeply implicated; in latter case, Commission, perhaps without strict legal authority, discharged upon bail to keep peace for one year many who were on confession guilty of high treason; in more serious cases took bail to appear at next court, and others were dismissed in default of evidence. Many persons still at large who are liable to arrest unless Executive Government intervenes. Request for power to pardon for high treason and to issue proclamations of amnesty, at least during existing crisis. Government in England too remote to deal properly with variety of cases; where lieutenant governor necessarily transcends his power in these circumstances, he must be supported solemnly and formally by Government in England. Asks approval of Order in Council, prescribing course towards persons charged with treason. Transmits report of Commission of Enquiry as to prisoners in Home District. Council in considering report had in view the extending of mercy to utmost limits consistent with public safety. He concurred in Council's recommendation in favour of remission of forfeiture of property and other disabilities in case of prisoners petitioning. If re-grant of property in such cases is legally necessary, it should be done under Provincial Act; but hopes it will not be necessary. As to cases calling for simple banishment, this is objectionable and dangerous if applied to many people having connections in Canada. Will confine this punishment almost entirely to Americans without connections in this country. Those guilty of petty outrages in course of rebellion get terms in penitentiary added to banishment. Much difficulty in providing punishment, short of death, for persons too deeply implicated to be allowed at large. After discussion of all means, transportation to penal colony decided upon. Objections of Government in England to extensive application of this punishment made known to Council, and latter were asked to go over list of those condemned thereto and reduce it to narrowest limits. This has been done. Tribute to members of Council. "I never met with gentlemen more disposed to do their duty with moderation and firmness." Hopes Government in England will accept this list. Cases in Gore and London Districts not so numerous or serious as those in Home District, leaders having escaped. Cases in Midland District not yet reported; are few and unimportant. Calls attention to addresses to him as indicating feeling in province. Asks for early instructions.

of Provincial Government. He suggests that proceedings of Council be approved, and power of pardon conferred on him, so that he may release some from sentence of transportation, and others from inferior penalties, not upon principle of reversing wrong decisions, but on assumption that circumstances may have come to light which would render some of the prisoners proper objects of mercy, or that the restoration of tranquillity may render further extension of mercy possible without public injury. p. 712

In previous autumn he made a protest, backed up by a small military force, which checked proceeding with road. Intimations in press that attempt will be renewed supported by armed force, and he learns that preparations for operations are going on. Road would establish direct communication between State of Maine and Madawaska Settlement, at present the only line of communication between New Brunswick and Canada. It is also said that a renewed effort is to be made by Maine to take census of Madawaska Settlement, and to make money grants to inhabitants. If his remonstrances are unavailing, his only course would seem to be to take military possession of disputed territory. Will take no steps in this direction unless sanctioned by Durham, or unless some overt act takes place in spite of his protest. Arthur to Durham. No. 5. L.S. Continuing the narrative from the 22nd. On evening of 22nd, reports from Niagara District were so grave that he decided on active measures. He issued a proclamation, a copy of which is enclosed, and proceeded to call out the sedentary militia. Learning that rebels were inciting Indians to rise, he at once set them in motion. At Niagara he found the greatest excitement and alarm. Rumours were flying about as to large numbers already landed in Canada and much larger numbers awaiting an opportunity on United States side. A prisoner stated that banditti in province were led by a "Colonel" Morreau, an American, who had issued a proclamation, a copy of which was enclosed. Reward of £500 offered for Morreau's apprehension. A gentleman bearing testimonial from Governor of New York gave much information as to activities on American side. To make display of force, and decide the waverers, Arthur proceeded into disaffected district with party of Queen's Lancers. Result very satisfactory. Between 30 and 40 captured, including Morreau, Wait, a Canadian, second in command and bearing Flag of Liberty, Dr. Wilson, who had escaped in previous winter—in fact all the leaders. Numbers reported as having entered Canada apparently greatly exaggerated, though it is difficult to ascertain truth. At Niagara, Arthur had most satisfactory interview with Major Young in command of American Regulars, and General Burt of New York Militia. Young, active and of good faith, but hampered by lack of sufficient troops. Arthur was assured that better class of Americans had no sympathy with rebels, but that country near lakes was overrun by ungovernable mass of lowest class. Young has authority to employ one or two steamers to guard their shore, and he himself has vessels cruising near Amherstburg. As to manner of dealing with prisoners, loyal part of population greatly exasperated by outrages to which they have been subjected, and they expect all prisoners will be immediately put on trial before Military Tribunal under Provincial Act. This act was designed to provide a means for trying citizens or subjects of foreign states entering province and committing acts of hostility. Although Canadians joining them may be tried by Military Tribunal, he prefers to have them tried by Courts for High Treason. Is much embarrassed by opinion of English Law Officers, in case of Theller, which states incidentally that his American associates were guilty of high treason. Legal opinion in Upper Canada entirely opposed to this view, and he is inclined to accept advice of his law officers. Their opinion is that "persons heretofore owing no allegiance to the Queen, did not come under the obligation of temporary allegiance so as to be capable of committing high treason." Hence necessity for Provincial Act mentioned. If judges do not agree with English Law Officers, American prisoners tried for high treason might go free. He is convinced that punishment of most exemplary kind is imperatively called for. American authorities might otherwise reflect on slackness of Canadians. His satisfaction with Durham's proclamation. Recognizing popular objections to military tribunals, the course he purposes following is to indict British subjects for high treason, and foreigners for felony under Provincial Act. Has ordered special Commission of Oyer and Terminer for Niagara District. His anxiety is to reconcile merciful views of Government in England with feelings of people in province. Uncommon firmness required on part of militia officers to prevent their men from putting banditti to death on the spot. Looks to Durham for advice and counsel—to what extent should capital punishment be carried? Government in England so intent on mercy to rebels that they scarcely approve of execution of Lount and Matthews, although they were guilty not only of high treason but of murder and arson as well. Theller bombarded Amherstburg and yet it seems doubtful whether Glenelg would approve of his execution. He himself has been strongly inclined to mercy, but in his opinion, if judicious and proper measures had been adopted by his predecessor, the insurrection would not have taken place—"the policy that was pursued had a tendency to mislead, it was not justifiable to be inactive." Rolph, Mackenzie, Lount, Matthews and other leaders were justly chargeable, but many were misled by Government's want of activity. This excuse does not avail with perpetrators of present misdeeds. Everybody both in Canada and United States, must know what is done for defence of Province. His opinion is that 4 or 5 of the 40 taken should be executed, and the rest, in whose case nothing favourable can be found, sent to England for transportation to penal colonies. p. 930

Have considered the case of Theller, together with his petition urging legal objections to the sentence, as well as opinion of Law Officers of province respecting same. They are of opinion that Theller's conviction is legal. The Provincial law authorities have fallen into "important error" with reference to foreigners who have been taken while in arms. "They were all clearly guilty of High Treason, just as much as the natural born subjects of the Queen. From the moment when they came within the Province they owed to Her Majesty a temporary allegiance the violation of which subjects them to the penalties of High Treason". This principle not applicable to Theller who was natural born subject. p. 986

Governor Marcy to Arthur. Had message from Arthur by a Mr. J. Faratt, Jr., to effect that he would co-operate with Governor in extirpating brigands infesting Thousand Islands. Will unite with him to extent of powers. Duty of managing and maintaining foreign relations, however, in hands of Federal Government. Violations of acts of neutrality are offences against Federal and not State Government. Burning and plundering "Sir Robert Peel" is an offence against State, and he will do utmost in his power to bring criminals to justice. As duty of preservation of neutrality rests on Federal Government alone, he has done all he could when he reported facts relating to Thousand Islands depredations to that Government. Gives his views, which he communicated to Federal Governor, as to measures for clearing brigands out of Islands. Apologizes for failure to answer letter from Arthur, which he thought he had done. p. 1011

Arthur to Durham. No. 7. L.S. Pleasure expressed at Durham's taking up question of emigration, and at Durham's assurances of support, and of non-interference in Provincial matters. Notes unusual form of commission to Buller so far as concerns Upper Canada. In absence of Governor General, Lieutenant Governor exercises full authority, and usual course would have been to have commission witnessed by himself. At present it appears that his authority is being superseded by that of Governor General, and officers of his Government are commanded to obey commissioners by an instrument in which his name does not appear. However, believing this to be merely formal objection, he has directed the Governor General's wishes to be obeyed. Draws attention to embarrassed condition of finances, due to expenditures on public enterprises. Absence of effective control by Governor over Assembly anxious to carry wishes of constituents into operation. The critical conditions prevailing in province affords opportunity to put financial system on more regular lines. Suggestion that one of Governor's staff, who is experienced in financial matters, might be usefully employed in enquiry into financial system. Evils, natural result of system of parliamentary appropriations, originating not with Government but with Assembly. System not to be attributed to policy or design of particular persons, but has grown up naturally. Will mention later other subjects requiring investigation. p. 1023

Durham to several Lieutenant Governors. Rough draft in Buller's handwriting. Draws attention to despatch of June 18 on subject of Crown Lands and Emigration. Co-operation required with view to adoption of a permanent and uniform system. The first requisite is that, as far as lies within Governor's discretion, all alienations of public lands shall be suspended, as the chief obstacle to rendering these lands source of large revenues is the large proportion of granted land remaining in wild state, and further grants without effective provisions for cultivation would only augment the evil. He is aware that total cessation of grants is impossible under existing laws and regulations, but desires that further alienations may be hampered rather than encouraged. p. 1037

Confidential memorandum from Harvey. A.L.S. Invites attention to his Secret Instructions relative to the North East Boundary, which require him to resist or prevent exercise of jurisdiction or any act implying sovereignty in disputed territory. This arrangement has been concurred in by United States Government. A sufficient check to violations of agreement has hitherto been apprehension of offenders and their trial by New Brunswick authorities. This check and a formal protest will be resorted to in case of further violations. Understands however this process may be resisted and New Brunswick officers arrested. Advice of Durham requested, as nothing further appears feasible but military occupation of territories. This objectionable in several ways. His own inclination is to temporize by protests and denunciation of aggressive acts until negotiations can be proceeded with. p. 6

Arthur to Durham. No. 11. L.S. More satisfactory conditions in London District and on Western Frontiers. Earlier reports greatly exaggerated. Does not believe more than 100 landed from American shore, and of these some returned discouraged at lack of co-operation from Canadians. Many of latter ready to rush into rebellion, but repressed by presence of troops. About 20 prisoners taken, including Dr. Wilson who was recaptured and will be put on trial at once. Some 12 or 13 brigands, who had raided Mr. Guvin's house near river St. Clair arrested in Michigan. Means to demand them from Governor of Michigan. If refused, he hopes Durham will make representations to Washington. Encloses correspondence between General Brady and Colonel Reid, which was dropped as no controversy was desired. On Western Frontier, the magistrates under influence of general excitement issued proclamation closing intercourse with American ports. This was beyond their powers and they were so informed. Encloses letters from Prince, copy of proclamation and copy of his letter to magistrates. Brady still issues warnings of impending attack. But Arthur has no fears as no co-operation from rebels can be hoped for. More danger of attack during winter, though he has a few apprehensions. Still embarrassed by question of disposal of prisoners. He looks forward to tranquillity and repose. Convinced there was large class in province who desired American institutions; but many led to wish for them because they had come to expect them. Arthur to Durham. Separate. L.S. Respecting Mr. Buchanan, British Consul in New York. He called on Arthur in New York, to give him an insight into conditions in Canada: pointed out impolicy of alliance with Family Compact which include ablest men in Legislative Council and in public offices. These men were bulwark against Republican institutions; by their assistance, Head was able to overthrow the disaffected group, of which Mackenzie, Bidwell and Rolph were leaders. His instructions before he left London were that he should pursue the policy and measures of Head. With experience, however, he has seen reason for acting upon these to very limited extent. Buchanan's recommendations had a directly opposite tendency, and, if he had followed them, he would have given offence to the constitutional and most powerful section of community. Owing to disaffection, he has avoided controversial subjects. The only one he discussed was that of Clergy Reserves. Has intimated intention of bringing in bill to re-invest these lands in Crown. He has identified himself with no party, but has seen enough to convince him Buchanan's advice was not well-founded, and that his meddling at this time is mischievous. Buchanan has been imparting his views to Glenelg. Had an interview with Buchanan a day or two before. Buchanan dealt wholly in generalities, has no specific facts. On Head's reaching New York, Buchanan urged same arguments with him and successfully, the result being that Baldwin, brother of Buchanan's son-in-law, and some other Reformers were admitted to Executive Council. The ultimate consequence of this was the rebellion. Buchanan mentioned Chief Justice as head of Family Compact. Robinson stands highest for integrity and ability in estimation of all men of all parties. Buchanan overlooks struggle Family Compact has long maintained against measures leading to Republicanism. Americans and many Canadians have looked upon annexation as inevitable. Durham's arrival and late measures of Government in England have discouraged this view. Durham need apprehend no opposition from Tory party. p. 75

Harvey to Glenelg. No. 43. Copy. On arrival from Quebec on July 11, he received report from Warden of Disputed Territory, which with accompanying documents he encloses. It will be seen that object of Surveyor General of Maine was confined to making such exploratory survey on Upper Aroostook as might enable him to locate settlers at some later period. He learns that lands are inferior in quality, and many intending settlers have abandoned idea of settling. As proceedings involved no question of sovereignty, it is not necessary to follow up Warden's protest. Copies of papers in case sent to Durham and to Fox. Learns no overt act will be taken before September 5, and has grounds for hoping that more moderate counsels will prevail with Government of Maine before that period. As his absence during visit to Quebec was so short, he made no formal transfer of civil authority to his immediate military subordinate, Colonel Goldie, but had instructed him to take command of troops, and he was thus in position to assume civil administration, if circumstances made this necessary. No such necessity arose. Fredericton,

Arthur to Durham. No. 13. L.S. Acknowledging despatch (No. 6) of June 30 respecting Crown Lands. Question has occupied him for some time. Various regulations have been in force since Dorchester's time. Notwithstanding all precautions extensive grants made many years ago still lie uncultivated. Spirit of speculation probably too strong for control. No desire to censure predecessors. Legislation imposing assessments on all lands, and rendering them liable to sale has not produced all the good results looked for. Will prevent further alienations as far as possible. Recent legislation will enable him to do this. But must accede to claims for locations, which consist of (1) U.E. Loyalists rights, that is, claims of children of Loyalists; (2) claims of members of volunteer companies first embodied during War of 1812; (3) claims of persons who emigrated from Scotland about 1815, under certain conditions; (4) claims of Naval and Military officers who can obtain locations on Crown Lands, which are put up to auction but remain unsold. Claims under first two heads understood to be still numerous. These may be located in certain specified townships. Little land remains unlocated in these townships, unless of inferior quality. Part of this land has been taken by persons weary of delay, who await more advantageous locations in new townships. Has opened no new townships though 180,000 acres have been surveyed for that purpose. Recent act permits holders of United Empire Loyalists and Militia claims to purchase valuable Crown and Clergy Reserves and tender their claims at a valuation of 4 shillings an acre. He fears eventual embarrassment from number of claims to be satisfied compared with land available. The necessity of setting apart certain portions in every new township for location of these claims will materially reduce revenues to be derived from sales under improved system. p. 225

To elucidate subject, he sends copy of Act of July 11, 1837, authorizing suspension of specie payments. This Act is continued by Act of January 12, 1838, until close of next ensuing session of Parliament. Another Act passed March 6, repeals clauses 6 and 7 of Act of July, and grants power to banks to put their notes into circulation to amount not exceeding twice paid-up capital. The Act of July having permitted suspension, he has lost power over question, and cannot insist on resumption before time fixed in Act. Prices of precious metals in New York have fallen since subsidence of excitements on Frontier, and preparations are being made in leading States for resumption of cash payments; hence necessity for resuming in Canada.

They take on fair average 300 barrels of mackerel per vessel, and many vessels return for second cargo. At smallest original value, catch is worth £150,000, or, if taken on Island, would make export trade of £225,000 a year. All may be said to be taken within 3 miles of shore. Methods of taking fish so destructive that in few years the fisheries will be valueless. There is also much plundering of unprotected property, and smuggling carried on. Suggests employing fast sailing vessel of about 100 tons. A large ship is no use, being easily detected.

Under Special Commission sitting at Niagara, 16 capital convictions obtained. Morrow (Morreau) has been executed; the majority of rest will be transported. Province perfectly tranquil. Harvey to Durham. No. 7. Confidential memorandum. A.L.S. Observations of Durham's plan for settlement of constitution. Objection to substituting one general for the several local Legislative Councils: Queen's representative in each province would be more exposed to direct collision with Assembly. It might be that a local Council of advice and opinion would afford adequate protection, more especially as General Legislative Council would form sort of high court of appeal under presidency of Governor General. Chief embarrassments have arisen from hostility between Assemblies and Councils, and the collisions have been attributed justly or unjustly, to High Church and High Tory proclivities of latter. Hence he inclines to think that extinction of Legislative Councils would be regarded with satisfaction by Assemblies. In New Brunswick these conditions do not exist. Legislative Council sufficiently liberal to co-operate heartily with Assembly, and their dissolution would be regarded with disfavor by masses of people. General indisposition in province against connection with French Canada, and reluctance to surrender to any other body the control of any portion of its revenues, to the full possession of which they have so recently succeeded. Considers plan of legislative union should be at first confined to the two Canadas, the other provinces being kept free to join when they recognize benefits of union. This may not be at a very remote period. New Brunswick entirely satisfied with present position of affairs. With regard to suggestion of a Provincial Council of advice and opinion, that is precisely the machinery through which he is operating so satisfactorily. His council consists of 5 members, which includes 3 members of the Assembly. Success of his administration attributed to this device. Would be prepared to send delegates to Quebec to represent sentiments of province. p. 378

Arthur to Durham. Separate. L.S. Disputes Durham's notion of his right to interfere, but delaying full reply until his return to Toronto. Morreau, an American, was executed; intention was to punish capitally the worst offender, who was British subject, and either pardon the others or subject them to secondary penalty. Glenelg's correspondence with Arthur confirms latter in opinion that these matters are within his sole jurisdiction. Chandler and Wait respited, though aggravated cases. p. 390

Arthur to Durham. No. 17. L.S. Protesting against Durham's course in interfering with the right and duty of the Lieutenant Governor to exercise the pardoning power. The interference has a tendency to weaken the authority of the Executive. The Lieutenant Governor must take into account the feeling of the Legislative bodies with whom he must act. They would look sharply into any innovations upon the constitution of the province. He informed Durham of his having resipited Chandler and Wait. Reviews the terms of his separate despatch from Cornwall, and indulged the hope that Durham would withdraw the instruction, when he recognized that it implied want of confidence in him, and would prejudice him in removing from him the prerogative of mercy. Durham's despatch (No. 8) dissipated this expectation, and he laid the despatches before the Executive Council, along with Mr. Justice Jones' report on the trials at Niagara. After careful consideration the Council drew up their opinion and embodied it in the Minute which he transmits. The sentences, on all the prisoners are suspended until October 1, to enable Durham to consider the cases. He had suggested to Glenelg that he should have unfettered discretion as regards pardons. When he wrote to Glenelg, he was not acting under Durham's commission, which enables Lieutenant Governor, in Governor General's absence, to pardon even in cases of treason, and because the Provincial Act which received Royal approval authorized Lieutenant Governor to extend mercy only with advice of Executive Council; and the Council whose anxiety to do their duty, in justice towards the country, and in mercy towards the prisoners cannot be too highly commended, could not bring themselves to advise any further extension of clemency. He is anxious that as far as possible his proceedings should be supported by Council. He has made it his endeavour to reconcile public mind to as wide an extension of mercy as possible, and where applications for pardons have been received, he has recommended that the interposition of respectable and loyal persons should be procured in order to warrant Government in extending clemency. On receipt of Glenelg's despatch (No. 111) of July 12, he directed Council to review the cases again; and he himself visited the gaols in the eastern part of the Province to hear what prisoners could urge in their pleas for mercy. His effort is to find way of giving effect to the wishes of the Government in England without giving occasion for strong remonstrances or dissatisfaction in province. Assumes Durham does not desire to restrict his powers of action in dealing with the prisoners, respecting which he has the distinct authority of Secretary of State. Asks Durham to observe that, even if he is mistaken in the view he has formed of Glenelg's despatch, the expressions of that despatch may lend themselves to that view. Toronto,

Glad to find that his conclusion that the number of persons to undergo punishment might be materially lessened, is confirmed by later despatch. He can only express concurrence in his opinion. "You will perceive on referring to the Earl of Durham's commission, which, during his Lordship's absence from Upper Canada you are authorized to execute, that the Royal Prerogative of Mercy is delegated to you without the exceptions formerly made in the cases of Murder and High Treason. It is, therefore, in your power either to grant pardons in particular cases, or even to declare a general amnesty. But in any measure of the latter description it would be obviously very inconvenient that a different principle should be observed in Lower and in Upper Canada. This is consequently one of the subjects on which it is fit that you should act in concert with the Earl of Durham". Concurrence with Arthur's views regarding banishment, and with the distinctions drawn between political offences and crimes of ordinary concurrence. His views regarding transportation also approved. Glad to learn that time was shortly at hand when mercy may be extended without risk of remonstrance or discontent. "I agree with you that this reduction (in number of persons marked for transportation) should in appearance as well as in reality originate rather with the Provincial than with the Home Government". Arthur is given authority "to relieve from the sentence of Transportation, and from the inferior penalties of Banishment, Imprisonment or Confiscation, any persons whom you may think worthy of that indulgence"—not as reversing wrong judgments, but as acting upon information which the Executive Council did not possess, and upon views to which the legal tribunals could not advert. Persons to whom indulgence is extended should find securities for future good conduct. Her Majesty's approbation to be conveyed to Executive Council. Copies of correspondence should be transmitted to Durham.

(2) Minute of Executive Council. Consideration of Durham's despatch of August 16. Council observe that Durham conceives that his instructions impose upon him the duty of exercising the power of pardon in all cases of treason. Council maintain that there is no legal authority by which the Lieutenant Governor can divest himself of "the responsibility and discretion required in acting according to the constitution of the province under the commission which, in the absence of His Lordship, Your Excellency executes". If Governor's view is correct, then the Council has been mistakenly advising on questions involving life and death of fellow subjects; and the fact that they had done so for so long, without remonstrance from Governor, does little to mitigate gravity of their course. Arthur's duty was to act as much as possible in conformity with views of Governor, and this he has striven to do, as far as his policy was understood. That the power of granting pardon was conferred on Arthur, in Durham's absence, is stated in precise terms, in Glenelg's despatch of July 12. Although Durham's high influence and authority may uphold Arthur's policy, "the functions of Governor of the Colony remain to be discharged by Your Excellency according to your oath of office." Painful consequences if Durham took on himself to hear appeals from decisions of Lieutenant Governor. Appellate jurisdiction of this sort has been sedulously avoided by the Government in England. Lieutenant Governor has sought to carry out views of Durham, and it is remembered that on more than one occasion while in Upper Canada, Durham with reference to invasion of Upper Canada declared that summary and immediate execution might not improperly have been carried into effect instead of awaiting the deliberate course of proceeding. Popular feeling was gratified by these declarations and Council felt thereafter that Government was more likely to be charged with not acting up to extent of Durham's policy, than with exceeding it. Government are apparently not acting in accordance with Durham's declared policy, and popular mind is exasperated and impatient. State of feeling in United States, and its effect as regards necessary action in Upper Canada. Council fixed in opinion that prompt and exemplary punishment is necessary in case of late incursions, and would have recorded their conviction, had the point been raised, that, in the execution of Morreau, Arthur was acting in accordance with expressed views of Durham. After reciting facts in cases of Beamer, Chandler, Wait, McLeod, Brown and Warner, Council notes the care of militia to act always within the law. This was due to their confidence that prompt punishment would follow trial. If confidence destroyed, the militia would either relax in their zeal for the country's safety, or take law into their own hands and slay prisoners on the spot. Inviting attention to that part of Glenelg's despatch in which Arthur was authorized to relax the severity of sentence "not as reversing wrong judgments, but as acting upon information which the Executive Council did not possess, and upon views to which the Legal Tribunals could not advert", and noting the opportunity this view gave the Lieutenant Governor to take advantage of any kindlier public sentiment that might manifest itself, the Council point out that appeals to the Governor General from the Lieutenant Governor's decisions would create impression that his decisions were unnecessarily severe and impolitic, and thus extensions of mercy, which would tend to strengthen the Governor if granted by him, would undermine confidence in him if granted by Durham. The appearance of divided authority could scarcely fail to create in Province a Governor General's party and a Lieutenant Governor's party, with fatal results to authority of both. There is also danger of exciting resentment of those who believe that Constitutional Act of 1791 gave to Upper Canada an Executive Government, to whom they have access, and who, through medium of Home Government, are responsible for conduct of their affairs; also, want of confidence in Lieutenant Governor as it is observed that his powers under his commission, are unduly restricted. Lieutenant Governor having heard report decided in deference to Durham's wishes to respite the prisoners until October 1, and to transmit all papers to Governor General, together with reports on the other cases tried in Niagara District. p. 457

Arthur to Durham. No. 18. L.S. Acknowledging despatch No. 9. Concern that Durham should attribute to him an absence of perfect co-operation with Durham. He is actuated by entirely opposite spirit from that imagined by Durham. Explains the course pursued between the desire to extend clemency to utmost limits, and the necessity of exemplary punishment, coupled with the public indignation as to undue leniency towards those from whom they had suffered. His steady endeavour has been to bring over public mind to regard with some complacency the lenient dealings which the Home Government have pressed upon him. Disappointment on receiving Durham's despatch regarding Chandler and Wait. His despatches to Durham were dealt with when they met together in Toronto, and at that time he could not discover the slightest difference of opinion between them, except that Durham thought that offenders should have been more promptly brought to trial. Arthur insists that he thought he was acting in concert with Durham so far as the latter's sentiments could be discerned from his answers to addresses, his public declarations and from the personal communications between them. Durham's view that the power of pardon, which the Lieutenant Governor exercises, in absence of Governor General, is a delegated power, subject in its exercise to the general subordination to instructions from the Governor General, is not in accordance with his own instructions in Glenelg's despatch (No. 111). He is not struggling to a position of equality with Durham, but, in his humbler sphere, he has his duty to perform. He is ready to follow any general instructions he receives from Durham, but the consideration of, and decision upon, particular cases of crime and the exercise of pardoning power in such cases devolve upon him as officer administering government of province. He corrects a misapprehension of Durham's that, in selecting cases for capital punishment, he made an arbitrary choice, instead of picking out the most guilty. Account of measures taken.

Sandom to Arthur. Copy. Report of operations. On June 26, he and Colonel Dundas waited on General Macomb at Sackett's Harbour, to concert measures for suppression of piracy in Thousand Islands. It was agreed that British and American forces should work conjointly, without regard to sovereignty of territory, and that prisoners taken should be handed over to authorities within whose territory they were apprehended. The British officer captured 2 men on Grindstone Island in American territory. They were handed over to American officer. He learned afterwards that the prisoners were released without the people who had captured them being called upon to give testimony. He corresponded with Macomb, and in his last letter, the latter withdrew his sanction previously given respecting search on United States Islands. This renders his efforts unavailing. p. 593

(2) Harvey to Glenelg. No. 53. Copy. His opinions on boundary have undergone no change, each nation having failed in satisfying the other of the superiority of its claim. He would propose to pursue course which would be adopted by rational and dispassionate relatives in like circumstances, which is, to divide disputed territory as fairly and equitably as possible between the two claimants. The object proposed by Treaty of 1783 was to adjust the boundary line in a manner to remove all cause of future dispute and collision. On this principle, let each party retain that portion most contiguous and convenient to it, and let neither acquire any that would give it undue advantage by interfering with security of the other. All Great Britain requires is safe communication with Canada, and jurisdiction over Acadians in Madawaska. Believes award of King of Belgians just and impartial. He would propose a conventional commercial agreement giving Americans free use of St. John river from source to mouth. Mentions advantages—introduction of capital, and extinction of national prejudices. This is principal object with Americans. Thinks Americans with this would not object to line of railroad through their territory, which would be beneficial to them. If a few fair-minded men on both sides, imbued with these ideas, could meet, an understanding would

Durham to Arthur. No. 10. Copy. Acknowledging despatches of 29th and 31st August, with several enclosures. Gratified at tone of his despatches, but displeased with criticisms of his policy by Executive Council. Maintains attitude of non-interference with Lieutenant Governors, except in cases where the larger policy applicable to all the Provinces is infringed upon. In cases of Chandler and Wait, his only concern was that general policy adopted regarding both Provinces should not be compromised. Imperative that British Government should not appear to act on two different principles in Upper and Lower Canada. In Lower Canada, the whole of the cases arising out of insurrection have been disposed of: gaols emptied; punishments to be inflicted, allotted; no uncertainty of any sort remains.
Effort should be made to reach same results in Upper Canada.
There state of feeling enables enforcement of law by ordinary legal means. Severe example has been made of most notorious offenders.
Excitement should be stopped by immediate trial of all others in custody, without infliction of further capital punishment, and amnesty to all except most prominent. Assumes no executions of persons implicated before Short Hills affair. Strongly criticises decision under which Jacob Beamer is to be made to suffer. Would not withhold utmost severity where demanded, as in cases of piratical outrages on frontiers, but extreme penalty should only be applied in period of insurrection, at moment of commission of crime. Arthur has supplied proof of a change of feeling in Upper Canada, which makes humane course the proper one. If Arthur not convinced, it is Islands principal resort of Americans, and French from St. Pierre and Miquelon. Nominally under Lower Canada, but actually without government of any kind. No law observed except that of le plus fort. Islanders suffer from depredations, and inability to collect just debts. Imports by regular traders amount to £10,000 annually; but equal, if not larger amount brought in illicitly. Resources considerable and susceptible of large increase. Sub-enclosure:

Statement of causes which led to suspension of specie payments on part of Bank of Upper Canada, and reasons for continuing suspension: When general suspension of specie payments in United States and Lower Canada took place in May 1837, the Bank of Upper Canada had £204,000 of notes in circulation. It was resolved not to resort to suspension, and, by prudent management, when Rebellion broke out in December, it had £140,000 in specie in vaults, and only £80,000 of notes in circulation. Sudden demands on Commissary General which he was unable to meet, and although his account was overdrawn, Bank advanced him £50,000, leaving £90,000 in vaults. Subsequent advances took place—£34,417 in January, £96,618 in February and £88,892 in March—by which means the issue of notes had increased to £154,000, and specie in vaults reduced to £60,000. The probability of continuance of these demands, coupled with the impracticability of getting specie from New York, and the depletion of the specie reserve by action of Commercial and other suspended banks, who, taking advantage of the great issue made for Government, collected notes of the Bank in large sums and demanded their redemption in specie, refusing to take their own notes in exchange, compelled directors to petition for leave to suspend which was immediately granted. Commissary General concurred as he was assured of means of carrying on the service until he could receive specie from abroad at the opening of navigation. Commissary General was also aware that the extraordinary issues were based on his Treasury Bills to amount of more than £200,000 sterling. Bank consequently suspended specie payment with £60,000 in gold and silver in vaults, and upwards of £200,000 sterling in London against £154,000 of its notes in province. Bank still pays troops, staff and departments, and, where required, contractors also, in dollars. The opinion of the Bank of Upper Canada and Gore Bank on question of resumption (the Commercial Bank having declined to participate) is, that its immediate effect, owing to distressed condition of country, would be to compel Banks to stop all further discounts and call in their debts. Actions at law to recover funds would be ineffective as sheriffs' sales would not realize one-third value of goods or real estate. In stopping discounts, the advantage from large crop of wheat would be paralyzed, and country further drained of specie by farmers selling off and going to United States. It would be inadvisable to require resumption until crops brought to market.

On the question of putting the currency of two provinces on equal footing, the first thing necessary is the abolition in Lower Canada of French half-crown as legal tender. It passes for 2 shillings and ninepence, while its intrinsic value is no more than 1-10¹/_d, or 2 shillings. It is not recognized as coin in any country except Lower Canada. The base copper coinage should be prohibited from circulation and replaced by Provincial coinage of good copper. Silver coinage should be established for colonies consisting of dollars and parts of equal weight and fineness to American dollar. This silver coinage would drive out both French half-crown, and British silver against which Lower Canadians complain.

Banks are quite able to resume specie payments, but the effects would be as described. Bank notes of Lower Canada redeemable in French half-crowns would take place of Upper Canadian money. Among the circumstances making immediate resumption undesirable is embarrassed state of Provincial finances. Holders of Provincial debentures, in alarm, turn to Bank to redeem them at par on ground that they bought these debentures from Bank. Within last 6 months Bank has repurchased debentures to amount of £40,700. These are now unsaleable. To these are to be added £37,500 sterling of Provincial Debentures unsold and unsaleable in hands of their London agents. For all these reasons, Bank represents undesirability of immediate resumption of specie payments. p. 723

Arthur to Durham. No. 22. Extract. Acknowledging despatch No. 10. Explains decisions and advice of Executive Council, and regrets offence given to Durham. Has, in accordance with instructions from Colonial Office, and his desire to bring his measures into harmony with Durham's views, commuted the sentence of Beamer and others implicated in Short Hills incursion, to transportation for life. Is, however, still of opinion that Beamer should have been executed. His reasons for considering Beamer's offence greater than the others. Recommendations of juries not given great weight by his council. Declares Durham misapprehended him in thinking that Chandler, Wait and Macleod should all have been executed. When Morreau was executed, it was determined that one more should be, Beamer was selected as being most deeply implicated. No material difference of opinion between them as to amnesty. The difference of opinion between masses of people in Upper and Lower Canada led him to extend mercy cautiously and progressively. In districts between Toronto and London, which he visited, general opinion was that Government had gone too far with pardons. He has however, continued the lenient course, with the result that there are few convicts awaiting final decision. Some of those who have escaped and been indicted, may be allowed to return. They should apply individually and promise to demean themselves loyally before amnesty should be extended to them. For these reasons, he has issued proclamations calling upon these persons to submit to justice. Will on own responsibility extend amnesty in proper cases, provided Durham will concur in the immediate removal of the persons under sentence of transportation, to whom further mercy ought not to be extended.

Fox to Durham. No. 4. Confidential. A.L.S. Alarming reports of activity along the American borders. Customs Collectors at Oswego and Rochester report belief in vast conspiracy embracing as many as 40,000 American citizens, who aim at invasion of Upper and Lower Canada during approaching autumn and winter. It is believed there is regular communication between their leaders and the disaffected in Canada. Though probably exaggerated, these reports cannot be entirely disregarded. Cleveland is believed to be centre of conspiracy. Great mass of Americans along border believed to favor invasion, and could not be depended upon to enforce neutrality. Washington, October 4.

General Macomb has force of between 2,000 and 3,000 men, which is altogether inadequate for protection of frontiers. Universal belief among border Americans that Canadians are ripe for revolt. This belief sedulously cultivated by refugees, of whom one, Macleod, is most active. Urgent instructions issued by Washington authorities to civil and military officers on frontier. He has doubts as to measure of effectual succour to be rendered by American Government.

The former relates to disposal of surplus Post Office revenues, and the imposition of an additional 2½% tax on imports at Quebec; the second to the suspension of specie payments in Upper Canada. These questions are too important for him to take up on eve of his departure. The circumstance that these measures seem to require adoption of some common measures on part of Legislature or Executive Council point to necessity of some government that might regulate all matters of general concern of the Canadas and other provinces. p. 815

Private and confidential. A.L.S. Suggesting that if the correspondence enclosed in his letter of October 8, is not confidential, it should be produced before the House of Assembly. Glad to learn of Durham's satisfaction with his deputation, and that Durham had yielded his opinion regarding the Legislative Assembly which he himself considered they would never give up. Fears that all Durham's good work will be frustrated by his early departure. Regrets the excesses of party spirit in England, and expresses opinion that they will see the injustice they have done Durham. Condemns Ministers for having abandoned him. Wishes Durham could be persuaded to remain until Spring. p. 846

(2) Harvey to Glenelg. Separate. Confidential. Copy. Desirability of opening navigation of St. John river to Americans. Opposition in New Brunswick proceeds from prejudice and lack of calculation. What province requires is development, to which the inhabitants are not equal, though they are averse to having the assistance of aliens. Favors Durham's plan of throwing the Crown Lands in all the North American colonies into one fund, to be applied under one general system of management for benefit of all. In pursuance of this, would recommend that St. John river be opened to enterprise and capital of neighbors in adjoining States, under proper restrictions. The result would be an incalculable increase in value in lands, the New Brunswickers would be infused with greater energy, and national prejudices would gradually disappear. Has no fear that intermingling of populations would affect prejudicially loyalty of British subjects to their institutions. Suggests that agreement be made respecting the navigation for ten years. Asking his intervention with United States Government. His instructions give him no option but to oppose this proceeding. Only advanced season prevents his taking steps at once. He will do so in early summer if necessary. Arthur to Durham. A.L.S. Durham had scarcely left river before insurrection broke out in Lower Canada at Beauharnois. One thousand Glengarry Highlanders sent to scene. Result not yet reported. There are some thousands in Michigan in readiness for invasion. Has turned out militia, but they are without equipment, in spite of his warnings. Is full of confidence, however. James Mathew to Durham. A.L.S. After visiting principal centres of population in United States as well as the frontiers, he gives results of his observations. Hope is indulged that Durham's presence will create better feeling. Respectable classes, whom he identifies generally with Whigs mortified by proceedings on borders. Chief difficulty is weakness of Executive Government. People of United States are vain, but possess qualities of greatness, and can be conciliated by confidence and respect. p. 201

Colborne to Durham. Private. A.L.S. About 30 pirates landed on Isle of Tonti and on adjacent shores and plundered inhabitants. Arthur also sends him information he has received of intended raids. Thinks much of this is mere rumour circulated by interested parties. Is taking precautions, nevertheless. p. 207

H. Heney to Buller. A.L.S. In French. Advice respecting prisoners. Those charged with murder should be tried. Is convinced that with sufficient proof, French Canadian juries would convict them. He will not suppose the possibility of anything else. Prisoners named in proclamation should be tried at once, that is, the most culpable. No pardon or amnesty should be extended before conviction. A general amnesty before trial could do nothing but harm. An advantage from trials would be publicity given to plans of rebels; also, would indicate those to whom persons injured by the course of the rebellion might look for indemnity. As for the crowd, after the leaders had been dealt with, they might be sent to their homes after having given security for good behaviour. Of the leaders, a few should be executed, others transported. The return of Papineau would be productive of worst results. Will be glad to give his views on public affairs. p. 217

T. H. to Weir Jr. Herald Office. A.L.S. Imparting substance of conversation he had with Mackenzie and O'Callaghan on burning of the "Sir Robert Peel." Both admitted it was one of many schemes to embroil Great Britain with United States. Hints given of blowing up of Welland Canal. Much evidence of widely spread organization to cause trouble in Canada. Mackenzie's extravagant manifestations of joy on hearing of destruction of the "Sir Robert Peel." Scanlan connected with this event, an auctioneer in Kingston and Wells, a former student in M. S. Bidwell's office. Stories of Papineau's movements. Sandom to Durham. A.L.S. Had prepared, on Colborne's suggestion, two small vessels to act on Lake Erie or elsewhere as required. Excitement caused by destruction of the "Sir Robert Peel" induced him to hasten preparations and to charter two schooners. On representations from Kingston that pirates would occupy Ducks Island, and from there attack shores near Bath, went to Ducks Island, and made tour along shore as far east as Gananoque. Timber on this island, which is British, being cut down and carried to United States. Islands thereabouts would afford shelter to lawless bands operating against Canadian shores. They should be under surveillance of naval authorities at Kingston. If Durham approves, would arrange to procure steam-vessel for Lake Erie and place armed vessel and boats in British channel among Thousand Islands, men required to equip and officer these vessels. p. 243

80,000 members, whose purpose it is to prepare for the invasion of Upper Canada during the following winter. The information was imparted to him by Benjamin Ogden, an eminent lawyer and for many years a leader of the Whig party, for the purpose of transmission to Durham. Mr. Ogden was about to notify the Government in Washington, and assured him that, though opposed to it, he was convinced of the Government's good faith towards Great Britain and of its sincere desire to preserve peace between the two countries. Young, also, relates that the Mayor of New York told him that Papineau had lately visited him and expressed surprise at the inaction of Americans over burning of "Caroline." The Mayor stated they were satisfied to leave matters in hand of Government at Washington, and, on Papineau's intimating that he intended to discuss the matter, the Mayor said that if he attempted any public agitation, he would put it down and Papineau along with it. p. 741

Information from prisoners. Desmouchelles who led attack on seigniorly house at Beauharnois, told him they began swearing in as early as July. He himself swore in 250 in one day in neighbourhood of Chateauguay about August 1. Insurrection was to have taken place on 5th or 6th November. J. Bouchette to Hon. James Irvine. Dft. Initialed. Reply to enquiries of committee appointed to enquire into matters affecting revenue. No reduction possible in expenses connected with administration of public lands. Account of work of that Department. On question whether larger revenues could be collected, he gives his ideas as to how revenues could be increased. The principal source of revenue is the Crown Reserves, which average 9,000 acres in each township. Present system of leasing for 21 years of little benefit. Rents irregularly, in some cases never, paid. Generality of reserves, particularly on water courses, subject to depredations of all sorts, and to "squatting." He recommends leases for 99 years or, better still, freeholds. Suggests mutation fine of one-twelfth. Encloses statements of the average quantum of ungranted lands, and total quantum of Crown Reserves, with estimates of revenue which might be taken. 1822.

(3) Goderich to Colborne. Copy. Acknowledging receipt of despatch inclosing reports as to demands for labor. Will publish the information with that received from other provinces, and anticipates large emigration. Government should not assist indigent emigrants, except by finding employment for them. Approves of their engaging as farm laborers, as preparation to becoming owners of farms. Looks for good results from employing excess labor in improvement of Crown Lands, by roads, etc. Such excess might even be occupied in clearing lands and preparing it for purchasers. Such prepared property might be sold to promising laborers on credit, the condition being that half should revert to Crown on default in payments. As many emigrants, who receive aid to come to Canada from parishes or individuals, waste their money before getting to destination, it would be well to arrange to have such money withheld until recipients are located. Memorial signed by 447 of the inhabitants of districts bordering on Ottawa river, pointing out that this district is still scantily settled, and the navigation undeveloped; that a wealthy company is being formed to exploit its resources, and asking that the company may receive encouragement from Governor, as operations of Canada Company and the British American Land Company, beneficial as they are to the districts within their spheres, are detrimental to those districts, which do not enjoy the same advantages. Report of Commissioners (Lord Gosford, Sir George Gipps and Sir Charles Grey) on Clergy Reserves. p. 105

R. B. Sullivan to Mr. Secretary Joseph. L.S. Report on methods of disposal of Clergy Reserves. Encloses Imperial Act 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 62, which is authority for sales. Up to March 8, 1837, sales of Clergy Reserves to amount of 393,746 acres have been made. The total amount of Reserves in surveyed townships is 2,197,526 acres. Of these 361,000 are under 21 years' lease. Course pursued as regards sales, was to have inspection and valuation made, and lands were sold on terms fixed to first applicants. In many cases, applicants were allowed to enter on lands desired by them before inspection, and purchase settled after valuations made. Many leases have been converted into fee simple. These are only exceptions to sales by public auction, which has been rule since 1834, subject to the right of pre-emption, granted to occupants. System of leasing has been abandoned. Arguments in favor of sales outright: (1) Desire of people to have political rights as freeholders; (2) interest of settler to have permanent property; (3) rents small and irregularly paid; (4) necessity of raising larger amount to maintain Clergy; (5) political expediency vacant lands are tempting to enemy, and source of grievance to discontented; (6) constant subject of dispute between religious denominations; (7) surrender of Crown Reserves to Canada Company has created shortage of land available for incomers; (8) lessees of Clergy Reserves desire to purchase, many wishing to realize on their improvements; (9) inadequacy of funds to meet demands of Clergy, necessitating recourse to Casual and Territorial Revenue. He recommends that authority should be obtained from Imperial Government to sell another quarter of Reserves. Of the quarter already authorized for sale—549,381 acres—there are only 155,645 acres left unsold. If this fact were known lessees and other claimants would be urgent to purchase, and their demands could not be met. He, also, recommends that the fund created by sales and leases should be transferred to Provincial Government debentures, which would give double amount now received. The security would be of the best. p. 141

- Pamphlet by Lord Howick on a Plan of Emigration. A.L. Initialed. He was opposed to assisted emigration. 1st. because it was unnecessary; 2nd. it would be a check on voluntary emigration; 3rd. it would throw on Government responsibility for fitness of emigrants, which it could not discharge satisfactorily; 4th. it would give emigrants in distress a claim on Government and remove a powerful stimulus to self help. Assistance should be limited to two objects: obtaining for emigrants the cheapest and best means of transportation, and the necessary arrangements for their reception at end of passage, furnishing information to those with means, and helping those without means to find employment, and sending the sick to hospitals. Approval of measure for charging a head tax of 5 shillings to help in maintenance of accommodation for sick. Would double tax in case of ships in which regulations for benefit of passengers were not attended to. The most important point was provision for employing laborers when they got to Canada. He rejected plan of settling these at once on own lands; and thought mere temporary supply of tools and food insufficient. His idea was that it was unwise to attempt to raise laborers in the industrial scale, until they had had experience. His plan was to establish villages of 100 to 150 cottages on different parts of Crown Lands, with, say, $\frac{1}{4}$ acre of land attached to each; and to erect a church and schoolhouse, which might perhaps occupy one building, with residence for clergyman. Destitute laborers should occupy these cottages as weekly tenants, with right of purchase. These laborers should be given employment in improving Crown Lands by

1833. opening roads, clearing lands and preparing further villages. They would thus gain the experience necessary to fit them to be successful farmers. The plan of giving small allotments either free or upon credit has proved failure. Advantage of village settlements would be the providing the people with the several conveniences of civilized life. The scheme he proposes would in his opinion be peculiarly suitable for Lower Canada, and he thinks that settlement groups might be formed under leadership of clergymen, either Protestant or Roman Catholic. p. 309

Fifteen years previously, he was appointed to superintend settlement of Crown Lands in township of Leeds, Megantic county. He obtained grant of 600 acres and 5 per cent on all lands he located and settled. The township filled up rapidly. His chief obstacles were large lots held by absentees. In course of his work he came into collision with A. W. Cochran, who became a determined enemy. Cochran and Felton opposed system of granting on quit rents. He recounts his trials in political field owing to opposition of these persons. He favored granting free or for small sum, such as £5 per 100 acres. He urges advantages of local land boards in every county. Gives names of absentees who own large part of Townships. Is opposed to Land Companies. p. 658

Hanson to Wakefield. A.L.S. Reached Toronto to open enquiry on Monday before. Long interview with Arthur, who was civil but jealous of interference with his authority in appointment of commission. Talking with the people along the way he concludes that commission is popular; that tax on holders of wild lands is without efficacy; that present parliament is unpopular; that the charges of irregularities in conduct of last election are well-founded; that Arthur lacks respect of all parties, and is looked upon as weak, undecided man; that all the country wants to make it prosperous is good government; and that official party will fight hard before surrender.

Hanson to Wakefield. A.L.S. Arthur finds many difficulties in Durham's course regarding the commission to Buller; it should have been issued in his own name; Assembly may question validity of commission; law officers and judges pronounced Durham's course unconstitutional; since Casual and Territorial Revenues have been relinquished to Provincial Legislature, Assembly may regard action as breach of this arrangement. It all comes back however to wounded pride, which might be healed by civil letter. Has seen Sullivan who is "a dear fellow" and has sound views. Kerr to Wakefield. A.L.S. On Militia Claims, which have been sold to speculators and others. He combats Wakefield's view that the purchasers of these claims were not entitled to any consideration from the Government. This view if acted upon would tempt militia men who had parted with the scrip to dishonesty, and would injure them by exposing them to lawsuits on the part of the holders. Many of the holders have given the equivalent, and sometimes more than the equivalent, of the value of the lands. Chief blame for traffic in scrip lies with Government, who took so long converting the scrip into land.

Instructions to Commissioners of Militia Claims, signed by Buller. Copy. Severe reflections upon local executive. All testimony received concurs in establishing conviction that the report of the Commission of Crown Lands and Emigration is a faint description of injury inflicted upon militia men, by the manner in which the intentions of Home Government have been defeated by local executive. The objects of Home Government were settlement of country, and compensation as recognition of services of militia. Results actually obtained in majority of cases, precisely opposite to those Home Government had in view. The official delays and obstacles interposed between militia claimants and their grants, the impossibility in many cases of ever obtaining a grant after most vexatious impediments and delays, the mode of allotting the land so that it was seldom worth expense and trouble obtaining it, the necessity of employing expert agents who were acquainted with the intricacies of Lands and Surveyor General's Departments all convinced Governor that the public offices alone were to blame for converting what was intended as a boon into a positive injury, and he concurs in Commissioner's Report which says that there has been a maximum of injury to the province with the minimum of benefit to militia men. Governor hopes that his measures, as respects claims yet unsettled, will be means of carrying into effect original intention of grants. Governor expects utmost expedition, consistent with safety, in settling outstanding claims. No claims to be recognized but those of six battalions and others who served for same period and in same manner. It must be explained to all claimants that the orders for the nominal amount of money awarded, will have full value at future sales of Crown Lands and ought to be exchangeable for money at, or nearly at, par.

W. W. Baldwin to Hanson (?). A.L.S. Answer to enquiries of Commission. Having never had official intercourse with Land Granting Department, can only relate recollections of past events, as publicly known. After the first 6 or 7 years of existence of province, the only system was the making of money upon issue of patents, the interests of immigrants and settlers seeming but a minor consideration. Simcoe with a view of attracting immigrants offered liberal quantities of land to settlers, seldom less than 200 acres to each. Whole townships of from 40,000 to 60,000 acres were also offered on condition that grantees would bring in a certain number of settlers—60 heads of families to a township. Townships of Markham, Whitby, Hope and Cramahe, and perhaps others were so offered. The experiences of Berczy in Markham related in Baldwin's letter of August 20, are repeated. (See Miscellaneous, Section 6). Grave wrong done not only to Berczy but also to people of townships "for it deprived the settlement of Markham of a man of character, education and rank in society as its head and guide; and the government of a connecting link between itself and the people." The scale of patent fees exhibits a steady ascension. When the township grants were rescinded, fees on 200 acre grant were £5 sterling, and for some time there was no difference in cost for a larger grant, the office work being the same, for survey fees there would be a difference proportionate to quantity of land surveyed. About year 1800, the patent fees on 1,200 acres were, as he remembers, about £13. Four or five years later they were augmented for same quantity to £48 or £50; the fees on 200 acres being £70.10s. There were several other increases until on December 14, 1819, a schedule of fees was published. It was as follows: on grants of 50 acres, there were no fees; of 100 acres £12; on 200 acres £30; on 300 acres £60; on 400 acres £75; on 600 acres £150; and thereafter up to 1,200 acres, 5 shillings an acre. He could not say whether these amounts were consideration of the purchase, or merely fees. Fifty acre grants were known as "pauper grants" and thus discredited, besides being too small for man with family. Some time after, he rather thinks, the plan of sale still in use was adopted, prices varying from $4 to $6 an acre. He contrasts system with that applied in the United States, which has been means of settling country rapidly. Account of legislative notice taken of land granting system in Upper Canada. The errors of the Land Granting system are as follows: (1) Formation of any reserves, whatever—Since they are statutory, they should have been in large blocks, not in single lots scattered through townships; (2) high fees, high prices, and sale on credit; (3) great delays and expense to applicants; (4) alleged practice in Surveyor's Office of placing fictitious names on maps for purpose of accommodating favorites; (5) departure from policy of granting townships on conditions and mingling this with plan of locating individuals; (6) the obstacle placed by dispersed location to investment of capital, and to desire of settlers for close neighborhood. To ascertain how far resulting evils are susceptible of remedy, statistical statements, on plan he suggests, should be obtained. Annual tax now imposed for improvement of roads should be applied to all lands including those of Canada Company. Rate of land tax should not be increased. Limited opportunities open to owners to sell land. Objections to Provincial Act 7 William IV, c. 118, "An Act to provide for the disposal of the Public Lands in the Province and for other purposes therein mentioned." It remedies none of defects of system, and legalizes that system and in some respects makes things worse by increasing speculation. 1838.

When original agreement was made, Aylmer, Governor General, gave much attention to estimates, urging construction of certain roads as most generally beneficial. Company appealed to Colonial Secretary, which lead to supplementary article which threw heavy responsibility on local government for delay in case Governor did not accept estimates. Governor declined to accept responsibility of rejecting estimates subject to an appeal to Colonial Secretary, with the consequent long delays, and ceased interfering with estimates. Buller to Duncan Bruce. Dft. in Hanson's hand. Reply to request for confirmation of sale of 66,242 acres of land in Gaspé. This sale was characterized by a scarcely imaginable recklessness of profusion in the alienation of Crown property, and by a deliberate and systematic violation of every regulation framed for the direction of the commissioner. Through every stage of the business there were the marks of duplicity and irregularity. The letter of the local agent requesting authority to make the sale was false in the impression it was designed to convey. It purports to have been written in New Carlisle, whereas it was written in the office and apparently at dictation of Mr. Felton, then Commissioner of Crown Lands at Quebec. The Commissioner then obtained authority from Gosford to sell 35,000 acres in Cox and Hamilton townships, and straightway ordered sale of over 100,000 acres. The price at which it was to be offered was less than one-third of what would have produced from timber licences in same area. Sale was not advertised. Sale was deficient in almost every requisite to validity, but it was by no means a solitary case of the same sort. Durham would have confirmed Gosford's refusal to ratify sale, had it not been that faith of Crown was pledged to any public proceeding of Commissioner. As purchasers were not shown to have been cognizant of irregularities, he had no course open but to confirm sale. Durham to Russell Bowlby. A.L.S. In reply to enquiries as to his position respecting an election taking place in the Northern Division of the County of Durham. Durham takes the occasion to enunciate his political principles: "I wish to rally as large a portion of the British people as possible, around the existing institutions of the country—the Throne—Lords—Commons—and The Established Church. I do not wish to make new institutions, but to preserve and strengthen the old. Herein lies the difference between me and my opponents. Some would confine the advantages of those institutions to as small a class as possible. I would throw them open to all who had the ability to comprehend them, and the vigor to protect them. Others again would annihilate them for the purpose of forming new ones on fanciful and untried principles. I would, I repeat, preserve them, but increase their efficiency and add to the number of their supporters. I have often stated the modes by which, as I imagine, that efficiency can be most readily produced, but I have ever accompanied those declarations, as I do now, with the announcement of my determination never to force them peremptorily or dogmatically on the consideration of the Government or the Parliament. If they are (as, in my conscience, I believe them to be) useful and salutary measures—for they are based on the most implicit loyalty and good feeling of the people—the course of events, and the experience of every day will remove the objections and prejudices, which may now exist, and ensure their adoption whenever they are recommended by the deliberate and determined voice of public opinion." "It has been my ruling principle throughout my political life, to endeavor to bring all classes, especially the middle and lower, within the pale of the true, not the spurious, constitution. I have ever wished to give the latter an interest in the preservation of privileges, which exclusion would no longer render obnoxious to them—to make them feel that whilst the Crown enjoyed its prerogatives, and the upper classes their honors, they also were invested with privileges most valuable to them, and, moreover, that all, separately and collectively, rested on the common basis of National utility." p. 186

Extract from letter from A. Ferguson. Rancorous violence of both parties puts them much on a par. Habitants by their breach of allegiance have forfeited all exclusive privileges. He would leave them with nothing but religious privileges and Church lands; would abolish French laws, tenures, and the use of their language in courts. Upper Canada resembled a man who did not feel altogether right, and yet did not know what ailed him. Mackenzie made use of this sense of dissatisfaction for his own purposes. The rebellion is the "happiest event" that could have occurred, since, if severity and leniency be prudently tempered, it will secure peace and confidence for ever. Head allowed Government to be more taken by surprise than it ought to have been. He is a good governor, but "is sufficiently well-satisfied with himself and rather elated by the high compliments from home." Head's action in sending away the troops showed "in the most triumphant manner what we could do for ourselves." Incidents during suppression of rebellion.

Hopes it is realized the French Canadians were prepared to revolt. Colborne's measures alone prevented disaster to English-speaking people. Samuel Hinds to Durham. L.S. His views on Colonial administration. Recent Liberal movement in England has affected colonies profoundly; they are demanding representation in Parliament. For reasons given, direct representation impracticable for moment; likewise, as regards the proposition to allow Colonial representatives to have seat and voice in House, but no vote. Scheme favoured is a Colonial Board, composed of Colonial representatives with Colonial Secretary as chairman and other ministers ex-officio members. Though advisory only, such Board would have great influence over Colonial representations. Discussion of objections to such Board.

Rolph holds Durham in high esteem. Importance of settling Maine Boundary dispute, which he learned in Maine. Durham would have gratifying reception in United States. Religious dissensions in Upper Canada—all denominations, even Episcopalians, object to Government supporting one denomination. Lord John Russell and Glenelg entirely in error in supposing people of Lower Canada are insistent upon representative institutions. Apart from politicians, they hold Assembly in contempt. haps retention of Colborne whom French Canadians regard with abhorrence. Observes that Whigs and Tories accuse each other for causes of discontents since 1828. Constitution of Legislative Council most important question. Experience of 40 years has demonstrated that it should be composed on elective principle, but the immediate application was not held to be sine qua non. Gosford's neglect to notice Lafontaine's amendment to that effect probably led to suspension. If Gosford had reformed Legislative Council in accordance with instructions from Glenelg, the Assembly would have proceeded with business. This Council has in his opinion been destroyed. Notes Russell's opinion on this point. Believes reform of Council principal object of Durham's mission. Hopes he will convoke Assembly. But first measure should be general amnesty. Has great hopes, but Durham must keep officials at arm's length, excepting Daly. Hears agents are coming from both parties in Canada, but this was decided before news of Durham's appointment was known. N. C. Radiger to Durham. A.L.S. Acknowledging letters of March 21. Gives his views on situation in Canada and as to best measures for settling difficulties. Condemnation of the extravagances of the Constitutionals. He points out that the number of those actively disaffected is not more than 3,000 in population of half a million, and that prisoners implicated in rebellion only 237. Had the population risen en masse, it would have taken much greater effort to subdue them. French Canadians are "naturally a peaceful, quiet and happy race, but from their extreme ignorance are liable to be influenced for good or evil." Desirability of taking advantage of opportunity for bringing into effect measures which "will ultimately constitute the Canadas a British Colony in the fullest acceptance of the term." Seigneurial system should be gradually replaced by system of Free and Common Socage; and Registry offices should be established. Testimony to the virtuous activities of Roman Catholic Clergy. Three schemes under discussion: (1) Annexation of Island of Montreal to Upper Canada; (2) Union of two Canadas; (3) Union of all the Provinces. The first would be favored by English population of Montreal, for several reasons; the second seems desirable to writer. In the event of its being affected, he suggests redistribution of counties and property qualification for members to raise standard of legislature. He, also, suggests that members of Legislative Council should be required, as a qualification, to hold a certain amount of real estate in country. English should be official language of legislature and courts—with former immediately, in the latter at a more distant date. Recommends Bytown as seat of government. Objections to union of all the provinces. If two provinces were united, provision should be made for comprehensive Civil List and retention by Crown of Territorial and other Crown Revenues, until equivalent provided by province. On subject of Clergy Reserves, although an Episcopalian, and convinced of legal right of Church of England to reserves, he is of opinion that, considering the several denominations in the country, Church of England should not occupy preferred position and that revenues from Reserves should be divided among the several religious

As to remaking the constitution, how is this to be done? By thrusting aside all those on both sides who have taken part in public affairs, and taking in new untried men? There would be no guarantee that the latter are more to be trusted than the others. The motion of aristocracy is ridiculous. Observes that Upper Canada would accept union on terms that would assure its ascendancy. Is utterly opposed to the ascendancy of either province. p. 461

- Derbshire to Durham. A.L.S. Report of observations made at Durham's instance. He left London on March 12, reached New York April 20, and Montreal near end of April. French Canadians very cautious and reserved. He sought information from every quarter. In New York met Mackenzie, Rolph and O'Callaghan in Montreal, D. B. Viger, who gave him several letters of introduction. So far he had failed to find material grievance. Habitants until rebellion had an enviable lot. "They knew not the sight of a tax-gatherer. Their imposts in the shape of rent were exceedingly light; and every man could obtain land in small or large quantities or in addition to that which he possessed. . . . From the soil he could rear every article of necessary consumption—the linen, woollens and leather even, of which the clothing of this race were made were all the untaxed produce of the country and for the most part spun and loomed in the homestead of the farmer or cottier. In his religion, the French Catholic of Canada has enjoyed perfect freedom, the Catholic and Protestant contributing funds towards the erection of each other's ecclesiastical edifices, and the state of opinion and the laws so perfectly harmonising as to religious toleration that there has never so far as I can learn been a ruffle to disturb the peace of society upon the score of a difference in creed. The freedom of person, of political opinion, and of the Press have been secured to the habitant by equal laws impartially administered." Language of Roebuck, Rolph, Mackenzie, O'Callaghan and Viger affords corroborative proof. Roebuck dwelt on incongruity of monarchical institutions with American soil, the official exclusive class, desire for local courts, and the yearning for republican institutions. Mackenzie held somewhat similar language. Rolph more secretive, but observed desire in both Canadas for separation from Great Britain. O'Callaghan maintained Papineau wanted no more than carrying out of principles of British constitution and that there had been no rebellion, but merely resistance to execution of warrants on false charges of treason. Viger very timid; lawlessness and spirit of revenge have prevented him from leaving house for several months. Disorders of volunteers, particularly about St. Benoit. Instances given. Losses of habitants estimated by them at £85,000. Viger becoming more relaxed maintained that Canadians were not disaffected to British Crown. It was no more than "une rebellion à la justice, an opposition to the process of the Courts." They had proved their loyalty and saved Canada to Great Britain. English were liked, Scotch were not on account of their haughty, overbearing manners, and Irish for their irregularities, violence and bad faith. Derbyshire had other evidence of dislike of Scotch. Account of conversation with driver of caleche. Belief of French Canadians in Papineau. Speculation as to Papineau's whereabouts. His driver told him his countrymen did not like Americans and only wanted to enjoy rights secured by capitulations and treaty of Paris. Habitants are sluggish race, light-hearted, vain, innocent and virtuous. Papineau once observed "Our people do not want English capital nor English people here; they have no ambition beyond their present possessions, and never want to go beyond the sound of their own Church Bells." They are sensitive to rumors of policy to abolish their laws and language and to Anglicize them, and so are susceptible to propaganda of revolutionary leaders, seconded by violent utterances of British party. Lack of education attributed by driver to Legislative Council. He thought more money should be spent on roads and less on judges. The ignorance of habitant makes him an easy dupe to political leaders. Conversations with Rev. Mr. Benon, Curé of St. Scholastique, and Rev. Mr. Du Charme, Curé of Ste Therèse, the latter very loyal, and Rev. Mr. Desèves, Curé of St. Eustache. Durham's arrival is regarded with much anxiety by both parties, French Canadians speculating hopefully, the Constitutionalists gloomily.

The latter talk of rebellion if he disappoints them; quotes article from Montreal Herald. Violence of this party against French Canadians almost passes belief. The Canadian advocates return of Papineau, who will follow O'Connell's methods. (Derbyshire letters—separately bound).

W. Wilson, M.D. to Durham. A.L.S. Urging Durham to cultivate close relations with the Roman Catholic clergy. He is persuaded that the calamity which assailed province was averted chiefly by influence of that clergy. Papineau alienated them from himself by including in his list of reforms a great curtailment, if not overthrow, of Church. Durham should enlist the assistance of clergy, and go so far as to place "in their hands on trust for an indefinite period, the elective franchise in the Seigniories." A new arrangement of counties should be made, by which the representation would be more nearly equalized. As between the retrograde Canadians and pro-

Has thought much over proposition of confederating all British provinces, and cannot see why it should not succeed first as a remedy for the existing evils, and then as the best administrative system for this part of America. Stuart on August 25, 1837, and all who took part in rebellion should be ineligible to vote for or sit in Assembly; (7) that the nature of the contingencies of the Assembly should be determined; (8) that no agent should be employed for the province, except by Act of Legislature; (9) that the Governor should have power, in certain cases, to suspend Habeas Corpus and proclaim Martial Law; (10) that no public political meeting be held except by authority of two magistrates; (11) that the commissions of all public officers who failed in their duty in the late troubles be cancelled; (12) that the press be put under regulations; (13) that qualifications for Assembly should include a minimum of 30 years of age; (14) that evidence given before Assembly should be on oath, and subject to penalties for perjury; (15) that, in the selection of a speaker, the Assembly should present three names to Governor, or, if present practice be continued, the Assembly should be required to select another candidate, if the one presented were objectionable to Governor. On the back of memorandum is a note: "Some of these worthy of attention," and another by Buller: "But the whole is in bad spirit of a narrow-minded man, proposing arbitrary repression of popular power." p. 586

Turton to Durham. A.L.S. Tendering his resignation, on account of letters received from Melbourne and Glenelg. Idea of his accompanying Durham to Canada, originated neither with Durham nor himself. It was the suggestion of one of the members of the Administration. In a pecuniary point of view, his coming to Canada was unprofitable, and unless he had decided to go to India in 1839, it would have been out of his power to come to Canada. His decision to come was determined by promises from a quarter that precluded the anticipation that the appointment would be objected to, by Ministers. It is only since his appointment that objection was raised. He will not consent to embarrass Durham by seeming to be forced on an unwilling Ministry. p. 589 sympathy with their views. His object is to call attention of Government to feasibility of forming a party for itself. Hitherto governors have applied themselves to gaining the favor of one or other of present parties, oscillating, according to disposition, between the extremists both of which are too exclusive to afford any hope. His view is that a party can be formed for the government based on principles which will ensure to all classes a just influence over public matters. He has seen at the vice-regal court a competition of servility, that curse of colonies, fostered and encouraged. French Canadians, with insignificant exceptions, may be divided into four classes: one-fourth were actively rebellious; another fourth disloyal, though passive, but willing to join others if shown prospect of success; the remaining half is loyal, though passive. This class includes nearly all the clergy, and most men of hereditary property. It can be moved into active exertion on behalf of government, and this is the business of the wise administrator. On its success depends the prospect of retaining the colonies for another quarter of a century. p. 605

Buller to Durham. A.L.S. Arrived in Montreal evening before. Received from Simpson a letter from prisoners. It is not satisfactory, in that it is not a formal confession of moral or legal guilt, but rather "a highflying acknowledgment of heroism & patriotism." It will serve as a base, however, for an effort to obtain a paper containing the sort of formal acknowledgment required, either through Simpson or by an official letter. Has seen Gerrard, McGill and Moffatt, the leaders of the British party. Gerrard and McGill are not for severity: banishment would be sufficient in their view. Moffatt did not express his views, but he intimated confidence in Durham. Had a most satisfactory talk with the three on general policy. Is convinced that if registry offices be given, feudal tenures abolished especially in Island of Montreal, and measures taken to improve internal communications, Durham can do what he will with British party. Buller to Durham. A.L.S. Report of his proceedings. Spent his time mostly with English party. McGill and Pothier, both of much influence, approve of treating petition as confession of guilt, and banishing parties. Moffatt approved reluctantly, but expressed wish murderers might be tried by Special Commission. Danger would be that murderers would have chance of getting off as rebels. Is convinced that banishment would satisfy English party who do not desire execution of political prisoners. If tried by Jury, prisoners would certainly be acquitted, which would have disastrous effect, destroying good effects of Durham's lenity. Durham need apprehend little criticism from British party. Except Moffatt, "a stern, proud man," they will court Durham's favor, and look anxiously for reforms Durham proposes. Repeats disastrous consequences of acquittal of prisoners; fatal to Durham's mission; lenity would no longer be attributed to generosity; their imprisonment would be regarded as additional grievance; British party would be alienated. Regrets that prisoner's statement was not a more explicit confession. Is trying to get more satisfactory statement. General readiness of people seen to co-operate with Durham. Seigniorship of Montreal question can be easily settled; other reforms will be well received. L'Huissier's escape due to great carelessness; he cannot find out where. Later in day, letter from prisoners brought in by Simpson; quite satisfactory. Personal matters. p. 643

"Observations on the State of Parties immediately or remotely dangerous to the existing connection between the North American colonies and Great Britain." Unsigned. The writer was brought up in the Township of Dunham, and educated for the Church of England by the Rev. C. Stewart, afterwards Bishop of Quebec. He did not take orders, but taught school, first in the Talbot Settlement, and afterwards in Hamilton. Throwing himself into opposition to Sir Allan McNab, he felt obliged to resign his school, and spent a year studying conditions in Upper Canada. On the expiration of that period, he resumed his profession as teacher, in the Eastern Townships. The conclusions he reached, after a survey of parties in Lower Canada were, that it was impossible to carry on Government by a popular House of Assembly, until the province should contain a majority of English inhabitants; this can be accomplished only by emigration and Anglification; that the ad-interim government should be framed in contemplation of a return to popular elections; that the members of the Assembly should be appointed by the Governor, and invested with the powers of the former House; that the Upper House should be remodelled in a manner to ensure more energy, efficiency and unanimity. Plan of scheme for education in the province. p. 706

Markland to Durham. (Unsigned but endorsed, from Mr. Markland.) His views as to settlement of affairs. Extreme difficulty, if not impossibility, of any proper settlement that would be satisfactory to French Canadian. But some salutary measure has become necessary to Upper Canada. The public enterprise in developing resources has led to expenditure far beyond means of province A Upper Canada (undated).

debt has been contracted of nearly £1,400,000, and there will be an anticipated annual deficit of £40,000. The remedies proposed have been: (a) Direct taxation; (b) confederation of all the provinces; (c) annexation of Montreal, and legislative union of Upper and Lower Canada. Direct taxation would be almost universally opposed. Confederation is grand in appearance, and "one sees it mentally afar off, as if hereafter some mighty destiny would be connected with its fate." But it is open to the objections of separation by long distances; lack of common interests, which are now looked after by Imperial Government; and discontent due to participation by uninformed legislators in affairs of each province. The advantages of annexation of Montreal to Upper Canada are obvious, but there are serious drawbacks: the dissatisfaction of French Canadians transferred to Upper Canada, and of British population left in Lower Canada; the settlement of proportion of revenue collected in Lower Canada, which was due to Upper Canada, would still be necessary, with Lower Canada the claimant, instead of Upper Canada; smuggling from Lower Canada into Upper Canada would arise, if the duties collected in Upper Canada were higher than those charged in Lower Canada, as would almost certainly be the case; the whole expenditure for completion of St. Lawrence canal system would fall upon Upper Canada, already overburdened. The many benefits that would accrue from union of Upper and Lower Canada make it the most desirable proposition, but the French Canadians would certainly throw their weight against it. There is the danger often adverted to, that under union the French Canadians in Assembly might join with minority from Upper Canada and block useful legislation. This is real danger as in present mood nothing would be satisfactory to French Canadians that does not tend towards republicanism. To effect union coercion must be resorted to, and the problem is, how the greatest good can be achieved with the least aggravation to French Canadians. The constitution of 1791 has proved a great success in Upper Canada, and has totally failed in Lower Canada. Upper Canada does not like union, except under modifications but is prepared to accept it in interests of Empire. Lower Canada, torn by dissensions, should be required to co-operate in a suitable measure to bring about peace. Union would mean completion of public works, Upper Canada has not means to finish, and consequent encouragement to enterprise in country. The scheme of Constitutional Society of Lower Canada should receive consideration. Discussion of and opinion adverse to proposition to retain Executive Governments of each province with alternative legislative session in each province. Upper Canada makes only one stipulation, viz. that the capital should be in that province. Reasons: distance, which would affect members and applicants for land and others doing business with Government: desirability of making French Canadians acquainted with English institutions. Capital should be in some central place of sufficient strength to afford protection to Departmental papers, and to legislators in course of duty. p. 721

J. Marks, M.P.P. to Durham. Stating that it was intended that a deputation of members of Upper Canada should wait on Durham to present their views on Union of the two Canadas, but this being found impracticable, a memorial was drawn up, which is herewith, containing his and other opinions. Deprecates annexation of Island of Montreal to Upper Canada, as unfair to Lower Canada. p. 741

Memorial. Union essential to prosperity of Upper Canada. In order to produce British feeling throughout country, law courts of Lower Canada must be altered, and, within definite time, French Code abolished. French Canadians must be fully protected in religious rights and personal property, but they must be, by degrees, Anglicized and changed so as to think, feel and act like British subjects. "They have no idea of British thoughts or British feeling." The change necessary can only be effected by changing the laws and institutions of Lower Canada from French to English. Nothing has been done in this direction since 1759. Benefits of union to both provinces. Raise revenue of united provinces, by taxes on luxuries and other articles so as to avoid direct taxation. Being in Toronto, has become convinced, "that unless Your Lordship without a day's delay interpose, the Province will ere long be lost to the Empire, and in the meantime alone retained by the sword." Has overwhelming evidence, but unless Durham will assume government of Upper Canada, persons with information will not disclose it, as they would be subjecting themselves to annoyance. He himself is absolutely disinterested, and friendly to leaders on both sides. Willing to sustain his views before Durham, or at bar of Parliament. Situation very critical; writer persuaded that all depends on Durham. p. 772

- New York, July 12. Buchanan to Arthur. Copy. L.S. Recalls conversation he had with Arthur: Arthur believed Buchanan's opinion would have influence, but that he was wrong in condemnation of Family Compact; that to set them aside was to run a risk, any Governor ought to avoid; that, from his conversation with Bidwell, in Albany, he was convinced Bidwell was worthy of no favor, that all he had spoken with had approved his measures; and that he hoped to settle the Clergy Reserve question satisfactorily. Buchanan, for his part, sees no hope of retaining province, since Arthur is determined to uphold Family Compact. In his interview with Durham, the latter said he read every word of his letter and agreed with him in all his views. When Arthur asked him the names of the gentlemen, who had expressed alarm at conditions in Upper Canada, he refused to give them when he saw Arthur sustaining the Family Compact. He had mentioned two names, one of them Robert Baldwin; both of them called on Arthur, but both were rebuffed. He had the highest esteem for Robinson, Strachan and the Attorney General, but they had too long guided the destiny and dispensed the patronage of the province. Notwithstanding opposition of persons and Assembly, they have gone their way, regardless of instructions from Colonial Office. He would ask Arthur whether any person not of that party has access to him. As an instance of discrimination, Colborne told him that the Irish had mainly contributed to the saving of the province, and that the Roman Catholics had done nobly. Notwithstanding this fact, although there were some 700 Roman Catholics in and about Hamilton, Sir Allan McNab had not promoted one of them. As for Bidwell, he would not have been treated as he was either in England or by Durham. Arthur is entreated to distinguish between disaffection and disloyalty. Thousands are disaffected who are not disloyal. In England, the disaffected exert themselves to effect a change of ministry. If Durham continues to act as he has done in Quebec, clearing all off, he will soon evoke a spirit of loyalty. The course adopted on the Niagara Frontier is only suited to Germany. 1838.

G. Moffatt to Colborne. A.L.S. Private. Discussion of Durham's plan. On previous Monday, Durham orally explained the outline of the measure to several gentlemen selected by Mr. McGill. While persuaded of Durham's desire to promote the happiness and prosperity of the Colonies, he is not a convert to Durham's ideas. He believes in reunion of Upper and Lower Canada, with some amendments, but without any fundamental change in system provided in Act of 1791. Durham's prevailing idea is that the troubles were due to the constitution and not to its administration particularly on the part of the Colonial Office. Reform should begin there, and, farther back, in the influences which the Minister finds it necessary to conciliate in the two Houses of Parliament. Interference with Maritime Provinces unnecessary. Several persons he has conversed with agree that if a general scheme of confederation is adopted, it would have a better chance without local assemblies than with them. This view is, also, applicable to the union of the two Canadas. Montreal,

E. J. Stanley to Durham. A.L.S. Account of discussion the night before on Durham's Proclamation. Brougham attacked it fiercely. Ellenborough declared it to be illegal, as there could not have been 5 members in the Special Council, which passed it. Glenelg only said that he would be prepared to defend proceedings at proper time and would produce papers. An attack in House of Commons gave Lord John Russell opportunity to express approbation of what had been done, and to condemn the misrepresentation of the Opposition. Opinion seems to be that there is nothing in Brougham's attack, but that Durham exceeded his powers in sending prisoners to Bermuda. Parties interested in Canadas approve of Durham's course. W. W. Baldwin to Durham. A.L.S. A letter of 43 foolscap pages, dealing with the causes of the discontents in Upper Canada, and stating what he conceived to be the remedies. He wrote with reluctance as he wished to remain withdrawn from politics. He sets forth 21 distinct grievances from which the people suffer, or think they suffer: (1) Reservation of Crown Reserves; (2) Reserves for Clergy; (3) the modes of land granting; (4) exclusive claims of Church of England to Clergy Reserve; (5) contrast between progress in neighboring State and torpor in Upper Canada; (6) Canada Land Company monopoly; (7) Executive interference in elections; (8) jealousy of Executive against settlers from United States; (9) lack of control on part of representatives of people over Provincial Revenues; (10) management of School Lands and Education; (11) Jury laws; (12) retention of Sheriffs in spite of popular complaints; (13) character of many Justices of Peace; (14) late dissolution of Assembly, holding majority of Reformers; (15) lavish expenditure on public works; (16) neglect of roads; (17) rejection by Legislative Council of measures passed several times by Assembly; (18) disregard shown to addresses from Assembly; (19) encouragement given to Orange Societies; (20) appointment of unfit persons as Returning Officers; and (21) diminution of powers of Executive Council as described in Constitutional Act of 1791.

In a discussion of the many causes of discontent, the writer divides them into three general heads: (1) Those which historically and politically considered by the most prudent part of the Reformers, influenced and directed their conduct for many years in their search for remedies; (2) those more obvious grounds of dissatisfaction, which produced irritation among the masses; (3) those complaints whether real or imaginary which led a group of Whigs and Tories indiscriminately to condemn both Constitutional Reformers and rebels, and to fasten upon the Family Compact as the source of all the political evils of Upper Canada.

As an important instance of the first class, he dwells upon the course of legislation regarding the granting of land. The Act of 1791 makes provision for an aristocracy. Whether or not Parliament had the Seigniorial System in mind is immaterial. It seems to have been a wisely designed plan. Simcoe acting on the plan made some large grants of townships of from 40,000 to 60,000 acres on condition that the grantee should settle a certain number of people. Markham township was granted to Mr. Berczy, and 60 heads of families were to be settled in it. The grantee to be at the expense of removing the families and providing for their wants in food and implements for which he was to be reimbursed by the settlers. The usual lot was 200 acres, and the price was about 5 shillings an acre. Besides the township system, grants were made to individuals of from 200 to 1,200 acres. All promised well. Township proprietors answered in a measure to seigniors. They would sell lots, and build mills and roads, and act as guides to their settlers. Several townships had been granted, two at least had their quota of settlers, when Government rescinded orders as to township grants. In Markham, Berczy was ruined, after spending $60,000. Government explanation was that township system led to speculation; and that grantees did not fulfil engagements. Popular belief was that change was due to desire of land-granting officers to increase fees, as fees on patent of 60,000 acres were no more than on patent of 200 acres; also, that Executive Council were apprehensive of influence of territorial aristocracy. Thus was sown seed of enduring democracy, which was strengthened by act forced through by Government for taxation of waste lands of private owners. Canada Company with system of absentee landlords great evil to country. Government in spite of provision of Constitutional Act that lands should be granted in free and common socage, reserved one-seventh which it let out on lease. The evils of Crown and Clergy Reserves. Feeble effort of Assembly to correct evil in 1805-6. Protest against Clergy Reserves in Assembly. Narrative of course pursued. Augmentations of fees and of price of land bore hardly on poor emigrant. Selling land on credit very objectionable. United States tried and abandoned practice. Price of land in United States from 75 cents to $1.25 an acre while in Upper Canada it is from $2 to $4 an acre. General regulations in United States superior to those in Upper Canada. Waste of public revenues through scramble of members to get appropriations for own constituencies, which led to log rolling bargains among them. Result is that province is sinking into debt, while primary needs such as roads and schools are disregarded. War losses, Welland and other canals, and harbours, carried through legislature by members ruining province. Legislative Council fails in its duty as check on members' inconsiderate votes. With a responsible Executive having influence in Assembly, such a scramble could not take place. Government interference in last election leading cause of insurrection. Desirability of ballot. Successful attempts of Government to secure favorable assembly. As to complaints against Family Compact, Reformers did not in general object to it, but to its measures. It was but recently that a party was formed specifically to oppose Family Compact. Reformers could not consistently and did not find fault with it, while majority of Assembly supported its views. They did not ask their dismissal until Assembly voted no confidence in Executive and stopped supplies. High hopes of Reformers founded on appointment of Dunn, Rolph and R. Baldwin, dashed by discovery that no change of measures could be effected. Resentment caused by dismissal of first popular Executive Council. Contrast between this and practice in England brought to people's attention. His own suggestions to Durham are: (1) Introduction of English principle of responsible executive; (2) Legislative Council to be left as it is, with a few more popular men in it; though there is much to be said for elective principle as applied to Council; (3) prevention of interference of Judiciary in elections; (4) Elections to be protected from undue influence. Expression of gratitude for clemency shown to rebels in Lower Canada, and of hope that example may be followed in Upper Canada. p. 1

Arthur's helplessness in hands of Family Compact. R. Baldwin, who could do more to allay discontent than any other man or body of men, will not again push himself forward. British settlers live in great alarm. Habitants talk of incursion, when they will burn and plunder and destroy before troops can come up. Large numbers cross the border to place themselves at disposal of Dr. Coté. An Irishman living in neighborhood declared that "you would suppose the whole of Lower Canada had gone over." That large numbers go over is amply confirmed. Everybody concurs in representing the spirit of the people as worse than in previous autumn. Derbshire to Buller. A.L.S. Continuing his account. Was in Rouse's Point, a place admirably situated for communications with both Canada and United States. Activities there indicate existence of conspiracy of wide scope. At Plattsburg he found but few refugees. (Derbshire letters—separately bound.) p. 111 Plattsburg, August 27.

Derbshire to Buller. A.L.S. Does not wish to be taken for alarmist. Coté and other refugees may be merely deluding themselves or may wish to delude Americans with idea of their importance. The purpose of the letter is to arouse Durham from the state of discouragement and apathy, into which he had sunk on receipt of the despatch of August 18, announcing the disallowance of the Ordinance of June 28. The writer points out that, though the action of the Government is a serious embarrassment to Durham in the prosecution of his plans, it is in reality nothing but what Durham should have anticipated from the false friends and envenomed enemies, whom he parted from in England. He urges Durham to go on as if nothing had happened, and continue to make use of the large powers with which he was entrusted. His failure to do this will darken the situation in Canada, and cost him his reputation. p. 134

Regret that plan proposed by Russell of calling a constituent assembly for the purpose of framing constitution is abandoned. Those whom Durham will have opportunity of consulting unable to reflect opinions of people. Proclamation of June 29 inspired great confidence among all classes. Experience of Great Britain and United States proves superiority of united legislatures. Executive Council discredited by action of Head, as illustrated by the measure adopted by that body with respect to specie payments. Legislative Council does not possess confidence of country. Executive Council should be composed of persons from the several parts of province. Legislative Council should also be representative of all sections. While union of Upper and Lower Canada would be good, a legislative union of all the provinces would be much better. Desirability of calling a constituent assembly to frame a constitution. Canadians will never be satisfied until Canada is a more desirable place of residence than United States. proceeds of the sale of these lands or the Casual and Territorial Revenue is at disposition of legislature; so far as any public purpose is concerned the money has been wasted. A consequence is the lack of capital which makes it necessary to suspend all public works. General distrust of government at root of all provincial troubles. Comparison of progress in adjoining States with backwardness in Canada, although latter has advantages not enjoyed by former. Owing to lack of central governing authority the transportation system is crippled by different depths of canals—Welland canal 8 feet, Grenville and Rideau canals 5 feet and Lachine 4 feet. Consequently the American trade, which formerly moved up and down the St. Lawrence is lost through the construction of the Erie canal. Disadvantage of farmers owing to uncertainty of legislation, over which they have no control. Admission of Canadian farm products into Great Britain on same terms as Irish products would be of enormous benefit to both Great Britain and Canada. Necessity of placing revenue and commerce of Canada under Provincial Legislature. Let the union be a legislative one, the experience of United States and of Great Britain shows inexpediency of retaining local legislatures. Action of local government in establishing the rectories universally regarded as something like breach of faith. The misuse of the appropriation of land for education. Habit of corporations and individuals, who cannot succeed in getting their wishes satisfied by local legislature, of invoking assistance of Home Government. p. 274

J. Mittleberger to Durham. A.L.S. On grievances of Upper Canada. The chief of these is the Clergy Reserves. Importance of early settlement of this question. Though a member of Church of England, he is persuaded that it is essential that Clergy Reserves funds should be placed at disposal of Legislature, either to be devoted to general purposes, or to be distributed among all denominations on a plan which he suggests. Legislative Council might be reformed by including in it a certain number of members selected by the House of Assembly. Custom's Tariff should be revised; tea, to be admitted on payment of duty, instead of being prohibited; there should be reciprocity in exchange of farm products. These are now admitted into Canada duty-free. He has had assurances that U.S. would agree to reciprocity if they were approached on subject. Seaport is necessary. To that end he would divide Lower Canada, giving western part to Upper Canada, and eastern part to New Brunswick and preserving Quebec as Military Post. J. F. Berford to Durham. A.L.S. His personal grievances. Affairs of province. Alarm throughout province at knowledge of Durham's departure. Spirit of faction rife. In presence of impending invasion, the ruling class indulge in idle threats, and pursue course that is irritating body of people into acts of insubordination. As immediate measure he would unit St. George's, St. Andrew's, Orange and other societies under some such name as British Imperial Society, open to all good citizens. Suppress the word "Orange" forever. The militia should be enrolled, with precautions against admission of disaffected. All magistrates should be enjoined by Proclamation to gain confidence of people in Government. All notoriously unpopular officials should be removed from office, those whose unpopularity is not imputable to ill intentions to be pensioned. An adequate number of regular soldiers should be maintained in country. It is important to have a commission of enquiry appointed by Imperial Parliament, sent out to Canada to take evidence and report their findings to Imperial Parliament. Rules which should govern enquiry. Origin of all political ills in Upper Canada is Family Compact, who block every avenue to ear of Governor. Enquiry should include religious situation, Land Granting department, and, above all, Executive Government. p. 449

W. Morris to Durham. A.L.S. Showing that the Clergy Reserves question is much larger than the mere payment of a few clergymen of one denomination; that it lends support to the attempt at domination on the part of members of the Church of England, which is felt and bitterly resented, in the exclusive control by members of that body in the University and Upper Canada College, and in preferences to members of that Church at the expense of those of other denominations, in the distributing of offices, and the allotment of land to settlers. The attachment of Canadians generally to the Crown is proven by their repelling the attacks of invading armies, and in enduring the indignities put upon them by a privileged class within the province. He makes the following suggestions for the restoration of contentment and tranquillity: Endow Church of England, Church of Scotland, Methodists and other Protestant communities, from Clergy Reserves fund; confer no exclusive civil or ecclesiastical privileges on any denomination. Give equal rights to the Scotch in University and Upper Canada College. These institutions were endowed by the misappropriation of 291,000 acres of land, which were designed by the Legislature in 1797 for endowment of Grammar Schools throughout province. Encourage immigration by low price of lands and the erection of mills. Most of latter are in hands of Americans who are disseminating views antagonistic to Empire. Abolish system of sale of lands to immigrants on credit. Bring out some thousands of Highlanders to serve as Fencibles for 2 or 3 years, granting them land as compensation. Infuse new blood into Executive Council. Remove office holders and clergymen from Legislative Council. Deal gently with main features of constitution. Unite the two Canadas, but do not risk confederation of all the provinces. p. 551

R. J. A. to Buller. Copy. Proposing a scheme of government. In Upper Canada, cordial support will be given to any government acting with energy, honesty and justice. The Reformers or opponents of Family Compact much more dependable as supporters of British connection than Family Compact. St. Lawrence canals, which are work of Compact, tend to throw Canadian trade towards United States; Rideau Canal true route between Upper Canada and Montreal. List of subscriptions to Welland Canal shows how little it was supported by Family Compact. “The party of the Compact is anti-British and is to be depended on only so long as the scheme of government ensures their exclusive influence and the exclusive promotion of their individual interests.” Draws attention to disrespect shown in Legislative Council to despatch of Colonial Secretary. Several other instances of disloyalty cited. Coming to the scheme he suggests: (1) Legislative union of two provinces; (2) Creation of 5 minor executives responsible to general executive, but applying its powers to administration of their respective districts; (3) confiding the checking of local expenditures to bodies appointed for that purpose; (4) French Canadians within certain geographical limits to enjoy their own laws, language and religion; (5) prevent recurrence of mischiefs resulting Grievances complained of by people of Upper Canada: (1) Family Compact; (2) Court of Requests from which there is no appeal; (3) Land Granting department which holds land at too high prices, and so drives immigrants to United States. From 6 years' residence he lays troubles to American settlers, many of whom do not take oath of allegiance; American Wesleyan preachers; incitements to litigation by members of bar; wretched system of education, many American teachers and books being employed. Honorable conduct of members of Church of England noted, particularly in Niagara district. p. 585 (1838)

Is of opinion that French Canadians will never drop antipathy to Great Britain, and are therefore unfit to legislate for general welfare of country. They may every project likely to facilitate enterprise of Upper Canada. In order to counteract this attitude he suggests: (1) Annex to New Brunswick all territory on Eastern shore of St. Lawrence, north of St. Francis; (2) annex to Upper Canada the settlements south of St. Francis with district west of Trois Rivières, capital of Upper Canada to be Kingston; (3) leave White Hart Court, Lombard St., January 7.

Two judgeships at this time vacant. Cannot believe discussion in Lords will have influence. Affair occurred 17 years before, and he has endeavoured ever since to make every reparation in his power. He has enjoyed fullest confidence of people among whom he lived in India for 15 years. In 1827, was appointed Judge Advocate in Bengal, and for special services was given large sum in addition to salary. When he retired the Indian Council passed highly complimentary resolution. Conflict of interest between the latter, who aim at development of resources, and merchants, who desire to retain business of supplying colony in their own hands. Petition of Chamber

Sir J. W. Gordon to Lord———. Copy in Durham's hand. Has recently seen Durham. Notes silence of opponents, awaiting Durham's statement. Convinced of rectitude of his conduct respecting Turton, and of dilemma of Government in face of facts. The three main points in case are: Ordinance, Proclamation, return to England. Understands Government approved of Ordinance. Pusillanimous conduct of ministry in abandoning Durham. Impossibility of his remaining, hence necessity of Proclamation. The return fully justified by Colborne's letter. p. 64

Confidential Memorandum on the "Case of Lord Durham." (1839) The writer considers the three material points involved, viz: The Ordinance; the Proclamation; and the return to England. After a review of the papers bearing on each, he concludes that Durham was justified in his actions on all three points. (This is evidently the work of Sir J. W. Gordon, as it is scarcely more than an elaboration of his letter of January 18, a copy of which has been preserved in Durham's own hand.) p. 68

Confidential Memorandum by Sir J. W. Gordon as to course, which Durham should take when papers are on table. Mere silence, in confidence that papers would fully justify him not sufficient: it would seem to indicate desire to spare ministers and so anger Opposition; it would also be inconsistent with duty to Canadian. As soon as papers are tabled, he should submit his conduct to consideration of House, referring their Lordships to the papers which show success of his measures, and the interruption in his work by action of Government, and leave it to Government to offer their explanation. Memo, unsigned but in Buller's hand, on advantages of Legislative over Federal union. Setting aside the general advantage of efficiency and economy of one government as compared with several, these are: that it would keep Lower Canada quiet and make it English as speedily as possible; federal union would recognize French Canadianism and maintain its peculiarities and keep the Canadians French, "which is precisely what you do not want." Under Federal system French Canadians could not be kept in order except by arbitrary government to which there are insuperable objections. Howick's plan of a commission to reform laws of French Canada would not be as effective as if the changes were made by the Legislature.

Protest entered by him is signed by 6 others besides himself, all resident in distant parts of province. Two Toronto members—Macaulay and Dunn—favor union, but were not present when vote was taken, so that of those in city 9 were for union and 10 against. The majority was, with one exception, composed of residents of Toronto and neighborhood. It is supposed they were moved by fear of removal of capital. Report has just reached Canada and is in hands of printer. Concurs in view respecting undue influence of certain members of Government, particularly Archdeacon Strachan. p. 262

Proceedings in Council with reference to certain resolutions of the Assembly on the union of the two provinces. It was moved and seconded that an address to the Queen be prepared, praying for the union of the provinces on such principles as would secure to all inhabitants of both provinces their religion, property and other privileges; that the electoral divisions of Lower Canada be so rearranged as to give inhabitants of British origin, the representation their numbers entitle them to; and that seat of government be fixed within limits of present Upper Canada. This was defeated by amendment declaring that House adhered to terms of their report and address of February 13 and 28, 1838. W. C. Keele to Durham. L.S. His grievance: came to Upper Canada in 1832 as qualified attorney in England, was refused leave to practice for some years; when admitted it was only as attorney, not as barrister. Government party consistently opposed his application, his support came from those since denounced as traitors. Believes rebels were not opposed to government, but to usurpation of dominant party. John Prince, who came out as English attorney, was admitted to practice, but the enabling act was passed, as it says, in consideration of his distinguished services. Strongly recommends encouragement of British emigrant to preserve British character of the country. Family Compact occasion of most of disloyalty in province. As regards Council, he would make democracy check itself by having the Council elective, though he sees difficulties due to heterogeneous character of population. What is required in Council is men of influence and wealth, with permanent stake in country. Legal profession more than any other furnishes material from which to draw. Here you have ability, permanent income, and attachment by terms of profession to province. Chief difficulty to settlement will be found in prejudices of British portion of population. SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

it is a summary, which includes some matter not in the original. As this summary has many marginal comments made by Durham, it is the paper from which the following digest is made).

The object in view of the writer is the formation of a government for the British North American colonies, which will provide for the supremacy of the Mother Country as well as protect the common interests of all the colonies, present and future. The plan contemplates the immediate union of Upper and Lower Canada, and subsequently, at their option, the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland.

It is proposed to give (1) a Special Government for each province, which will have full control of its local affairs; (2) a General Government which will control all matters common to all or to two or more of the provinces; (3) a governor, appointed by the Crown, for each local government and for the General Government, with veto upon all legislative acts.

Provincial Government. Administration to consist of Governor and Executive Council. The latter to consist of not less than 5 members. The salaries of Governor and Executive Council to be fixed by legislature, and to be subject to revision every 6 years. Legislature to consist of Governor, Executive Council and Assembly. The function of the Executive Council to be to revise or amend, but not absolutely reject, all bills sent up from the Assembly. The Assembly to have full control of Provincial Revenue, subject to Civil List being open to revision every 6 years. Elections to be triennial at fixed dates, and Legislature to assemble at fixed date every year. Provincial Legislatures shall possess all powers not expressly bestowed on General Government, and shall not be under control of latter.

Judiciary. Judges to have fixed salaries, unchangeable within ten year periods; to retire at certain age, but eligible for reappointment by Assembly on message from Governor. To be removable on address, if concurred in by Governor. Judges and other Provincial Officers to be subject to impeachment by Local Assembly before General Assembly. Local and Circuit Courts to be established, the judges to be appointed either by inhabitants of district or by Crown, and be removable on petition of majority in district, where such judges function. General Government—to consist of Governor General appointed by Crown; Executive Council; Legislative Body and Judiciary.

Governor General and Executive Council to have powers within the larger sphere, identical with those of the Governor and Executive Council of each of the provinces. The General Legislative Assembly to consist of ten members from each province elected by the Assemblies. Its functions to be the same as those of the Provincial Assemblies, with the additional duty of sitting as a Court of Impeachment of Provincial Officers and Judges on the prosecution of the Provincial Assemblies.

General Government is not to possess any power not expressly conferred on it. It should have control of Militia; Currency and Banking; Internal and External Commerce; Boundary questions, whether Inter-Provincial or International; Customs duties; Bankruptcy and Insolvency; Transportation system whether Inter-Provincial or International; Post Office; Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction; administration of Crown Lands, so far as Crown would consent.

General Judiciary to consist of Supreme Court of (say) four judges, and such other Courts as would be found requisite. The functions of Supreme Court to be to try disputes between provinces; conflicts of right between General and Provincial Government; appeals from provinces and several inferior Courts; piracy; treason; offences against laws or matters made subject to General Government. The Judges would also assist for matters of law in Impeachments before General Assembly.

Durham criticized the plan freely. He objected—to abolition of Legislative Councils; to the limitation of the Executive Council to five, and to the final appointment of the members by Governor; to fixed periods for election and assembling of Legislatures; to ex officio members, although this is not specifically made part of the plan; to triennial parliaments, considering the existing period too short. Points to be carefully considered in this part of the plan were the devolution of control of whole revenue on Assemblies, and the distribution of powers and duties between the Provincial and General Legislatures. As to Judiciary, he considered judges' salaries should be permanent during term of office, and objected entirely to proposal of reappointment of judges, whose ages called for retirement. He disliked the scheme for impeachment preferring Legislative Council as Court, and saw no reason for circuit judges. All judges should, in his opinion, be appointed by Crown. As regards the Assembly of the General Government, he was convinced that the plan of election by Provincial Government was contrary to interests of people. The number of members should be from 45 to 60. Montreal, Quebec and Halifax should be congressional districts, returning two members each. Boundary questions are best determined by Queen and Privy Council. Post Office should be regulated throughout Empire by Parliament. Crown Lands—he doubts whether Crown would part with control over them. The General Judiciary would, he thought, consist of one judge, and he doubted the necessity for any other courts in this connection. He would not leave to Supreme Court settlement of disputes between provinces, as they could be best settled by joint Legislature. Appeals from provinces should be heard by Legislative Council of Central Government with final recourse to Privy Council. Treason should be tried in province where it is alleged to have occurred.

A Bill for uniting the Legislatures of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada and for making more efficient provision for their Civil Government.

There is nothing in the document to indicate by whom it was drawn. It contains several peculiar provisions of which the principal are the following:—

The Legislative Council was to consist of the members of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, and of the Special Council of Lower Canada, with such others as might be appointed. Regarding Assembly, the electoral arrangements as regards the number of members and their constituencies were to be unchanged. Lower Canada was to have a number of members equal to that in Upper Canada. Governor was to fix electoral districts, 200 voters to be the minimum in each. There were a variety of property qualifications for electors.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

In constituencies returning 2 members, where there were as many as 200 electors qualifying on lands held by seigniorial tenure, and 200 qualifying on lands held under free and common soccage, each group should elect one member. In an accompanying schedule it was reckoned that under this plan, British and French Canadians would each have 31 members. But in the next section of the bill, provision was made for exceptional treatment of the constituencies of the District of Montreal, on account of its having been, in a particular sense, the scene of the rebellion. Governor was given power to suspend the issue of a writ into any of the constituencies of this District, as he saw fit, and to issue, in substitution therefor, a writ into any other District. According to the schedule mentioned, the result would be the return of 41 British and 21 French Canadian members.

Provision was made for the interfusion of each branch of Government and legislature by members of the other branches. Executive Council was to include, among other members, two each from Legislative Council and Assembly. In Assembly there were to be two members of Executive Council, and two from Legislative Council. For certain periods, measures relating exclusively to Upper Canada were subject to veto of Upper Canada members. p. 726

A MINUTE

ON THE STATE OF AFFAIRS IN LOWER CANADA IN NOVEMBER 1836*Secret*

Reference to former Minute.

On the 30th of April last, Lord Glenelg transmitted to each of his colleagues a printed volume, containing a rapid historical précis of the Political Affairs of Lower Canada, from the conquest of the Canadian Provinces down to that period. To this précis was subjoined an Appendix of illustrative documents. It may be fit to notice, incidentally, that as the greater part of that volume was not printed for the purpose, but was put together by the sacrifice of numerous copies of Parliamentary and other Returns from which they were detached, so it is scarcely practicable now to supply any additional copies. It is, however, assumed throughout the following pages, that the volume in question has been retained, and can be referred to by those for whose use it was so put together.

the present
Minute.

On this occasion it is proposed to continue the narrative of the Affairs of Lower Canada from the commencement of the existing Administration down to the present time; explaining in their proper place the occurrences in some of the adjacent British Provinces which have exercised, and must still exert, a powerful influence over the policy of His Majesty's Government towards Lower Canada. In the conclusion will be stated the questions upon which a final decision must be taken before the meeting of Parliament. Much of this information has already been communicated to those for whose use this Paper is drawn up, but it seems indispensable to a correct understanding of the whole case, to bring together in one connected view the substance and general effect of the various detached papers which have been circulated during the last eighteen months.

The Instructions to the Governor and Commissioners in Lower Canada—their design
effect.

In the volume to which reference has already been made, will be found a Copy of the Instructions addressed to the Earl of Gosford on his assumption of the Government of Lower Canada, and of the Instructions which were addressed to his Lordship, to Sir Charles Grey, and to Sir George Gipps, his colleagues in the Commission of Inquiry. They are, therefore, not reprinted in this place. It may be sufficient to notice, very generally, that the Commissioners were instructed to investigate every complaint which had been preferred by the House of Assembly either to Parliament, or to the King, excepting such as Lord Gosford in his separate capacity of Governor was instructed to redress immediately. The range of inquiry was, indeed, abundantly large; nor were there wanting, in the summer of 1835, motives which clearly pointed out the benefit of thus raising a barrier against the instances which might be anticipated from various quarters for immediate and decisive action. Among the subjects of inquiry incomparably the most important were, first, on what terms the proposed cession of the Hereditary Revenues of the Crown should be made; secondly, under what system of management the settlement of the vast territories yet remaining in their wild state should be placed; and thirdly, whether any change could properly and safely be made in the constitution of the Legislative Council.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

This last topic, though noticed in the instructions as open to debate, was yet treated as involving one of those great fundamental principles which are not to be thrown open to discussion, except in deference to extreme necessity, nor even then without the strongest protest against being supposed to countenance the changes of which the abstract possibility has been admitted, for the purposes of the immediate argument.

It was on the 23rd of August, 1835, that, in discharge of these instructions, Lord Gosford and his colleagues reached Quebec. If any reliance can be placed upon such indications of public feeling as could be gathered during the non-session of the Local Legislature, there was sufficient ground for the inference that the Commissioners would receive, if not a cordial, at least a respectful welcome from the Assembly, and that the prospects of conciliation were more bright and promising than at any period since the commencement of these controversies.

The Legislature met on the 27th October, 1835. There is reason to believe, although the fact be not susceptible of direct proof, that if the advice of M. Papineau had prevailed with his friends, this meeting would never have taken place. It is a fact, to which more recent occurrences have given peculiar importance, that the leader of the French party has, for the last three or four years, appeared to regard as the most effective weapon of hostility to the British Government, an actual abdication on the part of the Assembly of their functions, and the consequent inability of the collective Legislature to act. M. Papineau has probably estimated aright the effect which would be produced on the minds of his fellow-countrymen, by giving something of a dramatic effect to the proceedings of his partisans, and by enabling himself to speak of deserted halls, and of legislators retiring in despair—palpable images, which are of course chosen from their aptitude to inflame the minds of an illiterate people. Such was his policy in the months of March and October last, and such, but for an unwonted resistance on the part of some of his friends, it would have been in October 1835.

On meeting the Legislature, Lord Gosford addressed a speech to them, in which he stated at very great length the substance of the instructions of which he and his colleagues were the bearers; but he did not produce them in extenso. The Governor's vindication of this course of proceedings will be found in his Dispatch of the 19th of February last. It is not necessary to discuss in this place the wisdom of the course thus pursued. It might, perhaps, have been more judicious to have expressly directed Lord Gosford to divulge every word of his instructions on his first meeting with the Legislature; a course which was not taken only from the seeming impolicy of fettering too strictly the discretion of an agent in whom so much confidence was to be reposed. In preferring to convey to the Assembly rather a copious abridgement than the text of his instructions, Lord Gosford was influenced by the considerations which he has explained. It must, however, be added that he seems to have been also guided, though unconsciously, by a solicitude to win the suffrages of all parties by compromise, and by avoiding whatever might be offensive to either. It need scarcely be added that the attempt proved equally offensive to both.

the Council
bly.

The Council returned an answer, which was an echo of the Governor's speech. The answer of the Assembly was conceived in a different manner. In terms it was courteous and respectful; and, while reasserting their claims to the absolute control of the whole Revenue, and to a change in the constitution of the Legislative Council, the Assembly studiously avoided giving any pledge to provide for the arrears due to the public officers, and omitted altogether to notice that part of the Governor's speech which related to the Commission of Inquiry. The silence of the House on this topic was privately explained to Lord Gosford as designed to avoid the recognition of a body, the functions of which might seem to encroach upon those of the Local Legislature.

proceedings of the Session.

It would answer no good purpose to enter upon a very minute review of the proceedings of the Assembly in the Session which ensued; nor, indeed, are the necessary materials for that purpose to be found in this country, as the Journals of the House, for the year, have not yet arrived. It may be sufficient to say that the debates and proceedings of the House seem to have been marked by the violence and tediousness which have always characterized them, but which, during the last year, were encouraged by M. Papineau and his adherents, as much from policy as from temperament and habit. His and their measures have ever been regulated, to a great extent, by the counsels of those in whom their confidence is reposed in this country, and by the tone of the deliberations in Parliament respecting Canadian affairs. The Session of the Assembly was therefore protracted, and the question of granting Supplies postponed, first, until Lord Gosford's speech could be transmitted to Mr. Roebuck, and his advice obtained, and then until it could be ascertained what effect would be produced on the House of Commons by the motions and speeches for which that gentleman seems to have undertaken.

Contingent
allowed.

No delay, however, occurred on the part of the House, in applying for money for their own contingent expenses—a term of convenient ambiguity and latitude, within which were comprised their payments to Mr. Roebuck, and probably other heads of expenditure which ought to have been the subject of a general Appropriation Act. Lord Gosford, in obedience to his instructions, declared that he “cheerfully” acceded to the application; a phrase, for the use of which he was much censured by the English party, although he certainly was not responsible for the selection of it.

Report of
Supplies.

It was not until the 5th January last that the Committee, to which that part of the Governor's speech which related to the expenses of the Local Government had been referred, made their Report to the House. Certain resolutions on the subject were then proposed by M. Morin. These resolutions repeated, in the most broad and unequivocal terms, the doctrine, that the appropriation of the whole Provincial Revenue belonged of right to the House. It recommended the payment of such of the arrears as the House might consider to have been incurred consistently with those financial principles to the maintenance of which they were pledged; and to the same extent, but no further, the Committee advised that the advances made from the Military Chest should be reimbursed.

Promising
Affairs in the Assembly in February
1836.

It is evident that, during the interval which had elapsed since Lord Gosford's arrival in the Province, a very considerable impression had been made upon the minds of a large part of the Assembly favourable to conciliation. The dominion of M. Papineau in that House had hitherto been absolute and unassailed; but on the 25th of January a very remarkable proof was given that his authority was in danger, and that many of his adherents had dared to think and act for themselves. The question in debate was, whether the Report of the Committee on Public Accounts should then be taken into consideration, or whether it should be postponed for a call of the House. Two divisions took place: on the first the majority was 29, and the minority 28; on the second, the minority continuing the same, the majority was increased to 31. These divisions were in reality a triumph, and appeared to give the earnest of a victory even on the approaching call; because, although the absentees were generally of the party of M. Papineau, yet there was every reason to think that, coming together with so unexpected and so powerful a minority to encounter, they would abstain from all extreme and violent courses. The Assembly met according to the resolution of the majority of the House on the 11th of February, when the question of granting the Supplies was again postponed to the 15th. A new train then took fire, by which the promising aspect of affairs in Lower Canada was overcast, and the hopes which till then Lord Gosford had cherished, were subverted.

On the arrival of Sir F. Head in Upper Canada, to assume the Government of that Province, he found the Local Legislature in session. His instructions embraced all the grievances peculiar to the Upper Province; but, as the two questions which respected the control of the Revenue and the constitution of the Legislative Council were common to both, so much of the Instructions of the Lower Canadian Commissioners as related to those topics were subjoined to Sir F. Head's instructions, as an Appendix. He had been directed to communicate to the Local Legislature the substance of those instructions. He, however, without a moment's delay, and without any previous communication with Lord Gosford, sent to both Houses complete literal copies of Lord Glenelg's Despatches to himself, including the quotations from the Instructions to the Commissioners. This was done with the distinct perception that it would probably much embarrass Lord Gosford. But Sir F. Head's opinion was, that there was no safety except in the most unreserved and candid dealing, and he thought it better to incur every risk in either Province which that system might involve, than to submit to the evils which he regarded as inseparable from a less open mode of proceeding.

It would be to no purpose to discuss the wisdom of this opinion, or the propriety of the measure in defence of which it was alleged. It may not, however, be unimportant to notice that this collision of judgment and of conduct between the two Governors could not have been anticipated before Sir F. Head's departure, because at that time it was not known what course had been pursued by Lord Gosford. It was, however, certain that Sir F. Head, on his arrival at Toronto, would acquire that information, and it was assumed that he would obey his instructions, by acting in concert and in correspondence with the Governor of the Lower Province.

The effect of Sir F. Head's publication of the extracts from the Commissioners' Instructions was, however, to prop the declining influence of M. Papineau, and to supply him with the means of reclaiming the partisans who had begun to desert his standard.

The Speaker of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada made an official communication of the extracts to M. Papineau, as Speaker of the Lower Canadian House. On collating this part of the text of the Commissioners' instructions with the abridgment contained in

Lord Gosford's speech, it was vehemently declared that the epitome was unfaithful; that it had been drawn up with the intention of misleading the Assembly; and that no faith could be reposed in the integrity of the Local Government, or in the intentions of the Government in this country. These suggestions were probably made not without some belief in their truth by the authors of them, and were received with implicit credit by the numerous body of their ignorant followers and dependents. The question of voting Supplies was adjourned. The House resolved itself into a committee on the state of the Province, and, after a protracted debate, they reported on the 26th of February two Resolutions and an Address to the King. By those Resolutions passing over in silence the subject of Arrears, the Committee determined to vote Supplies for six months only, and to pass a Supply Bill in which no mention should be made of the particular funds to be appropriated to this service. Thus the question of their right to dispose of the Territorial Revenue would be pretermitted for the moment; but they added a protest that this should not be drawn into a precedent.

the House.

Upon the bringing up of this Report an amendment was moved, of which the effect was to pledge the House to pay the Arrears, and to grant the Supplies in advance, not for six months, but for twelve months. In favour of the amendment the votes were 27; against it, 40. The original resolutions were then adopted; the minority being 7, and the majority 55.

Bill of Supply for half a year rejected by the Council.
Prorogation.

A Bill, founded on these resolutions, passed the Assembly on the 3d of March, but was rejected by the Legislative Council on the 9th of that month.

The Assembly also adopted the Address to the King; and on the 7th of March it was presented to Lord Gosford. The great body of the members then left Quebec, so as to render any further meetings of the Legislature impracticable. Accordingly, on the 21st of March, Lord Gosford closed the Session by a prorogation.

Proroguing
Speech.

In his proroguing speech the Governor intimated his intention of applying the Territorial Revenue, as far as it would extend, in payment of the claims of the Civil officers. In this respect his Lordship acted in strict conformity to the instructions which he had received for his guidance in any such contingency.

Substance of
to the King.

In order to convey an accurate view of the results of this Session, it will be convenient here to state the substance of the Address to the Crown, which was the last act of the Assembly. That Address commenced by repeating the adherence of the Assembly to all their previous demands; alluded to the feelings of confidence which had been produced in their minds by Lord Gosford's speech at the opening of the Session, and expressed their disappointment at discovering, from the Extracts of the Commissioners' Instructions, which had been published, that "the researches authorized by Your Majesty, "for the purpose of ascertaining the means of doing justice to your "Canadian subjects, were, on several of the most essential points, "limited by preconceived opinions and anticipated decisions." It reiterated at considerable length the demand that the Legislative Council should be made elective,—controverting the arguments on this subject contained in the Instructions to the Commissioners. It demanded that the Executive Council should be rendered a responsible body; that the Canada Trade and Tenures Acts, and also the Act for the establishment of the British American Land Company, should be forthwith repealed. It complained of the system under which the Public Lands had been disposed of; asserted that they were to be considered, not as the property of the Crown, but as belonging to the State, but explained that the control which the Assembly desired to obtain over them, consisted, not in assuming the administration, but in obtaining a recognition of the right of the House to legislate on the subject. His Majesty's attention was solicited to the coincidence of feeling on public matters between the Upper and Lower Province, and the unqualified surrender of the whole of the Casual and Territorial Revenue was demanded as the only means of satisfying the public mind. The Address then proceeded to express the willingness of the Assembly to receive and consider with attention any communication which might be made to them on that subject by His Majesty's commands; but the House declined to pledge themselves to maintain the charges at present defrayed from the Crown Revenue. It concluded by stating that, in order to allow a sufficient opportunity for the concession of the Assembly's demands, they had granted supplies for six months, and trusted that they would be called together for their next Session at an early period.

The tone of this Address, and, indeed, all the proceedings of the Session, appear to have been to no inconsiderable degree suggested by the confidence which M. Papineau and his adherents felt in the sympathy and support of the Assemblies of the adjacent British Provinces. So strong was this conviction that, before the close of the Session, M. Papineau wrote officially to the Speaker of those Assemblies, commenting in terms of extreme violence on Lord Glenelg's Instructions of the 17th of July 1835, and calling on those bodies to co-operate with the Assembly of Lower Canada in procuring a better system of government.

The reliance placed on the support of the other Provinces. M. Papineau's circular letter.

Pending these proceedings in the Legislature the Commissioners had been engaged in pursuing the inquiries which they had been instructed to institute. Their other Reports will be subsequently noticed. In this place it will be most convenient to advert to their Report upon the financial difficulties of the Province as they appeared at the close of the Session of 1836. Their report on that subject bears date on the 13th of March last; that is, within four days after the rejection by the Council of the Bill of Supply for six months. The following is a summary of the contents of that document:—

Report of the Commissioners on the state of Financial Affairs at the end of the Session.

After describing the distress entailed on the Civil Officers by the refusal of the Supplies, and expressing their opinion of the unjustifiable nature of such an attempt to extort, from the embarrassments of the Executive Government, organic changes in the constitution which that Government had not even the power to effect, the Commissioners proceeded to consider the alternatives which remain open to His Majesty's Government. These are,—

Substance of that Report.

- 1st. A compliance with the demands of the Assembly.
- 2nd. A Legislative Union of the two Provinces.
- 3rd. The erection, in Lower Canada, of a number of Districts or Cantons with Municipal Institutions and Charters for the management of their internal affairs, from each of which a certain number of Members should be returned to the Assembly.
- 4th. An amendment or suspension of the Act 1 & 2 Wm. IV., c. 23, by which the appropriation of the Duties levied under the 14 Geo. III., c. 88, was given up to the Assembly.

The same.

After discussing, in a few words, and dismissing the first three propositions, the Commissioners concurred in recommending the last as the only course open to the Government. They were not, however, unanimous in their reasoning on the subject, nor in their anticipation of the consequences, although they appear to have been alive to the hazardous nature of the measure. The following are the terms in which the question is treated in the joint Report:—

The same.

“So great, indeed, will be the powers remaining to the Assembly, that doubts have been suggested whether the alteration of the “1 & 2 Wm. IV., c. 23, though it may abate the immediate difficulties “of the Province, will be of any permanent avail. In this point of “view it is observed, that the Assembly may continue its war upon “the co-ordinate branches of the Legislature with more violence than “ever; that the resumption of the duties under the 14 Geo. III., c. 88, “will only restore the Government to the same position in which it “maintained an unsuccessful conflict with the Assembly in former “years; and, therefore, that it would be better at once to advance a “step further, and suspend the Constitutional Act of 1791 for a “limited number of years.

The same.

“We know not whether we may venture to expect it, but it is “proper to hope, that the reasoning may be mistaken which assumes “that the Assembly will push to further extremities a desperate con- “test with the Imperial Power. By the measure under consideration, “it would for the first time learn that the mother country may exer- “cise another office besides that of yielding; and that when there “has been every recent mark of respect and concession on the one “hand, it may be prudent to meet it with some forbearance on the “other. If this should not be the issue, but, on the contrary, the “Assembly should drive the mother country to either renewed efforts “of control, or else the abandonment of every part of the Consti- “tution which the third branch of the Legislature may invade, it “will be time enough to determine upon the measures required by “such an emergency when their necessity shall be proved by the “event, and not upon its mere apprehension.”

Sir G.
Gipps's separate Minute.

In a separate Minute Sir G. Gipps has thus expressed his opinion of the measure:—

“The Assembly, even when deprived of the revenues of 14 Geo. “III., will retain its control over funds nearly twice as great as those “in the hands of the Executive; and, although the House may not “have power to dispose of them at its discretion, it will at any rate “be able to lock them up, and especially prevent the application of “them to any purpose favourable to the Government or to the “interests of the British party. It may also refuse to pass Bills “required by the commercial interest; such, for instance, as Bills “for the renewal of the charters of the Quebec and Montreal Banks, “both of which will expire in July, 1837. When I consider, there- “fore, the bitter hostility, or rather fury, with which the Assembly “will be animated against the British Government and against British “interests, the invectives which under the direction of its practised “leaders it will pour forth against England, the power it will possess “of spreading disaffection within the Province, and inviting inter- “ference from without, I am at a loss to imagine how the Govern- “ment can be carried on with advantage; and I cannot help fearing “that we shall ultimately be driven to abandon the country with all

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

"the shame of failure upon us, or to maintain it at a cost infinitely beyond its value.

"It may be said, on the other hand, that I have drawn an exaggerated picture of the difficulties which the Government will have to encounter; that these difficulties will be found to melt away under a firm, yet liberal and impartial Administration, or that a sense of patriotism, or even of self-interest, will lead parties to act in harmony, and this more especially should the sense of Parliament against their recent proceedings be unequivocally pronounced; all this may, I admit, (and sincerely do I hope it,) come to pass under a wise and firm Administration; but, nevertheless, I cannot but feel an apprehension that it will be otherwise, and, entertaining such a feeling, I think it right to express it."

On the arrival of the preceding Report in this country, the first remark suggested by it was that it altogether omitted to notice the effects of which the measures, if proposed, might be productive in Upper Canada and in New Brunswick. It may therefore be convenient, at this stage of the narrative, to pause, in order to exhibit as compendiously as possible what was the aspect of affairs in those Provinces at the time when Lord Glenelg received the Report, of which the preceding epitome has been made.

The silence of the Report respecting the adjacent Provinces.

In Upper Canada the Government party had, up to the year 1834, been generally able to command a majority in the House of Assembly; but a dissolution having taken place in the close of that year, the relative strength of the antagonist parties was reversed. Those who had been considered as the supporters of the Government, now, for the first time, found themselves in a considerable minority. The successive expulsions of Mr. Mackenzie from the preceding House of Assembly were forthwith expunged from the Journals. A Committee of Grievances was appointed, with Mr. Mackenzie as chairman, to whom were referred a mass of public documents, and by whom an inquiry was instituted into the whole administration of Public Affairs in the Province. After sitting for several weeks, and examining many witnesses, among whom were almost all the superior public functionaries, this Committee presented to the House a Report, to which was attached a voluminous Appendix, impugning, in almost every particular, the conduct of the Government, both in the Province and in the Mother Country; and this Report and Appendix were immediately ordered by the Assembly to be printed in great numbers, and in pamphlet form, for distribution in the Province and in the United States. The Report was not presented by the House to the Lieutenant-Governor; but, a printed copy of it having been forwarded by him to His Majesty's Government, immediate measures were taken for investigating and redressing all the abuses indicated in it. Sir F. Head was selected to carry these measures into execution, and, as has been already stated, arrived at Toronto in January last. Having found that the Executive Council, as then constituted, was inefficient, he summoned to it, on the 22d of February, three new members, Messrs. Dunn, Baldwin, and Rolph, gentlemen who had been heretofore distinguished as active members of the Liberal party.

State of Affairs in Upper Canada.

At the time these gentlemen accepted office, Sir F. Head was aware that at least two of them entertained peculiar opinions as to the duties of an Executive Councillor. This difficulty, however, was apparently obviated, and they were sworn in; but, within twelve days from their accession to the Council, an Address, signed by all the members, was presented to Sir F. Head, claiming, as the right of the Executive Council under the Constitutional Act, to be consulted on all the Affairs of the Province, stating that it was the general belief that they exercised this right; and praying, if the Lieutenant-Governor should consider their claim inadmissible, that they might be "allowed to disabuse the public from a misapprehension of the nature and extent of the duties confided to them." This Address, although not explicitly avowing that object, was understood by Sir F. Head as an attempt to introduce the principle of responsibility, on the part of the Executive Council, to the House of Assembly, in the same manner as the Ministry in England is responsible to the House of Commons. He accordingly exposed in a very detailed and argumentative answer the fallacy of such a system. Four of the members of the Council immediately disclaimed the doctrine, and offered to retract their assent to the Address; but, Sir F. Head having insisted that the Address should be withdrawn in as formal a manner as it was presented, the whole of the Executive Council resigned. The House of Assembly took up the Affair, and in a Message, the tone of which was very menacing, demanded to be put in possession of all the information on the subject.

Sir F. Head's contest with the Upper Canadian Assembly.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

Affairs in New Brunswick.

The intelligence of these events was received at the Colonial Office simultaneously with Lord Gosford's Dispatch, announcing the loss of the Supply Bill. About the same time, a Dispatch from the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick transmitted an Address to the King from the House of Assembly of that Province, inculpatory of the manner in which the Administration had been carried on; claiming the appropriation of all the Casual and Territorial Revenue levied within the Province, and soliciting the introduction of certain modifications in the Legislative and Executive Councils. It was also announced, that the Assembly of New Brunswick had deputed two of their Members to support the prayer of their Address in this country.

Decision of the Government on the Commissioners'
Report.

Such having been the general aspect of British North American affairs when the Report already mentioned reached this country, the Government determined not to act on its recommendations. It may, perhaps, serve to explain the grounds of this decision if the following extract from a Minute, communicated at that time by Lord Glenelg to his colleagues, be perused as a record of them. Whether all the Members of the Government concurred in all those objections it may not be necessary for the present to inquire. They are quoted here as having been drawn up at a moment when the whole subject was fresh in Lord Glenelg's recollection, and therefore as conveying his views with the greatest practicable accuracy. His Lordship's Minute on that occasion contained the following passages:—

Statement of Lord Glenelg's reasons in support of that decision.

"A measure thus doubtfully recommended, and of which even the advisers do not venture to predict the consequences, can be received by His Majesty's Government only with extreme distrust. Embracing in their view the whole aspect of British North American politics, it may probably appear to them that the difficulties of the question have been rather understated than exaggerated. The Reports whether joint or separate, scarcely allude to the effects which the measure will produce in the adjacent Provinces. Yet it is impossible to doubt what that effect will be. The temper of Upper Canada is scarcely less excited than that of the Lower Province. The cession of the Revenues of 1774 was made to them both at the same moment, and by the statute which it is proposed to repeal. If the Lower Canadians will resent that appeal as an immediate injury, the inhabitants of the Upper Province will not less strongly resent it as an implied and injurious menace. The principle will apply equally to both, though, for the moment, the effect might be confined to one. Throughout British North America it will be represented, perhaps with truth, but doubtless with plausibility and success, as a violation of the solemn pledges of 1778 and of 1791, and as a disregard of the principles laid down by the Canada Committee of 1828, and afterwards confirmed by Sir George Murray, by Lord Ripon, and by Lord Glenelg. The charge of broken faith will be echoed from every part of the North American continent. The proof will be short, simple, and intelligible; the refutation long and unavoidably obscure. If the popular leaders are disarmed of some financial authority, their moral influence will be increased in a tenfold proportion. But even the financial weapons of offence will not have been wrested from their hands. In years of tranquillity the Annual Expenditure of Lower Canada falls but little short of £180,000. Even after the repeal of the 1st and 2d Will. IV., it would yet be in the power of the Assembly to stop more than two-thirds of the whole Annual Supplies. It is true that the blow would be directed, not against the King's officers, but at their own constituents. They would suspend all public works; they would leave the roads, bridges, and canals without repair; the lighthouses would be shut up; the quarantine establishments would be abandoned; and all the parochial schools closed; the country would be placed under a kind of interdict. Public fury would be directed, not against M. Papineau and his friends as the immediate authors, but against the British Government as the promoters of these public calamities.

"There is, moreover, another objection to the measure of no slight importance. Hitherto the British Legislature has been no parties to the Canadian controversy. The House of Commons had even anxiously abstained from an engagement in it. The Committees of 1828 and of 1834 dissuaded any Parliamentary interference, and advised that the subject should be referred exclusively to the conduct of the Executive Government. This kind of neutrality of Parliament was dictated by much apparent wisdom. It has left open a resource to which resort might be had upon an extreme emergency. It has given to the contest an administrative, rather than a national, character. It leaves the door of hope open, and raises a barrier against those precipitate movements to which, in the excitement of local dissensions, men might otherwise be hurried. The reverence with which the House of Commons, especially in its reformed character, is even yet regarded in British North America, is a spell not to be broken, except at the bidding of inevitable necessity. To invoke the aid of Parliament in vain, would be to commit the Legislature to a strife from which, when once engaged in it, they could scarcely retreat at all, and could certainly not retreat, except with a complete triumph, or with signal disgrace. Any Minister who should apply to Parliament for support, would have given to the whole controversy a new, critical and irretrievable character, whatever might be the result of his application.

The same.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

The same.

"But the repeal of the Statute 1 and 2 Wm. IV. is not the only scheme suggested by the Commissioners: Sir George Gipps and Sir Charles Grey, each in his separate Minute, has proposed an application to Parliament for a Vote of Money. Sir George Gipps has, however, passed from that suggestion, with the remark that it is probably impracticable. He apparently doubted the willingness of the House of Commons to make such an advance. Sir Charles Grey has referred to the same scheme merely as a resource to be substituted for the other plan, in the event of any unexpected objection to it.

The same.

"Waiving the question how far the House of Commons might be disposed to vote the money, the other objections to this mode of proceeding are far from inconsiderable.

The same.

"In the first place it would commit Parliament to the controversy with the Colonies,—a result to be deprecated for the reasons above noticed.

The same

"Next, although free from those imputations of breach of national faith by which the other scheme would be assailed, it would provoke a resentment and resistance scarcely less bitter and obstinate. The purse of Great Britain is a sharper weapon than her sword; and the use of it, to defeat what the Assembly considers and asserts as a constitutional right, would be regarded throughout the Province as an injury the more intolerable because so apparently easy of perpetration, and to the continuance of which they at least would think that there was no assignable limit: nor can it be denied that such an intervention, unless employed most cautiously and infrequently would reduce the powers of the Assembly to an empty boast.

The same.

"The whole Annual Expenditure of the Province might be borne by this country with no perceptible addition to our burthens; and, however certain it might be that the danger was imaginary, they would really think and plausibly represent it to be the purpose of the Government to overwhelm with money privileges otherwise unassailable.

The same.

"In fact, however, it cannot be doubted that an Annual Estimate for Canada, or even a Second Vote for that service, would not be adopted by the House of Commons, and could not be recommended to them. This plan, therefore, while it would meet the evil of the moment, would have left the future unprovided for, and with the next Session of the Assembly would infallibly arrive the day of revenge.

The same.

"To either of the methods suggested there is yet a further objection of great apparent force. It would have been impossible to invoke the interposition of Parliament, except upon a full explanation of the policy which the Government intended to pursue towards the North American Provinces. The Legislature could hardly be expected, or asked, to commit themselves as parties to a contest of which the principles and the objects should not be disclosed to them. It is, however, scarcely practicable for the Government at present to make such a disclosure."

Time gained to be made and the use of it.

For these reasons, or, at least, for these amongst other reasons, the Government decided not to adopt the recommendations of the Commissioners. The course actually pursued was recommended, so far as respects Lower Canada, by its effect in gaining time: so far as related to Upper Canada and New Brunswick, it afforded the opportunity of so using the time thus gained as effectually to detach those provinces from the confederacy to which they had been invited, and to which they appeared prompt to accede. Unless these motives be borne in mind, neither the prudence, nor, indeed, the object, of the instructions conveyed to Lord Gosford would be intelligible.

Lord Glenelg accordingly addressed to Lord Gosford a Dispatch, dated the 8th of June last, of which the following is the substance:— His Lordship stated that it was evident, that, in their Address to the King, and its accompanying measures, the Assembly of Lower Canada had proceeded on an imperfect knowledge of the letter and spirit of the Instructions of 17th July 1835; that, had they been in possession of the whole of those Instructions, they would have seen that, in his Dispatch to the Commissioners, collectively, Lord Glenelg had studiously guarded against any idea that the inquiries of the Commissioners were in any way restricted; that it appeared, therefore, not impossible that, on a review of the matter, with more ample information, the Assembly might see fit to depart from that posture of uncompromising hostility which they had latterly adopted; and that, at all events, His Majesty's Ministers felt it to be their duty not to plunge into a contest, of which the consequences were so uncertain and so hazardous, until every other resource had been exhausted. Accordingly, Lord Gosford was directed to lay before the Assembly complete copies of the Instructions of July 1835, inviting them at the same time to reconsider their decision respecting the Arrears and the Supply Bill. Lord Glenelg explained the considerations which had prevented His Majesty's Government from adopting the recommendation of the Commissioners; but stated, that, sensible to the difficulty of issuing minute instructions in anticipation of events of which the scene was so distant, His Majesty's Government had decided, after prescribing the general principles to be followed in Canadian affairs, to leave to Lord Gosford's own discretion the measures by which those principles were to be carried into effect.

Lord
Glenelg's
Instructions of the 8th of June.

On the 22nd of September last, Lord Gosford, in obedience to the preceding Instruction, held a Session of the Local Legislature. It terminated, after a very few days, by the departure of the great majority of Members from Quebec, which rendered any further sittings of the Assembly impossible, and by a consequent prorogation, which took place on the 4th of October. The communications which passed between the Governor and the Assembly will be found at length in the Appendix to this Minute. The substance of them was as follows:—

Session of September
1836.

In his opening speech, Lord Gosford stated, that the object of convening the Legislature at that unusual season was to lay before them the Answer of His Majesty to the Address from the Assembly of the preceding Session: he also announced that, in conformity with the King's commands, he should furnish them with full copies of the Instructions, of the 17th July 1835, to himself and to the Commissioners. He again called on the Assembly to provide for the expenses of the current year, as well as for the arrears of past years; and expressed the confidence of His Majesty that their former proceedings on this subject having been adopted under a misconception of the Instructions issued to him, the Assembly would not adhere to those proceedings when they should be made fully acquainted with the views and intentions of His Majesty's Government. He stated, that the Legislature having been convened for the special purpose of receiving His Majesty's answer to the Address of the Assembly, and of affording to that House an opportunity of reconsidering their previous decisions

on the financial question, it was not his intention to submit to their consideration any other matters; and he concluded by reaffirming the correctness with which his Instructions had been expounded in the speech with which he opened the Session of 1835-6

Answer of the Council
bly.

The answer of the Legislative Council was, in substance, an echo of the speech; that of the Assembly was of a different character. It commenced by repeating their adherence to the principles embodied in their preceding Address, and expressed the hopes of the House that His Majesty's Answer would tend to remove the obstacles which had hitherto prevented the correction of abuses, while it professed to defer, until the receipt of the promised communications, any detailed consideration of the subjects adverted to by Lord Gosford: it reiterated the former complaints against the Legislative Council, and urged the inutility of attempting partial reforms so long as the source of the evils should continue unchanged. And it expressed the confidence of the House that, if their hopes in regard to the nature of the King's Answer should be realized, the efforts of Lord Gosford for the welfare of the Province could not fail of success.

Further
Address from the Assembly,

In pursuance of the intention expressed in his opening speech, Lord Gosford, on the 26th September, transmitted to the Assembly a copy of His Majesty's Answer to the Address of that House. It was immediately referred to a Committee of the whole House, who reported an Address in answer to it, which was adopted on the 30th September by a majority of fifty-seven to six. In this Address, as in the former one, the Assembly commenced by assuring the Governor that they adhered to the exposition of their "views, opinions, and wants," embodied in the Address of the 26th February 1836, and that they considered it their duty to persist in all their former demands, and more particularly in that relative to the introduction of the Elective principle into the Legislative Council. They called for the immediate repeal of the Tenures Act and of the Act for incorporating the British American Land Company, observing, with reference to the former Act, and in proof of the vicious constitution of the Legislative Council, that although His Majesty had expressed his willingness to accede to any Bill which might be passed for its repeal by the Provincial Legislature, yet that this concession was neutralized by the refusal of the Council to co-operate with the Assembly in passing such a Bill. They alluded to the presence in the Province of "certain pretended Authorities," and complained that, being themselves the legitimate and authorized organs of the wishes and wants of the Lower Canadian People, His Majesty's Government should have rejected their prayers to defer to the opinions of "strangers to the country." They complained of the application of the Crown Revenues to the payment of the Civil Officers, and on the subject of the renewed application for the current expenses and arrears of the Civil Establishment, they expressed themselves as follows:—

The same.

"In reference now to the demand which your Excellency has renewed under existing circumstances for a Supply, relying on the salutary maxim, that the correction of abuses and the redress of grievances ought to precede the grant thereof, we have been of opinion that there is nothing to authorize us to alter our resolution of the last Session. Your Excellency will bear in mind that our determination to obtain justice, by means warranted by the best approved precedents and by the spirit of the Constitution itself, was

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

" taken at a more distant epoch, and that, as a mark of our confidence
 " in you, we temporarily departed from that determination by voting
 " a Supply for six months. We assure your Excellency, as well as " His Majesty's Government, that in that Act, which we look upon as " a mark of our liberality, we were prompted by no minor considera" tion, nor by any unjust or incorrect interpretation of the intentions " of His Majesty's Ministers. The conclusion of our said Address " contains an explanation of our motives and of the difficulties which " it was not in our power to ward off: the same circumstances, as well " as the previous consideration of the salutary principle above referred " to, render it incumbent on us, in the present conjuncture, to adjourn
 " our deliberations until His Majesty's Government shall by its acts, " especially by rendering the second branch of the Legislature con" formable to the wishes and wants of the people, have commenced the " great work of justice and reform, and created a confidence which " alone can crown it with success."

In consequence of this Address, Lord Gosford on the 4th October prorogued the Legislature; but in so doing he called the attention of the House of Assembly to the public inconvenience which must inevitably result, should they persist in their determination not to exercise their Legislative functions unless their demands be first complied with.

tion.

If no addition remained to be made to the preceding narrative, it must be confessed that the prospect would be only not desperate. With the opposition of the Assemblies of the three Provinces to encounter, nothing would be left to the Government but to yield to their demands; and, concession following upon such a struggle, would be but another term for the abdication of all authority. Within twelve months afterwards M. Papineau would be in substance the President of a new Republic, and would within a very short interval assume the title.

Use made of the time gained by
ceedings.

The time which has been gained during the past year has, however, been so employed as to give reasonable hope of a less disastrous issue of this controversy. In that interval, not only have the Assemblies of Upper Canada and New Brunswick been detached from the confederacy with the French party in Lower Canada, but have been converted into sure and zealous allies against them.

General results in Upper Canada and
New Brunswick.

In the former part of this statement, the affairs of Upper Canada have been noticed only as they appeared in April last. Since then their aspect has entirely changed.

Upper Canada.

On the 20th of April Sir Francis Head closed the Session by a prorogation. On the 28th of May he dissolved the Legislature. On the 16th of July the writs were returned, when it appeared that the three Leaders of the hostile party, Messrs. Bidwell, Perry, and M'Kenzie, had lost their seats and that, of the 62 Members of which the House is composed, a majority of 44 consisted of persons pledged and cordially disposed to maintain the existing Constitution. The new House was to meet on the 8th of the present month.

Dissolution in Upper
elections.

In producing these results, Sir Francis Head exhibited not only the greatest moral courage and decision, but extraordinary foresight and accuracy of information. On the other hand, he has exposed himself to several grave censures from his opponents, to which it is necessary to advert.

Charges against Sir
F. Head.

The first of these relates to the style of his official communications to various public bodies in the Province. It has been grotesque and ludicrous, not to say bombastic, and has supplied his enemies

First,
Indecorous style of public documents.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

with the ready weapons of serious reproach and of ridicule. He pleads, in his defence, that he wrote to be understood, and that he adopted the only style which suited the taste and capacity of those whom he addressed. This would be a conclusive apology, if the readers for whom he wrote had been the only critics by whom he was to be judged. But his disregard of the established decorum of official intercourse has involved him, and through him the Government, in real embarrassments.

Secondly,
Improper practice in influencing elections.

The second charge is, that the majority which he has obtained in the new Assembly, has been gained by dishonest and improper practices. He is accused of unfairly changing the places of election,—of fabricating occasional votes by grants of Crown land made for the purpose,—and of influencing all the subordinate officers of the Government to vote according to his wishes. To the truth of these statements, some of the most conspicuous of his opponents are pledged by petitions presented to Parliament, and by representations addressed to Lord Glenelg. His Lordship has called upon Sir F. Head for his defence. Until its arrival, no opinion can of course be formed. The Lieutenant-Governor has generally declared that he acted with the utmost caution to avoid giving occasion to any well-founded complaint of this kind. His sincerity is beyond all dispute; but, as he certainly possessed the powers which he is alleged to have misused, it is impossible to repress some doubt whether he was really as circumspect as he states, and supposes himself to have been.

Thirdly,
Improper use proposed to be made of his success.

Finally, it must be admitted that the use which Sir F. Head proposed to make of his victory was singularly indefensible. He advised, in effect, the retraction of the pledges which, in obedience to Lord Glenelg's Instructions, he had given to the last Assembly in the name of the King. The following are the terms of the answer which his Lordship returned to that proposal. He observed that, although the Instructions to Sir F. Head had been drawn up with especial reference to the existing circumstances of the Province, yet that the principles on which they were founded were of no transitory or occasional character, but were the result of long experience and of much reflection on the state of public affairs, not only in the British dominions, but throughout the civilized World; that the wisdom of those principles had been vindicated by late events in Upper Canada, and more especially by the success which had attended the dissolution of the Assembly; that a compliance with Sir F. Head's recommendation would involve the retraction of a pledge solemnly given by the King, and would expose His Majesty to a well-founded reproach of a breach of faith; that the assumption on which that recommendation proceeded, necessarily asserted the unfitness of the Representatives of the People of Upper Canada, from whatever class selected, to be intrusted with the appropriation of the Provincial Revenues,—an assumption which it was impossible to admit, and which, if admitted, would lead to consequences far more extensive than those contemplated by him. Lord Glenelg concluded by stating that His Majesty's course, in regard to Canadian matters, had already been irrevocably taken by the Instructions given to Sir F. Head; that he would fulfil every promise contained in those Instructions faithfully and literally; and that Sir F. Head's zealous co-operation in this policy was the indispensable condition on which the Government of Upper Canada was continued in his hands.

Glenelg's

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

Adverting to the actual constitution of the Upper Canadian Assembly, there seems no room to doubt that they will be found zealous supporters of the Constitution of 1791 and of the English party in the Lower Province. It remains to show what has taken place in reference to New Brunswick, from which it will appear that there are equally good reasons for anticipating their concurrence in maintaining the just authority of the Crown, the connexion with Great Britain, and the due subordination of the Colonies to the Mother Country.

Prospects of support from Upper Canada and New Brunswick.

It has already been noticed that in the spring of this year the New Brunswick Assembly sent delegates to this country to negotiate their affairs with the King's Government.

Those gentlemen, Messrs. Crane and Wilmot, presented themselves to Lord Glenelg, and were received by him with cordiality as well as with respect. He found them to be men of moderate opinions and of fair and liberal minds. Their demands were limited to reforms to which the King had already assented in principle in reference to the Canadas. They were urged with temper and candour, and Lord Glenelg thought it right to mark his confidence in the delegates, by freely admitting them to personal interviews, at no one of which any person was present on his Lordship's part to assist in, or to witness the deliberations which then took place. This confidence was repaid by constant frankness and fair dealing; and, after a protracted, but very amicable discussion, all the questions at issue were adjusted to the perfect contentment of Messrs. Crane and Wilmot.

Negotiations with New Brunswick Deputies.

It is not necessary to state in this place the details of the settlement which was made. It will be sufficient to say that the appropriation of the whole Revenue was conceded to the Assembly in return for a Civil List, amply sufficient for every purpose which could be reasonably required. It was also agreed that the management of the Crown lands should rest with the Executive Government, though subject to certain general regulations which were to be established by a provincial statute. On the other hand, it was agreed that the Local Governments should deduct from the gross revenue all the charges of collection and management, and that the usages of Parliament should be followed in whatever related to the voting of public money. No demand was made for a change in the constitution of the Legislative Council, nor for what is called a responsible Executive Council. On the contrary, it was clearly understood that any such changes were foreign to the views of the Assembly.

Amicable result of those negotiations.

The whole of this subject will be rendered more intelligible by referring to the documents numbered 12, 13, and 14 in the Appendix, containing the instructions to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. There also will be found the Heads of a Bill approved by the Lords of the Treasury, and by Messrs. Crane and Wilmot, to be passed in the provincial legislature for settling these financial questions. But it may be convenient to transcribe in this place so much of the language of the Assembly as explains the general principles of that House, and the letter of acknowledgment which Lord Glenelg received from their Delegates on the eve of their departure from this country.

Reference to the documents in which that result is comprised.

The language of the Assembly is as follows:—

"The House now turn with heartfelt pleasure to the consideration of the Instructions given to Sir Francis Head, Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, and the extracts from those furnished Lord Gosford

Amicable language of New Brunswick Assembly.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

"as recently promulgated. The views entertained by Your Majesty of Colonial Government, as therein developed, with a liberal construction of such parts as might be supposed to affect the independence of Members of the Legislature holding any inferior office or appointment under Government, would afford the Assembly entire satisfaction, if the principles which they involve were carried into operation in this Province."

Messrs Crane's and Wilmot's letter was as follows:—

acknowledgment of the Deputies to His Majesty's Government.

MY LORD,

London, October 1836.

AFTER the highly satisfactory conclusions of our negotiations with your Lordship, it would be ungrateful in us not to record, on behalf of the loyal people of New Brunswick, our sincere and hearty thanks to our most gracious Sovereign, for that paternal solicitude for their welfare, so clearly manifested by the personal interest which His Majesty has been pleased to take in the important matters of the Address which we have had the honour to present.

We would, also, on the same behalf, convey our most grateful acknowledgments to His Majesty's Government in general, for the liberal and enlightened policy which has characterized their decisions upon the various subjects which we have had the honour to bring to their notice, and to your Lordship in particular, for the attention and consideration which your Lordship has invariably bestowed upon our representations.

If the principles involved in your Lordship's recent instructions to the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick be carried out in practice, according to their obvious spirit and intent, we have good reason to hope, that ere long their beneficial effects will be seen in the general diffusion of contentment and prosperity throughout the Province, in the rapid development of our resources, and in our stronger and more inseparable attachment to the land and government of our fathers.

That these cheering anticipations may be fully realized, and that His Majesty's devoted subjects in New Brunswick may ever gratefully remember under whose auspices and instrumentality their destiny has been improved, is the heartfelt desire of,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obliged and most humble servants.

(Signed) WILLIAM CRANE.
L. A. WILMOT.

To the Lord Glenelg, Colonial Secretary of State.

Prospect of support from New Brunswick.
Nova Scotia
tranquil.

Thus, then, there seems no room to doubt the adhesion of the Legislature of New Brunswick to the cause of constitutional Government, and to the British connexion.

The Province of Nova Scotia maintains its accustomed tranquillity and loyal adherence to the King. Lord Glenelg has communicated to the Lieutenant-Governor of that Province, to Sir F. Head, and to Lord Gosford copies of his Instructions to the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick and of the Bill to be passed in that Province, in order that those arrangements, may, if possible, be taken as a model for general imitation. It may therefore be asserted with little risk of error, that of the four great Provinces, three will co-operate with the King's Government against the French party in Lower Canada, who will have still stronger Antagonists in their own English fellow Colonists. Nor will this co-operation be invoked in favour of an illiberal policy. On the contrary, the agreement made with the New Brunswick Delegates exhibits in the most definite terms the large and liberal views by which the Colonial policy of this Country is dictated. With such alliances in favour of such principles, it would seem premature to despair of a triumph over the Agitators of the Lower Canadian Assembly, unbounded as their influence over the French population must be admitted to be.

The support of the three Provinces, and of the English Party in Lower Canada, required in aid only of a liberal policy.

But before approaching the question, What are the methods to be taken for attaining that victory? it is necessary to revert to the proceedings of the Lower Canada Commissioner, in order to show what are the measures which they have recommended in reference not to the transitory difficulties, but to the permanent Government of the Province.

Other Reports of Lower Canada Commissioners.

The Commissioners have hitherto produced but very scanty fruits of their labours. There are but two more Reports to notice. The one relates to the amount of the Civil List to be demanded from the Assembly, and the other to the composition of the Executive Council.

Scanty results of their labours.

The Report on the Civil List is dated the 30th January 1836, prior, therefore, to the bringing up of the Report on the Financial propositions of Lord Gosford. The subsequent events so entirely altered the grounds on which the recommendations of the Commissioners are based, that it appears necessary only to recapitulate them without noticing the arguments by which they are supported. In the joint Report it is suggested:—

Report on the Civil List.

1st. That the net proceeds only of the Casual and Territorial Revenue, amounting to about £10,600, should be given up.

Substance of that Report.

2nd. That the management of the Crown Property, and also all Rents and Profits arising from Lands set apart for Military or Naval purposes, should be especially reserved.

3d. That the amount of the Civil List, exclusive of the expenses of the Judicial Establishment, should be £8,700 per annum, and should include the Salaries of,

The Governor,
Executive Councillors,
Civil Secretary,
Attorney-General, and Solicitor-General.

4th. That the expenses of the Judicial establishment should be provided for separately to the amount of £10,475.

5th. That the Legislative Council should be a Court for the trial of Impeachments against all public Officers except the Governor.

6th. That Judges actually on the Bench should be incapable of sitting either in the Legislative or Executive Councils, or in the Assembly, but that this rule should not apply to Judges who should have retired from the Bench.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

7th. That all Pensions charged on the Crown Revenues at the time of the Session should be maintained, and the arrears be paid up.

8th. That the Civil List should not be permanent, but should be granted for a term of years, not less than seven, nor more than ten, or, should the Assembly prefer that course, for the life of the King.

The Commissioners further recommend, that the Law Officers of the Crown should be called upon to report, whether this arrangement could be effected by a Provincial Statute, or whether it would be necessary to invoke the authority of the Imperial Parliament. From several parts of this Report Sir C. Grey dissented. He objected to the amount of the Civil List as inadequate, and recommended that the Sum to be demanded should be £30,500. He proposed that the Judges should be removable from their Offices by the Crown,—

1st. On concurrent Addresses from both branches of the Legislature.

2nd. On accusation by the Assembly, and an inquisition before a Commission issued by the Crown.

3rd. On impeachment by the Assembly before the Legislative Council, and a trial before a select number of that body. The Council to be reduced to the necessary number, either by ballot or votes among themselves, or by the Counsel for the prosecution or defence challenging alternately. Sir C. Grey further suggested that the right of altering the boundaries of the Province should be specially reserved to the Crown. No steps have hitherto been taken by His Majesty's Government with reference to this Report.

Report on
Council.

The second of the above-mentioned Reports relates to the composition of the Executive Council, and the demand of the Assembly that this body should be made responsible, "conformably to the principles and practice of the British Constitution." The suggestions of the Commissioners are prefaced by an historical review of the Executive Council, from its first institution at the conquest of Canada, to the present day. It is unnecessary, however, in this place to refer to any period anterior to the passing of the Constitutional Act of 1791.

Substance of Report on
Council.

It appears that in the first Council appointed in compliance with that Act, a strict impartiality between the English and French inhabitants of the Province was observed. The number of Members appointed was nine; of these four were of French, and five of English extraction; but of the latter, one was absent at the time, and never afterwards took his seat. This precedent, however, was early disregarded, and of thirty-one persons named to the Executive Council between 1793 and 1828, twenty-five were of English, and only six of French extraction; since 1828, three persons have been appointed, all of whom have been French Canadians. Of the forty-two persons sworn in as Executive Councillors, since 1791, twenty have been also Members of the Legislative Council, and all except eight or ten have filled salaried offices under the Government. At the same time, scarcely any Members have been taken from the Assembly,* and the Legislative Council has thus become identified with the Executive Government, and has participated in all the odium accruing to the successive Governors. The Commissioners express their disapprobation of the connexion between the Legislative and Executive Councils, and of the practice of confirming the appointments to lucrative offices exclusively to persons of English extraction. To the consequent alienation of the party forming the majority of the Assembly, they attribute much of the embarrassment which now exists.

* NOTE.—In December, 1820, M. Papineau was summoned to the Executive Council by Lord Dalhousie, as an Honorary Member, in consequence of his office as speaker of the Assembly; on his ceasing in 1823 to fill that office, his attendance was discontinued, and the intention of summoning the Speaker as an ex-officio member has not been since acted upon.

The duties of the Executive Council are to advise the Governor on all matters respecting which he may desire to consult them, to audit the public accounts, and to try Appeals from the Provincial Courts. There are also certain matters connected with the disposal of Waste Lands, the establishment of Quarantine, &c., respecting which the Governor is required, either by statute or by his Instructions, to take their advice. The same.

The demand of the Assembly is, in substance, that this Council should be erected into a body resembling the Cabinet in this country, responsible to the representatives of the people, in the same manner as the Ministers of the Crown are to the House of Commons, and holding their situations on the like tenure of conformity between their views and those of the House of Assembly. Under this scheme, therefore, the Executive Council would consist of the heads of the principal departments of the Government. To such an arrangement the Commissioners express their decided objection. The argument opposed to it may be summed up in a few words: it is the essence of a Colonial Administration, that it should be carried on in conformity with, and subject to the general policy of the mother country. This can be effected only by enforcing the responsibility to the Metropolitan Government of the Executive power in the subordinate country. But if the arrangements demanded by the Assembly were agreed to, this responsibility must be much circumscribed, if not altogether done away with. The Executive Council, being responsible to the Assembly for the conduct of public affairs, must of course be allowed to direct them. Thus the Governor, though retaining the title of the King's Representative, would cease to be the administrator of the Government, and would be incompetent to carry into effect the Instructions which he might receive from His Majesty. In the event of a difference between the Mother Country and a Colony thus governed, the will of the Colonial Assembly would overrule that of the Imperial Parliament, and the Colony, though maintaining a nominal dependence, would in fact enjoy a real independence. The scheme is based on an attempt at a perfect parallelism in cases which are widely dissimilar, that, namely, of a metropolitan and a subordinate Government. Nor do the Commissioners think it would be advisable to adopt a modification of this plan which has been suggested, viz., that an Executive Council should be appointed, and should be maintained in harmony with the Assembly, not, however, forming the administrative body, nor having the power to control the Governor, but bound to give their advice to him on all public matters. To such an arrangement there is the objection, that the Governor, being compelled to consult them on all subjects, would be constantly obliged, where the views of the Home Government and the Assembly were in collision, to overrule his Council, thereby increasing, in a serious degree, the odium which would attach to his administration, and investing his Council and the Assembly with the attributes and influence of the unsuccessful assertors of popular rights and measures. For these and similar reasons, the Commissioners at once reject the The same.

idea of transferring to the Executive Council any portion of the responsibility at present devolving on the Governor. They then discuss certain plans which have been suggested to them, and dismiss the proposition to reduce the Council to a very small number, or to admit into it only three or four permanent Members, allowing the Governor to summon to his assistance such other persons as he might require, on the ground that the first plan would deprive the Governor of those extended means of local information, which, in a country like Canada, are indispensable to a wise administration of public affairs; and that the second, while it would obviate this objection, would fail to ensure a continuous and uniform course of administration. The Commissioners then proceed to state their own views, premising, however, that in their opinion none of the Executive Councillors should hold office under the Legislative Council or Assembly; and that although official persons should not be excluded, yet that they should not on an average exceed one-fourth of the whole Council, the Governor being at all times entitled to call on such persons for their advice on public matters, and being further at liberty to summon them before the Council for the purpose of examining them. The Commissioners also recommend that the Civil Secretary and the Attorney-General should not be in the Council. With these preliminary remarks they proceed to suggest.

Proposals for Reform of Executive
continued.

1st. That the Executive Council should never consist of a greater number than fifteen, nor (for any period exceeding six consecutive months) of less than nine; this interval of six months being allowed to obviate any difficulties which might be experienced in filling up such vacancies as might occur by the change of any of its Members.

2nd. That the Councillors should be appointed by the Governor in the King's name under the Great Seal of the Province, and should enter at once into all the rights of their office, subject, however, to confirmation or disallowance by His Majesty within a limited time.

3d. That there should be no exclusion of persons holding office under Government, but that, in practice, the number of that description should not exceed one-fourth of the whole Council.

4th. That amongst the Members of Council there should be no distinction as to powers, functions, or form of appointment, excepting that Members holding paid offices under Government should not receive salary as Councillors.

5th. That Councillors not holding office under Government should be paid not less than the present amount of £100 per annum, and that it should be proposed to the Assembly to provide for this in any permanent grant hereafter to be made by them. If, however, the Assembly should object to the payment of an increased number of Executive Councillors, salaries should not be made an indispensable condition in any proposal that may be submitted to that House. If all cannot be paid, the junior Members might be required to serve without salary, in like manner as the official Members.

6th. That, although no imperative rule can be laid down on the subject, there should be in the Executive Council at least one, and not more than three Legislative Councillors; at least two, and not more than five Members of the Assembly; some Gentlemen belonging to the class of landed proprietors, and others connected with commerce; one Individual, at the least, of the legal profession; and that of the persons chosen for the Council, it should be endeavoured to take a moderate proportion from different districts of the Province. A number sufficient to ensure at all times a quorum must, however, be selected from Gentlemen resident at or near the seat of Government.

7th. That the appointment of the Councillors should not last during good behaviour, nor require for its termination the assignment of any fault, but be liable to revocation whenever, on general grounds, the Governor might deem it advisable; a report, however, of the circumstance, and of the reasons which led to it, being immediately made to the Secretary of State.

8th. The following to be among the Rules of the Council:—

That during the presence of the Governor at the seat of Government, there shall be stated days, not less than two in each month, on which the Council shall assemble without a summons.

That it may be assembled by the Governor by special summons, as often, and at such places, as he may think fit.

That at each meeting of the Council, every Member shall be entitled to attend; and that in the issuing of summonses, no limitation shall be established save that rendered necessary by distance or difficulty of communication.

That five shall be a quorum.

That upon the internal affairs of the Province, each Member of the Council shall have the right of suggesting measures, or tendering advice, whether or not upon subjects introduced by the Governor; but that no measures affecting the relations of the Province with the Empire shall be discussed, unless they are brought forward by the Governor.

That the Governor have the power of adjourning any question or subject of discussion, the fact of his doing so being noted in the proceedings.

That the Governor have the power of acting in opposition to the majority of the Council; but that when he adopts that determination he shall enter it on the Minutes, assigning his reasons, or not, as he may prefer.

That the Members of the Council have the privilege of recording their dissent on the Council Books, with or without their reasons as they may prefer.

That no Meeting of Council shall be competent to act as such without the presence of the Governor, but that he shall have the power, as now, to refer business to it, as to a Committee, in his absence; nothing done in that mode taking the form of a proceeding of Council, until ratified when the Governor is present.

That the foregoing rule shall be so far qualified in the Governor's absence from the seat of Government, as to authorize him to ratify by letter, or by any other mode that may be appointed for the purpose, any proceedings of Council which could not without injury to the Public Service be delayed.

That, in order to avoid the inconvenience which would result from Members of the Executive Council coming to be considered as the organs of the Government, all communications to the Provincial Legislature shall continue to be made as now by message, notwithstanding the presence in the Executive Council of Members of the Legislature.

That no Oath of Secrecy shall be taken, and that the Members of the Executive Council shall not be considered solemnly bound to secrecy, except on occasions when the Governor may summon them expressly to form a Council of Secrecy, or resolve any Meeting into such a Council.

That, before any recommendation of an appointment to the Legislative Council be sent to the Secretary of State, the Governor shall acquaint the Executive Council with it, and receive any observations they may make upon it, which observations, whether made collectively by the Council, or individually by any Member, or Members of it, shall be transmitted to England at the same time with the recommendation of the Governor.

Lastly, That the Governor's discretion respecting the occasions on which he should consult his Council remaining still unfettered, he should resort to their advice more frequently than is done under the present system.

In regard to the relaxation of the Oath of Secrecy, the Commissioners are of opinion that by this means it will be possible to avoid any necessity for the retirement of Councillors, who, although they may approve the general policy of the Government, may differ from their measures in isolated cases. They also express their sense of the unfitness of the Executive Council to act as a Court of Appeal, or a Board of Audit, but recommend that, instead of an Act of the Imperial Parliament altering in these respects the Statute of 1791, an Act should be passed merely authorizing the King to assent to any Bill on the subject, which may be passed by the Provincial Legislature.

Sir Charles
Grey's Protest.

This Report bears the Signature of the three Commissioners, but from many of its opinions and recommendations Sir C. Grey states his unqualified dissent. He observes, that the suggestions respecting the Council, if adopted, would, in fact, involve the admission of the principle contended for by the Assembly. Those suggestions require that the Governor should consult his Council on all important occasions—they delegate to him the power of removing the Councillors at will, without the assignment of any reason—while, by the recommendations in the previous Report, the Assembly retain all power over the Supplies. The Assembly would, therefore, have the power of compelling the Governor, at any time, to dismiss such Councillors as they should dislike, by stopping the Supplies. Sir C. Grey, therefore, proposes, that an Act should be immediately introduced into Parliament for the regulation of the Executive and Legislative Councils, of which the following should be the principal provisions:

1st. That it shall be lawful for any Member of the Legislative Council to resign his seat, and for the Governor provisionally, and for His Majesty finally, to accept and confirm the same.

2nd. That every Member of the Legislative Council, upon the opening of each Session of the Provincial Parliament, shall make a solemn affirmation, that after allowing for the payment of all his just debts, he is lawfully possessed of property to the amount of Five thousand Pounds sterling, or of an income for life of Five hundred Pounds sterling by the year.

3rd. That no Member of the Legislative Council shall be capable of holding any Office or appointment of emolument at the pleasure of the Crown.

4th. That a conviction of any fraudulent crime or misdemeanor shall be an avoidance of the Office of Legislative Councillor.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

5th. That in addition to the Members of the Executive Council, who have been, or hereafter may be, appointed by His Majesty, it shall be lawful for the Governor of Lower Canada to appoint such and so many persons, as to him may seem fit, to be Members of the Executive Council for the term and period of his own Government, and no longer, and that, by the appointment of the Governor, there may be four or more full meetings in the year of all the Members of the Executive Council; but that on ordinary occasions, not more than five Members shall be summoned to, or shall attend any meeting of the Executive Council.

6th. That the Executive Council shall cease to be a Court of Appeals, and that, notwithstanding the 31st Geo. III. c. 31, s. 34, it shall be lawful for His Majesty to constitute a Court of Appeal for the Province of Lower Canada, by appointing one or more persons to be a Judge or Judges of such Court of Appeal, without being Members of the Executive Council.

In regard to Sir C. Grey's suggestions, Sir G. Gipps remarks, that the Council recommended in the Report is a Council of advice, not of control; and that with reference to the recommendations respecting the Legislative Council, it seems unnecessary to exclude from that body all official persons, and vexatious to require the Members to swear to their qualification at the commencement of every Session.

Sir George
Gipps'
Answer to this Protest.

It may be right to notice that the Reports already extracted, or referred to, complete the series of those which have hitherto been received by Lord Glenelg from the Canada Commissioners. On the most important subject of all, namely, the constitution of the Legislative Council, they have hitherto made no report whatever. It might be premature to express any opinion to the prejudice of their activity and zeal, although it must be confessed that they have hitherto given no very convincing proofs of either. The case seems to be, that they are involved in constant controversies with each other as to the questions referred to them. Each of their Reports has hitherto been clogged with Protests from each of the Reporters; and although their mission may have been useful in gaining time, it has produced little other benefit. Lord Glenelg has, therefore, apprized Lord Gosford, that the Commission must be brought to an immediate close. One of the Commissioners, Sir Charles Grey, is supposed to be actually on his return to Europe.

Close of 1836.

Parliament.

In a confidential Memorandum, communicated to his colleagues in the month of November, 1836, Lord Glenelg traced, at considerable length, the course of events in the British North American Provinces, from the period of Lord Gosford's arrival at Quebec in August 1835, up to the close of the year 1836. The object of the following pages is to continue that narrative to the present time. But before entering on this task, it may perhaps be convenient briefly to state the position of affairs in Lower Canada at the end of 1836.

It will be remembered, that on meeting the Lower Canada Legislature for the first time in September 1835, Lord Gosford had explained to them, at considerable length, the conciliatory nature of his Mission, and had announced the steps which he had taken for immediately remedying such of the abuses complained of by the Assembly as he was competent to deal with. The result of this was to give a shock to the power of Mr. Papineau, which was very apparent in the divisions of the House; and there was every probability, up to the middle of February 1836, that the Supplies would be granted, in spite of Mr. Papineau's opposition. At this date Sir F. Head arrived in Upper Canada, and published, in extenso, his Instructions, including certain extracts from the Instructions to the Lower Canada Commissioners and Lord Gosford. The effect was fatal to the prospects of success in Lower Canada. On collating the published extracts with Lord Gosford's Speech, it was vehemently declared that the epitome of his Instructions had been unfaithful, and had been drawn up with the intention of misleading the Assembly. Mr. Papineau's power was instantly re-established more firmly than before. An Address to the Throne was adopted, repeating the adherence of the House to all their former demands; and, in order to allow a sufficient opportunity for their concession, supplies were voted for six months. The House then separated, and was formally prorogued by Lord Gosford in March.

As, however, the Assembly had adopted this violent course on an imperfect acquaintance with the policy of the British Government, it was determined to afford them an opportunity of re-considering their proceedings. Lord Gosford was accordingly instructed again to summon the Legislature, and to lay before them complete copies of the Instructions to himself and his colleagues. He did so in September 1836; but was met by an answer from the Assembly, recapitulating all their former demands, and stating their determination "to adjourn their deliberations until His Majesty's Government shall, by its acts—especially by rendering the second branch of the Legislature conformable to the wishes and wants of the people—have commenced the great work of justice and reform, and created a confidence which alone can crown it with success."

Thus the year 1836 closed, with a virtual abdication by the Assembly of their legislature functions. Every attempt at conciliation had failed. The public officers were again, for the fifth year, left without any provision; and it was evident, from the tone of the later Addresses, that the moderation of the Government was, by the Assembly, ascribed to timidity. It was resolved, in this conjuncture, to appeal to the Imperial Legislature; and accordingly, in the Speech from the Throne with which the Session was opened on the 31st of January last, the attention of Parliament was especially called to the state of affairs in Lower Canada.

Speech from the Throne.

At an early period of the session, the Reports of the Commissioners were laid by His Majesty's commands before both Houses of Parliament, and on the 27th February, Lord John Russell gave notice in the House of Commons that, on the 6th of the following month, he should move for a Committee of the whole House to take into consideration that part of the Speech from the Throne which related to Lower Canada. Accordingly, on the 6th of March, the question was brought before the House of Commons; and after a detailed statement of the past policy and of the future intentions of the Government, Lord John Russell moved the following Resolutions.

Resolutions
proposed.

"I. That since the 31st of October, in the year 1832, no provision has been made by the Legislature of the province of Lower Canada for defraying the charges of the administration of justice, and for the support of the civil government within the said province; and that there will, on the 10th day of April now next ensuing, be required for defraying in full the charges aforesaid to that day the sum of £142,160. 14s. 6d.

Resolutions.

"II. That at a Session of the Legislature of Lower Canada, held at the city of Quebec, in the said province, in the months of September and October 1836, the Governor of the said province, in compliance with His Majesty's commands, recommended to the attention of the House of Assembly thereof, the Estimates for the current year, and also the Accounts, showing the arrears due in respect of the civil government, and signified to the said House His Majesty's confidence that they would accede to the application which he had been commanded to renew for payment of the arrears due on account of the public service, and for the funds necessary to carry on the civil government of the province.

"III. That the said House of Assembly, on the 3d day of October, 1836, by an Address to the Governor of the said province, declined to vote a Supply for the purposes aforesaid; and by the said Address, after referring to a former Address of the said House to the Governor of the said province, declared that the said House persisted, amongst other things, in the demand of an Elective Legislative Council, and in demanding the repeal of a certain Act passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom in favour of the North American Land Company; and by the said Address, the said House of Assembly further adverted to the demand made by that House of the free exercise of its control over all the branches of the Executive Government; and by the said Address the said House of Assembly further declared that it was incumbent on them, in the present conjuncture, 'to adjourn their deliberations until His Majesty's Government should, by its acts,—especially by rendering the second branch of the Legislature conformable to the wishes and wants of the people—have commenced the great work of justice and reform, and created a confidence which alone could crown it with success.'

"IV. That in the existing state of Lower Canada, it is inadvisable to make the Legislative Council of that province an elective body; but that it is expedient that measures be adopted for securing to that branch of the Legislature a greater degree of public confidence.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

Resolutions.

"V. That while it is expedient to improve the composition of the Executive Council in Lower Canada, it is unadvisable to subject it to the responsibility demanded by the House of Assembly of that province.

"VI. That the legal title of the North American Land Company to the land holden by the said Company, by virtue of a grant from His Majesty, under the public seal of the said province, and to the privileges conferred on the said Company by the Act for that purpose made in the fourth year of His Majesty's reign, ought to be maintained inviolate.

"VII. That it is expedient that, so soon as provision shall have been made by law to be passed by the Legislature of the said province of Lower Canada for the discharge of lands therein from feudal dues and services, and for removing any doubts as to the incidents of the tenure of land in free and common soccage in the said province, a certain Act made and passed in the sixth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Fourth, commonly called 'The Canada Tenures' Act,' and so much of another Act passed in the third year of His said late Majesty's reign, commonly called 'The Canada Trade Act,' as relates to the tenures of land in the said province, shall be repealed; saving, nevertheless, to all persons all rights in them vested under or by virtue of the said recited Acts.

"VIII. That for defraying the arrears due on account of the established and customary charges of the administrations of justice and of the civil government of the said province, it is expedient that after applying for that purpose such balance as shall, on the said 10th day of April, 1837, be in the hands of the receiver-general of the said province, arising from His Majesty's hereditary, territorial, and casual revenue, the Governor of the said province be empowered to issue from and out of any other part of His Majesty's revenues in the hands of the receiver-general of the said province such further sums as shall be necessary to effect the payment of the before-mentioned sum of £142,160 14s. 6d.

"IX. That it is expedient that His Majesty be authorised to place at the disposal of the Legislature of the said province, the net proceeds of His Majesty's hereditary, territorial, and casual revenue arising within the same, in case the said Legislature shall see fit to grant to His Majesty a Civil List for defraying the necessary charges of the administration of justice, and for the maintenance and unavoidable expences of certain of the principal officers of the civil government of the said province.

"X. That great inconvenience has been sustained by His Majesty's subjects inhabiting the provinces of Lower Canada and Upper Canada from the want of some adequate means for regulating and adjusting questions respecting the Trade and Commerce of the said provinces, and divers other questions wherein the said provinces have a common interest; and it is expedient that the Legislature of the said provinces respectively be authorised to make provision for the joint regulation and adjustment of such their common interest."

Amendment
proposed.

As an Amendment to the Fourth Resolution, it was moved by Mr. Leader to substitute a declaration, "That it is advisable that the Legislative Council of Lower Canada be made elective." The Debate on this point was adjourned, and continued on the 8th of March, when, on a division, the amendment was rejected by a majority of 318 to 56. After several divisions on questions of adjournment, the House divided on the main question, when the original resolution was carried by a majority of 144 to 16. The further proceedings were then deferred until the evidence taken before the Parliamentary Committee of 1834, should have been printed. On the 14th, 21st, and 24th of April, the Debate was resumed, and the remaining resolutions carried by large majorities; and on the 28th April the Report of the Committee having been brought up, the Resolutions were agreed to by the House, and ordered to be communicated to the Lords. In the Appendix* will be found a list of the several motions in the House of Commons, above referred to, with a statement of the divisions on each.

Resolutions agreed to by the House.

On the 9th May the Resolutions were taken into consideration by the House of Lords, and concurred in without a division; and on the 18th May, the concurrence of their Lordships was communicated to the House of Commons.

Resolutions agreed to by the Lords.

Immediate steps were then taken for bringing into Parliament a Bill to give effect to the Resolutions; but before the necessary preliminaries could be completed, all further progress was arrested by the alarming illness of the King, which terminated fatally on the 20th June. As, however, it was impossible to condemn the public servants in Lower Canada to a further indefinite delay in the payment of their salaries, and as, without an Act of Parliament, the Ministers of the Crown could not proceed to defray those salaries out of the provincial funds, a Vote of Credit for the necessary amount was, on the 3rd July, obtained from the House of Commons. It was, however, distinctly stated that, unless the Assembly of Lower Canada should in the interval revise their former decisions in regard to the supplies, the authority of the Imperial Parliament would be hereafter invoked for the repayment of this advance, out of the provincial funds.

Vote of Credit.

It will be observed, that the amount which it had been proposed to take from the provincial funds, and which was eventually granted by the House of Commons, constituted the arrears due to the civil servants of Lower Canada only up to the 10th April last. His Majesty's Government did not feel justified in proceeding further than this, or in requiring from the Imperial Parliament an authority for rendering the whole of the civil establishment of Lower Canada independent, for the future, of the Provincial Legislature. They rather chose to attempt to bring the indispensable expenditure of the Government within the compass of the funds constitutionally at the disposal of the Crown; and Lord Gosford was accordingly directed, on the 11th March last, to apply in future the Crown revenues, amounting to about £30,000 a-year, to the payment of the expenses of justice, and the salary of himself and his civil secretary; and to notify generally to the other civil servants, that the Crown, having no longer the power of guaranteeing to them their salaries, could no longer demand from them the continuance of their services. In the Appendix† will be found the instructions issued on this point, together with a schedule of the services to be paid out of the Crown revenues.

received, as might have been expected, with the deepest resentment by the adherents of Mr. Papineau. Meetings were immediately called in the different districts of the province, a permanent and central committee was established at Montreal, and resolutions of a violent and inflammatory character were adopted, and published in the papers attached to the French Canadian party. At many of these meetings Mr. Papineau was himself present; at others, he was represented by some of the leading individuals on that side of the House of Assembly. In the Appendix‡ will be found copies of the resolutions passed at the Montreal and Quebec meetings, from which the general tenor of those adopted at other similar meetings may be understood.

attached to these Meetings.

It is impossible to estimate, with any confidence, the degree of weight to be attached to these meetings. While by the one party they are appealed to, with evident exaggeration, as conclusive testimony of the feelings of the Canadian people they are decried with scarcely less exaggeration by the opposite party as the abortive attempts of an impotent, but noisy faction, in which the body of the people take no interest. Nor is it less difficult to ascertain the number by whom they were attended. Thus, while the Vindicator and the Minerve assert that at the Montreal Anti-coercion Meeting between 3,500 and 4,500 persons were present, the papers on the opposite side maintain that there were not more than 500 or 600. In like manner, those present at Berthier and at L'Acadie are reckoned by one party at 3,000 and 4,000, respectively; and by the other, at 600 and 900.

Lord Gosford's
opinion of these Meetings.

From his first communication* on the subject, Lord Gosford appears to have considered these meetings as of little importance, and as having failed in the object for which they were intended. Subsequently, however, he attached more weight to them; and accordingly on the 15th June he issued a Proclamation† warning all persons against the seditious and treasonable proceedings which they were intended to recommend; and, at the same time, he availed himself of an authority previously transmitted to him by the Secretary of State, for obtaining a reinforcement of troops from Halifax. He shortly afterwards published an Order, as captain-general of the militia, that the Proclamation of the 15th June, should be read at the head of every regiment of militia, on the occasion of their annual assemblage; and some cases having occurred, in which the Proclamation had been disregarded by persons holding commissions under the Crown, either as militia officers or magistrates, he has since proceeded to deprive all such persons of their commissions‡. Lord Gosford is of opinion that this Proclamation has been attended with a very good effect.

It is not to be supposed that while so much violence was displayed by Mr. Papineau and his adherents, the opposite party were altogether inactive. Although their meetings were fewer, they appear to have been far more numerous attended. The requisition

In the Appendix|| will be found copies of the resolutions passed at these meetings, together with extracts from Lord Gosford's despatches on the subject. Loyal meetings were also held at Napier-ville or L'Acadie on the 24th, and at Three Rivers on the 25th July, the proceedings at which will be also found in the Appendix||.

Nor were these the only demonstrations made in favour of the British Government, and in opposition to the proceedings of Mr. Papineau: for, a vacancy having about this time occurred in the representation of the Lower Town of Quebec, by the resignation of Mr. Vanfelson, the English party brought forward, and succeeded in electing Mr. Munn, in opposition to the candidate supported by Mr. Papineau; and at a dinner given on the 25th July, to 140 of the Roman Catholic Clergy, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Montreal is reported to have said, "That so solemn an occasion as the present had never presented itself; that he saw nearly all his clergy met before him, and that he was going to take advantage of the circumstance to give to the pastors of parishes certain notices of the highest importance in the present circumstances of the country. That the clergy were to use every effort to establish charity and union among their flocks; that they were to represent to their parishioners that it is never permitted to revolt against lawful authority, nor to transgress the laws of the land; that they are not to absolve in the confessional any indication of the opinion either that a man may revolt against the Government under which he has the happiness to live, or that it is permitted to break the laws of the country, particularly that which forbids smuggling; and still less is it allowed to absolve those who may violate those laws." This speech, of course, drew down on the bishop the violent denunciations of the French Canadian party; but the clergy are reported to have immediately expressed their approval of his sentiments.

About the same time a letter was addressed to the colonel of the militia of the Lake of Two Mountains, by 127 of the officers and non-commissioned officers of his battalion, pledging themselves to support the constituted laws of the province, and to maintain the connection with the mother country.

In the midst of this agitation the Legislature met on the 18th August. It had been summoned in compliance with instructions from the Home Government*, in order to allow of a last effort to obtain the payment of the civil servants without resorting to the extreme measure contemplated in the 8th of the Parliamentary Resolutions. In his opening speech†, Lord Gosford explained the circumstances under which the Legislature had been called together, and communicated to them the course adopted by the Imperial Parliament; expressing at the same time the anxious hope of the Government that the Assembly would, by granting the Supplies, render it unnecessary to contemplate any further action on the 8th resolution. He announced the intended remodelling of the Councils;

On the 22d September the Council replied by an Address, which was in great measure an echo of Lord Gosford's speech.

In the Assembly an unusual course was pursued. Instead of referring the Speech to a special Committee to prepare an answer, it was referred to a Committee of the whole House on the state of the Province. After a discussion which lasted five days, the Committee reported the draft of an Address in answer to the Speech. A resolution was then moved by Mr. Stuart, M.P.P. for the Upper Town of Quebec, pledging the House to "provide for the most pressing wants of the province, and the support of his Majesty's Government." This was negatived on a division by 63 to 13. A second resolution was then proposed by the same gentleman to the effect that "It is the duty of this House to maintain its fidelity to the Crown, and to support the connection of this province with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, using, at the same time, all constitutional means for the removal of the obstacles which have hitherto retarded the advancement and prosperity of the province, and for securing to His Majesty's subjects therein a better and more efficient Government than they now have." The previous question having been moved and carried by a majority of 62 to 15, this resolution was also lost. A more moderate Address than that prepared in the Committee was then proposed by Mr. Taschereau, but was lost on a division of 59 to 18; and the original Address was eventually carried by 46 to 31. In the Appendix[†] will be found a dispatch from the Earl of Gosford, giving a very detailed account of these proceedings in the Assembly.

Address carried

the Address.

The Address[§] thus carried in the Assembly is no less violent in its language than those which, during the last few years, have emanated from that body. It commences by censuring in very strong terms the Home Government and the Lower Canada Commissioners: it protests against the proceedings in Parliament, and asserts, that if the resolutions be carried out, the supremacy of Great Britain over Canada "will no longer depend upon the feelings of affection, of duty, and of mutual interest, but on physical and material force." It denounces the constitution of the Legislative and Executive Councils, but admits, at the same time, that if the contemplated reforms in those bodies be effected in a spirit of justice and harmony, they will "become a powerful motive with us for examining whether the Legislative Council, in its present form of constitution, could even for a time co-operate with us in a system of legislation conformable to the interests of the people, and of thereby ascertaining whether it shall have been so remodelled as to induce us to manifest confidence in His Majesty's Government." It concludes by refusing the Supplies—by repeating the adherence of the House to all their former demands—by calling on the Government to propose the rescinding of the Parliamentary Resolutions—and by disclaiming all responsibility for the consequences, should those resolutions be persevered in. This Address was presented to Lord Gosford on the 26th August, and immediately afterwards the House was prorogued by Proclamation. As no Bill had been passed, it has become a question whether the late meeting constituted a Session—a question of no small interest, since on its solution depends the continuance of several temporary Acts of much importance.

Assembly
prorogued.

It will be observed that both in Lord Gosford's speech to the Legislature and in the answer of the Assembly, allusion is made to certain contemplated changes in the Legislative and Executive Councils, which had been unexpectedly delayed. It becomes necessary, therefore, to explain the causes of their delay, and the measures which have been finally adopted on the subject.

Contemplated changes in the Executive and Legislative Councils.

Early in the spring of 1836, Lord Gosford sent home lists of gentlemen whom he proposed to summon to the Legislative and Executive Councils. Among them were some of the most eminent of the French Canadian party, and of the most conspicuous advocates for an elective Legislative Council. At this time the Commissioners were pursuing their inquiries into the composition of the Councils—a question second in importance to none which had been referred to them. An immediate acceptance of Lord Gosford's recommendations would have been virtually to prejudge the question, and might have been construed into a tacit declaration by His Majesty's Government of opinions respecting the Legislative Council which they were not prepared to announce or adopt. Under these circumstances it was determined not to act on Lord Gosford's recommendations, but to await the Commissioners' Reports on the Councils, and then to deal with the whole of the questions relating to Lower Canada in one comprehensive and general arrangement. This decision was communicated to Lord Gosford on the 31st October 1836.

Delay.

Accordingly, by the 4th and 5th of the series of Resolutions submitted to Parliament, His Majesty's Government pledged themselves to the adoption of measures for improving the composition of the Executive and Legislative Councils. What was the precise nature of these measures will be best explained by the following extracts from a Minute submitted to his colleagues at the time, by Lord Glenelg.

Contemplated Change in the
Legislative Councils.

I. The Legislative Council.

"To secure to the Legislative Council a greater share of public confidence, five distinct measures are in contemplation.

- "1. The exclusion of the Judges from that body.
- "2. The enabling members to resign.
- "3. The removal of persons convicted of disgraceful offences.
- "4. The addition of persons holding opinions corresponding, in general, with those of the majority of the Assembly, although not concurring in their extreme demands.
- "5. The establishment of the rule that, before the Government transmits for the King's sanction the name of any candidate for advancement to the Legislative Council, that name should be communicated to the Executive Council, who should be required to report their opinion collectively and individually, as to the fitness of the choice.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

II. The Executive Council.

"The improvement of this body is required, not merely to secure the right discharge of their own appropriate duties, but as has been seen, to prevent the improper selection of Legislative Councillors. The intentions entertained on this subject are as follows:—

"1. The Executive Council is at present, in effect, reduced to but a single person (Mr. Cochrane) who is really competent to the duty of that office. Retaining that gentleman, it is proposed to re-constitute the whole body.

"2. The number of members would at first be nine.

"3. Of the nine members, not more than two would be selected from the public officers of the province; two would be selected from the Council; and three from the Assembly; and the remaining two from persons who were not members either of the Government or the Legislature.

"4. The selection of members from the Houses of Legislature, would not be established as a positive and inflexible rule, but only as a custom to be observed as far as possible.

"5. The Councillors would be drawn from the different districts of the province, and from each of the great separate interests, so as in some sense to represent each.

"6th. The Councillors would hold their seats during the pleasure of the Crown. As it might frequently be desirable to remove, for mere unfitness, members to whose charge no positive fault could be laid, it is proposed that the entire Council shall from time to time be reconstituted, either by the simultaneous retirement of the whole body, or by their vacating their seats in rotation.

"7th. The present oath of secrecy would be abolished, but the Members would be placed under the same honorary engagement to mutual confidence as subsists between the members of the Cabinet in this country. Secrecy being the general rule which the Governor would dispense whenever there appeared to him no sufficient reason for forcing the observance of it.

"8th. That the Council should not be entitled to meet and act as such, except in obedience to the summons of the Governor.

"9th. That the Council should no longer exercise the duties of a Court of Appeal, or those Auditor of the Public Accounts.

"10th. That the Governor should not be at liberty to propose any expenditure to the Assembly without a previous consultation with the Executive Council.

"11th. That the Governor should not be subject to any inflexible rule as to the other subjects on which he should consult the Council, but should be required to avail himself of their advice and assistance as far as might be compatible with the maintenance of his own free agency.

"12th. That no questions affecting the relations of Lower Canada with any other part of His Majesty's dominions should be discussed at the Council except at the suggestion of the Governor; but that any Member might originate any question affecting only the internal interests of the province.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

"13th. That every Councillor should have the right of entering protests in the Minutes of Council.

"14th. That the Governor be authorized to Act in opposition to the resolutions and advice of the Council; but in any such case he should be bound to record in the Council Books a Minute explanation of the grounds and motives of his decision.

"15th. That the Governor shall attend all meetings of the Council, unless in any case he shall call upon them in writing to deliberate in his absence upon any question. In that case, however, they must act only as a Committee, and their resolves must be reported to the Board for confirmation.

"16th. That all communications between the Governor and either branch of the Legislature shall take place, as at present, by message, and not through the intervention of those members of the House who may have seats in the Executive Council.

"17th. Finally, that the Executive Councillors be chosen from persons of moderate and liberal opinions, who are understood to be attached to the spirit of the constitution, and to be opposed to any change subversive of its cardinal principles."

During the progress of the Resolutions through the House of Commons, a Despatch, dated the 8th of March, on the subject of the Council, was received from Lord Gosford, in the concluding paragraph of which he announced his intention of sending home, at an early date, lists of those whom it would be advisable to appoint to these boards. In subsequent dispatches the promised lists were again alluded to; but it was not until the 2d August that a dispatch, dated the 26th June, containing those lists, was received, at the Colonial Office.

The demise of the Crown having arrested the completion of the Parliamentary measures, and no organic change being possible in the Legislative Council without the authority of an Act of Parliament, the Government was necessarily limited in its operations with respect to that body, to the appointment of those gentlemen who had been recommended by Lord Gosford. But, anxious to obtain every information as to the most effectual means of rendering the second branch of the Legislature more conducive to the public good, Lord Glenelg, on the 31st August, addressed to Lord Gosford a secret dispatch, of which a copy will be found in the Appendix*, recapitulating at great length the various schemes which had been proposed for that purpose; reviewing briefly the arguments for and against each, and inviting, from Lord Gosford, a full and unreserved communication of the opinions which his local observation might have let him to entertain.

To the regulation of the Executive Council, no Parliamentary sanction was necessary; and fearing that any further delay might lead to serious inconvenience, Lord Glenelg had, on the 14th July, anticipated Lord Gosford's Dispatch of the 26th of June, by instructing him at once to summon to that Board any nine gentlemen whom he might consider most competent for its duties, and to introduce into its constitution and regulations the changes recommended in the Third Report of the Commissioners of Inquiry.

On the receipt of the despatch of the 26th June, no time was lost in preparing warrants for appointing the new Councillors. It was however impossible to complete the necessary official forms before the 22d August; and of course, therefore, the appointments could not be made known in Lower Canada until after the prorogation of the Legislature. Whether the intelligence, if received at an earlier date, would have influenced the proceedings of the Assembly it is impossible to determine. It will be observed that on this point there is a visible discrepancy between the 5th and the 9th paragraphs of their Address.

Close of the Session.

The Session closed, as has been already stated, on the 26th August. The intelligence since received from Lord Gosford reaches to the 13th September; its general tenor cannot be regarded without serious anxiety.

Subsequent Intelligence.

While he repeats the opinion, so often before expressed, that the great mass of the Canadian people are contented and loyal, Lord Gosford does not attempt to deny the partial success of Mr. Papineau's machinations. The object of Mr. Papineau and his party, he asserts to be the severance of the connection between Canada and Great Britain; and to this end have been directed all their efforts to rouse the people by means of the late meetings. Latterly, indeed, those meetings have been discontinued; but the Permanent Committee at Montreal, still holds its weekly sittings, and promulgates its proceedings from time to time in the public journals. That many of these publications are of an illegal and seditious character, cannot be doubted. The great difficulty, however, of procuring evidence, or, when the evidence is sufficient, of obtaining a conviction, has hitherto prevented any legal proceedings. Two indictments had, indeed, been preferred by the Attorney General,—one against Dr. Duchesnois for publicly tearing the proclamation of the 15th June; the other against certain individuals for a conspiracy to expel, by threats, on account of political differences, several inhabitants of the county of Two Mountains, —but in both cases the bills had been ignored by the grand jury, notwithstanding the clearest evidence in support of them. Nor could any other result have been expected, since, on the grand jury was seated one of the persons who had been recently dismissed by Lord Gosford from the militia, on account of his conduct at a public meeting.

Under these circumstances he adverts to the probability that measures of a very extreme nature may ultimately be forced on the Executive Government: measures tantamount, in fact, to placing the province under martial law. And, although he expresses his anxiety to avoid any such step, he states his determination, should the exigency arise, at once to avail himself of all the powers confided to him. 'We can now,' he continues, 'make no terms with Mr. Papineau. You must either put him down, or submit to let him put you down. There is no halting between two opinions. By at once increasing the power of the Executive, and suspending the Constitution, you paralyze the designs of these mischievous men; and it would establish confidence in the minds of those disposed to peace and good government.' * *

* * 'Until you nullify Papineau's power, you can never be in a position to treat on anything like fair and liberal terms with a man of his extravagant, uncompromising, destructive views; exercising, as he does, complete control over the minds of many who have been too long accustomed to be under his yoke.' The whole of Lord Gosford's recent despatches on this subject will be found in the Appendix*; but the foregoing passages have been extracted as embodying in the most forcible manner his sense of the crisis which has arrived.

* Appendix, No. 18.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

But, striking as is Lord Gosford's description of the present state of Lower Canada, it is far less alarming than that contained in some letters of a later date from the Commissary General on the station, which were sent to this office from the Treasury, on the 27th of October. From these it appears that the French Canadian party in the district of Montreal, have openly undertaken to organize the people; that several battalions are in the course of being drilled, and have been practising ball-firing; that the 'bonnet-rouge' has been hoisted, and some English storekeepers compelled to fly for safety from St. Hyacinth to Sorel. It is even reported, and Mr. Routh expresses his belief in the report, that it was intended to hold a meeting on the 20th October, to proclaim the independence of 'the five counties†.'

The Executive Government of Lower Canada appear, from the same letters, to be actively employed in taking the necessary steps for meeting these demonstrations. A considerable military force is said to have been concentrated for this purpose in the district of Montreal, and horses have been purchased to enable the Artillery, if necessary, to take the field. It may be hoped that these preparations will deter the leaders of the French party from pursuing a course which cannot but lead to a civil war; more especially if it be justly surmised that the publicity and violence of their proceedings have been intended to operate on public opinion without the province, rather than to lead to any armed resistance within it. But until more detailed and authentic information shall be received, it is impossible to form any satisfactory opinion, either as to the motives and designs of the French party, or as to the probable resort of their proceedings. In the meantime it is necessary to advert to the present aspect of affairs in the other portions of British North America.

In the memorandum of November 1836, to which allusion has before been made, Lord Glenelg recapitulated the important events which had marked the preceding year in Upper Canada and New Brunswick, and showed, that of the four principal North American provinces, three might at that time be expected to co-operate with the King's Government against the French party in Lower Canada. The event, as far as it regards Upper Canada and New Brunswick, has justified this expectation; but there are not wanting grounds for apprehension that no very firm reliance can be placed on the present aspect of affairs in Upper Canada.

During the excitement which immediately succeeded the dissolution of the late Assembly, all secondary questions were merged in the one great object of defeating the party who were supposed to aim at the severance of the connection between Great Britain and Canada. But when this end had been fully secured, the public mind reverted to its accustomed channels, and the questions which had been temporarily suspended were again brought into discussion. Among these the most prominent was the disposal of the Clergy Reserves, to which a late incident had given an unusual interest.

At the close of his administration Sir J. Colborne had for the first time called into operation certain clauses of the Constitutional Act, which during forty-five years had lain dormant, and had erected and endowed fifty-seven rectories of the Church of England. This proceeding was regarded with strong indignation by the Scotch Church, and a vehement remonstrance was addressed by them to the Provincial Legislature and the Home Government. They reminded the Government that although their title to participate in the clergy reserves had been repeatedly acknowledged, yet hitherto the proceeds of those reserves had been exclusively devoted to the Church of England; and they demanded, not only that the newly created rectories should be annulled, but that their own clergy should forthwith be admitted to a proportionate share in the proceeds of the clergy reserves. To support these demands they sent to this country, in the course of last spring, no less than three delegates; and they at the same time obtained the active co-operation of the General Assembly of Scotland.

the Dissenters.

But while the claim of the Scotch Church was thus urged on the one hand, the Dissenters in Upper Canada demanded, on the other hand, that the provision set apart by law for religious purposes should not be restricted to any two communities, but should be distributed among all the principal bodies of Christians within the province; and this demand was enforced, on the part of the Wesleyans, by the presence in this country of an influential member of their body. The impossibility of otherwise providing for the clergy of the Church of England has hitherto prevented a compliance with the demands of the Scotch Church, while the terms of the Constitutional Act have opposed an insuperable obstacle to the admission of the claim of the Dissenters.

Clergy Reserve Debate.

It was under such circumstances that the Clergy Reserve question was brought into debate in the House of Assembly, of the Members of which a large proportion do not belong to the Church of England. As might have been expected, the debate was conducted with unusual warmth and violence, and a proposition, originally suggested by Lord Ripon in 1831, for revesting the reserves in the Crown, having again been brought forward, was lost by one vote. No practical result was produced, while the previous feelings on the subject were rather exasperated than allayed by this agitation of it.

Rectories.

In the mean time a doubt had been started as to the legality of the creation of the fifty-seven rectories by Sir J. Colborne, and the case having being referred to the law officers of the Crown, they gave it as their opinion, that that proceeding was contrary to law. Under these circumstances but one course was open to His Majesty's Government. The Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada was forthwith instructed, after consulting with his law advisers and the heads of the Church of England in the province, to take such steps as should seem best calculated to bring the question to a decision, first, before the Provincial Tribunals, and thence, by appeal, before the Privy Council. These proceedings have not yet been commenced, but the feeling caused by the intelligence of the law officer's opinion is a sufficient earnest of the excitement in the public mind, which in their progress they cannot fail to create and keep alive.

party.

Nor has the ultra popular party in the province been an inattentive spectator of these events. Although utterly defeated in the elections of 1836, this party was not extinguished; and they in some degree make up, by their activity and boldness, for their paucity of numbers. On receiving intelligence of the Parliamentary proceedings respecting Lower Canada, they summoned meetings, and published resolutions scarcely less violent than those of Mr. Papineau and his adherents, and they have not failed to seize, and endeavour to foment, the dissensions on religious subjects which distract the public mind in Upper Canada. What has been their success it is scarcely possible to estimate. By the Lieutenant Governor they are treated with a contemptuous silence, and it is possible that, having at their command several newspapers in each province, the importance which they seem to have acquired may be rather apparent than real.

In the meantime Sir F. Head has resigned his situation. Having been directed to reinstate Mr. Ridout in the office from which he had been dismissed, and to appoint Mr. Bidwell to the next vacant judgeship, and conceiving himself to have been insufficiently supported on other occasions, he has refused any longer to conduct the government of Upper Canada. This resignation in the present crisis cannot but be very important. As Sir F. Head has been identified in public opinion with what is called the 'English party' in the Canadas, his retirement will be to them a humiliation,—to their opponents a triumph.

Resignation of Sir F. Head.

In New Brunswick the popularity of the British Government has suffered no diminution. Through some misunderstanding of his instructions, Sir A. Campbell had, in the first instance, refused to pass the Civil List Bill; but having resigned his office, he has been succeeded by Sir John Harvey, by whom the arrangements with the Assembly have been brought to a successful close, and many essential reforms effected in the Executive Council, and in the expenditure of the Civil List. These arrangements have given great and general satisfaction; and there can be no doubt that the support which was anticipated from that province last year, would still be cheerfully accorded to Her Majesty's Government, in any contest with the French Canadians.

New Brunswick.

In Nova Scotia the last session of the Legislature was marked by some proceedings of unusual importance. At an early period dissensions arose between the Council and Assembly on subjects connected with the privileges of each. Shortly afterwards a series of resolutions were proposed, and adopted by the House of Assembly, claiming the right to appropriate the whole of the Crown revenues; complaining of the composition and conduct of the Council, and praying for the introduction into it of the elective principle. These resolutions were subsequently rescinded, to be replaced by an Address* to the Crown, embodying their substance, and further praying that the Executive and Legislative Councils should be separated, and that the principle of responsibility to the Assembly should be attached to the former.

the Crown.

This Address was answered† on the 6th July. On all those points, where concessions had been already made to the other North American provinces, Lord Glenelg announced the Queen's readiness to grant equal concessions to the people of Nova Scotia but to the introduction of the principle of election into the Legislative Council, and of immediate responsibility into the Executive Council, he expressed the determination of Her Majesty's Government to oppose a firm resistance. Before this answer could reach the province, the Session of the Legislature had terminated; and it is, therefore, impossible to decide in what manner it would have been received, or in what temper the Provincial Assembly may next come together.

Address.

Another question has lately arisen in the North American colonies, which it is necessary in this place to notice. During the last few years several Acts had been passed by the respective Legislatures of respecting

Instructions

* Appendix, No. 19.

† Appendix, No. 20.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

those colonies for regulating the Currency, and the circulating medium of each. The effect of these Acts was to introduce considerable uncertainty into all financial transactions, and more especially, to affect the operations of the military chests, and the payment of duties levied under Acts of the Imperial Parliament. To obviate this inconvenience for the future, a Circular Instruction, of which a copy will be found in the Appendix†, was, in August 1836, addressed to the governors of all the British colonies, directing them, in future, not to assent to any Act relating to the local currency, or to the rates at which coins should pass current, or to the circulation of promissory notes, without the previous sanction of the Home Government.

No sooner was this instruction promulgated in British North America, than it was attacked in the public journals as an unwarrantable interference in the internal concerns of the respective colonies. In Upper Canada and Prince Edward Island, the two branches of the Legislature concurred in joint Addresses to the Throne for its recal. Those Addresses were submitted for the consideration of the Treasury and the Board of Trade, in the months of April and September last.

The great difficulty of disallowing Acts of this nature after they have once gone into operation, would appear, at first sight, not only to have justified, but to have demanded the instruction above recited. It was evident that the inconveniences which might attend their operation, however great, could scarcely be weighed against the embarrassments and distress which would result from the sudden annulling of Acts under which property might have already been invested—establishments set on foot—and obligations and liabilities contracted. Thus the authority of the Home Government to revise the Acts of Colonial Legislatures was, in all matters of finance, virtually neutralized; and measures were from time to time passed into laws, which were entirely opposed to the financial principles recognized in the mother country.

On the other hand, it cannot be denied that the financial principles recognized in an old established and widely commercial community, are not altogether applicable to a new and rising country; still less are they congenial to the sentiments of the inhabitants. The extraordinary profits which, in a new country, are derived from almost every investment of capital, create, and perhaps justify, a less rigid observance of the strict rules of commercial prudence. If a risk is thus incurred, enterprise is at the same time stimulated; and it may be questionable whether the benefits arising from the latter, are not more than sufficient to compensate for the former. At any rate, the legislatures of North America assert, and will no doubt maintain, that in all such matters they are themselves the best, and the legitimate judges of what is for the interests of their constituents: nor will they admit that the partial effect which their financial regulations may have on the United Kingdom, is any ground for fettering their legislative authority in such matters. The argument respecting the military chests will be met by an assertion that those chests are maintained, not for the advantage of the colonies, but to support the sovereignty of the mother country; and ought not, therefore, to be made the plea for interfering in their internal legislation: while, in respect to the duties levied under British Acts of Parliament, they may reply that the difficulty would be obviated by enacting that such duties should be paid in a metallic currency at a certain fixed rate.

† Appendix, No. 21.

But assuming these arguments to be susceptible of a satisfactory reply, a further question arises as to the power of the Home Government safely to discharge the duty which they have thus assumed. During the last session of the Legislature of Upper Canada, fourteen Bills, either for the establishment of new banks, or for the increase of the capital of existing banks, were passed and sent up to the Lieutenant Governor. These Bills were of course reserved by Sir F. Head, and are at the present moment under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

It can scarcely be doubted that to sanction the establishment of so many banking corporations, with authority to issue notes, would, in the present financial state of the North American continent, be an experiment of the greatest hazard. To make a selection of a part, and to disallow the rest, would be to assume an invidious task, to the due execution of which the Home Government can scarcely be competent. To disallow the whole would be to provoke a hostility which it would be impossible to encounter with success or safety. Yet, by the Instructions of August 1836, the Government have assumed to themselves the responsibility of deciding which, and how many of the proposed banks shall be allowed to come into operation, and that responsibility it is impossible for them now to decline. But there can be little doubt that the Lieutenant Governor and the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, and probably even the Assembly themselves, would have assented with less facility to some of these projects, had they not been rescued from a large share of the attendant responsibility. It may be expected that, unless some modification of those Instructions be adopted, the example which has been set in this respect by the Legislature of Upper Canada will, at no distant time, be followed by the legislatures of all the other colonies.

The Addresses from Upper Canada and Prince Edward Island, above alluded to, still remain unanswered. At the next meeting of the respective legislatures, which will fall in the coming winter, it will be necessary to announce to them the decision of Her Majesty's Government on those Addresses. In considering what that decision should be, references must of course be had, no less to the evil consequences at the present moment of any general feeling of discontent in British North America, than to the practicability of discharging beneficially towards the colonies the duty which the Government have assumed. On the course which may be adopted may probably depend the future disposition of the Legislatures of the North American provinces towards Her Majesty's Government.

It thus appears, that while the position of the Executive Government in Lower Canada is certainly not more favourable than at the close of 1836, the cordial support of two at least of the remaining provinces of North America cannot be now so securely reckoned on. In the meantime, the Imperial Parliament has been committed to the contest, and stands pledged, should the Assembly of Lower Canada persist in the course which it has adopted, to support the Government in asserting, by all constitutional means, the supreme authority of Great Britain over that province.

Questions
now to be decided.

Two principal questions here present themselves; first, whether the government of Lower Canada should be continued in the hands of Lord Gosford; and, second, whether the completion of the measures proposed and sanctioned during the last Session of Parliament will be adequate to a state of affairs so essentially different from what then existed.

The first of these questions has been suggested by Lord Gosford himself. While declaring his determination not to embarrass Her Majesty's Government by a resignation, should they desire to retain him in Lower Canada, he yet expresses his opinion that a person less pledged than himself to principles of conciliation, might with greater effect be entrusted with the execution of a more vigorous policy: and it is also probable that the support of the ultra English party which has been withheld from himself, might not be refused to a successor commissioned to put down by coercive measures the treasonable attempts of Mr. Papineau and his adherents. On every private consideration Lord Gosford expresses his anxiety to retire from the government; and the question is therefore disembarrassed of any feeling of delicacy towards him which might otherwise have interfered with its decision.

The second question is one of much wider range, and on the solution of which will probably depend the continuance of the connection between Great Britain and Canada.

Extract of a Despatch from Lord Glenelg to the Earl of Gosford,
11th March,
1837.

APPENDIX.

No. 2.

Extract of a Despatch from Lord Glenelg to the Earl of Gosford, dated Downing-street, 11th March 1837.

Your Lordship will perceive from the resolutions, that it is proposed that provision should be made for the payment of the salaries of the public officers in Lower Canada only to the 10th April next. It forms no part of the policy of His Majesty's Government to supersede the functions, or to interfere with the constitutional privileges of the House of Assembly of the Province to a greater extent than, under the pressing urgency of existing circumstances, has appeared to them unavoidable. It is their earnest hope, that no future appeal to Parliament may be rendered necessary, by a continued abstinence on the part of the Assembly from the exercise of those functions with which that branch of the Provincial Legislature has been intrusted; and His Majesty's Government have, therefore, resolved to endeavour, for a time at least, to contract the indispensable expenditure of the Province within the amount of those resources which are now subject to the control of the Crown and applicable to this purpose.

These funds may, as appears from the Reports of the Commissioners, be safely estimated at from 28,000*l.* to 30,000*l.* per annum. From that sum your Lordship will be able to defray the various charges which are enumerated in the Minute subjoined to this Despatch. If, as I assume, the sum of 28,000*l.* may be taken as clear from all charges of collection and management, there will remain a surplus of 2600*l.* per annum, and upwards, applicable to any unforeseen, but necessary, expenditure, which it may become your duty to incur. Even allowing for those charges, there will yet be an inconsiderable surplus of a few hundred pounds per annum. For the present your Lordship will consider the hereditary, territorial, and casual revenues as appropriated to the services enumerated in the subjoined Minute, and will apply the proceeds accordingly.

This arrangement will provide for the first and indispensable exigencies of your administration from the 10th of April. It will, however, I fear, leave many important objects unprovided for, which have formerly been included in the appropriations made by the Legislature of the Province, but for which His Majesty's Government do not feel themselves imperatively called upon to provide, in the absence of any such appropriation. Disclaiming, therefore, on the part of His Majesty's Executive Government, all responsibility for the personal and public inconvenience which may follow, the evil must, for the present at least, be encountered and sustained.

Should the funds at your disposal be more ample than I have anticipated, your Lordship will consider in what way the public interests may be best consulted in the application of any sum remaining at your disposal after providing for the services to which I have referred.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

Amongst the immediate effects of thus restricting the expenditure of the Government to objects of primary necessity, is to be numbered the want of any security which the Government can offer for the future payment of those public officers whose salaries cannot be defrayed out of the resources at the disposal of the Crown. It follows, as a necessary consequence, that immediate notice should be given to such officers, that, as His Majesty can enter into no engagement for their future remuneration, the duties which they have hitherto discharged can no longer be required from them. If they shall continue in the performance of these duties, it must be at the risk of being remunerated hereafter by supplies to be granted for that purpose by the Provincial Legislature.

Schedule.

Assuming the fund applicable to the expenses of the Local Government, without any vote from the Assembly, to amount to 28,000*l.* per annum, it is proposed to appropriate that sum to the following services:—

Proceedings at a Meeting held at Montreal on the 29th June 1837.

No. 3.
Proceedings
at a Meeting held at Montreal.
29th June, 1837.

On motion of T. Peltier, Esq., seconded by William Galt, Esq.

Resolved, 1. That this meeting condemns, and solemnly protests against, the resolutions respecting the affairs of this Province, lately introduced by the British Ministry, and passed by large majorities in the Imperial Parliament, which has thereby sanctioned a principle of spoliation, that may sooner or later serve as a precedent, not only for the invasion, but for the destruction, of the rights and liberties of the other British Colonies, and even those of the people of the United Kingdom.

No. 3.
Proceedings
at a Meeting held at Montreal.

On motion of Dr. Robert Nelson, M.P.P., seconded by Mr. Antoine Voyer, Resolved, 2. That the adoption of these resolutions exhibits an absolute contempt for the just demands of the inhabitants of this Province; annihilates our confidence in the British Parliament, and should convince the Canadian people that, from this time, they cannot expect from the Government of the United Kingdom either a redress of grievances or respect for their political immunities.

On motion of Joseph Roy, Esq., M.P.P., seconded by Mr. Dexter Chapin, Resolved, 3. That inasmuch as the British Parliament, in passing one of these resolutions, has been culpable of a gross violation of our acknowledged rights, it is our imperative duty to resist such violation, by all lawful means in our power, and hereafter with becoming spirit to refrain from having recourse to a body which has declared itself so determinedly hostile to our liberties.

On motion of Dr. Beaubien, seconded by P. P. Lachapelle, Esq.,

Resolved, 4. That depending for the security and better establishment of our liberties alone upon our own energies, and on the sympathy of our neighbours on the American continent, it is prudent to prepare ourselves for the difficulties we may encounter, by habits of rigid economy in our personal expenses, and by promoting the advancement of education, agriculture, domestic manufactures, and the internal trade of the country.

On motion of C. S. Cherrier, Esq., M.P.P., seconded by E. B. O'Callaghan, Esq., M.P.P.,

Resolved, 5. That when the revenues of this Province are pilaged to satisfy the cupidity of those who have always opposed the just wants and wishes of the people, it becomes necessary, and is an incumbent duty, to diminish the sources of such revenues, by using the products and manufactures of the country, and by abstaining, as much as possible, from the consumption of such as pay duties, or are brought from beyond sea.

On motion of T. S. Brown, Esq., seconded by Fleury St. Jean, Esq.,

Resolved, 6. That a people possesses the positive right of obtaining articles of luxury or necessity in the cheapest market: that when they dispossess themselves of this right, and consent to pay duties on importations from abroad, as a convenient method of creating a revenue, it is only with an express understanding that the distribution of the revenues, so raised, shall be made by consent of their own freely chosen representatives: and that, therefore, whenever this contract is destroyed by the executive, or any foreign authority, the people are repossessed of their natural rights, and absolved from all moral obligations to contribute toward such revenues.

On motion of Mr. Joshua Bell, seconded by Mr. J. A. Labadie, N.P., Resolved, 7. That next to the productions and manufactures of this Province, a preference should be given to those of the United States of America, that can be procured without paying duties; and that it is an object of the greatest importance to us to cultivate more friendly relations with a powerful people, whose geographical position and political institutions tend to make them our natural allies, and upon whom we may rely for that sympathy that it is now useless to expect elsewhere.

On motion of Charles Ovide Perrault, Esq., M.P.P., seconded by Mr. Alexander Galt, Resolved, 8. That this meeting condemns the conduct of the Earl of Gosford, as member of a Commission whose reports are replete with falsehoods, prejudice, and ignorance, and trample under foot all principles of justice, for the purpose of fomenting and perpetuating hatreds and national distinctions in this country: that we condemn, in like manner, his conduct as head of an administration which had no other object than to sow division among our fellow-citizens, and to succeed by means of intrigue and deception, and which has been the author of the threatened measures of coercion against the Colony: and that, in consequence, the sooner Lord Gosford performs his promise to quit this country, the moment he could no longer do any good, the better both for him and for us.

On motion of E. E. Rodier, Esq., M.P.P., seconded by P. L. Le Tourneau, Esq.,

Resolved, 9. That a local committee with power to add to its number, be named, in each suburb of this city, whose duty it will be to meet, from time to time, in their respective districts, and to explain to their fellow-citizens the state of public affairs; to encourage them to observe the several recommendations contained in the foregoing resolutions; to procure signatures to the petition to the United States of America in favour of free trade, now in course of circulation, of which we approve; to be in frequent communication with each other, and to report to, and assist, the permanent and central committee, now sitting in the city of Montreal, in the various measures which they may adopt or recommend for the public good.

On motion of G. De Boucherville, Esq., seconded by L. G. De Lormier, Esq.,

Resolved, 10. That the members of the committees named in the meetings held in the several suburbs, preliminary to this general meeting, do compose the committees mentioned in the 9th resolution.

On motion of Raymond Plessis, Esq., seconded by Mr. P. Brennan, Resolved, 11. That this meeting, having the fullest confidence in the integrity and unflinching democracy of the Honourable L. J. Papineau, member for the west ward of this city, approves entirely of his past and present political course.

of ascendancy, and division of castes and parties, that have been pertinaciously enforced, and the guilty concurrence therein, or the culpable apathy of the metropolitan authorities in relation thereto, have introduced and perpetuated a system of abuse, oppression, and violation of laws, public plunder, malversation, judicial corruption, irresponsibility in Colonial functionaries, and other evils and grievances of all descriptions under which have suffered, and still suffer, the inhabitants of this Province, without distinction of origin, religion, or language: that the people and the House of Assembly having on frequent occasions humbly represented this state of things to the Metropolitan Government, have never obtained any change therein, but on the contrary, their well-founded complaints have been repelled to subserve the interested views of Colonial functionaries, impeached by the country, and uphold the artificial and arbitrary policy of successive Ministers whatever their complexion: that we had hoped that the British House of Commons would have proclaimed itself the friend of the rights and liberties of the people of all sections of the empire, and particularly of Lower Canada, whose attachment to the institutions and the Crown of Great Britain had stood pre-eminent in the midst of the greatest trials: that we have perceived with mingled grief and astonishment, by the adoption of resolutions recently proposed by His Majesty's Ministers on behalf of the Crown, that this last bulwark of our rights has given way, and co-operates, in concert with the authorities we have denounced, in an absolute denial of justice, and in those measures of violence and coercion, of which examples are alone to be found in those times of short-sightedness, when England lost, first the affections, and afterwards the dominion over her ancient Colonies.

Moved by Mr. John McVeigh, seconded by Mr. N. F. Belleau,

Resolved, 2. That our surprise at these projects was so much the greater, from the fact that the reality of the grievances of which we complained was admitted on all hands, and particularly the pernicious effect which the existing Legislative Council had exercised in the legislation and politics of this Province; and that, nevertheless, the definitive measures of England deny a remedy to these grievances, and maintain a discredited body, and all the Colonial scaffolding of which it is the support, whilst they also tend to punish the people for having justly complained, to crush them under new evils and a violation of law that cannot even be palliated, and to destroy altogether by that means the remnant of power that was still left to check the growing mass of abuses, to command a necessary and constitutional influence, and exercise a legitimate control over the servants of the State; that we can have no doubt, from the experience of the past, and the known and avowed intentions of the three branches of Government, of the Ministers, of the late Commission, and of the metropolitan and provincial functionaries, that these measures, instead of establishing in this country an effective, popular, responsible, and protective government, aim at an indefinite increase of the power of the department of Downing-street, and of the Colonial administration, to the prejudice of those powers which legitimately belong to us and to our representatives; and we moreover believe that this inversion of all the principles that insure order and liberty is but the prelude of political bondage, of our destruction as a people clothed with recognized rights, of the violation of the most solemn compacts, and of the subversion of the liberties, immunities, franchises, laws, worship, language, customs, and institutions of the inhabitants of this Province.

Appendix.
No. 4.
Proceedings
at a Meeting held at Quebec.
4th June, 1837.

Moved by Mr. Bartholemey La Chance, seconded by M. George La Rouche,

Resolved, 3. That amongst the rights which we hold in common with all the subjects of the empire, one of the best recognized, and most sacred of which the people have been most jealous and asserted with most success, is the right of self-taxation, and its correlative, the right of an entire control over the revenue thus created: that both these rights, which are inseparable from English citizenship, and from the respect attached to the right of property, were guaranteed to the people of this Province by their accession to the British empire, by the declaratory Act of the Imperial Parliament passed in the 18th year of Geo. III. and confirmed and practically enforced by the Constitutional Act of 1791: that the representatives of the people are the only medium through which such vital rights can be exercised: that the people of this Province are not represented in the British House of Commons, nor indeed can they effectually be so; and the only legitimate authority that we can, and do recognize, either to raise a public revenue in this country, or to control and appropriate it, is the Commons House of Lower Canada, with the concurrence of the co-ordinate branches of the Legislature, in so far as the limitation of their attributes in this respect duly sanctioned.

Moved by Mr. R. S. M. Bouchette, seconded by Mr. John Teed,

Resolved, 4. That amongst the resolutions introduced in the House of Commons by Lord John Russell on Canadian affairs, that which is especially calculated to excite an universal and honest indignation is the eighth, which commits an alarming invasion of our essential rights of taxation, of control, and of property, and of a wholesome influence and action on the measures of Government: that the alienation of the public revenue of Lower Canada, without a vote of our representatives, is an usurpation which, in the eyes of the people, reflects a withering obloquy upon the whole of the existing Government of England, and its wan creation, the Colonial Government of this Province: that our fellow-subjects of all classes are interested in the result of so exorbitant an act of arbitrary power, and that we hope that those in particular who have hitherto sustained the measures adopted or projected against the liberties of this country, feeling the consequences to which such an imperial measure may lead in relation to themselves, will nobly eschew the character of oppressors which they are invited to assume, in order to maintain so violent a state of things, and frankly acknowledge the efforts of the great mass of the Canadian people to establish and preserve the liberty of all without distinction, and will unite with us to rally round the House of Assembly, and uphold, with the dignity of freemen, the privileges which it is attempted to undermine; and that in return, for ourselves, for our fellow-citizens, and for our representatives, we solemnly promise to our friends of all origins, zealously to strive, as we have done heretofore, to obliterate those distinctions fomented by Government, and to guarantee to all classes of citizens equal rights, equal liberties, equal advantages, and equal protection.

Proceedings
at a Meeting held at Quebec.

Proposed by Mr. Tourangeau, seconded by Mr. Quigley,

Resolved, 5. That acts of such flagrancy, and which are the offspring of that sad spirit which was dominant in the British councils at the period of passing the Stamp and Tea Acts, which led the free colonists to assert their rights, and lay the foundation of the most vast, flourishing, and bright republic of the world, will not affect this Province only, but in principle must bear equally upon the other Colonies who feel an interest in good government, and indeed even upon the mother-country herself, looking to the possible events of futurity. That the Colonies in general are beforehand menaced, in the event of their resorting, through their representative assemblies, to the constitutional course for the redress of grievances: that we also thank our friends of those Colonies who, suffering under the same evils, and foreseeing a like futurity, have upheld us in our just demands and in our honest and conscientious declarations upon the remedies to be applied to the disasters of the country: that the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia especially, in demanding an Elective Legislative Council, the absolute control of the public treasure, and a responsible Government, will have powerfully aided in manifesting that the spirit of liberty which is growing with the wants and the varied exigencies of the people is by no means abated in any portion of this continent; and that, notwithstanding the ephemeral causes which may have paralyzed some of these Colonies, any Government that will base its measures, not upon principle and upon justice, but upon idle calculations of force and expediency, can never have therein but a precarious existence, an irregular career, and a loose power, of which no roots are found in the will and the affections of the people.

Moved by Mr. Jos. Legare, jun., seconded by Mr. Joseph Picard dit Destroismaisons, Resolved, 6. That these measures of coercion, proposed with deliberation, and the consequences whereof could not be kept out of sight, are, on the part of the British authorities, a voluntary renunciation of the confidence of the people as a political tie between Canada and the empire; that the subverters of the laws cannot pretend to command a prevalence of those sentiments; and that any appeal to those sentiments by them would be an anomaly difficult to characterize; that consequently we must consider the metropolis as having assumed all the responsibility that attaches to the public affairs of this Province whenever the wishes, the rights, and the interests of the people will be violated: that such a state of things might unhappily produce, in furtherance of demonstrations already commenced, new acts of violence, for the occurrence of which the country must be prepared; that in such grave circumstances, and seeing that the Provincial Parliament was not immediately called together to enable them energetically to protest, and to propose measures of protection, it has become a duty imperative on the people in all parts of the Province to meet in public assemblies, spontaneously, boldly, and deliberately, and that so long as justice is denied to the country, in order to reclaim their invaded rights, to canvass the means of commanding for them a due respect to prevent their further and greater violation.

Moved by Mr. Eugene Trudeau, seconded by Mr. J. Lepine,

Resolved, 7. That at the commencement of the present Provincial Administration, the Government had ostensibly held out as a claim to obtain a vote of confidence and a grant of public monies, the determination of doing justice and of redressing grievances: that nevertheless in now grasping at the public treasure with the sanction only of the British Parliament, the metropolis absolutely and formally rejects the essential demands of the people: that sympathy is shown but for those officers and courtiers that have misled and lost all Provincial Administrations, and so justly irritated the people, whilst the prayers and the suffering of these are heard and seen with callous indifference; that no longer misunderstanding the policy of Government in relation to us, we withhold and withdraw our confidence therefrom, resolved that, so long as justice shall be denied, and the measures now in progress shall not have been rescinded, we shall uphold the Government so far only as we and our representatives may deem judicious and beneficial to the interests of the people to avoid more immediate and greater evils; and for the sincerity of our determination, as well as for the future triumph of our liberties, we solemnly appeal to Providence, to the perseverance and virtues of the people of all origins, to the succour of our sister Colonies, and in general to the greater or lesser degree of sympathy that we may find out of the country, for our social and political existence, and for our institutions and liberties.

Moved by Dr. Rousseau, seconded by Mr. Michael Tessier,

Resolved, 8. That the promulgation of the Reports of the Commissioners, styled Royal, offers abundant and conclusive evidence that the resolutions of Lord John Russell and other measures of coercive character, which are meditated, have originated in the violent, unjust, and prejudiced recommendations of the said Commissioners, who, whilst they were making overtures of peace and studiously creating illusory hopes of conciliation, were soliciting at the hands of the Ministry the adoption of the measures of coercion that have since been revealed, and which reduced to their most simple value the fallacious professions of the present administration; and that the latter, in grounding its march upon those coercive measures and putting them into execution, will become identified with them and be the more and more responsible to the inhabitants of this Province.

Moved by Mr. Remy Malouin, seconded by Mr. Patry, jun.

Resolved, 9. That in the event of the triumph of oppression by the final adoption of the said resolutions in the British House of Commons, their ultimate sanction and their application in any way whatever, it will be the duty of the people to devise means of neutralizing their effect, and to substantially oppose them by organization: that among these means we consider the propagation of education, the diffusion of political knowledge, a preference given to the produce of the country and our domestic manufactures, and the systematic organization of the people by parishes, townships, and counties, all of which we earnestly recommend; that in order to discuss and regulate them, and to insure unanimity and mutual understanding, it is fit to declare our approbation of the project of a "General Convention of Delegates" from the different counties in the Province, that shall meet in some central locality, in conjunction with the members of the Assembly and of the Council who repudiate the said measures of coercion, in order to advise upon some wise, firm, and protective course, to meet the exigencies of the times and the imminent danger that threatens our liberties; that the said Delegates for the City and Banlieu of Quebec be Messrs. Eugene Trudeau, Dr. Rousseau, Charles Hunter, Joseph Légaré, sen., Robert Shore Milnes Bouchette, Jean Tourangeau, N.P., Michael Conolly, and Barthelmy La Chance, who, together with the resident members of the Assembly who are enemies to the mediated coercion, and the friends of elective institutions and good government, will constitute a committee of correspondence to communicate with the similar committees in other sections of the country, and also with the people through the medium of the press, public meetings or otherwise; with power to add new members to their committee.

Proposed by Mr. N. F. Belleau, seconded by Mr. Zacharie Chabot,

Resolved, 10. That the people of this Province are imbued with a sense of the most warm and lively gratitude towards their generous friends in the British Parliament who defended our rights and sustained our honour when both were recently assailed in the House of Commons; that they are also proud to find the working classes of London and of other important towns express their sympathetic attachment with us to free institutions and their equal aversion to oppression, both of which sentiments they have so manfully expressed; and that we equally hope that the great mass of the liberal people inhabiting the British Isles will not allow itself to be circumvented by the arbitrary conduct of its Government, but that it will view with sympathy our struggle for the preservation of our dearest rights, and will uphold us in our expected efforts to obtain an Elective Legislative Council that may, in harmony with the representatives of the people, promote the happiness of the country; an executive more directly responsible to the Colony—the preservation and enjoyment of the laws and institutions to which we are attached—and which have kept up order and sustained hope in the country notwithstanding the inroads made upon them by Government—the repeal of injurious Acts and of odious monopolies—the recognition of the authority of the Provincial Parliament over the lands of the country—and the establishment of an easy system of access thereto, under a free and direct tenure and under laws common to the inhabitants here and of other subjects of the empire, and finally the entire correction of the abuses and grievances of which we have complained.

Moved by Chs. Hunter, seconded by Remi Quirouet, Esq.,

Resolved, 11. That in all the various struggles against power on the part of the people, in every age and clime, it has always been found expedient and necessary to repose implicit confidence in and support some individual, distinguished alike by talent and patriotism, who in the opinion of all may be deemed qualified to be the organ or leader of a people; that the present times, pregnant with eventful consequences, offer no exception to the adoption of so salutary an example, but on the contrary require imperiously a unanimous declaration on the part of the people:—that the public conduct of Louis Joseph Papineau, Speaker of the House of Assembly of this Province, throughout a long and eventful career, chequered by many political difficulties, is deserving of all praise, and is entitled to the gratitude of every generous and noble mind: that in consequence, the thanks of this meeting be voted to Louis Joseph Papineau,

On motion of R. S. M. Bouchette, Esq., seconded by Mr. John Teed, Resolved, 12. That the thanks of this meeting be voted to the Chairman and the Secretaries.

MY LORD,

The very violent party who were alone active in calling a meeting of the county of Richelieu, on the 7th instant, to express their indignation at Lord John Russell's resolutions, feel much disappointed from the numbers and respectability of the assembly falling so very far short of their expectations. I send you a copy of the resolutions; and it is unnecessary for me to occupy your time in commenting upon them, as they will speak for themselves. I may, however, state, from authority which I have no reason to doubt, that Mr. D'Eschambaut, a seigneur of the county, who is reported in the newspapers of that party to have moved the 2d resolution, was not present at the meeting, being confined at the time by illness; and that the 10th resolution, for raising a tribute for Mr. Papineau, though reported by the same organs to have passed unanimously, was not even proposed at the meeting. Another meeting of the county of Montreal, and called by the same parties, took place on the 15th instant at St. Laurent, which was attended by Mr. Papineau, who made a long speech in his usual violent strain, and full of misrepresentations. I also enclose a copy of the resolutions there passed, in order to give your Lordship some idea of the feelings generally prevalent as regards the political views and objects of the principal actors in these proceedings. I must remark that these meetings were held, one on a Sunday, at the church-door, after divine service, and the other on a fête-day, for the purpose of swelling the number of auditors, by including those who were drawn there for the performance of their religious duties. Even with this assistance the numbers at the meeting of the county of Richelieu, including men, women, and children, fell very far short, I am informed, of the statement in the Vindicator, viz., "upwards of 1200 freeholders," and the numbers at St. Laurent assembly, stated on the same authority to exceed 700, did not, from the accounts I have received from various quarters, exceed, including all descriptions of persons, 300 individuals, which is the more remarkable from the meeting being held in the most populous county, and within a few miles of the city of Montreal; and I understand that Mr. La Fontaine, M.P.P. for Terrebonne, one of the most ultra of the party, who was to have addressed the meeting, declined, from the paucity of hearers. Some other meetings have been held in different parts of the country, which have proved failures, and others are in contemplation, which I have no doubt will share the same fate. All this tends to confirm me in the opinion I gave in a former letter, as to the probability of a change in public opinion, and that the Canadians were beginning to discover the real views of the ultra-radicals. I must, however, here observe, that the feeling against the Imperial Parliament authorizing the taking of the money out of the chest is very strong, and even those who reprobate the withholding of the supplies by the Assembly cannot refrain from an expression of disapprobation at this part of Lord John Russell's resolutions. I cannot contemplate the present posture of affairs without considering how far it may be desirable, should the sentiment of distrust against the Papineau party, to which I have alluded, become more marked and decided, to dissolve the Parliament, and indeed my present impression inclines me to a dissolution; for a new Parliament would, I conceive, possess materials much more likely than the existing one to appreciate any measures you might adopt for meeting the difficulties under which the Province is now labouring; and should such measures be of a conditional nature, that is, to be enforced in the event of a continued refusal on the part of the Assembly to permit the government to go on, it would have a still greater chance of acceptance, and thus the more obnoxious course of applying the money without the consent of the representatives here might become unnecessary. If, in addition to this, the legislative council should be at the same time liberalized, and an efficient Executive Council established, matters might get on smoothly. You may know of difficulties and impediments to this plan, of which I cannot see the force. Nothing is more erroneous, in my opinion, than the supposition that the French Canadians are a disloyal body: I have every reason to believe the contrary. I have not the slightest apprehension of any serious commotion coming out of these meetings, which, as far as regards the district of Montreal, are planned and concocted, and the resolutions framed, by the same individuals, few in number, who, it is understood, are desirous of substituting a republican for the existing form of government.

MY LORD,

In consequence of meetings held, and about to be held, in different parts of this Province, I cannot conceal from you my impression that a system of organization, under the influence and guidance of Mr. Papineau, and a few designing individuals ready to execute his purposes, is at this moment going on. The primary and ostensible object of Mr. Papineau's plan seems to be, to procure a public expression of indignation against the ministerial measures, and eventually to excite a hostile feeling against the government, and to establish a convention, which he expects will overawe the constituted authorities, and thus carry all his destructive views into execution. Under this conviction I have determined to adopt prompt measures, should they be necessary, to check the evil in its infancy. I contemplate, therefore, issuing a Proclamation, warning the people against the misrepresentations and machinations of the designing, and exercising the discretion you confided to me for increasing the military force here, by despatching your letter to Sir Colin Campbell, with a request for one of the regiments now stationed at Halifax. I must repeat, that these steps would not be dictated by the apprehension of any serious commotion; for I have every reason to believe that the mass of the Canadians are loyal and contented, but from the persuasion that the presence of a larger military force in this Province might of itself prevent the occurrence of any disturbance, by deterring the ill-disposed, securing the wavering, and giving confidence to the timid.

I have the honour to be, my Lord, your most obedient servant,

PROVINCE OF LOWER CANADA.

GOSFORD.

His Excellency the Right Honourable Archibald, Earl of Gosford, Baron Worlingham, of Beccles, in the county of Suffolk, Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over the Provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada, Vice-Admiral of the same, and one of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, &c. &c.

A Proclamation.

Whereas certain of His Majesty's subjects, in different parts of this Province, have recently held public meetings, and thereat adopted resolutions, having for their objects the resistance of the lawful authority of the King and Parliament, and the subversion of the laws, on the observance of which the welfare and happiness of all His Majesty's subjects, under Divine Providence, chiefly depend. And whereas at such meetings evil disposed and designing men, the instigators thereof, have by artifice and misrepresentation endeavoured to spread abroad statements and opinions, inconsistent with loyal duty to His Majesty, and with the acknowledged principles of the Constitution, injurious to the lawful authority of His Majesty and of His Parliament, and tending to persuade His Majesty's subjects that they are absolved from their allegiance, that they can no longer depend on the parent State for justice and protection, and that they must seek for the same, when a convenient opportunity offers, by other means:—

And whereas it is both my resolution and my duty to maintain and defend to the utmost, against all such unlawful proceedings and attempts, the undoubted prerogatives and powers of His Majesty and of His Parliament, in order to maintain and secure the institutions, both civil and religious, of His Canadian subjects, and to preserve peace and good government in this Province:—

And whereas upon the occasions aforesaid, representations have knowingly been made entirely devoid of truth, for the purpose of inducing His Majesty's subjects to swerve from their allegiance, and of producing a belief that the Parliament of the United Kingdom has violated or intends to violate the just rights and privileges of His Majesty's subjects in this Province, and is about to adopt oppressive measures towards them:—

Being desirous of undeceiving such as may unwarily have been led to rely upon such untrue and mischievous representations, it has become my duty, as the representative of His Majesty, to address myself most earnestly to the people of this Province, in the confidence that they will listen to the language of reason, respect unanimously those precepts of just subordination inculcated by the laws of their country, and by no act of reckless indiscretion, either compromise their present happiness and future prosperity, or permit those permanent interests to be compromised by others.

I do therefore, by and with the advice and consent of His Majesty's Executive Council of this Province, hereby most solemnly exhort all the subjects of His Majesty in this Province to unite in the cause of peace and good order, to discontinue all writings of an exciting and seditious tendency, and to eschew all meetings of a dangerous or equivocal character; and I do hereby enjoin and strictly command Given under my hand and seal at arms, at the Castle of St. Lewis, in the city of Quebec, the fifteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven, and in the seventh year of His Majesty's reign.

SIR,

THE attention of the Governor-in-Chief having lately been called to a report contained in the Vindicator newspaper of the 16th May last, of the proceedings of a meeting held on the previous day at St. Laurent, in which you are stated to have taken an active part, and where resolutions were passed, some of which distinctly recommend a violation of the laws; I am directed by his Excellency to call upon you, as one holding a commission in the militia, to state whether you were present at that meeting, and concurred in the resolutions there passed; and if so, I am to inquire whether you have any explanation to offer in this matter.

SIR,

The pretension of the Governor to interrogate me respecting my conduct at St. Laurent on the 15th May last, is an impertinence which I repel with contempt and silence.

I, however, take the pen merely to tell the Governor that it is false that any of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the county of Montreal, held at St. Laurent on the 15th May last, recommend a violation of the laws, as in his ignorance he may believe, or as he at least asserts.

Your obedient Servant,

*Extract of a Despatch from the Earl of Gosford to Lord Glenelg, dated

FROM the best information that has reached me I have reason to think that the Proclamation has been useful; for although a few meetings have been held subsequently to its appearance, yet I believe they have proved failures, and are scarce worth noticing. Mr. Papineau has been recently visiting various parts of the district of Quebec for the purpose of agitation, but apparently with very little success.

Before quitting the subject of meetings, I must mention one that took place on the 6th instant, in the city of Montreal, of quite an opposite nature to those I have already noticed. It was called by a requisition signed by upwards of 1200 individuals, and was far more numerous attended than any that had yet been held, the numbers being estimated at about 4000, amongst whom were many of French Canadian origin, of great respectability, and some who had hitherto gone with the Papineau party. The objects of the resolutions that were passed, four in number, and copies of which are enclosed, are, to justify the measures of the Imperial Parliament on the ground of their being rendered necessary by the refusal of the Assembly to grant the necessary appropriations for the administration of justice and the support of the civil government of the Province; to disapprove of the conduct of the Assembly in refusing to proceed with the public business; to reprobate, in strong terms, the resolutions adopted and measures recommended at the meetings of the opposite party; and finally, to express a conviction that all real grievances will be fully redressed by His Majesty's Government, and that a continued connexion of the Province with Great Britain is essentially necessary for the prosperity and improvement of the former.

Montreal on the 6th July 1837.*

1st. Moved by Jules Quesnel, Esq., J.P., and seconded by John Molson, Esq.,

That the unjustifiable refusal of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada to make the necessary appropriations for the administration of justice, and the support of the civil government of this Province, has been the principal cause of the resolutions brought forward by His Majesty's Ministers, and adopted by the Imperial Parliament.

2d. Moved by William Robertson, Esq., M. D., and seconded by C. S. Debleury, Esq., M.P.P.,

That this meeting highly disapproves of the outrageous proceedings of the majority of the House of Assembly in the express refusal to proceed with the public business, in their declared resolve not to co-operate with the Government, and in their fixed determination to continue the course of policy pursued by them, all which are productive of great evils to the Province, generally ruinous to the commerce of the country, and fatal to the interests of the agricultural and labouring classes.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

3d. Moved by P. E. Leclerc, Esq., J. P., and seconded by Stanley Bagg, Esq.

That this meeting cannot too forcibly express its abhorrence of the immoral and disorganizing effect of the resolutions adopted, and measures recommended, at public meetings recently held in various parts of this Province, and that this meeting reprobate them as detrimental to the welfare of the country, and directly opposed to the sentiments of fidelity to His Majesty and devotion to his Government generally, entertained by his loyal Canadian subjects throughout the Province.

4th. Moved by the Hon. Peter M'Gill, and seconded by H. Edmund Barron, Esq.,

That this meeting is impressed with the conviction that the real and acknowledged grievances of His Majesty's subjects in Lower Canada will be fully redressed by His Majesty's Government, that the continued connexion of Lower Canada with the parent State is essentially necessary for the prosperity and improvement of the Province, and that any attempt to disturb that connexion and produce a dismemberment of the empire, is directly contrary to the opinion, as it is absolutely opposed to the wishes and interests of this meeting.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, for the purpose of being laid at the foot of the Throne, the enclosed loyal address which has been this day presented to me by a numerous deputation from a public meeting of the inhabitants of this city, which took place on the 31st ultimo, expressing their disapprobation of the proceedings of other meetings of an opposite tendency, that have been held in various parts of the Province, and conveying an assurance of their fidelity to the Crown, and attachment to the connexion between this Province and the United Kingdom.

The meeting, which was conducted in the most orderly and peaceable manner, was summoned by a requisition signed by, I understand, about 3000 persons, and attended by upwards of 6000 of all classes of the inhabitants of the city and vicinity of Quebec.

I beg to enclose a copy of the answer which I returned to the address.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We, Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the undersigned inhabitants of the city and vicinity of Quebec, forming a committee of the public meeting held on the Esplanade, on Monday, the 31st of July now last past, for the purpose of expressing the opinion of the said meeting on certain attempts made at other meetings held in different parts of this Province, and to convey their said opinion to Her Majesty's Government, humbly approach your Excellency, as representing our gracious Sovereign in this Province, in conformity to the resolution by which we are appointed, and most respectfully represent, on the part of the said meeting.

That we have observed with deep regret the attempts which have been made at meetings recently held in different parts of this Province to disseminate disrespect to the public authorities, and disaffection towards the British Government and Parliament, and to excite to the violation of the laws.

That whatever differences of opinion may have prevailed in the Province in regard to its public concerns, the inhabitants thereof have hitherto maintained a distinguished character for fidelity to the Sovereign, a love of public order, and obedience to lawful authority: and that is our duty and determination still to maintain this character, and resist to the utmost all acts or attempts contrary to the allegiance which is due to the British Crown, or against the public peace, or in violation of the law.

That we feel the entire conviction that the present unfortunate condition of public affairs in this Province is, in great part, owing to the misunderstandings and dissensions which have prevailed in the Legislature, and amongst the inhabitants of this Province; and that a remedy is to be found in avoiding these misunderstandings and dissensions for the future, and in cordial union of all classes in promoting the peace, welfare, and good government of the Province.

That it is equally the duty and interest of the Government and the subject in the Colony to co-operate in the remedy of all abuses which may be found to exist, to the end that the peace and prosperity of the Province may be effectually promoted, and all classes of the inhabitants be maintained in equal rights, and in the full enjoyment of security of person and property, and all the peculiar privileges which they enjoy, or to which they are legally entitled.

That under the present circumstances it is our duty humbly to assure Her Majesty's Government that it may fully rely on our fidelity to the Crown, and affectionate attachment to the connexion subsisting between this Province and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

We beg leave to assure your Excellency that the persons who attended at the said meeting, and concurred in the sentiments now expressed, form a majority of the inhabitants of the city of Quebec; and they humbly pray, on the part of the said meeting, that the aforesaid expression of their opinion, and their loyal assurance, may be transmitted to Her Majesty's Government in England.

Quebec, 3d August, 1837.

Signed by 79 persons.

(Copy.)

GENTLEMEN,

I shall have much pleasure in transmitting, as you request, to Her Majesty's Government in England the address which you have just presented to me for that purpose; and I feel convinced that Her Majesty will receive with entire satisfaction the assurances of fidelity to the Crown, of obedience to the laws, and of affectionate attachment to the connexion between this Province and the United Kingdom, which so numerous and highly respectable a portion of the inhabitants of the city and vicinage of Quebec have thus come forward to tender. These assurances, in conjunction with that union of loyalty and public spirit which has so recently been manifested in this town, cannot fail to be peculiarly acceptable at a time when the most artful and insidious attempts have been resorted to to disseminate doctrines at variance with morality and justice, and tending to the overthrow and violation of those laws and institutions which secure to the whole body of Her Majesty's Canadian subjects the rights and immunities which they now possess and enjoy.

While I deeply regret these attempts, and while my earnest endeavours shall be directed to avert the calamities they are calculated to produce, I can assure you that I shall not cease to adhere to those principles which I have ever held, and shall always be ready and anxious, while I fill the high situation confided to me by our gracious Sovereign, to co-operate in the remedy of abuses, in promoting the welfare and happiness of this Province, and in maintaining all classes of its inhabitants in the full and peaceful enjoyment of equal rights.

Moved by Col. Odell, seconded by Capt. Michel Langevin,

Resolved, 1. That this meeting has observed with great regret that an assembly was held in this parish on Monday, the 17th July instant, by a certain number of individuals, who wrongfully and vauntingly denominated themselves to be a meeting of the freeholders of this county, whereas the greater number of the persons present on that occasion were entire strangers to the county, who attended purposely in order to deceive the people and to propagate disorganizing and disloyal principles among them; that the necessary notifications of that meeting not having been made for the purpose of calling together the inhabitants of the county, the proceedings and resolutions had at that meeting cannot, and ought not, to be considered as expressive of the sentiments of the people of this part of the Province, and that it is the bounden duty of this meeting to protest against the proceedings which then took place, and the resolutions which were there adopted.

Moved by Capt. Ant. Robert, seconded by Capt. Edward March,

Resolved, 2. That the line of conduct pursued by a majority of the Commons House of Assembly for some years past, and the continued refusal of that body to co-operate with the other branches of the Legislature in the discharge of the duties springing out of the relation in which it stands towards the people of the Province, have imposed upon His Majesty's Ministers the necessity of resorting to the authority and interposition of the Imperial Parliament, for the purpose of arresting a course of things detrimental to the best interests of the Colony, and fraught with injury to all classes of its population.

Moved by Capt. Daniel Stott, seconded by J. B. Lamoureux, Esq.,

Resolved, 3. That the Assembly having virtually abdicated its functions in refusing to contribute towards the expenses of the local government and the administration of justice, except upon terms which would insure to it a paramount, if not an exclusive authority, in the legislature and government of the country, this meeting feels itself called upon to express its approval of the resolutions recently submitted by the King's Ministers to the House of Parliament, and to declare the interference of the Imperial Government to have been, under the circumstances disclosed, not only expedient but urgent.

Moved by Col. F. Languedoc, Esq., seconded by Capt. Fred. Singer,

Resolved, 4. That this meeting condemns the measures suggested and the principles avowed at various meetings recently held in different parts of the Province, under pretence of giving expression to public opinion upon the resolutions, as dangerous in their tendency, subversive of the fidelity which the people owe to their Sovereign and his Government, and calculated to foster impressions the most erroneous, with respect to the sentiments and affections of His Majesty's Canadian subjects.

Moved by Major H. Wilson, seconded by Pierre Poissant, Esq.,

Resolved, 5. That this meeting disclaims any participation in the sentiments or objects which appear to have prompted these assemblies, and is assured that the majesty of the laws, and a steady exercise of authority on the part of the executive government, have become necessary, and will be found adequate to preserve the peace of the country, and to check the further diffusion of those seditious and disorganizing principles, by which a hitherto peaceable and happy community is sought to be disturbed.

Moved by Casimir Dupuis, Esq., seconded by Timothy Appleton, Esq.,

Resolved, 6. That this assembly, confiding in the honourable intentions of His Majesty's Government towards his Canadian subjects, is determined in its purposes to maintain inviolate the connexion which exists between the Colony and the parent State.

Moved by John McCallum, Esq., seconded by Winslow Williams, Esq.,

Resolved, 7. That this meeting approves of the pacific administration of his Excellency Lord Gosford, the Governor of this Province, and deems it a duty to acknowledge that he has manifested an earnest desire to promote the good of the country, and the welfare and happiness of the people of this Province; and it is assured that this disposition of his Excellency would have been followed with real and beneficial effects, had the majority of the House of Assembly not refused to co-operate with him in measures necessary for the general weal and prosperity of the country.

Moved by P. Gamelin, Esq., seconded by Joseph Brissett, Esq.,

Resolved, 8. That this meeting is of opinion that the inhabitants of this Province can have now no real complaint to make against the British Government; that it firmly believes that all the troubles which disturb this Province originate from the ambitious dreams and idle projects of Louis Joseph Papineau, Speaker of the House of Assembly of this Province, who, with a few obscure agitators, tread through the country, using their utmost efforts to deceive and mislead the people, and induce them to pronounce opinions upon matters, the import of which they know not; and this meeting is fully satisfied that the people cannot live under any authority which could render them more happy and afford greater protection, and the enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, than under that of the paternal government of Great Britain.

Moved by T. Brissett, Esq., seconded by Captain William A. Fisher,

Resolved, 9. That this meeting censures and highly and openly disapproves of the parliamentary conduct of the representatives of the county of L'Acadie, who, far from fulfilling their duty in proposing, advocating, and sanctioning laws necessary for the prosperity and welfare of the community, and the advancement of its interests, such as the abolition of the feudal tenure, the establishment of register offices, bankrupt laws, hypothecary rights, &c. &c. &c., have only lent themselves to second the views of the majority of the House of Assembly, in disputes relative to legislative and speculative prerogatives, and by such conduct have perverted and abused the sacred charge reposed in them for the general good of the people.

Moved by Captain M'Allister, seconded by James Brisbain, Esq.,

Resolved, 10. That the proceedings of this assembly be transmitted to his Excellency Lord Gosford, with a humble request that they be placed at the feet of His Gracious Majesty, as an authentic proof of the sentiments of respect and fidelity which animate his loyal subjects of the county of L'Acadie, which, in every respect, appears to be the expression of, and in unison with, the feelings of the great majority of the inhabitants of Lower Canada.

That this meeting disapproves of the obstinate refusal of the majority of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada to provide the necessary grant for the administration of justice, and the maintenance of the civil government of this Province, and that the general state of hardship in which this country actually is, is the consequence of the want of that appropriation.

Resolved, 2. That the House of Assembly, in refusing to proceed to public business until the Legislative Council be rendered elective, has wholly impeded the progress of this Province, and that that dispute is the source of endless evils, which already weigh heavily upon this country, and prevent the wealth and happiness of its inhabitants.

Resolved, 3. That we view with regret that the two branches of the Imperial Legislature have passed resolutions, tending to authorize the Governor of the Province to pay out of the provincial revenues the arrears due for the ordinary expenses of the administration of justice, and of the civil government of the Province, and that without the participation of our House of Assembly: but we are fully convinced that His Majesty's Ministers would never have attempted to interfere with the Constitutional Act, if the House of Assembly had not explicitly demanded it, in contradiction of the petition sent from this country in 1827, and if the said House of Assembly had not obstinately refused to provide for the necessary supplies.

Resolved, 4. Being satisfied with the Constitutional Act, by which we have been governed for nearly half a century, and dreading alterations which might be therein made, without our knowledge, and against the wishes and intentions of the people of this Province, we desire, as we have always done, to preserve it unaltered.

Resolved, 5. Relying upon our rights, as well as upon the justice of the Imperial Government, for the redress of grievances of which we have reason to complain, we shall use every just, legal, and constitutional means to obtain it. That the tone of speeches uttered, and the resolutions adopted at certain meetings, held in different parts of the province, far from enabling us to obtain speedy justice, cannot but irritate against us a great portion of our fellow-citizens, as well as the Ministers and the Imperial Parliament.

Resolved, 6. That the appeal to heinous passions, to contempt of the laws, to smuggling, to foreign sympathies, are words but otherwise expressed to mean theft, murder, and treason; that this meeting ought to express, and expresses its horror of such proceedings, which tend to draw numberless evils upon this Province, and ought to attract the animadversion of the law upon their guilty authors.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to inform you that the resolutions on the affairs of Lower Canada, which you are already aware had been adopted by the House of Commons, having been subsequently communicated at a conference to the House of Peers, have been assented to by their Lordships without a division. In pursuance of those resolutions it is the intention of His Majesty's Government immediately to introduce into Parliament a Bill, which, in addition to the authority with which it is proposed to invest the Governor to discharge the arrears due for the various public services in the Colony, will embrace such of the other topics comprised in the resolutions as require a Legislative sanction. In the mean time, and until you receive the direct sanction of an Act of Parliament, you will not consider yourself at liberty to depart from the ordinary course to be observed in the appropriation of any portion of the public revenue which has hitherto been subject to the control of the Provincial Legislature. The opinion, indeed, which has already been so clearly expressed by both Houses of the Imperial Parliament, as to the necessity of investing you with this authority, leaves no room for doubt as to the result of the proposal of the requisite enactment for this purpose; but His Majesty's Government are still willing to hope that the exercise of the power to be intrusted to you may be rendered unnecessary by the intervention of the Provincial Legislature.

To avoid the necessity of violating one of the great principles of the Canadian Constitution, we have been willing to make every sacrifice, excepting that of the honour of the Crown and the integrity of the empire; and even now we are anxious that the experiment should be tried, whether yet a possibility remains of reconciling the assertion of those paramount interests with the maintenance of the principles of the Parliamentary Charter of 1791. The interval which must elapse before the proposed Bill can have passed through both Houses of Parliament and have been transmitted to your Lordship, affords an opportunity, of which His Majesty's Government are happy to avail themselves, of inviting the House of Assembly to reconsider the course by which they have attempted to enforce their demands, after they shall have been made acquainted with the deliberate opinion of both Houses of Parliament on the several points at issue. I cannot but entertain the hope that this opinion, expressed in the most decisive manner, after full and protracted discussion, may not be without its due weight on the deliberations of the House of Assembly, and that they will feel that they are best consulting the interests committed to their care by receding from the extreme ground which they have recently taken, and by co-operating with His Majesty's Government and the Imperial Parliament in effecting those salutary improvements in the Provincial Government, and the working of the existing Constitution, from which real and important benefits may accrue to all classes of His Majesty's subjects in Lower Canada. The King would not authorize your Lordship to submit to the Assembly any proposal derogatory from the high estimation which justly attaches to the representatives of the Canadian people. But His Majesty is assured that no real dishonour or well-founded reproach would be incurred by the House if that which has been refused to the Executive Government, acting alone and unsupported by the British Parliament, should be conceded to the united voice of the Imperial Legislature.

In this hope, and resolved to omit no possible effort for reconciling these differences, His Majesty commands me to instruct your Lordship, on the receipt of this Despatch, to convene the Provincial Legislature for the earliest day at which it can be conveniently called together. It is, indeed, possible that circumstances with which I am unacquainted, but of which your Lordship will be in possession, may render a strict adherence to this injunction inexpedient. In that case a discretion will, of course, remain with you as to the precise period for which the Legislature should be summoned. Any delay, however, not imperatively demanded by the force of such circumstances, appears to me undesirable.

You will communicate to them, on their meeting, the proceedings which have taken place in Parliament, and the resolutions which have been adopted on the affairs of Lower Canada. You will express to them the deep regret and reluctance with which His Majesty's Government have yielded to the necessity of invoking the interference of Parliament in order to meet the pressing difficulties which other resources had failed to remove in the administration of the affairs of the Province. You will further express to the House of Assembly the anxious hope that you may not be compelled to exercise the extreme power with which Parliament has declared its intention of investing you in order to discharge the arrears due for public services in the Colony, for the payment of which the faith of the Crown has been repeatedly pledged. You will inform them that the chief object with which they are called together at present is, that before the Bill, founded on the resolutions, shall reach Lower Canada they may have an opportunity of rendering that part of it which rests on the 8th resolution unnecessary and inoperative by a grant of the supplies requisite for the purposes for which it is intended to provide. You will further express to them the earnest desire of His Majesty's Government to co-operate with them in the removal of every obstacle to the beneficial working of the existing Constitution, and in the correction of every defect which time and experience have developed in the laws and institutions of the Province, or in the administration of its government. You will assure them of a prompt attention on the part of His Majesty's Government to every representation which may proceed from them tending to effect improvements of this nature, calculated to strengthen the connexion subsisting between this country and Lower Canada, by the promotion of the welfare and the interests of all classes of His Majesty's subjects in the Colony. I trust, also, that you will be enabled to appeal to the alterations which may have been made in the composition of the Councils as a proof of the sincerity with which His Majesty's Government are disposed to carry into effect the intentions which they have expressed on this head. With reference, however, to this particular branch of the subject, I must defer any more explicit observations until I shall have received from your Lordship the communication which you have given me reason to expect at an early period, and which I trust I shall receive in ample time to enable me to address you further respecting it before the meeting of the Legislature. There are other topics which will readily suggest themselves to your own mind as fit to be introduced into your communication to the Legislature on its meeting; and I may probably have occasion to refer to this subject in the interval which must elapse before the commencement of the Session. I have, however, felt it my duty to give you this general outline of the nature of the speech with which I think it will be desirable that you should address them in His Majesty's name.

It may, perhaps, be necessary that I should also advert to three contingencies, for either of which your Lordship should be prepared. First, In pursuance of the resolution with which they separated, the House of Assembly may refuse to meet in sufficient numbers for the transaction of business, or having met, to proceed to business, or they may resume their legislative duties in the same spirit of resistance which they formerly manifested.

Secondly. The House may proceed to business without any avowed spirit of resistance; but their subsequent proceedings may afford convincing evidence of an intention to postpone, to an indefinite or remote period, a decision on the application which you will have submitted to them for the payment of the arrears.

Thirdly. The House may, at their meeting, give proof of a more conciliatory disposition and may justify the hope, that the continuance of the Session will issue in the satisfactory adjustment of the questions in debate.

In the first or the second of these events it will be alike your duty to proceed to a prorogation. Unfortunate as the necessity of adopting that measure may be, it is yet of light moment compared with that of appearing to fail in decision and fixedness of purpose in the present posture of affairs in Lower Canada. Your Lordship will pursue whatever course may seem best adapted to render it known to the parties more immediately concerned that, if this effort to obtain the co-operation of the Assembly shall fail, the powers with which you may be intrusted by Parliament will infallibly be brought into exercise.

If, on the other hand, the House shall meet in such a spirit as to justify the hope of a satisfactory termination of the questions in debate, and should, within a reasonable time, provide for the payment of the arrears, His Majesty's Government would most sincerely share in the satisfaction which I am convinced your Lordship would feel in the necessity having been happily removed for the adoption of that extreme and ultimate remedy which the Parliamentary resolutions contemplate.

It is further necessary that your Lordship should be prepared to act decisively regarding the demand which the Assembly will, of course, renew for their contingent expenses, if they should proceed to the despatch of public business. Under ordinary circumstances I should regard the admission of this demand as hardly capable of debate; but in the present posture of affairs it must be admitted cautiously, and not without due reserve: I cannot admit that the government would be justified, far less that it is bound, to give its sanction to the unlimited issue of public funds for the contingencies of the House of Assembly, while that House refuses or fails to provide for any other of the ordinary civil expenditure of the Province. To any application of this nature, therefore, the answer should, in substance, be an avowal of your willingness to issue a moderate sum for the immediate expenditure of the House. Further supplies for this purpose should only be issued from time to time as the exigencies of the public service may demand. It would be right, also, to consider whether the House should not be required to render an account of the expenditure of the sums already issued for contingencies. There are not wanting motives at once weighty and obvious for checking any mismanagement of these funds: while, on the other hand, to withhold them, so as to impede the free exercise of the functions of the House of Assembly, would be at once useless and unjustifiable.

I have, &c.,

Copy of Lord Gosford's Speech on opening the Session.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council—Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

IN obedience to the royal commands, signified to me through the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, I have convened you at this unusual period for the purpose of communicating to you the proceedings that, since your last Session, have taken place in the Imperial Parliament, and the resolutions that have been therein adopted on the affairs of this Province.

This course has been prescribed to me in order to afford the House of Assembly, before that resolution which relates to the payment of the arrears now due for the Civil service of the government shall have assumed the binding shape of a law, an opportunity of reconsidering the course which, for the last four years, they have thought it expedient to pursue with respect to the financial difficulties of the Province, and in the earnest hope that, by a timely intervention of this Legislature, the exercise of the power intended to be intrusted to the head of the local government may be rendered unnecessary,—a result, for the attainment of which Her Majesty's Government would willingly make every sacrifice save that of the honour of the Crown and the integrity of the empire.

Since the receipt of the instructions to which I have alluded the mournful intelligence has reached us of the demise of our late deservedly-beloved Monarch. Few kings have reigned more in the affections of their subjects than William the Fourth. The warm and lively interest he always took in every matter connected with the welfare of his Canadian subjects cannot fail to increase their feelings of regret for his loss.

The accession of our present Gracious Sovereign Queen Victoria to the throne of the British empire has not produced any alteration in the course that had been previously prescribed for my adoption.

The Reports of the Royal Commissioners on the several subjects which came under their investigation during their stay in Lower Canada having been laid before the two Houses of the Imperial Parliament, a series of resolutions, ten in number, were shortly afterwards introduced by Ministers, relative to the affairs of this Province, copies of which I shall communicate to you in the usual way at the earliest opportunity. The principal object of these resolutions are to declare,—

Session.

First. That in the existing state of Lower Canada it is unadvisable to make the Legislative Council elective; but that it is expedient to adopt measures for securing to that branch of the Legislature a greater degree of public confidence.

Secondly. That while it is expedient to improve the composition of the Executive Council, it is unadvisable to subject it to the responsibility demanded by the House of Assembly.

Thirdly. That the legal title of the British-American Land Company to the land they hold under their charter, and an Act of the Imperial Parliament, ought to be maintained inviolate.

Fourthly. That as soon as this Legislature shall make provisions by law for discharging lands from feudal dues and services, and for removing any doubts as to the incidents of the tenure of land in free and common soccage, it is expedient to repeal "The Canada Tenures Act," and "The Canada Trade Act," so far as the latter relates to the tenures of land in this Province, saving, nevertheless, to all persons the rights vested in them under or in virtue of those Acts.

Fifthly. That, for defraying the arrears due on account of the established and customary charges of the administration of justice, and of the civil government of the Province, it is expedient that, after applying for that purpose such balance as should, on the 10th day of April last, be in the hands of the Receiver-General, arising from the hereditary, territorial, and casual revenues of the Crown, the Governor of the Province be empowered to issue out of any other monies in the hands of the Receiver-General such further sums as shall be necessary to effect the payment of such arrears and charges up to the 10th of April last.

Sixthly. That it is expedient to place at the disposal of this Legislature the net proceeds of the hereditary, territorial and casual revenues of the Crown, arising within the Province, in case the said Legislature shall see fit to grant a Civil list for defraying the necessary charges of the administration of justice, and for the maintenance and unavoidable expenses of certain of the principal officers of the civil government of the Province;—and lastly,

That it is expedient that the Legislatures of Lower and Upper Canada, respectively, be authorized to make provision for the joint regulation and adjustment of questions respecting their trade and commerce, and of other questions wherein they have a common interest.

Having thus laid before you an outline of the measures contemplated by the resolutions, which were passed after full discussion in the House of Commons by large majorities, and in the House of Peers without a division, I proceed, in obedience to the royal commands, to assure you that it was with the deepest regret and reluctance that Her Majesty's Government yielded to the necessity of invoking the interference of Parliament, in order to meet the pressing difficulties which other resources had failed to remove in the administration of the affairs of the Province.

But with a view to abstain as much as possible from any interference which is not imperatively demanded by the force of existing circumstances, Her Majesty's Ministers have determined not to submit to the present Parliament the Bills to be founded on the resolutions of which I have just spoken; yet, as they cannot overlook the necessity of making immediate provision for the discharge of the debt due from the civil government of this Province, they have resolved to propose to the House of Commons, that a vote of credit should be passed for the advance, by way of a loan from British funds, of the sum required for the payment of that debt.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The accounts, showing the payments that have been made since the close of the Session in March, 1836 out of the revenues at the disposal of the Crown, in part liquidation of the large arrears then due in respect of the civil establishments of the Province, shall, as soon as possible, be submitted to you, with every explanation that you may desire and I can supply. I have, likewise, in obedience to the injunctions I have received, directed that an account of the balance of arrears owing on the 10th of April last, for official salaries, and the ordinary expenditure of the Local Government, be made out and laid before you, with an estimate for the current half year; and in recommending, as I do most earnestly, these matters to your early and favourable consideration, I am commanded to express to you at the same time the anxious hope that the Governor of this Province may not be compelled to exercise the power with which the Imperial Parliament has declared its intention of investing him, in order to discharge the arrears due in respect of public services, for the payment of which the faith of the Crown has been repeatedly pledged. The chief object, therefore, for which you are now called together is to afford you an opportunity, by granting the requisite supplies, of rendering unnecessary, on the part of the Imperial Parliament, any further action on the 8th of the series of resolutions to which I have alluded; and it will, I can assure you, be to me matter of unmixed satisfaction should you resolve to concede to the united voice of the British people, as expressed through the several branches of their Legislature, that which you have not thought it expedient to yield to the solicitations of the Executive Government alone.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council—Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I am further commanded to express to you the earnest desire of Her Majesty's Government to co-operate with you in the removal of every obstacle to the beneficial working of the existing Constitution, and in the correction of every defect which time and experience have developed in the laws and institutions of the Province or in the administration of its government: and I am also to assure you of a prompt attention on the part of Her Majesty's Government to every representation which may proceed from you, tending to effect improvements of this nature, calculated to strengthen the connexion between Great Britain and Lower Canada, by the promotion of the welfare and the interests of all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in the Province.

At the time the summons was issued for assembling you on this day, I had every reason to believe that it would have been in my power to announce to you, as effected, those alterations which you may gather from the resolutions of which I have spoken it is intended to effect in the composition of the Executive and Legislative Councils; but the interruption, occasioned by the demise of His late Majesty, to the progress of public business in the Imperial Parliament, and the prospect of its early dissolution, have prevented the Ministers of the Crown from at once perfecting the measures they have in contemplation. These measures, therefore, are not forsaken, but only unavoidably suspended for a season; and I trust I shall at no very distant period be enabled to appeal to the changes introduced into the two Councils, as well as to other salutary arrangements, as a proof of the sincerity with which Her Majesty's Government are disposed to carry into effect the intentions they have expressed on these points.

Since the end of the last Session, several local Acts have expired, and I would suggest for your consideration the expediency of renewing such of them as may have proved useful. I would, moreover, especially invite your attention to the Acts relating to the district of Saint Francis, the duration of which is limited to the end of the Session of the Provincial Parliament next after the 1st of May last.

The severe distress which, in consequence of the partial or total failure of the crops, was experienced during the last winter in several parts of the Province, induced me, upon the urgent representations I received on the subject, and in order to avert the approaches of famine, to grant out of the public funds that succour which the means of the suffering inhabitants were inadequate to afford. Nor did I hesitate in the pressing emergency of the case to assume this responsibility, encouraged by the liberality you have displayed on similar occasions. In granting, however, such assistance, security was in each case taken for the repayment of the monies so advanced, in the event of your declining to sanction the transactions. These advances amount in the whole to about 5600*l.*, for which, as well as for the sums I have issued for the preservation of the public works on the Chambly Canal, and for the maintenance of the quarantine establishment, I trust you will see no objection to grant an indemnity. Such of the documents and vouchers connected with these several disbursements, as are not already before you, shall be submitted to you with as little delay as possible.

In conclusion, Gentlemen, I shall repeat my determination to adhere to those principles which I laid down for my guidance when I first addressed you. They are calculated, I conscientiously believe, to promote the real interests of the country, and to secure to all classes of Her Majesty's Canadian subjects those rights, privileges, and liberties which the spirit of the Constitution was intended to impart, and which every friend to that Constitution is bound to support and maintain.

your Excellency for your Speech from the throne at the opening of the present Session. We assure your Excellency that at whatever season we may be called upon to perform the duties intrusted to us by the people of the Province, no personal inconvenience will prevent our labouring, as our first and most important occupation, to secure the liberties and happiness of our fellow-subjects, to remove the evils which have pressed, and still continue in a more aggravated form to press, upon them, and to protect them against the system which has corrupted the Provincial Government, and has been sufficiently powerful not only to cause the mother-country to refuse all justice to the people, with regard to their demands and ours for the improvement of their political institutions, and for the reform of abuses, but to urge the highest metropolitan authorities, who ought to be just and protecting, to acts of violence, to a violation of the most sacred and best established rights of the Canadian people and of this Legislature, and to the destruction of the very foundations of the Government. We are, then, bound by our duty frankly to declare to your Excellency, under the solemn circumstances in which we are placed, and after full and calm deliberation, that since the time when we were last called to meet in Provincial Parliament, we have seen, in the conduct and proceedings of the Metropolitan Government and of the Colonial Administration towards this country, nothing which could re-establish in the people the confidence and affection which the long and fatal experience of the past has almost destroyed; but that, on the contrary, every recent event has tended to efface what remained of these feelings, and to consolidate, in opposition to the liberties, interests, and wishes of the people, the Colonial oligarchy factiously combined against them, and the hitherto unbridled and uncontrolled sway of the Colonial Ministers in Downing-street.

2. The avowal which it has pleased your Excellency to make to us, that the disposition of the authorities and of Parliament with regard to us, and the oppressive and unconstitutional measures which have been the result, are the consequences of the recommendations made by certain pretended authorities known by the name of the Royal Commissioners, has convinced us of the correctness of the opinions we have heretofore expressed with regard to this Commission; which, constituted and acting under no law, and without regard to law, and bound beforehand by its instructions to the partial views and narrow policy of the British Ministry in the government of the Colonies, could not possibly co-operate in doing justice to the inhabitants of this Province, and in establishing their institutions, their liberties, and their prospects for the future, on the solid basis of their wishes and their wants, as well as on the principles of the Constitution. We were therefore nowise astonished at discovering in the productions of this pretended Commission nothing but pre-conceived opinions, prejudices at variance with its mission and its duty, ideas of government founded on data utterly foreign to the country, or at finding it fomenting division and national distinctions, forgetful of constitutional principles, calumniating the provincial representation, and practising deception towards this House and the people. We are bound especially to notice in the Reports in question, as far as they have come to our knowledge, one essential and paramount contradiction which pervades every part of them, and forms their essence. It is, that while they admit the reality of the greater portion of the abuses and grievances of which we have complained, the Commissioners do not recommend their removal and the destruction of the causes which had produced them, but an act of aggression against this House which has denounced them, and the absolute destruction of the representative government in this Province, by the illegal and violent spoliation of the public monies of the people by the Ministers or by the Parliament: whereas it was the duty of the Commission and of the mother-country to assist this House in the entire removal of these evils, and in rendering their recurrence impossible, by reconstituting the second branch of the Legislature by means of the elective principle, by repealing all laws and privileges unjustly obtained, and by insuring the exercise of the powers and legitimate control of this House over the internal affairs of the Province, and over all matters relative to its territory and the wants of its inhabitants, and more especially over the public revenue raised in it.

3. These remarks will render unnecessary a portion of those which we might have been led to make on the series of resolutions spoken of by your Excellency, and which, being proposed by Lord John Russell, one of the Ministers of the Crown, were adopted by the two Houses of the Parliament of the United Kingdom. We perceive in this measure, on the one hand, a formal and total refusal of the reforms and improvements demanded by this House and by the people; and on the other, an abuse of the powers of Parliament for the purpose of destroying by force the laws and Constitution of the Province; of violating, with regard to us, the most sacred and solemn engagements, and of thereby establishing irremediably, on the ruin of our liberties, and in the place of the legitimate, efficient, and constitutional control which this House, and the people through it, have a right to exercise over all the branches of the Executive Government,—corruption and intrigue, the pillage of the revenue, the seizure of the best resources of the country by the Colonial functionaries and their dependents, the domination and ascendancy of the few, and the oppression and servitude of the mass of the inhabitants of this Province, without distinction of class or of origin.

4. It is our duty, therefore, to tell the mother-country that if she carries the spirit of these resolutions into effect in the government of British America, and of this Province in particular, her supremacy therein will no longer depend upon the feelings of affection, of duty, and of mutual interest, which would best secure it, but on physical and material force,—an element dangerous to the governing party, at the same time that it subjects the governed to a degree of uncertainty as to their future existence and their dearest interests, which is scarcely to be found under the most absolute governments of civilized Europe. And we had humbly believed it impossible that this state of permanent jeopardy, of hatred, and of division, could be knowingly perpetuated by England on the American continent; and that the liberty and welfare of every portion of the empire were too dear to the independent body of the English people, to allow them to prefer maintaining, in favour of the functionaries accused by the people of this Province, the system which has been hitherto its bane.

5. If, even before the opening of the present Session, we had been individually undeceived in this fond hope by public report, if we had little expectation that a sudden change in the councils of the empire should place us at once in possession of the benefits of the constitutive reforms which we had declared to be essential, and such as would alone be sufficient, it was still natural that we should most anxiously look forward to our being called together in Parliament; because it was at least to be supposed that most important reforms had been effected in the administration of the government, and that others were speedily to follow them. We have learned with fresh regret, from your Excellency's Speech, that no such reform has been effected, or will be so at any near and determinate period, notwithstanding the so often repeated pledges of the Government. Your Excellency has been pleased to allude distantly to the improvement of the composition of the Legislative and Executive Councils of this Province. With regard to the Executive Council, we shall here forbear any painful reflections on the unmodified existence of that body, after it had been so solemnly repudiated by your Excellency in the name of the Crown, and on its co-operation with the other portions of the provincial executive in a system of premeditated coercion to effect the overthrow of the laws and Constitution, of incrimination, persecution, and arbitrary removals from office, directed against the mass of the people who remain faithful to the true principles of the British Constitution, and who have manifested their attachment to their assailed liberties. We further represent that the present executive, having, instead of performing its promises of justice and of the removal of abuses and grievances, entered upon the dangerous and slippery path which has been the ruin of preceding administrations, and having utterly alienated from it the affection of an important portion of those of Her Majesty's subjects most devoted to the liberty and welfare of the country, in order to bestow its confidence and that of the Government with partiality on those only who flatter it, no longer possesses in the person of its chief, or in those of its other members, the capability of effecting the reforms indispensably necessary as preliminaries to any arrangement between the Government of the mother-country and the Colony, in a just, equitable, and impartial manner, adapted to satisfy this House and the people, and more especially to ensure between the several branches of the Legislature that co-operation and that uniformity of general views which we persist in believing to be absolutely requisite. We should have hoped that, as a pledge of the sincerity of the Government, the Legislative Council would have been so remodelled as to enable us to ascertain up to what point it had been rendered capable of legislating conformably with the wishes and wants of the people, and to act according to the conclusion to which we might have come on this important subject. This essential reform having been omitted, we are bound to declare that our duty towards the people, by whom we are sent here, imperiously requires us to follow, under existing circumstances, the course adopted by us in our address of the 30th September 1836: we therefore persist therein, as well as in all the declarations and demands therein contained. The reforms which your Excellency announces as having been delayed, will nevertheless, if effected in a spirit of justice and harmony, become a powerful motive with us for examining whether the Legislative Council, in its present form of constitution, could even for a time co-operate with us in a system of legislation conformable to the interests of the people, and of thereby ascertaining whether it shall have been so remodelled as to induce us to manifest confidence in Her Majesty's Government.

6. In our efforts to remove the evils which have pressed upon our country, we have had recourse to none but constitutional means, founded on the most approved and best recognized principles. We have it so much at heart to see the Government once more deserve the public confidence, that to assist it in obtaining that confidence we should recoil before no sacrifice but that of the liberties or of the honour of the people. We have given proof of this disposition, even of late, whenever we have been able to entertain a hope that we were thereby aiding to advance the prosperity of the country. But we declare that in the present conjuncture we have not been able to derive from your Excellency's Speech, or from any other source, any motive for departing even momentarily from our determination to withhold the supplies until the grievances of the country are redressed.

7. Your Excellency acknowledges that the chief object for which we are now convened is to afford us an opportunity, by granting the supplies, of preventing their being violently taken by an Act of the Imperial Parliament, founded on the resolutions already adopted. In the absence of any other motive for thus recurring to our authority, than the tardy consideration of the character of those resolutions as well as of the Act of which they might form the basis, Her Majesty's Government might, we humbly conceive, have recollected that those resolutions are not our work, that we had already fully deliberated on the demand made to us by your Excellency, and that while we have not before us any act, or even any hope which can promise a mitigation of the evils under which the people are suffering, we should not be justifiable in placing in the hands of hostile powers the means of aggravating and perpetuating those evils.

8. There could exist, then, no considerations but such as might be dictated by a servile fear foreign to our mandate, and derogatory to the character of the people, to induce us to be wanting to our duty in the present instance, by ratifying the violation of the rights of our constituents and of this House by the British authorities, and by taking on ourselves the responsibility of the consequences which might result from it. We leave this responsibility to those who have assumed it; and, strong in the justice of our cause, we rely, as we heretofore have done, on Providence, on the public and private virtues of all classes of the people, on their constancy, their perseverance, and their attachment to the principles of order and liberty, which, following their example, we have unceasingly endeavoured to maintain.

9. In thus expressing our wish that a commencement of reform had tended to re-establish confidence, we cannot have been misunderstood as to the motives which actuate us. We repeat nevertheless that we shall regard all administrative measures whatsoever as insufficient permanently and effectively to ensure the peace, security, and happiness of the Province; and that the essential and constitutive reforms which we have demanded, and especially the application of the elective principle to the Legislative Council, the repeal of all undue privileges and monopolies, and of injurious laws passed in England, the free exercise of the right and privileges of this Legislature, and of this House in particular, and the establishment of a popular and responsible Government, are the only means by which the advantages hereinbefore mentioned can be ensured, or the political connexion with Great Britain rendered beneficial to the people of Canada.

10. It is therefore our ardent wish that the resolutions adopted by the two Houses of Parliament may be rescinded, as attacking the rights and liberties of this Province, as being of a nature to perpetuate bad government, corruption and abuse of power therein, and as rendering more just and legitimate the disaffection and opposition of the people. If this return on the part of the Government of the mother-country to what we consider its duty towards this Colony should take place under the reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, we are unable to express to your Excellency how warmly we should congratulate ourselves on having persevered in claiming justice for the people, notwithstanding the peculiar obstacles and difficulties which have tended to deter us.

11. The special and local subjects pointed out by your Excellency, and in particular the advances of public money made to relieve the distress in certain parts of the Province, and for other purposes, will form the subjects of our deliberations as soon as circumstances will permit, and whenever we shall be no longer prevented from considering them.

Copy of a Despatch from Lord Gosford to Lord Glenelg, dated Castle of St. Lewis, Quebec, 30th August 1837.

MY LORD,—

HAVING already put you in possession of the Speech with which, on the 18th instant, I opened the Provincial Parliament, as well as of the addresses in answer thereto from the two Chambers, with my replies to each; I have now the honour to inform your Lordship that immediately after the delivery of my reply to the address of the Assembly on the 26th instant, I prorogued the Parliament by proclamation, perceiving that no useful end could be answered by continuing the Session, as the Assembly adhered to the determination, expressed in their address of September last, of not granting the arrears and supplies required by the Government, and of abstaining from the transaction of public business until all the demands set forth in that address shall have been granted.

I shall confine the present communication to a statement of the proceedings that occurred in the two Houses during the nine days they were in Session.

Friday, 18th August.—The members of both Houses took the oath of allegiance to the Queen prescribed by the Act 31 Geo. III. cap. 31.

In the Legislative Council a committee of five was as usual appointed by ballot to prepare an address in answer to my Speech, consisting of the Honourable Messrs. Cuthbert, Debartzch, Stewart, Joliette, and De Rocheblaire. A committee of privileges, and a sub-committee to peruse and perfect the Journals of the Council, were also named.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

In the Assembly, after the return of the House from the bar of the Legislative Council, Mr. Gagy, one of the members for the county of Sherbrooke, moved for leave to bring in a Bill to continue the Acts relating to the judicature of the district of St. Francis whose duration was limited to the end of the Session next after the 1st May last; but on motion of Mr. Morin the consideration of the question was deferred, upon a division of 61 to 15, until that part of my Speech which related to this subject should have been taken into consideration. A Bill for better ensuring the freedom of elections by the removal of troops from places of election was then introduced and read a first time. The House resolved to go into committee to take into consideration the state of the Province, and after the Speaker had reported my Speech it was referred to the same committee, and not as usual to a special committee, to prepare an answer. The House then went into committee, and adjourned.

Saturday, 19th.—The Council passed the usual resolution providing for the payment, out of their contingent expenses of the postage of letters, &c., addressed to the members during the Session.

A similar resolution was passed in the Assembly, where it was also resolved that all petitions of a private nature received by the House during the Session should lie on the table until otherwise ordered. They then went into committee on the state of the Province and on the Speech, and after some time spent therein the committee rose, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again on Monday.

Monday, 21st.—In the Council the committee appointed to prepare an answer to my Speech reported a draft of an address which was referred to a committee of the whole House, who reported progress and obtained leave to sit again.

In the Assembly, Mr. Gagy moved for the discharge of the order referring my Speech to a committee of the whole House, and that it be referred to a special committee of five members to prepare the draft of an answer: this motion was lost, upon a division of 68 to 10, and the House went into committee on the state of the Province and on the Speech; and, after obtaining leave to sit again, adjourned to the next day.

Tuesday, 22d.—The Council passed their address (a copy of which accompanied my Despatch of the 26th instant, No. 87) in answer to the Speech, after amendments to the second and fifth paragraphs had been moved and lost, and the eighth unsuccessfully objected to, but no amendment to it proposed: protests were, however, afterwards entered to this, as well as to the second paragraph, by Messrs. D. B. Vizer and F. X. Malhiot.

In the Assembly the committee of the whole House still continued their deliberations on the state of the Province and on the Speech.

Wednesday, 23d.—The Council presented to me their answer to the Speech, and received my reply, a copy of which has been forwarded to your Lordship in my Despatch of the 26th instant. They then appointed a committee to draw up an address of condolence to the Queen on the death of His late Majesty and of congratulation on her accession to the throne, and one of condolence to the Queen-Dowager. A committee was also named to consider whether any and what amendments should be made to the Acts authorizing the issue of certificates and licences for retailing spirituous liquors. An address was then voted to me to institute an inquiry into the state of the notarial offices throughout the Province, with a view to ascertain how far the duties of the said profession have been discharged conformable to law. This address was presented to me a day or two after, and as it was necessary that I should be advised by the law officers of the Crown, to whom the question has been referred whether I had the power to enforce the inquiry, I replied that I would take it into consideration.

The Assembly named a special committee to point out a proper person to fill the situation of Sergeant-at-arms. I may here remark that the situation was not vacant, it having been filled up by me during the recess on the death of the late incumbent, as reported in my Despatch of the 18th ultimo, No. 75. To the same committee was referred your Lordship's Despatch of the 10th February 1836, No. 50, relative to the appointment of the law clerk, which was laid before the House in September last: nothing, however, has resulted from the labours of this committee. The House then went into committee on the state of the Province and on my Speech, and adjourned, after reporting progress.

Thursday, 24th.—The addresses of condolence and congratulation to the Queen, and of condolence to the Queen-Dowager, were adopted by the Council, and an address voted to me requesting their transmission to England. In pursuance of the intention announced in my Speech, I laid before the Council copies of the resolutions of the two Houses of Imperial Parliament on Canada affairs.

In the Assembly the consideration on the state of the Province and of the Speech was continued in a committee of the whole House.

Friday, 25th.—The Council presented their addresses to the Queen and Queen-Dowager, which have been transmitted to your Lordship.

On this day the committee of the House of Assembly reported the draft of an address, in answer to my Speech, and obtained leave to sit again next day. Mr. Morin moved that the question of concurrence be put separately on each paragraph of the address; whereupon Mr. Andrew Stewart, one of the members for the Upper Town of Quebec, moved, in amendemnt to substitute the following resolution, viz.:—"In the present state of this Province it is the duty of this House, in so far as depends upon it, to proceed to provide for the most pressing wants of the Province and the support of Her Majesty's Government." This motion was negatived, on a division of 63 to 13. Mr. Stuart then moved, to substitute for the address the following resolution, viz.:—"It is the duty of this House to maintain its fidelity to the Crown, and to support the connexion of this Province with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, using at the same time all constitutional means for the removal of the obstacles which have hitherto retarded the advancement and prosperity of the Province, and for securing to Her Majesty's subjects therein a better and more efficient government than they now have."

Mr. Morin, however, moved the previous question, which was carried, on a division of 62 to 15. These two resolutions, I am informed, were moved in committee as amendments to the draft of the address, and were both met with a direct negative and rejected, though your Lordship will perceive that in the House the latter was got rid of by moving the previous question. Mr. Stuart again moved, in amendment to the main motion, that the draft of the address reported by the committee of the whole House be re-committed, which was negatived on a division of 58 to 19. Mr. Joseph A. Taschereau, one of the members for the county of Beauce, then made a motion, to substitute for the address reported by the committee the one of which the inclosed is a copy, which was lost on a division of 59 to 18, and Mr. Morin's original motion was carried by 46 to 31, those who voted for Mr. Taschereau's address having joined the minority on the previous divisions, which minority voted against both addresses. The address reported from the committee of the whole House was then agreed to, paragraph by paragraph, upon divisions of 48 to 31, and presented to me the next day.

Saturday, 26th.—The Council moved an address to me for their contingencies, amounting to 3000*l.*; but before the same was presented, I had prorogued the Parliament.

As no Bill was passed by either House, a question has been stirred whether the late meeting of the Provincial Parliament is to be considered a Session or not. The matter has been referred by me for the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, whose report I have not yet received. Should it be held to be a Session, the Acts relating to the judicature of the district of St. Francis will have expired, and that portion of the Province which formed the district will again be included in the districts of Montreal and Three Rivers. The question will probably meet with a judicial decision in the superior tribunals here, in an appeal from some of the proceedings that may have taken place in the Court of King's Bench at St. Francis since the prorogation.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) GOSFORD.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE Her Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Lower Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly thank your Excellency for your speech from the Throne at the opening of the present Session. We assure your Excellency that at whatever season we may be called upon to perform the duties delegated to us by the people of this Province, we shall ever regard as nothing the personal inconvenience to which we may be subjected; more especially when we may be called upon to deliberate on the great interests of the country under circumstances as grave and critical as the present, when your Excellency has to communicate to us the proceedings which have taken place in the Imperial Parliament since we were last called together, and the resolutions which have been adopted therein with regard to the affairs of this Province.

We ask permission humbly to represent to your Excellency, that the course which this House has deemed it expedient to adopt during the last four years with regard to the existing financial difficulties, has been founded on the best recognized principles of the Constitution, and adopted with the view of obtaining the removal of numerous abuses and grievances against which this House and the people whom it represents have long remonstrated in vain, and the greater portion of which have been recognized as existing, and have been the subjects of promises and declarations which had raised a hope that they would be speedily redressed. It was therefore with deep regret, and at the same time with surprise, that we heard your Excellency announce to us that Her Majesty's Ministers, before adopting any measures for the removal of the numerous abuses aforesaid, had "resolved to propose to the House of Commons that a vote of credit should be passed for the advance by way of loan from British funds of the sum required for the payment of the arrears due to the public officers," with the view that this sum should be thereafter drawn from the Provincial chest by virtue of an Act of the Imperial Parliament, if this House should not, by granting the requisite supplies, obviate the necessity of any further action on the part of the Imperial Parliament.

We should have believed that a Government which, like that of the mother-country, founds its fairest claim to the consideration of other nations, on its respect for the natural and political rights of the subject, would have felt that before proceeding to meet by measures of so extreme a nature, and so destructive of the constitutional rights of a whole people, the refusal of this House to provide for the expenses of the Civil Government of the Province, it would be right to remove the main causes of this refusal, founded as it was on the existence of open and acknowledged abuses and grievances. We should think we were deceiving your Excellency and the Imperial Government, if we did not frankly and firmly declare, that whatever be our anxiety to forward the work of conciliation, we regard these measures as an attack upon the property of the people and upon the most sacred right of the House, and as tending greatly to affect the security of His Majesty's loyal subjects in this Province and their confidence in her Government, and therefore as constituting a serious obstacle to the arrangement of the existing difficulties, and as tending to weaken the ties which bind this Colony to the mother-country.

We ask leave further to represent to your Excellency, that when this House, during the last Session of the Provincial Parliament, came to the determination to suspend its deliberations, it was influenced chiefly by the conviction, grounded on the result of the preceding Session, that it could not with advantage to the country enter into the labours and incur the expenses of a regular Session in conjunction with the present Legislative Council, whose anterior proceedings breathed nothing but factious opposition to the wishes, wants, and interests of the people. The two Houses of the Imperial Parliament by declaring (as your Excellency tells us they did) "that it is expedient to adopt measures for securing to that branch of the Legislature a greater degree of public confidence," have come forward to corroborate the opinion which the House held and still holds with regard to the Legislative Council. And we cannot refrain from here expressing our astonishment that this significant and solemn declaration, that one of the branches of the Legislature appointed by the Crown is not so constituted as to enjoy the confidence of the public, should be communicated to us at the same time with an imperative demand for supplies, and while Her Majesty's Government has done nothing towards securing to that branch a higher degree of public confidence. The supplies are as we humbly conceive, granted by the Commons solely in consideration of their entire confidence in the Government; and this confidence cannot exist while the Government leaves untouched a legislative body which it openly acknowledges not to possess the confidence of the public. But the astonishment produced by such a declaration, accompanied by such a demand, must be succeeded by a more painful feeling, when we are told that our rejection of this demand will be followed by the taking of the provincial monies under the authority of an Act of the Imperial Parliament. The people of this Province would thus be punished by the violation of the most important of their rights for the fault of the executive authorities, local or imperial, in abandoning the spirit of the Constitutional Act by declining so to constitute the Legislative Council as to secure public confidence in it, and by persisting in maintaining the present vicious composition of that body, notwithstanding the complaints of this House and the people it represents, reiterated during many years.

Conduct like this, on the part of the imperial authorities, would destroy in us for ever all confidence and all assurance in our present state of political existence, if we were not sustained by the hope that the two Houses of the Imperial Parliament and her Majesty's Government have been induced to adopt it by a forced interpretation of the terms in which this House, during the last Session, declared its determination to suspend its deliberations. If this interpretation has not been seized with avidity, and for the purpose of using it as a pretext for coercive measures towards the Colony; if a more precise and clear declaration of the meaning of this House can yet induce the imperial authorities to prevent the effects of their misunderstanding, we declare that we have always held and that we still hold that the only means of ensuring to the country, in a permanent and satisfactory manner, the advantages of representative government, would be to apply the elective principle to the Legislative Council, and that we cannot, therefore, recommend the adoption of any other means. But if, in despite of the unhappy experience of half a century, and, above all, of the vain attempt recently made to reform that body, in pursuance of the solemn recommendations of the Canada committee of 1828, Her Majesty's Government still retains the hope of being able so to remodel it as to enable it to answer the purposes of its institution, and to secure public confidence in it, it is for Her Majesty's Government to hasten to have recourse to this measure, and to put it to the proof. It will then remain for this House to consider whether the reform thus effected is such as to lead to the hope of a system of legislation useful and honourable to the country, which is the sole object this House has sought to attain in demanding the application of the elective principle to the Legislative Council of this Province.

We now proceed to represent to your Excellency, that the declaration made by the two Houses of the Imperial Parliament on the subject of the Legislative Council of this Province, is calculated to revive the hope that that branch of the Legislature will, at a period perhaps not far distant, but which is left indeterminate, be so composed as to lead the country to hope that for a time, at least, a regular and beneficial system of legislation may exist; but as this declaration neither changes nor weakens the reasons which, at the last Session, induced this House to suspend its deliberations, we find ourselves under the painful necessity of adhering to the determination we then came to, of suspending our deliberations until the consummation of the reforms (and that of the Legislative Council above all), announced by and in the name of the imperial authorities, which, by reviving confidence and restoring harmony in the Legislature, will give hope of the speedy disappearance of the numerous subjects of complaint enumerated in the several resolutions and addresses of this House in former Sessions. We, therefore, assure your Excellency, that the work of reform once thus begun on the part of the Government, this House will be ready to receive, consider, and if possible to agree to, the several proposals which Her Majesty's Government may have to make to it for the final arrangement of the financial and other difficulties which have so long existed in this Province; and also to recommence the regular course of its deliberations which have only been interrupted in consequence of the conviction which the House then felt, and still feels, that no other result could now attend them, than that of burdening the people with considerable expense, without any of the great advantages which they have a right to expect from a Session of the Legislature.

We ask leave yet further to represent to your Excellency, that although we do not make particular mention of the Executive Council, because we consider the reform of that body as intimately connected with that of the Legislative Council, we do not consider this reform as less essential to the good government of the Province, or less adapted to forward the work of conciliation. Certain recent proceedings of the executive, which appear to be only the prelude to divers others, lead us to regret that the head of the local administration should not, under existing circumstances, have been surrounded by men possessing the confidence of the public, and uniting, with great experience in business, a perfect knowledge of the feelings and disposition of the people; and who, as such, would not have advised the head of the executive to acts which can only increase the difficulties already existing.

The particular and local objects pointed out by your Excellency, and, more especially, the advances of public money made to relieve the distress in certain parts of the Province, and for other purposes, shall be the subject of our deliberations as soon as the circumstances of the Province will permit.

MY DEAR GOSFORD,

I NEED not tell you with what anxiety we are watching the course of events in Lower Canada. The more recent accounts from that country are calculated to allay some of the uneasiness excited by earlier appearances. Your late letters are encouraging as to the feelings of the more reasonable of the French people and the provincial papers, which I have of a date as late as the 27th July, tend to produce the same impression. I am not insensible, however, of the uncertainty of opinions formed at such a distance, and respecting a society in a state of so much agitation. But I would fain hope that whatever may be the excitement of the people, there will at least be no recourse to open acts of violence and armed defiance of the authority of Government. So long as these can be averted, time is gained for the natural operation of the principles of order, and for the intervention of Government in aid of that operation by judicious improvements. I cannot help in this view considering it as a favourable circumstance that the course of events arrested the progress of the intended legislation as to Canada, and compelled us to resort to the milder measure of a loan from this country. I do not mean by this remark to imply repentance or misgiving as to the line of policy adopted by the Government prior to the demise of the King; far from it: it was the only line left for us to pursue, and in that line, until overruled by an unexpected necessity, it was our duty and determination to persevere. But being so overruled, the final stroke of Parliamentary interference has been suspended, and an interval is allowed of which advantage may, perhaps, be so taken, as to lay the foundation of results more lasting and satisfactory than the mere suspension for a time of party hostilities. A temporary truce, even if it be obtained, would lead only to the revival of the controversy in some new form, and under some new pretext; and I have, therefore, in common with my colleagues, been anxious to ascertain if means might not be found of bringing the affairs of the Province to a settlement, which, being acceptable to both parties, might give some hope of enduring tranquillity. It is to put you in possession of our thoughts on this subject that I now write to you, and I shall do so without the slightest reserve, although you will at once perceive that this letter is strictly confidential, and intended for no eye but yours.

By this time the question—What will the Assembly do when they meet on the 18th of August?—has been solved. They may possibly have voted the supplies. You seem to think this not absolutely hopeless, even under circumstances as they existed at the date of your letters. But subsequently to that date, and by the 18th of August, intelligence will have reached the Province which would probably increase the chances of such an issue of the Session. I allude to late events in this country; and more especially in the first place, to the substitution of a loan in the place of the intended measure of coercion: secondly, to the change which you were authorized to make in the Executive Council, which might serve as an indication of like changes in the members of the Legislative Council: and, finally, to the accession of a new Sovereign under circumstances peculiarly interesting and auspicious. If the Assembly, under the impulse of whatever feelings, should vote the supplies, it will then be easy to offer to the party opposed to your Government concessions, the tender of which at an earlier period would only have been misconstrued.

I must own, however, that I think it more likely that the Assembly will either have refused to meet, or, meeting, will have adhered to their former course with aggravated violence and animosity. In either of these contingencies you will have drawn for the amount of the arrears due to the public officers; and you will further, as I am inclined to suppose, have dissolved the House. The authority of Great Britain being thus vindicated, we are free to enter on a conciliatory course. Thus, whether the supplies be granted or refused, there will be an opportunity of making with safety, because without dishonour, another attempt to reconcile these unhappy differences.

It strikes us that some attempt might be made for that purpose with reference to the Legislative Council—that great theme of popular complaint. All parties indeed are dissatisfied with the working of the Council, as it now exists; and dissatisfied with some good reason, as appears by the reports of the Commissioners. The remedy insisted on by the Assembly is the introduction of the elective principle into the Council. Parliament has set its negative on this suggestion; at least as a practical question applicable to the actual state of things. The Parliamentary resolution was confined strictly to this point, leaving out of view, as irrelevant to the immediate exigency, all abstract and hypothetical propositions on the subject. I am certain that Parliament will adhere to the resolution already passed; nor do the Government see the slightest reason to recommend a deviation from it. The admission of the elective principle, therefore, may be set entirely out of consideration. But because that suggestion is rejected, does it follow that we must remain exactly as we are? Is there no alternative but the elective principle or the principle of nomination for life? The second Chamber should be so constituted as to possess the power of acting with freedom and independence, even when opposed by the Assembly; subject, at the same time, to some efficient check on an abuse of that power to any purpose inconsistent with the real and permanent interests of the great body of the people. If this end be obtained, there is no other respecting which we need be solicitous. Now, various plans have been suggested for bringing together such a Legislative Council, without resorting either to popular election, or to nominations by the Crown for life. I will notice a few of these proposals.

First. Mr. Roebuck, in his place in the House of Commons, suggested the consolidation of the Executive and Legislative Councils into one body, to be called the Council of Government, the members of which should be appointed by the Crown, and should hold their seats during pleasure. Thus far, his plan was nothing else than the transfer to Lower Canada of the system which prevails in every British Colony possessing a representative Legislature, with the exception of the Canadas and New Brunswick; and which prevailed even in New Brunswick until little more than four years ago. Much may be justly said in favour of this plan. Above all, it is recommended by the experience of nearly two centuries. But Mr. Roebuck proposed to give to the Council of Government no legislative authority, but only the power of suggesting amendments of Bills originating in the Assembly, which suggestions the Assembly should be bound to consider. In the ultimate acceptance or rejection of Bills the Governor, according to this scheme, was to act on his own responsibility and without the advice of the Council. To this part of the project the objections seem to me insuperable; it would in effect place all legislation in the hands of a single chamber, with which the Governor could never successfully contend.

Secondly. The legislative councillors might be appointed during the pleasure of the Crown. If this tenure should be practically equivalent to holding office during good behaviour, as would probably be the case, the present Constitution would remain substantially unaltered. If, on the other hand, councillors holding during pleasure should be regarded as liable to dismissal without the imputation of a fault, the Government would be virtually responsible for the conduct of every councillor whom it should retain, and would be urged by the ceaseless importunity of the Assembly for the removal of unpopular members.

Appendix.
No. 17.

to the Earl

Thirdly. The Legislative Council might be summoned by the Governor for each Provincial Parliament, the members ceasing to hold their office on a dissolution. The advantages of this scheme would be that the Crown would be enabled to maintain that degree of harmony between the two branches of the Legislature, a permanent interruption to which must be fatal to the satisfactory progress of legislation, and the successful working of the Constitution. It might, on the other hand, be objected to it that such a body would lend to the Government little or no moral strength by their support, and would fail to possess that free and independent character which is essential to its usefulness. If, moreover, on the recurrence of each new Provincial Parliament, the late councillors should all be replaced by new members, the benefit of their experience and acquired skill would be lost; and if, on the contrary, they were all reappointed, this plan would differ but little, if at all, from the tenure for life; while a selection would impose on the Government the discharge of an invidious and difficult duty.

Fourthly. In order to obviate the chief objections to the last proposal, it has been suggested that each councillor should be appointed for a fixed term; as, for example, of six or eight years instead of for life. When this system should have come into operation, it would afford the opportunity, without any sudden and general change in the Council, of effecting a gradual alteration, if requisite, in its composition, by the retirement from time to time of any members whose services might be beneficially dispensed with, and the introduction of others in their place.

Fifthly. It has been suggested that the Council might consist of a fixed number, of whom a definite proportion should retire annually, and be replaced by new appointments; so that in four or eight years all should have gone out in rotation. This, as you are aware, is the constitution of the Court of Directors of the East India Company; and it seems to combine more advantages than any other, if it be distinctly understood that the reappointment of a retired member, after his year of absence, would be entirely in the discretion of the Government.

Other plans might be noticed, but enough has been said to show that there may probably be found some mode of escape from the dilemma of adhering to the existing system, or of resorting to that on which the Assembly insist.

All these plans, and any others which may be suggested, or may present themselves to you, I wish you could take into your serious consideration, with a view to judge which of them, of any, it would be advisable to adopt. And as the great object is the restoration of peace and contentment, the point to be ascertained is not merely the abstract merit of a plan, but also its practical expediency, its suitability to the feelings and sentiments of the people, and this, too, in reference not to the transient and accidental impulses of the moment, but to those more abiding impressions which give a colour and a bias to the national will. Now as to the different plans of change which I have specified, it is obvious to remark that in all of them, excepting that of Mr. Roebuck, which sins in the opposite direction, the improvement is sought by adding to the power, not of the people, but of the Crown. Indirectly indeed it is probable that the popular influence would thus be brought to operate through the medium of the Government on the composition of the Legislative Council. And perhaps in the present state of things this is the best, or rather the only mode in which that object could be attained. Yet it cannot be denied that any one of those plans (with the exception already stated) is, in fact, a prerogative measure, and as such, would, in more quiet times, be regarded with a good deal of jealousy. But as the tide of opinion is at this time running very strongly against the Legislative Council, any scheme which tends to humble or disarm that obnoxious power might be welcomed, even by the violent party. It may, however, be well to bear in mind that the approbation given to any plan in the impulse or caprice of the moment, may be as lightly withdrawn; and that the popular excitement raised in its favour by adventitious causes may, by and bye, cool down into a rational and settled verdict of disapprobation. I throw this out only by way of caution in our consideration of the subject, and not at all as meaning to imply that the plans in question do not rest on something deeper than the transient and heated impulses of the public mind. I repeat, however, that before the Government can decide on proposing to Parliament the adoption of any plan of this nature, it is essential that they should be assured, as far as possible, of the approbation and concurrence of a considerable portion of those persons by whom public opinion in Lower Canada is influenced. What may appear to us to be a decided improvement of the existing constitution of the Province, might, perhaps, be regarded in a very different light by the inhabitants, whose interests are deeply concerned in the question, and whose objections ought not to be overlooked or disregarded. My immediate purpose in addressing you is, to express my earnest wish and hope, that you may be able, with as little delay as possible, in the course of your private intercourse with influential men of different parties, in Lower Canada, to ascertain whether any of the schemes to which I have adverted as practicable solutions of the existing difficulty, or any other scheme of a similar character, would be accepted by them as a satisfactory adjustment of the controversy with regard to the Council. I am aware that I am imposing on you a task of no ordinary delicacy, but I am willing to believe that it is one which you will not find impracticable. The mode in which it may be accomplished may safely be left to your own judgment and discretion, both as it respects the persons with whom you may communicate, and the arguments which you may think it right to address to them. You will of course cautiously avoid whatever could pledge the Government to any specific course, or fetter them in the exercise of the freest deliberation on the whole subject, after they shall have heard further from you respecting it. You will probably find it advisable to introduce the suggestions adverted to, where you have the opportunity of doing so advantageously, as coming from yourself, without giving the party with whom you are in communication reason to believe that they have formed the matter of direct correspondence with the Government. You will at the same time be at liberty to assure any person whom you find disposed to meet you frankly on the subject, that while the idea of an elective Council is, under present circumstances, altogether inadmissible, yet you have every reason to know that the Government would gladly receive and attend to any suggestion calculated to remove or diminish the evils and inconveniences belonging to the present system, and of which they could be assured that it would meet with the concurrence of influential men of moderate views, and sincerely interested in the permanent welfare of the Province. I trust that many such are to be found, notwithstanding the unhappy lengths to which men of extreme opinions have proceeded; and it is in such men that our confidence must chiefly, if not entirely, be placed. I fear it must be assumed that we have nothing to hope from the attachment, or the loyalty, or the love of peace, of the persons by whom a system of agitation has recently been organized throughout the Province. But there are motives which may influence even these men in favour of a more conciliatory system. The measures which they have taken have not been attended with such success as greatly to encourage the further prosecution of them. They must be aware of the personal hazards which they incur. Happily the other Provinces have withdrawn from all alliance with them. Their only hope of external support must be placed in the neighbouring republic, or in its individual citizens, and this is clearly a resource equally dangerous and precarious. They must be aware that assistance obtained from that quarter, if successful for their immediate purpose, would be followed by the disappointment of all their own prospects of power and domination, and by the overthrow of all the institutions to which their misguided followers are most attached. To these motives for waving their extreme pretensions, others might be added, drawn from the known disposition of the British Government to admit the conspicuous and more worthy leaders of the French party to a just and ample share in all the honours and emoluments to which public men in Lower Canada can aspire.

Aided by these and other considerations, which will readily occur to you, you may, perhaps, be enabled to hold out, even to the party most opposed to your Government, terms of reconciliation, with which, under all the circumstances of the case, they might not be indisposed to close. With these suggestions, I commit this arduous and delicate duty to your hands, not without anxiety, but with full confidence in the discretion and in the conciliatory spirit with which you will discharge it.

I have given you a long letter; but I was anxious to put you in entire possession of the views and dispositions of the Government on this most important subject. It is very difficult in writing to suggest any detailed course of proceeding, without giving to the suggestion the air of a peremptory instruction. This, however, I wish to avoid. Having fully laid before you the thoughts and inclinations of our minds, I do not desire to prescribe to you any definite mode by which you may attempt to give them effect. On that point you will consult your own judgment.

There is yet one topic to which, before I conclude, I must advert. As to the expediency generally of attempting some change in the constitution of the Legislative Council, analogous in its object to that which has been pointed out in the preceding pages, all parties are, I believe, agreed. Throughout this letter I have assumed, and I have no doubt justly, that you too are of that opinion. But I have assumed also that you will think the time at which you receive this letter a proper time for moving in the matter, and for intimating a readiness to consider of fitting changes. This, however, may not be the case. The situation and feelings of men in the Province may be such as to make it, in your judgment, unadvisable for you to enter on the suggested communications, inasmuch as the very rumour of such communications might revive the notion of vacillation and timidity on the part of the Government, and thus throw every thing again into disorder;—disgusting the English Constitutionalists, disheartening the loyal French, especially the clergy, and emboldening the Papineau faction. If this be your deliberate judgment, you will of course abstain from acting on this letter, and will immediately write to me. In every case, and at all times, I rely on your opening yourself to me with entire freedom and unreserve.

MY DEAR LORD,

Of late the meetings of the Papineau party have been less frequent. One object in having them in so many districts, previous to the meeting of the Legislature, was, no doubt, to influence the votes in the Assembly, and it had this effect. The plan seems to be to keep the country in a state of excitement by means of a convention, as it is termed, a central committee, which meet regularly in Montreal, and at which Mr. Papineau and his party make a point, as I am informed, of attending. It is stated that all orders and instructions to the local committees throughout the Province emanate from that body, who profess to publish its proceedings in the Vindicator and Minerve; and though these proceedings have evidently a treasonable tendency, they have not as yet reached such a point as to make it wise or judicious for the Executive to institute legal proceedings against any of the parties concerned. The Attorney-General is now in Montreal, and I have strongly urged upon him the necessity of keeping a good look out; and I am determined to have recourse to a court of law when an occasion occurs to justify such a step: but to attempt it without a good strong case might do more harm than good. The injurious effects that must result from a convention such as I have alluded to, are obvious. Had the Executive the power of suspending the Habeas Corpus, it would be in a better position to meet the difficulty, should the conduct of the conventionalists compel it to have recourse to more vigorous measures than the ordinary course of the law prescribes: and from the madness of their acts now, I cannot but admit that there is a possibility of my being driven to the necessity of exercising a power that I should most gladly abstain from, if any other mode presented itself by which the designs of this party could be frustrated. However, should circumstances arise for apprehending such a crisis,

it must be met by promptness, firmness, and decision. To attempt anything of a temporizing character would be weak and futile: I should at once avail myself of the powers confided to me. We can now make no terms with Mr. Papineau: you must either put him down, or submit to let him put you down. There is no halting between two opinions. By at once increasing the power of the Executive, and suspending the Constitution, you paralyze the designs of these mischievous men; it would establish confidence in the minds of those disposed to peace and good government, and at no distant period you might be solicited to restore the Constitution to the Province, under arrangements better calculated to afford satisfaction than could be accomplished by any effort or proposal in the present state of things; for until you nullify Papineau's power, you can never be in a position to treat on anything like fair and liberal terms with a man of his extravagant, uncompromising, destructive views, exercising, as he does, complete control over the minds of many who have been too long accustomed to be under his yoke. As I stated in former letters, I do not expect any serious commotion; at the same time, when I see so many clever unprincipled engines in action, yielding implicit obedience to the mandates of such a man as Mr. Papineau, it is impossible to set limits to the extent of mischief they may construct. The jealousy that exists between the two origins, is also a powerful instrument in the hands of a convention or central committee, as before alluded to, and corresponding as they no doubt do, with various parts of the Province. Then, the violent hostility of an ultra English party (resembling the Orange party in Ireland) to every thing connected with an Administration professing your political principles, tends greatly to assist the Papineau set in their object of exciting hatred and contempt for English authority. These two extremes are doing incalculable mischief, and must disgust every friend to liberal measures. The feelings of the great body of the French Canadians are decidedly loyal and favourable to peace and order, and it now rests with the Government, by wise and judicious measures, to protect them from the designs of those who are now working upon their credulity by the most gross misrepresentations and contrivances. The jealousy that existed between the two races, I found, upon my arrival here, had reached such a height, that from the first I considered it one of the principal obstacles to a satisfactory adjustment of difficulties. I must, however, observe that this has greatly diminished; and though the very violent, both of the English and French, are furiously hostile to me, still I can reckon as friends to my Administration a large proportion of the reasonable and liberal men of the Province. The ultras on both sides are struggling for ascendancy; and my determined opposition to the views of both, in this respect, perhaps may in some measure account for their hostility to me: but I cannot relinquish my principles on this point. It is a matter of great regret to me that I could not at an earlier period have given a practical proof of my political views, and by acts to show my determination to redress certain grievances which evidently called for it. However, it is too late now to talk of this. I was obliged to share with others in submitting to circumstances over which there was no controul. My situation now is not an enviable one; and God knows, on every private consideration, I shall gladly relinquish it. I am fully sensible of the friendly feelings you entertain towards me, and I am also convinced of the favourable disposition of your colleagues in the Government. To support the principles of the present Ministry is my great object; and it is probable, and indeed reasonable, that if matters here should come to extremities, you would prefer to have a man in my place who had not so avowedly declared his wish to carry on his Government on the principle of conciliation. In stating this, be assured, at the same time, that I do not shrink from the difficulties which surround me; nor would I wish in any way to embarrass the Administration. A public Despatch accompanies this, which enters more into official details. Excuse inaccuracies, as I am obliged to write in a hurry, in hope of this reaching New York in time for the packet of the 16th instant. I shall write again shortly.

The Lord Glenelg.

Castle of St. Lewis, Quebec, 9th September 1837.

MY LORD,

As I have not heard for the last three or four weeks that any public meetings have taken place, similar to those alluded to in the first part of my Despatch of the 11th of July last, I begin to conclude that this mode of agitation has been abandoned for the present, I understand that, since its commencement in the early part of May last, upon the ministerial resolutions becoming known in this country there have been held in different parts of the Province about twenty-three meetings, styled by those who convened them, "Anti-coercion Meetings." Of these, by far the greater number took place in the district of Montreal, five only being held in the district of Quebec, two in that of Three Rivers, and one in the district of St. Francis.

The principal objects of the resolutions passed at these meetings were to condemn the ministerial measures, and the policy of the home and local administration; to recommend smuggling and the adoption of other measures for cutting off the resources of, and diminishing the revenue; to excite to disaffection and resistance towards the imperial and provincial authorities; to suggest the formation of central and permanent committees for political purposes in each county, and of a general convention for the whole Province; and finally, to create a feeling which would lead to the severance of the connexion between the Colony and the Parent State, by representing that justice was no longer to be expected from the latter, but only tyranny and oppression, and by disseminating doctrines, and employing language and banners of a seditious, inflammatory, and disloyal character. For the correctness of this statement I would refer your Lordship to what passed at the meetings held in the counties of Richelieu, Montreal, Verchères, St. Hyacinthe, and Saguenay, as reported in the English organ of this party, the Vindicator newspaper, of the 12th, 16th, and 26th of May, and 9th of June last, and of the 1st ultimo.

The great difficulty of procuring strict legal evidence for bringing home in a court of justice to the parties concerned the charges that might be founded on the proceedings had at these meetings, added to the questionable policy of political prosecutions, especially at a time like the present, when the minds of a portion of the Jury summoned to try the offence would probably be poisoned by the misrepresentations and efforts of the disaffected, have as yet prevented any resort to the courts of law for the punishment of those implicated in such proceedings. Indeed, in two recent instances, where the Attorney-General preferred Bills of Indictment in the Court of King's Bench at Montreal, one against a Dr. Duchesnois, for publicly tearing and treating with contempt the proclamation issued by me on the 15th June last, and another against certain individuals, in the county of The Two Mountains, for a conspiracy, to drive out of the county, by means of threats and acts of violence, several inhabitants, because they held opposite political opinions, the Bills have been ignored by the Grand Jury in the face of the strongest evidence; and after the Attorney-General had, at the request of their foreman (Mr. L. G. Brown, of Beauharnois) laid before the panel most positive legal authority in support of both. Enclosure No. 1. is the Attorney-General's Report to me of this matter.

In these circumstances, and as it appeared, from some of the public prints, that many persons holding commissions from the Crown as justices of the peace or officers of militia attended these meetings, I directed my Civil Secretary to write to the most prominent of those who were reported to have taken an active part, by moving and seconding resolutions, inquiring whether they were present, and if so, whether they had any explanation to offer in their justification. With a few exception all have replied, admitting that they were present, and either denying the right of the Governor to demand an explanation from them, or giving none that was satisfactory. It consequently became my irksome duty, as head of the executive Government here, to prevent the weight and influence conferred by its authority from being thus abused; and accordingly I have had to dismiss, up to the present time, eighteen magistrates and thirty-five militia officers, nine of whom were also in the commission of the peace. In these dismissals are comprised seven members of the Assembly, including the Speaker, Mr. Papineau, who was major of the third battalion of militia, in the county of Montreal, and had assisted at five or six of the meetings. I inclose, for your Lordship's information, a copy of the letter addressed to this gentleman, and of his reply thereto, on the tone and style of which I need make no comment.

Vid. App.

Although there has been, I am happy to say, no recurrence of the outrages reported in the latter part of my Despatch of the 11th of July last, and although agitation by means of public meetings appears to have ceased, yet the efforts of those who are seeking, as it would seem, to disturb the existing order of things, continue unabated, and show themselves in seditious and inflammatory publications, and in the resolutions and acts of the committees that have been organized in one or two counties in the district of Montreal, where the proceedings are of a private and exclusive character, though some of them are occasionally made public through the organ of the party, the Minerve and Vindicator newspapers. The principal of these committees, styled the Central and Permanent Committee of the County of Montreal, holds its sittings weekly in the city of Montreal, and the objects of it, as set forth in the 13th resolution, passed at the meeting of St. Laurent (county of Montreal, on the 15th of May, are to watch over the political interests of the country—to correspond with the other counties in this and the sister Province—to adopt such measures as may from time to time appear necessary to protect the rights of the people, and advance the cause of good government in these Colonies—and to carry into execution, as far as lies in the power of the committee, the various recommendations, suggestions, and determinations agreed to at the meeting. What these recommendations and determinations are your Lordship will find, on reference to the Vindicator of the 16th of May, and for the names of those who compose this committee I must beg to refer you to that of the 19th of the same month.

There have been no steps yet taken, as far as I can learn, for establishing a general convention, beyond the recommendations contained in the resolutions adopted at the different meetings for organizing one, and the naming in such resolutions delegates to attend when the time and place of assembling shall be fixed.

That this state of affairs seriously augments the difficulties of carrying on the Government, and operates most injuriously upon the welfare and prosperity of the Province, must be quite obvious. With the exception of some of the counties in the district of Montreal, I believe the mass of the population is contented and loyal, and that the attempts that are making to shake its allegiance and to create confusion, will be unsuccessful.

Before closing this communication, I should mention that there have been six meetings held, including those in the cities of Quebec and Montreal, of which I have already apprized your Lordship, where resolutions were passed of an opposite character to those I have above noticed.

The numbers of the Vindicator newspaper quoted in this Despatch, I shall forward to your Lordship with the Duplicate that goes by way of Halifax in the Government Bag.

I have the honour to be,

MY LORD,

I WRITE from Court, and have only time, pending a trial, to say that the Grand Jury have just come into Court with a bill of indictment against Dr. Duchesnois for tearing the proclamation of June last, as not found; the same fate has attended the bill against the individuals at St. Eustache, for a conspiracy to drive certain of the inhabitants of different political sentiments from the county; and both in the teeth of the strongest possible evidence, and after I had laid before them, at the request of the foreman, (Mr. Brown, of Beauharnois,) most positive legal authority in support of both.

I am, &c.,

MY DEAR LORD,

I SEND you the Vindicator. Almost the only means I have of obtaining accurate information of what the Papineau party are about is, by what they choose to make public through their organs, the Vindicator and Minerve. You will see by the enclosed paper that an association has lately been formed in Montreal of young men, under the name of "Sons of Liberty;" of their objects and designs I have not been able, as yet, to procure any information further than appears in the paper.

Dr. Duchenois, and the conspirators of St. Benoit, bills against whom were ignored by the grand jury, the Attorney-General afterwards filed criminal informations against. You will see this also noticed in the Vindicator. There was nothing left to support the supremacy of the laws, but such a course, as from the formation of the grand jury, one of which had been dismissed from the militia for taking part in unlawful proceedings at an anti-coercive meeting, it was not to be expected that they would find bills having for their object the punishment of those at these meetings who took part in opposition to the Government. No doubt what is stated in the papers is much exaggerated, and the numbers who attend these meetings by no means so great as they represent; still the greatest vigilance is necessary to guard against the evils these meetings, or rather associations, are calculated to produce. One of the objects of the leaders in these associations is, to create as much alarm in England as they possibly can. I shall keep you regularly informed of what passes. I am obliged to conclude now, in order to be in time for the post.

Address of the Assembly of
Nova Scotia.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENCY MAJESTY.

The Humble Address of the House of Representatives in General Assembly for the Province of Nova Scotia.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

We Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the representatives of Nova Scotia, while approaching the Throne to ask for a redress of grievances, tender the assurance of the unabated attachment of those we represent to Your Majesty's person and Government. The people of Nova Scotia, when anything trenches upon their rights, or retards their prosperity, turn to their Sovereign, as the father of all his people, wherever their lots may be cast; and whose affection is not diminished by distance, nor bounded by the four seas of Britain, but extends to the most remote limits of his empire: rearing, wherever practicable, institutions favourable to freedom, and fostering that love of justice, that nice sense of the relative duties of the Government and the governed, which distinguishes the parent State. Nor is their confidence in Your Majesty diminished by the reflection, that in early life you visited Nova Scotia; and in maturer years have sanctioned those vast reformatory changes at home which emboldened them to seek for a revision of their institutions, and the introduction of those checks and guards without which they feel that private happiness and public liberty can never be secure.

In the infancy of this Colony its whole Government was necessarily vested in a Governor and Council; and even after a Representative Assembly was granted, the practice of choosing members of Council almost exclusively from the heads of departments, and persons resident in the capital, was still pursued, and, with a single exception, has been continued for the last thirty years. The practical effects of this system have been in the highest degree injurious to the best interests of the country, inasmuch as one entire branch of the Legislature has generally been composed of men who, from a deficiency in local knowledge, or from the natural bias incident to their official stations, were not qualified to decide upon the wants or just claims of the people, by which the efforts of the representative branch were, in many instances, neutralized or rendered of no avail.

Among the many proofs that might be adduced of the evils arising from this imperfect structure of the upper branch, it is only necessary to refer to the unsuccessful efforts of the Assembly to extend to the outports the advantages of foreign trade,—to the enormous sums which it was compelled, after a long struggle, to resign for the support of the Customs' establishment,—to the difficulties thrown in the way of a just and liberal system of education,—and to the recent abortive attempts to abolish the unconstitutional and obnoxious fees taken by the Judges of the Supreme Court.

While the population of this Province is composed, as it appears by the last census, taken in 1827, of 28,659 members of the Episcopal Church, and 115,195 Dissenters, which proportions may be assumed as fair at the present time, the appointments to the Council have secured to the members of the Church, embracing but one-fifth of the population, a clear and decided majority at the Board. They have now in that body nine members. The Presbyterians, who outnumber them by about 9000, have but two; the Catholics, who are nearly equal, but one; while the Baptists, amounting, by the census of the same year, to 19,790, and the Methodists to 9498, and all other sects and denominations, are without any of their members in a body whose duty it is to legislate for all. The Catholic bishop has no seat at the Council Board, and clergymen of that and other denominations are, as they ought to be, excluded; yet the bishop of the Episcopal Church has been since the year 1809, and still is, a member.

Your Majesty will readily perceive that, whether designed or not, the mere circumstance of one body of Christians having such an overwhelming influence in the Legislative and Executive Council, has a tendency to excite a suspicion that, in the distribution of patronage, the fair claims of the Dissenting population, founded upon their numbers, respectability, and intelligence, are frequently overlooked. This is not the only objection urged by the people of Nova Scotia against the composition of the Council, and to which it is our duty to call Your Majesty's attention. Two family connexions comprehend five of its members, and until very recently, when two of them retired from the firm, five were co-partners in one banking establishment: to this latter circumstance has been attributed the failure of the efforts of the Assembly to fix a standard of value, and establish a legal currency.

Appendix.
No. 19.
Copy of
Address of the Assembly of
Nova Scotia.

The people of this Province have for years asserted, and still most respectfully assert, their right to control and distribute the casual and territorial revenues of the country, whether arising from the fees of office, the sale of lands, or the royalty paid upon the produce of the mines, as also the amount of the old Crown duties. The lands of the Province are in effect mortgaged to pay to the Commissioner a salary out of all proportion to the duties he is called on to perform. Since his appointment in 1831, 5624*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* have been received on account of 107,923 acres of land sold; and the whole amount, except 216*l.* 8*s.* 0½*d.* has been taken to pay the Commissioner, and defray the expenses of the department; while nearly all the mines and minerals of the Province are held under a lease for sixty years by a wealthy English company, without the consent of, and independent of all controul by, the Representatives of the people.

Apart from the mere question of Judges' fees, this Assembly is convinced that the presence of the Chief Justice at the Council Board has a tendency to lessen the respect which the people ought to feel for the Courts over which he presides; while the position occupied there by the Collectors of the Customs and Excise is also unwise.

Though this Assembly might illustrate the evils arising from the structure of the Council by other examples, sad experience has taught them that it is not always safe to attempt to convey to the foot of the Throne representations that are disagreeable to its Members. A year's revenue, and all the appropriations, were sacrificed in a protracted struggle with the Upper House in 1830; and during the present Session the Assembly found itself compelled, by a regard to the public interest, to rescind a series of resolutions, passed after grave deliberation, and comprehending many of the topics touched on in this Address. The evils arising from the structure of the Council are heightened, and rendered more injurious, by the practice adhered to by that body, of shutting out the people from their deliberations. This practice they still maintain, although it is opposed to that of the House of Lords in England, that of the Legislative Councils of Lower Canada, New Brunswick, and Newfoundland; and notwithstanding the murmurs and complaints of the people for a long series of years, and the representations and remonstrances of this Assembly.

While this House has a due reverence for British institutions, and a desire to preserve to themselves and their children the advantages of that constitution under which their brethren on the other side of the Atlantic have enjoyed so much prosperity and happiness, they cannot but feel that those they represent participate but slightly in these blessings. They know that the spirit of that constitution—the genius of those institutions—is complete responsibility to the people, by whose resources, and for whose benefit, they are maintained. But, in this colony, the people and their Representatives are powerless, exercising upon the local Government very little influence, and possessing no effectual controul. In England, the people, by one vote of their Representatives, can change the Ministry, and alter any course of policy injurious to their interests; here the Ministry are Your Majesty's Council, combining legislative, judicial, and executive powers,—holding their seats for life, though nominally at the pleasure of the Crown; and often treating with indifference the wishes of the people and the representations of the Commons. In England, the Representative Branch can compel a redress of grievances by withholding the supplies: here they have no such remedy, because the salaries of nearly all the public officers, being provided for by permanent laws, or paid out of the casual and territorial revenues, or from the produce of duties collected under Imperial Acts, a stoppage of supplies, while it would inflict great injury upon the country, by leaving roads, bridges, and other essential services, unprovided for, would not touch the emoluments of the heads of departments in the Council, or of any but a few subordinate officers of the Government.

As a remedy for these grievances, we implore Your Majesty to grant us an Elective Legislative Council, or to separate the Executive from the Legislative Council, providing for a just representation of all the great interests of the Province in both; and, by the introduction into the former of some members from the popular branch, and otherwise securing responsibility to the Commons, confer upon the people of this Province, what they value above all other possessions, the blessings of the British Constitution.

13th April 1837.

Downing street, 6th July 1837.*

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Despatch, dated 1st May 1837, with the Addresses to His late Majesty and to yourself, which it encloses.

Although these documents reached me on the 14th ultimo, the painful circumstances in which the country was then placed, by the melancholy illness of His late Majesty, prevented their being submitted to him; but I am happy to find, that on all the principal questions to which those Addresses refer, His Majesty's pleasure was signified to you in my Despatch of the 30th April, No. 77.

Having had the honour of laying your Despatch, with its enclosures, before the Queen, I have received Her Majesty's commands to refer you to my former Despatch of the 30th April, and to signify Her Majesty's concurrence in the instructions therein conveyed to you. With reference to some of the demands, now preferred in a more specific shape in the Address from the House of Assembly, I am further commanded to return the following answer:—

First. The claim of the Assembly to control and appropriate the whole of the public revenue arising in the Province is frankly admitted by the Queen in the comprehensive and specific form in which that claim is now preferred, subject only to the conditions by which His late Majesty was pleased, in the instructions to the Earl of Gosford, and to Sir Archibald Campbell, of which you possess copies, to qualify the corresponding concession. As, however, in Nova Scotia a permanent provision has already been made by law for the support of various public officers, the discussion of the terms of the proposed civil list may be drawn within much narrower limits than in the adjacent provinces.

Secondly. The amount of the salary of the Commissioner of Crown Lands is admitted to be a fit subject for the deliberation of the local legislature; and every part of the expenditure connected with the Land Granting Department will, very properly, be subjected to their scrutiny and revision; the conditions being, however, maintained for which the Crown has stipulated in New Brunswick, as to the management of the crown lands being vested exclusively in the Executive Government, subject to their liability to account to the Legislature for all expenses incurred in conducting that branch of the public service.

Thirdly. Discouraging as the accounts of the receipt and the expenditure of the Land granting Department since the year 1831 undoubtedly are, they at least prove that His Majesty's Government judged rightly in opposing the advice offered to them at that time, as to the continuance of the old system of gratuitous grants of land. The returns have rather more than balanced the outlay; whereas if those counsels had been followed, the outlay would have formed an uncompensated charge on the other branches of the provincial revenue. You are well aware that the expectations of drawing any considerable income from this source were never sanguine; nor does it now seem reasonable to indulge such hopes. It will be highly gratifying to Her Majesty to learn that the Local Legislature have been able to devise any scheme for rendering this branch of the revenue more productive, or for managing and collecting it at a reduced charge.

Fourthly. The title of the Mining Company to their lease being undisputed, it is superfluous to say that Her Majesty's Government have no power to resume the grant. The introduction of their capital into the Province is, at least, a very material compensation for any prejudice which the inhabitants may have sustained by the creation of their interest in the mines. Supposing, however, that the Province was injured by that transaction, the error will now be repaired to the utmost possible extent, by placing the rents and royalties at the disposal of the Provincial Legislature, and by the enactment of the proposed law respecting the territorial revenue of the Crown, which will render it impossible that this measure should be drawn into a precedent.

Fifth. The exclusion of the Collector of Customs from the councils, whether legislative or executive, is a measure suggested by the Assembly; but as they have not explained the grounds of that suggestion, I can advance no further on this subject than to state that the strong and obvious motives which appear to recommend this officer's admission to the council, are opposed by no considerations of equal weight which have occurred to me.

Sixth. The language of the Address would seem to indicate an opinion which yet is not distinctly propounded, that the Assembly of Nova Scotia ought to exercise over the public officers of that government a control corresponding with that which is exercised over the Ministers of the Crown by the House of Commons,

To any such demand Her Majesty's Government must oppose a respectful, but at the same time a firm declaration that it is inconsistent with a due advertence to the essential distinctions between a metropolitan and a colonial government, and is therefore inadmissible.

On the other hand, the influence which the Assembly claim to derive from the power of refusing the supplies, properly belongs to them; it being always assumed that this power will be exercised only in defence of the Constitution, and of the rights which the Constitution has created; and it being further assumed that this privilege of refusing the supplies shall not extend to the cases of those officers for whom provision is to be made by the civil list.

Seventh. The Assembly having deliberately expressed their opinion that the welfare of the Province would be promoted by creating two councils instead of one, Her Majesty defers to their judgment on that question, not indeed without some distrust of the soundness of the conclusion, but convinced that it is a topic on which the greatest weight is due to the advice of the representatives of the people. The Queen can give no pledge that the Executive Council will always comprise some members of the Assembly, but commands me to state that the circumstance of any candidate for that honour possessing that share of public confidence which his election as a member of the Assembly indicates, must of course be considered as enhancing his claims to be preferred to those, who, in other respects, may not possess higher qualifications for this trust.

The principle on which councillors should be selected, is explained in my Despatch of the 30th April. You will, with the least possible delay, transmit to me a list of the names of such gentlemen as may appear to you best qualified to compose the legislative and the executive councils of Nova Scotia.

Her Majesty has observed with regret the discussions in which the Council and Assembly have recently become involved. That regret, however, is materially qualified by the observation that their differences do not relate to any vital and cardinal principles, but are such as may be entertained by those who are yet prepared to co-operate in the pursuit of the one common object, the public welfare. I shall best testify my respect for those branches of the legislature by declining to enter on these controverted questions, persuaded as I am that the means of reconciliation will be more readily discovered without the intervention of any third party, and that this happy result cannot long be deferred in a case like the present, when both parties are animated by a lively zeal for the public good, and both are directed by wisdom and experience in the prosecution of that purpose.

You will communicate to both branches of the legislature this Despatch, and my Despatch of the 30th April, as containing the answer which Her Majesty is pleased to return to their Address.

I have the honour to be, &c.

THE particular attention of His Majesty's Government has been called to measures adopted by various Colonial Legislatures for revising and altering the rates at which different coins should pass current and be a legal tender with reference to local monies of account.

These regulations have obviously considerable influence upon the transactions of those departments which are concerned in the collection of duties imposed by Acts of Parliament, more especially upon transactions of the Military Chest; and as material inconvenience has already been experienced in these respects, it is desirable to adopt such measures as may prevent the recurrence of such inconvenience, and thereby avoid the necessity of revoking such enactments as may be deemed objectionable, after they shall have been promulgated and carried into effect.

With this view I have to desire, that you will not permit any act, or ordinance, or proclamation, or regulation to come into operation in the Colony under your Government relating to the local currency and circulating medium, or to the rates at which coins should pass current, or be a legal tender, or to the circulation of promissory notes, or other paper, either by the Local Government or by any corporate bodies, or individuals, without having first received His Majesty's sanction, conveyed to you by the Secretary of State.

I have the honour to be, &c.

REPORT OF COLONEL CHARLES GREY ON HIS MISSION TO WASHINGTON

QUEBEC June 22d. 1838.

My Lord

I have the honour to inform you that in pursuance of the instructions contained in Your Excellency's letter of the 5th inst., I proceeded to Washington, where I arrived on the 12, & delivered the dispatches, with which I was charged, to Mr. Fox.—

The following day I had the honour of an interview with the President of the United States, but being in company with Mr. Fox, I contented myself with adding my testimony to the representations which he made, as to the excited state of feeling on the Canadian frontier, reserving any further communication for the next day, when being invited to dine with the President, I hoped to find an opportunity, in obedience to Your Excellency's orders, of speaking to him in private.—

By going early I obtained this opportunity, when I informed him that Your Excellency's object in sending me to Washington, was that I might give him the direct assurance from yourself, of your anxious wish, in the discharge of your duty as Governor General of British North America, to cultivate the most cordial relations with the Government of the United States; & to express your earnest hope that you might meet with the effectual cooperation of that Government, in your endeavours to preserve the peace of the frontier—

At the same time I pointed out to him that your first duty was to give efficient protection to her Majesty's Subjects in Canada, who for the last six months, during which time the Provinces themselves had been perfectly tranquil, had been kept in a constant state of excitement & alarm, by attacks & outrages, against Life & Property, committed by Men who had been permitted, almost without interruption, to assemble & concert their measures within the Territory of the United States.— That those who had come forward so nobly in defence of the Queen's Govt. when there was not a single regular soldier in Upper Canada, had a right to demand such protection; & that armed as they were to the number of upwards of 20,000 Men, & restrained only by their confidence in Your Excellency from adopting retaliatory measures, it could not be withheld without imminent danger of their acting for themselves, in a manner, which, with the best possible feeling towards each other, might make a collision between the two Government unavoidable.

The President assented to everything I stated most fully, & repeatedly desired me to assure Your Excellency "in the strongest manner", of the sincere desire of the American Government to preserve the good understanding existing with England, & that you might reckon upon the fullest co-operation which their means admitted, in any measures, which you might think necessary to adopt, for restoring the Peace of the frontier—

He mentioned the steps which they had already taken with this view, of which Your Excellency has been informed by Mr. Fox— that it was as much as their means allowed at the present moment, but that he had no doubt that the Bill before Congress for the increase of the Army would very shortly pass into a Law, & that then more vigorous measures should be adopted—

He entered very fully into the accusations which had been brought against the American Government, that it was not sincere in its wish to preserve peace, that it had fomented the disturbances in Canada, & that it had ulterior views of its own with regard to that Country—All which he denied in the strongest terms, & asserted that the annexation of Canada to the Union, was not only far from the wish of the Government, but directly contrary to the interests of the United States.—

Later in the evening I had a long conversation on the same subject, at his own request, with Mr. Poinsett the Secretary at War; in which I dwelt yet more strongly on the necessity Your Excellency was under of affording, at all hazards, efficient protection to her Majesty's Subjects, & of the regret with which you would find yourself compelled to employ the large force which had been placed at your disposal, in securing the Canadian frontier from hostile aggression coming from the United States.—Mr. Poinsett asserted, still more strongly than the President, the anxious wish of the American Government to preserve peace, & to assist in re-establishing a settled state of things on the frontier.—To show what had been already done, he promised to send me the next morning a copy of the Instructions given to General Macomb (which I received accordingly, & have herewith the honour to enclose), & suggested that Your Excellency should open a communication with that officer as soon as possible—to whom an intimation should immediately be sent that he might expect such communication, with instructions to cooperate in any measures which might be suggested, in the first place for rooting out the Band of Pirates now assembled in The Thousand Islands, & afterwards for rendering the Navigation of the Lakes & river, & the communication between the two Countries secure—

Mr. Poinsett attached great importance to an early resumption of the usual intercourse between the Countries, & "pledged himself" repeatedly that on the passing of the measure now before Congress for the increase of the Army, any suggestion from Your Excellency as to the means of rendering that Inter-course safe, should at once be attended to & acted upon— & that in the mean time, no measure within the scope of their present means to adopt, for the preservation of the peace of the frontier, should be neglected—

Nothing could be more satisfactory than the manner of both the President & Mr. Poinsett— They seemed fully aware of the dangers to the Peace of the two Countries, arising from the present state of things on the frontier, & really desirous of putting an end to it—at the same time it is evident that there has been hitherto a culpable inactivity on the part of the United States Government— & I cannot but attribute their present measures to the firm tone taken by Your Excellency in your proclamation after the burning of the Sir Robert Peel, & to their knowledge that you have under your orders a force sufficient for the purpose of protecting her Majesty's subjects, even without their cooperation—Your Excellency will observe that the communication from Mr. Forsyth to Mr. Fox is only dated the 12th june, the day of my arrival in Washington—that the Instructions to Genl. Macomb, & the General order of that officer, which I also enclose—bear the same date—Mr. Fox, however, only received Mr. Forsyth's communication on the 13th in my presence, after my interview with the President had been arranged, & I cannot but think that the whole of these measures were then adopted, in anticipation of the communication, which from your proclamation they had been led to expect from Your Excellency, & of which, it was supposed, I was the Bearer—

I have the honour to remain

Yr. Excellency's

Most obedt. Servt.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

I ought perhaps to mention that Mr. Poinsett was anxious to learn the Number of Regiments now in this country.— This I gave him correctly, adding that five more were expected, which with the Artillery & Cavalry would give,— exclusive of the Regiments in New Brunswick & Nova Scotia, an effective force of upwards of 13,000 men.—

Secret & Confidential.

No. 36

Castle of St. Lewis,
Aug. 9 1838.

My Lord,

The information which my residence here has enabled me to obtain as to the condition of the two Canadas, is of such a nature as to make me doubt whether, if I had been fully aware of the real state of affairs in this part of the world, any considerations would have induced me to undertake so very difficult a task as is involved in my mission. I do not, however, wish it to be understood that I consider success impossible. On the contrary, I indulge a hope, that if the difficulties and dangers that are now so apparent to me, are appreciated by Her Majesty's Government, so as to lead to their adoption of measures sufficiently comprehensive and decided to meet the emergency, the objects of my mission may be accomplished.

My sole purpose, therefore, in adverting to circumstances which threaten a different result, is to impress upon your Lordship my own conviction, which has been formed by personal experience, that even the best informed persons in England can hardly conceive the disorder or disorganization which, to the careful enquirer on the spot, is manifest in all things pertaining to Government in these colonies.

Such words scarcely express the whole truth. Not Government merely, but society itself seems to be almost dissolved. The vessel of the State is not in great danger only, as I had been previously led to suppose, but looks like a complete wreck.

It is needless to point out the wide difference between this representation and the opinions on the subject which were, and probably still are, held by Her Majesty's Ministers; but since one who had the benefit of whatever information they possessed, is nevertheless compelled to acknowledge that the truth, as it now appears to him, differs so much from his previous conceptions of it, what can he infer but that distance has precluded them from acquiring an accurate knowledge of the whole subject? This is my belief; and it becomes therefore an imperative duty on my part, to convey to your Lordship the exact impressions which I have derived from personal inquiry and observation. I will not shrink from the performance of that duty.

On the present occasion, however, I propose to confine myself to a particular class of circumstances; that is, to those which relate to the Lower Province, and are of the most unfavourable character; my object in making such a selection being to state without reserve, in a separate despatch, certain facts and opinions, as to which, as coming from me, it is most inexpedient that any publicity should be given for the present: this despatch will therefore be marked 'Secret'.

The first point to which I would draw your attention, being one with which all others are more or less connected, is the existence of a most bitter animosity between the Canadians and the British, not as two parties holding different opinions and seeking different objects in respect to Government, but as different races engaged in a national contest.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

This hatred of races is not publicly avowed on either side. On the contrary, both sides profess to be moved by any other feelings than such as belong to difference of origin; but the fact is, I think, proved by an accumulation of circumstantial evidence more conclusive than any direct testimony would be, and far more than sufficient to rebut all mere assertions to the contrary. If the difference between the two classes were one of party or principles only, we should find on each side a mixture of persons of both races; whereas the truth is that, with exceptions which tend to prove the rule, all the British are on one side, and all the Canadians are on the other. What may be the immediate subject of dispute seems to be of no consequence; so surely as there is a dispute on any subject, the great bulk of the Canadians and the great bulk of the British appear ranged against each other. In the next place, the mutual dislike of the two classes extends beyond politics, into social life, where, with some trifling exceptions again, all intercourse is confined to persons of the same origin. Grown-up persons of a different origin seldom or never meet in private society; and even the children, when they quarrel, divide themselves into French and English like their parents. In the schools and the streets of Montreal, the real capital of the province, this is commonly the case. The station in life, moreover, of an individual of either race seems to have no influence on his real disposition towards the other race; high and low, rich and poor, on both sides—the merchant and the porter, the seigneur and the habitant—though they use different language to express themselves, yet exhibit the very same feeling of national jealousy and hatred. Such a sentiment is naturally evinced rather by trifles than by acts of intrinsic importance. There has been no solemn or formal declaration of national hostility; but not a day, nor scarcely an hour passes without some petty insult, some provoking language, or even some serious mutual affront occurring between persons of British and French descent. Lastly, it appears upon a careful review of the political struggle between those who have termed themselves the loyal party and the popular party, that the subject of dissension has been, not the connexion with England, nor the form of the constitution, nor any of the practical abuses which have affected all classes of the people, but simply such institutions, laws, and customs as are of French origin, which the British have sought to overthrow, and the Canadians have struggled to preserve, each class assuming false designations and fighting under false colours—the British professing exclusive loyalty to the Crown of England, and the Canadians pretending to the character of Reformers. Nay, I am inclined to think that the true principles and ultimate objects of both parties, taken apart from the question of race, are exactly the reverse of what each of them professes; or, in other words, that the British (always excluding the body of officials) are really desirous of a more responsible Government, while the Canadians would prefer the present form of Government, or even one of a less democratic character. I shall have more to say on this head presently, having mentioned the subject here only for the purpose of citing another fact which tends to prove the existence of a deep-rooted national sentiment on both sides. Such a contradiction between the real and avowed principles of each party, could not have occurred if all the people had been of one race, or if every other consideration had not given way to the sentiment of nationality.

This general antipathy of the Canadians towards the British, and of the British towards the Canadians, appears to have been, as it were, provided for at the conquest of the province, and by subsequent measures of the British Government. If Lower Canada had been isolated from other colonies, and so well peopled as to leave little room for emigration from Britain, it might have been right at the conquest to engage for the preservation of French institutions, for the existence of a 'Nation Canadienne'; but, considering how certain it was that, sooner or later, the British race would predominate in this country, that engagement seems to have been most unwise. It insured such a strife as has actually taken place; for, notwithstanding the division of Canada into two provinces, for the purpose of isolating the French, the British already predominate in French Canada, not numerically of course, but by means of their superior energy and wealth, and of their natural relationship to the powers of Government.

It was long before the Canadians perceived that their nationality was in the course of being over-ridden by a British nationality. When the Constitutional Act bestowed on them a Representative System, they were so little conversant with its nature, and so blind to the probable results of British emigration, that they described the constitution as a 'machine anglaise pour nous taxer', and elected to the House of Assembly a majority of Englishmen. But with the progress of British intrusion, they at length discovered, not only the uses of a representative system, but also that their nationality was in danger; and I have no hesitation in asserting that of late years they have used the Representative System for the single purpose of maintaining their nationality against the progressive intrusion of the British race. They have found the British pressing upon them at every turn, in the possession of land, in commerce, in the retail trade, in all kinds of industrious enterprise, in religion, in the whole administration of government, and though they are a stagnant people, easily satisfied and disinclined to exertion, they have naturally resisted an invasion which was so offensive to their national pride.

The British, on the other hand, impeded in the pursuit of all their objects, partly by the ancient and barbarous civil law of the country, and partly by the systematic opposition of the Canadians to the progress of British enterprise, have naturally sought to remove those impediments, and to conquer without much regard to the means employed, that very mischievous opposition. The actual result should have seemed inevitable. The struggle between the two races, conducted as long as possible according to the forms of the constitution, became too violent to be kept within those bounds. In order to preserve some sort of government, the public revenue was disposed of against the will of the Canadian people represented by their Assembly. The consequent rebellion, although precipitated by the British from an instinctive sense of the danger of allowing the Canadians full time for preparation, could not, perhaps, have been avoided; and the sentiment of national hostility has been aggravated to the uttermost, on both sides, by that excessive inflammation of the passions which always attends upon bloodshed for such a cause, and still more by this unusual circumstance, that the victorious minority suffered extreme fear at the beginning of the contest, and that the now subdued majority had been led to hope everything from an appeal to force.

There seems to me only one modification of this view of the subject. The employment by the Canadians of constitutional and popular means for their national purpose, has taught some of them, consisting chiefly of the most active and able, higher political views than such as belong to the question of nationality. These men are not, at heart, friendly to the barbarous institutions of their ancestors, but would readily adopt a more enlightened system, if they could do so without losing their own importance. Their necessary dependence on the prejudiced mass has alone restrained them from joining in many of the views for the improvement of the country which are entertained by the British. They have also learned to estimate the practical abuses of Government which affect all classes, and to wish for many reforms without reference to Canadian nationality. They even had, to some extent, succeeded in disseminating their opinions amongst the mass of their countrymen; and they are not unlikely to play a valuable and distinguished part under any new system of government that may put an end to the strife between hostile races; but, unfortunately, their number is so small as scarcely to affect my opinion of the temper of the Canadian people.

Supposing my view of that subject to be correct, your Lordship will readily understand that the bulk of the Canadian people are as disaffected as ever, and that the British part of the population regard the Canadians with vindictive jealousy. The Imperial Government is distrusted by both parties; by the Canadians because they fear, or rather expect in gloomy silence, that advantage will be taken of their late rebellion to remove the very causes of dissension, by giving a British character to the institutions and laws of the province, so that there shall no longer be any serious impediment to British colonization and enterprise; and by the British, on the other hand, because they doubt whether the Imperial Government will ever sufficiently understand the state of parties here, to approve of the great changes which must inevitably take place, if another period of legislative strife, and perhaps another rebellion, are to be averted.

This common distrust of the Imperial Govt. is illustrated by a remarkable circumstance. Both parties are disposed to wish for a war between England & the United States. Though there are but few on either side who would make such an avowal, the truth appears from circumstantial evidence; such as the pains taken by the British organs of the press to affront & provoke the Americans, & the curious satisfaction & industry with which both Canadians & British of all conditions invent & propagate reports of a warlike tendency. No tale is too extravagant for the belief of either party, provided it encourages the hope of an American war; & every story of the sort is listened to & repeated with a degree of satisfaction proportioned to its absurdity.

It is only as a means to very different ends, of course, that both parties long for a war. The British imagine that a war, by compelling the Imperial Govt. to rely altogether upon their party, would enable them to arrive by the shortest cut at their great object; viz, the extinction of Canadian institutions & power; & that it would also give them an opportunity of revenge for the serious losses & exasperating fears which they have recently suffered at the hands of the Canadians; while the Canadians, on the contrary, hope that they should obtain by means of a war, that revenge upon the British which, after recent events they cannot help desiring above all things. Such confidence in opposite results according to the wish of either party, may perhaps be explained by reference to the blindness of passion.

And here I must notice a fact of great importance. The more discerning of the Canadians are perfectly aware that if the authority of the United States should ever extend to this country, whether by means of war or of a peaceful union, the peculiar institutions, and even the language of French Canada would be extinguished as soon as possible, yet are they willing, with the exception perhaps of a considerable portion of the clergy, to incur the loss of all that they have held most dear, in order to gratify the sentiment of vengeance that has now got possession of them. I would not exaggerate the amount of the sacrifice that they are willing to make for the sake of revenge. It is right to add, therefore, that, in my opinion, they almost despair, come what may, of preserving those ancient usages and that distinct nationality, in defence of which they have struggled so many years.

But, be this as it may, whether they are moved by a sentiment of mere vengeance, or by revenge mixed with despair, I am well convinced that an American invasion of this province would be highly acceptable to most of them. The distribution of the people adds to the danger from this circumstance. Excepting the towns of Quebec & Montreal, one or two villages which are called towns, & certain townships settled by people of British origin, it may be said that the whole country is possessed by Canadians. The peculiar mode of settlement which took place under the system of seigneuries, has caused nearly all the main roads to be lined with houses, detached but near together, so that almost every road, whatever its length, has the appearance of a straggling street; while the lands on both sides of the road, being generally cultivated, are divided into small fields with strong enclosures. Communication by land, therefore, is almost subject to the pleasure of the Canadians. A people so much the reverse of Martial, might never avail themselves of this advantage without the encouragement of foreign aid; but I repeat that the foreign enemy would operate in a friendly country, & am bound to add that the most competent judges are of opinion, that the late rebellion would probably have succeeded without American assistance, if the Canadians had been prepared for it, & directed by capable leaders.

Satisfied of the disaffected temper of the Canadians as a people, I have naturally taken pains to acquire correct information as to the state of feeling in the United States as respects these Colonies and the Mother-country.

All reports concur in assuring me that the present government of the Union, and a vast majority of the American people, are decidedly adverse to a rupture with England. Having already conveyed this assurance to your Lordship, I need not dwell upon it here; but there are points in the state of American feeling towards these colonies, and especially near the frontier, of so much moment as to require particular notice.

In the first place, although some persons in the States, and the more so, if they have visited this country, are aware of the true nature of the late rebellion, it is a common opinion in America that the contention in this province has been between the Executive Government on the one hand, supported by a minority, and the majority of the people, without distinction of race, on the other; and that the subject of disagreement has been practical grievances and general principles similar to those which formed the matter of dispute between England and her old colonies in America.

As their fathers rebelled in defence of those old English charters of local self-government, which placed local taxation and revenue at the sole disposition of popular assemblies, so they think that the Canadian majority was justified in withholding supplies, and in resisting by force the violation of their constitution by the British Parliament.

They believe, in a word, that the majority in Lower Canada has contended for the maintenance of popular rights, and that arbitrary government is the aim of the minority. The mistake is easily accounted for: it is only on the spot that one learns how the real subject of strife in Lower Canada has been a question of nationality; everywhere else, the false professions and designations employed by both parties, combined with the plain fact that the contest has been between a majority and a minority, is apt to mislead the inquirer, by keeping out of view the distinction of races. If the whole subject were understood by Americans, they would probably sympathize with those who are of the same origin as themselves, who resemble them in numerous particulars, and who seek objects which, if this country were under American rule, would be unhesitatingly accomplished, as similar objects have been attained in the Dutch colony of New York, and the French colony of Louisiana.

There is no people under the sun to whom the feudal institutions and most defective civil laws of the Canadians would be more intolerable, than to the Anglo-Saxon race of the United States. But they have misunderstood the case.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

They have fallen into the not uncommon mistake of confounding means with ends. Believing that the means employed by the Canadians, in the Assembly, were constitutional and popular; and seeing that the British, being in a minority, necessarily clung to the local executive and the Imperial authority; above all, regardless of the accident (for so it may be termed with respect to the question of nationality), by which the Canadians happen to constitute a majority, Americans have supposed that the objects of both parties in the colony were of the same nature respectively, as the means on which each party has relied. An ever active sentiment of national pride is, perhaps, the most remarkable feature in the American character. It might have been foreseen, therefore, that the Americans, proudly recollecting the origin and progress of their own revolutionary war with England, should sympathize with the Canadians, or rather with the majority, who happen to be Canadians. Whether they may ever comprehend the false position assumed by both parties in this colony, I will not venture to predict; but so long as their view of the subject shall remain unchanged, they will, I believe, continue to sympathize with that side which has the air of contending for democratic principles and popular objects, and to wish that it may prevail over the other, which appears in the light of an oppressive minority.

Secondly: Having regard to the national pride of America, it is certain that the temper and tone of the British party towards that country, tends to stir up angry passions throughout the Union, and especially near the frontier, where articles from the colonial newspapers are generally reprinted. The British cannot but resent that American sympathy with the Canadians which I have just described; & they secretly wish, moreover, for the reasons stated in a former part of this Despatch, that England may be involved in a war with America. Hence their organs of the press abound with false statements, much exaggerated descriptions, perversions of the truth, insulting reflexions provoking sneers; & low-lived abuse, of which the effect, not to say the aim, is to stimulate & goad the national pride of Americans. Certain published writings & public discourses of the late Lieut. Governor of Upper Canada had a similar tendency. Hitherto the national pride of America has not been deeply wounded by these means (and I do all in my power to mitigate the natural influence of such affronts to it); but I am credibly informed that these unceasing attacks have not been without effect, and that they form a subject of growing irritation.

Thirdly: By the existence of a state of things, out of which it is easy to see that war might spring, the American mind becomes more and more familiar with the idea of war. Differing as the Americans do, from all other nations, in the universal diffusion of an active interest in public affairs, and in a habit which belongs to all ranks, of calculation as to the future, they are led, by the political state of these provinces, to discuss the subject of war hypothetically, if I may use the expression; they are reminded of the events of the last war, and one of them in particular, the capture of Washington, which inflicted a deep wound on the national pride, and by frequently conversing on such exciting topics, they gradually approach that state of feeling under which the government, necessarily impelled by the people, would find it hard to maintain friendly relations with England. I am therefore inclined to believe—that has been confidently asserted by observers on the spot—that opinion in the States was gradually becoming less unfavourable to war, than it was.

Fourthly: It is not to be denied that the distracted state of these colonies occasions no little inconvenience to the frontier states, and to the Federal Government; it calls for an increase of the army, a sort of military array on the frontier, and the exercise of new powers by the executive, which are opposed to the habits, if not the institutions, of the American people. All the expense and annoyance are attributed to the British Government. A dispassionate American admits that his government is bound, at whatever cost, to prevent aggressions on the Canadian frontier; and he does not deny that the obligation has been inadequately fulfilled; but when reminded of the inefficiency of the laws for that purpose, and the weakness of the American executive, he answers that the true source of every difficulty is the weakness of the British Government in Canada, which has not maintained order amongst its own subjects, nor is able to protect the United States from such a nuisance as arises from the conduct of British refugees within their territory. This retort, without stopping to examine its justice, suffices to show that, until order shall be restored in these colonies, a great cause of irritation in America will probably continue to operate with increasing force.

Fifthly: The boundary question, being much mixed, as it unavoidably is in America, with considerations arising out of the state of these colonies, forms a more active element of hostile feeling than would otherwise have been the case.

Lastly: It is certain that, amongst the frontier population of the United States, which, I should observe, has very greatly increased since the last war, there exists a numerous body of men, young, active, energetic, and self-relying, who, from various motives, long for an opportunity of invading Canada. Some of them are moved by an opinion, which it would not be easy to question, that if these colonies were laid open to American enterprize, a great impulse would be given to the industry and trade of that part of the States, which now constitutes the frontier; some are influenced by one or other of the circumstances to which I have already adverted; some by that love of adventure merely, which belongs to the American character; and some by a reasonable calculation of the gain and distinction which, in troubled times, usually fall to the most active and daring. The manner in which these people talk of invading the Canadas, exemplifies the self-reliance of American citizens. They do not expect that the Federal Government should open the way for them by military operations; they even avow their belief that, in a contest of troops only, the British would surely prevail; but they reckon upon the friendly disposition towards them of great numbers on this side, and upon swarming over the line in such numbers, and at so many places simultaneously, as to get possession of the country in spite of military obstacles. I do not pretend to weigh such calculations, but state them as they have been reported to me. If I am not misinformed, it is well that I should remind Her Majesty's Government of the invasion of Texas by a body of American citizens, who, without the least aid from their government, have seized an extensive country, defeated armies, got possession of the soil, and established themselves as a nation, with constitutional government, a judicial system and municipal institution, as complete as any in America. There is certainly no immediate danger of such an attack upon these colonies; and I have mentioned the subject only for the purpose of indicating the probable character of the contest that would take place here, if all the causes now in operation should finally produce one. It was in consequence of all these important considerations that, during my late residence on the American frontier, I courted the most unreserved communication with all respectable Americans, for the purpose of impressing them with a more sound and accurate conception of the real state of things; with a more just appreciation of our system of government, and its real objects; and with a due sense of the danger which would arise to themselves, if their government remained a passive spectator of all these proceedings, tending, as they did, to destroy all confidence in its executive strength, and all reliance on the national honour.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

I am happy to say that my efforts have been successful, that a great change has taken place in public feeling on the American side, and that my exertions to restore tranquillity and good order are encouraged and supported by the most influential portions of the press and of society in the United States.

Except as it has been noticed for the purpose of explaining the temper of the Canadians, and one of the causes of irritation in the United States, a most important subject yet calls for your Lordship's attention; I allude to certain feelings and views of the British section of Her Majesty's subjects in this province.

Your Lordship is already informed of the general satisfaction expressed by the British party, at my having, when I assumed the Government, avoided connecting myself with the old body of officials. It may be supposed that the body in question did not participate in that sentiment. I very soon became aware, therefore, of the existence of some difference between the official body and the British in general. Subsequent observation has convinced me, that, except in their common hostility to the Canadians, there is no sympathy between these two classes, & even that the British generally who are not connected with office, regard most of those who are, with feelings bordering on aversion & contempt.

That this should be the case is really not surprising when one discovers how all the powers of Government have been neglected and abused for many years past in this colony. Not to go further back than the commencement of serious differences between the Canadians and British as such, since when the two branches of the legislature have neglected their proper functions to pursue the contest between races, a long time has passed without anything like beneficial legislature, and not a few of the many evils resulting from this perversion of legislative powers, have, by a very natural mistake, been attributed to neglect and corruption in the Executive. At the same time, it must be confessed, that the Executive has been both neglectful and corrupt. I need not remind your Lordship of those flagrant instances in which the Imperial Government has been led to interfere for the correction of administrative abuses; nor is this a fit occasion for entering on that subject in detail; but I am bound to add, that the Government of this province, including the administration of justice, has not obtained the respect of the people, and that, according to all my information, there has been ample ground for the distrust and suspicion with which authority is regarded.

This leads to another feature in the disposition of that portion of the British inhabitants which may be termed independent. Their main object, as I have before explained, has been to remove the obstacles which the ignorance, the apathy, and the ancient prejudices of the Canadians opposed to the progress of British industry and enterprise; to substitute, in short, for Canadian institutions, laws and practices, others of a British character. In this pursuit they have necessarily disregarded the implied, not to say precise engagement of England to respect the peculiar institutions of French Canada. But the Imperial Government, on the contrary, never quite forgetting that ancient pledge, has rather extended its protection to the Canadian than espoused the cause of the British settlers. It were to be wished, perhaps, that this policy had been consistently pursued from the beginning; as, in that case, a British community might not have grown up here, with feelings, wants, and a degree of power which make it simply impossible to pursue such a policy now. But it has not been consistently pursued. By a variety of measures, and especially by promoting emigration to this colony, the Imperial Government have really undermined the Canadian nationality which they perhaps intended to preserve. A similar contradiction may be observed in their treatment of the national struggle which has ended in civil war. Never taking a decided part with either section in the colony, they have wavered between them, now favouring the one and then the other, but neither decidedly, and finally displeasing both sections in about the same degree. Under such a system, if it may be called one, no governor could have pursued a consistent course, or have attached either the Canadians or the British to the Imperial Government.

I should not permit myself to say this reproachfully, even if there were room for an accusation, which in my humble opinion there is not; but I mention it as a necessary result of the original false step, and for the purpose of explaining the present disposition of the British party. Deeply offended at every measure or decision of the Imperial Government which thwarted their own British or Anti-Canadian views, they are also wanting in that respect for the supreme authority which is sometimes felt by the discontented subjects of a decided and vigorous Government. With less antipathy, no doubt, & more caution, but also with far more self-reliance, they are as little loyal as the Canadians. Restrained (though not entirely) from the public expression of their sentiments by a hope that the Imperial Government may yet accomplish the object on which their heart is set, they have no such reserve amongst themselves; nor do they at all care who knows of the language commonly held by them when speaking of the Imperial Government, and the connexion between this colony and the Mother-Country. I am assured that the leaders and their followers, one and all, are in the habit of declaring that, rather than be again subject to the French (meaning rather than see another majority of Canadians in the Assembly) they should much prefer a union with the United States; & that if they are deserted by the British Govt. (I use their own expressions) they shall find a way to take care of themselves. I should be sorry to report any idle conversation upon such a topic, but have no doubt that language of this kind is commonly uttered with an earnestness of manner which should prove its sincerity. And this is not all: for the sentiments expressed are enforced by deliberate arguments, such as, that the Americans, if they had possession of this country, would quickly dispose of Canadian supremacy; that the present sympathy of the Americans with the Canadians should be forgiven on the score of ignorance; that the institutions of America, being favourable at all events to industrious enterprize, are well-suited to a People of British descent settled on this continent, & would be infinitely preferable to Canadian feudalisms; that if American aggression does not force the Imperial Govt. to extinguish the Canadian nationality, American assistance would enable the British in Lower Canada to attain that first of objects; that if the British here were to offer a friendly hand to the Americans, it would be cordially accepted; that considering the exasperation of the Canadians produced by late events, there can be no permanent safety for people of British descent except by rendering the colony thoroughly British, or, in case of need, thoroughly American; & that if the Imperial Govt. should not provide for the security of its British Subjects, the time will soon be past for obedience to any other Law than that of self-preservation.

That such views are currently expressed amongst the British party, there can be no doubt; and I am the more disposed to believe them sincerely entertained, because, having reference to a future contingency, they are not inconsistent with those loud professions of loyalty and attachment to England by which the British minority has hitherto sought to enlist the Imperial Government against the Canadian majority. At present, of course, such views are merely speculative, everything being held in suspense by the large powers awarded to me, and by the hope of a happy settlement of affairs upon my recommendation.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

Notwithstanding, however, the very unfavourable representations contained in this despatch, I am induced to hope with confidence, that success may ultimately attend the measures with respect to this country which have been recently adopted by the Imperial Government. My principal reason for this assurance is drawn from the good effect already produced by decided and vigorous action. The exercise of the very extensive powers placed in my hands, seems to have operated as a sort of charm, like oil poured upon troubled waters. At this moment all is still. A stranger would hardly believe that the country had been recently distracted by civil war. Expectation for the future is, I trust, taking the place of angry passions occasioned by the past. I must, however, conclude by assuring your Lordship, that whatever hopes I entertain of the future, depend altogether on the supposition, that Her Majesty's Government and Parliament will not shrink from the adoption of permanent measures of remedy and prevention, proportioned to the greatness of the difficulties with which I have yet to contend, and will sanction such measures as will effectually provide for the abstraction of all legislation on British interests from the control of a French majority. I am of opinion that this great object can be legitimately effected without violence to Canadian rights, and in strict accordance with the soundest principles of constitutional government.

The time is fast approaching when I shall be enabled to bring these measures under the consideration of Her Majesty's Government; and in the meantime I recommend to their serious attention the important points to which I have referred in the present communication.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

PLEA OF ROBERT BALDWIN FOR RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT

TORONTO 23 August 1838.

MY LORD

It is with great reluctance that I have brought myself to the determination of addressing Your Lordship with reference to the subject of the interview with which you were pleased to honour my father & myself on your late visit to this Province. And nothing but a belief that my abstaining from doing so after the gracious manner in which Your Lordship was pleased to invite such communication would be at once an abandonment of my duty to my country and an act of ingratitude to Your Lordship, could have induced me to depart from my resolution of avoiding any farther interference in the politics of the Province—

In departing from this resolution too on the present occasion I am labouring under the disheartening consideration that what I have to submit must be little more than a repetition of views & opinions which were formerly laid before the Home Government; and which were not only not adopted but were unhappily followed by Lord John Russell's Resolutions of 1837— Had the advice which on that occasion I took the liberty of offering been then taken, I believe few will deny that the late Rebellion would have been prevented— I now repeat that advice to Your Lordship with a solemn assurance of my belief that sooner or later it must be adopted, and those fatal Resolutions abandoned, or that England will continue to retain these Colonies by means of her troops alone— To my Letter to Lord Glenelg on that occasion, a copy of which is enclosed, I take the liberty of referring Your Lordship not only because it contains all, which on the points embraced in it I have now to offer, but because by comparing it with the events which unhappily we have since had to deplore Your Lordship will see that I was not wholly mistaken in the importance which I then attributed to the adoption of the course which I recommended— Although I candidly confess that I did not anticipate an outbreak so immediate as subsequently took place— And be assured My Lord that although, to avail myself of an illustration of Your Lordships, he who is placed on an eminence may from the elevation of his position have a more extended view and be better able to judge of the relative positions of the several objects by which he is surrounded than the humble occupant of the valley below; it is the latter who has the best opportunity of observing the gradual crumbling of the snows at the foot of the Mountain which though slow and imperceptible except to the minutest inspection not the less certainly indicates the approaching avalanche— Your Lordship occupies the former and more responsible of these positions; the individual who now addresses you the latter— While therefore Your Lordship does not, I feel assured, overrate the power which you wield, I confess, with I may truly say the most unbounded confidence in Your Lordship's good intentions, I feel much alarm lest the remedies which that power may apply will either not reach the root of the evils under which we are suffering, or receiving a wrong direction leave those evils wholly untouched. And the short interview with which I was honoured while it increased my confidence in those intentions added much to my alarm for the result; because I thought I discerned if not a final opinion at least a strong bias in favour of a measure which in my own mind I am convinced can end in nothing but disappointment. The establishment of a general Legislative body for all the Colonies, unless as a preparatory step to making them independent, would in my humble opinion be worse than useless: And would unquestionably tend rapidly to bring about a separation from the

Mother Country. The Imperial Parliament is the tribunal in whose hands should be retained all the powers of general legislation essential to the welfare of the Empire as a whole: And for all legislation of a local character the Legislatures of the respective Provinces will I am convinced be found the best adapted— If I express myself more strongly on this occasion than may appear decorous towards one of Your Lordship's exalted rank and character, Your Lordship will not impute it to any want of that respect which, conscious yourself of deserving, you will not believe me capable of withholding; but to the true cause,—the deep importance of the subject itself to all that is dear to me—and I confess when I see the only man perhaps in the Empire who from his political reputation and peculiar position is in a situation to induce the Home Government to retrace its steps, concede to the Provincial Parliament its just influence in the direction of the local affairs of the Colony, and thus place the affairs of my native country upon a foundation from which permanent tranquility may be looked for, about as I believe to waste the energies of his master mind in an experiment of the failure of which I entertain not the slightest doubt I feel that I should be criminal if I did not in terms the most distinct and unequivocal express my entire and unqualified dissent to any such experiment being made—

Your Lordship has been the first statesman to avow a belief in the possibility of a permanent connection between the Colonies & the Mother Country— It is I confess not a little gratifying to me thus to have Your Lordship's high sanction to an opinion which I always entertained & avowed; although it has heretofore been treated as chimerical even by those most loud in denouncing the political opinions which I entertain as inconsistent with the continuation of that connection, and at once unconstitutional in their character and republican in their tendency— Your Lordship has gone farther you have said that the connection must be preserved— I sincerely feel grateful to Your Lordship for this announcement— It will I trust put an end to the repeated references to the arrival of a time when these Colonies must cease to be a part of the British Empire which have not unfrequently proceeded from the very servants of the Crown, and which I have no doubt have had an injurious effect in unsettling mens minds and directing their attention to the consideration of the republican frame of Government which under the expectation thus held forth their country was ultimately to possess and thus leading them to the adoption of republican rather than monarchical forms in the remedies which they have sought to have applied to the evils which they were or fancied themselves to be suffering.— Hence I think may clearly be traced among others the call for an elective Legislative Council, than which I am convinced nothing could be more inefficient of itself as a means of removing the discontent under which the Province has been labouring; And nothing except the abolishing the Upper House altogether more fatal to the connection between the two Countries—

If Your Lordship then after the solemn announcement of the great principle that the connection must be maintained can but happily succeed in giving us a system which by its own working shall tend to establish & strengthen that connection you will have indeed done a great public service to your own Country but you will have conferred a greater far greater benefit upon these Provinces— If on the other hand however you unhappily fail in the latter point, you will by the former have only laid the foundation of one day a more protracted and therefore a more unhappy struggle— Fearful then is the responsibility which rests upon Your Lordship and therefore it is that I have not felt at liberty to withhold my voice humble as it is at the present momentous crisis— My views as to what is required are contained in the letter of which I send a copy. To which I shall only add that the opinions there expressed have been strengthened not weakened by subsequent observation—

Your Lordship must adapt the Government to the genius of the people upon and among whom it is to act— It is the genius of the English race in both hemispheres to be concerned in the Government of themselves— I would ask Your Lordship, would the people of England endure any system of Executive Government over which they had less influence than that which at present exists? Your Lordship knows they would not.— Can you then expect the people of these colonies with their English feelings & English sympathies to be satisfied with less— If you do Your Lordship will assuredly be disappointed— They can see a reason why their relations with foreign countries should be placed in other hands; but none why their domestic concerns should not be managed upon similar principles to those applied in the administration of the Imperial Government— It is in vain to direct their attention to this or that grievance— Many that have been harped upon in the political heat of the day as evils of appalling magnitude are no grievances at all and many others would cease to be such under the system proposed— You must place the Government in advance of public opinion you must give those in whom the people have confidence an interest in preserving the system of your Government, and maintaining the connection with the Mother Country, and then you will hear no more of grievances because real ones will be redressed imaginary ones will be forgotten— But short of this all your efforts to produce harmony and all your exertions to preserve that connection will I am satisfied be wholly unavailing—

These are the views which I laid before Sir Francis Head when he sent for me on his first arrival in the Province— These views I again pressed upon the consideration of Lord Glenelg and Lord John Russell when in England in 1836, and I now again and for the last time would most earnestly urge them upon the consideration of Your Lordship as the only ones which would produce a system which, by adapting itself to the exigency of circumstances as they arise, would lay the foundation, if it be now possible to lay such foundation, of lasting tranquility—

To conclude My Lord with all the deference which becomes me when addressing your Lordship yet with all the firmness which I owe to my children and my country as a Canadian subject of Her Majesty I object first to the alteration of the Constitution in the minutest particular and secondly to the sacrifice of any single branch of the Royal Prerogative— Both of them are my birth right and I claim from Your Lordship the preservation of them in all their integrity— And lastly I claim to have applied to that Constitution and to have used in the exercise of that Prerogative the same principle of responsibility to the people through their representatives which is daily practiced in the Executive Government of that mighty Empire of which it is yet my pride to be a subject

With sentiments of the most profound respect

I remain my Lord

Your Lordships Most

obedient humble Servant

The Right Honble.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

4 TRINITY COURT, CHARING CROSS
13th July 1836.

MY LORD,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of a Letter from Mr. Stephen in reply to mine of the 20th ulto. requesting the honor of an interview with Your Lordship, on the public and private grounds referred to in my former Letter.—

As Your Lordship does not deem it advisable to accede to my request for a personal interview, I will not trespass on Your Lordship's time by any further reference to myself, or the injustice which I, and indeed all my late Colleagues, have reason to complain of having received at the hands of the Lieutenant Governor— More than enough is already before Your Lordship to place this in a very strong light— Your Lordship I feel assured cannot approve of the conduct of Sir Francis Head, however necessary you may imagine it to be, not publicly to condemn it; and I can personally have no desire to pursue the subject; I will only take the liberty of assuring Your Lordship, that as it was no desire of place that induced me to accept the seat pressed upon me by Sir Francis Head, nothing but a desire of justifying myself to the Government, under which I was born, and to which I am both by duty and affection still most warmly attached, could as far as, I am myself personally concerned, have induced me to trespass on Your Lordship by the request.— I shall take it for granted however that Your Lordship will do us the justice to point out any particular in our conduct on the late occasion, which in your estimation may appear culpable, or such as to call for further explanation.

But my Lord I am deeply impressed with the responsibility which the present state of Upper Canada necessarily throws upon every man connected with it— As my native Country its prosperity is necessarily to be an object of the most intense Anxiety.— Educated in the warmest attachment to the monarchical form of Government, believing it to be best adapted to secure the happiness of the people, and fully sensible that it can be maintained in Upper Canada only by means of the connexion with the Mother Country, I have always been most earnestly anxious for the continuation of that Connexion: I believe it to be now endangered. I sincerely believe the crisis to have arrived, which is to decide the ultimate destiny of Upper Canada as a dependancy of the British Crown.— I feel therefore that it would be criminal in me to refuse compliance with Your Lordship's request to communicate with you in writing on the subject of the present state of that Province, and the events which have recently taken place there— At the same time I cannot but feel, that altho' there may be some advantages in this mode of communication where Principles are merely to be laid down; they are more than counterbalanced by the disadvantages attendant upon it, where principles are not only to be laid down, but discussed, and the details connected with them, and the political situation of a country in a state of high and dangerous excitement, to be enlarged upon, and disposed of.—

I think however as clearly as I can, state to Your Lordship my view of the present state of the Province, with reference to the principle contended for in the recent memorial from the House of Assembly, to the Imperial House of Commons, and the value and importance of that principle in producing harmony among the several Branches of the Provincial Legislature, and inspiring the people with confidence in the Home and Provincial Governments and will conclude with most respectfully submitting my opinion as to the course which, with all deference for the opinion of others, it appears to me absolutely necessary should be promptly taken for preserving the connexion of that Colony with the Mother Country.—

If it is the desire of the Mother Country, which I of course assume it to be, to retain the Colony it can only be done either by force, or with the consent of the People of Upper Canada themselves. I take it for granted that Great Britain cannot desire to exercise a Government of the sword, and that she will therefore only govern the Canadas so long as she can do so with the concurrence of the People— For the purpose therefore of continuing the connexion upon this footing it is absolutely necessary; First—That the political machinery of the Provincial Government should be such, as shall work harmoniously within itself, without collision between any of its great wheels; And secondly, That it should be such as that the People may feel that they have an influence upon it sufficiently powerful to secure attention, not only to their abstract rights, but to their feelings and Prejudices; without regard to these you can govern no people satisfactorily or successfully— That the Constitution of Upper Canada administered upon the principles heretofore applied to it, has failed to accomplish either of these objects a very cursory view of the history of the Colony, without reference to Your Lordship's late dispatch, will sufficiently demonstrate.— It may however be well to state that the differences alluded to are of a much earlier date than appears to be generally known in this Country, or until lately to have been recollected even in the department over which Your Lordship presides. As early as in the Provincial Parliament of 1820 an opposition respectable if not formidable both in talents, and numbers existed,—some of the leading Members of which not only expressed their entire want of confidence in the Provincial Executive, but adopted the principle now contended for as a part of their political creed, and assumed it as necessarily pertaining as much to the provincial Constitution as to that of the Mother Country.— During the whole of that Parliament however the opposition were generally in a minority.— In the parliament of 1824 and in that of 1828 the Executive were uniformly in an inconsiderable minority.— In that of 1830, owing to Circumstances to which it is not worth while now to allude the Executive obtained a Majority; but in that 1834 they were again in a minority; so that taking the twelve Years from 1824 to 1836, the Provincial Executive have been in the minority for eight Years and three Parliaments, and have had a Majority only for four Years and one Parliament; during the whole of this time also the House of Assembly were constantly passing Bills which the Legislative Council as uniformly threw out. As therefore the present Constitution administered, upon the principles heretofore applied to it, has failed in both particulars, I mean in working smoothly itself or satisfying the People. it necessarily follows that something must be done to accomplish the objects desired.— To this end four remedies have been proposed; first to make the Legislative Council elective; Secondly, to abolish it; Thirdly to concede certain isolated points, which have been earnestly called for by the Representatives of the People, and fourthly, to put the Executive Council permanently upon the footing of a local Provincial Cabinet, holding the same relative position with reference to the representative of the King and the Provincial Parliament, as that on which the King's Imperial Cabinet stands with respect to the King and the Parliament of the Empire, and applying to such provincial Cabinet both with respect to their appointment to, and continuation in, office; the same principles as those which are acted upon by His Majesty with respect to the Imperial Cabinet in this Country.—

The two first remedies, if not inexpedient, I look upon as at least wholly insufficient to accomplish the objects desired:—the third, as equally insufficient of itself to do so; and the last as the only remedy by the application of which those objects can be attained and upper Canada preserved to the Mother Country—

First, the making the Legislative Council elective I look upon as inexpedient; among other reasons because I am of opinion that the institutions of every Colony ought as nearly as possible to correspond with those of the Mother Country— The Upper House of the Imperial Parliament not being elective I would therefore not have the Upper House of the Provincial Parliament elective unless under the pressure of an absolute necessity.— I moreover disapprove of the adoption of such a measure at all events at present,—because it is as a general principle inexpedient to make an alteration in the forms of the constitution of any Country, until the necessity for such change has been demonstrated, by putting into full and efficient operation, the existing constitution in all its details; which cannot be said to have been done with that of Upper Canada, until the Executive Council is practically converted into a provincial Cabinet for the local and internal Affairs of the Province:— Had this been done ten or twelve Years ago when the Executive first found themselves in a decided and uniform minority in the Provincial Parliament, I am satisfied that an elective legislative Council would not now have been thought of, and I am not without hopes, although they may prove fallacious, that it is not yet too late by the adoption of this principle to render such change in the constitution unnecessary. But at all events as a remedy amounting merely to the application of an English principle to the constitution as it stands, it ought yet to be tried fully and fairly, previous to resorting to the more violent measure of a legislative change in the Charter. It is but right however to inform Your Lordship that altho' my opinion of the inexpediency of such a change in the organization of the Legislative Council is concurred in by many I believe, a considerable majority of the Reformers of the Province (which every day's delay is increasing) think that such a change will ultimately be found necessary.— After the intimation contained in Your Lordship's despatch and out of regard to the opinions entertained by us, who in this point differ from them, they were however willing to drop the question of an elective Legislative Council until the Constitution as it is should have been fully and fairly tested by the application of those principles which have been found so valuable and so necessary in the successful working of that of the Mother Country;— And whatever may be the opinion entertained as to the expediency or inexpediency of making the Legislative Council elective I believe no doubt exists of such change being found wholly insufficient of itself to accomplish the two objects desired— The making the legislative Council elective might convert that body into an additional engine of hostility against the executive Government, but could never supersede the necessity for the concession of the Principle contended for.— Resistance to the concession of this Principle may drive the Reformers into Unanimity in the call for an Elective legislative Council, but it will only be as a means and not as an end— And when this state of things arrives, be assured that England will have lost the last hold upon the Affections of the great mass of the people of Upper Canada— That such change in the constitution of the Legislative Council would not be found to produce harmony between the three branches of the Provincial Government, will be readily admitted when it is remembered that the Collision which has produced so much evil has not been merely between the Representative Branch of the Government and the Legislative Council, but between the Representative Branch and the Executive Government; the complaint has always been of the influence of the Executive upon the Legislative Council, and not of the influence—of the Legislative Council upon the Executive Government.— It were idle therefore to expect unanimity while you leave untouched the main source of discord.

Secondly—To the proposal to abolish the Legislative Council altogether, most of the reasons against making it elective will equally apply: it may in addition be urged that a second chamber of some kind has, at least in modern constitutional legislation, been deemed essential to good Government; It has not been dispensed with in any of the new constitutions of any of the neighbouring Republics; and has I believe in more instances than one been not long since adopted as an improvement to the political machinery of Government where the previous constitution had contained no such provision. And moreover, the abolition of the Legislative Council has not been asked for, by any portion of the Canadian People.—

As to the third remedy proposed, that of conceding certain isolated points as they arise, and are called for; I will only say, that the whole history, not only of the Canadas but of the Colonies in general shews that such course as a means of producing permanent satisfaction and harmony, has wholly failed;—nor indeed does it appear to me to require much consideration to convince any one of the insufficiency of this as a permanent remedy.— In the first place such concessions are never made, and under the present system never will be made, until after such a prolonged struggle, that when they come, they are always felt to have been wrung from the Government, and not to have proceeded from a sense of justice or expediency of granting them.— They never remove the distrust which is felt of the Provincial Executive Government.— They leave untouched the great evil of the disadvantageous comparison which is constantly before the eyes of the people when they look at the administration of the Imperial Government, by the King and that of the Provincial Government by his representative—They see the former always so far consulting the wishes of his people as never to keep in his Councils persons who have not the confidence of their Representatives; while in the administration of their own Government they see the mere Representative of that Sovereign constantly surrounded by those very individuals, of whom sometimes with reason, and perhaps sometimes without they have become distrustful and jealous: And they very naturally ask the question, why are not our Representatives to be paid as much attention to by the King's Deputy, as the Representatives of our fellow Subjects in England by the King himself?— Astute reasonings may no doubt be framed, and fine distinctions drawn upon the subject but this is a plain common sense and practical view of it; out of which be assured it will be impossible ultimately to persuade the Yeomanry of Upper Canada— You may indeed, by strenuously insisting on the inapplicability of this principle to their situation, drive them to insist on a more extended system of elective institutions.— By refusing what no one can deny to be an English principle;—the same upon which Your Lordship, and Your Colleagues were selected to fill the high and important situations which you hold in His Majesty's Councils; the same by which you at this moment continue to retain those places,—you may indeed divert their attention to another Quarter, and drive them to call for the power of electing their own Governor, and their own Executive; but you never can persuade them to abandon the object of obtaining more influence than they now possess, through their Representatives, in the administration of the Executive Government of the Colony.—

I now come to the consideration of the fourth remedy, which consists of nothing more than having the provincial Government as far as regards the internal affairs of the Province, conducted by the Lieutenant Governor (as Representative of the paramount Authority of the Mother Country) with the advice and assistance of the Executive Council, acting as a Provincial Cabinet, and composed of Men possessed of the public confidence, whose opinions and policy would be in harmony with the opinions and policy of the Representatives of the People. This, as I have before said, I look upon not only as an efficient remedy, but as the only efficient one that can be applied to the evils under which the Province is at present suffering.—

I shall avoid troubling Your Lordship with any observations upon the construction of the Constitutional Act; because not only has the subject been already fully entered into, in the Report of the Select Committee of the House of Assembly; but I sincerely believe matters to have arrived at that point when it really signifies nothing whether it be or be not required by the Charter. The only question worth discussing is, whether it is or is not expedient that the principle should be applied to it: And for this purpose all that it is necessary to ascertain in the first instance is, that there is nothing in the Charter which forbids the application of such a principle. That this is the case, as it has never been denied, and as the principle in its practical application consists in fact merely in the ordinary exercise of the Royal Prerogative will, I take it for granted, be readily admitted.— The Concession of the principle therefore calls for no legislative interference;— It involves no sacrifice of any constitutional principle,—It involves no sacrifice of any branch of the Royal Prerogative,—It involves no diminution of the paramount Authority, of the Mother Country; It produces no such embarrassment to the Home Government, as in the present state of the Imperial Parliament, the attempt to grant an Elective Legislative Council would be almost certain to do:— From being an English Principle, it would strengthen the Attachment of the People to the connexion with the Mother Country; and would place the Provincial Government at the head of Public opinion, instead of occupying its present invidious position of being always in direct opposition to it.

But in addition to these Advantages, which this remedy possesses in an eminent degree over all others, that have been suggested, it would be found effectual for the purposes desired.—

Permit me to restate those objects,—they were first, that the different branches of the Provincial Government should be brought to act in harmony with each other; and secondly, that the People should feel that they had sufficient influence upon their Government to secure attention to their rights,—and respect for their feelings and prejudices: I am of opinion that this principle if fully and fairly acted upon, would affect both those objects.— An Executive Council constituted upon this principle, would from their situation as confidential advisers of the Lieutenant Governor necessarily have great influence in the House of Assembly: Their weight in the Country, as well as their confidential situation, about the person of the Lieutenant Governor, would give them great weight in the Legislative Council: And they would of course from both circumstances possess great weight with the Lieutenant Governor. They would generally if not uniformly be in one or other House of Parliament, and would there form a centre of Union, and in fact act as a sort of balance Wheel to the constitution. The measures which they brought forward, as they would necessarily have the previous sanction of the Lieutenant Governor, would come recommended on the one hand by all the weight of executive influence, and on the other by the support of those to whom the people both from habit and principle had been accustomed to look with confidence.— The people would therefore be predisposed to receive their Measures with satisfaction and confidence, as the fruit of the advice of their friends; and the Legislative Council as recommended by the servants of the Crown, whose interests as well as duty it was, to recommend nothing but what was safe, as well as satisfactory to the Public.— What was not deemed wise or prudent to adopt, instead of being suffered to pass heedlessly through the Assembly, and left to be thrown out by the Legislative Council or negatived by the Veto of the Lieutenant Governor would be met in the first instance and resisted; because every step that such proposal advanced would increase the probability of ultimate embarrassment to the Executive Council, and to those whose confidence they enjoyed; who would of course be always the most powerful Party in Parliament.— Such an Executive Council would necessarily feel a moral as well as a political responsibility for the success of their Measures.— Their permanent connexion with the Country as well as a sense of duty and natural desire to retain office, would necessarily insure their utmost exertions, not only to procure harmony but to produce good government.— The People when they saw that the King's Representative would not retain Men in his Councils who have forfeited their confidence, would be the more careful in the exercise of the Elective Franchise, and far less likely to withdraw their confidence from those in whom they had once found reason to place it.—

That the adoption of this principle would without vesting the Election of the Executive Council in the People place in their hands such an indirect influence upon it, as would be sufficient to secure attention to their rights, feelings, and prejudices, is sufficiently evident; because if such attention were not paid by those in the confidence of the Lieutenant Governor, the people have only to return to the next Parliament, men who would not give them parliamentary support, and they would necessarily have to resign; and the Lieutenant Governor to appoint others who possessed the confidence of the Representatives of the People.— A. B and C. would go out of office, and D. E and F would come in; the Lieutenant Governor always retaining the Power of calling into Action his superintending control with respect to the measures of both the one and the other: and the effect produced upon the interests of the Mother Country, being none other than that the change would give satisfaction, and, at least most probably, insure good government in the management of the internal affairs of the Colony.—

But it will be said that even under this system, collision may arise.— The Lieutenant Governor may disapprove of the measures recommended by his Council, and find it impossible to form an Executive Council which would secure parliamentary support upon any other terms than concession; or the Executive Council may find it impossible to bring the two houses to an Understanding upon every Measure:— To which I reply, that the practical working of the principle would be sure to postpone such collision to the latest possible period: That the intermediate steps of a change of the Executive Council, and of appealing to the people by a dissolution, would at all events give the Home Government the great advantage of not itself coming in collision with the People till the last moment, and of ascertaining the exact point where the question of Concession would become one merely of expediency; in addition to which I would remark that this objection is equally applicable to the practical working of the Principle in this Country; with this great difference, that supposing the people of England to be wholly unreasonable in their demands, the Crown has in point of fact no means of resistance; whereas in the case of a Colony there is as a last resort the application of that power, which, independent of the influence which a knowledge of the possession of it, would necessarily give to the Representative of the Home Government, in the course of the previous contest, will always rest in the hands of the Parent state to be exercised when all other means fail: So that were the principle a mere experiment, to be tried now for the first time a colony would be a safer subject for such experiment than the Mother Country With respect to collision between the two houses, such under the operation of this principle, is surely not more likely to happen in the working of the Upper Canada Constitution, than in that of the Mother Country; and the utmost that can be done by the most perfect system is to guard against the probability,—not the possibility of difficulties:— Such collision might happen even between two elective bodies, and in point of fact does happen, not only occasionally but every day under the constitution as at present acted upon; and at the worst such a case would be open to be disposed of, in the same way as a similar one in England; with this difference only, that the appointment of a batch of new legislative Counsellors, is not subject to the same difficulty that the creation of New Peerages is; and as the Seats of legislative Counsellors are not hereditary; and finally the ultimate resource of making the legislative Council elective; if indeed it be still found necessary to do so, will be as open to be taken as ever.—

It is objected that the concession of this principle is inconsistent with the preservation of the paramount Authority of the Mother Country. With respect to this, I would remark that it does not appear to be more so than the concession of the power of legislation; in the one case you vest the power of legislating on the internal Affairs of the Colony in a local Parliament with the consent of the King's Representative; in the other, you leave the Executive Power in the hands of the King's Representative requiring only that it should be exercised with the advice of persons named by himself but possessed of weight and influence with the people whose local Affairs, he is deputed to administer.—

It is objected, that it would interfere with the patronage of the Lieutenant Governor; this also appears to me to be an error; the power of appointment to office would remain in the Lieutenant Governor as at present. The right of advising is all that is claimed for the Executive Council: If such be considered an interference, it is such as can be exercised, alone to prevent mischief. But suppose that it actually deprived the Lieutenant Governor of every vestige of patronage; the simple question is, is the patronage in the hands of the Lieutenant Governor the great object for which England desires to retain Upper Canada. If this be, indeed the chief or only object, let it be candidly avowed: I will only remark that the People have been hitherto induced to believe that the Home Government were actuated by other and loftier motives.—

It is objected that it would lessen the responsibility of the Lieutenant Governor to the Home Government: this is a mistake, every Act of the Provincial Government would be the Act of the Lieutenant Governor requiring his full consent quite as much as at present.— How would he be less responsible then to the King and Parliament of the Empire because he acted upon the advice of those who had the confidence of the People? The Lieutenant Governor is the connecting link between the Government of the two Countries.—You cannot make him responsible to the People of the Province, such would be wholly inconsistent with the respect due to the Sovereign whom he represented, and fatal to the connexion between the two Countries.— The proper place for his responsibility to rest is, in England.— But you must give the people such an influence upon their Executive Government as will prevent the constant jealousy to which it is at present exposed.— You can do so only either by permitting a direct influence, by vesting the election in the hands of the people, which I look upon as inexpedient and unsafe; or you must give them that indirect influence, which they see constantly exercised by their fellow subjects through their Representatives in this Country.

With respect to the objection, that the application of this principle would lead to the Executive Council falling into the hands of a few metropolitan families, I would remark that it seems much less likely to have that effect than the present system; and that if it had, it would be an evil for which the people would have to blame themselves only; and therefore not one, which could be attributed to the Home Government or their Representative the Lieutenant Governor, and above all, one the remedy for which would be in their own hands.— The same may be said as to the rather inconsistent objections, that it would lead to too many changes, and that there are not persons enough in the Province qualified to fill the office of Executive Counsellors:

But it is pretended that the People of Upper Canada are opposed to having this indirect influence upon the Executive in the hands of their Representatives— Premising that the real Value and importance of the principle itself cannot depend either upon what the People really think upon the subject, or what they may, by violence and misrepresentation, be persuaded to afford reasons for supposing that they think;— I proceed to remark that the proposition appears absurd on the face of it: It is like an attempt to make one believe that a thirsty man has an objection to receive Water, or a hungry man food. But what is the fact? As I have already stated this is no new principle brought forward for the first time on the present occasion. It has been before the people more or less prominently since 1820— In 1828 or 1829 it was introduced into the Address in reply to the speech from the throne, and continued to be so, except during the Parliament of 1830, in which the Administration had a Majority; and of course when the Executive are in the Majority is not the time for the practical application of the principle: But in 1835 it was made the subject of solemn appeal to the Home Government in an address to the King passed by a majority of twenty one Votes, in which His Majesty was informed that until the principle was acted upon it could not be expected that the Administration would give satisfaction, or that there would be any real or permanent harmony between the Government and the Representatives of the people. The Addresses presented to Sir Francis Head since the Prorogation of the last Parliament are depended upon, as shewing that the People are opposed to the concession of this principle. If such really be the opinion of the people, it is to say the least of it somewhat remarkable, that no expression of that opinion took place after the close of the Session of 1835; although in the very address to which I have referred the Assembly intimated their intention of withholding the Supplies if their voice was not heard; that even after the resignation of the late Executive Council, a resolution declaring it to be the opinion of the House of Assembly that the Appointment of a responsible Executive Council “to advise the Lieutenant Governor on the Affairs of the Province was one of the most happy and wise features in the Constitution, and essential to our form of Government”,—was adopted with but two dissenting voices out of a House of fifty five members; and that it was not until some time afterwards, that exertions began to be made to excite even the Tory Party against the late Council, and all who thought with them. This is not the first time that a Colonial Lieutenant Governor has had resort to adulatory Addresses in order to give a coloring to his Proceedings, in reporting them to the Home Government the ease with which such Addresses can be procured—is either not known or never considered. The Addresses to Sir Peregrine Maitland in 1827—8 were not less violent in their language against the Majority of the then Assembly than have been both the Addresses and Replies on the present occasion, and yet the general election which followed left the Executive Government in a Minority as small, if not smaller, than in the preceding Parliament:—

But should Sir Francis Head by violence and intimidation unhappily succeed in procuring a Majority in the next Provincial Parliament, do not suppose my Lord that there will be less necessity for the application of the principle; new difficulties will daily spring up, and when once the delusion under which the popular mind has been acted upon has passed away, it will return with double pertinacity not I fear merely to the principle now asked for, but to Changes of a more extensive and organic character; Time I am persuaded, will convince Your Lordship of this; I tremble lest the Conviction should arrive too late to prevent the consequences which I deprecate.—

To conclude my Lord, I most earnestly recommend not only as expedient, but necessary for the preservation of the Connexion between this Country and Upper Canada:—First, That His Majesty's Imperial Government should at once adopt the final determination, that the Provincial Government as far as respects the internal Affairs of the Province, should be conducted by the

Lieutenant Governor, with the Advice and Assistance of the Executive Council, acting as a Provincial Cabinet;— And that the same Principle on which His Majesty's Cabinet in this Country is composed, should be applied and acted upon in the formation, continuance in office and removal, of such local Provincial Cabinet:— Secondly that this Resolution of the Home Government should be inserted in the shape of a Specific Clause in the general Royal Instructions for the Government of the Province, and formally communicated to both houses of the Provincial Parliament; And Thirdly—That Sir Francis Head should be recalled, and a Successor appointed who shall have been practically acquainted with the working of the Machinery of a free Representative Government.—

I have now stated to Your Lordship, briefly my views and opinions, and I am ready to afford any further explanations that Your Lordship may desire, I may of course be mistaken in both, but I assure Your Lordship that I am in my own mind most firmly persuaded, that unless the course above recommended is promptly adopted, and pursued, it will be wholly out of the power of the Mother Country to preserve the affections of the Upper Canadian People, although she may of course for a time continue to retain them in subjection to her Authority.—

I have the honor to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's Most obedient humble Servant,

LORD HOWICK'S APPRECIATION OF DURHAM'S REPORT

WAR OFFICE
Feb 7/39

MY DEAR LAMBTON

I have read very carefully your report & I like it very much.—It strongly confirms the opinns. I previously entertained as to the state of things in the North American colonies, & as to the policy which ought to have been adopted towards them, while it supplies many particular facts & details of which I was not before aware & which are exceedingly valuable as completing & on some minor points correcting the impression I had before received which it shews in general to have been accurate.—

Your scheme for the future government of these colonies in its general principle tallies very much with my views upon the subject, but there appear to me to be some very serious difficulties as to the means of bringg. about the result you wish to accomplish, & some explanatns. of the plan itself which are requisite in order completely to understand it.

I. In the first place supposing the general union of all the Provinces to be effected, how do you mean to provide for the difficulties which might arise with respect to the differences which must exist in the laws of the various provinces. —I take it these different legislatures must have proceeded very variously in dealing with various matters of civil & criminal legislatn. & that consequently the wants of the provinces for the future improvement of these laws must also be very different, & wd. it not be found practically exceedingly difficult for the United Legislature to deal with all the local questns. of this sort which wd. arise? In short are not the subjects on which these provinces have a common interest limited to the following 1st Laws relating to trade including banks & the impositn. of duties for raising a customs' revenue—2d Post office arrangements & great lines of internal communicatn.—3d The establishment of a common appeal judicature—4th A common militia.— If these are the only subjects of common interest wd. not they be better entrusted to a Federal than a common Legislative Assembly, & wd. there not remain many subjects of internal & local regulatn. affecting the several provinces which cd. hardly be disposed of by the municipalities you propose to establish or yet by the General Legislature without very great inconvenience.

II. It is stated & very properly to be an essential part of the plan to get rid of the jobbing which has taken place in granting money for local objects.— No one can doubt the importance of this reform, but will it be practicable to attempt to effect it by putting an end to all grants from the general revenue for local improvements? Are there not works of very great importance as roads, railroads, & canals which cannot possibly be executed by local assessments, & is it not one of the advantages enjoyed by the states of the Union which excites most envy in our colonies that by their system of Govt. they can undertake improvements of this sort which in the British possessns. are not attempted? I am not quite sure that I rightly understand the scheme upon this point, what I conceive to be meant is that all minor works such as ordinary roads & bridges shd. be executed by local assessment, which the great works in the success of which the whole of the provinces wd. be interested shd. be carried on by means of grants recommended by the Govr. to the United Legislature. If I am right in thus understanding the plan, would there not be one important class of works for which no sufficient provisn. wd. be made, those namely which wd. be of too great importance to be effected by the municipal bodies but which at the same time would only be of importance to particular provinces.— For instance a canal or a rail road in Nova Scotia not forming part of the general line of communicatn. between the Provinces wd. be a subject of very trifling interest in Upper Canada, though it could not be undertaken by any combinatn. of the mere municipal authorities of the individual Province.— When the immense extent of the territory forming these provinces is considered & their great distance from each other it appears to me scarcely possible that the two authorities of a central legislature & local municipal bodies shd. answer all the purposes which wd. require to be attended to.— I fear such a system wd. lead to the vices of the local legislatn. of this country which is so notoriously defective, & that the want of a 3d & intermediate authority formed of the existing Provincial Legislatures shorn of all those powers which cd. be conveniently transferred to the central body wd. be greatly felt.— In the Union such an intermediate authority is found necessary & is supplied by the State Legislatures which fill up the vacancy between the Congress & the municipal bodies.—

III. Supposing the general Legislative Union to be accomplished wd. not great danger result from the possible discontent of some of the Provinces from their exclusion from a fair share of patronage & power? Admitting most fully the importance & justice of the views contained in the report as to the necessity of opening a career for the ambition of the inhabitants of our colonies & of maintaining a community of views between the executive authorities & the people, might it not (& wd. it not probably) happen that with a single Legislature & single Executive Nova Scotia or Prince Edward's island might be permanently kept under authorities they did not approve of?

IV. Supposing the scheme in all its details to be satisfactorily arranged would there not be great difficulty in carrying it into immediate effect by an act of Parlt. even though that act shd. apply only to the two Canadas? If I am not mistaken there exists considerable difference of opinn. in Upper Canada upon the subject of a Legislative Union with the other Province, all those who are interested in preserving the importance of Toronto as a capital may be expected to be adverse to the scheme, & there may be other local interests which wd. also be affected.— But more than this wd. it be consistent with the opinns. in favour of the colonists being allowed to manage their own internal affairs which are so strongly insisted upon in the report to proceed without communicatn. with the inhabitants or knowing their wishes to settle the whole form of their future government & to make the most important changes in their existing institutns?

Again as regards Lower Canada the difficulty of having electns. in the rebellious districts might be obviated in the manner proposed, but are there not many other powers enjoyed by the people in a constitutional Govt. which cd. not safely be exercised in this Province? If one form of Govt. were at once adopted for the two Provinces, juries for instance must be reestablished in L. Canada & the effect of this mode of trial is well stated in the report.— Upon the whole therefore it seems to me that it wd. be a dangerous experiment to proceed at once by Act of Parlt. to effect the Union of the two Provinces & the reform of their system of Govt. in the manner proposed, & I wd. suggest that the object in view might be better accomplished by creating some representative authority in the Province for the express purpose of considering how the Union shd. be accomplished.—

A conventn. shd. be summoned to meet at Montreal of deputies from both Provinces, those from Upper Canada to be elected by the districts, those from the Lower to be also elected except in the parts of the country which have been disturbed where they shd. be named by the Govr.— To this body Parlt. shd. entrust the power of making such alteratns. in the act of 1791 as it shd. think fit & under this general power it shd. settle the terms of the future Union whether Legislative or Federal & dispose of various questns. which there wd. be immense difficulty in dealing with directly in this country, among others that of the Legislative Council & of the Clergy Reserves.—

In the mean time power shd. be given to the Govr. & Special council of L. Canada of passing permanent laws subject to the restrictn. of these laws not coming into force until they shd. have been confirmed by the Queen in Council after having been laid before both houses of Parlt.— Under this power an efficient Govr. acquainted with the principles of modern legislatn. shd. forthwith proceed to the task of amending the laws of L. Canada respecting the tenure of landed property, the constitutn. of parishes & counties, the administratn. of justice &c &c.— By these reforms a good foundatn. wd. be laid for the future system of Government by a United Legislature.—

I have written this letter very hurriedly & amidst continual interruptns. but it will serve to convey to you my general ideas on reading your report, & as you said you wd. discuss it with me & give me any explanatns. in your power I was anxious that you shd. with as little delay as possible know what appeared to me the principal difficulties in order that if you will let me I may come to you some day & talk over the subject.— I think that when we do so we shall be able to agree very much as to what ought to be done as I entirely concur with you in your leading notions of allowing to the colonists the most complete self Govt. upon matters of mere internal regulatn. & local interest, & of binding the different provinces together by the closest & strongest ties which it may be practicable to establish.—

Believe me Yrs. Affectely.

HOWICK.

SKETCH OF LORD DURHAM'S MISSION TO CANADA IN 1838.

WRITTEN BY MR. CHARLES BULLER, IN 1840.

A COMPLETE history of Lord Durham's mission to Canada would be a work requiring much research respecting a long chain of preceding and a great variety of contemporaneous events. Nor is the time yet come for giving such a history with the minuteness and accuracy which I should desire. Time must yet elapse before we shall be able sufficiently to develop much of the secret motives and acts of the parties concerned. Nor are the general bearings and results of what then occurred become yet sufficiently apparent for the world in general to appreciate in their full extent the magnitude and usefulness of the measures then adopted. It is still matter of interest, of pique, or of a false point of honour with great parties and powerful individuals to refuse to the memory of Lord Durham that justice which could not be granted without condemning their conduct, or stripping them of the credit which they wish most unjustly to arrogate to themselves. We, whose first purpose must be to secure him justice, have however but to wait till time shall attain for us the object which we have at heart. True and lasting fame must almost always be earned as much by patience as by merit. And sure may we be that if our estimate of Lord Durham's policy and acts during this mission be correct, the results will unfold themselves in such a manner as to force even the most inattentive or prejudiced to view them aright. The interests, and the passions too, that have hitherto thwarted our endeavours to obtain justice will in the same manner be dispelled by mere lapse of time; and it will probably not be long ere some of the very parties and individuals that have hitherto fancied it their interest to decry Lord Durham will find policy as well as justice inducing them to vindicate for him the honour which others seem inclined to usurp. My purpose in writing this sketch of the mission to Canada is to give a succinct view of the state of affairs with which Lord Durham had to deal; of the incidents which occurred during his government; of the steps that he took in order to overcome the immediate difficulties which he had to encounter; and of the plans, by which he purposed to put the government of the North American Colonies on a footing of permanent tranquillity, freedom, and progress.

My personal acquaintance with Lord Durham only commenced in the summer of 1837, on his return from Russia; and I had seen very little of him at the time when the Bill for the temporary government of Canada was brought into Parliament. Absolute as the necessity of some such measure was, it would have been very difficult to get the assent of all parties to the establishment of such a power in the hands of any other individual than Lord Durham. So high did he stand in the estimation of all parties that the Tories were obliged to be as unanimous in their acquiescence as the Liberals of every shade were in their loud approval. His memorable speech in the House of Lords on the night that the measure was first announced in it, increased the feeling of confidence in him. Such an occasion admitted indeed of no display of reasoning or information; but Lord Durham's short speech showed that he was actuated by a firm determination and a spirit of most impartial justice; it marked a deep sense of the heavy responsibility which he had taken on himself; and it breathed a chivalrous reliance on the cordial support of friends, and the generous forbearance of opponents, that made both of them affect a show of such feelings and led the public to believe that they entertained them. This was most unfortunate for Lord Durham, for it led him to expect cordial support and generous forbearance where prudence would have induced to count on one as little as the other, and thus have spared him the pain of the double disappointment which he afterwards experienced.

It was a day or two after this speech that Lord Durham, while sitting under the gallery of the House of Commons, desired me to call on him the next morning. Anticipating the purpose for which he desired to see me, and having had a good deal of discussion on the subject with my own family, I went to the interview having made up my mind not to accept of any offer of going out to Canada. Lord Durham made me the proposal in very flattering terms, and with much kindness. I was not very easily induced to change my resolution, but he desired me to take a little time for consideration ere I gave my final answer; and the result of reconsideration and of consultation with friends was that the next morning I accepted the offer.

I wish that it had so happened that at the period of my thus undertaking to serve under Lord Durham our acquaintance had been of longer standing, and that I had been on those terms of perfect confidence with him to which I very soon attained. For though nothing could be more uniformly kind than Lord Durham was to me from the first, tho' he was not long in giving me his confidence, and when he gave it, gave it as he always did, without reserve, yet the mere awkwardness arising from imperfect personal acquaintance is enough in any case for some time to prevent a sufficiently free communication between two people. Had we at the outset been on the terms on which we got in a very few weeks, I think I might have enabled Lord Durham to avoid what always struck me at the time and has, I think, since proved to have been an error most injurious to the success of the mission. This was the delay that occurred before we entered upon it; and though the season of the year placed some difficulties in the way of our going to Quebec in the mode that appeared most desirable, I think that Lord Durham's first object should have been that of commencing his work with promptitude. The delay took off the bloom of the Mission; the insurrection was to all appearance wholly suppressed before we started; the danger began to be thought less urgent; and the general impression of the necessity for great powers and unusual measures was gradually weakened. We soon felt the effect of this, for as the first alarm so the first unanimity wore off, and the Tories, as they recovered spirits, began to find all manner of faults with the Mission, and to circulate a variety of falsehoods, to draw invidious comparisons between Lord Durham and Sir John Colborne, and to depreciate the moral effect of the powers of the new Governor-General.

This altered state of feeling soon began to show itself in the Press, and in Parliament we had a very unpleasant indication of it in the very near success of Lord Chandos's motion respecting the expenses of the Mission. Soon after that difficulties began to be experienced with respect to the appointment of Mr. Turton; and the opposition to Lord Durham here commenced on the part of supporters and members of the Government. It is impossible now not to regret an appointment, which was the occasion of so much subsequent annoyance and evil. Useful as Mr. Turton's legal knowledge and abilities were, and creditable to Lord Durham as was his eagerness to avail himself of the opportunity afforded him of serving an old and unfortunate friend by the suggestion of giving him the appointment, which was made to him by Mr. Stanley, and urged on him by Sir John Hobhouse, yet it cannot but be regretted that the appointment was ever made, and still more so that after the difficulties, which prevented its being sanctioned by the Colonial Office, Mr. Turton should have been taken out without the written approval of the Ministers. But there was the very clearest understanding respecting the terms on which Mr. Turton was to go out. It was distinctly arranged between them and Lord Durham that though the appointment was not to be made by Ministers or in England, Mr. Turton was to go out with us, it being left to Lord Durham to appoint him to office on his own responsibility after our arrival in Canada. Lord Durham, confiding in the promised forbearance of the Tories and the cordial support of Ministers, left the matter on this footing of clear but unwritten understanding. Unhappily we had none of us then learned how necessary it was to distrust both.

It is painful now to recall the circumstances of our embarkation in the Hastings. I had got on board about an hour before Lord Durham came, and, having found everything in my cabin in utter confusion, I had been exerting myself so busily in seeing things arranged as well as possible that every melancholy thought naturally excited by leaving England had been for the moment completely put out of my mind. I had just got over my difficulties, when the steamer bringing Lord Durham and his family came alongside. All the parade of naval reception was of course exhibited on the occasion; the marines were drawn up, and the Officers, with the captain at their head, were on the deck, when Lord Durham, who had been very ill the night before, came looking very pale, and wrapped up in a large cloak, with Lady Durham and his children around him. Painful thoughts arose within me at the sight of a man so distinguished leaving his country with his whole family for what, though an honourable, was still a painful exile, and a duty of arduous responsibility; and when on a sudden the band struck up its loud and slow strain, the sudden excitement brought the tears at once into my eyes. I did not long indulge these feelings, I thought that this was but a passing and necessary trial attendant on the outset of a career of high utility and honor, of which the first glory would be the pacification of Canada, and the ultimate reward would be renown, power, and happiness at home. But the foreboding of the first moment was unfortunately more prophetic than my calmer afterthought!

In one respect we did most certainly merit success: for never I believe, did men embark in any public undertaking with more singleness and honesty of purpose. During the long period of our voyage out we read over all the public documents connected with the subject of our Mission, and the Dispatches, Instructions, and other papers with which the Colonial Office had supplied us; and very fully did we discuss all the various and difficult questions which it appeared to us that we should have to solve. We had, I must again say, very little thought of ourselves, and a very absorbing desire so to perform our task as to promote the best interests both of Canada and of Great Britain. And I think I may also say that we had very few prejudices to mislead us. I used indeed then to think that Lord Durham had too strong a feeling against the French Canadians on account of their recent insurrection. I looked on that insurrection as having been provoked by the long injustice, and invited by the deplorable imbecility of our Colonial policy; and I thought that our real sympathies ought to be with a people whose ultimate purposes were right, though by the misconduct of others they had been driven into rebellion. But Lord Durham from the first took a far sounder view of the matter: he saw what narrow and mischievous spirit lurked at the bottom of all the acts of the French Canadians; and while he was prepared to do the individuals full justice, and justice with mercy, he had made up his mind that no quarter should be shewn to the absurd pretensions of race, and that he must throw himself on the support of the British feelings, and aim at making Canada thoroughly British.

It was not, however, only these questions, paramount as they of course were to all others, that formed the subject of our many and long conversations in the Hastings; and I look back with satisfaction to the interesting views which Lord Durham often gave me of the great questions of European policy, and of the important events, in which he had borne so great a part. Many a stirring scene of old political conflicts did he recount, and many a secret history did he give, which explained the nature and causes of some of the great political movements of our time.

In spite, however, of all our occupations we got somewhat tired of our voyage before the first land on the American Continent met our eyes. An ungenial aspect did our new home present to us as we lay for two or three days beating about at the mouth of the St. Lawrence, now looking at the long low desert island of Anticosti, now borne close to the unpeopled forests of Gaspé, and now catching a glimpse of the icy rocks of Labrador glittering in the far distance. Here, however, we received a file of Quebec papers, that gave us some insight into what was passing in Lower Canada. Nor was the information by any means assuring. The French Canadians, it is true, appeared to be making no movement; but for this very reason it seemed to be generally apprehended that they were preparing their forces for some new attempt. The people of the United States were represented as universally fomenting and aiding the designs of the disaffected, and as hardly to be restrained from breaking out into open hostility. Amid all these dangers the British population of Lower Canada was evidently torn in pieces by numerous and furious dissensions. A very violent party, while it called for war with the United States, and for the harshest measures against the French Canadians, kept no terms with its own government, and denounced both Local and Imperial authorities in the most unmeasured terms. We learned that a few days before, in anticipation of our arrival, a meeting of the British population had taken place at Quebec. At this the violent party appeared to have carried the day; various speakers had used language expressive of very little confidence in the Governor-General, and an address had been adopted which, though it contained nothing positively offensive, showed the bad spirit that animated those who had assumed the lead of what was called the British party. This intelligence, disagreeable as it was, proved nevertheless of use, because it prepared Lord Durham beforehand for the kind of feeling and language which he was to meet with on landing. And during the two or three days that elapsed before our arrival at Quebec he prepared the proclamation to the Inhabitants of British North America which he published on disembarking.

It is not my business here to narrate with minuteness every little incident that occurred, or to recall the various scenes of our Mission as they passed before our eyes. But I cannot look back without emotion at the bright and cheerful day on which we arrived at Quebec. When we got on deck in the morning we found the river considerably narrowed from its width of the previous day; the high mountains, which then seemed to overhang us, were now seen at a distance in the background, and between them and the river there extended on each side a long line of well cultivated and apparently densely-peopled country, which presented to our view what looked almost like a long street of white cottages and farm-buildings. It was one of the first fine days of the late spring of that country; the snow was off the ground, and the first signs of incipient vegetation were visible in the fields which lay close to us on each side as, with wind and tide in our favour, we advanced with great rapidity up the river. It was Sunday, and as at every two or three miles we passed a village church on one side or the other, the whole population seemed to be collected on either shore to watch the progress of their new Governor.

At last over a reach of the river we saw the black line of the ramparts of Québec, and the tin roofs of the city glittering in the sun; and, having passed through the noble basin, which stretches before the Town, we found ourselves amid a whole fleet of men-of-war, beneath the very guns of the magnificent fortress. Our landing did not take place for a couple of days, but from the moment of our arrival in the harbour we received the visits of the various authorities and public Officers of the Province.

At the very moment of landing, and taking upon himself the government, it became necessary for Lord Durham to resolve upon a very important and bold step. For it was usual for the new Governor immediately after having taken the Oaths of Office, to proceed to swear in those of whom he intended to form his Executive Council, and the custom had been for every new Governor to continue the Council of his predecessor. This, however, Lord Durham had made up his mind not to do, and subsequent reflection has only more and more convinced me that this was the wisest course of conduct which he could have pursued. The strange system of colonial government, by which every person once in office was held in practice to be for ever irremovable, had had the effect of filling the Executive Council with some of the oldest men of every clique that had in succession ruled the Province. Many of these either happened to have been subordinate members of their party, or to have been selected simply because they were attached to no party, and being men of little strength of character, or position in public life, were likely to be very docile agents of the one or two persons who really managed the government. No one of them possessed the confidence of the British population. The only one who, from his talents and previous career, formed an exception to the general nullity which I have described, was Mr. Debartzch, one of the ablest and most active of the French Canadians. He had been recently placed in the Council by Lord Gosford. This man, however, was, more than any other man in the province, obnoxious to the British population, on account of his very talents, on account of the formidable use which he had made of these talents, when as a coadjutor of Papineau, he had been one of the leaders of the French, and yet more on account of the influence which he had exercised over Lord Gosford, who was supposed to have been entirely guided by his advice in that whole course of policy which was so universally and vehemently condemned by the British. He was not less odious to the French, who reproached him as a renegade from his party and his race, and who ascribed to him those coercive measures which they represented as having provoked the insurrection. All the component parts of the Executive Council were in truth generally obnoxious and destitute of moral influence. Lord Durham did quite wisely in keeping clear of them, and in letting the public see that he did so. He resolved at once not to retain the Executive Council, but to form a new one, which might discharge the mere acts of routine to which the Constitutional Act required the assent of an Executive Council, composing it of persons who had either come with him from England, or who had previously taken little part in the politics of the Province. Accordingly he determined at the outset to compose his council of his three Secretaries, together with the Commisary General, and Mr. Daly, the Provincial Secretary, whom Sir John Colborne had recommended as the most unexceptionable of the public officers of the province. This determination shocked the prejudices of the old official body, and not only was it the subject of warm remonstrances beforehand, but on the occasion of the investiture, the Clerk of the Council, though apprised of Lord Durham's intention, attempted to surprise him into swearing in the whole Council as a matter of course. But this attempt Lord Durham checked very decisively, and the same day he put into my hands the draft of a letter, in which I was to inform the Executive Councillors of his determination, and of the grounds on which he had formed it. This document was taken as the programme of a new system of administering the government free of the influence of these local cabals, which were odious to the whole province. The act of dispensing with the old Executive Council, and the statement of the grounds on which it was done, were not unpalatable to the British, and very gratifying to the French Canadians. 'Il a fait déjà une bonne chose,' said an old inhabitant at Montreal to Mr. Viger, who asked him what he thought of the Governor-General ; 'il a tué les deux Conseils.'

This measure has, however, been blamed as if Lord Durham had thereby voluntarily deprived himself of the valuable advice of all the persons best acquainted with the mysteries of provincial government, and of the moral influence of their character and experience. The value of their individual advice and influence I have already shown. It must not be supposed, however, that Lord Durham was insensible to the necessity of local experience and wise advisers. But the truth was that from its official ranks the province could supply him with no advisers on whom he could safely rely. With the exception of Mr. Daly, every one of the body had been so mixed up with the ancient and odious system of exclusive government and jobbing—had rendered himself so obnoxious to one party or the other, or more often to all—and had contracted such violent antipathies, that it would have been most imprudent to trust to their representations and advice. We found the whole machine of government utterly disorganized and powerless. The Official body, as the head of whom we might still regard Mr. Sewell, the Chief Justice of the province, was a class perfectly apart from every other, possessing the confidence neither of French nor of British, and exercising not the slightest influence over the public mind. The Chief Justice had for some years ceased to play an important part in politics, and at the period of our arrival his age had wholly unfitted him for active exertions. Of the younger members of the official body none had at all exhibited talents so remarkable as his, or could be relied upon as an impartial or capable adviser of the Government. The Attorney-General, Mr. Ogden, whose office was really the most important in the Province, though a much more kindly disposed and honest man than my previous notions had led me to expect that I should find him, was, after all, endowed with so little political knowledge or capacity that it was impossible for Lord Durham to place any reliance in his advice. Our official advisers were, in fact, men of little capacity and great unpopularity. Lord Durham could have gained little from their counsels except the contagion of their party antipathies and the odium of being supposed to be under their influence.

When we came to look around us, and endeavoured to judge of the feelings and situation of the different classes of the population, it appeared at first sight utterly impossible to ascertain the truth about either. The great mass of the population of Lower Canada—those of the French race—appeared to be placed utterly beyond the reach of any communication with the Government. There could, however, be no doubt that this whole population was thoroughly disaffected to the British Government; that it remained brooding over the memory of its late defeat and the annihilation of its recent predominance; and that it cherished the hope of avenging its imagined wrongs and triumphing over its rulers by means of more combined insurrection and the aid of foreign arms. The greater part of its ancient leaders were fugitives or prisoners; of the few who remained in Canada some were too timid, some too full of resentment, to take any open part in politics; and some, whom we had imagined to possess great influence, appeared to have become objects of suspicion to their countrymen. The Catholic clergy in the diocese of Quebec, under a good and quiet bishop, were loyal and well disposed; those of the diocese of Montreal, under the influence of their bishop, Lartigue, were supposed in many instances not to be very well affected. But the priesthood had in great measure lost their influence, and though we made use of them at first as a means of formal communication with their parishioners, and though they sometimes gave us useful private information, they supplied us with no channel of efficient intercourse with the French.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

With the mass of that body the Government could, in fact, get into no confidential communication. Their desires, as far as they could be ascertained, seemed to be wild and impracticable. All demanded, and perhaps the greater part really expected, that the new Government would attempt to conciliate them by placing things just in the position in which they had been before the insurrection, that Lord Durham would re-establish the Constitution which Parliament had suspended, bring back the Local Assembly with its French majority, grant a complete amnesty to the insurgent leaders, and trust them with all the powers that they had been used to demand during the period of their greatest influence and most exaggerated pretensions. Some hopes of a more reasonable kind, a few of the leaders of the party appear to have entertained from the known liberal views of Lord Durham. But the language of their addresses was constrained and cold; in some cases it was such that Lord Durham felt compelled to check their extravagant demands, and the great body of them immediately relapsed into their sullen and distant apathy.

The leaders of the British party, who were for the most part leading merchants in Montreal, with one or two of the same class in Quebec, were the men who had for some time, through their influence in the Legislative, and subsequently in Sir John Colborne's Special Council, exercised a great influence over the Government of the Province, and were little pleased at the change of circumstances, which partly by the necessary consequences of the suspension of the Constitution, and partly by Lord Durham's own policy, had excluded them from all direct share in the Government. These men, however, had too much tact voluntarily to place themselves in open collision with the Governor-General. The mass of the British population, however, heated by the fierce conflict of the two races, were after all in the main actuated by very laudable purposes. Their main object was the tranquillity and improvement of the Province, whereby they hoped that their own industrial occupations might be rendered more secure and profitable.

The subversion of the French ascendancy had gone far to satisfy most of them, and the appointment of Lord Durham to exercise the vast powers vested in the Governor-General had been popular with the great mass of them, because from his liberal opinions and known energy of character they expected that speedy and extensive reforms would be made in the obnoxious institutions of the Province, and a great impulse given to its internal improvement. The leaders, seeing this tendency among them, had gone with them in it: the cold and repulsive spirit of the meeting at Quebec had found very few imitators in the Province; the addresses of the British were general and warm, and the deputations that presented them were numerous and friendly, and Lord Durham improved their good dispositions by the reception which he gave them. All his answers to their addresses shewed how skilfully he had divined the true mode of acquiring their confidence. He appealed boldly and strongly to the feelings which he knew to animate the British population. He spoke always of the greatness of the Mother Country and of the importance and wonderful capabilities of the colony, and, appealing to them to use every effort to improve its resources, promised them an efficient co-operation on his own part and that of the Imperial Government. By these means he speedily excited among them an enthusiasm and attachment such as no Governor before or since ever aroused. The splendour of his establishment, which had been the theme of ridicule among superficial observers at home, had a great effect on the minds of the British Colonists. The civilities, which no one could apply with such grace, because with such dignity, went a great way in conciliating the leaders, who were thus flattered with the belief that if they had lost some power, they had lost none of that consideration which, after all, is what vulgar minds look on as the best part of power. In a very short time

Lord Durham had by these means completely gained the confidence of almost the whole British population. They looked forward with the fullest expectation of finding his measures in accordance with the feelings that he had charmed them by expressing. Our main difficulty with them arose from their wish to push their victory over their opponents further than good feeling or good policy would permit. This was the sure consequence of a dangerous and protracted conflict, and the British wished not only to disable the French so as to prevent their future aggressions, but also to wreak their revenge upon them under the forms of law.

But the state of the Lower Province was not the only subject of difficulty and anxiety. The accounts which we received from Upper Canada were from the first most alarming. The cause of the dissensions and disorders there it was not easy to understand. But it was clear that there had been very extensive and violent disaffection. It was also clear that the dominant party there had taken advantage of the recent insurrection to exercise the greatest severity towards their opponents. This had only increased the discontents, and if the tendency to actual revolt had been checked, the number of persons seriously dissatisfied with the Government was at this time far greater than it had been before the insurrection. The Governor, Sir George Arthur, a very weak and timid man, seemed to be divided between his deference for the conciliatory policy dictated by Lord Glenelg and his subservience to the violent counsels of the Family Compact, under whose influence he had completely fallen. From our first landing he sent us the most alarming accounts, one after the other, of the insurrectionary spirit of the Upper Province, and of the formidable plans as well of the refugees, who hung on its frontiers, as of the whole border population of the United States. And before the end of the month his alarms, though exaggerated, received some confirmation from the invasion and outbreak which took place under Morrow, Chandler, and others at the Short Hills in the Niagara District.

But there was quite enough in the state of our relations with the United States to inspire the boldest and calmest mind with deep apprehensions. The Canadian refugees collected along the frontier from New Hampshire to Michigan, rendered desperate by their exile and the ruin of all their prospects in life, were everywhere preparing a threatening invasion, and doing almost as much mischief to the peaceable inhabitants of the Canadas by the alarms which they thus kept up, as could have resulted from actual incursions. They kept the appearance if not the reality of an incessant correspondence with disaffected persons on our side of the frontier, and they seemed to have the support also of a general and active sympathy on the other side. It was impossible to ascertain what proportion or what class of the American public were prepared to aid the fugitives. But the lawless and wild race that peopled the frontiers, especially the shores of the Great Lakes, were evidently eager for some desperate enterprise of plunder or conquest, and these alone, in the circumstances of that time, and on that defenceless and extended line, were a formidable support to internal disaffection. At public meetings, too, the hostile language of the refugees and their less reputable associates seemed to be countenanced by persons of character and property, who might be supposed to be under the influence of political fanaticism or national antipathy. This open violence was supposed to be abetted by wealthy men who were disposed to speculate on the chances of war, and the profits of a conquest of Canada. The strong and general opinion of the respectable citizens doubtless discountenanced this aggressive spirit. But even among these there existed much sympathy with colonists supposed to be struggling against that tyranny of the Mother Country, which had driven the forefathers of the American people into revolt. Some remains of old national antipathy to Great Britain yet appeared to exist, and the insolent language in which not merely reckless individuals but even some of the authorities in Canada, especially Sir Francis Head, had denounced the people and institutions of the United States had greatly incensed many of them. A large section of the newspaper press supported the refugees and their allies, and each of the great political parties in the Union seemed occasionally disposed to recruit partisans by assuming a warlike tone towards Great Britain. It was asserted that the Government of Washington was not guiltless of encouraging these feelings, and of conniving at the most unjustifiable enterprises against the British Colonies; and it was quite clear that the Federal Executive, even if so disposed, was not very capable of putting a stop to them with sufficient decision. These evils, great in reality, were magnified tenfold by the rumours designedly spread by the many, who on each side of the frontier found their account in fomenting disturbance and alarm.

It was only three or four days after our landing that these alarms were brought to a head by the news of the burning of the Sir Robert Peel, a British steamer, in the American waters of the St. Lawrence by a desperate smuggler known by the name of 'Bill Johnson', who had long haunted the Thousand Isles, and now appeared resolved to carry on his marauding trade under colour of Canadian 'Patriotism'. The alarm excited by this desperado's force or designs was, however, light in comparison with that occasioned by the chances of collision with the United States, which this outrage prevented. Immediately afterwards this alarm was increased by intelligence of another violation of the pacific relations of the two countries, which had occurred at Brockville, where British sentries had fired on a peaceable American steamboat, the Telegraph. The angry feeling on both sides was now raised to the highest pitch; the press indulged in the warmest recriminations, and the more violent residents on each side of the line loudly threatened their neighbours with invasion and reprisals. It seemed hardly possible to preserve peace, and I, who had up to that time indulged the most sanguine hopes of the pacification of Canada, thought that all chance of success in that object would very speedily be destroyed by the breaking out of a war between Great Britain and the United States.

Out of all this evil the vigour and sagacity of Lord Durham brought immediate and great good. On the receipt of the intelligence of the destruction of the Sir Robert Peel, he offered a reward of a thousand pounds to any one who should bring the offenders to trial and conviction in the courts of the United States. But while by this step he declared the determination of the British Government to protect its subjects, and thereby conciliated the goodwill of the loyal inhabitants of Canada, he took care to show the utmost respect for the Government of the United States by exhibiting his confidence in its good faith. He determined to take this opportunity of impressing on that Government the necessity of a prompt and cordial co-operation with ours for the suppression of disorders fraught with such danger to the pacific relations of the two countries. For this purpose he despatched Colonel Grey to Washington. This mission was attended with the best results. The friendly declarations of the President and Secretary of State were accompanied by substantial proofs of sincerity. The force on the borders was increased, the strict laws of neutrality recently passed by Congress were at length enforced, and within a fortnight from Colonel Grey's arrival at Washington, the forces of Great Britain and the United States were co-operating on the Lakes and St. Lawrence in repressing the disturbers of the common peace.

These precautions against the interruption of peace with the United States were our first serious business, and while harassed and occupied with this we received most discouraging news from home. Within a week from our arrival in Canada we heard of the discussions which had taken place in the House of Lords immediately after our leaving England, in reference to the appointment of Mr. Turton. The determination of the Tory peers to impair Lord Durham's authority by constant attacks in the worst spirit of faction were not nearly so discouraging as the apparent readiness of Lord Melbourne to abandon and even blame him. The despatches which we received on this subject drew forth answers from Lord Durham, in which he expressed very freely his feelings with respect to the conduct of Ministers. Thus from the outset was there distrust and ill feeling between the two parties, owing to what, if not cowardice or indifference, could only be viewed as proof of very malignant perfidy on the part of the Government. And thus, amid all the difficulties of our task on the spot, there hung over us from the first like a cloud the depressing consciousness that we had no support to rely on at home, that faction would make no allowance for the difficulties and dangers of our position, but seize hold of every pretext for discrediting and thwarting Lord Durham, and that to uphold him against such assaults he could rely on no sincerity or energy on the part of the Ministers whom he was serving.

It was, however, necessary for him to proceed in his course without faltering, and give some earnest of his intention to carry into effect the reforms which he had promised. The state of the Province and all its institutions afforded ample scope for the amending hand, and in the month of June, before our departure for Montreal and Upper Canada, Lord Durham made some considerable practical reforms. The first was the establishment of a very efficient police in Quebec, where before this there had in fact been none. This institution was immediately afterwards extended to Montreal, where the want of a good police had been quite as much felt. The Report gives a view of the disgraceful neglect that had previously existed, from which it will be easy to see for how necessary and important a protection to person, property, and order the inhabitants of these two cities are indebted to Lord Durham.

Among the practical grievances of the Province none was more palpable, and certainly none more injurious, than the gross mismanagement of the Crown Lands. One of Lord Durham's first objects in his Mission was to lay the foundations of such a reform in the administration of them as might render them instrumental in promoting that influx of colonists which was requisite for the accomplishment of his great schemes for the improvement of the colonies. With this end in view he had engaged Mr. Wakefield to come from England about the time of our own departure, having for some time been acquainted with him, and having completely entered into all his views of colonies and emigration. On the 18th of June he issued the Commission for an Inquiry into the state of the Crown Lands in all the North American Colonies. As Lord Glenelg, though well aware beforehand of Mr. Wakefield's coming out with Lord Durham, had, when frightened by the discussions about Mr. Turton, written to prohibit Mr. Wakefield's being employed publicly, I was nominally placed at the head of the Commission. But my other avocations entirely prevented my taking any part in the work; the details of it were accordingly left to my Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Hanson, but the real direction of the whole business was entrusted to Mr. Wakefield, who had no ostensible employment. A very thorough inquiry was instituted at Quebec and Toronto by Mr. Hanson; an Assistant Commissioner was sent to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward's Island; witnesses were examined, and statistical information carefully collected. The result of these labours afterwards appeared in that most valuable Report on Crown Lands and Emigration, which forms Appendix B to Lord Durham's Report.

The last of the practical reforms now effected, which I need mention, was rendered necessary by the limited number of an Executive Council, which imposed on Lord Durham the necessity of taking some measures with regard to the jurisdiction in Appeals from the Courts of Law of the Province. The Executive Council was, by virtue of an Imperial Act, which Lord Durham could not alter, the sole supreme Appellate Tribunal of Lower Canada, and it was necessary that its sittings should be held during the early part of the month of July, when some of the members of the Council would be absent with Lord Durham in his visit to Upper Canada. He could take no step to provide against this difficulty without becoming sensible of the absurdity of the system by which the decision of the most difficult and important legal questions in the province had been left to a numerous body of persons, for the most part wholly ignorant of law. He took this occasion, therefore, instead of merely completing the quorum, to constitute a really efficient Court of Appeal on sound principles. He composed it almost wholly of the highest and ablest judges of the Province. In order to keep up the necessary quorum he added Mr. Turton, whose great legal knowledge and experience rendered his presence in the Court most useful, and for the same reason he was obliged to add my brother. The Court as thus constituted held only these single sittings. But the opinion of both bar and suitors was unanimously in favour of the soundness and importance of this reform. It was agreed on all hands that so efficient a Court of Appeal had never before been seen in the Province.

But the most important and difficult task remained to be done by the disposal of the prisoners who had filled the gaols since the suppression of the insurrection. This was a matter wholly foreign to the true purpose of our Mission; it had been thrown upon us by the timidity of Sir John Colborne, who, swayed backwards and forwards, as all the authorities in the Canadas were, between the ferocity of the dominant party in the province and the more enlightened orders which came to him from England, determined to shift the responsibility of this most delicate business from himself on to Lord Durham. The difficulty of disposing of the prisoners had in no degree been diminished by the delay. It is true that the leading persons of the British party had begun to entertain more rational and humane feelings than had animated them on the first suppression of the insurrection; and the mass of the British, though still thirsting for some blood, were, as the event proved, very easy to be reconciled to a lenient course. But the difficulty of getting any punishment at all inflicted by the verdict of a jury had been only increased by the lapse of time, and though every one in the Province was convinced that the allowing the prisoners to escape without any punishment would have the most dangerous results, we felt that public opinion in England would revolt from our having recourse to military tribunals so long after the cessation of the insurrection and martial law. We might, by altering the Jury law, or by using the influence of Government over the sheriffs, have secured a British jury, which would have convicted the innocent and guilty alike. But besides the mischiefs of a public trial, which must have brought to light many things that for the honour of Government and of individuals, as well as for the best interests of order, it was most important to bury in oblivion, and the publication of which would probably have rendered it necessary to deal severely with those who should be proved to have been leaders in the insurrection, we all felt that it would be far more for the permanent interests of liberty and for the honour of the British Government to secure the punishment of a few guilty individuals by an open deviation for that purpose from the ordinary forms of law, than to make new laws permanently depriving the French Canadians of the guarantees for equal justice, or to set the dangerous precedent of packing a jury.

After much deliberation on this matter, Mr. Turton and I, to whom the investigation of the details had been left, came to the conclusion that the best course would be to punish the leaders certainly, but lightly, by means of an ex post facto law. When this was first proposed to Lord Durham he instantly saw what an outcry would be raised in England against an act so contrary to our notions of liberty and law; and he refused to take any step of the kind unless it should be requested by the prisoners themselves. The prisoners, who expected the Government to avail itself of its power of packing a jury, and ensuring their capital punishment, were very ready to petition to be disposed of without trial, and as I had in the meantime ascertained that the proposed mode of dealing with them would not be condemned by the leading men of the British party, Lord Durham adopted the plan proposed, and on the 28th of June, the day of Her Majesty's Coronation, issued the famous Ordinance with respect to the prisoners, and the Proclamation of Amnesty. The ultimate results of this bold step neither Lord Durham nor those with him are responsible for; its immediate effects were even more satisfactory than we had ventured to anticipate. In America its success was complete. The British population of Lower Canada, after a few partial indications of dissatisfaction, universally acquiesced in it. The French, who were not disposed to be satisfied with anything but an entire concession to all their most unreasonable views, were awed by the decision, and conciliated by the lenity of the Act. After a while they ceased to murmur at it. But its reception in the United States was most satisfactory. All parties agreed in extolling it as a noble, wise, and liberal act. The very newspapers that had previously been most violent in assailing the British Government changed their tone for a while. And the revulsion of feeling throughout the Union was general and permanent. From that hour the feelings of national jealousy and political sympathy gave way to that of admiration of Lord Durham. From that hour the disaffected in Canada ceased to derive any aid from the public opinion of our neighbors, and among our difficulties we had no longer to contend with the chance of war with the United States.

I think there was only one error with which throughout this business Lord Durham is justly chargeable, and it was an error to which I must attribute most injurious effects. He ought, in announcing such a step to the Home Government, to have given an ample and detailed statement of the grounds on which he had felt it right to compose his Special Council, and dispose of the prisoners as he had done; and I fear that to the absence of some such explanation, which might have been laid before Parliament, and served to convey a knowledge of the real state of affairs, is to be ascribed that misapprehension on these points which enabled Lord Durham's assailants to produce any effect whatever on the public mind. The composition of our Special Council was calculated to be misunderstood by those who did not know how difficult it would have been to find any better materials in Lower Canada. If Lord Durham had fully explained the grounds of his Ordinance, the public at home would readily have appreciated his manliness in composing his Special Council so as in fact to shift no responsibility off his own shoulders. And it could easily have been shewn that had he composed the Council, as Sir John Colborne had done, of residents in the Province, he must in the existing state of things have thereby placed the power of Legislation in the hands of one party, which would assuredly have used them, as it had been done under Sir John Colborne, for the promotion of its own interests and the oppression of its opponents.

Immediately after the publication of the Ordinances, Lord Durham, accompanied by Sir Charles Paget, the Admiral on the American Station, set out for Montreal. Our departure from Quebec gave occasion for a very sullen demeanour on the part of the British inhabitants, who were by no means pleased with the lenity of the Ordinances. We heard that a still more unfavourable feeling would probably be exhibited on our arrival at Montreal. It was about the middle of the day of the 5th of July when our steamboat cast anchor opposite to that city, and we instantly received the visits of the authorities and principal inhabitants. The state of terror and uncertainty which then existed throughout the Canadas was testified to us by a hundred alarming rumours that reached us in the course of the day. The full effect of the Ordinances had not yet had time to develop itself. We had every reason to believe that the British inhabitants of Montreal, who, having been in the very midst of the preceding party struggles, had naturally contracted a greater violence of feeling than even the rest of their race in the Province, would very strongly exhibit their disapprobation of the lenity of the Ordinance. Nor had this measure had time to exhibit its effects on the public opinion of the United States, and the country was inundated with alarms of fresh demonstrations of American 'sympathy' with the insurgents. I recollect well that during the twenty-four hours that elapsed between our arrival in the port and our landing, there were brought to us no less than three distinct and circumstantial accounts of 'Bill Johnson's' invasion of the Provinces at the head of a large force of rebels and 'sympathizers', he himself being reputed to have made his appearance at no less than three different points at the distance of about five hundred miles from each other. It had required little time to learn to give very little weight to any rumours that we might hear in Canada, and these produced little impression on us except as far as they went to convince us of the extremely disorganized state of men's minds in the province. Lord Durham had not lost the opportunity afforded him by the visits of the leaders of the British, who on their return spread the most favourable report of his views. An instant change was produced in the minds of this people, who seem to me, from all the experience I have had of them, to be, of all the English race that I have ever met with, the most excitable, and the most susceptible of new impressions. When Lord Durham landed on the 6th, the whole city poured out to meet him, and received him with the utmost enthusiasm.

We remained some days at Montreal, and it was here that Lord Durham, in a private interview with a large number of the British leaders, developed for the first time an outline of his views with respect to the permanent settlement of the Colonies. These I shall hereafter detail; the only effect which this communication could have in this stage of affairs was that of being regarded as a flattering proof of confidence in the persons to whom it was made. In the answers to the various addresses which he received from different bodies, Lord Durham availed himself of the opportunity of making known the general principles on which he meant to administer the government of the Province. He well knew to what account he could turn these occasions of ceremony, and his answers were all framed with the same great principles in view, the various aspects of which the various addresses enabled him to bring before the public. The chord which he touched in addressing all these bodies was the determination of Great Britain to uphold her connexion with these Provinces, of which he painted the vast resources, and the ease with which they might be developed. By the consideration of their common interest in this he urged both parties to union and tranquillity, and, while he impressed on the one the necessity of co-operating in the reform of their defective laws, and of casting aside the petty jealousies of race, he exhorted the other to an oblivion of the insurrection, and of the long course of irritating events that had preceded it.

On the 10th we left Montreal, and soon entered Upper Canada, where during our progress up the river Lord Durham received addresses from the various towns which we passed, indicative, in spite of the violent dissensions that existed in the Province, of a pretty unanimous resolution to confide in him. But every step that we took in this province showed us the fearful extent and nature of the divisions that separated classes and parties. These had just then unhappily been very seriously augmented by the very inopportune arrival of an opinion of the Attorney- and Solicitor-General of England in favour of the validity of Sir John Colborne's unpopular creation of the 'Rectories', and from one end to the other the province was agitated by a revival of the irritating discussions on the question of Clergy Reserves. We passed unharmed and unassailed through the romantic region of the Thousand Isles, where indeed nature seemed to have invited the attempts of 'Bill Johnson' and his gang; and went straight to the Falls of Niagara, where Lord Durham had very wisely ordered a considerable display of military force to be made. At this spot, the general rendezvous at this season of large numbers of travellers of the wealthy class of the United States, the reviews which now took place attracted a crowd of spectators from the opposite side; and the presence of the Governor-General, of the authorities of Upper Canada, of the Admiral, and of a numerous and most efficient military force of every kind was calculated to impress on our neighbours the value which the British Government was disposed to attach to the maintenance of her empire in the Canadas, and of the efficient means by which that determination was backed. The hospitalities that Lord Durham very widely extended to the visitors from the United States, were productive of even more useful results, because they excited in them better feelings than the mere dread of our arms. After the studied reserve that it had been usual for the leading persons in the British provinces to maintain towards their republican neighbours, it was most gratifying to the latter to be received with cordiality by the nobleman of the highest position with whom they had ever come in contact. I have often said to those who (after the fashion of petty carping, by which we were assailed) used to dilate on the seven or eight hundred pounds that were spent in the course of Lord Durham's visit to Niagara as a monstrous expense, that, considering the results attributable to it, a million of money would have been a cheap price for the single glass of wine which Lord Durham drank to the health of the American President. For such had been the absurd demeanour of the authorities in the British Colonies towards those of the United States that it actually seemed as if the latter Government were not completely recognized by ours. This mere ordinary civility, therefore, on the part of the Governor-General was taken by the Americans present, and by their countrymen at large, as indicative of a thorough change of feeling and policy, and as a pledge of goodwill towards their country. Of the change thereby produced in their feelings, we had speedy and gratifying proofs, and these acts of civility created among the mass that regard for Lord Durham which the wise and humane policy of his government had in great measure already produced among the more thinking. Henceforth, instead of incivilities being offered to every British officer who chanced to cross the lines, the citizens of the United States vied with each other in hospitality and respect to them. Lord Durham continued this wise course after his return to Quebec, where he made a point of receiving the numerous travellers from the United States at his house during the summer. These were in themselves but slight acts and easy observances, but they were parts of a great view of international relations, and produced great and good effects on the feelings and intercourse of two nations. It is only the man of statesmanlike mind who can produce a great result out of things so small as an invitation to dinner, or the drinking a glass of wine.

With respect to the events which occurred during this visit to Upper Canada I am little qualified to speak from personal knowledge, as my unfortunate illness compelled Lord Durham to leave me behind him on his return. He visited a considerable part of the Province, and here, as in Lower Canada, he made the answer to every address the means of appealing to those feelings of pride in their Mother Country, and interest in the prosperity of the Colony, by taking advantage of which alone he saw that Canada could be secured. This purpose was predominant in Lord Durham's mind. When from the Canadian shore he looked across the entrance of Lake Erie, and saw the noble buildings and crowded harbour of Buffalo, he longed to divert the stream of commerce to the British shore, and by means of the Welland Canal to give to Canada the trade between the Great Lakes and the sea. With this view he wrote that despatch in which he impressed on the Home Government the necessity of contributing a large sum of money to complete the great plan of internal water communication which the Assembly of Upper Canada had commenced, but had found beyond its powers of completion. This proposal was not, however, adopted by Ministers. Lord Durham subsequently proposed by means of such provincial resources as he could command to aid in the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa, the most important tributary of the St. Lawrence, and hardly inferior in importance to the main branch of the river. But his abrupt departure prevented his taking any steps for this purpose.

In the short period which had elapsed between our first arrival in Lower Canada and our return from the Upper Province, a very great and beneficial change had already been wrought in the state of things. The change in our position with respect to the United States was the most important; no imminent risk of war any longer harassed us and deranged our plans; on the contrary, the favourable feeling of the States came to the aid of our Government and operated for us in public opinion in Canada. The British party, in spite of the secret dissatisfaction of some of its leaders, had very generally rallied round Lord Durham. The French had become somewhat more reconciled to their lot, and though secret intrigues still continued to be carried on among habitans, the change of feeling in the United States had convinced the leaders of the refugees, as well as of the disaffected in the province, that their main support, which had been the sympathy of their neighbours, was altogether withdrawn. The opportunity was now afforded for setting about those internal reforms which Lord Durham had promised in the Gazette that contained the Ordinance respecting the prisoners.

The reform which the British population had chiefly at heart was the commutation of the feudal tenures. With a view to this Lord Durham proposed to begin with two measures which might be regarded as parts and preliminaries of the general scheme. The first of these was the commutation of these tenures in the city of Montreal, where their operation was the most injurious, and where the disputes respecting the title of the Seminary of St. Sulpice, an ecclesiastical body, to whom the seigniory belonged, rendered that body more ready to accede to a commutation than the owners of seigniorial rights generally were. The second was the measure of a general registry of titles to land, which besides being a necessary accompaniment of any general commutation of tenures, was eagerly desired by the British population as a most valuable substantive reform. The preparation of a measure for this purpose was confided to Mr. Turton, who for that end proceeded to institute extensive inquiries, and consulted the leading lawyers of the Province, both French and English. The settlement of terms of an arrangement with the Seminary had been entrusted to me, and before our journey to Upper Canada, I had already entered into negotiations with the Superior of that body. The outlines of the plan, which appeared to me fair and expedient, and which were indeed almost identically the same with those proposed by Lord Gosford's Commission, had been communicated by me to some of the leading British inhabitants of Montreal. The matter had naturally been a good deal spoken of, the nature of the suggested arrangements became known, and some of the more stirring and unreasonable of the British party commenced an agitation among the more violent of their own race and religion against terms, which they described as too favourable to a French and Catholic community. When Lord Durham visited Montreal on his return from Upper Canada a petition got up by these persons was presented to him, remonstrating very warmly against the arrangement, and not very covertly insinuating, after a fashion too common in the private conversation of those who in both Canadas affected the greatest loyalty, that the continuance of that loyalty would in a great measure depend on a compliance with their demands. This insolent threat, as well as the bigotry exhibited in the petition were promptly rebuked by Lord Durham, and his decisive conduct not only checked the extravagance of the leaders of this fanatical movement, but elicited a strong counter-expression of opinion. At a public meeting held on the subject a few days after Lord Durham's answer to the address, the more moderate of the British expressed their disapprobation of the petition, and the Irish Catholics exhibited such marked indignation at the insolent tone adopted towards their clergy and religion that it became obvious that the bigotry of a few individuals had gone near to bring about that separation between the Irish Catholics and the remainder of the British race, as it had been the great care of the British leaders in their recent conflicts with the French most cautiously to avoid. The meeting broke up in disorder, all agitation on the subject ceased, and the Government was left to complete its arrangements with the Seminary at its leisure.

Two subjects of no less importance than even the commutation of the feudal tenures were at the same time undertaken. A Commission was issued for an inquiry into the state of education in the province and another to inquire into the state of its municipal and local institutions. On the last of these Commissions it was resolved to employ a person who had acquired a rather unenviable notoriety by the extreme violence as well as ability with which he had advocated the views of the British party. This was Adam Thom, who had been for some time the principal writer in the Montreal Herald. The talents and energy of this man, originally a very humble schoolmaster in the north of Scotland, had raised him to the possession of the greatest influence over the mass of the British party, and to them the confidence now reposed in him by the Government was highly gratifying. Of course it was just as unpalatable to the French Canadians, whose press rang with denunciations of the 'execrable' Thom. The only really bad result of this was the loss of the assistance of a respectable and influential French Canadian, who had consented to serve on the Commission, but declined when he found that he was to be associated with one who was regarded as the enemy of his race. But I am not at all inclined to doubt of the wisdom of this step. Mr. Thom was very fit for the business assigned to him, and performed his task with great integrity and judgment. Nor was his utility confined to that particular business. Throughout the rest of the Mission he rendered himself most useful by the information which he supplied, and by his influence over the mass of the British population.

His services were even more essential after our arrival in England, whither he returned at the same time, and his assistance in furnishing various pieces of local information and corrections of detail were of great value to the Report. But his appointment was of still more importance on account of the principle of selection, which the employment of a man so obnoxious to one race indicated. It was a great thing to show the violent parties in Canada that their denunciations should not succeed as heretofore in excluding men of ability from the public service. It was a great point also to take an able and energetic man out of the mischievous occupation of party agitation to enlist him in the service of the Government, and to employ him where his energy and talents would do good instead of harm. Had Lord Durham's government continued he would have shown that he meant to pursue the same course with both races alike. For when the events occurred which put an end to his mission, he was in great hopes of securing the services of Mr. Morin, a French Canadian of great industry and knowledge, of amiable and upright character, and who perhaps, next to Mr. Papineau, had occupied the foremost position in the debates of the Assembly; and who, though subjected of course to much animosity and many accusations, appeared to have kept quite aloof from the recent insurrection. The Education Inquiry was entrusted to my brother, who with great perseverance and judgment undertook the high but difficult task of uniting the hostile races in the same schools and colleges, and in spite of a good deal of opposition from the bigots of every race and creed, devised a very satisfactory scheme for the purpose, which will be found detailed in the Appendix D to Lord Durham's Report.

The multitudinous business of the more ordinary administration of the Province of Lower Canada occupied of course much of Lord Durham's time. Every question of magnitude that arose in British North America was referred to him. The disposal of the political prisoners in Upper Canada was the subject of a long and warm correspondence with Sir George Arthur. An application to Lord Durham from the wives of Chandler and Waite, two of the unhappy men condemned to death for what was called the Short Hills insurrection, occasioned his interference in the first instance. This was somewhat angrily resented by Sir George Arthur. I need not enter into the particulars of a discussion which is contained in the correspondence printed at the end of Ridgway's edition of the Report, and which does honour to Lord Durham's humanity as well as to his political wisdom. The result was most satisfactory, for after earnest entreaties from Sir George Arthur to be allowed to execute at first four, and then at least one of the convicts, the lives of all these unhappy men were saved, and what was even more important, Sir George Arthur was induced to proclaim a General Amnesty, by which the fears of the various families compromised in the late risings were set at rest, and the greater part of the political exiles, who molested the frontier, were permitted to return, and became harmless at home.

Among Lord Durham's labours during this period I must not forget the excellent dispatch of the 9th of August. This document, in which for the first time he developed for the information of the Home Government his views of the general state of Lower Canada and the causes which had produced it, describes very fully the hostility of the French and English races, the objects and characters of the contending parties, the state of feeling which the recent events had produced in the United States, the abuses of the internal government of the province, and the general want of confidence on the part of its inhabitants in the Imperial Executive and Legislature. The views contained in this dispatch are in fact the same as those subsequently given with much greater fulness in the Report, and the great value of the dispatch consists in this coincidence between it and the Report, inasmuch as it proves that the views expressed in the latter were not taken up by Lord Durham after his return to England, but that, confirmed by intervening experience, they were in effect the same views as those which he had communicated to the Ministry before the occurrence of the events that cut short his mission.

Lord Durham, before leaving England, had, with a view principally to having some definite subject of discussion with the persons whom he might consult in the Province, prepared the outline of a plan for the future government, founded on suggestions which he had received both from public documents and discussions, and from individuals who had paid a great attention to the subject. Soon after his arrival in Canada he had taken advantage of visits from the Lieutenant-Governors of what are commonly called the Lower Provinces, to desire them to send to Quebec such persons of every party in their respective Colonies as they might consider capable of giving the soundest opinion on such a subject. Accordingly, on the 12th of September, deputations from Nova Scotia and Prince Edward's Island came to Quebec, and in a few days after arrived that from New Brunswick. Great praise is due to the Governors for the skill and impartiality with which they had selected the deputations. Their members appeared to have been very fairly selected as the ablest representatives of the different parties in the Colonies. They gave us indeed a very favourable opinion of the state of society in the Lower Provinces. Generally men of plain manners, they exhibited also a great deal of plain good sense and fairness. Opposed in provincial politics they could discuss even their own points of difference with candour and moderation. The deputation from Nova Scotia in particular pleased us highly. Some of its leading members were persons not only of striking ability, but of a degree of general information and polish of manners which are even less commonly met with in colonial society.

The scheme which Lord Durham proposed as the basis of discussion was one on the principle of a federative union of all the existing Colonies in North America. The idea of this had been originally thrown out by Mr. Roebuck in the House of Commons, and the suggestion had met with the approval of Sir Robert Peel, as well as of Lord Howick, Mr. Ellice, and other persons who had paid much attention to Colonial matters. The plan appeared to offer a chance of putting an end to existing discussions, of overwhelming the enemies of British connexion in the Canadas by the unanimous loyalty of the Lower Provinces, of extinguishing the pretensions of French nationality, and at the same time of leaving each different community in possession of its own laws and of the power of managing its own local affairs. The plan had in Lord Durham's eyes the still greater merit of combining these large and richly endowed Provinces for common purposes of improvement, of forming out of these divided and feeble elements a single community with vigour as well as singleness of action, and of thus raising up on the Northern frontier of the United States a rival union of British Colonies, which might ere long, by the development of its vast internal resources, form a counter-balancing power on the American Continent. The same measure would, he hoped, not only make these Colonies powerful, but also incline them to use their power no longer for the purpose of thwarting, but for that of supporting, the Imperial Government. In order, however, still further to guard against the contest of races, he entertained the idea of dividing Upper and Lower Canada into three instead of two Governments. The westernmost of these was to have been formed entirely of the furthest portion of Upper Canada, where the population would have been wholly English. The middle part was to be composed of a portion of Upper Canada, together with the whole or the greater part of the districts of Montreal and the Eastern Townships in Lower Canada. An English majority would by this means have completely overpowered the French population of that district in which, from the near approach to equality of the two races, the hostility between them had been the most mischievous, and in which the French were far more turbulent and ill affected than in other parts of the Province. The third government, comprising the country from Sorel to the eastern extremity of Canada, would have been entirely French. But the French of the greater part of this district, particularly those below Quebec, are so comparatively quiet a race, there is such a paucity of English there, and consequently so little collision occurs between the races, that we had every reason for thinking that such a French community might have proved tolerably tranquil and well affected. At any rate the disturbances of a single Province would, under the Federal system, have been local, and need not have disturbed the general legislation and tranquillity of British North America.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

Our conferences with the deputations were harmonious and satisfactory. I need not now specify the effects produced on our opinions by these discussions, nor how it was that our views (for it was so not only with Lord Durham, but with all of us) gradually took the shape in which they were embodied in the Report. The urgency of an union was more forcibly impressed on our minds in the course of our conferences, and still more by subsequent events. And as we discussed the details of a plan, so the merits of a federal scheme faded away by degrees, and we became convinced of the propriety of such a complete legislative union of the provinces as was afterwards proposed in Lord Durham's Report. The language held by the deputation showed us that the public mind of all the Provinces was prepared for an Union, and that such a measure would be conducive to their separate interests as well as to the common good of the empire.

In the midst of these occupations we received the astounding news of the disallowance of the Ordinance of the 28th of June. Previous intelligence had by no means prepared us for this. Lord Durham had received not only a dispatch from Lord Glenelg, but also an autograph letter from the Queen highly approving of the Ordinance. We had no reason to believe from the reports of the first debates on the subject in Parliament that any person would join Lord Brougham and Mr. Leader in their outcry against the Ordinance. Lord Durham had always had misgivings as to the result. I will own that I had felt none. I thought that the merciful and pacifying purpose of the Act would have so pleased the great mass of our countrymen that there would have been no dissent from their universal approbation. I still think that I judged the mass of my countrymen aright, and that by them Lord Durham's Ordinances were fairly appreciated and fully approved. But he counted more accurately than I did on the selfishness of parties and the consequences of intrigue. I recollect well the day that the news arrived. I happened, amid my usual fatigues, to have that morning a few hours of leisure, and at Lord Durham's request I went with him on an excursion in the neighbourhood. The incidents of this little journey are fresh in my recollection even now; I well remember what we saw, and how we talked, and how we laughed under the bright Canadian sky in that fine autumn day. As I was walking back from the carriage to my lodgings some one told me the news in general terms, but I supposed it to originate either in joke or in mistake, and hardly thought again about it. However, when I got into the carriage to go with Mr. Turton to dinner, he told me that the report was quite true, and when I arrived at the house Lord Durham sent for me, told me the news, and, almost more by manner than words, let me know that his mind was made up to resign his government. I saw indeed from the first that such would inevitably be the result, and that here—for a while at least—was destroyed the whole fabric of improvement that Lord Durham had with so much labour and anxiety been building up during the period of his government.

Whenever up to this time the least mention had been made of resignation, I had invariably combated it as a thing not to be for a moment thought of. I had recently done this with great warmth; I had represented the trust confided to Lord Durham as similar to that of the defence of some besieged outpost of the empire, and I had asserted that in his case, as in that of the military commandant, success would be the only proof that our countrymen would accept of the efficiency of his defence. Great, unexpectedly great, as was the additional discouragement to which he was now exposed, I think—I even then thought—that it would have been wise, had it been possible, for Lord Durham to have held his post. His reasons for quitting it have been stated at full length in his dispatches and proclamation, and they unanswerably show the fearful chances of failure in his great purpose of maintaining and pacifying Canada, to which the factious conduct of the Tories and the more fatal abandonment of Ministers had exposed him. I think also that they quite clearly showed that the persecution of which Lord Durham had been the object from the outset of his government, and the mistrust of his power occasioned by the recent occurrences, had placed difficulties in his way from which another governor would in all likelihood be free. Still I think that had he met the difficulties with his accustomed energy, he would in all probability have succeeded, and that the honour and advantage of success after such discouragement would have been so great that it would have been quite prudent for such a prize to run the risk of a failure for which under the circumstances of the case nobody could have blamed him. I approved of his resignation on a ground which now, alas! I may very plainly mention. Without surmising the real nature or extent of the mischief, I saw that Lord Durham's health was fearfully affected by all that had passed. Such a degree of nervous agitation did his disease produce, and such a reaction of that agitation on his bodily health was constantly going on, that it was evidently impossible for him to bear up against the anxieties and labour of his government under existing circumstances, and display that energy and promptitude of decision which had so eminently distinguished him when his health was better. I felt convinced—and unhappily it is now too clear that I was likely to be right—that Lord Durham's life would very soon have been the sacrifice for his continuance in Canada, even for two or three months, and that at any rate he was liable to have his energies impaired by illness at moments in which any relaxation of them would have been fatal to success. I lamented his resignation then: I deplore it yet more deeply now; but I approved of it then, and approve of it now, as an act done in compliance with a stern and sad necessity. I must not be understood as admitting that his return home was calculated to injure the interests of the Province; on the contrary, I still think that in the difficulties then impending the preservation of the Province was more safe in the hands of Sir John Colborne than in those of Lord Durham, weakened as they were by the repeated proofs of his being unsupported at home. It is for his own sake—for the sake of the influence which his continuance in his government under such circumstances would have ensured him—and for the sake of all the strength that would thence have accrued to the popular cause at home, that I regret that the state of his health compelled him to abandon this chance of fame and power, and that even this sacrifice came too late to avert the blow which disease had already struck.

The declaration of Lord Durham's intended resignation spread terror and grief throughout British North America. The delegates from the Lower Provinces gave utterance to the first expression of regret at his departure, and of entreaty that he would remain, and it was in answer to them that he first publicly announced his intention of resigning. In consequence of this, addresses of a similar nature came from all parts of both the Canadas. The address from Quebec, presented in the hall of the House of Assembly, gave occasion to a burst of the most enthusiastic popular feeling. Large deputations brought the addresses from Kingston, Toronto, and Montreal, and expressed the alarm with which the whole British race in Canada regarded the attacks made on Lord Durham, and the consequent calamity of his resignation. The French—though some of the more honest and sagacious of their leaders were inclined to express openly their regret at an event, which deprived them of their own efficient protection from the violence of their antagonists—maintained their usual sullen and impassive demeanour. But the feeling and the movement of deep regret extended throughout the British of every party in the two provinces. Even those who had the most violently condemned his policy—even the most reckless of the Family Compact of Upper Canada—expressed the common feeling in terms proving how sincerely they participated in alarm at Lord Durham's departure, if not in approval of his policy.

These demonstrations did not, however, affect the grounds on which Lord Durham and all around him saw that his resignation was absolutely necessary. Indeed these considerations, together with the news which reached us from every quarter of the preparations for fresh insurrection, rendered it incumbent on Lord Durham at once to put the fact of his resolution beyond a doubt, and to take measures for his instant departure, in order to end that species of interregnum which cannot but exist when a governor has declared his intention of giving up his office. With this view, he determined on leaving the Province at the close of October, and he announced this by the famous Proclamation which he issued on the 9th of that month.

In this Proclamation Lord Durham had two great objects in view. The first was that of calming the excessive agitation which his abrupt departure from Canada had occasioned, by showing that he did not despair, and that he yet hoped by immediate and energetic remonstrances at home to effect that good which he could not secure by remaining in Canada. The second was certainly that of vindicating himself by the only public means in his power. He has been much censured for publishing what has been considered an inflammatory appeal from the Imperial Government and Legislature to the people of the Colonies. It must not, however, be matter of surprise that after the unusual mode in which Lord Durham had been assailed in Parliament and abandoned by the Ministry—after his policy had been condemned without hearing or explanation, that he should think it necessary to step somewhat beyond the line of official usage, in order to protect himself against those who had used him thus ungenerously. As for the inflammatory effect which it has been said that the proclamation was calculated, if not intended, to produce, the answer simply is that it both purported to seek, and did in effect produce, precisely the opposite result. No disorder, no increase of disaffection ensued; on the contrary, all parties in the Province expressed a revival of confidence; and we had it very clearly shown to us that one effect of the Proclamation had been that of inducing a much more general readiness to enlist in the volunteer corps, and take other measures for the defence of the provinces (see Note A, at the end).

There was, however, one necessary consequence of the great hurry in which Lord Durham was compelled to take his departure when once determined on, that I much regretted. He had originally purposed embarking at New York, after previously visiting Washington. The knowledge of this intention had created the greatest satisfaction in the United States, and the people had made preparations for giving him an enthusiastic welcome. Shortly after, in my passage through the States, I heard that the corporations of the various great cities on his line of way had made arrangements for meeting him at different points, and conveying him from one to the other. In fact he was everywhere to be received by the local authorities as a public visitor. On our return to England he was informed by Mr. Stevenson, the American Minister, that at Washington he was to have remained with the President at the White House as a national guest—an honour never before conferred on any one but Lafayette. Such a deep impression had Lord Durham made on the people of the United States: nor has that impression been yet effaced: to the hour of his death his popularity in that great country remained undiminished. I regret that no visible exhibition of this popularity occurred in the manner proposed, both because it would have been a great support to Lord Durham at home, and because it would have been useful in teaching our public men in what way and with what ease mere honesty and courtesy can secure the goodwill of that great kindred nation. But the intimations of meditated insurrection were so numerous and strong that Lord Durham felt that he must lose no time in returning home, and that it would be unseemly in him to be travelling in the United States at a time in which the seat of his late government might probably be a prey to civil war.

During the short time that remained before his departure, he occupied himself in bringing to a close or advancing the various inquiries and reform which he had commenced. The Registry Bill was completed, and received the sanction of the principal lawyers of both races in the Province, as well as of those persons who had long taken the lead in demanding such a measure. The agreement with the Seminary of St. Sulpice was arranged, and, though Lord Durham did not choose, on the eve of quitting his government, to use his strictly legal authority to give a definitive sanction to measures of such importance, to this arrangement made with the assent of all the parties may be ascribed the enfranchisement of Montreal from the feudal restraints that have long obstructed its prosperity. The Commissioners of Education and Municipal Institutions were left to complete their tasks, of which the results afterwards appeared in the Appendix to Lord Durham's Report. The Commission on Crown Lands had continued its labours, and already settled some most important practical questions. The Militia claims had been adjusted by the Proclamation 8th of September, and on the 31st of October, the very eve of his departure, Lord Durham issued a Proclamation settling the intricate question of the rights of "Squatters" on the Crown Lands. But a question of still greater magnitude was decided by Lord Durham in the Report on the subject of escheat in Prince Edward's Island, contained in the dispatch of the 8th October. The abuse of the proprietary rights of the absentee landowners of this colony was the mischief that had blighted its prosperity in the very bud. The Legislature of the island had in vain passed Bill after Bill to authorise the escheat of Waste Lands on the principles usually acted on in almost every new country, and in vain had the Governor of the Island repeatedly recommended the Crown to give its sanction to such a measure. The proprietors in England had more weight with Ministers than the desires and interests of the whole Colonial community. Lord Durham's dispatch secured the Royal Assent to a Law of escheat; and if Prince Edward's Island shall hereafter prosper, it will be mainly owing to this interposition on his part.

I need only mention one other act done by Lord Durham before his departure from Canada. The two Chief Justiceships of the Province were resigned by Mr. Sewell and Mr. Reid. Lord Durham, without any solicitation, instantly conferred the office of Chief Justice of Quebec, the highest judicial office in the Province, on Mr. James Stuart. This gentleman, by universal consent the first lawyer in the Province, and the ablest as well as most influential leader of the British party, had been Attorney-General during Lord Aylmer's government; and having rendered himself obnoxious to the French majority, had been impeached by the Assembly, and an address had been presented for his removal. That he had acted with a good deal of intemperance in one or two instances cannot be denied, but beyond this there was really no foundation for the charges made against him. But though this was acknowledged by Lord Aylmer and the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Stanley, the former removed him from office and the latter sanctioned the removal. On any rational system of executive responsibility the mere hostility of the Assembly ought to have been in itself a sufficient ground for the removal of a man from an important executive office, but the dismissal of Mr. Stuart by those who strenuously combated that principle, amounted to a recognition of the truth of the charges made against him, and that recognition on the part of men who believed him innocent of all the serious articles of accusation was a most flagrant and cruel act of injustice. This injustice Lord Durham repaired, and to the great satisfaction of the whole British population, made Mr. Stuart Chief Justice of the Province. A day or two after Lord Durham's departure, Mr. Stuart called on me, and as he spoke of his deep and lasting gratitude to him for having thus relieved him from the stigma that had so long rested on his name, the tears actually burst into the eyes of that hard old man. But I do not find that Mr., now Sir James Stuart, who since Mr. Poulett Thomson's arrival has been the chief director of the Government, has ever shown any care for the interests or memory of him who lifted him from the very dirt into the highest judicial position in the province.

It was on the 1st of November that Lord Durham sailed from Quebec in the Inconstant. A sad day and sad departure it was. The streets were crowded; the spectators filled every window and every house-top; and, though every hat was raised as we passed, a deep silence marked the general grief for Lord Durham's departure. His own presentiments depressed him, and those about him, for he had told me and others also that he did not expect to reach England alive. When I left him (for I had to stay some time behind to collect materials for the Report) I had as a member of the Executive Council to repair to the Castle, where Sir John Colborne was to be sworn in. There were but few people in the room, but the countenances of the old Executive Councillors seemed to mark the restoration of the ancient system of administration. A good many military officers also were present; they seemed to think that their ascendancy also was restored. The ceremony was silently hurried over, and when it was finished I went to the window, which commanded a full view of the harbour. The cannon were just sounding in honour of his successor's installation, when the frigate that bore Lord Durham was slowly towed out of the harbour. The sky was black with clouds bearing the first snowstorm of the winter, and hardly a breath of air was moving. I returned to my office, and, some hours after, from the window, which commanded the wide basin below the city, I saw the dark form of that ill-omened ship slowly, and as it were painfully, struggling on its course. My heart filled with many a bitter regret, many a superstitious presentiment, and alas! many too true misgiving. We dined that evening at Mr. Daly's, and the party was composed of Mr. Turton, my brother, and myself, forming with him the last remains of Lord Durham's government. It was a mournful meeting, and none mourned more deeply than our kind and honourable host, who said that with Lord Durham's departure all his hope had gone. A heavy fall of snow was setting in as we left the house, and the very morning after the winter was completely set in. The next day we heard the alarming report that Lord Durham's worst forebodings had been nigh being fulfilled in the most fearful manner by a fire on board the ship. This was perfectly true; not so the reports which reached us every now and then during the next fortnight to the effect that Lord Durham had been forced to put into Halifax, or that he had been driven ashore on some other part of the coast. After fearful perils at the outset, the Inconstant kept on her course to its appointed end amid almost perpetual storms, which did not cease even when she had reached the shelter of Plymouth Sound.

Thus ended Lord Durham's Mission to Canada, and instead of bringing these great results to the country, and that harvest of honour and power to himself, which we had hoped, and for which we had all laboured, it seemed at its close to have ended in nothing but disappointment to all concerned in it. Its most fatal consequence, indeed, was his feeling that disappointment so acutely, and that, sickened by the malignity and weakness of which he had been the victim, he from the hour of his return gave way to a depression that quickened the progress of his malady. Many of those who enthusiastically rallied around him on his return, have since reproached him that he threw away the opportunity of complete justification and satisfaction, and refused to take that position in the political world which seemed to invite him. But this course he took after full and anxious consideration, and took I think as wisely as I am sure he did it honestly. Abstaining from all public part in general politics, he reserved himself for Canada alone. Nor did he seek to urge on the discussion of that topic. When Lord Winchelsea imprudently attempted to renew his persecution of Mr. Turton, Lord Durham's short and vigorous speech scared his assailants, and at once and for ever checked all similar attacks. From that hour he remained unmolested by those who had been so eager in assailing him during his absence. He never in his turn became the assailant. Public opinion had done him such complete justice in the matter of the Ordinance that, if he had brought it again before Parliament, it must have been for the purpose of assault, not of self-defence. When at the close of the session the question of the future government of Canada came before the House of Lords, he contented himself with a short speech, in which he neither defended himself nor attacked others, but, approving of the policy of ministers in postponing final legislation on the subject, emphatically impressed on the House of Lords the principles on which he thought that their conduct towards Canada ought to be shaped. At the moment, perhaps, the vindication of measures unjustly condemned and thwarted, and the triumphant assertion of his own policy by dint of argument and eloquence, might have given more satisfaction to his friends. But now we may with far higher and purer pride look back to the forbearance which he displayed, recollecting that, when all others thought most of his personal position and wrongs, he said nothing of them. True to the public principles of his past life, he allowed no impulse of anger, no scheme of ambitious aggrandizement out of the many assiduously suggested to him, to turn him from the course which, independently of all personal considerations, he judged to be the best calculated to serve his country. To the last day of his life his influence was steadily and effectually employed in repressing those feelings on the part of his political friends which, if uncontrolled by him, would on many an occasion have given the finishing blow to the existence of Lord Melbourne's ministry. More active exertions in the general field of politics, and the consequent attainment of the power of more effectually serving his country in office, we might have expected, had he possessed the health which had been the spring of his former energy. This it pleased Providence to deny us; but his hard fate could not deprive him, during the period that followed his return from Canada, of the opportunity of exhibiting a generous forbearance and an unselfish love of country.

Nor need we look with any dissatisfaction to the fruits of his Mission. That these were at first less obvious and less abundant than they should have been was not his fault, but that of those whose misconduct cut short the brilliant and useful career of his administration, and compelled him to leave to others the execution and completion of what he had only planned or commenced. The period of his government, which seems so long when we follow its various incidents and acts, was after all but of five months' duration, and yet in that short time what great practical results did he bring about! His policy in fact it was that pacified Canada and secured its retention. He found the gaols of Lower Canada full of prisoners trembling for their lives, which had been forfeited to the law, and the frontiers crowded with hopeless and reckless exiles. These traces of insurrection he removed, freed every prisoner, and recalled the exiles, without shedding any man's blood or confiscating any man's estate. In Upper Canada, where he could not so speedily or completely exercise his authority to the same effect, he nevertheless succeeded in producing nearly similar results by his advice and example. He found the British of Lower Canada suspicious and angry: he inspired them with confidence. He found the great mass of the people of Upper Canada animated by a discontent which bordered on disaffection, and utterly despairing of justice from Great Britain. He rallied them around the British Crown with that unanimous feeling which they since exhibited during the winter of 1838-9, when the whole population turned out against the invaders, and not a man, or hardly a man, of those most inclined to disaffection in the former troubles lent the slightest aid to the attack. He found a still more serious cause of alarm in the alienation of the great body, and the active hostility of a dangerous portion, of the people of the United States. He entirely changed the public opinion of the United States with respect to Canada; he turned it from assailing to supporting the British Government; and he so completely destroyed all general or open disposition to aid the insurgent Canadians, that, although some outrages were committed by the few reckless desperadoes who crossed the frontier at Prescott and Sandwich, the refugees and their adherents never again with any effect made an appeal to the sympathy of the American people. And though it was impossible for him to conciliate the long estranged goodwill of the French Canadians, or to eradicate their insane aspirations after the ascendancy of their race, he deprived their discontent of every justification, and so stripped them of all aid that their second insurrection exhibited only their utter want both of resources in themselves and of allies without.

I have already adverted to the practical reforms of every kind which Lord Durham effected or put in train during his stay in Canada. Besides those which were sufficiently simple to admit of being completed by him, the foundations of almost every reform of the defective institutions of Lower Canada were laid by the Commissioners of Inquiry which he established, and by their reports contained in the Appendix to his own, or by the suggestions in the Report itself. It has been the good fortune of Mr. Poulett Thomson, acting under the suggestions made to him by Lord Durham and those attached to Lord Durham—prompted by the advice of those whom we recommended to him as his advisers—and supported by those whose goodwill our private representations secured for him, to achieve some great and useful reforms. But if he has improved the administration of justice, he found its defects marked out in Lord Durham's Report. If he has prepared a system of municipal institutions, it was Lord Durham who painted the mischiefs of the want of them, and marked out the means by which they might be erected on an efficient and liberal basis. If he has been able to establish a comprehensive and sound system of education, the necessity and the means were alike pointed out by Lord Durham's Commission. If Montreal is enfranchised, if a registry of landed property is secured, it is by the adoption of Lord Durham's measures for each purpose. And if, above all, any reform is yet effected or shall hereafter be effected in the management of the Crown lands, the credit of procuring the requisite information and of settling the principles to be adopted for the future administration of this department, is due to Lord Durham's Commission, and to it alone. All these were reforms of which neither the necessity nor the practicability were suggested to Lord Durham from home. He saw the defects, he devised the remedies; others have stepped in to appropriate the honour of the execution.

But unquestionably the most important purpose of the mission was that of effecting, or rather suggesting, such improvements in the constitution and general administration of government in Canada, as might guard us against the recurrence of the disorders that had for many years afflicted both Provinces. This task remained to be performed when Lord Durham returned to England, and it has been completely performed in his Report. The praise of laborious inquiry and of comprehensive thought has never yet been refused to this document by those even who have most loudly condemned it. For it has been bitterly condemned by Tories, whose narrow and slavish notions its free principles of government could not but shock. It has been condemned by those whose attachment to the routine of our Colonial policy has been revolted by the startling recommendation of a generous confidence in the good sense of the people of the Colonies. It has given great offence to those Ministers whose whole recent system of Colonial policy it showed to have been shallow and unsound. And there are some, who can dispute no position in it, who cannot deny the truth of its statements or the general soundness of its conclusions, but who, being of that school of wily statesmen that imagine political wisdom to consist in going round about to one's end—that regard truths as mischiefs to be suppressed, or at any rate as dangerous matters to be kept only for Cabinets and Saloons—regret that Lord Durham should have said anything about Responsible Government, or at any rate that what he said should have been published to the world. We may console ourselves that the public at large while admitting the truth of Lord Durham's views, have not shrunk from them as dangerous on that account. Even amid the universal indifference with which the Colonies are regarded here, the public in this country have generally and highly approved of the Report. But in the Colonies it has become the textbook of every advocate of colonial freedom, of every one who denies that our countrymen in the Colonies should have that voice in their own government which Englishmen are used to regard as the birthright of their race. In Canada it has become the rallying-point of the great body of the people; those whom the ancient misgovernment had driven to the verge of disaffection have waived all their former objects for that of the practical adoption of Lord Durham's Report, and under his name every subdivision of the friends of liberal government have united as 'Durhamites', and insist on that which he sanctioned and no more. Nor has the Report been less studied or adopted in the other Colonies. The people of the West Indies and of the Cape of Good Hope have claimed the benefit of its principles, and every newspaper from the various Colonies of the Australasian World appeals to it as the manual of Colonial Reform.

Nor need we repine at the practical effect already given to the suggestions of the Report. Many of these indeed put forward rather what were views of ultimate and possible improvement, and general principles of Colonial Administration, than what can be regarded as positive recommendations for direct and immediate legislation. But the Report did distinctly and earnestly urge the Legislative Union of the two Canadas, and the principal purpose of the Act of the last Session goes to give effect to this recommendation. I think I see in the Lower Provinces a tendency towards such an accession to the present Union as would realize Lord Durham's splendid scheme of a great British community in North America. The principle of executive responsibility which he recommended, not with the vain notion that it could be enforced by positive law, but as the sure and only foundation of a firm and peaceable government of the Colonies, thought repudiated in words, has been already partially recognized in the appointments made by the Government. But it does not matter very much what the Government repudiates or what it recognizes, for certain it is that in the Parliament of United Canada it has created a power from which no Government in this country will be able to withhold that voice in the selection of its rulers, which Lord Durham showed to be a necessary consequence of representative institutions.

If then the Mission to Canada must ever be an object of mournful contemplation to us who loved Lord Durham and lament his irreparable loss, yet, when we look to the interests of his reputation, we may regard the execution of this high and difficult task as among the noblest of the many noble memorials of his career. Let us remember that, if he failed to obtain the results of immediate satisfaction and credit to himself, it was because he laboured for higher and more permanent objects. In this, as in every other part of his course through life, he left the trodden path of old routine and bygone systems, and was the first to advance towards whatever of wider and clearer views the enlarged experience of mankind has in these days reached. Here, as in other matters, his foresight enabled him to base his policy on those principles on which the coming age of the world will be ruled. He who acts thus must not expect that he will be rightly appreciated by the little knots of intrigues, from whose thoughts and interests he separates himself. But from the mass of his countrymen he may expect at least that generous sympathy with the rectitude of his purpose, which Lord Durham found even in his own day. From after times he will receive a yet larger meed of justice. For, as coming events in their appointed course shall prove the sagacity with which he foresaw them—as the public mind, gradually opening to new and sound views, shall be prepared to read the right lesson in the occurrences which it may witness—so will shine forth with daily increasing brightness the character of that statesman, who alone in his day rightly appreciated the worth of our Colonial Empire, and saw on what deep and sure foundations of freedom its prosperity might be reared. With us, then, that sorrow for his loss, which no time can efface, need be mingled with no vain and injurious regrets for the result of his labours, which will long survive in the bettered lot and grateful recollections of our Colonies, with none for a fame which, instead of being laid in his untimely grave, will date from the hour of his death the commencement of a long and vigorous existence.

NOTE A, REFERRED TO IN PAGE 36

There is one passage in the Proclamation, of which the propriety has been much questioned even by some of those most inclined to judge favourably of Lord Durham's conduct. It is that passage in which he states that, the Ordinances having been disallowed, there existed no impediment to the return of the persons who had been sent to Bermuda, or prevented from returning to the province. This was regarded by many as a mere outbreak of temper on Lord Durham's part, and it was supposed that, in order to throw obloquy on the Government at home, he actually invited dangerous persons to return to the colony. I confess that at first sight the passage in question has this appearance, and therefore I feel bound in justice to say that on that very ground Lord Durham was very reluctant to insert this passage, which I suggested, and very earnestly and perseveringly pressed on him. But practical considerations, totally unconnected with any reference to the conduct of the Home Government, induced me to make the suggestion, and, I think, justified Lord Durham in adopting it.

The instant that the news of the disallowance reached Canada, it was supposed that some of the exiles would enter the province. It seemed doubtful whether in that case they would be liable to be tried for their original offence. Nobody could deny that they had undergone some punishment, however inadequate, and the sound principle of Non bis in idem seemed, therefore, applicable to their case. But this point just admitted of so much doubt, as to make it quite certain that criminals so obnoxious to a large and violent party would not be allowed to re-establish themselves quietly at their former abodes, without some proceedings against them being attempted. We felt quite sure that they would be arrested, and that half the Magistrates in the Province would be eager to commit them for trial. The Grand Juries would have found Bills, the trials must have taken place, and then would have recurred all the mischiefs which the Ordinances had been designed to avert. The angry passion of the past insurrection would have been revived by the proceedings in the courts, the guilt of the prisoners would have been proved in the clearest manner, and there would have infallibly followed (as in the recent case of the murderers of Chartrand) a verdict of acquittal in the face of evidence.

The punishment of the exiles could only have been secured by suspending the Habeas Corpus, or by altering the constitution of the Tribunals by either substituting Courts Martial for the ordinary Courts of Criminal Law, or packing the juries. The last Lord Durham did not choose to do, and the two former courses (though defensible in certain emergencies) appeared most inadvisable in the circumstances of the case. He had abstained from having recourse to such encroachments on constitutional principles and personal rights, when the difficulty of disposing of the prisoners had first presented itself to him in all its magnitude on his arrival in the Province; and he was most averse, for the sake of punishing a few, to take a course from which he had shrunk when it would have enabled him to punish all the guilty. And it should always be borne in mind that the measures of rigour, which may be most necessary during an insurrection, may be the most inadvisable when insurrection is apprehended. At that time to have suspended the Habeas Corpus, or substituted Courts Martial for Juries, would simply have been to supply the disaffected with a pretext for the rebellion which we knew them to be meditating; and, what was more, give them some chance of success by setting public opinion in the United States against the Government of Canada. These were evils not even to be risked except for the most important objects, and the exiles in question were mostly so insignificant, that the keeping them out of the Province really was a matter of no consequence. As for Papineau, the only one among them of any consideration, we had learnt enough of his character to feel assured that his presence among the disaffected would have been the surest means of paralysing their operations. Besides which, however great his moral culpability, I knew that the evidence in the possession of Government, all of which I had gone through, would not in his case have justified a legal conviction.

The evils, which appeared thus likely to result from the return of the exiles, rendered it imperative on us to take some precautions to avert them. We were perfectly sure that some of the exiles would return without permission the moment that they heard of the disallowance of the Ordinances, and the fact is that one or two actually did return before the Proclamation was out. After the first step taken against any of them after their return, the consequences would have been beyond Lord Durham's control, and as he could not bring himself to commit the Government to an arbitrary course for the purpose of punishing a score of persons, he would have no choice but of letting matters run their course of arrest, trial, and unjust acquittal.

The great thing then was to prevent any step being taken against the exiles, and as they were sure to obtain impunity in the end, to let them have it at once without all the intervening excitement, and without bringing the administration of justice into further contempt. I therefore pressed on Lord Durham to take the bull by the horns, and as he knew that he could not punish the exiles if they came back, at once to tell them that there was nothing to prevent their doing so. By taking this course Lord Durham did in fact avoid all the excitement, exposure, recrimination, and subversion of justice which would have followed from his doing nothing; and, on the other hand, the worse mischief which would have resulted from his having recourse to violent exceptional measures. When the subsequent insurrection actually did break out, the rebels could allege no harsh act on the part of the Government as a provocation. And what was the practical mischief that resulted from letting these people back?

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 23

None, that I ever heard of. None of those that returned did any harm, or even, as I firmly believe, took any part in the subsequent insurrection. But those who remained out of the province did all the harm they could.

Of course it is always an evil in the way of example, if notoriously guilty persons enjoy perfect impunity. I trust, however, that I have shown that punishing the persons in question by any unconstitutional means would have produced far worse effects even than their going unpunished.

In order to keep up the confidence of the loyal portion of the Canadian public in himself personally and generally in the Provincial Government, it was necessary for Lord Durham to point out that the impunity of these guilty and obnoxious persons was not his doing, but that of the Home Government. He could say this with perfect justice, for he had done his best to punish; his measures had been defeated by the interference of Parliament, and the present difficulty had been created solely by the disallowance of the Ordinances. And I think that it was quite as much in accordance with sound policy as with justice for him to lay the blame on Parliament. For as blame must in the opinion of the Colonists rest on some portion of the Government, it was far better that it should rest on the House than the Provincial Government. A little more discredit thrown on the proceedings of Parliament could hardly produce any sensible effect in augmenting the odium which at that moment rested on that body in the opinion of the Colonists. But anything that cast suspicion on the policy of the Provincial Government would have seriously increased the practical difficulties which surrounded not only Lord Durham, but also his successor. In Parliament the Colonists had no confidence, in the Provincial authorities an entire trust, and it would have been very unwise to weaken the influence of the latter by subjecting them to any part of the blame which Parliament and the Home Government alone deserved.

At any rate, as I began by saying, the course pursued by Lord Durham in this matter and the passage in the Proclamation were both adopted at my urgent suggestion; and I, not he, am answerable for what was done, as well as for the way in which it was announced. He was, of course, obliged to depend greatly on me with respect to all that concerned the internal administration of the Province, and more particularly in matters connected with the administration of justice. If my advice was wrong, he could not be blamed for acting by it in such matters.

I am bound to take on myself whatever blame is due to me, for well I know he never would have cast it on me. Every man who has to act on a great variety of matters of importance must rely on those whom he employs and trusts; and Lord Durham was necessarily compelled in much that he did to rely on me and act on my advice. Some steps that he took at my suggestion were among those that were most fiercely assailed either at home or in Canada. Yet never have I any reason to believe that he threw on me even the blame that I deserved. Never certainly, though often he might justly have done so, did he reproach me with the consequences of my counsels, never at least but once, in a moment of very natural excitement, and then he repaired the reproach in half an hour.

November 15th.

I arrived this morning at Varennes, to send some corn to Market. I embarked, in the Steam Boat, (the Varennes) at Girard's Hotel, where, I found Cartier of St. Antoine, Meinard of Verchere, and several other friends who had come to the Village for the purpose of going the same journey, by the same conveyance. Chamard arrived, from St. Ours; he informed me that the people of St. Charles had detained Debartch prisoner, for some days; because, they supposed that this Traitor wished to go to Quebec, to advise rigorous measures, against those, who had signed the Declarations and the Resolutions of the Assembly at St. Charles, the Twenty third or Twenty fourth of October. By the interposition of Joseph Cartier, joined to his own explanations, Debartch was permitted to depart. T. Drolet, his mortal enemy, saved him, from the rage of a populace infuriated by his tyranny, and disgusted by his versatility. Debartch gave a paper, written with his own hand, by which, he promised to do nothing, against the above mentioned patriots, and particularly against Doctor Wolfred Nelson of Saint Dennis, Dr. Duvert, and Duvert the Notary, of St. Charles, T. T. Drolet of St. Mark and Boucher Belleville of St. Charles. Chammond said, besides, that, to-day, the Varennes, having on board Debartch and his family, passed by St. Charles, St. Dennis and St. Ours without approaching the shore to take in goods or passengers as it was accustomed to do.—While we were discoursing about these things, Boucher Belleville suddenly entered the room, very elegantly dressed; but, with a very disconcerted Countenance, exhibiting, altogether, the most ridiculous figure, in the world.—He entreated me, to follow him, out of the House, with so much earnestness, that, in truth, I thought he was mad.—However, seeing that several people were waiting for me, in the entrance, I concluded, that something extraordinary had happened.—I found there 1st O'Callaghan, trembling, with cold, I think with uneasiness also, he wore a very elegant surtout, his head was concealed by an immense red shawl, which formed a singular contrast with the paleness of his face.—2nd Papineau in a Capote, but presenting a marked difference in his appearance from the former; because, he was tranquil, composed, and, although allowing nothing to escape his attention, he manifested not the slightest symptom of apprehension. After the ordinary compliments, they informed me that the Governor had fulminated warrants against me, and others, as accused of High Treason; and they required that I should go, with them, to seek a shelter, from the impending danger.—With a great deal of trouble, I persuaded them to go, to Duchesnois house, that we might see what was to be done.—They proposed to me to flee to the River Chambly; they desired to know my opinion on the measures, the public ought to adopt against the injustice of the Government. I do not remember who, but I think it was Boucher, who first proposed that a Convention should be called, and a Provisional Government should be established.—We agreed to his proposals; but, he added that this step being equivalent to an Act of open rebellion, it would be well to devise the means of organizing the people and of procuring arms and ammunition.—We all assented to this proposal, and then began to talk about our departure.—As for me “I will not, I said, take the same road with you.—Go you to St. Dennis; see Nelson, be ready to procure Arms; I will go to the North, and see what can be done there; from Grand Brulé you shall hear from me.”—Just at that moment Duchesnois arrived.—He had been very ill.—Boucher was very hungry, O’Callaghan oppressed with fatigue, Papineau alone did not articulate a single syllable, indicative of physical or moral debility. They eat something.—Our departure became again the subject of deliberation. They had come in a canoe, with two men from Point Aux Trembles. These men began to form conjectures concerning ourselves, and the object of our Journey.—This induced me to change my intention of descending the River with them, O’Callaghan asked them how much they thought themselves entitled to, for their trouble, they mentioned the sum of four shillings.—But he seeing the suspicious looks of these men gave them five.—I could not help observing to him that if he went on at that rate; the route which he intended to take would be known to the Government before Twelve O’Clock that day.—

At last Duchesnois set off in his own carriage, accompanied by Papineau, Cartier gave his to Boucher and O’Callaghan. I embarked, with the two men, from Pointe Aux Trembles, and as soon as I arrived in the Island my Wife gave me some things with my Arms and Ammunition.—When I told her the object and cause of my Journey she was a little affected, but suddenly recovering herself, she said, “Go to thy duty and think not of me, I would prefer to see “thee dead on the field of battle than to see thee abandon the cause “of the country.”—

From my House, I went to Laporte’s, at Pointe Aux Trembles, where I found people dancing. I met there Baudry and Archambault.—After having danced I threw myself down to rest till about Six O’Clock, and at Nine I set off with Baudry to the Rivière des Prairies; the same night Roberte drove me to Saint Rose where we took up our quarters for the night with Mr. Turcotte the Parish Priest.—Here we met Paquin and others wanted to enter into a political conversation.—But the knowledge I had of his previous conduct and his recent treason enabled me to silence him in a short time.—Turcotte on this occasion proved himself to be quite a false fellow.—When alone with me and his Brother he acted the part of a Patriote, and said in our presence to one of his habitants (parishioners) “The time is now come, when it is impossible to continue neutral “and it is necessary to take a determined part.”—As to you said he turning to us you are perfectly right in preparing to expel force by force. But when conversing with the other Priests he had the impudence, even in Our presence, to preach quite a different doctrine. I informed him that a Warrant had been issued against me.

This morning, about four O’Clock I went, to the River de Cheine.—The driver was a particular friend of the Priests—he informed me that, on Monday night, the inhabitants of the Parish took to Arms, as they heard of the attack made by the enemy on the people of Grand Coteau he spoke of Two thousand men having some loyal Canadians in front who refused to fight.—This confirms my Opinion that Canadians will not fight against each other.—nor allow any one to attack them.—About nine o’clock I arrived at St. Eustache at Dr. Cheniers.—He appeared to be well disposed, to our side, and spoke, with violence, about the Oppressive measures of the Government.—I think the man is good, but he speaks too much, and that naturally, detracts from his merit.

Saturday 16th.

I saw Scott. I do not like him he has, in his whole behaviour, that dangerous appearance of candour, which is only a cloak for his abominable falsehood.—This afternoon Dumouchelle the Father, arrived, from St. Benoit.—he reported the apprehending of Six Young men of the Association of the Sons of liberty, among whom were Ouimet (Their Chairman) and Boucherville, two promising and able young Lawyers.—I left this place, with Mr. Dumuchelle, and arrived at St. Benoit, at Eleven O'Clock in the night.

Friday 17th.

In this hospitable place, I feel myself at last better; I only find the want of sleep, and that will likewise improve here. Not only the leaders; but also, all the inhabitants are ready to defend the liberty of Canada with their lives and property.

Mr. Girouard is, as usual, with his whole heart, and soul, for his Country, and friends. The women are naturally frightened, about the coming events; on the whole they are convinced of the necessity of repelling force, by force.—I immediately commenced drilling the elected Officers. I remarked, on this occasion that French blood flows in the veins of the Canadians.—It is impossible to imagine how soon the Young men learn the use of their Arms.—

Saturday 18th.

Mr. Girouard went with me this day to Rivière Du Chine; we dined with Mr. Cherrier, and paid a visit to Scott. This afternoon, we received information that Constables accompanied by a strong detachment of Soldiers were coming to arrest Scott, Chenier and other members belonging to this Association.—The people here who were acquainted with the scenes of Longueil agreed to use violence against the messengers of a despotic power and compel them to return.—In consequence of this, I allowed Mr. Girouard to return alone as I had resolved to stay with them and to lead them, against the enemy.—about half an hour after this, I asked Scott what he intended to do; he said he would, by no means allow, his friends to be given up, to be slaughtered.—I saw the impression his words made on the people present.—

He added that we should consult the speaker (Mr. Papineau) which I opposed. I gave it, as my Opinion, that all the Boats should be brought on this side of the River and to destroy Porteous Bridge near St. Rose.—In order to gain time to be able to give information to Our friends, as soon as the enemy should appear, on the opposite Shore.—Here followed a useless debate, which lasted five tedious hours.—At last, they agreed, to have the small Boats brought to this Side, but the Bridge the most dangerous point was to be left untouched.

Towards evening, I, with Chenier, visited Scott; a great number of habitans were, at his house.—They spoke again of the necessity of procuring Arms.—Scott represented that the majority of them had neither Arms, nor ammunition, although he had not ascertained how much, might be found in the Village.—He for one would not lead his friends to be slaughtered.—He was determined to change his lodgings every night, and to think of nothing else but the means of escaping.—

The people gained time to Organize themselves, and to be prepared, as soon as the Rivers would be frozen over, and the Country would be covered with Snow, we should then be able to obtain ammunition from the other side of the lines.—In vain, it was represented to him, that Six weeks might elapse before then, during which time our friends in the South could be annihilated, he succeeded in gaining Chenier to his side, and so the whole population was reduced to a state of deadly inactivity.

This day I left with Chenier, for Grand Brulé.—It is tiresome to hear this man speak even three phrases.—imagine therefore my torture in hearing this eternal babbler make perhaps fine long speeches at each corner of the Road. We met Watts who was going to St. Eustache to get some lead, from Scott; he seemed to be of opinion that it was necessary to march and to make a re-action, in favour of the people.—When we arrived at Grand Brulé, the whole of the inhabitants were summoned to assemble at Messrs. Doumehelle's and Girouard's.—Some persons were sent to make an entrenchment at the foot of the E .—It was commenced by four men but in a short time this number encreased to Ninety Seven.—The work is pretty well done, only, it is rather weak.—It was resolved to strengthen it.

Chenier repeated last night Scotts reasons, and annoyed us greatly with his long speeches and little sense particularly as the people were present.—New arrests were reported.

The battery in Côte St. Pierre is finished. The intrigues of the Priest of St. Hermas against the patriotes were discovered.

Archambault with Monarque have arrived, he brought me a letter from Zoë (Girods wife) who is still, on the Island.—she assures me of the determination of the inhabitants of Pointe Aux Trembles.—Duchesnois has left Varennes.—Pinet and Massue have united to stop the progress of the insurrection.—They have been in Town, where Lafontaine spoke to them against Papineau, and requested them to Sign a Petition and cause it to be signed for the Assembling of Parliament.—He says Papineau is lost and must be sacrificed.—Archambault brought the circular for the Convention of the Members on the Fourth December at Saint Charles.—A Letter signed by O Perrault was annexed to this Circular I observed, in it, that St. Charles in the County of Richelieu had been substituted for St. Pie in the County of St. Hyacinthe I therefore concluded that our concerns in the south must be good. We began to place Picquets at least during the night.

Some new arrests were announced. Courselles and Brazeau inexhaustable babblers, incited the people against the placing of picquets. It was put to the vote whether Girouard or I should go to the Convention.—The Committee for Military affairs and for roads resolved that Girouard should go, and that I should command the Forces here.—During the sitting of the General Committee a letter was received by L. H. Masson signed "Glasgow Capt. of the Royals" demanding that Girouard, Doumehelle and Masson, should be given up as prisoners, otherwise he had orders with his six hundred men, and four field pieces to destroy the village.—When this letter was read, to the Committee, were at first silent; but soon after, there was a great confusion, which it would be difficult to describe, Girouard asked whether the meeting wished that they should give themselves up, or whether they were resolved to defend themselves. To the first he would not object; and as to the latter he would unite with them either to Conquer or to die.—Masson said he would not give himself up, and that he was ready to defend himself, to the last drop of his blood.—all seemed determined to hold out.—Confusion reached its highest pitch and they seemed to be all bewildered.

At last Young De Lormier proposed me as Leader.—While I was endeavouring to impress, on the people the necessity of Keeping themselves, Cool, and quiet, a great part of them left the Assembly.—I then gave the requisite orders, and sent an express to Côte Saint Joseph, where an attack was expected and directed that the people should be placed in the woods to defend themselves. I ordered the same to be done at Petit Brule and along the road, to the Hill. When I left the Assembly I saw, in Doumechelles house, women and children running about I went in, and, I can say that I never saw greater confusion.—I was obliged to threaten the life of the old man in his own house, so as to bring him to order. In the meantime I received information that the whole had originated in a joke, played off by Dr. Forbes of St. Genevieve.—He was arrested and sentenced by a Court martial to furnish a Gun and a Barrell of Powder.—Girouard's journey was resolved upon and put off until to-morrow.—

Friday 24th.

Girouard went to St. Scholastique about five O'Clock P.M.—At ten O'Clock at night, Peltier and Hubert arrived, R. Nelson had sent them to inform us that the troops had had an engagement with the Patriotes at St. Dennis, that W. Nelson had gained the Victory.—One hundred and Ninety Seven Soldiers Killed—Six prisoners.—Three thousand Six hundred catridges.—Six Barrels of powder, and three Field pieces had been taken.—The affair took place yesterday morning.—Just at this moment, I received information that the troops were on their march, from St. Andrews, to take Grande Brulé.—I sent expresses, in every direction.—Girouard was recalled; but, sent back word, that he could not return before to morrow. More than six hundred persons were, with me, in less than, an hour, and assured me that others were coming.—Dr. R. Nelson sent me word that the City was in a state of terror, that there were very few or no troops there, and that his Brother and friends calculated on a diversion on this side of the River.—So I determined, upon going the following day to Montreal, to storm it.—Archambault was despatched with a letter.

Saturday 25th.

The Alarm Bell was rung in Ste. Scholastique.—Girouard returned. He, Barsolone, Chenier the Priest, Doumechelle and myself assembled in Council, I laid my plan before them.—Barsolone spoke at first against it.—Chenier only thought of revenging himself on his enemies in in River Du Chene, and declared he would do nothing else.—Girouard appeared to temporise and the Priest sided with him.—So they resolved to keep on the defensive.—This capital opportunity was lost through their irresolution;—and I repented for the first time that I had placed confidence in persons possessed of so low a character.—I ordered the Loyalists of Côte St Pierre to be disarmed.—We obtained, by this, a great number of Arms; but, as every one commanded and no one obeyed, the arms fell God only knows into whose hands.—

Sunday 26th.

I spent this day with Barsolone doing nothing.—

Monday 27th.

The Report of the Battle of Saint Charles became known and disheartned many.—Having heard different reports we determined, to send a Messenger to Saint Dennis.—I was particularly engaged in organizing our people; but, every thing went on very slow; they gave up the idea of having Volunteers, who may go and come when they please, and who from their Cowardice cannot be relied upon.—Instead of Volunteers it was resolved, to establish a permanent Corps, still the enlisting went on slowly.—

This Corps was to be maintained at the expense of the Priest (a).—But complaints were soon heard.—One said that he (the Priest) should be guarded in His house; but, that the people should not be permitted to enter it; others insisted, upon the right of plundering.—All was confusion.—I went to St James and mustered Twenty men to assist me in disarming the Enemy.—I went to Earls and took from him One Gun and a sword.—I made a requisition for three or four pounds of Iron at five sols per pound about Seventy persons who had joined us behaved themselves very well.—They touched nothing in the Houses, and I paid with my own money four shillings and Six pence, for half a Gallon of Whiskey, to treat them. From there, I returned to St. James and sent to a man of the name of Hall in whose House we found arms.—here I met again with my people.—

We went to Snowdens, from whom we took one Gun.—A Requisition was made for Ninety Seven pounds of lead and twelve Gallons of Rum.—He lent me a Horse.—We hurried, to Ste. Scholastique in hopes of securing the infamous Hortensea Provost (a).—When we arrived she had fled. Her husband gave us two Guns.—

A new alarm was caused by the apprehension of an attack from St Andrews, it turned out to be a false report. I gained this much, by it, that the people of their own accord volunteered, picquets for their protection.—Three persons of the name of McKercher were brought in.—They were accused of being spies, from St Andrews; but, a man of the name of Nichols affirmed that he had sent these men, to look for a child of his.—I invited him to return.—promised him my protection and to defend his cause and his property.—Scott arrived.—This man enjoys, to a great degree, the confidence of the people; but, I cannot trust him.—He proposed to me to undertake an expedition to the Lake of the Two Mountains, where I would find four Cannon, One hundred and fifty Guns, and Sixty Barrels of Powder.—He promised to join me, on Thursday next, about five or Six O'Clock, A.M., with One hundred men from St. Eustache at Carey's Mill, and there to place himself under my command.—We shall see nous verrons.—

Tuesday 23th.

I prepared myself for the Expedition.—Drepedations had been committed under the pretence of punishing the Loyalists.—Some individuals plundered Arms, Cattle and furniture.—I proposed to the Committee to take measures, to put a stop, to these depredations.—

Wednesday.
29th.

About One O'Clock A.M., after half an hours sleep, I left this place, with Eighty men, the most of them were composed of those on whom I had conferred some favors on Monday last.—But few of them belonged to this Village.—Brazeau was our guide.—We intended to advance by the foot path, through the woods, whilst I took the Road to the Mill.—A strict silence was the only means of insuring success; but it is easier to prove to a Goose, that it should not cackle, than to make a Canadian hold his tongue.—I arrived at the Mill at about half five O'Clock A.M.—The sight of so many armed people frightened the Miller.—but I assured him that he would not be molested and in fact the good conduct of my people quieted him and his family.—At last Chenier arrived with about One hundred men, half of them unarmed.—

Scott who promised to join me did not shew himself. The appearance of such an irregular band, under the Command of such a babler, as Chenier, convinced me, that it would be out of my power to maintain good order, or protect private property. To do, in the meantime, what I could, I ordered Chenier to surround the Seminary, as I expected that the presence of their Commanding Officer would keep them in check. To Hubert, I gave charge of the House belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company. To Brazeau, the charge of the House of Captain Ducharris—I ordered Peltier to guard the Road, along the Lake shore, and to Robillard, I gave the command from the margin of the lake, to the Algonkin Village— every thing went on in the best order. I enquired for the Cannons, but was told the Indians had secreted them. As I thought proper to remain, on friendly terms with the Indians, I requested a conference with those of their Chiefs who had remained at Home. Hubert had the House of the Hudson's Bay Company forced open, but he lost a great deal of time, with Fat McTavish, as he allowed him, to dress at his ease, and had not the House and the Yard immediately searched.—At last the lump of flesh got up.—He pretended that he had no arms or ammunition.—We demanded the Keys of the Shop, and powder House. He replied that he could not deliver them up, without being suspected of having conspired, with us, and that we must break open the doors. On my representing, to him, that this would only be a useless destruction of property, he delivered up the Keys, we found, there Eight Guns, Two pounds of powder, about one thousand Two hundred pounds of lead, and a Gun, but the cannon were not to be found. The Clerk told me, that, if we had wanted the Cannon, we ought to have kept the expedition more Secret, that they had been removed and were not to be found there. Chenier gave a receipt for the above and a Barrel of Pork. Hubert had promised old McTavish to allow him to keep his own Gun, and a dagger, which he had got, from his Grandfather; but, he had scarcely turned his back before the Gun was gone. One of Chenier's people had it in his possession and I caused it to be returned. Chenier's Nephew, a Young Man, on whose countenance God has stamped, in large letters, "Thou art a Villian," stole the Dagger, and in spite of all my remonstrances would not return it. Such an example from such a man would of course be imitated by the people. By and bye, a looking Glass, a pair of Scissors, and even a Rosary were missed.—they began to steal sugar, and other articles.—As the two Cheniers could not be persuaded to put a stop to this pilfering, I requested Hubert and Pelletier to establish order among the people. Chenier had succeeded in persuading them that they had a right to take as their own, whatever belonged to the enemy. The Doctor /Chenier/ did not go to the Seminary, and, agreeably surprised me, by waiting for my orders. I entrusted to him, the command of my people, from St. James.—We both entered the House of the Priest—Dufresne. This fine Priest assured us that he had, neither arms, nor powder, and said that as the Cannon belonged to the Seminary, it could not, therefore, be given up—he, very justly, observed that it would not be much for our interest to indispose the Indians, against us. Commanding Chenier, to be orderly and moderate.—I returned and visited every post. After my return I was informed that the Chiefs of the Iroquois were waiting for me, I hastened to their Council House, where Dufresne, and a number of persons were waiting. I give here the whole of the Conversation.

Brother do you recollect, or has your Father, or Grandfather told you, that you, once belonged, to the Kingdom of France? 1st. Girod.

I have seen the French in the time of my Youth.

Chief.

Were you satisfied with the Government?

2nd. Girod.

Our Father, the King of France, was a Good Father.

Chief.

Are you, as happy, under, the English Government, as you have been, under the French? 3. Girod.

I would not like to say that.—

Chief.

Are you not subject, to a Captain who takes from your yearly presents, to enrich himself? 4. Girod.

We have, every year, made useless complaints.—

Chief.

Have you observed, that he receives large, and small, thick, and thin blankets, that he gives you, the small, and the thin, and keeps for himself the large, and the thick blankets? 5. Girod.

That is too true.—

Chief.

Do you know that your Father, the King of England, has ordered that, after the death of an Indian Catholic Missionary, he would be replaced, by a Protestant?— 6. Girod.

I heard it; but, it is long since.—

Chief.

Are the Indians inclined, to unite themselves, with the Protestant English, against the Canadian Catholics? 7. Girod.

Our soul is not united, by a Bond, with the Protestants.—

Chief.

Would you not prefer to be considered, by the Canadians, as their equals, than, by the English, as their Slaves? 8. Girod.

We wish to remain as we are.—

Chief.

The Canadians have suffered so much injustice, from the English Government, that they are resolved, to have nothing to do with them, any more; would you Join the British, to fight, against your white brothers? 9. Girod.

It is hard to chuse between the Father and the Brother; but we know that when the bark is taken from the Tree, the tree decays.— Chief.

You have received arms, from the English, to fight against us? 10. Girod.

We hardly have received what they owed us.—We have two Cannons, which we use, at the time of the procession. (a) Chief.

Will you sell them to us?

11. Girod.

We will not sell them.—When the storm raised the water of the lake, and the wind whistled over the waves, we heard a voice saying, "Thy brother, the Canadian, will come over the mountains and take away thy property, but I said to the voice I cannot believe that my brother will do me any harm, I will go over to him and tell him thou art my brother, and, surely, will not hurt me.—They slander thee, by such a report, but, should it prove true, recollect thou thyself that I am thy Brother, and, before thou strikest, examine thy heart, and thy courage".— Chief.

Your Brother never was your enemy, and never will be; but sell me your arms, I want to use them against my enemies and persecute them.—Where are thy Arms? 12. Girod.

The Guns I sold on the other side of the water, as soon as I received them; The Cannon I have concealed in this House. I will not sell them.—Will you take them by force from me?— Chief.

(a) The Procession of Fete Dieu or Corpus Christi.

14 GEORGE V, A. 1924

13. Girod.

Your Brother will not take your Property from you, but if you like to sell us your Cannon?—

Chief.

Speak no more about it, it pains me to hear it.—

14. Girod.

And if my enemy compels you to use them against me?—

Chief.

Brother I will not interfere in this dispute between you and Your Father, defend Your rights, and when I hear the thunder of your arms, I will consider in my breast whether I am not obliged to assist You.—You have acted as a wise man.—and if you have sown good corn in the Garden of Your Brother, You shall eat of his bread with him.—

Thus ended the conversation I think that the good will of these Sons of nature is a more precious booty, than I could possibly expect to find among our enemies.—Cherrier was, on my return, still, in the Seminary, disputing about Theology, politics, morals, and about the Cannon.—These topics were too much above my comprehension, to induce me, to take a share, in the discussion, So, I only communicated, to him what I had promised the Indians to do, and I repeated, to him, that we should not touch private property.—I took my dinner, as I had not tasted any thing, the whole day, and hastened afterwards, to the House of the Beadle of the Church, where I heard that the Cannon belonged to the Indians. I immediately sent an Order, to Chenier, not to take them, but he already of his own accord had resolved not to take them, and so we returned home.—At about five O'Clock, I arrived at St. Benoit, and met there Messrs. Brown, Montmarquet from Carillion.—They reported the state of the Country, in general, to be very bad, particularly between St. Andrews and St. Benoit; they stated, that they had come, of their own accord, to try, if they could bring matters, to a peaceable termination; "What he possibly could do" (said Brown) (he) "certainly would do."—he had influence, among the highest authorities, and he doubted not but, that, if we only kept quiet, all would go well, Yet.—I answered, that Government would grant a truce upon One condition, only which was, to hang fifty here, fifty there, and as many more, in ten other different places.—I told him, that, as they had no particular message, to us, I thought it my duty, to turn a deaf ear, to those proposals, and that to St. Andrews they had been misinformed.—It was not our intention to attack it, although we should have been justifiable in doing so, as troops had been sent thither.—The arming of the Volunteers, and the occurrences, on the South Side of the Saint Lawrence, had fully convinced us, as to the intentions of Government.—They requested a passport, for the next morning which I promised.—

Friday
1st December.

Brown and Montmarquet went away, about One O'Clock P.M. I was informed, that both of them had visited Mr. Belleau, the Priest, who reported, afterwards, in consequence of the conversation he had with them, that the leaders of Grand Brulé had come, to the determination of treating, with the Government, for the safety of their lives, and the preservation of their property.—leaving the inhabitants to their own fate.—The impression, that this report made on the people, rendered it necessary, to keep up strict order, among them. Towards evening, Brown returned, to go to Montreal. I examined him and he confessed, to have had a conversation, with Belleau, but by no means of that nature which I had mentioned—of which he gave me an acknowledgement in his own hand writing.—He, again, renewed his promises, to serve us.—He took his departure, the next morning for Montreal.—

I sent Chammilly and De Lorimer to the Priest, Belleau, the latter denied the whole, and I insisted upon his remaining at St. Hermas, and his leaving St. Andrews, as I had wished him to do, he only requested permission to go, to the latter place, to fetch the property he had there, and said he would return in a few hours. But; as soon as he was over the line, he sent a man back, to tell us, that he was determined not to return to St. Hermas, unless he were promised That he would not be troubled, by the villians of Grand Brulé. Saturday 2nd December.

Nothing particular occured. The Priest, Chartier, declared, from the Pulpit, that for the defence of their rights, the people must come forward and fight. Girouard appeared, to be displeased at this. Messrs. Olier and Provost came from St. Anne Des Plaines; three days ago they offered one thousand men, out of their Parish.—they stated that the proclamation of the Magistrates as well as, the arrival of the Prisoners, and of the troops, which they had seen had entirely changed the inclination of the People. They said that we should not trust them, any more; Chartier took a part, in the Conversation, and accused Girouard, and the people of Grand Brulé of cowardice. In the whole of my life, my brains were never so put to the rack as this night. Sunday 3rd December.

I received information, that some of my people had allowed themselves to plunder the inhabitants.—I issued a Proclamation forbidding them, under severe punishment to do the like again. Monday 4th.

All was in confusion, the Enemy was approaching, from Montreal and St. Andrews—all were on the alert. It was at length resolved to go to St. Eustache—the fortifications were properly secured, and I went thither in the night. Tuesday 5th.

This morning I found in St. Eustache Twenty Eight men, all from the North. The inhabitants, since Scott deserted us, would not Stir. Wednesday 6th.

I am also assured that the troops, from Montreal, will attack us on three points. These are already at Saint Martin, One hundred and fifty regular troops. I sent Twenty five to Porteous Bridge, to break it down and to watch that post with four men. About Nine O'Clock the Volunteers, from the North began to arrive. It would not be an easy task, to describe the general confusion; possession was taken of those houses, which the inhabitants had deserted. Provisions must be provided. While one party had an abundance the other had scarcely a morsel to eat. The people are under the impression that the village has been delivered over, to them, for Plunder. With a deal of trouble, I saved the handsome furniture of Mr. Dumont, which I sent to Laviolettes. This family and the Massons I so far quieted that they promised to remain here. The Priest Paquin fled to his farm, where he remained quite ill from fear no doubt. Chenier is a lazy and foolish fellow—his Brother is a drunkard, and both cause a deal of confusion, through their bad example. I never in my life was so tired, as this day.

This day, there appeared to be more order—Brien acted, as Quarter Master, and shewed great activity. I saw the Priest Paquin, who began at last to be more quiet.—During last night a robbery was committed at Mr. Bellefeuilles house.—It was plundered of Thirty Thursday 7th.

Three bushels of Corn, and of several valuable articles.—In consequence of Chenier's bad disposition, it will be impossible for me to discover the Malefactors.—I received information that Porteous' Bridge had been examined by an English Engineer, and that it was intended to repair it, especially as the middle Arch had been so little injured as to allow foot passengers to cross it. I despatched old Davis to demolish the Bridge entirely.—

I was informed that the English would leave their Cannon on the other side of the River.—Confusion still continued.—The Leaders would not remain, with the men, and I had some words Chevalier of the Petit Chicot, who was constantly in the House, and did not attend to his Company.—All this convinced me of the impossibility of accomplishing, with such people, any thing rational or conducive to the good of the cause.—

Friday 8th.

This morning, I called out all the Companies, to make them acquainted with the heads of the different departments, and to convince them of the necessity of discipline. Madame Bellefeuille had left her house, and had taken nothing, with her, but, some wearing apparel.—Laviolette assured me that the best order had been kept in this House during the night, between Wednesday and Thursday, it had been plundered; amongst other effects thirty three Bushels of Corn had been removed.—With this robbery, I am sure our people were in no wise concerned.—

This night they broke into the House of one Mitchell and, not satisfied with taking what they liked, they went, into the cellar and Staved a Puncheon of Rum.—the liquor filled the Cellar.

This appears to have been done, by the few Irish, who have joined Our people. Through the goodness of Laviolette, I shall be able to discover the Robber.—I was glad to see the indignation they expressed when, I reported, to the Assembly, the depredations, committed, as it would stamp us with the character of Robbers.—Madame Robillard, and her daughters have returned, and the Priest also. His address, this day, to the people, was what, it ought to have been always, recommending humanity and inoderation, without losing sight of the enthusiasm, necessary, for the defence of their rights. Watts informed me, this evening, that a reward of Five Hundred pounds was offered for me, One Thousand for Papineau, and for Girouard, Brown, Scott, Chenier, Nelson and others, five hundred pounds each.

After the Meeting, I called together, the Staff to form a Plan, for the attack, and the defence, the procuring of Provisions, etc. Spies were numerous, and many were arrested.—

We determined, on an expedition to Saint Therese, and other places, our provisions encreased; but, order and economy were still wanting.—I was already, in bed, when Chamilly awakened me, and reported, that the Irish were killing one another. John Drougha was mortally wounded. He and his Brother were drunkards, and quarrellsome.—they were both put, under arrest.

In the Council of War, they determined, on an expedition to Saint Martin, and it was resolved, to send a Company thither, but Chenier whom I unfortunately allowed to grant passports gave out, that day, about four hundred.—I really believed the fellow, to be a Traitor.

It was reported to me that the Enemy had been, re-inforced at St. Martin.

APPENDIX C

THE BOURLAMAQUE COLLECTION

This collection comprises the papers — letters, instructions, memoranda of various kinds — preserved by Brigadier Bourlamaque at the close of the campaign, which terminated in the Capitulation of September 8, 1760. Bourlamaque came to Canada in May 1756, with Montcalm and de Levis, to whom he stood next in rank in the French armies, which fought in Canada during the Seven Years War. After a period of service at Fort Frontenac (Kingston), and Chouagen (Oswego, N.Y.), he was transferred in 1757 to lake Champlain, and was placed in command of the armies in that region. Here he remained until Amherst's advance compelled his retirement to St. Jean, and finally to Montreal in September 1760. Bourlamaque enjoyed the friendship and confidence of Montcalm. The letters therefore throw unusual light not only on the conduct of the campaign in the interior, but also, on the personalities and social conditions of the time regarding which Montcalm wrote with great freedom.

There are six volumes in the collection, the first three containing the correspondence of Montcalm, Vaudreuil, and de Levis with Bourlamaque. The fourth volume is entitled "Lettres Variarum", and as the title indicates contains the correspondence of several officers with Bourlamaque. The fifth and sixth volumes are miscellaneous in their contents.

The first volume — Lettres Montcalm — contains 616 pages, and 161 letters. Of these 150 are addressed by Montcalm to Bourlamaque and signed by him; and of this number 55 were written entirely by Montcalm. Outside this collection, there are very few Montcalm letters known to exist.

The second volume — Lettres Vaudreuil — contains 546 pages, and 128 letters and other documents. 113 of these are from Vaudreuil, and 13 from Bigot. Only one of Vaudreuil's letters was written by himself. None of the 13 signed by Bigot, were written by him.

The third volume — Lettres Levis — contains 451 pages and 124 letters. These are from de Levis, Bigot, Bougainville and others. Ninety-one letters are from de Levis, 35 being in his own hand.

The Fourth volume — Lettres Variarum — contains 328 pages and 87 letters. They are from Rigaud de Vaudreuil, Governor of Montreal, Doreil, Ordnance-Commissary, Major de Malartic of the Bearn Regiment, Brigadier Senezergues, and Captain D'Hébecourt, Bourlamaque's second in command at Carillon.

The fifth and sixth volumes — Canada 1 Part, and Canada 2 Part — are miscellaneous in character. Together the volumes contain 933 pages. They are made up of Bourlamaque's military commissions, as Colonel of Infantry, and as Brigadier; Governor's Ordinances; instructions from Vaudreuil and Montcalm; accounts of the progress of the campaign in the interior, written by Bourlamaque; copies of the articles of capitulation, and of the officers' protest, the latter drawn up by Bourlamaque; and letters from Amherst. There are also several letters from Ministers in Paris to Bourlamaque.

Bourlamaque's answer to the foregoing letter. Considers winter's position "most brilliant", is sure de Levis will not leave the enemy in the position taken on the 13th. Regrets personal losses of the 13th, rather than any effect it can have on the fate of the colony.

Subjoined account shews whether necessary measure available in present situation of Canada. Enemy aware of French movements; surprise impossible. Attack must be delayed long enough to tire enemy, and to keep him in ignorance of its date and object. Number, and details of troops required, in view of strength of the garrison of Quebec. Operation should take a month; amount of rations to be provided; transport; ladders; measurements to be taken. Trustworthy spies to be engaged; information re garrison, etc. to be obtained by them. Such spies might be supplied by the Jesuits. Secret of attack must be entrusted to certain confidential persons; to be apparently directed against enemy posts at Lorette and Ste. Foie, so as to draw major portion of garrison into the open, and then attack town. Should garrisons remain shut up, surrounding country must be denuded of supplies and inhabitants, so as to starve garrison; their supplies insufficient to last until the arrival of their ships. Other preparations to be made. It must be given out that the force intended for this expedition consists of only five or six thousand men; real numbers must be kept strictly secret; measures to be taken to this end. Need of eight guns; uses to which they may be put. Full particulars and instruction as to method of conducting siege, so as to ensure success.

Draft. Lack of provisions prevents cantonment of troops round Quebec, and blockade of English garrison during winter, and hinders supplies of wood fuel and necessary supplies. Troops go into quarters at the end of November; details of their various stations, enemy positions, etc. Situation of Colony at the end of December: French forces on Champlain frontier; at St. John's, Chambly, and towards Lake Ontario; English garrisons at St. Frederic, Carillon, Forts George, Lydius; on Orange River; at Chouaguen and Niagara. Vaudreuil and de Levis decide on besieging Quebec in the spring; garrison harassed by false alarms during winter; all preparations made as for a winter campaign. Ladders made at Jacques Cartier; troops to be in readiness to march at a moment's notice. De Bougainville and Bourlamaque sent to frontier to cause English governor anxiety; strenuous service and alertness of latter's troops. Vaudreuil decides to collect food and cattle from well-supplied villages below Quebec, on South Shore; ice-bridge formed between Quebec and Levis; English send out strong party; French forced to retire. Reinforced party of 700 men again obliged to retire before 3,000 English: Bourlamaque sends 150 men into villages not held by English to prevent more extended levies, and to procure provisions until the troops should be assembled before Quebec. Remainder of winter passed in various alarms of garrison, on report of attacks from the ice; sorties, etc. Making of gabions, fascines, and other siege materials begun at Point aux Trembles early in March. De Bougainville sent to Isle aux Noix at the beginning of April; enemy attack anticipated in that quarter; all quiet on other frontiers. Arrival of two King's frigates. Troops intended for expedition ordered to leave their quarters on April 20. Details. Troops delayed by ice; only reached Pointe aux Trembles April 24. De Levis receives news of enemy activities at Old Lorette. English entrenchment on Cap Rouge river; their command of main road from Pointe aux Trembles to Quebec. Learns that inhabitants of Quebec, and near Cap Rouge, had been expelled two days previously. Enemy aware of departure of French troops; plan of night landing at Sillery given up in consequence; its advantages. Enemy occupation of heights at the mouth of Cap Rouge river makes landing there impossible. Decides to land at St. Augustin, march to the left; and turn the enemy by following road passing Old Lorette and Ste Foie, and traversing almost impassable woods and swamps. Troops assembled and Canadians organized. Advanced guard formed under Bourlamaque's command, his marching orders. De Levis arrives with remainder of army; learns that enemy has abandoned Lorette church and failed to destroy a wooden causeway across a swamp between it and Ste Foie. Indians sent forward to hold head of causeway, and advanced guard ordered to support them; army advances by two bridges. Bourlamaque crosses swamp and posts advanced guard in houses half a league from enemy; army crosses swamp and takes up position in rear of wood; respective positions of opposing forces. De Levis decides to wait till night to debouch, and to attack enemy at daybreak on left flank; enemy sets fire to Ste Foie church, and retires on Quebec, leaving a force drawn up on the heights to mask his movements. March of French troops delayed by all night storm; daybreak attack on Ste Foie church, as intended, rendered impossible. Gives enemy time to save their detachments on Cap Rouge. Enemy learns French movements; boats with guns carried away by ice; gunner taken prisoner to Quebec; English governor takes measures to avert surprise. French advance immediately on retreat of enemy; advance guard close behind them; enemy halt on heights at half league from Quebec; French occupy houses near by (details given of Canadian settlements as compared with those in France.) Enemy abandons his position during the night and falls back on the Butte à Neveu 300 yards from the walls of Quebec; seen throwing up entrenchments at daybreak; positions occupied by French; de Levis' intention to land guns, and not to attack heights till next day. Enemy sortie from Quebec at 8 a.m. against French; drawn up in front of heights occupied by them. Details of positions taken up by

French; attacks by grenadiers and brigades on the left; particulars of actions on the right; units engaged; enemy attacked on flank and routed. Great losses of enemy in spite of his advantage of position. His purpose in forming up in front of heights occupied by him. Details of enemy's position. De Levis occupies heights abandoned by enemy; engineering preparations for breach of walls. Parallel completed and three batteries constructed. Batteries open fire; superiority of English artillery. De Levis reduces number of batteries, whilst awaiting supplies of guns and provisions from Europe; passage of French ships facilitated by his position. Two ships of the line arrive at Quebec; de Levis prepares to retire; French frigates unable to meet enemy vessels; or to protect supply transports. Orders given to withdraw batteries to the Anse au Foulon. Transports attacked by English ships of the line and two frigates; ordered to beach at the mouth of Cap Rouge river; officer in command made prisoner opposite Point aux Trembles. Fire of English ship from Quebec, anchored off Anse au Foulon, prevents embarkation of siege guns. De Levis abandons trenches, and retires, in good order, with light artillery, to Cap Rouge river. Receives news of arrival of eight or ten more ships in Quebec roads; withdraws behind Jacques Cartier river; loss of transports in northerly gale. Had no hope of taking Quebec with forces at his disposal; intended to confine garrison within walls, and prevent outside work on front attacked, until arrival of reinforcements asked from France. Non-success of attack of April 28 due to inferior artillery; lack of all relief from Europe forces de Levis to abandon his position. Return of officers killed and wounded during the siege.

Captain John Leverett to Cromwell. Expedition against the Dutch on the Hudson brought to an end by the conclusion of peace. Major Sedgwick, who set out on July 4th to attack the French coast of Acadia, reached on the 14th Fort St. John's, which surrendered on the 17th, with 70 men and 18 pieces of ordnance, under Mr. Latour. About the 31 July, he sailed to Port Royal, which had a garrison of 150 men, only 20 less than Sedgwick's party. They laid an ambush of about 40 men, between the landing and the fort. There was an exchange of fire with the landing party and a hand-to-hand fight. The French retreated to the fort, which surrendered. It contained 18 pieces of ordnance and some small stock fowlers and bases with a good quantity of ammunition. Leaving an English garrison, as he did at St. John's, Sedgwick sailed to Penobscot, taken from the English, eighteen years before, now a strong post, which was delivered up on Sept. 2. There were there eight pieces of ordnance and three smaller pieces with ammunition. There is to be a solemn service of thanksgiving on the 20 Sept. for this success. (Photostat copy).

DesBarres to Dundas. Gratitude for his answer of the 26 Sept. 1791 to his letter of 17 Sept. asking for a trial of his case. Hopes there is no more obstacle in the way to a decision. There was in Nova Scotia a party of officers and traders opposed to the settlement of Cape Breton from fear of curtailment of their importance or profits. They did everything to ruin the enterprise. Six of the civil and military officers entered into a combination to oppose all undertakings and made allegations to the Colonial Office against him. He asks for copies of these and to be tried upon the following: 1. Remonstrance and petition of A. Cuyler, David Matthews, I. Hurd, B. Lovel, Thos. Uncle, Wm. Smith, Jonathan Tremaine, Thos. White, Jones, John Storey, Alex. Gordon, addressed to Lord Sydney. 2. Representations of John Drummond urged by M. M. Champion and Dicason, London merchants. 3. Complaints of James Kavanagh, transmitted by Rashleigh & Co. who wanted to maintain a monopoly of the trade with Nova Scotia. 4. Complaints of Samuel Sparrow, through Harrison & Co. Sparrow was a trader, who having sold articles to the government, seized DesBarres' property for payment. 5. Complaints of Thomas Hurd. 6. Charges having levied troops without the consent of Parliament and of having fitted out an expedition against a friendly nation. From Lord Sydney's correspondence with him, the case cannot be fully understood, as he contented himself with reporting to him the actual state of things, denying all complaints generally, and many letters remained unanswered or, after long delay, but partially answered. He was told that his letters and the explanations of the Chief Justice, whom he sent to England, were ¹⁷⁹³ insufficient to remove allegations against him, but how could it be otherwise, when such allegations were never communicated to him. The correspondence shows a complete lack of knowledge, so the only way out is a public and impartial trial. It is of no use to say that the incriminating papers are not in the office. That would be strange and also suspicious. But he can furnish a copy of the Remonstrance and Petition No. 1. He could also prepare a summary of all the facts with the complaints, and have it printed. And he is ready to stand by the judgment of any competent persons on the matter. He is ready to risk anything for a trial at any rate. The pretence of Lord Sydney for withdrawing it—that he did not know whether the government was authorized to recall or remove him—cannot deprive him of his right to a trial. Besides one cannot be removed without being proved guilty, which guilt can only result from hearing both sides. During the war, he received praises from Townshend, Amherst, etc. In Newfoundland, he contributed to the army's success. He made a survey of the principal harbours there, and also of the harbour of Halifax, and it was proposed to him to survey the coast of Nova Scotia. Thus he was led to compose and publish the Atlantic Neptune, after twenty years of hard work, losing in the meantime his opportunity of preferment. He has not even been paid all his expenses. Still this book is one of the most useful works of the kind and has been very useful to the navy and commerce. At the time, the Board of Trade was in a tottering situation, so he had to rely on his own and friends' resources to finish his book. He did not secure the military preferment he was entitled to, but only recommendation for some mark of the Royal favour for his services. Accordingly the following year, he was appointed to Cape Breton. Such being the case, how could Lord Sydney destroy his character without a trial? He cannot submit to that. Is it not the duty of government to protect faithful servants? Had the minister fulfilled his promises of help and considered the difficulties of the situation, the officer, who was charged with creating the settlement and who accounted for everything, should have been treated with liberality, not with distrust. His difficulties were inconceivable: three vessels, loaded with provisions, were successively seized. Still the infant colony succeeded in exporting £40,000 in one year. It could have become a source of supplies for our West Indian Islands and secured us the chief part of the carrying trade of North America. The government not only did not communicate to him the complaints, but even restored officers he had suspended. Then government money ceased to be issued to his agent. This brought an inundation of protested bills, which he tried to settle from his personal resources. In October 1787, he left for England and his property has since been plundered. When leaving, two trunks of papers were stolen. He had to pay £200 for the old vessel which brought him to Jersey. Hearing that a watch was kept to seize him on account of the protested bills, he asked Lord Sydney for a safe conveyance to London, but without result. He succeeded in gaining London secretly in April 1788 and reached a sanctuary in the vicinity of Whitehall. He presented himself to the Colonial Office, demanding a speedy trial, but was told he was still the lieutenant-governor of Cape Breton and that justice would be done to him. He had not a guinea to himself, and was constantly visited by the holders of the protested bills. Then stopping all payments, the Secretary of State had recommended paying £7,000, but both the Colonial Office and the Treasury Board did nothing about it. He then heard through his friends of the accusations and calumnies circulated. He was petrified with astonishment and urged the Colonial Office to give a speedy trial. Communications followed for ten months. The Secretary of State relegated him to the Under Secretaries and then always prevented any progress. They tried to deter him from a trial, on account of the uncertainties of the complaints, arguing that he was not supposed to incur expense in Cape Breton, nor spend money for barracks or the relief of the people and the best thing was to have his accounts passed. But he still insisted on a trial. The pretence that no expense was to be incurred is astonishing: Cape Breton was to be reserved for the Loyalists. Haldimand was asked to send Loyalists there at the public expense and the Secretary told DesBarres to accommodate them with provisions and articles of bounty. The Secretary of State forgot that barracks were to be built. The measure was imposed on him. Besides it was a necessity. The expenditure of which he gives the details, incurred for the Loyalists, the barracks, wages, etc., amounted to £22,366. This is less than in the original plan. Had he known it was not to be executed, he could have realized some saving. But they had to live in continual suspense and to buy what supplies they could at any terms. The barracks were built very cheaply and the government has already saved more than their cost. He has seen a paper intitled "Remonstrance and Petition of the Principal Inhabitants of Cape Breton," which was exhibited by Mr. Hurd, who was suspended for misconduct from his office of surveyor in Cape Breton. He asked the Colonial Office for an official copy, but could not get it, nor copies of the Secretary of State's report, or of any complaint. Always some pretext being used for a refusal. Though a public servant may be removed as an executive measure, this does not extend to refusing a trial before punishment. As one of the Under Secretaries swore one day that he would ruin him, perhaps here is to be found the explanation of his difficulties. The complaints are linked with the accounts, since the former were examined in connection with the latter. And the Lords of the Admiralty could not proceed upon the accounts without first ascertaining the facts by a trial. If the reports to the Treasury had not included part of the complaints, the accounts could have been dealt with without reflecting on his conduct. The accounts could have been rejected, and he would have been a great loser, but then he would not have been considered a criminal but a meritorious man, having founded a colony. After ten months, the Secretary of State decided to refer the case to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, on 21 February 1789. This measure, without a previous trial, could bring no result as he was officially prejudged and could not expect any attention. It simply meant hanging up the case and so it proved to be. He was refused all copies of reports and nothing was done. But the importunity of Mr. John Drummond, one of the complainants, succeeded in bringing about an examination of his claims and complaints by the Comptrollers of the Army Accounts and they were not found to be what they were represented. Some of the holders of the protested bills began to agitate in order to find whether anything was done to him. Fearing longer postponement, the government at the end of 1789 issued £10,000 for¹⁷⁹³ payment of the bills, but only £7,171 went to pay the original, the rest being absorbed by interests and expenses. An arbitration decided the claims of Mr. Sparrow to be unfounded and his own conduct in the administration of Cape Breton, to be conducive to his honor, and suggested a more complete enquiry. At the request of the Secretary of State who said part of the original and duplicate vouchers had been lost, he presented the triplicates he had retained. One of the secretaries of the Treasury, Mr. Steele, compared them with the accounts and declared himself satisfied. But later they were missed from the office and he had to obtain an official acknowledgment before the Court of Exchequer for the lost vouchers. Then followed a long official silence, during which some of the complainants were privately examined and reports by Col. Macarmick laid before the Board. Out of this investigation a great number of queries of all kinds were submitted to him. It would have taken months to answer them. Evidently there was an intent to prolong the proceedings or raise some reason to postpone the public trial asked for. Therefore unwilling to submit any longer to a secret proceeding before the Board, he wrote to them, protesting against its proceeding with the case, before a trial was duly granted to him. Without answering, the Board addressed further queries, which relating solely to the accounts, were answered by him. He only wants justice. He was anxious to serve his country and deserve commendation. He had so far succeeded well enough, and now he has been stripped of everything. He asks to be reimbursed the residue of his expenses in publishing the Atlantic Neptune; that the preferment lost in the army may be made up in the course of time; that the government of Cape Breton be restored to him; that his losses may be paid to him; that he may be tried upon all complaints and accusations.

Memorial of Lieutenant Governor DesBarres to the Lords Com-^{May 10.} missioners of the Treasury. The memorialist represents that, in 1755, he had sufficient property. In 1756 he went to Pennsylvania and Maryland, where he raised 327 recruits. In 1757 he commanded a party of volunteers against the Indians of Canada, and secured their friendship. In 1758 at Louisbourg, he attacked with success an entrenchment and battery. His conduct was mentioned to the King by General Wolfe, and he was, as a result continued an engineer in the expedition against Quebec in 1759. He made a survey of the town and the harbour, after the capitulation. In 1760, he was detached with 500 men to establish a post at Cap Rouge. After the defeat of General Murray, the Commanding Engineer, Col. Mackellar being wounded, his services were useful in the defence of Quebec. After the conquest, he was sent to Halifax to make plans and estimates for fortifying the dockyards at Halifax. In 1762, he took part in the expedition for the retaking of St. Johns in Newfoundland, serving as Engineer and Quarter-Master-General. After the peace, promises of promotion induced him to accept the surveying of the coasts and harbours. After ten years' work, the king was pleased to order the publication of his survey. During the American war he was employed by the Board of Trade to adapt various surveys to nautical purposes. After twenty years' services, he claimed promotion and reimbursement of expenses. In 1784 the Admiralty Board paid for the work done under its direction, but the rest remained unsettled. This put him in the apparent situation of not having served his country, but he kept hoping that the nation would not desire to benefit by his personal loss. He drew attention to the resources and advantages of Cape Breton. In 1784, to assist Loyalists, the government decided to colonize this island and he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the troops. He was promised every requisite and support and instructed to invite settlers. The government was in the habit of supplying the Loyalists and Soldier settlers with provisions. In the absence of expected support, he carried on the work, reporting that the emigrants were helped and the colony established with such results that in one year the colony exported to the value of £40,000. Then on the ground of pretended complaints, he was recalled home but without being communicated the particulars of them. His credit was stopped, the bills negotiated for the service came back on him, his property was seized and he was left in complete distress. On his return to England, he was promised justice. On his claiming an investigation, he was charged with having spent lavishly large sums of money. On his refuting these charges, he was led into an explanation of his administration, which brought about an inquiry, which suddenly stopped, and only the matter of his accounts was resumed. Incidentally, he came to the knowledge of other imputations, and as such had been the cause of his recall, he claimed right to a trial, which was promised, but not conceded. Considering the success of the new establishment, he was entitled to a liberal view of his conduct. As to his accounts, he explained their necessity, reported the current expenditure and proposed a plan to be followed till he received instructions. The bills were drawn, the agent paid and advised to continue the same course. Still later his credit was stopped without explanations. The bills should have been examined regularly and, if found defective, observations transmitted, according to practice, but he was hastily condemned. He was given no justice, and the Commissioners for auditing the public accounts were misled by misinformations and they reported a list of disallowances. But his observations are before the minister. As to the two items, one of £268 is claimed by a Mr. Andrews, which the memorialist has nothing to do with; and the other represents bills paid by Sir Herbert Mackworth & Co. The Commissioners make the mistake of including a sum which should be deducted. But it is only when proper attention is afforded that he can explain the whole case. Divested of his property, wounded in his feelings, he prays that copies of complaints be supplied him and opportunity be given of vindicating his honor, also that he should be compensated for his past work and services. will write an abstract of his transactions. He received no letter from Lord Sydney or the Treasury limiting expenses for stationery or a private secretary. The expenses had then been incurred and paid by himself before he knew of the report. ¹⁷⁹⁶

T. Steele to the Duke of Portland. At his request and that of the Board of Treasury, has examined the memorial of DesBarres. In 1763, DesBarres was appointed to survey the coasts of Nova Scotia by the Board of Admiralty. He was to receive 20 shillings per day and an allowance for instruments and stationery. In 1769, he presented a demand for contingent expenses amounting to £623. The Board allowed him only £132, charged for purchase of instruments and ten guineas per annum for instruments and stationery. In 1770, he asked for a larger allowance as well as for allowance for house rent, etc., without success. In 1779, five years after his return to England, he presented a bill for contingent expenses not authorized, which was rejected. In 1781, he presented a memorial to the king, claiming £4,214 and the Board of Admiralty recommended payment of only £1,200. The report was referred again to the Board, and a change having taken place in the administration, the new Board recommended payment of the whole less £300. This payment in 1782 was so ample as to dispose of any complaint that he was insufficiently paid for that service. In 1774, DesBarres returned to England and it was understood with the Admiralty that he was to publish his book at his own expense and profit, but the Board later on agreed to allow him 35 guineas per plate. Consequently a sum of £3,711 was granted by Parliament and issued to DesBarres. The allowance of 20 shillings per day was paid to him from 1763 to August 1779. In 1777, the Board of Trade made an agreement with DesBarres to adapt to nautical use certain surveys at the rate of 35 guineas per plate, with 20 shillings per day. The work ended in 1780. There was no complaint of DesBarres at any time. He received payment for 247 plates. He was paid by the Admiralty 20 shillings per day from 1763 to 1779, and received the same from the Board of Trade, so that he was in the receipt of 40 shillings per day for nearly three years. The Admiralty actually paid for the copies they were furnished with. The plates were left to DesBarres. On that point DesBarres has no claim whatever against the public. In 1784, on the recommendation of General Conway, DesBarres was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Cape Breton. His settling there with his family must have meant considerable expenditure. The difficulties met with were so great that allowance ought to have been made for the irregularities in the accounts and errors of judgment. At the outset he tried to form an estimate of the probable expenditure and sent it home. He drew cheques which were at first paid, but as the amounts appeared likely to exceed expectation and accounts were not made in the regular way, the Board of Treasury refused to pay the bills. The colony was soon reduced to distress and divided into factions. The Secretary of State, on the information of Cape Breton people, suspected DesBarres of errors of judgment and, dissatisfied with the state accounts, directed him to return to England and await instructions. On the arrival of Lieut.-Col. Macarmick to act during his absence, DesBarres sailed for England. The bills drawn and unpaid accumulated to so large an amount that the holders seized DesBarres' property. On his arrival in England, he was in fear that his person would also be seized. In September 1786, Lord Sydney recommended payment of several sums upon account, but the Treasury did not think proper to issue any money till convinced of the propriety of the expenditure. In February 1789, Lord Sydney recommended payment of great part of DesBarres' demands. DesBarres reached London in the spring of 1788, and pressed at once for an inquiry, but nothing was done in 1788 and during the greater part of 1789. The writer, at that time secretary to the Treasury, suggested paying a certain sum on account and made an examination of the accounts. On his report, the Board paid £10,000 which discharged £7,171 of the principal debt, the remainder being applied to interest and expenses. DesBarres continued from month to month and from year to year to press for a final settlement and inquiry, but it was only in October 1791 that the Commissioners for auditing the public accounts were directed to proceed with the case. But owing to the loss in the department of many of the vouchers, the report was only made in February 1793. It admitted that a balance of £2,213 was due to DesBarres, but disallowed various sums amounting to £3,549. DesBarres remonstrated with the Board, which allowed another sum of £1,500, making a total of £3,700 due to him. He has explained the report and DesBarres' explanations. The auditors and the Board could not, limited by their constitutions, accept the accounts disallowed. But the writer having to state his opinion as to the equity of DesBarres' claims, thinks he should be allowed the whole sum that was disallowed, except for a sum of £33 and some other trifling accounts. Consequently he should be allowed about £2,000, although there are no proper vouchers. Reviewing the whole case, here is his judgment: DesBarres is not entitled to the £1,207, claimed for his first period of service, nor to the payment demanded for advances, while engraving the Atlantic Neptune; but there should be repaid with interest, a sum of £302-11-10 paid for fees. As Lieutenant-Governor of Cape Breton, he should be allowed the above sum of £2,000 without interest, but is entitled to 5% interest on the £3,700 admitted from 1787 to date. As since this return, a long period elapsed before his accounts were examined and he was in almost daily attendance at the government offices, he should be allowed a sum equal to half his salary from his last payment to the end of 1793.

The Canadian Government deserves much credit for its sensible conduct, fully appreciated here. Will keep Archibald's despatch secret. It was imprudent to reduce so much the forces at Fort Garry. There were newspaper articles about the withdrawal of troops from Canada. There is no slight to Canada, or intention of abandoning her. The only question is whether Canada, with three million people, should not undertake her own defence, England undertaking to garrison Halifax. Canada governing herself, it is more natural that she should control her own defence. It is nonsense to say that we abandon the fortress of Quebec. Who are "we"? We are fellow subjects (Incomplete).

This year the Company is putting up a saw-mill, and fortifying Port La Joie. Was unable to secure him a position in Canada. As to his proposal to build a ship at Isle St. Jean, the Company wants one of 300 tons. Has he good carpenters? He must use oak, not beech. Continuation of mining discovery by Denis de la Ronde. In 1736, spoke to Beauharnois of his discovery, asked for miners and sent ore to France. In 1737, went back to his post and only found copper. In 1738, met at Sault Ste. Marie the two German miners, the Forsters, who said they had discovered no mines. Took them to Chagouamigon and sent them to River Tonagane. They found copper but no mine. On River St. Anne, they found two mines, very good, and water-falls, and suitable lands and wood for an establishment. On Black River, they found a very good mine. In 1739, an Indian brought a piece of copper from a rock on the Tonagane River. The party sent to examine it reported the rock to be a good mine. Went back to Sault Ste. Marie. Started an establishment on St. Anne River, to consist of a fort, barracks, stores, forge and furnaces. Brought the miners back. All the way on the Grand River they noted mining veins, and one at the Chaudiere. There shall be one establishment on the St. Anne River with miners and workers sent from Germany, also two miners more for the Chaudiere, a more suitable place, so close to Montreal. He must establish a settlement at the mines. Land is very good. His communications will be from Sault Ste. Marie up a river near Machidache, for five leagues, thence a land road of eight leagues will bring him into Lake Ontario. This would avoid part of Lakes Huron and Erie and the Niagara portage. The other portage should be called Toronto.

Duplicates the previous statement of 1727 up to that year; 1728-1733 attached to the Quebec garrison. 1734, went on mining discoveries; 1736-39, these years are covered by the above document; 1740, went back to his post and met his son, who said the fort at the mines was built.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

The undersigned has the honour to lay before Your Excellency the accompanying report of the Civil Service Commission of Canada for the year ending December 31, 1923.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTHUR B. COPP,

Secretary of State.

OTTAWA, April 2, 1924.

APRIL 2, 1924.

The Honourable ARTHUR B. COPP,
Secretary of State of Canada.

SIR,—In conformity with the provisions of Section 36 of the Civil Service Act, 1918 (as amended by Chapter 10 of the Statutes of 1919, Second Session), I have the honour to submit herewith a report of the proceedings of the Civil Service Commission of Canada for the year ending December 31, 1923.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

WILLIAM FORAN,
Secretary.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS

In compliance with the requirements of section 36 of the Civil Service Act, the Civil Service Commissioners beg to submit their report for the calendar year 1923.

During the year the Commission has conducted 1,513 civil-service examinations—an increase of 143 over 1922—at which some 16,000 persons competed. As in previous years, the assistance given the Commission by officers of the various departments, in preparing and rating examination papers, as well as by scientific and professional men in the business world, has kept the cost of holding these examinations at a remarkably low figure, the entire expenses for the year for outside examiners being less than $600. The acknowledgments of the Commission are particularly due to those whose names are given on pages VII and VIII, the majority of whom served as members of Advisory Examining Boards without remuneration of any kind, and through whose active interest and unselfish work the merit system has been greatly assisted.

From the tables published in the appendix it will be noted that during the year, 1,579 appointments have been made in the various departments of the public service to positions of a continuous or permanent character (exclusive of rural postmasters and seasonal employees); the number of appointments during the previous twelve months was 1,621. Table I, which deals with this feature of the Commission's work, indicates the department to which the appointment was made, the class of position and salary, whether the appointee was an ex-service man, a disability preference, or a widow entitled to the Overseas Military Service preference under section 39 (3) of the Act as amended in 1921. Other tables give particulars of the promotions and transfers effected within the same period.

During the year, 1,048 separations from the Service were reported to the Commission, so that 531 additions were seemingly made to the establishments of the various departments. These, it may be presumed, were consequent upon increased departmental activities. As the Department however are not required by the Act to report retirements to the Commission, no definite statement as to the actual addition or otherwise to the personnel of the Service can be here made. In this connection it may be pointed out that no appointment is made by the Commission except upon the requisition of a department, signed by the deputy minister thereof or his duly appointed representative, nor is any employee sent to a department except upon such authority. A department also has the right to reject an employee in case his services prove unsatisfactory.

In conjunction with departmental officers, the Commission during 1923 made substantial progress in organization work in the following departments: Customs and Excise, Interior, Marine and Fisheries, National Defence and Post Office. Seven separate branches of the Post Office Department, namely, Expenditure, Money Order, Postage Stamp, Postal Note, Revenue, Salary Warrant, and Savings Bank, were consolidated into a major Financial Branch, and a Hollerith accounting system installed for the audit of money orders. Establishments were also drawn up for the Secretary's Branch and the Postal Service Branch of the department, and the reorganization of the District Superintendents' offices was completed, the net saving in staff expenditure being approximately $250,000. In the Department of Customs and Excise, staff establishments have been fixed for that portion of the department outside of Ottawa. In the Department of Marine and Fisheries, a partial reorganization of the Chief Engineer's Branch was undertaken. In the Department of National Defence, establishments were prepared for various branches, resulting in a saving of some 130 positions, and approximately $150,000, while minor adjustments were made in other establishments already approved. In the Department of the Interior an establishment was drawn up for the Secretary's Branch and a staff saving of $45,000 made, while work is now proceeding in connection with the survey branches, the Accounts Branch, various land branches, and the amalgamation of the Water Power and Reclamation Services.

The Commission now has a number of experienced officers who are well qualified to undertake in conjunction with departmental officers the reorganization of any branch or division of the Public Service. It is the opinion of the Commissioners that with the co-operation of departmental officers improvements and reductions in the establishments of some of the departments can be made and a substantial saving of public money thereby effected.

During the last session of Parliament, a special select committee was appointed to investigate the operation of the Civil Service Act (Chapter 12, 1918). A voluminous report of the evidence taken and the findings of that committee was tabled in the House of Commons towards the close of the session and at the request of the Government, action thereon was deferred until the ensuing session. It may be observed, however, that from the Commission's standpoint the conclusions reached by the committee were for the most part satisfactory, confirming as they did the value of the merit system, making certain recommendations for the better administration of the law, and approving some suggestions of the Commission for amendments to the Act regarded as likely to render more simple the administration thereof. As this report is still awaiting the action of Parliament, further comment thereon would be out of place at the present time.

Six years' experience on the part of the Commissioners in administering the present Act has developed even increasing evidence of public approval and support. Its application to a Service built up as was that of the Dominion, involved a vast amount of routine detail but now that this has been disposed of it has been found possible to materially reduce the Commission's staff. At its peak some two hundred and eighty employees, permanent and temporary, were on the Commission's payroll, but the number of permanent employees has been reduced to one hundred and twenty-seven, and the small staff of temporary clerks will be dispensed with in the near future.

During 1923 the Regulations of the Commission formulated under the authority of section 4, subsection 2, and section 37 of the Civil Service Act, were revised and received the approval of His Excellency the Governor General in Council on the 10th December. The revision was based upon the experience gained during five years' administration of the present Act and the changes made will it is believed materially increase the efficient and smooth operating of the law.

Both the country and the personnel of the service heard with satisfaction the announcement of the Right Honourable the Prime Minister at the close of the session in 1923, that it was the intention of the Government to introduce a permanent superannuation measure during the ensuing session. This policy has been strongly advocated by the Commission in its annual reports for a number of years past. There can be no doubt that an adequate measure of superannuation will very materially assist in the work of reorganization by providing an adequate means for the retirement of many faithful servants without undue hardship.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 24

The application of the Public Service Retirement Act of 1920 has resulted in the retirement of 1,289 officers. As 510 of the vacancies so created did not require to be filled, while many of the remainder were taken over by officers drawing a lower salary rate, the net saving through the operation of the Act is estimated to have been well over $640,000. It is reasonable to anticipate that a permanent superannuation measure will operate along the same lines, but with even greater advantage to the cause of efficiency and economy.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. J. ROCHE, Chairman.

M. G. LAROCHELLE,

CLARENCE JAMESON,

Dominion of Canada.*

MY LORD,—

I have the honour to lay before Your Excellency the annual report of the Department of External Affairs for the year 1922-23.

I have the honour to be, my Lord,

Your Excellency's obedient servant,

W. L. MACKENZIE KING,
Secretary of State for External Affairs

OTTAWA, October 31, 1923.

REPORT OF THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

The Right Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING, C.M.G., M.P., Secretary of State for External Affairs,
Ottawa.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit the usual review of the principal matters which have engaged the attention of the department during the past year.

EUROPEAN WAR

The final steps towards formally ending the war by concluding peace with Turkey were taken by the assembling at Lausanne in November, 1922, of a conference of representatives of the Allied Powers and of Turkey. After sessions lasting some ten weeks, a draft general Treaty of Peace, with drafts of eight related treaties dealing with subordinate questions, was presented to the Turkish Delegation by the Delegation of the Allies. These drafts were not acceptable to the Turks, and the sessions were broken off. Further negotiations however brought about the re-assembling of the conference, with the result that the Peace Treaty and some fourteen subsidiary documents were signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923. All these agreements still await ratification.

TREATIES WITH FOREIGN POWERS

Agreement with Japan.—By an exchange of notes, dated November 30, 1922, an arrangement was concluded with Japan, providing for the reciprocal recognition to the tonnage measurements recorded in the certificates of registry of Japanese and British ships. Canada shares in this agreement with the right of separate withdrawal on giving twelve months' notice to terminate the agreement.

Commercial Treaty with France.—Mr. Fielding, the Minister of Finance, and Mr. Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, being in Europe as Canadian delegates to the Assembly of the League of Nations, negotiated a commercial treaty with France, which was signed on December 15, 1922. By its provisions Canada receives for certain named products the benefit of the French minimum tariff, and for other named products the benefit of specified percentages of reduction from the general tariff, such percentages always to be as favourable as those granted by France to the United States. To other Canadian products the rates of the tariff of 1910 are to be applicable as soon as they are applicable to United States products, and when not so applicable a reduction of 25 per cent of the difference between the French maximum and minimum tariffs shall be given on these Canadian products.

In addition to special advantages on named articles, France receives for her products generally "most favoured nation" tariff treatment in Canada. National treatment in regard to the protection of trade marks, etc., and the prevention of unfair competition is reciprocally conferred, and "most favoured nation" treatment for the nationals of either country in the territory of the other is assured. The treaty having been approved by the Parliament of Canada and by the French Chambers, ratifications were duly exchanged on September 5, 1923.

Treaty of Commerce with Italy.—A Treaty of Commerce between Canada and Italy was also negotiated in London by Messrs. Fielding and Lapointe, and signed on January 4, 1923. It provides for "most favoured nation" treatment of the products and manufactures of either country when imported into or exported to the other, and for their immunity from all transit duties in passing through the territory of the other. This treaty was confirmed by the Parliament of Canada on June 13, 1923, and now awaits ratification.

Covenant of the League of Nations.—Amendments to Articles 4, 13, 15 and 26 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, adopted by the second assembly in October, 1921, were ratified on behalf of Canada on February 3, 1923.

Extradition Treaty with United States.—A supplementary Extradition Convention with the United States adding to the list of extraditable offences as between Canada and the United States, wilful desertion or wilful non-support of wife or children, which had been signed at London on January 15, 1917, having been laid before the United States Senate for ratification, was amended by that body on April 27, 1921, by the omission of the reference to desertion or non-support of wife, leaving the offences as regards minor or dependent children alone, as additions to the list. Canada having accepted this amendment, it became necessary to sign the convention afresh. This was accordingly done at London on May 15, 1922, ratifications being exchanged at the same place on July 28, 1922.

Treaty with United States for Protection of the Pacific Halibut Fishery.—The International Fisheries Commission, created in 1918, had recommended the conclusion of a treaty between Canada and the United States to provide, among other objects, for protection of the halibut fisheries off the Pacific coast. As difficulty was encountered in concluding a treaty to carry out these recommendations in their entirety, it was suggested by Canada that the protection of the halibut fishery alone should be made the subject of a separate treaty. Such a treaty was, therefore, arranged and signed at Washington by Mr. Lapointe, as Canadian Plenipotentiary, and by the United States Secretary of State, as American Plenipotentiary, on March 22, 1923. In ratifying it, the United States Senate introduced a proviso that the nationals of other parts of Great Britain (explained as intended to mean the British Empire) should be bound by its provisions. This action on the part of the Senate operated a change in the situation which has so far delayed ratification of the treaty by Canada.

International Metric Convention.—The International convention of October 6, 1921, amending the convention of May 20, 1875, in relation to the metric system, to which Canada is a party, was ratified on February 21, 1923.

Industrial Property Convention.—Legislation having been passed by Parliament at its recent session to make possible compliance with the provisions of the International Industrial Property Convention, signed at Washington on June 2, 1911, Canada's accession to that convention was duly notified to take effect from September 1, 1923.

International Refrigeration Convention.—An international convention for the creation at Paris of the International Refrigeration Institute, with the object of promoting generally the teaching of the science of refrigeration and its application, signed by Mr. Philippe Roy on behalf of Canada on January 19, 1921, was, with the Canadian Government's concurrence, ratified by His Majesty on January 24, 1923.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 25

Arbitration Conventions with the United States and with France.—With Canada's concurrence the Arbitration Convention between His Majesty and the United States of April 4, 1908, was renewed for a further period of five years from June 4, 1923, by the exchange of notes dated June 23, 1923, between His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington and the United States Secretary of State.

Similarly the Arbitration Agreement with France, originally concluded October 14, 1903, was again renewed for a period of five years from October 14, 1923, by notes exchanged at Paris August 29, 1923.

Modification of International Air Convention, of 1919.—The International Commission for Air Navigation, set up in accordance with the provisions of Article 34 of this convention, held its first meeting at Paris on July 11, 1923, subsequent meetings being held at London in October and at Brussels in February and March, 1923, Canada's interests being represented on the Commission by Major General Sir W. S. Brancker, the permanent representative of Great Britain. Under powers conferred by the convention, a protocol was prepared at the October meeting, modifying Article 5 so as to allow of special arrangements for flight over their territories being made between parties to the convention and non-adhering States. This protocol was approved by Canada and signed on her behalf at Paris on April 9, by the Honourable P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London.

CONFERENCES

Assembly of the League of Nations.—The Third Assembly of the League of Nations met at Geneva on September 4, the sessions continuing until September 30, 1922, Canada's delegates to the Assembly being the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and the Hon. P. C. Larkin, High Commissioner for Canada at London. Canada's proposal made in the previous assembly for the amendment of the Covenant of the League by the elimination of Article 10, failing to obtain any general approval, a new proposal was put forward by the Canadian delegation for the addition of words directing the Council, in advising as to the means to be taken to carry out the obligation imposed by the article, to take into account the political and geographical circumstances of each State, and providing for the consent of the Parliament or Legislature of any member, as a necessary condition, before it should be obliged to engage in an act of war. This proposal meeting with strong opposition, its further consideration was postponed until the Fourth Assembly.

The question of the status of Eastern Galicia being still unsettled, Mr. Fielding moved a repetition of a motion of the previous year urging that the attention of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers be drawn to the desirability of an early decision in the matter. A provisional arrangement for the allocation of the expenses of the League was adopted, valid for the year 1923, under which Canada's contribution will be somewhat reduced. The number of non-permanent members of the Council was increased from four to six.

The Assembly agreed that an International Conference should be summoned by the Council as soon as possible to consider the extension of the principles of the Washington Treaty for the Limitation of Naval Armaments to all non-signatory States, and further expressed approval of a Treaty of Mutual Guarantee as a means of achieving a general reduction of armaments. Hungary was admitted to membership in the League.

International Congress on American History.—In connection with the celebration of the centenary of the Independence of Brazil, an International Congress on American History was assembled at Rio de Janeiro in September, 1922, in which Canada was invited to participate. Mr. O. D. Skelton, Professor of Economics at Queen's University, Mr. A. G. Doughty, C.M.G., Dominion Archivist, and Mr. Gustave Lanctôt, Chief French Archivist, attended as Canadian representatives.

Empire Forestry Conference.—The Empire Forestry Conference assembled at London in 1920, had recommended the holding of a further similar conference and in accordance with this recommendation the Canadian Government convened a second conference at Ottawa in July, 1923. Delegates attended representing the Forestry Services of the Imperial Government, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State, India, and several of the Crown Colonies. In addition to the official meetings at Ottawa, over which Lord Lovat, one of the Imperial delegates, presided, tours were arranged throughout the Dominion, with the object of providing opportunity for personal observation by the delegates of the Forest Resources of the Dominion.

International Congress of Historical Studies.—At the Fifth International Congress of Historical Studies, which met at Brussels in April, 1923, Canada was represented by Dr. A. G. Doughty, C.M.G., the Dominion Archivist.

International Labour Conference.—The Fourth meeting of the International Labour Conference was held at Geneva, from October 18 to November 3, 1922, Canada being represented as to the Government by the Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labour, and the Hon. E. Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as to employers by Mr. W. E. Coulter, and as to workers by Mr. Tom Moore. Mr. H. W. Macdonnell, Mr. John W. Bruce, and Mr. J. Obed Smith also attended as technical advisers.

A recommendation was adopted that statistics in regard to emigration and immigration should be communicated by the members to the International Labour Office, and a amendment to Article 393 of the Treaty of Versailles, was agreed upon, increasing the number of the governing body from twenty-four to thirty-two.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE AND IMPERIAL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

An Imperial Conference, and concurrent therewith an Imperial Economic Conference, were assembled in London on October 1, 1923, the sessions still continuing. The Right Honourable the Prime Minister, the Hon. George Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, and the Honourable Sir Lomer Gouin, Minister of Justice, attended as Canada's representatives at these conferences.

RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES

International Boundary Waters Questions.—The St. Lawrence River Power Company having applied to the International Joint Commission for continued approval of the submerged weir constructed in the St. Lawrence river near Massena, New York, such approval was extended by the commission for a further period of two years from September 4, 1923, the diversion by the Massena power canal not to exceed 25,000 cubic feet per second, and the weir and control works being placed under the charge of an International Board consisting of two engineers, Mr. W. J. Stewart being appointed to represent Canada on such Board, and Major Paul S. Reinecke as the United States representative.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 25

Niagara River Diversion.—In order to ensure observance of the limitations imposed in the Boundary Waters Treaty on diversions from the Niagara river, which existing and projected installations for the development of power threatened to exceed, it was suggested by the United States Government that an International Board of Control for that river should be created by the two Governments, to see that the treaty provisions were duly observed. The Canadian Government agreeing, appointed Mr. W. J. Stewart as the Canadian member of this Board, Major Paul S. Reinecke being appointed as the United States member.

Naval Vessels on the Great Lakes.—Altered circumstances having shown the expediency of modifying the arrangement of 1817 with the United States regarding naval vessels on the Great Lakes, negotiations, with this object, were initiated in July of 1922, which it is hoped will result in the conclusion of a new treaty to provide for the desired modification.

Fur Seal Treaty of July 7, 1911.—There was received from the United States as Canada's share of the proceeds of the sale of 12,782 seal skins, taken on the Pribiloff islands, sums amounting to $24,944.52. From Japan 60 skins were received, and from the Russian rookeries 12 skins.

The volume of business of the Passport Office continues to be steadily maintained, the number of passports issued and renewed for the past year being approximately 25,000, with a resultant revenue of over $45,000, and there seems to be no reason to anticipate any substantial reduction in the business. Efforts to obtain a dispensation from passport requirements for Canadians travelling to Great Britain have proved unavailing, His Majesty's Government representing that owing to the necessity of providing for the due supervision of aliens entering the United Kingdom—a purpose most efficiently served by the enforcement of the passport system—it was found impracticable to dispense with the requirement of passports for persons coming from Canada. Foreign European countries also generally enforce the same requirement; and it might be emphasized that contrary to a prevalent disposition in the Dominion to attribute responsibility in the matter to the Canadian Government, it is on the action of these outside authorities that the necessity of carrying passports depends, and not on any Canadian regulation.

I have pleasure in expressing my sense of satisfaction with the way in which the members of the staff have discharged their various duties.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

JOSEPH POPE,

Under Secretary of State for External Affairs.

OTTAWA, October 31, 1923.

REPORT
DEPUTY MINISTER OF LABOUR

FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING MARCH 31, 1923

To the Hon. JAMES MURDOCK, Minister of Labour.

SIR,—The fiscal year regarded industrially showed a substantial improvement over the period 1921-22. General increased industrial activity practically ended abnormal unemployment and federal assistance was regarded as necessary only in the case of unemployed and distressed ex-service men in a few centres. Prices, which had been in continuous though not rapid decline from July, 1920, continued to fall until June, when a slight reaction set in, and the year closed with prices slightly higher than at its opening. Calculated on the basis adopted by the department for measurement of price fluctuations, the price level in March, 1923, was 55 per cent higher than that of 1913, the period now usually selected as representing normal conditions. Wages showed about a similar tendency, and at the close of the fiscal period 1922-23 appeared to be likely shortly to stiffen.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES ACT

The year was marked by the addition to the responsibilities of the Department of Labour of the administration of the Government Annuities Act, and special effort was, under the direction of the minister, made during the year by officers of that branch to extend the operations of the legislation in question, the agency of publicity being used for this purpose more extensively than for several years previously. A full statement of operations for the year will be found in the present report. It will be noted that the moneys received during the fiscal year for the purchase of annuities reached the large figure of $1,028,-353.07, considerably more than that of any preceding year.

RECORD AS TO INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES

The record for the year with regard to industrial disputes is not good, speaking statistically, though with one or two exceptions the strikes recorded brought little inconvenience to the public. As is understood by readers of these reports, the statistical information given as to strikes is for the calendar year and not for the fiscal period, this system permitting freer comparison with statistics furnished by other countries, which are usually on the basis of the calendar year. The actual number of disputes for the calendar year 1922 was greatly less than that of the preceding calendar year, being 85 for 1922, as against 145 for 1921, but the number of workers involved in 1922 was considerably larger than the number concerned in 1921, the figures being for 1922. 41,050, as compared with 22,930 during 1921. The time losses arising from strikes counted by working days reached for the year 1922 the high figure of 1,975,276, being slightly over twice those of the previous calendar year, when the figures stood at 956,461. Whilst these figures as to time losses represent the third highest in the period of twenty-three years for which departmental figures exist, it should not be overlooked that approximately fifty per cent of the time losses are charged against the single strike, that of coal miners, in southern Alberta and southeastern British Columbia, the area commonly known as District 18, the official district, i.e., of the international mine workers' trades union, the United Mine Workers of America, the strike in question beginning on April 1 and continuing for about five months. The occurrence of a second strike in the same industry, representing a three weeks' struggle in the month of August on the part of 15,000 coal miners in the mines of Nova Scotia, further swelled the total. Other strikes during the year were scattered over many industries and localities and present no feature for special comment.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT, 1907

The provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act came into play in 45 cases. Twenty-seven boards were established. Strikes occurred in two cases only where boards were established, both the disputes involved being in the coal mining industry, those, namely, in Western Canada and Eastern Canada as mentioned above. In a third case, where the coal mining district around Edmonton was affected, a strike was apparently commenced without regard to the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act; later an application was received from the mayor of the municipality, but, the mayor being apparently unwilling to recommend persons for appointment to the board as on behalf of the operators and miners and those parties being unwilling on their own part to make recommendation, it was not clear that any advantage would result from further action on the application, and the application was in any case ultimately withdrawn.

The statute was during the year subjected to a severe test in connection with questions arising out of the interpretation of section 57. Several boards had been established to deal with disputes as between various railways and their shop craft employees. The railways sought to effect a reduction in wages and, the dispute arising in the case of the principal railways being before a Conciliation Board, the employees maintained that section 57 operated to prevent a change in wages or hours until the board had rendered its decision. The Minister of Labour upheld the view of the employees as to the bearing of section 57. A ruling of the Department of Justice supported this position, and the railways, though under protest, ultimately consented to leave the wage rates unchanged pending the inquiry before the board. The correspondence on the subject is printed in a chapter of the present report devoted to the operations of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

Partly because of the point which had been in dispute as to the interpretation of section 57, it was decided by the minister that amendments to the statute, with a view to clarifying this section and to conveying more clearly the apparent intent of the law in some other respects, should be submitted to Parliament. A Bill was accordingly introduced into the House of Commons, and with little discussion passed the House unanimously. In the Senate a serious opposition arose and resulted in amendments to the Bill which could not be accepted. After an interchange of communications between the two

Chambers, no solution of the deadlock having been found, the Bill was dropped. Although these proceedings in Parliament occurred chiefly after the close of the fiscal year, the matter is regarded as of sufficient importance to justify a statement on the subject being attached to the chapter on the operations of the statute included in the present report.

OTHER BRANCHES OF WORK

Other branches of the work of the department proceeded during the year without important development.

With regard to the administration of the Employment Offices Co-ordination Act, it may be remarked that there were at the close of the year 78 local employment offices; the number of vacancies reported during the year was 489,816, and the total number of placements was 412,527. A full statement of operations for the year appears in the present report.

Disbursements under the Technical Education Act to the various provinces of the Dominion amounted during the fiscal year to $648,227.03, distributed as follows: British Columbia, $34,932.38; Alberta, $71,019.91; Saskatchewan, $18,263.84; Manitoba, $25,121.14; Ontario, $314,206.97; Quebec, $128,182.27; New Brunswick, $17,476.06; Nova Scotia, $33,166; Prince Edward Island, $5,858.46. A full statement of operations for the year appears herewith.

The Labour Gazette was published regularly in English and French, the annual report on Labour Legislation in Canada covering the calendar year 1922 was issued in April, and the annual report on Labour Organization in Canada for the preceding calendar year was issued in May. Various wages and other bulletins were issued during the year.

The Government delegates to the fourth session of the International Labour Conference held in October in Geneva, Switzerland, were the Honourable James Murdock, Minister of Labour, and the Honourable Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Mr. Lapointe had been, it may be noted, previously in attendance at Geneva as one of the Government delegates to the Assembly of the League of Nations. Messrs. Murdock and Lapointe took an active part in the proceedings of the International Labour Conference.

Five meetings of the Governing Body of the International Labour Office were held during the year. Colonel David Carnegie acted as substitute for the Minister of Labour at the meetings held in April and July. The Minister attended in person the meeting held immediately prior to and the two meetings held during the session of the International Labour Conference.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

F. A. ACLAND,

Deputy Minister of Labour and Registrar of Boards of Conciliation and Investigation.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR, OTTAWA.

I.—INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT, 1907

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS, BEING FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING MARCH 31, 1923

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

There were 27 Boards of Conciliation and Investigation established under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act during the year as against 45 applications. In two cases there were strikes in spite of efforts of the boards to adjust the disputes referred. In both cases the industry concerned was that of coal mining and the strikes were in the widely separated coal fields of (1) District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, embracing coal mines in the southeastern corner of British Columbia and southern Alberta, where the miners were out for a period of about five months beginning on April 1, and (2) District 26 of the United Mine Workers of America, embracing the principal coal mining districts in Nova Scotia, where the miners were out for three weeks during August.

The strike in Western Canada followed immediately on the termination of a working agreement expiring on March 31, 1922. Though not ostensibly a part of the strike declared by the United Mine Workers of America in the bituminous mines of the United States and effective from the same date, namely, April 1, 1922, and under similar circumstances with regard to the termination of the working agreement that had prevailed down to that date, there is little reason to doubt that the two struggles were from the commencement closely related to each other. This became clearer as the strike in Alberta proceeded, and, when in August the struggle in the United States approached its close, the conditions of settlement in Alberta were made more or less dependent on those which had prevailed in the settlement in the United States. In these circumstances the efforts of a Board of Conciliation were almost predestined to failure. The department had done its best to secure the establishment of a Board prior to the termination of the agreement, so that the inquiry might proceed immediately in the event of no agreement being effected and no cessation of work occurring, but neither operators nor workmen assisted to this end; the Board's findings, when delivered, proved unacceptable to either party. The work of the Board was, however, by no means without value, since much important information was elicited during the inquiry and the findings did much to facilitate the subsequent negotiations which brought a settlement. The strike, though prolonged, was not the occasion of serious public inconvenience. The coal mining industry in District 18 and vicinity had been at some points overdeveloped, and it became generally understood that, had there been no strike in the locality during the summer of 1922, many of the operators would have found it necessary to shut down. Many of the miners found work on farms throughout the summer and others were engaged in clearing land, in some cases, it is said, for coal companies whose properties were closed.

The coal mining strike in Nova Scotia was the outcome of a prolonged period of friction between the British Empire Steel Corporation and its employees in the coal mining industry. The friction had apparently reached almost the breaking point at the close of the year 1921, when the then working agreement came to a termination and the company imposed a wage reduction which would have averaged twenty-five per cent. The ensuing dispute was referred to a Board of Conciliation and a compromise was effected which permitted a continuance of work for the time being, so that the Nova Scotia coal mines were in fact operating during by far the greater part of the period of the great coal strike in the United States and that in District 18 in Western Canada. The differences between the company and the miners were much discussed in the press, and a day was given in Parliament to debate the subject. It being claimed that the Board of Conciliation which had investigated the dispute in January, 1922, had not gone sufficiently into some aspects of the situation, a second board was constituted and made a further investigation and report. The second board did not succeed in effecting a working agreement, and eventually the miners declared a strike, which occupied three weeks of the month of August. The struggle was ended by an agreement which fixed a wage rate of approximately 15 per cent below the wage level of 1921, a reduction considerably less severe than had been, as above indicated, originally proposed by the company. The working agreement was made effective until January 14, 1924.

A third important coal mining strike occurred during the year in the Edmonton district. In this case neither operators nor workmen had submitted any application for a Board of Conciliation and Investigation, but, when the strike had been for some time in progress, the Mayor of Edmonton applied for a board as on behalf of the municipality of Edmonton. Since, however, the mayor did not submit names of persons for appointment to the board on behalf of operators or workmen, and neither operators nor workmen showed a willingness to participate in the procedure, and there was no evidence that the strike was causing any serious inconvenience to the public, it did not appear that the establishment of a board under such conditions would bring any public benefit; while, however, the application was still receiving consideration, it was withdrawn, the strike itself gradually dissolving.

In some other respects proceedings under the statute were marked during the year by unusual developments. The various railways of the country decided to effect if possible a wage reduction in the case of their shop craft employees. the cut to be effective in the majority of cases as from July 16, 1922. The representatives of the employees secured Boards of Conciliation. Four boards were established: (1) including Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Railway, Grand Trunk Railway, and other lines, members of the Railway Association of Canada; (2) three separate boards dealing with three international railways or sections of railways, namely (a) Michigan Central Railroad, (b) Pere Marquette Railway, and (c) New York Central Railroad. An important question arose shortly as to the interpretation to be placed upon section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act. The railroad companies proposed to make the wage-cut effective without regard to the fact that the dispute arising was before a Board of Conciliation. The employees claimed that the effect of section 57 was to prevent any change as to wages or conditions until the dispute arising had been passed upon by the Conciliation Board. The Minister of Labour supported the contention of the workmen. The matter was referred to the Department of Justice, which upheld the view maintained by the minister and the representatives of the workers. Finally, in a communication addressed to the Prime Minister, the leading railways undertook to abide by the ruling of the Department of Justice, and conditions as to wages and hours remained unchanged until the different boards had made their findings, the railroads, however, protesting that they did not admit the interpretation which had been given by the Department of Justice to section 57; other railways concerned followed the same procedure. A great strike in the machine shops of the principal railways of the United States prevailed for many months, and a similar strike was no doubt but narrowly averted in Canada, the matters in dispute being practically identical. A statement of the situation, with texts of the more important communications involved, appears in the present chapter.

With a view chiefly to removing any ambiguity in the language of section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, the minister introduced an amending Bill in the House of Commons at the ensuing session of Parliament, the Bill including, however, clauses which aimed at clarifying the statute at other points, though in no case was any change suggested which would at all modify the essential principles of the Act. The Bill passed the House of Commons unanimously and with but little debate. In the Senate the measure was severely opposed, though it found support at every point from the Honourable Senator Robertson, the former Minister of Labour. The amendments of the Senate being unacceptable to the House of Commons and negotiations between the two Chambers failing to secure a solution, the Bill was dropped and the statute remained at the close of the session without amendments later than those of the year 1920. These parliamentary proceedings took place chiefly after the close of the fiscal year, but the matters involved are regarded as being of so great importance that a brief statement on the subject is included in the present chapter.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

The proceedings under the Act during the year include six cases in which certain proceedings had taken place during the preceding year, namely, disputes between (1) coal operators, members of Western Canada Coal Operators' Association, and certain of their employees, being members of District 18, United Mine Workers of America; (2) Algoma Eastern Railway Company, Sudbury, Ont., and various classes of its employees; (3) Dominion Power and Transmission Company, Hamilton, Ont., and its linemen, groundmen, etc.; (4) Dominion Power and Transmission Company and Hamilton Street Railway Company, respectively, and various classes of their employees; (5) Ottawa Electric Railway Company and certain of its employees, and (6) employers, members of Association of Canadian Building and Construction Industries, Ottawa Branch, and certain of their employees being hod-carriers.

On March 31, 1923, results were still pending in connection with six applications concerning disputes between (1) Canadian National Railways, Western Lines, and certain of its employees being members of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men, District No. 6; (2) Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Western Lines, and certain of its employees being members of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredge Men, District No. 6; (3) Canadian National Railways, Western Lines, and its dining and sleeping car employees, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees; (4) Brantford Municipal Railway Commission and certain of its employees being street railway workers, members of Local Division No. 685, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America; (5) Corporation of the City of Prince Rupert and certain of its employees being members of Civic Employees' Union No. 20, Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and (6) Winnipeg Electric Railway Company and certain of its employees being members of the Gas Workers' Union of Winnipeg (Independent).

The figures contained in the above table may be thought to show discrepancies as compared with those appearing in the yearly summary. A closer examination will, however, show the respective statements to be in agreement. A complete statement of proceedings for a year must show all disputes dealt with during the fiscal year. The figures of the yearly statement include, therefore, disputes carried over from the previous year and which are counted in the summary of that year's proceedings. Thus the same dispute may properly figure in the annual statement for each of two years. In the statistical recapitulation covering several years, as above, it is necessary that no dispute shall be counted more than once, and account is taken of the number of applications received during the year and thus brought within the purview of the statute.

The inquiry was, however, immediately taken up by the board. The board's report was signed by the Chairman and Mr. Ostlund, and contained recommendations for the settlement of the dispute. Mr. Drimman presented a minority report. Neither party would at first accept the Board's findings and direct negotiations continued for some weeks. On August 8 the operators offered to adopt the board's findings, but the employees refused. Towards the end of August the Minister of Labour met the representatives of both parties at Calgary and as a result of his efforts an agreement was reached effecting a reduction of 15 p.c. below the wage scale of March 31, provided that the wage rate in the district should ultimately be governed by the settlement effected in the Central Com-petitive Field of the United States and the operators, the Minister of Labour to notify the parties when this condition had been attained. Work in the mines was resumed on August 28, and on September 1 the Minister of Labour notified the parties concerned that 75 p.c. of the miners of the Central Com-petitive Field had reached an agreement with the operators to resume work at the 1921 rates. Accordingly in District 18 the 1921 rates again came into effect as from September 1. |

January 1 the strikers were gradually replaced. Although this dispute was not before a Board of Conciliation and the strike having been declared without regard to the provisions of the Act, yet, an application for a Board having been received, it is thought proper to include the dispute as being among the cases where the strike was neither ended nor averted.

The Registrar indicated to employing company and workmen his entire willingness to establish a board if both parties agreed, but, whilst the matter was under consideration, the employees on February 13 ceased work, on account of a dispute suddenly arising respecting the alleged unfair dismissal of one of their members, a matter apart from differences stated in the application. The efforts of the Minister were devoted to securing a speedy resumption of work, the good offices of the department being exercised to that end, both directly from Ottawa and through Mr. E. McG. Quirk, of Montreal. Direct negotiations were resumed, and the employees returned to work on the 19th February. Meantime the employing company declined to unite with the employees in submitting matters which had been in dispute to a Board of Conciliation and Investigation. |

QUESTIONS ARISING OUT OF INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 57, AS INDICATED IN THE OPENING REMARKS OF THIS CHAPTER

Several Boards of Conciliation and Investigation were established to deal with differences between the various railways of Canada and certain of their employees in shop crafts. Four distinct Boards of Conciliation and Investigation were established, namely:—

1. Between (1) various railways, members of the Railway Association of Canada, including the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the Grand Trunk Railway, and (2) workmen, members of Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, American Federation of Labour, and being motive power and car department mechanics, helpers and apprentices in the employ of said railways.

2. Between Michigan Central Railroad and certain of its employees being machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electricians and sheet metal workers.

3. Between Père Marquette Railway Company and certain of its shop employees being machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, electricians, carmen, etc.

4. Between New York Central Railway Company, as represented by its officers in charge of the railway shops located at Ottawa, and certain of its employees being members of the Federated Shop Crafts, employed in the Ottawa shops.

Of the four disputes above indicated, it will be observed that three relate to United States railways having lines in Canada, namely, Michigan Central, Père Marquette and New York Central.

In the correspondence arising out of the establishment of these Boards of Conciliation and Investigation it was pointed out to the various railway companies concerned that section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, as understood by the department, required that, with respect to the proposed change in wages, no change could properly be made until the dispute arising had been dealt with by the Board of Conciliation and Investigation to which the dispute had been referred.

With regard to dispute No. 1 in the above list, that respecting Canadian railways generally, the employing companies did not accept the departmental interpretation of section 57 and announced their intention of putting into effect the proposed reduction as from July 16, urging that the employees concerned would be protected "in that should the rates finally agreed upon be more favourable to the employees they would receive retroactive pay."

With regard to disputes Nos. 2, 3 and 4 in the above list, the railways concerned, being United States railways with branch lines in the Dominion, consented to waive the proposed reduction until the dispute arising had been dealt with by the Board of Conciliation and Investigation which had been established.

Statements appearing in the press and representations reaching the department direct indicated considerable unrest among the employees of Canadian railways with respect to the divergence in view between the railways and the employees and led to an exchange of communications between the Department of Labour and the railways.

On July 29 the Deputy Minister of Labour telegraphed each Canadian railway management concerned as follows:—

I am directed to request your attention to statements which are being printed widely in the press with reference to the attitude of the railways involved in dispute with shop crafts workmen on question of deferring proposed changes in wage rates until matters in dispute have been dealt with by Board of Conciliation and Investigation. Minister had assumed management of your railway would be following course which has been adopted by other roads involved in disputes with same classes of workmen and where separate Boards of Conciliation have been established, namely, Michigan Central, Père Marquette and New York Central, which have deferred intended reduction of wages until dispute has been dealt with as stated by Conciliation Board, this line of action being that clearly laid down under section fifty-seven of governing statute. Representatives of workmen are, however, requesting information as to intended attitude of railways involved in this dispute, and minister would be pleased to receive assurance as to course your company will take.

REPLIES FROM THE RAILWAYS

The following message was received from each of the principal railways concerned as on various dates between July 31 and August 2:—

Your message of the twenty-ninth addressed to the president of this company directing attention to statements in the press with reference to the attitude of the railways involved in dispute with shop crafts workmen is received, and in reply this company desires to state that, on advice of counsel, we have proceeded along lines which are considered to be in accordance with the law. We are without definite information as to the circumstances which have led to the establishment of Boards of Conciliation in connection with disputes apparently existing on United States railways operating in Canada with same classes of employees, but we understand in a general way that there are several material differences as to the notice given, as to the application made for a board and as to other relevant circumstances. We believe inquiry will show that the United States railways first acted to put reduced rates of pay definitely into effect for their employees in Canada without proper notice or any preliminary negotiations with them. We further believe that these United States railways also put into effect without agreement rules governing working conditions, while in our case the revision of working conditions rules was mutually agreed upon some months ago. The company gave thirty days' notice of cancellation of existing schedule. The company's proposition was that the new rates should be put into effect pending further consideration and negotiation as from date of cancellation of previous schedule. Under this proposition the employees would be protected in that, should the rates finally agreed upon be more favourable to the employees, they would receive retroactive pay to such date of cancellation of old rates. On the other hand, the proposition afforded the company an absolutely necessary feature of protection. Any other course than that adopted by the company would defeat the intent of the agreement entered into after long negotiation between the companies and the employees. Otherwise employees have it in their power to unduly delay the application of new schedule and if former wages continue to be paid and be ultimately reduced company would have no means of reimbursements for amount overpaid. Retroactive provisions were made available to employees when wages were rising and same rule should be applied to present situation. Inasmuch as the railways have agreed to joint proceedings and a Board of Conciliation has been established in this matter, we prefer at this time merely to assure your department that there is every desire on the part of the company to comply with the law and to repudiate the suggestion from any quarter that the company's action is either arbitrary or improper.

RULING OF JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

The question of the interpretation of section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act was then taken up by the Minister of Railways with the Department of Justice and resulted in a ruling on the part of the Department of Justice contained in a letter addressed over the signature of the Acting Deputy Minister of Justice (Mr. W. Stuart Edwards) to the Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways and Canals, and under date of August 3, as follows, namely:—

Referring to Mr. Fairweather's conversation with me this afternoon in which he stated that you wish to have a departmental opinion to-day upon a question arising under section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act as amended by chapter 29 of the Statutes of 1920, it appears from what Mr. Fairweather tells me that the Canadian National Railways have given notice to their employees of a proposed reduction in wages; that this has resulted in a dispute within the meaning of the Act and that a Board is now being constituted under the Act to deal with the same; that in the meantime the period of thirty days mentioned in the Act has expired; that the railways propose, pending determination of the dispute by the board, to pay their employees from the date of the expiration of said period at the proposed reduced rates; that the employees deny the right of the railways to make any reduction in pay until a report in favour thereof has been made by the board, and that an opinion is desired as to what are the rights of the railways in this connection.

Upon the hasty consideration which I have been able to give to the matter, it would seem that the question depends almost altogether upon the provisions of section 57 of the Act above referred to, which reads as follows:—

“ 57. Employers and employees shall give at least thirty days' notice of an intended change affecting conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours; and in the event of such intended change resulting in a dispute, until the dispute has been finally dealt with by a board, and a copy of its report has been delivered through the registrar to both the parties affected, neither of those parties shall alter the conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours, or on account of the dispute do or be concerned in doing, directly or indirectly, anything in the nature of a lockout or strike, or a suspension or discontinuance of employment or work, but the relationship of employer and employee shall continue uninterrupted by the dispute, or anything arising out of the dispute; but if, in the opinion of the board, either party uses this or any other provision of this Act for the purpose of unjustly maintaining a given condition of affairs through delay, and the board so reports to the minister, such party shall be guilty of an offence, and liable to the same penalties as are imposed for a violation of the next preceding section.”

Upon consideration of these provisions I find it difficult to escape the conclusion that the intention of parliament in enacting this legislation was to prevent the doing of that which the railways are proposing to do; that is to say, that the making of a reduction in the actual amount of money paid out to employees on pay-day is making an alteration in the conditions of employment with respect to wages within the meaning of the statute, notwithstanding the fact that the intention of the railways is to account to the employees for the difference if and when a report in favour of the employees has been made by the board.

I do not overlook the fact that in case the railways continue payments at the old rates and the board reports in favour of a reduction they may not succeed in recovering back all of the overpayments so made, but I do not think this circumstance can be looked at as affecting the interpretation of the plain words of the statute.

NOTIFICATION TO RAILWAYS

A copy of the findings of the Department of Justice was forwarded, under date of August 3, to the principal railways by the Honourable W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways, together with the following covering letter:—

Strong representations are being made to the Government and it is a matter of current report in the press that, pending the decision of a board to be constituted under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, and amendments, the railways contemplate withholding from employees the differences between wage schedules that have been in effect and new schedules which they have proposed to establish. This procedure has been vigorously protested.

On behalf of the Government, I have to express the view that the railways should act in exact accordance with the law applicable, and your attention is drawn to section 57 of chapter 20 of 1907, as amended by section 5 of chapter 29 of 1910, and further amended by section 5 of chapter 29 of 1920, and reading as follows:—

“ Employers and employees shall give at least thirty days' notice of an intended change affecting conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours; and in the event of such intended change resulting in a dispute, until the dispute has been finally dealt with by a board, and a copy of its report has been delivered through the registrar to both the parties affected, neither of those parties shall alter the conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours, or on account of the dispute do or be concerned in doing, directly or indirectly, anything in the nature of a lockout or strike, or a suspension or discontinuance of employment or work, but the relationship of employer and employee shall continue uninterrupted by the dispute, or anything arising out of the dispute; but if, in the opinion of the board, either party uses this or any other provision of this Act for the purpose of unjustly maintaining a given condition of affairs through delay, and the board so reports to the minister, such party shall be guilty of an offence, and liable to the same penalties as are imposed for a violation of the next preceding section.”

For your information, I attach a copy of an opinion received from the Department of Justice with respect to its interpretation of the above provision of the statutes.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

OTHER CORRESPONDENCE

Other correspondence then ensued as follows:—

MONTREAL, August 9, 1922.

Honourable W. C. KENNEDY,
Minister of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa.

DEAR SIR,—The undersigned have received your letter enclosing copy of the opinion of the Acting Deputy Minister of Justice upon the application of section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act to the action taken by the railway companies in establishing a tentative scale of wages pending investigation and report by a Board of Conciliation appointed under the Act.

The railways, upon the advice of their own counsel, are not in accord with the opinion of the Department of Justice. The contention raised has been before the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in District No. 26, United Mine Workers of America, against the Dominion Coal Company and others, where the court in a carefully considered judgment unanimously decided that a similar proposed reduction is not a change of conditions within the prohibitions of section 57 of the Act. It is thought that this authoritative decision may not have received full consideration in the preparation of the department's opinion.

It is to be pointed out also that it is one of the functions of Boards of Conciliation to recommend the date when rates recommended by them shall come into force. The fairness of the companies' action in tentatively applying a revised scale of wages is a question before the Conciliation Board now in session, and we feel that an expression of opinion from the Government upon the question, obviously based on a misconstruction of the law, is improper and is bound to have an embarrassing effect upon the proceedings before the tribunal properly constituted pursuant to the statute.

The pay-rolls for the last half of July have already been made up, and it is impossible to alter them for payment upon the approaching pay-day. On the other hand, if, as a result of the proceedings of the board, additional payments are agreed upon for the period referred to, they may be added to subsequent pay-rolls.

We would refer also to the facts which led to the present situation. On June 14, pursuant to their agreement with their employees, the railways gave notice of their desire to revise wages, and specified the reductions proposed to be effective a month afterward. In the negotiations which followed it developed that, owing to conditions affecting the same classes of labour in the United States, the employees were unable to concur in any downward revision, and that it would be impossible to conclude any agreement until the situation in the United States should have cleared. The railways then proposed that the reduction should be applied conditionally from July 16, with the understanding that the rates finally agreed upon should be made retroactive to that date. This proposal, it will be observed, effectually protected the interests of employees as well as of the railways, and is the method which has obtained between the railways and the classes of employees involved in negotiations during each of the last four years, but, as it was not accepted on this occasion, the issue then resulting has been referred to a Board of Conciliation. The situation on United States railways has materially changed since the date of the negotiations to which we have referred, it having now been definitely announced by the employees there, who have been on strike for the last six weeks (forming a large majority of the members of the same organizations whose members, employed on Canadian roads, have applied for a Board of Conciliation), that they are willing to return to work at the same reduced rates, effective July 1, as were proposed by Canadian railways, effective July 16.

In these circumstances, we submit that, in fairness to all parties, the railways could not adopt a course of action which they believe is not in accordance with law nor required by the merits of the case.

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) HOWARD G. KELLEY,
President, Grand Trunk Railway System.

(Sgd.) D. B. HANNA,
President, Canadian National Railways.

(Sgd.) E. W. BEATTY,
President, Canadian Pacific Railway.

OTTAWA, August 10, 1922.

DEAR MR. KENNEDY,—Since writing you on the 3rd instant with regard to the dispute between the Canadian National Railways and certain of its employees, certain representations have been made to me by legal representatives of the railways and my attention has been directed to the joint letter from the presidents of the three railway systems to you dated the 9th instant. These representations have had my careful consideration and I have concluded that they do not contain anything which would justify me to alter the view expressed in my said letter.

The position taken by the railways is that the present case is covered by the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in certain injunction proceedings against the Dominion Coal Company et al. With this view I am, however, unable to agree, as I think it quite clear that the ground upon which the Appellate Court proceeded in the Nova Scotia case has no application to the present situation.

Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) W. STUART EDWARDS,
Acting D.M.J.

Hon. W. C. KENNEDY,
Minister of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa.

OTTAWA, August 12, 1922.

E. W. BEATTY, Esq.,
President, Canadian Pacific Railway,
Montreal, P.Q.

DEAR MR. BEATTY,—The Government has had under consideration the correspondence that has passed between the railway executives and the Minister of Railways and Canals, including the letters containing the opinion of the Acting Deputy Minister of Justice, with respect to the application to the existing dispute between the railway companies and certain of their employees in the shop crafts of section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

It must be apparent that, if the parties to industrial disputes are to be permitted to place their own interpretation upon Acts of Parliament passed for the express purpose of avoiding strikes or lockouts occasioned by industrial disputes and to persist in a course of action which in the opinion of the law officers of the Crown constitutes a direct violation of existing legislation, there can be no guarantee of industrial peace nor indeed of the preservation of law and order throughout the Dominion. As you are well aware, the industrial situation on this continent, as a consequence of existing strikes in the coal mines and on the railways in the United States, is fraught with possibilities of the gravest character. That Canada has been spared a like condition in her mines and on her railways is owing to the legislation enacted by Parliament for the prevention and settlement of industrial disputes and to the loyal and public-spirited manner in which both employing companies and their employees have on the whole respected its provisions.

The relations between the railway companies and their employees and the coal mining companies and their employees in Canada to-day are such that, given continuous operation of the mines and railroads through a due regard for the provisions of the law, the companies concerned and their employees may do much to relieve the existing situation of some of its most alarming features. A contrary course on the part of either of the parties might conceivably precipitate an industrial situation in Canada which would greatly aggravate and intensify the unfortunate consequences of the protracted disputes in the United States.

The Government feels that the public interest demands its utmost vigilance in the preservation of industrial peace in Canada at this time, and that the public has a right to expect that, in its endeavour to uphold the law and secure uninterrupted operation of railway and mining activities, the Government may count upon the co-operation of employing companies and employees alike. Under the circumstances, it is the hope of my colleagues and myself that the railway companies will accept without further question the opinion of the Department of Justice with respect to the interpretation of section 57 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, and immediately restore conditions relative to wages so as to remove any question as to a full compliance with the intention of the Act.

I should perhaps add that, having been waited upon by a deputation representative of the employees concerned, I have assured them that the Government will not hesitate to exert its full influence and power to see that the provisions of the law governing industrial disputes are complied with by all parties. At the same time, I have expressed the view that, once informed of the confirmation of his opinion by the Deputy Minister of Justice, after conference with the legal representatives of the railway companies, the railway executives may be expected to adopt such a course as will render unnecessary any further action on the part either of the employees or the Government to secure a due compliance with the provisions of the law. Upon this undertaking, I was assured by the employees' representatives that they would agree to an immediate resumption of the investigation being conducted by the Board of Conciliation to which the dispute in question has been referred, and would refrain, without further conference with the Government, from taking any step calculated to prove prejudicial to the public interest.

I should be pleased to be advised by you by telegraph at your earliest convenience of the action which the Government may expect your company to take in the light of these representations.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) W. L. MACKENZIE KING.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.'S TELEGRAPH,

MONTREAL, August 15, 1922.

Right Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING,
Prime Minister,
Ottawa.

Answering your letter of the twelfth instant, we need not assure you of our concurrence in your desire that the important business of the country may be carried on without interruption, and that both employers and employees should co-operate in carrying out the laws which have been enacted to that end.

It is quite impossible for us to change our view as to the legality of the course which the railways have taken, and we believe that such action afforded full protection to the interests of both parties.

We must respectfully submit that, notwithstanding the view which the legal advisers of the Government may hold, it is the duty of the company to follow a course which they have been advised is legal and in accordance with binding decisions of the Canadian courts, and necessary to preserve the rights which they consider essential to the protection of their properties.

In view, however, of the decision of the Government to accept the opinion of the Department of Justice, we will undertake, pending an anticipated early report of the Board of Conciliation now sitting, that the scale of shop crafts' wages in force prior to July 16 last will be continued, on the understanding that the companies' case before the Board of Conciliation will not be thereby prejudiced, and that the companies shall not thereby be precluded from taking the position, in negotiating an agreement during or subsequent to the proceedings of the board, that the new scale should be retroactive to July 16 last.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS OF INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES INVESTIGATION ACT

As mentioned in the opening passages of this chapter, a Bill to amend the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, was before Parliament for consideration at the 1923 session. The measure was introduced by the Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labour, in the House of Commons on March 21 and passed unanimously by the House on April 20. The minister explained that the proposed amendments, which related to sections 15, 57 and 58, involved no change in the purpose of the Act, but were designed to convey more clearly the intent of these sections as they now stand and have been understood for a number of years. The Senate subsequently introduced amendments which, in the opinion of the House of Commons, were inconsistent with the purposes of the Bill, and could not be accepted. The view of the House of Commons to this effect was communicated to the Senate, but the latter decided to adhere to its proposed amendments; under these circumstances the Bill was dropped.

The Bill as passed by the House of Commons is printed below. This is followed by the sections of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act affected by the Bill, with the proposed amendments.

An Act to amend The Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907

His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:—

1. Subparagraph (b) of paragraph two of section fifteen of The Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, as enacted by section two of chapter twenty-nine of the statutes of 1910, is amended by inserting after the word "committee", in the eighteenth line thereof, the words "of the employees"; and by inserting after the word "employer", in the nineteenth line thereof, the words "or that it has been impossible to secure conference or to enter into negotiations"; and by inserting after the word "further", in the last line thereof, the words "effort or".

2. Section fifty-seven of the said Act, as amended by section five of chapter twenty-nine of the statutes of 1910, and as further amended by section five of chapter twenty-nine of the statutes of 1920, is further amended by inserting after the word "intended", in the second line thereof, the words "or desired"; and by inserting after the word "intended", in the fourth line thereof, the words "or desired"; and by inserting after the word "dispute", in the fourth line thereof, the words "it shall be unlawful for the employer to make effective a proposed change in wages or hours or for the employees to go on strike"; and by inserting, after the word "affected", in the seventh line thereof, the words "the application for the appointment of a board shall be made by the employers or employees proposing the change in wages or in hours";

3. Section fifty-eight of the said Act is amended by inserting after the word "lock-out", in the first line thereof, the words "or making effective a change in wages or hours"; and by inserting after the word "lockout", in the last line thereof, the words "or change".

The following paragraphs show sections 15, 57 and 58 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, the additions proposed by the amending bill being printed in italics:—

Sec. 15 (b) ...failing an adjustment of the dispute or a reference thereof by the minister to a board to the best of the knowledge and belief of the declarants a strike will be declared, that the dispute has been the subject of negotiations between the committee of the employees and the employer, or that it has been impossible to secure conference or to enter into negotiations, that all efforts to obtain a satisfactory settlement have failed, and that there is no reasonable hope of securing a settlement by further effort or negotiations. (1910, c. 29.)

Sec. 57.—Employers and employees shall give at least thirty days' notice of an intended or desired change affecting conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours; and in the event of such intended or desired change resulting in a dispute, it shall be unlawful for the employer to make effective a proposed change in wages or hours or for the employees to go on strike, until the dispute has been finally dealt with by a board, and a copy of its report has been delivered through the Registrar to both the parties affected; the application for the appointment of a board shall be made by the employers or employees proposing the change in wages or in hours; neither of those parties shall alter the conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours, or on account of the dispute do or be concerned in doing, directly or indirectly, anything in the nature of a lockout or strike, or a suspension or discontinuance of employment or work, but the relationship of employer and employee shall continue uninterrupted by the dispute, or anything arising out of the dispute; but if, in the opinion of the board, either party uses this or any other provision of this Act for the purpose of unjustly maintaining a given condition of affairs through delay, and the board so reports to the minister, such party shall be guilty of an offence, and liable to the same penalties as are imposed for a violation of the next preceding section (Am. 1920, c. 29).

Sec. 58.—Any employer declaring or causing a lockout or making effective a change in wages or hours contrary to the provisions of this Act shall be liable to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars for each day or part of a day that such lockout or change exists.

THE AMENDMENTS EXPLAINED

The minister explained in the House of Commons on April 20 that the proposed amendment in section 15, relating to declarations by trade union officers, would facilitate applications for Boards of Investigation. In certain cases in the past, he said, workers' committees could not make applications as required by this section for the reason that communications which such committees would address to the employer remained unanswered, and that therefore the committees could not literally declare that negotiations had been held as required. Heretofore it had been difficult to affirm in certain cases that negotiations had taken place, and that all efforts to effect a settlement by negotiation had failed. The amendment proposed to meet this situation by declaring that, to warrant the forming of a board, it should be sufficient for the workers' committees to make a declaration that it had been impossible to secure a conference or enter into negotiation.

In regard to section 57, which governs the relations of parties pending proceedings, the minister explained the proposed amendments as follows:—

"It is proposed to place clearly upon one of the parties to the dispute the onus or responsibility of applying for the Board of Investigation. In many cases in the past the employer and the employee have waited for one or the other to move, the one expecting that the other was going to ask for a Board of Investigation, neither party accepting it as their responsibility to make the necessary application. It seems as though—in the general orderly process that, I think, Canada requires in the conduct of relations between employers and workmen—the responsibility for making the application should rest somewhere. We are trying, in section 57, to define where that responsibility shall rest and to indicate to either the employer or the employee, as the case may be, that it is his responsibility under the law to make the necessary application for the board."

The minister further emphasized the fact that in the past there had been no obligation upon either party to make a move. By far the largest number of applications that had been made for boards had been made by employees and not by employers. The purpose of the amendment was to assign properly the responsibility for failure to do the thing which the public expects shall be done on the part of an employer or on the part of the employee, and to oblige the party proposing a change to ask for a board if the dispute is not settled by mutual agreement.

THE SENATE AMENDMENTS

In its passage through the Senate the Bill, in the form in which it left the House of Commons, was strongly supported by Senator Dandurand, the Government leader. The principles of the Bill were also in general approved by Senator G. D. Robertson, former Minister of Labour, who favoured the amendments which the Bill proposed, and resisted other amendments proposed in the Senate as impairing the efficacy of the Act as it now stands.

Section 1 of the Bill, amending section 15 of the Act, was allowed to stand.

In the course of a debate on May 15 on section 2 of the Bill, Senator Robertson, former Minister of Labour, remarked as follows:—

"For years after the Industrial Disputes Act became law there was a persistent and continued opposition to it on the part of organized labour in this country, and every year from 1907 to 1912, at the annual sessions of the Labour Congress of Canada, resolutions were passed demanding the repeal of the law—in fact, I think I am safe in saying up to 1917. More recently, by reason of efforts that have been made by succeeding administrations to administer the law fairly and impartially and to show no favouritism to either party, labour slowly and surely acquired some confidence in the honest intentions of the law and the gentlemen who placed it upon the statute book. For sixteen years the labour organizations affected by this legislation had suffered, consequent upon the operation of the Act, all the losses that were entailed thereby, and all they ask, and all the Government asks in presenting this amendment to Parliament, is that the employers to-day be required to do likewise. The law as it stands now contemplated that the employers would respect it in that respect. But in 1922, when the general reduction was threatened, the Department of Justice was consulted, and said: 'Yes, the employers are undoubtedly violating the spirit of the Act, but we are afraid that they cannot be brought to book or penalized in any way'—Why? Because the penalty clauses of the Act only provide penalties for two offences: one, if employees go on strike contrary to the provisions of the Act; and, two, if the employer indulges in a lockout. In this case the employers were not locking out anybody; they were simply saying: 'We are going to reduce your wages; we are not violating the law'. But undoubtedly they were violating the spirit and intent of the law; so the Government to-day ask Parliament to endorse an amendment to the Act which will cause it to be interpreted as it was always intended that it should be, in such manner that will work equitably and fairly to all parties concerned and affected by it."

The Hon. Mr. Dandurand, speaking of the efficacy of the Act in the past, said:—

"The Industrial Disputes Investigation Act has brought about this result in Canada, that of 580 disputes referred under the terms of the statute from 1907 to 1923, there have been only 36 cases in which the threatened strike was not averted. I maintain that this is a very important result. One of the late Ministers of Labour, who was not from the labour world, the late Hon. Mr. Crothers, stated in 1917, after having had the administration of this Act under his supervision, the following opinion:—

"One sometimes hears it said that the labour laws of Australia are far in advance of ours, and I wish to say a word for the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act. Although the Act is not a child of mine, I have never lost an opportunity of giving credit to those who succeeded in getting this Act placed upon the statute book of Canada. I believe the principle involved in it is good, and I am sure that it has been the means of preventing large numbers of strikes. This Act has saved the wage earners of this country millions and millions of dollars. It has maintained industrial peace in scores of cases where very serious troubles would have developed but for the provisions of this or some similar Act."

Section 2 was deleted from the Bill on the motion of Senator W. B. Ross, who said:—

"If you strike out this section and leave the matter as it is, you will be doing no injustice to labour. It will be in their interest to get as quick a decision as they can. The board can make this award as of the date when the reduction took place, and they will get their money. On the other hand, if you adopt this new procedure and require the company to go on at the existing rate of wages pending the decision of the board, and to do so under a penalty of $1,000 a day, you may do a great injustice to the company, because if it should take three or four months they would pay out a large amount of wages in that time, and it is a commonplace to say that they would have no way of getting it back. As we are doing no injustice to the labourer and conferring no new right on the employer, I think it would be wise to strike out this section and leave the law as it is."

Senator Béique subsequently made a motion, which was agreed to, that section 57 of the Act stand as at present, but that the following paragraph be added as section 57a:—

"57a: It shall be unlawful for any employer without the consent of a majority of the employees evidenced in writing, signed by them, or their authorized representatives, or for any employee to make any change in the conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours, unless the party making the change has before doing so applied for the appointment of a board to which the dispute shall be submitted, and as regards wages the board may declare its decision retroactive to any date not anterior to that on which the change was made. On the failure of either party to abide by the decision of the board the other party may have recourse to a strike or lockout as the case may be."

On consideration of section 3 of the amending Bill, relating to the penalty for causing lockouts, Senator Lynch-Staunton proposed to amend section 8 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, explaining his proposal as follows:—

"By the provision of subsection 3 of section 8 of the Act of 1907, where the employer and the employee do not agree upon a third arbitrator, the appointment is in the hands of the Minister of Labour. Now, it has been represented to me by very important employers that this is not a very satisfactory condition, and that a great many employers have refused to agree to a board because they have felt that the Minister of Labour, in the nature of things, cannot be an impartial umpire between the contending parties. They say that the selection should be made by a man who is not affiliated with either side. I point out that it has been stated here that nearly all the applications for boards have been made by employees. One of the reasons, as given to me—personally I know nothing about it—is that the labour representative consistently declines to agree to a third man, because he thinks that the Minister of Labour will cast a benevolent eye on his side. I therefore wish to substitute for the Minister of Labour the Chief Justice of the province in which the dispute arises, or, if the dispute interests more than one province, then the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada. I therefore beg leave to move:—

4. (1) Sub-section 2 of section eight of the said Act is hereby repealed and the following substituted therefor:—

"(2) If either of the parties fails or neglects to duly make any recommendation within the said period, or such extension thereof as the minister on cause shown grants, the Chief Justice of the province in which the dispute arose, or, if there be no such Chief Justice in that province, the Chief Justice of the highest court of last resort in civil matters in that province, or, in any case where the dispute did not arise in one province only, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, shall as soon thereafter as possible appoint a fit person to be a member of the board; and such member shall be deemed to be appointed on the recommendation of the said party."

Section 4 of the said section eight is hereby repealed and the following substituted therefor:—

"(4) If the members chosen on the recommendation of the parties fail or neglect to duly make any recommendation within the said period, or such extension thereof as the minister on cause shown grants, the Chief Justice of the province in which the dispute arose, or, if there be no such Chief Justice in that province, the Chief Justice of the highest court of last resort in civil matters in that province, or, in any case where the dispute did not arise in one province only, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, shall as soon thereafter as possible appoint a fit person to be a third member of the board, and such member shall be deemed to be appointed on the recommendation of the other two members of the board."

Then I will read it altogether:—

(3) The following is hereby added to the said section 8 as subsection 6 thereof:—

In subsections 2 and 4 of this section the expression "Chief Justice" includes any judge duly authorized as and for the Chief Justice."

The foregoing amendment was agreed to by a vote of 26 to 16.

On the third reading, Senator Robertson moved that the bill be referred back to the committee of the whole House for the purpose of reconsidering the proposed amendment to section 8 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, on the ground that there had been a misunderstanding, and also with a view to an amendment which would permit a renewal of the practice of appointing judges as chairmen. Prior to 1920, he said, in almost every case in which the minister had to appoint a chairman of a Board of Conciliation a judge was selected, but in 1920 the Judges Act was amended, and again in 1921 it was further amended, so that judges could be used but not paid. "Experience taught the Labour Department that judges, like other men, are not very anxious to render special services unless they are compensated, so the department has been deprived of the services of judges as chairmen of boards."

Senator Robertson's motion was carried by a vote of 28 to 10. When, however, the Bill was recommitted and Senator Dandurand moved to strike out the amendment of Senator Lynch-Staunton, the committee voted by 35 to 25 to retain the amendment.

A further proposal to amend the Act by adding the following paragraph as section 57b was made by Senator G. V. White, but was negatived without a division:—

57b. It shall be unlawful for employers to declare a lockout, or for employees to go on strike, concerning any further matter or cause other than those affecting conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours, until such matter or cause has been finally dealt with by a board and copy of its report delivered through the Registrar to both parties affected.

The Bill as amended passed its third reading in the Senate on June 20.

NON-CONCURRENCE IN SENATE AMENDMENTS

When the amendments made in the Bill by the Senate were under consideration in the House of Commons on June 25 the Minister of Labour moved:—

"That a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint their Honours that this House disagrees to their amendments to Bill No. 84, an Act to amend the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, for reasons that the said amendments defeat the objects aimed at in the Bill and would complicate rather than simplify procedure."

• In explanation of the motion the minister made the following statement:—

This Bill as originally introduced into the House of Commons had as its object the amendment of sections 15, 57 and 58. No new features were proposed, the amendments seeking simply to convey more clearly the intent of those sections as they had been generally understood; also in the case of section 58 a specific penalty was provided for an offence with regard to which in the statute as it had stood a penalty was implied but not stated. The principal amendment was that whereby in section 57 it is provided that where employer or workmen intend or desire to make a change in wages or hours "it shall be unlawful for the employer to make effective a proposed change in wages or hours or for the employees to go on strike until the dispute has been finally dealt with by a board and a copy of its report has been delivered through the registrar to both the parties affected." This proposed amendment in no way varies the intent of the clause but makes its meaning indisputable. In the amending Bill this same section 57 is further amended by requiring that "the application for the appointment of a board shall be made by the employers or employees proposing the change in wages or hours." Whilst it has seemed clearly the intent of the statute that an application for the establishment of a board should proceed from the party proposing any such change as contemplated, yet this is not expressly stated, and, in the case of the several hundred boards which have been established in the past sixteen or seventeen years, the applications from the employers have been few in number, not, in fact, exceeding more than two or three per cent, a situation which has worked serious injustice to the workmen and has naturally aroused their resentment. Under the amendment proposed by the Minister of Labour when the employer proposed a change it would be his duty to make application for a conciliation board.

The amending Bill passed the House of Commons without change. As the Bill has been returned to this House, its object with respect to clarification of section 57 is entirely defeated, whilst an additional clause affecting the appointment of the chairman of a board has been added to the Bill, which, if accepted, would tend seriously to delay and embarrass those administering the statute. The Bill as it is now before parliament leaves section 57 without the clarifying additions proposed in the amending statute, but with a clause added which is quite inconsistent with and contrary in its effect to the main clause, for, whereas clause 57 as it now stands provides quite clearly that a change with regard to wages and hours cannot be made effective until any dispute arising has been "dealt with by a board and a copy of its report has been delivered through the registrar to both the parties affected," yet the proposed amendment of the upper house apparently seeks to have the proposed change effective as soon as the application for a board has been made.

The effect of this portion of the proposed addition to section 57 is therefore to render the whole section contradictory and confusing as between its different paragraphs. The remainder of the clause proposed as supplementary to section 57 adds to the confusion by introducing a reference to the retroactive character of the findings of a board. The reference in question does not actually add to the authority which a conciliation board has always been free to exercise, and, with regard to the declaration contained in the last sentence of the supplementary clause that "on the failure of either party to abide by the decision of the board, the other party may have recourse to a strike or lockout as the case may be," this also in no way increases or extends the rights or powers of the parties to a dispute beyond those which they would in any case possess under the statute. The amendment of the upper house with respect to section 57 would, therefore, have the effect of confusing, complicating and delaying procedure, without bringing compensating benefit of any kind.

The amendment proposed by the upper house with regard to section 8 respecting the appointment of a chairman introduces a new feature. The statute as it stands provides for the selection of a chairman by joint agreement when possible of the other two members of a conciliation board, and requires that, where no agreement is reached, the minister shall make the necessary appointment. In about one-half of several hundred boards which have been established a chairman has been secured by agreement. It had become a general though not invariable practice for the Minister of Labour, when called upon to appoint a chairman, to select a judge, but this practice ceased when two or three years ago the Judges' Act was so amended as to prohibit the acceptance by a judge of the fees ordinarily payable to a chairman or member of a conciliation board. It is true that the Minister of Labour is not under the Judges' Act, as it has been amended, prohibited from asking a judge to act as a chairman, nor is a judge apparently prohibited from accepting a chairmanship; but, since fees are no longer payable in such circumstances to a judge, it has not been thought reasonable as a rule to request a judge to undertake the duties involved in a chairmanship; such duties, it will be understood, are frequently of a severe and arduous nature and in nearly all cases are of the highest moment to employers and to large numbers of workmen, as well as frequently to the public. In two cases since the amendment of the Judges' Act, judges have been, however, appointed, once by the Minister of Labour of the late administration and once by the present Minister of Labour, but in the latter case the appointment was made on the joint recommendation of the other board members. In both cases the judges concerned accepted from a sense of public duty; no fees were of course paid them. It may be said that there is every advantage in a chairman being secured by joint agreement and the Minister of Labour appoints a chairman with reluctance. Inquiry shows that this has been the case with most previous ministers. The chances of an agreement are manifestly increased when a chairman is secured by joint request of other board members. The method or system, however, under which different Ministers of Labour have made appointments has not been the subject of any known criticism, and certainly the files contain no communications requesting or suggesting a change in the present practice.

The objections to the system laid down in the Senate amendment are obvious. In the first place, the appointment of a chairman by a Chief Justice, whether the Chief Justice of a province or of the Supreme Court of Canada, would entail inevitable delay. Such delays would be particularly unfortunate since, despite every effort under present procedure, one side or other of the disputing parties is sometimes disposed to object to the time necessarily occupied in procedure. In the second place, a Chief Justice or other judge cannot possibly be as intimately seized of the nature of the dispute involved and of the particular type therefore of man wanted for the chairmanship as would be the Minister of Labour, who has established the board and has been in touch with details of procedure from its inception. It would be impossible to convey to a judge at a distant point by correspondence, which would of necessity be as a rule by telegraph with consequent serious expenditure and some danger of inaccuracy, all the particulars which should be properly at hand to enable the judge to reach a correct conclusion as to the type of person apparently best suited for the important duties involved. The judge would exercise his best judgment and the appointment might or might not prove to be a good one. In any case the minister who is charged with the administration of the statute would be freed from responsibility on this most vital aspect of administration and the judges would become involved in the technicalities of departmental procedure. Since a considerable proportion of the disputes dealt with under the statute extend to two or more provinces, the task of naming the chairmen of conciliation boards would under the proposed Senate amendment fall most frequently to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, who from the nature of his functions may be presumed to be furthest removed from contact with industrial disputes and necessarily therefore the more dependent on the advice of others as to the type of person best suited for a chairman in a particular case. Despite the high legal and other attainments which a Chief Justice would undoubtedly possess, it is submitted that, in addition to the complication and delays in procedure which the proposed system of appointing chairmen would entail, the suggested change would be highly detrimental to the successful administration of the statute. I would, therefore, move that the amendment of the Senate be not concurred in.

After further debate the minister's motion was agreed to by the House of Commons without a division.

The Senate, on June 27, considered a message from the House of Commons to the effect that the House disagreed with the amendments made by the Senate, for the reason that these amendments defeated the objects aimed at in the Bill, and would complicate rather than simplify procedure. Senator Robertson endeavoured to effect a compromise by having the Senate amendment to section 57 enacted and that to section 8, re appointment of chairman, withdrawn, and moved accordingly that the Senate insist on its amendment to section 57, by adding section 57a, as proposed; this motion was carried. Senator Robertson next moved that the Senate do not insist upon its amendment with reference to the appointment of the Chief Justice, but this motion was negatived on a division by 32 votes to 26, and the Senate amendments remained as before. Accordingly a notice was sent to the House of Commons that the Senate insisted upon the amendments made by them in the Bill, for the following reasons: (1) Because the provisions of the Act should be equally applicable to employer and employee; (2) because the selection of the third arbitrator by the chief justice of a court would remove any possible objection that the person selected might be more closely associated with either one of the contending parties.

No further action was taken in the matter by the House of Commons and the amending Bill was dropped for the session with the result that the Act remains unchanged.

II.—CONCILIATION WORK

Apart from the administration of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, the good offices of the Department of Labour were employed during the year in connection with the adjustment of many labour disputes. The Minister of Labour assisted personally in certain cases and the services of various officers of the department, and particularly the fair wages officers, who are stationed at different industrial centres, were utilized extensively in conciliation work. The officers in question are: Mr. Theo. Bertrand, stationed at Montreal; Mr. W. D. Killins, stationed at Ottawa; Mr. E. N. Compton, stationed at Toronto; Mr. F. E. Harrison, stationed at Calgary; and Mr. D. T. Bulger, stationed at Vancouver. In addition to the assistance rendered by the fair wages officers, Mr. E. McG. Quirk, of Montreal, though not actually an officer of the department, acted as a special representative in connection with conciliation work in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces; the correspondents of the Labour Gazette and officers of the Employment Service of Canada at several points acted also in certain instances as conciliators.

Close attention was given throughout the year to the labour situation in the coal fields of Nova Scotia, Alberta, and British Columbia.

Mr. D. T. Bulger continued to act as Chairman of the Cost-of-Living Commission which was established in 1918 on request of the coal miners and operators of Vancouver island to deal with the cost of living and wages matters there. The other members of this commission are Mr. Tully Boyce, of Nanaimo, on behalf of the coal operators, and Mr. Matthew Gunniss, of Nanaimo, on behalf of the coal miners. Four reports were submitted by this commission, dealing with the cost of living for the quarters ending June 30, 1922; September 30, 1922; December 31, 1922, and March 31, 1923, respectively, and it was understood that wages adjustments were made in the principal coal mines of Vancouver island in accordance therewith.

Mr. F. E. Harrison, resident fair wages officer of the Department of Labour in Calgary, was in constant touch with the labour situation in the coal fields of Alberta and eastern British Columbia during the year. The coal mining industry in Alberta and southeastern British Columbia experienced an interruption in production on the expiry of the agreement between the Western Canada Coal Operators' Association and District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America on March 31, 1922. Efforts had previously been made by the Department of Labour to obviate this occurrence and reference is made elsewhere in the present report to the Board of Conciliation and Investigation which was established under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act to deal with the matters in dispute. The award of the board was not accepted by the parties concerned and the cessation of coal mining operations continued into the month of August, when the Minister of Labour held conferences with the miners' representatives and executive officers of the Western Coal Miners' Association, which resulted on August 23 in the conclusion of an agreement and the immediate resumption of mining operations. Some 7,500 miners were concerned in this strike, which lasted for nearly five months. In the month of March, 1923, further conferences occurred between the Western Canada Coal Operators' Association and District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, and an agreement was reached covering the year ending March 31, 1924.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

During the latter part of November a cessation of work took place at the coal mines at Cardiff, near Edmonton, and early in December the strike extended to the mines in and near the city of Edmonton, owing to the demand of the employees for an increase in wages and recognition of their union, which the operators refused. An attempt at mediation was made by the resident fair wages officer in Alberta, but without result. Conferences were held by him with representatives of the employers and employees but no satisfactory basis of adjustment was reached. Altogether nearly 800 employees were involved in the dispute, some of the mines concerned being closed down. In the spring, when the demand for coal lessened, some of the mines had not reopened, and a number of men were, therefore, still nominally on strike.

Labour disputes affecting the coal mining operations in Nova Scotia also received special attention at the hands of the Department of Labour during the past year. Apart from the proceedings under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, referred to elsewhere in the present report, the Minister of Labour kept in close touch with these matters personally, and Mr. E. McG. Quirk, of Montreal, visited Cape Breton as a special representative of the Department of Labour to assist in the adjustment of labour relations. Mr. Quirk also proceeded to Sydney under the minister's instructions, in connection with a strike which occurred in the Dominion Iron and Steel Company's mills in February, 1923. Application had been made by the steel workers, members of Sydney Lodge No. 1, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, in the month of January preceding for the establishment of a board under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act to deal with their claim for the introduction of an 8-hour day, certain wages changes and the institution of the check-off system. Under section 63 of the Act, a board could only be established, however, with the consent of the company, and such consent was not given. The ensuing strike was attributed to alleged discrimination by the company in the discharge of one of the union officials. Mr. Quirk was instructed on February 14 to proceed to Sydney for the purpose of lending the good offices of the department in promoting an amicable settlement; a settlement was reached three days later.

Mr. Quirk visited Sydney again in March for the purpose of assisting in the avoidance of another impending strike of the steel workers in the Dominion Iron and Steel Company's plant, which, however, occurred some weeks later.

Shortly after assuming office as Minister of Labour in January, 1922, the Honourable James Murdock issued a statement to Canadian employers and workers, especially in the building and construction industries, urging them to endeavour to secure by mutual negotiations agreed understandings as to any wages changes which were to be applicable to work during the season of 1922. In making this appeal, the minister intimated that the Department of Labour did not assume to determine for employer or employee what their agreements as to wages or conditions should be, but urged as a public duty that they should reach mutually satisfactory agreements prior to March '31, so as to ensure that available outside working weather during the spring and summer months might not be wasted. Assistance was given on request by officers of the Department of Labour to the employers and workers in the building trades at certain points in the adjustment of their wages schedules, and there were comparatively few interruptions of work in the building trades during this season.

The strike in the railway shop trades, which occurred on railway lines in the United States in the month of July, 1922, fortunately did not involve the Canadian railways. Reference is made elsewhere to the establishment of several Boards of Conciliation and Investigation in this connection under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, to which the various disputes arising were referred.

Labour disputes affecting longshoremen and shipping companies occurred during the year at several points including Montreal, Vancouver and Chatham, N.B. No proceedings occurred under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act in connection with these matters, but the good offices of the Department of Labour were utilized in conciliation proceedings. The most important of these disputes was that which occurred in the harbour of Montreal on the opening of navigation in the month of April. Mr. E. McG. Quirk held several conferences with the respective parties. The strike which occurred on April 17 was settled by mediation of the Mayor of Montreal on May 6.

Letters were received from workmen employed in the textile industry at several points, relative to wages disputes, and officers of the Department of Labour visited several of the cotton mills for the purpose of investigating the complaints and doing what was possible to promote mutual understanding between the employers and workers affected.

Mr. Quirk's services were utilized in the month of August, 1922, in connection with the adjustment of a dispute between the ship-liners of the port of Montreal and the shipping companies. This matter had previously been the subject of a reference under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act but the report of the board had not been accepted by the companies concerned.

In December, 1922, Mr. Quirk made an investigation into charges that one of the Montreal taxi companies was discriminating against union members by dismissing the latter from its employ. An application was made on behalf of the workmen for the establishment of a board under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act to deal with this case. As the matter in question was not one coming under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, the minister instructed Mr. Quirk to confer with the parties concerned and to do what was possible towards securing a settlement of the dispute. The matter was disposed of after several interviews with the employing company and workmen concerned. An assurance was given by the employer that there would be no discrimination against their employees by reason of their membership in labour unions.

Mr. Compton, apart from the duties of his position as fair wages officer, made an investigation into the earnings of workmen employed on car repairs for the Canadian National Railways in a factory in Hamilton, and reported thereon for the information of the Minister of Labour. Mr. Compton was instrumental also in securing an adjustment in a labour dispute in a wood-working factory in Meaford, Ont.

III.—FAIR WAGES

Reference was made in the last annual report to an Order in Council which was adopted on June 7, 1922, to secure the more effective observance of the fair wages policy; the complete text of the Order in Council was also printed in this report. The fair wages policy of the Government of Canada is based on a resolution of the House of Commons which was adopted at the session of 1900, as follows:—

"That it is resolved, that all Government contracts should contain such conditions as will prevent abuses, which may arise from the subletting of such contracts, and that every effort should be made to secure the payment of such wages as are generally accepted as current in each trade for competent workmen in the district where the work is carried out, and that this House cordially concurs in such policy, and deems it the duty of the Government to take immediate steps to give effect thereto.

"It is hereby declared that the work to which the foregoing policy shall apply includes not only work undertaken by the Government itself, but also all works aided by grant of Dominion public funds."

Additional force was given to the fair wages resolution in the revision of the Railway Act in 1903 by the inclusion in that statute of a section requiring the payment of current rates of wages to all workmen engaged in the construction of lines of railway towards which the Parliament of Canada voted financial aid. An Order in Council was also adopted in 1907 requiring contractors to post fair wages schedules in a conspicuous place on the public works under construction and to keep a record of payments made to workmen in their employ, such records to be open for inspection by the fair wages officers of the Government. In conformity with the foregoing, conditions have been inserted since 1900 in Government contracts to which the fair wages policy applies requiring the observance of current wages rates. In connection with proposed works of construction schedules have been generally prepared setting forth the minimum wages rates and hours of labour to be observed in the performance of the contract. In other cases a clause was inserted calling for the observance of current wages and hours of the district and providing that in the event of any dispute arising as to what are the current wages or hours the same shall be determined by the Minister of Labour whose decision shall be final.

An examination of the fair wages clauses of the forms of contract in use in the several Government departments, which was made last year at the instance of the Minister of Labour, showed that these clauses differed in various respects. It was felt by the Minister that the labour provisions in question should be made as nearly uniform in terms and administration as possible and the Order in Council of June 7, 1922, adopted on report of the Minister of Labour was accordingly framed with this object in view. The Order in Council contains two sets of labour conditions, marked "A" and "B" respectively, the former applicable to "all contracts made on behalf of the Government of Canada for the construction or remodelling of public buildings of all kinds, railways, canals, roads, bridges, locks, dry docks, elevators, harbours, piers, wharves, lighthouses, and other works for the improvement and safety of transportation and navigation, rifle ranges, fortifications and other works of defence, dams, hydraulic works, slides, piers, booms, and other works for facilitating the transmission of timber, and all other works and properties constructed or remodelled for the Government of Canada;" the like conditions are as far as practicable observable also by the departments of government in connection with all agreements involving the grant of Dominion public funds in the form of subsidy, advance, loan, or guarantee for any of the purposes mentioned. The conditions marked "B" are observable by the departments concerned in connection with "all contracts for the manufacture and supply to the Government of Canada of fittings for public buildings, harness, saddlery, clothing, and other outfit for the military and naval forces, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, letter carriers, and other Government officers and employees, mail bags, letter boxes, and other postal stores, and any other articles and things hereafter designated by the Governor in Council."

During the year 1922-23 the Department of Labour prepared fair wages conditions in connection with the execution of forty-five contracts. These were divided among the different departments of the Government as follows: Railways and Canals, 11; Indian Affairs, 10; Marine and Fisheries, 9; National Defence, 6; Public Works, 4; Interior, 4; Harbour Commissioners, 1.

FAIR WAGES COMPLAINTS ON GOVERNMENT WORKS

As in previous years complaint was made to the Department of Labour in various cases that contractors for Government works were not complying with the fair wages requirements of their contracts. Most of these complaints related to alleged payment of lower wages rates than were contemplated by the contract. Investigation was made of all these complaints by fair wages officers of the Department of Labour and steps were taken to secure the rights of those concerned. Some of the contracts in question contained fair wages schedules. In other cases it was necessary for the fair wages officer to ascertain the rates current in the district, the requirement of the contract in these cases being that the contractor should pay the workpeople the rates of wages current in the district for the various classes of labour required.

The principal complaints received during the year related to the contracts for the construction of the Welland Ship Canal, which was the largest public work under way during the year. The first contracts on the Welland Ship Canal were placed in 1913. Work under these contracts was, however, discontinued during the war, but was later resumed under the direction of the Department of Railways and Canals. Contracts for the completion of sections 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 were subsequently let by the Dominion Government and provision was made in all cases for the observance of the rates of wages and hours of labour current in the district for different classes of workmen employed. At the beginning of the season of 1922 various reductions were proposed in the wages rates which were unacceptable to the classes of labour affected. Inquiry was accordingly made by the Minister of Labour into the current wages conditions for the corresponding trades in the district and a schedule was sanctioned by the minister setting out the rates payable on the canal contracts, effective from May 1.

Following is a list of the complaints relative to alleged non-payment of fair wages rates on Government contract which were dealt with by the Department of Labour during the year:—

March 31, 1923

| Complaint received | Locality and public work | Department affected | Subject of Investigation | Disposition |
| April 11, 1922 | Rockcliffe, Ont., Rifle Ranges. | National Defence..... | Alleged that carpenters were not being paid the prevailing rate of wages. | The matter was taken up with the Department of National Defence, and assurance was received that the prevailing rate would be paid. |
| April 19, 1922 | Vancouver, B.C., Ballantyne Pier. | Vancouver Harbour Commissioners. | Trifling of stevedores and operating engineers on account of reduction in wages. | Through the mediation of an officer of the department, who held conferences with the contractors, the engineers returned to work. |
| April 28, 1922 | Toronto, Ont., Harbour Works. | Public Works..... | Complaint regarding proposed reduction in wages of hoisting and portable engineers and demand for increased wages by carpenters. | The complaint of the hoisting engineers was referred to the Department of Public Works and was also investigated by an officer of the Department of Labour, who reported that the proposed new rates were those which had been recommended previously by the Department of Labour to the Department of Public Works. Further recommendations concerning wages were made to the Department of Public Works and assurance was received that the same would be put into effect. The demand of the carpenters for increased wages was also investigated by an officer of the department and an increase was recommended to the Department of Public Works to be retroactive from July 1. |
| May 1, 1922 | Welland Ship Canal..... | Railways and Canals. | 1. Announcment by contractors of certain reductions in wages scale in effect during previous season. | 1. The Minister of Labour prepared a fair wages schedule, setting out the current rates of the district payable to the different classes of workmen employed on the canal works, based on enquiries made throughout the district by two of the departmental fair wages officers. The rates contained in the schedule were disputed at the outset by the contractors, but were later accepted and made effective from May 1. |
| June 3, 1922 | | | 2. Complaint that workmen in some cases were requested to work excessively long hours at straight time. | 2. The fair wages schedule sanctioned by the Minister of Labour did not deal with the subject of hours. The Minister expressed a desire that overtime work should be avoided as far as possible. The ten-hour day which had been in force during the previous summer continued in effect until the winter, when the working day was reduced to one of nine hours. |
| June 10, 1922 | | | 3. Request of steam shovel men for introduction of monthly system of pay to replace hourly rates. | 3. Investigation was made by an officer of the department of this request, but it was not felt that the conditions of employment on other steam shovel work in the district justified the department in requesting the contractors to accept the workers' demand. A strike occurred of the latter on August 14, but was ineffective. |
| July 19, 1922 | | | 4. Complaint that the rate fixed for locomotive crane operators was lower than the rates current in the district. | 4. Consideration was given to this complaint by the Minister, who did not feel that the information submitted warranted a change in the minimum rate previously set in the fair wages schedule. The rate for locomotive crane operators was, however, increased by the contractors during the fall. |
| Nov. 17, 1922 | | | 5. Claim made by form builders employed on one of the sections of the canal for the same rates of pay as carpenters. | 5. The claim of the workmen was presented in the form of a round robin and was supported by the threat of a strike. Their demand was granted. |
| | | | 6. Claim that electric hoist runners were entitled to the same wages rate as steam hoist engineers. | 6. Enquiry failed to elicit information to support the claim in question and no action was taken. |
| | | | 7. Individual claims for back time pay were received by the Minister of Labour from a number of workmen. | 7. The claims in question were adjusted by the contractors. |
| | | | 8. Alleged that iron-workers engaged in erection of bridge were not receiving the current rate of wages of the district. | 8. The current rate of wages payable under the terms of contract was determined by the Minister after enquiry by an officer of the Department and was put into effect by the contractors. |

| May 24, 1922 | Providence Bay, Manitoulin Island, Ont., Wharf. | Public Works..... | Alleged that the prevailing rates of wages were not being paid to skilled workers. | The matter was taken up with the Department of Public Works, who investigated the same and found that skilled labour was not being employed on this work and that the current rate was not being paid for common labour. Assurance was later received that an increase had been granted to the complainants. |
| July 17, 1922 | Trent Canal, Nassau Dam | Railways and Canals. | Alleged that carpenters were not being paid the current rates in the district. | An officer of the department investigated the matter and found that the claim was justified. A fair wages rate was recommended to the Department of Railways and Canals and made effective from July 15, 1922. |
| Aug. 10, 1922 | North Sydney, Cape Breton, N.S., Repairs to breakwater; Barrington Cove, Sydney Mines, N.S., Reconstruction of wharf. Little Bras d'Or, Cape Breton, N.S., Repairs to wharf. | Public Works..... | Alleged that the prevailing rates of wages were not being paid. | The matter was referred to the Department of Public Works. Advice was received that an increase was being granted. |
| Jan. 25, 1923 | Brandon, Ont., Redeeming Post Office. | Public Works..... | Alleged that painters were not being paid the prevailing rate of wages. | The matter was taken up with the Department of Public Works and was also investigated by an officer of the department and it was found that the claim was not justified. |
| Feb. 10, 1923 | Montreal, Que., Grain Elevator No. 1, Steel storage bins. | Harbour Commissioners. | Alleged that the current rates in the district were not being paid. | The matter was taken up with the Department of Marine and Fisheries, who investigated the same and advised that the work in question was not being performed by contract nor with the aid of any grant of Dominion public funds, but was being executed by employees of the Harbour Commission and that the wages paid conformed to a schedule agreed on between the Harbour Union of Montreal and the Commissioners in April, 1922, effective for one year. |
| Mar. 17, 1923 | Esquimalt, B.C., Naval hospital. | Public Works..... | Alleged that the prevailing rates of wages were not being paid, and requesting that a fair wages schedule be posted on the works. | An officer of the department investigated the matter and found that the current rates of wages were being paid. The matter was also taken up with the Department of Public Works, who gave instructions to have the fair wages clause of the contract posted on the works. |
| Aug. 8, 1922 | Esquimalt, B.C., Dry-dock | Public Works..... | Alleged that the sub-contractors were not paying overtime rates for time worked on Saturday from 12 o'clock noon to midnight. (Reference was made to this complaint in the last annual report.) | The matter was investigated by an officer of the department and it was found that two shifts were employed. The Minister of Labour made a ruling to the effect that where two shifts are employed, straight time at the regular hourly rates shall apply for work performed from 12 o'clock noon to midnight Saturday. The contractors were notified that a third shift which had been employed by one of the sub-contractors would be subject to overtime rates for hours in excess of forty-four per week. |

IV.—STATISTICAL BRANCH

Under arrangements with the Dominion Statistician in accordance with the "Statistics Act, 1918," certain classes of statistics which specially relate to the work of the Department of Labour are dealt with by the officers of the department in co-operation with the Dominion Statistician, in close association with statistics of general social and economic conditions as organized in the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The classification of industries and occupations drawn up in the Bureau is followed in the compilation of the statistics of labour. This arrangement was approved, as required under the Statistics Act, 1918, by an Order in Council dated October 16, 1922.

The following paragraphs review the statistical work of the department as to strikes and lockouts, wages and prices. A statement as to fatal industrial accidents appears in chapter V of the present report.

Strikes and lockouts during the calendar year 1922 numbered 85, as against 145 for the preceding year, but the number of workers involved stood at 41,050, as compared with 22,930 during 1921. In the amount of time loss, as well as in the number of employees involved, the figures in the disputes of 1922 greatly exceeded those of 1921, there being 1,975,276 working days lost in 1922, as against 956,461 in 1921, but approximately 50 per cent of this time loss occurred in a single strike, that of the coal miners in Alberta and British Columbia, which lasted from April to the end of August.

The departmental record of strikes and lockouts in Canada was begun on the establishment of the department toward the end of 1900 and particulars of industrial disputes have been given each month in the Labour Gazette; also as early in each year as possible a summary statement for the previous calendar year is printed in the Labour Gazette, with a statistical analysis. The figures are given for the calendar rather than the fiscal year, because in this form they become more easily comparable with statistics on the same subject gathered in other countries, which also as a rule use the calendar year. The figures printed are inclusive of all strikes which come to the knowledge of the department, and the methods taken to secure information practically preclude probability of omissions of a serious nature. So far as concerns figures given with respect to duration of strikes, numbers of employees concerned, etc., it is impossible always to secure exact information, but the estimate made in such cases is the result of painstaking methods in the collection of data, and, with increasing experience in dealing with the subject, it is believed that the statistics indicate the conditions with reasonable precision.

The record of the department includes lockouts as well as strikes, but a lockout or an industrial condition which is undoubtedly a lockout is rarely encountered. In the statistical tables, therefore, strikes and lockouts are recorded together under the term "industrial disputes".

A strike or lockout, included as such in the records of the department, is a cessation of work involving six or more employees, and lasting more than one working day. Disputes of only one day's duration or less and disputes involving less than six employees are not included in the published record, but a separate record of such disputes is maintained in the department. During 1922 there were 14 such disputes involving 796 employees and a time loss of 1,539 working days. Among these 14 disputes there were the following involving fairly large numbers of employees: 2 strikes of coal shippers at Sydney, N.S., for increased wages, involving 202 employees, lasting 8 hours and 24 hours respectively, and causing a total time loss of 269 working days; a strike of coal miners at Drumheller, Alberta, for increased wages, involving 120 employees and a time loss of 120 working days; and a strike at a pulp and paper plant at Fort Frances, Ontario, for increased wages, involving 146 employees and a time loss of 243 working days.

The feature of the year was the great time loss due to strikes of employees in coal mining, 1,219,064 working days out of the total of 1,975,276 being due to the strikes in this industry, while most of this time loss, 931,960 days, occurred in a single strike in British Columbia and Alberta (District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America). In addition to this strike and the strike of nearly 15,000 miners in Nova Scotia in August, lasting nearly three weeks, there were twelve other strikes in coal mining. The accompanying chart shows that during the 22 years for which a record is available the time loss in strikes in coal mining has been great in 1922, 1919, 1917, 1913, 1911, 1910, 1909 and 1903, and that in each of these years it accounted for a large proportion of the total time loss for the year, except in the year 1919. The general strike at Winnipeg in 1919, in sympathy with a strike of the metal trades in that city, and the general sympathetic strikes in other cities, accounted for the large total of time loss due to metal trade strikes in that year. (The time loss in working days for metal trades in 1919, shown in the chart, includes also the time loss incurred in strikes in sympathy with strikes in the metal trades that year, 851,095 at Winnipeg and approximately 25,000 at Toronto, leaving a loss of 1,117,609 days for strikes in the metal trades only.) It will be noted that, except in 1918, 1919 and 1920, there has been very little time loss due to strikes in the metal trades.

The most important strikes of the year were two strikes of coal miners, that in British Columbia and Alberta, District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America, from April 1 to August 28, and that in Nova Scotia, District 26 of the same organization, from August 14 to September 5. The first of these strikes was against a proposed reduction in wages and was concurrent with a strike of coal miners in the United States against a reduction of wages. As in the United States, the scale of wages prior to the strike was renewed for the period September 1 to March 31, 1923, in most of the mines concerned. In Nova Scotia wages had been reduced early in the year and the employees struck for a renewal of the 1921 rates. The settlement provided for increased rates, but lower than in 1921. An account of these strikes appeared in the Labour Gazette for September.

Other important strikes were those in the printing trades, most of which commenced in the early summer of 1921, for the 44-hour week in job printing offices. Ten of these were carried over into 1922 and were also unsettled at the end of the year. The number of men on strike, however, was reduced gradually, settlements being effected with some employers, while some of the employees secured work with other employers and some returned to work on the employers' terms.

A strike of the railway employees of the steel and coal companies in the neighbourhood of Sydney, N.S., which began on November 22, 1920, was not settled until November 25, 1922, the employees resuming work on December 1, 1922, under agreements between the employing companies and committees of employees which established rates of pay and working conditions.

Other strikes causing considerable time loss were those of fishermen in British Columbia in July, coal miners near Edmonton in December, clothing workers in Montreal on several occasions, and longshoremen in Montreal in April and May.

Of the 85 strikes and lockouts during the calendar year, 15 were carried over from 1921, there being 70 disputes commencing in 1922. The number of employees involved in these 85 disputes was 41,050 and the total time loss was estimated at 1,975,276 working days. This is ascertained by multiplying the number of men directly affected through each strike, or lockout, by the number of working days they are so affected during the time the firm or establishment is involved.

An analysis by numbers of employees involved shows 1,000 or more employees involved in 4.7 per cent of the disputes, while in 56.5 per cent there were less than 100, and in 81.2 per cent less than 250 employees involved. As in 1921, a large proportion of the strikes were of brief duration, 43.6 per cent ending within 15 days. The number of strikes lasting 30 days or over was 21.2 per cent of the total number. As regards time loss, 31.8 per cent of the disputes resulted in a loss of less than 500 working days each and 42.4 per cent in a loss of less than 1,000 working days each. There were 4 strikes which resulted in a time loss of over 100,000 days each, two being in the mining group and two in the printing and publishing group.

The province most affected by industrial disputes during the year 1922 was Alberta, where 20 disputes (23.5 per cent of the total) occurred, involving 10,562 employees and causing a time loss of 966,842 working days. Nova Scotia had only 5 strikes, but 15,136 employees were involved and 321,062 working days lost. In Quebec there were 19 disputes, involving 10,666 employees and resulting in a time loss of 223,343 working days, while in Ontario the 24 disputes recorded affected only 2,934 employees, but caused a time loss of 368,018 working days.

An analysis by industries shows that, measured by time loss, the mining, smelting and quarrying group sustained the greatest loss, with 1,219,064 working days lost or 61.7 per cent of the total time loss for the year. The printing and publishing group was second with a time loss of 534,874 working days, or 27.1 per cent of the total. The time loss in the remaining groups was comparatively small, the third greatest loss being only 2.6 per cent of the total. The mining group was also the one most affected by disputes, when the unit of measurement is the number of employees involved, 25,179 employees having been affected. The clothing group was next with 5,626 employees, and water transportation third with 3,119 employees involved. The greatest number of disputes in any one group was 17 in building and construction. The mining, smelting and quarrying group was second with 14, and the printing and publishing third with 13 disputes.

Classified by causes, 58 of the 85 disputes recorded, or 68.2 per cent of the total, involved wages. Of this number 41 were in protest against wage reductions. Eight were for increased wages, 7 for increased wages and shorter hours and 2 for increased wages and other changes. In 4 of the strikes the cause was protest against longer hours, while 7 were for union recognition.

Fifteen disputes terminated in favour of the employees and 35 in favour of the employers; 20 were settled by compromise; while 15 were indefinite or unterminated. Taking the number of employees as the unit of measurement, the records show that 7,947 employees were involved in strikes that terminated unfavourably for them, while 14,462 were concerned in strikes which terminated in their favour. There were 15,796 employees involved in strikes that were settled by compromise, and 2,845 in disputes which remained unterminated at the end of the year, or were indefinite in result.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

As regards methods of settlement, 35 terminated as a result of negotiations between the parties in dispute, 5 through efforts of conciliation or mediation, instituted in three cases through the Department of Labour, and one by arbitration. In 15 disputes the employees returned to work on the employers' terms and in 13 strikes the strikers were replaced by other workers.

WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOUR

Statistics as to wages and hours of labour are secured to a considerable extent in connection with the work of the department on strikes and lockouts, industrial agreements, conciliation and mediation proceedings under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, fair wage schedules, and reports of changes in wages and hours. Reports are also secured each year from representative employers in the various industries and from labour organizations as to the rates of wages in effect.

The series of bulletins on wages and hours of labour in Canada begun in 1921 has been continued, Report No. 4 issued in December, 1922, giving information as to rates of wages in certain trades and industries for 1921 and 1922. The accompanying table from that bulletin indicates the movement in wage rates during 1922 as compared with previous years for the classes included, and these index numbers are intended to show the trend in wage rates pending the calculation and publication of an index number covering the industries more completely. It will be noted that during 1922 wages continued to decline in the building trades, metal trades, on electric and steam railways, and in coal mining, as well as in factories and in lumbering, while in printing trades there was a slight decline in hourly rates.

The classes of labour for which rates were used for the calculation of the index number table for the period 1901 to 1922, are, in the main, skilled trades; and practically all, even the unskilled, are in most cities organized to a great extent in trade and labour unions. The statistics given in these tables, therefore, show wage rates and hours of labour in a number of organized occupations in certain cities at the period under review. They do not, however, indicate the changes in wages outside of industrial centres.

The index numbers showing to some extent the trend of wages for labour in factories and for the lumbering industry are calculated from sample rates for establishments throughout the Dominion and provide a comparison of the changes in these classes with the changes in the classes mentioned above. For instance the index numbers for these samples from 1911 to 1922 indicate that rates of wages for these classes increased from 1913 to 1920 in somewhat greater proportion than for occupations in the building, metal, printing trades, etc. The figures for 1921, as compared with 1920, in most cases showed somewhat greater decreases in the average for employees in factories and in lumbering than in the building, metal, printing trades, etc., but for 1922 the changes in the various groups, with the exception of printing, seem to average about five per cent decrease.

Reports of important changes in wages and hours of labour are also given in the Labour Gazette from time to time. The reports and bulletins in the Annual Census of Industry issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics are reviewed in the Labour Gazette and the tables as to wages and earnings in each industry are reproduced in summary form.

The department secures so far as is possible copies of all industrial agreements between employers and employees and schedule of wages, and these are summarized each month in the Labour Gazette, sections of special importance or significance being given in full.

PRICES

The publication in the Labour Gazette each month of statistics of retail prices of staple goods, and of coal and wood and coal oil, and as to the rentals of six-roomed workingmen's houses in some sixty of the industrial centres of Canada, begun in 1910, has been continued. As during 1921, the figures as to food prices have been secured through the Dominion Bureau of Statistics from representative butchers and grocers in these centres as well as through the resident correspondents of the Labour Gazette. The calculation of a weekly family budget of foods, fuel and rent, in order to show the changes in the costs of these items from month to month, which has been continued and supplemented by information as to the changes in the cost of clothing, boots, etc., secured quarterly, has made possible the publication from time to time in the Labour Gazette of a table showing, by percentages, the changes in the cost of the principal items of family consumption as in the accompanying table.

In connection with the statistics of wholesale prices published by the department in special reports from 1910 to 1917 and monthly in the Labour Gazette since 1911, it is to be noted that, as a result of an arrangement made in 1918, the Dominion Statistician has constructed a new index number of wholesale prices in Canada designed to replace that published by the department as the official index number for Canada. The new index number was published shortly after the close of the fiscal year in a special report entitled "Prices and Price Indexes, 1918-1922." This publication contained two index numbers. The first, "unweighted" like that published by the Labour Department, covered the period 1890 to 1921 and was constructed chiefly from the records of prices back to 1890 compiled and published by the department. The other, "weighted" according to the importance of the commodities, covered the period 1919 to 1922, and this index is kept up to date from month to month and is published in the Labour Gazette. Both of these index numbers are based upon prices in 1913 as 100. The index number calculated by the department covering the period 1890 to date (based upon prices 1890-1899 as 100) is now, therefore, published only in summary form in order to afford comparison with the earlier years. This will be discontinued when the Dominion Statistician has carried the new "weighted" number back for years prior to 1913. Other index numbers of wholesale prices in Canada calculated by Professor H. Michell, the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the United States Federal Reserve Board, are given in summary form each month in the Labour Gazette.

Statistics as to the movements of prices in other countries have been published as in previous years, the considerable development of statistical work of this nature in nearly all countries having increased the amount of information available.

The statistics of wholesale prices collected by the department have been in considerable demand during the past year in connection with the analysis of the trend of prices and industrial and trade conditions.

The statistics of prices and cost of living have been used to a considerable extent in the adjustment of wages, while in some cases employers and employees have agreed to adjust wage rates from time to time according to the cost of living statistics in the Labour Gazette.

In the coal mining district of Vancouver island the operators and the miners have agreed to continue the arrangement made at the end of 1918, whereby the changes in the cost of living are ascertained every three months by a commission and a corresponding change in wages is effected. Such adjustments in wages are in the nature of a flat increase (or decrease) for all classes of employees, including the clerical and office staffs. The following adjustments were recommended and made during the fiscal year: May 1, 1922, an increase of $8\frac{1}{2}$ -9 cents per day; August 1, 1922, a decrease of 2 cents per day; November 1, 1922, a decrease of $15\frac{1}{2}$ -16 cents per day; February 1, 1923, a decrease of $4\text{-}4\frac{1}{2}$ cents per day. The lower of the two rates is for mines where the base rate was \$3 per day and the higher where the base rate was \$3.15 per day. The commission consisted of Mr. D. T. Bulger, Fair Wages Officer of the Department of Labour, chairman; Mr. Tully Boyce, for the operators; and Mr. Matthew Gunniss, for the miners.

V—LABOUR GAZETTE

During the past fiscal year the Labour Gazette has been published monthly in both English and French, the average paid up monthly circulation of the English edition having been 8,968 copies, and of the French edition 1,632 copies. Many paid subscriptions are received from individual subscribers and several chartered banks and employers of labour have subscribed for certain of their officials. Included in the subscription list also are the names of many labour organization units which have subscribed for their whole membership. In addition to the paid circulation of the Labour Gazette copies are distributed gratuitously to public libraries, boards of trade, labour organizations, government departments, newspapers, trade journals (both at home and abroad), as well as to persons from whom the department seeks information. The average monthly distribution of complimentary copies has been 4,159 of the English edition and 575 of the French, making an aggregate monthly average circulation of the Labour Gazette for the fiscal year of 15,334 copies.

The Labour Gazette constitutes the medium of publication of the official record of all proceedings under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, and publishes in full all reports of boards of conciliation and investigation. It also prints either complete or summarized reports of proceedings of official commissions, of employers' and workers' conventions, and of international and other important conferences held in Canada and other countries and relating to industrial matters. The Labour Gazette also contains in condensed form information concerning industrial disputes and agreements, fluctuations in employment, changes in wages and hours of labour and other working conditions, the course of wholesale and retail prices in Canada and other countries, fatal industrial accidents, technical education and many other subjects. In order that such information with respect to Canada shall be as comprehensible as possible, the department maintains correspondents in some sixty-three industrial centres in the Dominion. Reports have been given of important legal proceedings and of typical legal decisions affecting labour. Among the outstanding legal decisions that have been summarized were two delivered by the Permanent Court of International Justice, one with reference to the appointment of workers' delegates to the International Labour Conference and the other in regard to the competence of the International Labour Organization to deal with agricultural labour, a judgment of the United States Supreme Court respecting the liability of trade unions for strike damages; an important decision reported also was a judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council respecting the employment of Orientals in British Columbia lumber camps. Summaries were published of new legislation of an industrial or social nature enacted in Canada, Great Britain, the United States and other countries, and the text of various Orders in Council of interest to labour was given in full. Among the special articles appearing in the Labour Gazette during the year may be mentioned a summary of the proceedings under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act since 1907, and an analysis of the changes in the cost of living in Canada and other countries from 1913 to 1922. The subject of apprenticeship was dealt with in a number of articles, and other interesting movements such as labour banks, workers' education, housing plans, etc., were discussed from time to time.

In the preparation and indexing of volume XXII of the Labour Gazette, which covers the calendar year 1922, care has been taken to present material in concise form in order both to facilitate the work of reference and to effect economy in the matter of space. During the year it was found necessary to have reprints of certain articles of unusual industrial interest.

In addition to the work in connection with the publication of the Labour Gazette there was prepared in this branch a compilation of labour legislation enacted by the Dominion and provinces during 1922. Information with reference to various matters dealt with in the Labour Gazette was also supplied on request, particularly with regard to labour legislation and industrial accidents.

The Labour Gazette, being an official publication, and the matter appearing therein being largely of a specialized nature, its contents become frequently a matter of quotation. Credit to the Labour Gazette is usually given where the publication quoting is of recognized standing, and the journals named below are among those which, during the year, reprinted, in whole or in part, original articles appearing in the Labour Gazette. The following list is by no means inclusive, and does not of course include ordinary references to the monthly and quarterly statistical articles on employment, prices, industrial accidents, etc.: International Labour Office, Industrial Labour Information, British Labour Gazette, United States Monthly Labour Review, Weekly News Summary (U.S. Department of Labour), American Labour Legislation Review, Bloomfield's Labour Digest, Industrial News Survey, New Zealand Employers' Federation Industrial Bulletin, Industrial Canada, Canadian Manufacturer, Maritime Mining Record, Social Welfare, Ottawa Capital, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers, and Helpers' Monthly Journal, and Labour Leader.

FATAL INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS IN CANADA, IN 1922

The Department of Labour maintains a record of fatal accidents occurring to workmen in the course of their employment, collected from Provincial Workmen's Compensation Boards, Factory and Mines Inspectors, the Board of Railway Commissioners, the press, and other sources. This record is published quarterly in the Labour Gazette, with an annual summary, the special object being to illustrate the hazards connected with specific employments.

In the Vital Statistics section of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, a comprehensive record of deaths, including deaths by accident, is maintained monthly through transcripts forwarded by the Provincial Registrars General (P.C. 693, dated April 22, 1919). Deaths in this record are classified by causes according to the International Code. The Transportation Branch of the Bureau also compiles a special report on railway accidents. The departmental record is checked annually for verification and definite report with the vital statistical returns of the Bureau—similarity of industrial and occupational classification being maintained.

The accompanying table summarizes the statistics as to fatal industrial accidents in Canada from month to month with comparative figures for the year 1921.

While an effort has been made to have the record as complete as possible it should be understood that it does not necessarily include all the fatal industrial accidents that may have occurred in the course of the year.

During the year reports of industrial fatalities were received by the Department from a number of sources, among which may be mentioned the following: For Canada, the Board of Railway Commissioners and the Explosives Division of the Department of Mines, Ottawa; for Nova Scotia, the Workmen's Compensation Board, and the Department of Public Works and Mines; for New Brunswick, the Workmen's Compensation Board; for Quebec, the Department of Public Works and Labour, and the Bureau of Mines; for Ontario, the Factory Inspector, the Workmen's Compensation Board, the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway, the Algoma Steel Corporation Limited, and the Lake Superior Paper Company; for Manitoba, the Bureau of Labour, and the Workmen's Compensation Board; for Saskatchewan, the Bureau of Labour; for Alberta, the Workmen's Compensation Board; and for British Columbia, the Department of Mines, and the Workmen's Compensation Board.

According to the record, 1,107 deaths were due to industrial accidents in 1922 as compared with 922 in 1921. The transportation and public utilities group had the largest number of fatalities, there being 317 deaths, or 28·6 per cent of the total for all groups. Of these 141, or 12·7 per cent, occurred on the steam railways, and 88, or 7·9 per cent, in water transportation. Seventy-one deaths occurred in the steam railway service through the worker being struck by, run over by, or crushed by or between cars or engines, 24 were due to derailments and collisions, and 24 to falls from cars and engines. In the mining, non-ferrous smelting and quarrying group, there were reported 168 deaths, of which 97 occurred in the coal mining industry. Falls of rock, stone, etc., and cave-ins accounted for 65 deaths, 37 were due to explosions, and 19 to mine and quarry cars. In the manufacturing industry there were 159 deaths recorded, 43 of which occurred in saw and planing mills, 39 in the industries of iron, steel and their products, and 10 in the vegetable foods, drink and tobacco group. In the saw and planing mills, 20 deaths were due to machinery and "prime movers" used in the working of machinery and 9 were due to "flying objects" including wood rebounding from saws, etc. In the iron, steel and their products group, 7 deaths were due to trains and 5 were caused by infection. In the lumbering industry, 147 deaths were reported, of which 36 were due to falling trees, branches, etc., and 37 were due to drowning. In the construction group, there were 145 deaths, 40 of which were due to falls and 32 to falling objects. The record of all the industries shows 69 deaths due to machinery and "prime movers", 39 due to hoisting apparatus, and 118 to dangerous substances, among which are included: steam escapes and boiler explosions, 6; explosive substances, 58; and electric currents, 41. There were 124 deaths due to drownings, 26 to infection and 17 to asphyxiation.

The distribution according to provinces showed Ontario with the highest death record, 469, while in British Columbia and Quebec there were 190 and 155 respectively. In the monthly analysis the largest number was shown in December, there being 119 fatalities reported in that month, while in August there were 116. In the third quarter of the year there were 335 deaths reported and in the last quarter 326. Further particulars of these fatalities can be obtained from the quarterly statements appearing in the issues of the Labour Gazette for June, August and November, 1922, and February, 1923. In addition to the fatalities given in these quarterly statements five others have since been reported, all of which occurred in Ontario. These comprised a bushman killed by being struck by a tree, a motorman with a mining company killed by the overturning of a car, an engineer with a manufacturing company who fell through a trap door, a labourer at a creamery who received a fractured skull, and a sailor who was drowned.

VI. THE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE BRANCH

The present statement represents the fifth annual report of the Employment Service Branch of the department, known commonly as the Employment Service of Canada, being for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1923. Agreements were effected with all the provinces except New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Agreements were also made with the cities of Moncton, Chatham and St. John, New Brunswick, in accordance with the 1920 amendment to the Employment Offices Co-ordination Act. The New Brunswick Government arranged with the municipalities concerned to pay twenty-five per cent of their expenditure on employment offices.

At the beginning of the year there were seventy-six employment offices operating under the Employment Offices Co-ordination Act and at the end of the year there were seventy-eight, distributed among the provinces as follows: Nova Scotia, 5; New Brunswick, 3; Quebec, 5; Ontario, 26; Manitoba, 10; Saskatchewan, 10; Alberta, 6; British Columbia, 13. During the year the office at Kelowna, B.C., was closed and new offices were opened at St. John, New Brunswick, and The Pas, Manitoba. In addition a separate office for women was opened in Halifax, N.S., and two junior offices were listed for Winnipeg (one for girls and one for boys) instead of one.

The agreements effected with the provinces and with the municipalities respectively followed generally the lines of the preceding year, the only change of importance being with regard to the matter of unrefunded advances for transportation. Since 1919 unrefunded advances for travelling expenses of persons sent to employment at a distance and secured through the Employment Service have been included as proper expenditures under the Act, provided that no payment was to be made by the Federal Government on account of losses in excess of ten per cent of the total advances made during the year. This limitation was omitted in the 1922-23 agreement.

STATISTICAL REPORT OF EMPLOYMENT OFFICES

During the year the number of applications for employment reported by the offices of the Employment Service was 547,377, of which 440,663 were from men and 106,714 from women. During the preceding year applications for employment numbered 546,168.

The number of vacancies notified by employers to the Employment Service was 489,816, of which 383,878 were for men and 105,938 for women workers. Vacancies reported to the Service during the preceding year totalled 437,682.

During the fiscal year the offices of the Service effected a total of 412,527 placements, of which 300,982 were in regular employment, and 111,545 in casual work. (Employment of a duration of one week or less is termed casual). Placements of men in regular employment numbered 267,558, and of women were 33,424, while of the placements in casual work 65,832 were of men and 45,713 of women. The total number of placements reported during the fiscal year 1921-22 was 363,475, of which 276,867 were in regular employment and 86,608 in casual work.

STAFF

At the beginning of the fiscal year there were 310 persons in the Employment Service. Fifty-four of these were on the staff of the Dominion Government—46 in the Department of Labour at Ottawa, 6 in the Interprovincial Clearing House at Winnipeg, and 2 in the Branch Clearing House at Halifax. The remaining 256 were on the staffs of the various provincial governments as follows: Nova Scotia, 8; New Brunswick, 5; Quebec, 25; Ontario, 94; Manitoba, 32; Saskatchewan, 30; Alberta, 28; British Columbia, 34.

At the end of the year the total number of employees in the Employment Service had decreased to 272. The staff in the Department of Labour at Ottawa had been reduced to 23, and 4 persons were employed in the Interprovincial Clearing House at Winnipeg, a total of 27 in the employ of the Federal Government; the continuance of a federal office in the Maritime Provinces beyond the close of the fiscal year was considered unnecessary. The reduction of the staff at Ottawa was accounted for in part by the transfer of certain statistical work as mentioned below to the Dominion Statistician; other reductions were effected by a rearrangement of work and occasionally by the discontinuance of certain duties which though regarded as necessary at the incorporation of the Employment Service system became unnecessary as the work developed. The remaining 245 were employed by the provincial governments as follows: Nova Scotia, 9; New Brunswick, 8; Quebec, 25; Ontario, 91; Manitoba, 29; Saskatchewan, 26; Alberta, 24; British Columbia, 33.

CONFERENCES

The fourth annual meeting of the Employment Service of Canada was held at Ottawa, June 7-9. Prior to the meeting a two-day conference of employment office officials was held at which questions of administration and technique were discussed, while the yearly conference of western representatives of the Service was held at Winnipeg, March 1 and 2, 1923. Some features of the proceedings of these meetings are mentioned later.

EMPLOYMENT STATISTICS

During the first half of the fiscal year statistics covering the field of employment were gathered by the Employment Service from four principal sources; semi-monthly reports from employers, daily reports from employment offices, monthly trade union reports and reports on building permits. Towards the end of the calendar year the work of collecting and compiling statistics from the first and last of these four sources was transferred to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and for the remainder of the fiscal year ended March 31, 1923, the Employment Service gathered statistics from employment offices and from trade unions only.

Daily reports from all the offices of the Employment Service throughout Canada show the number of orders for workers received, the number of applications from workers received, and the number of placements made. Reports from trade unions throughout the country show the number of members in each union and the number of members out of work or working short time, reflecting in a measure the state of employment in the more skilled trades. These reports are received monthly from approximately 1,500 labour organizations with an aggregate membership of 151,000.

For slightly over a year the Employment Service issued a bulletin "Employment", containing statistical and other information. In November, 1922, however, it was decided to publish in the Labour Gazette the data hitherto appearing in "Employment" and the latter publication was accordingly discontinued.

LABOUR MOBILITY

The clearance work of the Employment Service was carried on during the year along the lines previously developed and the arrangement with regard to the admission of workers from Great Britain, involving close co-operation between the Immigration Department and the Employment Service, also continued in effect. This system of co-operation was commended at the fourth annual meeting of the Employment Service Council of Canada in June, 1922, and it was recommended that the arrangement be made more effective by providing that persons shall be permitted to recruit labour from the United Kingdom for employment in Canada only under the supervision of the British Minister of Labour.

Since 1919 a special transportation rate for persons being sent to employment at a distance has been granted. This rate during the year under review was 2·7 cents per mile with a minimum fare of $4. tickets issued at this rate being second class. The rate obtains over the following railways: Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Railway, Grand Trunk Railway, Dominion Atlantic Railways, Kettle Valley Railroad, Michigan Central Railway, Pacific Great Eastern Railway, Quebec Central Railway, Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, and Wabash Railroad. Reduced fare applies only in cases of bona fide placements through the Employment Service and presupposes the existence of a well-organized system of provincial and interprovincial clearance to insure that persons will not be despatched long distances when suitable employment is available near at hand.

The number of special rate certificates issued by offices of the Service during the fiscal year 1922-23 was 38,252, of which 22,879 were issued to points in the same province as the despatching offices and 15,373 to points in other provinces. The accompanying table shows details relating to the certificates issued.

The subject of advancing transportation to unemployed workers was fully discussed by the Employment Service Council of Canada and a committee was appointed to submit a report on the subject. The recommendations of this committee adopted by the Council were as follows: (1) That when a provincial Employment Service desires the Department of Labour to participate in the cost of any scheme of advancing transportation fares to persons being transferred by the Service within the boundaries of the province, the general regulations governing such advances shall be submitted to the minister for approval, (2) That in the case of transfer of labour from one province to another through the Employment Service no advance for transportation shall be made by the transferring province without the consent of the receiving province. All such transfers must also be made in strict accordance with the regulations governing the interprovincial transfer of labour, (3) That in all such cases the advances shall be made only where persons are being sent to employment secured through the Service and upon an understanding as to the refund of fares, (4) That whenever any provincial Employment Service incurs financial loss in the transfer of workers under the accepted regulations, such loss shall be shared equally between the province concerned and the Federal Department of Labour.

FARM LABOUR

In view of the demand for farm workers at seeding time the railways agreed to grant a considerably reduced fare during April, 1922, to persons in the coast cities seeking farm work through the offices of the Employment Service. Under this arrangement 1,362 men were shipped from British Columbia to the prairies. It was found that this supply would not be sufficient to meet the spring and summer demand in Saskatchewan. By an arrangement with the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, however, special rates were granted for one week in May to farm workers going from Toronto, Hamilton or Ottawa to Moose Jaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Swift Current, Weyburn and Yorkton, and three hundred men were sent under this arrangement.

The meeting of the Employment Service Council of Canada held in Ottawa in June was attended by representatives of the railways and the mobilization and distribution of harvest labour were discussed at length. It was felt that it would be advisable for the railways to run the 1922 excursions from the East on the same basis as in previous years, but that the 1921 arrangement of selecting harvest workers in British Columbia through the Employment Service should again be made for the 1922 season.

Towards the end of July a meeting was held in Winnipeg to discuss arrangements for the excursions. This conference was attended by representatives of the passenger departments of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, representatives of the organized farmers of the three Prairie Provinces and representatives of the Employment Service from those provinces and from British Columbia. The number of men likely to be required, the rates of wages and the dates for the excursions were discussed.

Excursions were run from the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario, harvesters' tickets to Winnipeg being sold at rates varying from $15 to $22 according to point of departure, and transportation from Winnipeg to destination at the rate of one-half cent per mile. The number of excursionists forwarded from the East was as follows: by the Canadian Pacific, 18,761, and by the Canadian National-Grand Trunk Railways, 14,147. In addition 3,920 workers selected by the Employment Service were shipped from British Columbia at the special rates of $10 from Vancouver, and $11 from Victoria, and about 250 were shipped from eastern and southern British Columbia offices at the Employment Service reduced transportation rate. As additional men were needed for Manitoba the railways agreed to continue the special excursion fare to Winnipeg and the rate of one-half cent per mile to points in Manitoba only for workers selected by the Employment Service in certain eastern cities. Under this arrangement, which was effective from August 26 to September 2, about 400 workers were shipped from the East.

In order to secure the assistance and advice of the United Farmers of Manitoba in handling the many difficult problems in connection with supplying farm labour, delegates from the organization were invited to be present at the conference of western representatives of the Employment Service held in Winnipeg, March 1 and 2, 1923. Various phases of the problem were discussed at some length, including the question of wages and the possibility of importing farm help from Europe.

PLACEMENT OF SPECIAL CLASSES

The specialized work involved in the placement of workers of certain classes has been recognized by the Employment Service and where the volume of business has warranted such a step, separate divisions for some classes have been established. Where separate sections are not maintained, the interviewing and placement are handled by special officers.

In Toronto and Winnipeg separate professional and business and junior sections are maintained, and in the former city a special division for handicapped workers has also been provided.

Separate divisions for women are maintained in all the larger offices, and in the Women's Divisions of the Toronto and Winnipeg offices separate sections have been provided for the placement of women in farm, domestic and professional and business employment. The total number of placements of women during the fiscal year 1922-23 was 76,739. Of these 45,713 were in casual employment.

At the meeting of the Employment Service Council in June, 1922, a session was devoted to the problem of the placement of handicapped returned soldiers and industrial workers. The Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, the Minister of Labour, and a member of the parliamentary committee on re-establishment of returned soldiers, attended the conference to discuss the question. A committee was appointed to consider handicapped placement work. This committee recommended that the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment should discontinue its employment activities on a date to be arranged between the Federal and Provincial governments; that the placement of disabled ex-service men be handled by the Employment Service of Canada by means of a special section where considered necessary by the provincial employment service officials; and that the Federal Government should reimburse the Provincial Governments for the additional expense incurred by the Employment Service of Canada in carrying out these proposals. The committee also expressed the opinion that these recommendations should not be considered as relieving the Federal Government of the responsibility for those men who on account of war service disabilities are unemployable.

PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE COUNCILS

At the fourth annual meeting of the Employment Service Council of Canada, the committee appointed to report on unemployment recommended that in order to maintain and make more effective the interest of the community in unemployment and to co-operate with local authorities in measures for dealing with it, the Minister of Labour should make representations to the various Provincial Governments to appoint immediately provincial and local employment service councils in accordance with the terms of the agreement under the Employment Offices Co-ordination Act.

The employment service councils already established continued to function during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1923, and in addition a provincial employment service council for Ontario was appointed under Order in Council dated August 3. This council is composed of representatives of employers, employees, women in industry, banking interests, agricultural interests and soldier interests together with an impartial chairman. In addition to considering ways of promoting the efficiency of the Employment Service in Ontario, the Council studied means of preventing and alleviating unemployment. Particular attention was given in this connection to seasonal employment, relief work and the purchase of supplies by public bodies.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

One of the first subjects discussed by the provincial council was the establishment of local councils throughout the province, the localities in which councils should be formed and the membership of such councils being among the points touched upon. Toward the end of the year, the Provincial Council upon being informed that the minister had agreed to the establishment of local councils in five centres, resolved that councils should be established in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, London and Windsor, and recommended that the personnel of the local councils should be based upon the same principle of representation as that of the Employment Service Council of Ontario.

VII. TECHNICAL EDUCATION

The fourth year of the operation of the Technical Education Act has been a time of testing for vocational education throughout the Dominion. Provincial Governments have reduced expenditures wherever possible and in some places vocational work has suffered along with other branches of education. The total expenditures by the Provincial Governments on work coming within the provisions of the Technical Education Act decreased from $2,201,534.03 in 1921-22 to $1,835,093.20 for the past year, causing a corresponding decrease in the federal grants from $720,336.05 to $648,227.03. Classes have been discontinued in a number of the smaller places and there has been a decrease in the enrolments in the western provinces and in New Brunswick, but the increases in the other provinces have more than counterbalanced this falling off and the total enrolment in all classes shows an increase of 8,334 over the previous year. The number of pupils in day classes increased from 13,588 to 16,242, in evening classes from 46,219 to 53,080, and in correspondence departments from 613 to 978, giving a total enrolment in all classes of 70,300. A larger number of prospective teachers enrolled in the summer training schools and the number of teachers engaged in the work increased from 2,268 to 2,674. Thus it will be seen that, despite decreased financial support, vocational education has continued to grow and is meeting the needs of a considerable portion of the urban population of the country in over 150 municipalities. Full particulars of expenditures and enrolments are given in the four tables at the close of this report and in the statistics included in the appended reports from the various provinces.

STATISTICS

It should be noted that table IV gives the number of communities conducting day and evening classes, not the number of schools. In previous years an attempt was made to show the number of schools in operation throughout the Dominion, but it has been found advisable to discontinue this practice. There is no uniform definition of the word "school" and the provincial statistics are based on different conceptions of what constitutes a school. In some cases two or more different types of schools are grouped together under one administrative head and called a school even where the classes are conducted in several buildings; in other cases each separate building is called a school; in a few cases two or more vocational schools are conducted in the same building. Correspondence departments, itinerant instruction, branch schools, extension work, etc., add to the difficulty of interpreting reports. Until a uniform statistical system can be devised it will be impossible, simply by studying the statistical tables, to accurately compare returns from the various provinces or to obtain a clear conception of the work being done. The differences are not confined to any one branch of the work, but occur in nomenclature, school terms, records, courses of study, organization and administration. It is advisable that each province should organize its work to meet its own requirements, but it would be very useful to have a more uniform method of reporting the work done. Statistics for the past year are much more uniform than formerly, but are still unsatisfactory.

FUTURE OUTLOOK

The reports from Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, Ontario and British Columbia indicate satisfactory developments during the past year, and there are a number of reasons for expecting improved conditions in the other provinces during the current year. The development of the work under the trying conditions of the past year, the recent organization of the provincial administrative bodies in New Brunswick, the pending appointments of provincial directors in Quebec and Alberta, the splendid grain crop of the West and the expected improvement in the economic conditions of the country are a few of the reasons for an optimistic outlook.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IS NOT UNDERSTOOD

Vocational education in Canada is a new development which has not yet attained definite form and which is misunderstood by a large proportion of the public and by many educationists. Very few people have any clear idea of the aims, organization or methods of the schools receiving grants under the Technical Education Act.

One of the greatest obstacles to the development of vocational education in Canada is the indifference of the public and the failure of the educational authorities to give the people a clear understanding of what they are trying to do. There has been a general antipathy against advertising school work and it has been assumed that in some mysterious way the people will know what is in the minds of the men who are promoting the work. Parents judge the schools by results, but, unless they know what results are to be expected, they form erroneous impressions and condemn a school for not doing things which are beyond its scope or power. The aversion to advertising is gradually disappearing and it is apparent that the communities in which the work is making the best progress are usually those in which it is best advertised. When the people are convinced that vocational education is needed and that an earnest effort is being made to meet the need, they are usually prepared to give the financial and moral support necessary to success.

Promoters of the work should become thoroughly acquainted with the local educational needs and provisions before organizing new classes. They should have definite objectives in view and should see to it that the teaching staff, accommodation and equipment are suitable for the work, before asking students to attend classes. The results should be carefully observed and the courses altered to meet unexpected demands during the first few years of operation. In as far as practical the system should be developed to meet the individual needs of the students, rather than to fit the requirements of existing institutions and established customs. In many places the work has failed simply because of the unwillingness or inability of public officials and teachers to change their viewpoint and methods.

It takes time to develop a new system of education, and it should always be borne in mind that vocational education is in the early stages of development and must be continually altered as experience is gained. There is no doubt of the need for the work, but the people must be informed of this need and must be convinced of the necessity for supporting the work until it has had an opportunity to prove its value.

ADVERTISING

Some of the means which have been used for giving the public information about the work to be undertaken or being done are,—

Newspaper articles and editorials,
 Display advertisements in local papers,
 Showcards and posters in street cars, public buildings and stores,
 Personal letters with application blanks mailed to parents and prospective pupils,
 Distribution of school calendars and bulletins,
 Addresses at public meetings and special gatherings,
 Noonday or evening talks to employers and employees at plants and official meetings.

Unless such efforts are made to acquaint the people with the aims and usefulness of the work, it should not be expected that they will be eager to support it or that the enrolment will be satisfactory.

PURPOSE OF THE TECHNICAL EDUCATION ACT

The grants under the Technical Education Act were provided for the purpose of assisting the provinces to develop this new type of education in so far as needed. It is not expected that each province will develop the same methods or that the work will continue to grow along existing lines. It is, however, expected that each province will use the money to develop new courses of study which will meet the needs of workers in all phases of manufacturing, commercial and homemaking life. Agriculture is not included, because special provision for this work exists under the Agricultural Instruction Act.

In order to more definitely indicate the type of work which it is desired to promote, the following list of courses has been prepared, all of which come within the scope of the Act and each of which is deemed desirable in any system of vocational education:—

(1) Technical Courses of secondary grade, conducted in technical schools, the purpose of which is to fit boys for entrance to engineering departments in universities and colleges.

(NOTE.—Secondary grade includes all work in grades IX to XII.)

(2) Industrial Courses of secondary grade, the purpose of which is to fit each student for entrance into a previously selected trade or skilled occupation, either as an apprentice or improver or skilled worker.

(3) Commercial Courses of secondary grade, the purpose of which is to fit young people for earning a livelihood in commercial occupations such as book-keeping, stenography, salésmanship, accounting, secretarial work, business administration, etc

(4) Home Economics or Homemaking Courses of secondary grade of at least two years' duration, the purpose of which is to fit girls for the duties and responsibilities of homemaking.

(5) Applied Arts Course of secondary grade, the purpose of which is to produce skilled workers in the various branches of applied art, including commercial design, illustrating, poster work, show-card writing, interior decorating, art metal work, etc.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

(6) Prevocational Courses of two or more years' duration commencing not earlier than grade VII, the purpose of which is to provide a variety of occupational experiences and information, while continuing the general training in English, mathematics and science, to boys and girls who do not intend to enter universities, in order that they may wisely select, after careful guidance and supervision, the most suitable vocational training for their future lifework.

(7) Part-time Vocational Courses provided under compulsory school attendance laws and conducted during day working hours for the special benefit of young people who are employed.

(8) Continuation Courses provided under compulsory school attendance laws, in which the training offered is directly related to the occupational needs of the students.

(9) Evening Courses conducted for adults who are employed during the day and the purpose of which is to fit students for advancement in their occupation or to train them for other occupations.

(NOTE.—Academic classes such as English, other languages, mathematics, history, etc., may be included only when correlated with practical work. Evening courses should provide for individual instruction wherever needed. A desirable size for classes is from six to twenty students per teacher.)

(10) Short-term Courses and Special Industrial Courses.—Day, short-term, unit courses for industrial workers or special students in secondary schools, the contents of which are confined to practical work and related subjects of direct vocational value to the students.

(11) Apprenticeship Courses (other than part-time classes).—Organized training for indentured apprentices in any occupation, which training should be supervised by a specially appointed official in the employ of either the school board, or an industrial corporation or an industrial organization responsible for apprenticeship in the industry.

(12) Foreman Training Courses.—Organized training in industry or school for the purpose of improving the efficiency of foremen or for training competent workmen for the position of foreman.

(13) Correspondence Courses conducted by the provincial departments of education for the benefit of workers who are unable to attend the regular day or evening classes.

(14) Teacher-Training Courses.—Courses of various kinds (part-time, evening, short-term, summer school, etc.) which are conducted for the training and improvement of teachers and instructors in any branch of secondary vocational education.

No reference to students' ages or the percentage of time to be devoted to practical work is made in the above definitions, but it is felt that, with few possible exceptions, students should be at least 14 years of age, and that, in every course of study at least 50 per cent of the time should be devoted to practical work in shop or laboratory (including drawing).

It will be noted that the above courses are all intended to be of direct value to students in earning their living as industrial workers. Such instruction should be limited to students contemplating industrial employment and to those workers who desire training which will make them more efficient workers and better citizens. A good general education is desirable for every worker in addition to special vocational training, and, for that reason, every vocational course for young people under 18 and for those students who have not completed at least a high school training should provide a sound training in English, elementary mathematics, general science, and the duties and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship. It is also advisable in many cases to provide a thorough training in French and perhaps some other language, but the training should be such that the graduates are able to speak the language fluently or at least to read it intelligently. This is impossible with the instruction now provided in many schools by teachers who have only an elementary knowledge of the language they are expected to teach.

The outstanding weakness of vocational courses in Canada is the tendency to follow the established academic courses leading to university matriculation. In some schools the difference between the vocational and academic courses is scarcely noticeable except in the amount of time allotted to shopwork. The academic work is identical in both departments and similar shopwork is given to all students in the school. In a few cases the vocational students are required to attend school for longer hours than the others in order to provide time for their additional shopwork. Manifestly such work is not intended to provide a special type of training for industrial workers and cannot properly be called vocational education. The need for vocational courses exists because boys and girls leaving school before completing the regular high school courses are not fitted to take their places in industrial life and have little or no conception of the opportunities and requirements of industrial employment.

Too little effort is made by most vocational teachers to co-ordinate the work of the shops and classrooms, with the result that much of the value of the work is lost and the pupils do not develop the habit of study. Where the classroom and shop are linked together the students develop greater interest in the work and realize the value of continuing their studies either in full-time schools or part-time and evening classes.

WORK OF VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS

Vocational schools cannot be expected to produce skilled workers in all branches of industrial life, but they can and should provide a training which will enable boys and girls of from fourteen to eighteen years of age to intelligently select a suitable vocation and to enter employment with a thorough training in the fundamentals of the work selected, and a background of physical, mental and moral development which will enable them to advance to the limit of their abilities. Part-time, evening and correspondence instruction, specially prepared to meet the needs of each type of worker, should be provided to enable young workers to continue their schooling. No one type of training is suited to the needs of all types of children, and it will require very careful study and many changes before suitable types of schooling can be developed to meet the needs of young industrial workers. Evidently these needs cannot be met simply by adding a little shopwork of various kinds to the established school curricula. There must be an organized effort to separate pupils, at an early age, according to their natural aptitudes, interests and abilities, and special types of training must be provided for each group. Fairly adequate systems of training for young people entering professional life, clerical occupations and scientific agriculture have already been provided or are being developed, but only a small beginning has been made in the efforts to provide suitable training for mechanics, tradesmen, homemakers, salesmen and skilled workers in industrial plants.

It is not necessary for the schools to equip elaborate, costly workshops in order to provide vocational education, but it is necessary to establish close cooperation with local industrial and commercial plants if the work is to be effective. The schools can do only a part of the training, but it is their duty to assist industry and the homes in providing a complete training for all classes of industrial, commercial and home workers.

APPRENTICESHIP

There is a growing conviction on the part of employers, employees and educationists that a revival of apprenticeship in some form suited to modern industrial conditions is needed for the training of Canadian youth. In some of the larger industrial centres the vocational schools are making special provision for the training of apprentices in part-time and evening classes, but very little effort has been made to assist employers in selecting suitable boys for apprenticeship or in providing suitable shop training for boys. Apprenticeship offers one of the most hopeful fields for the development of vocational education and the Canadian schools are missing a splendid opportunity in not co-operating with industry in this connection and assuming the leadership where necessary.

VISUAL EDUCATION

Owing to financial stringency and the scarcity of suitable educational films, motion pictures are not being used to any extent in Canadian vocational schools. It would appear that this undeveloped field offers splendid opportunities for providing occupational information and general industrial knowledge to vocational students and that much use could be made of existing films in connection with the regular classroom work, especially in science, geography and history. Special equipment for school use is available at very moderate cost and films may be purchased or rented at reasonable rates. Many interesting and instructive films and slides are distributed free of cost by the Dominion Government through the Natural Resources Branch of the Department of the Interior and the Exhibits and Publicity Bureau of the Department of Trade and Commerce. Very useful maps, charts, booklets and other material are also available from these and other government departments, and vocational schools could make better use of this service if the teachers realized its value and were better informed of its existence.

NEED FOR EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

There is still need for a greater exchange of information and ideas on the part of the officials and teachers engaged in vocational work. The experiences of one community are not easily available to other communities facing the same or similar problems. Very few people are in a position to travel about the country in order to study developments and there is no official organization or journal whose function it is to spread such information where it is needed. Ontario has a staff of four expert organizers or advisers who are available to the various communities of the province, and all of the other provinces, except Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan, have appointed directors of vocational work, but the activities of these officials are very limited and they are not in personal touch with developments in other provinces. The experiences and developments in Great Britain, the United States and other countries are printed in journals, magazines and books and are of value to Canadian workers, but similar information should be published about developments in Canada. Serious mistakes may be made by thoughtlessly copying methods and systems of other countries which were designed to meet conditions which do not exist in Canada. It is necessary that Canadians develop systems of education suited to the conditions of the various provinces, but there is much in common between the provinces and all should be working along similar lines if provision is to be made for the transfer of teachers, students and graduates from one province to another.

BULLETINS

The bulletins issued by the Technical Education Branch of the Department of Labour are being appreciated by many officials and teachers, but it is impossible for the director to issue information about the work in all parts of the Dominion unless he has the help of the principals and teachers in each province. An effort is being made to secure this assistance and it is expected that the bulletins will become more interesting and helpful during the coming year. One member of the director's staff is now devoting her full time to the preparation and distribution of bulletins and information in answer to questions from all parts of the Dominion. An extensive library of textbooks and reference works is being collected, and copies of the leading journals and periodicals relating to vocational education are kept on file. This material is carefully catalogued and indexed so that the office is in a position to supply information on almost every problem affecting the work of vocational organizers and teachers.

TEACHER-TRAINING

The most important problem of vocational education and the one which is most difficult to solve is teacher-training. The demand for vocational teachers in most provinces is very limited and the expense of providing a special training class for these teachers is unwarranted, but the success of the work depends upon an adequate supply of properly trained and thoroughly qualified teachers. The efforts to provide a central training school for the Dominion were unsuccessful and only four provinces have provided any means for the special training of vocational teachers. More is being done along this line than ever before, but the efforts are still inadequate to meet the needs of the day teachers and practically nothing is being done to train the large number of evening teachers who are employed at other work during the day. The best that can be done under existing conditions is to secure trained teachers for academic subjects, and skilled workers, with a good general education, for shop-work and household arts. Where possible these shop teachers are given short courses in the art of teaching and the organization of courses of study.

Realizing the urgent need for additional training facilities, the province of Ontario is taking steps to establish a full-time training college for vocational shop teachers which is expected to be opened in the fall of 1924. Teachers of academic and related subjects such as English, mathematics, science, history, etc., will continue to be drawn from graduates of the Ontario College of Education which trains university graduates for teaching in high schools and collegiate institutes. In order to obtain the right type of teacher for vocational schools, arrangements have been made with the college for admitting graduates in applied science. It has been found that the few science graduates already trained make excellent teachers of related subjects, and in some cases, where they have had industrial experience, they make very good shop teachers and shop supervisors.

BRIEF SUMMARIES OF PROVINCIAL REPORTS

It will be noted from the foregoing remarks that vocational education in Canada is growing and still needs financial assistance. Each year since the Technical Education Act became effective there has been a decided improvement in the quality of the work, and the growth in most provinces has been as rapid as could be expected. The following summaries of the provincial reports indicate the progress and changes of the past year.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

The work in the Provincial Agricultural and Technical School at Charlottetown was practically the same as for the previous year, but the enrolment increased from 166 to 177. A number of additions have been made to the shop equipment and it is expected that the girls' work in household arts will be taken over from the Agricultural Department during the current year.

NOVA SCOTIA

There was an increased enrolment in every branch of the work in Nova Scotia. The report shows the total number of pupils enrolled in all classes to be 4,111, as compared with 3,093 for the previous year. New classes for men engaged in the deep sea fisheries were organized in Lunenburg and Clark's Harbour. The instruction included the regular academic work of the public schools, together with special instruction in bookkeeping, navigation, gasolene engines, first aid and fish curing. The response was disappointing, but the work will be continued next year and a good enrolment is confidently expected. The short-term winter courses for mechanics are steadily growing and include an advanced course for automobile mechanics, for the first time. The correspondence work was almost trebled and is being appreciated by the employers and employees of the province. An effort is being made to develop correspondence courses which will, to some extent, take the place of the old apprenticeship system.

NEW BRUNSWICK

Instruction by itinerant teachers in New Brunswick was temporarily discontinued, but it is expected that it will be recommenced during the current year. The Vocational Education Act was amended so as to centralize the control of all educational matters under the Provincial Board of Education. Vocational education was previously administered by a Provincial Vocational Board responsible to the Governor-General-in-Council, but the Board's policies must now be approved by the Board of Education. The total enrolment in day and evening classes decreased from 1,390 to 1,227. A short-term course for automobile mechanics was introduced during the winter and was attended by 26 garage workers. New Brunswick continued to send vocational teachers to the United States for special training and the enrolment in the summer school for vocational teachers, at Moncton, was 92.

QUEBEC

No report covering the work of the past year has been received from Quebec owing to the fact that a provincial director has not yet been appointed. The former director resigned two years ago. A provincial school of fine and applied art has been opened in Quebec and another is under construction in Montreal. The Hull Technical School is still under construction. A course for pulp and paper workers is being planned for the Three Rivers school and extensive developments in trade courses at Montreal are contemplated. The work is steadily progressing and in some respects is equal to the best to be found elsewhere in the Dominion. The Quebec figures in table IV are estimated from returns submitted with financial statements and indicate a slight increase in enrolment. Approximately 6,650 pupils attended vocational classes assisted under the provisions of the Technical Education Act. A provincial director is urgently needed and it is expected that one will be appointed this fall.

ONTARIO

The report for Ontario outlines the continued growth in all branches of the work and states the purpose of the various courses of instruction. Extensive building operations are in progress in nine municipalities and three new buildings were opened during the year. The total value of the accommodation for vocational classes which has been provided during the past three years (including buildings not yet completed) is over $5,000,000. Courses in stationary engineering and home nursing have been issued by the provincial director's office. A short-term course for navigators and marine engineers was organized in Midland and was attended by 24 men employed on the Great Lakes. Very extensive changes are being made in the prescribed commercial courses as a result of a survey of the business houses in Toronto. The enrolment in the teacher-training classes increased from 115 to 121, and the total enrolment in all other classes increased from 31,823 to 42,983.

MANITOBA

Vocational education has received a slight setback in Manitoba, due to the financial stringency and the demands of the taxpayers for retrenchment. The total enrolment in vocational classes decreased from 5,802 to 3,485, and the industrial or practical arts course for boys in Winnipeg was discontinued. The enrolment in the teacher-training classes increased from 28 to 40. A new summer course in home-making for girls from all parts of the province is to be held this summer in the Manitoba Agricultural College at Winnipeg.

SASKATCHEWAN

There has been very little change in vocational education in Saskatchewan. An additional collegiate is being built in Saskatoon which will provide for home-making and industrial classes similar to those in the old collegiate and which will house the commercial classes of the city. An additional building is also being erected in Regina with accommodation for the existing commercial classes. The enrolment in vocational classes has decreased slightly, but accurate figures are not available, as the returns received for the year apparently include all girls taking domestic science in the schools reported. Only those girls who are taking a homemaking course other than matriculation should have been counted, and, if this had been done, the total enrolment for Saskatchewan would be approximately 1,600 instead of 2,361 as reported.

ALBERTA

The practice of separating fall and spring term classes make it impossible to give exact enrolments for the year in Alberta. The figures given in table IV are averages taken from the table attached to the Alberta report. These figures indicate an increase in enrolment from 3,477 to 3,770. The work of the Calgary Institute of Technology has grown steadily and 281 students from all parts of the province were enrolled during the spring term. The correspondence department of the institute had an enrolment of 440 miners and stationary engineers during the fall term. Alberta has been without the services of a director during the past year, but it is expected that a new man will be appointed during the current year and that the work which has been discontinued in some places will be again taken up.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

The scope and aims of the courses being conducted in British Columbia are outlined in the report of the provincial organizer. The teacher-training activities have been enlarged and include courses for commercial teachers, home-making teachers and shop teachers, in addition to a more elementary course for manual training instructors. The new junior high school in Vancouver is a promising development which may help to break down the existing prejudice against industrial courses. As a result of this prejudice, the industrial courses are not being developed and co-operation with industry has not yet been established. The enrolment in correspondence courses for miners has remained stationary, but the enrolment in all vocational classes has decreased from 5,844 to 5,536.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Vernon Crockett, Principal.

The work carried on under the provisions of the Technical Education Act in Prince Edward Island is centralized at the Prince Edward Island Agricultural and Technical School

The courses offered are as follows:—

- (a) An advanced course in agriculture for students who have taken the first year course, or for students who wish to enter one of the agricultural colleges;
- (b) An elementary course in agriculture for all students over fifteen years of age;
- (c) A course in motor mechanics;
- (d) Course for cheese and butter factory operators;
- (e) Night classes for city students.

The subjects taken in each of these courses are as follows:—

Course A.—Live stock, field crops, motor mechanics, carpentry, farm engineering, English, economics, history, mathematics, biology, chemistry, physics.

Course B.—Live stock, field crops, poultry, dairying, motor mechanics, blacksmithing, farm carpentry, English, arithmetic, civics, biology, chemistry.

Course C.—Motor mechanics, blacksmithing, farm engineering, English, arithmetic, economics, civics.

Course E.—Motor mechanics, mechanical drawing, woodworking, wireless, English, mathematics.

ENROLMENT

The total enrolment for the school year ending June 30th, 1923, was 177, and the number registered by classes was as follows: Day classes—motor mechanics, 37; agriculture, 28; short-term course for cheese and butter makers, 5; Night Classes—motor mechanics, 24; wireless, 10; woodworking, 21; English and arithmetic, 15; mechanical drawing, 37.

PROGRESS

A comparison with previous years shows a healthy growth in every direction. The yearly sessional registration was as follows: Day classes—first year, 35; second year, 55; third year, 65. Night classes—first year, 70; second year, 72; third year, 107. The increase in registration has rendered necessary the increase of instructional staff, the rearrangement of class-rooms and work shops, and the purchase of additional equipment. Instructional work is carried on by four full-time and four part-time teachers for day classes, and five teachers for evening classes. The school has now, besides regular lecture rooms, fully equipped motor mechanics and woodworking shops, a fully equipped cheese and butter-making plant, a modern poultry house, live stock barns, chemical laboratory and wireless equipment.

PRESENT TENDENCIES

Just at present special emphasis is being placed upon the giving of instruction in agricultural subjects. The need is imperative. Agriculture as a profession is passing through a critical phase. More attention is being given to this phase of our national development than ever before in the world's history. The consensus of opinion seems to be that, if agriculture is going to maintain its position of supremacy, it must be placed upon a scientific basis. This scientific basis can be most readily and most economically reached through the medium of instruction in agricultural schools and agricultural colleges. Agriculture should be placed upon the same basis as other commercial and industrial subjects so far as the provisions of the Technical Education grant is concerned. Agriculture is a technical profession and the tendency is in the direction of specialization, and our failures and our blunders in the past are largely due to losing sight of that important fact.

While in this province the stress is being placed upon agricultural subjects, very encouraging progress is being made along other vocational lines. The demand for instruction in motor mechanics, woodworking, forge work, etc., is already beyond the means at our disposal. The fitting up of suitable mechanical work shops necessitates the installing of extensive equipment. This equipment, however, is being added as the necessities of the case demand, and it is hoped that, as the need for vocational education becomes more apparent, the difficulties along this line will become less and less.

There is considerable evidence that the city of Charlottetown, in which the Technical School is situated, is gradually awakening to the advantages of vocational education for its growing boys and girls. The school is making plans for a survey of the vocational needs of the city this autumn and it is expected that this will result in a considerable increase in attendance at evening classes.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS

Up to the present all work of a vocational nature carried on under the Technical Education Act has been for boys only. Plans, however, are under consideration which will give young women of the province the opportunity of securing much needed vocational education on the same terms as are now enjoyed by young men. All work formerly carried on elsewhere will in future be centralized at the Technical School. This will place instruction in household science and kindred subjects within reach of the girls in the city and of the young women in the country as well.

CONCLUSIONS

Vocational education under the Technical Education Act has reached the end of the third year. The work so far carried on has met with a generous measure of approval. The courses of instruction so far offered are designed to meet the most pressing needs. It is the settled policy of the Board of Control to give instruction of a vocational nature in any subject when the demand is sufficient to warrant the necessary outlay. The success of the work at the Technical School, Charlottetown, has led to requests for assistance in other centres of population. These will be attended to in due time.

Following is a summarized statement of attendance, etc.—

NOVA SCOTIA

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF TECHNICAL EDUCATION

F. H. Sexton

In spite of the fact that expenditure was only slightly increased the attendance increased in almost every branch of the work. The number of students in correspondence instruction rose from 186 to 434, the registration in various evening schools increased from 2,884 to 3,646, and total enrolment in this year was 4,111 as compared with 3,093 last year.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

Continuation Classes for Fishermen

A definite attempt was made to organize classes for men engaged in the deep-sea fisheries in two towns where this industry is prosecuted by almost all the inhabitants. The conditions surrounding this group of vocations, in that the men are away from home for such a large portion of the year and because of the fact that most of the knowledge employed is of an empirical nature, make it extremely difficult to present organized instruction. The courses offered were as follows:—

Preparatory English and Arithmetic.—This subject was deemed necessary because so many lads leave school when they are large enough to pull an oar in a dory or to haul in a fish on a hand line. Consequently, a considerable proportion are deficient in the rudiments of a general education that are necessary if one is to pursue further study. The scope of the work extended over that usually taken up in grades VI, VII, VIII and IX, and the attempt was made to make the instruction replete with examples taken from daily life in the industry. The elementary principles and practice of book-keeping and the writing of business letters were included in this course, because a good many of the fishermen have considerable business to transact in the direct marketing of their product.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

Navigation.—One unacquainted with the ways of seafaring people would suppose that a master or a mate of a fishing schooner that might sail as far as Labrador or to the West Indies would have to be thoroughly grounded in navigation. Not so! There are many skippers who cannot find their exact position at sea, but who can carry their vessel safely to a distant fishing ground or port by rule-of-thumb methods. Most of them, however, admit that they wished for the knowledge of astronomy, mathematics and navigation that would enable them to find their position by sun or stars. A practical course covering the requirements of a certificate for master coastwise was therefore included in the schedule.

Gasolene Marine Engine.—Most of the fishing boats are now equipped with auxiliary gasolene engines. Some of the shore fishermen depend on this kind of motive power altogether. The marine engine is a very simple and reliable prime mover, but fishermen lose a good deal of unnecessary time in laying up their boats for repairs, because they do not know enough about the engine itself. A simple course was offered covering the following points: Choice of an engine, principles of construction and operation of four-cycle and two-cycle marine engines, carburetion and carbureters, electrical ignition devices, make-and-break and jump-spark ignition systems, lubrication and cooling systems, exhaust devices, installation of engines, clutches, reversing gears, selection of a proper propellor, care and operation of engines, location and elimination of engine troubles.

First Aid to the Injured.—Since the schooners are away often for months at a time, many occasions arise when one or more of the crew may be slightly or seriously injured. In such emergencies it is necessary for some one on board the vessel to know how to render first aid until medical assistance can be secured. Arrangements were therefore made for first aid classes to be organized under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance Association.

Preparation of Fish Products.—There has been little change in the methods of curing fish for many years. Some foreign countries have made great strides in this direction and were ousting Canadian products in some of our well-established markets. It was not thought possible to provide laboratory demonstrations in this branch of work, but arrangements were made for a series of lectures by experts.

Results.—The preparations were carefully made, the endorsement and co-operation of leading men in the two towns secured, advisory committees formed, the promise of the school boards to share in the expense of the classes obtained, and the opportunities for education duly advertised. The results were at once discouraging and surprising. Only a few of the fishermen actually engaged in the industry registered for instruction outside of the class in preparatory subjects. The women of the towns came forward in considerable numbers for instruction in homemaking subjects, especially dressmaking. Successful classes in this art were carried on throughout the winter. A concerted effort will be made again next autumn for the organization of the classes closely allied to the fishing industry, and it is confidently expected, now that interest has been aroused in education for adults, that the fishermen may be recruited for technical instruction.

SHORT TERM COURSES

Through persistent efforts in publicity and by virtue of the successes achieved by former students, the short term courses are growing in attendance. This instruction is carried out during the first three months of the year when there is a lull in industrial activity, but only the most ambitious young men will leave their homes and positions and make the comparatively small financial sacrifice which the course entails. The scope of this work is continually being enlarged and new courses gradually being added.

This year a class in advanced automobile mechanics was offered for the first time. It was especially adapted to the ordinary garage mechanic who had picked up his skill and knowledge through practical experience and to the operator of the small country garage where a man is compelled to do a great variety of work. The instruction had to cover a multiplicity of subjects because of the complex nature of the latest models of automobiles. It had to include the fundamental laws of electricity; machine shop practice; oxyacetylene cutting, welding, and decarbonizing; automobile starting, lighting, and ignition systems; storage battery repairing; and the more complex and delicate automobile adjustments and repairs

|-----------------------------------------------|----|----------------|
| Electricity, lectures and laboratory..... | 4 | hours per week |
| Machine Shop Practice..... | 4 | " " |
| Machine and Electrical Diagram Sketching..... | 4 | " " |
| Automobile Mechanics, lectures..... | 10 | " " |
| Automobile Mechanics, shop work..... | 17 | " " |
| | 39 | " " |

One full week of thirty-nine hours was devoted to the practical uses of the oxyacetylene flame.

All of the instruction was specialized and closely adapted to the particular needs of the garage mechanic. The instruction in electricity was given by one of the professors in electrical engineering on the regular staff of the Technical College, the machine sketching by the instructor in machine design of the short term course in that subject, the machine shop work in the college shop by the regular instructor, the practice with the oxyacetylene flame by an expert demonstrator from L'Air Liquide Co., while a special instructor in automobile mechanics conducted the main part of the course. The results were very gratifying and the men made satisfactory progress. They are being followed up to find out just how far their general ability has been raised by the instruction.

The short term course is a new development in adult education and as yet is offered in very few places outside of industry itself. With waning apprenticeship it holds great possibilities for the training of skilled and superior mechanics.

CORRESPONDENCE STUDY DIVISION

The obvious function of the division is to bring education to those who live in isolated districts or who, for any reason, do not care to attend classes, but an encouraging result has been that several of the students have, through the formation of the "study habit," been enabled to enter evening classes, the short courses, or continue their education in the high schools.

That the opportunity for study is appreciated by the mechanic is shown by the enrolment in drafting and mathematics, which may be called the "key studies" for all mechanical trades.

In trades like plumbing, where there is a form of apprenticeship, the division is doing good work in giving such theoretical instruction, together with practice in drawing, as will enable men to obtain the plumber's license, and, out of an enrolment of eight, five have completed the course and obtained the master plumber's certificate.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

The most notable feature of the year has been the interest shown in the work by large employers of labour in the province. The Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company, Limited, has approved the telephony courses and offered inducement to its employees to study the subject, and seventy men have been enrolled. The instructor, who is a graduate of the Nova Scotia Technical College, is the chief engineer of the company, and the executive heads of the various departments not only take a keen interest in the progress of their men, but also give them advice and assistance in their studies. When a man completes a course a copy of his record card and reports by the instructor and superintendent of the division are sent to the company.

Every effort is being made to further develop this extension work so that it may take the place, to some extent, of the old apprenticeship system which has fallen into disuse with the result that there is now a serious shortage of trained men in almost every trade.

CONCLUSIONS

The work in secondary technical education during the past year has been satisfactory in all established departments. New projects must be delayed until it is possible to secure a larger provincial revenue. No work or service that has been previously carried out was amended or curtailed and slight advances were encountered in many directions. The need of full-time day schools of a vocational nature, paralleling the regular high schools, is more and more insistent, but must be temporarily delayed until more funds are available.

NEW BRUNSWICK

F. Peacock

During the year four day schools and departments have been in operation, with a total enrolment of 134 full-time students. Nine localities operated evening schools, serving 981 students. Two short courses were held which were attended by 86 students. The 1922 summer school for teachers had an enrolment of 92 for the full course. The winter courses for garage workers had an enrolment of 26. The total number in all classes was 1,319, and 76 teachers were employed.

Instruction by itinerant teachers was not carried on during the year because qualified instructors were not available.

The outstanding characteristics of the year were the passage of the Vocational Education Act, 1923, and the inauguration of winter short courses for garage workers in storage batteries, motor generator work and oxyacetylene welding.

NEW LEGISLATION IN 1923

By the "Vocational Education Act, 1923", a step was taken toward the unification of the educational system of the province. Policies adopted by the vocational board are to be carried out only after being approved by the board of education. Previously these boards were independent of each other.

The new legislation gives local school boards full power to initiate and finance local programmes of vocational education, subject to provincial approval, without reference to city councils. Formerly the enforcement of the Attendance Act was required in all communities that wished to take advantage of government grants for vocational education. The new Act makes no reference to compulsory school attendance.

The status of local vocational committees and the money grants provided for vocational education were not changed by the 1923 Act.

The same types of schools and methods of administration obtain as under previous legislation.

By providing unity of provincial control and greater freedom of local action, the new Act should be a more efficient tool than the old with which to advance the cause of vocational education.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

Winter short courses in storage batteries, motor generator work and oxyacetylene welding were introduced during the year. The attendance was limited to bona fide garage workers, and the instruction was given by men of thorough technical training and extended practical experience. Twenty-six ambitious young men presented themselves for instruction and reports received from them indicate that their courses are proving most useful and profitable.

Retrenchment rather than advancement in expenditures has been the order of the day in New Brunswick during the past year; therefore no new building programmes have actually been launched. Some progress has been made with building plans, however, in St. John, Fredericton, McAdam Junction, and Marysville. The St. John vocational committee has approved the recommendations of the Rutherford survey report of that city, and an architect is now at work on plans of a building which will be devoted wholly to vocational education. The other communities mentioned will construct buildings of the composite type to house both vocational and general education classes.

TEACHER TRAINING

New Brunswick pays the travel and tuition expenses of approved individuals who desire to take special courses abroad preparatory to teaching day vocational classes in the province. Most of those now teaching have availed themselves of this aid.

The 1922 summer school for evening instructors and others was held at Moncton. Ninety-two directors, teachers and trades people attended. The staff and subjects taught were as follows:—

Modern Psychology—George J. Trueman, M.A. Ph.D., President Mount Allison University.

Surveys and Vocational Programmes and Commercial Education—M. A. Sorsoleil, B. A., expert in commercial education for the Ontario Department of Education.

Vocational Education and its Administration and Vocational Guidance and the Junior High School—L. H. Dennis, Director of Vocational Education for the State of Pennsylvania.

Vocational Agriculture—R. W. Heim, Director of Vocational Education for the State of Delaware.

Automotive Electricity—R. T. Steeves, Itinerant Instructor for the New Brunswick Vocational Education Board.

Costume Design; Dressmaking III and Textile II—Millicent M. Coss, B.A., B.S., Clothing Expert in charge of teacher training for the Massachusetts Board of Education.

Methods of Teaching and Practice Teaching—Sarah M. Barnett, Supervisor Home-making Department, New Brunswick Vocational Education Board.

Millinery I—Mrs. Nellie F. Carleton, Trade Milliner, St. John, N.B.

Millinery II; Design and Textiles I—Caroline H. Wilson, Head of Millinery Department, Simmons College, Boston.

Foods I and II—Mildred H. Arnold, Head of Home Economics Department, Riverside Consolidated School.

Sewing; Dressmaking I and II—Mrs. Zita McIntosh, Trade Dressmaker, Fredericton.

Nutrition I, II and III and Rural Home Economics Methods—Agnes N. Sharp, Superior First Class License, Graduate McDonald College, Guelph, in Home Economics. Specialized in rural school lunch work in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Sorsoleil, assisted by his class, made a complete vocational education survey of Moncton city. The report on this with recommendations and all data collected was turned over to the Moncton school board under whose auspices the survey was made.

At this summer school Mr. A. W. Crawford, Director of Technical Education for Canada, conducted special lectures and conferences for three days.

PURPOSE OF SECONDARY VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

By subsidizing secondary day vocational schools and departments, evening schools and short courses in communities which initiate these, New Brunswick plans to bring opportunities for commercial, industrial, agricultural and home economics training to the doors of a large proportion of her population. To the extent to which school districts have already taken up the work adults are receiving instruction in problems arising out of their daily employment, and students of high school age are following courses which will fit them for profitable employment in specific fields. Those undertaking a commercial day course, for instance, do not expect to matriculate on its completion, but to enter upon a job in the commercial world. Half their time in school is spent in technical training to prepare for this, and the remainder in the study of English, history, economics and health, in preparation for enlightened citizenship.

PERSONNEL

The membership of the Vocational Board was changed under the 1923 Act. The present personnel is as follows:—

Members Appointed by the Board of Education

Hon. Fred Magee, Port Elgin, Chairman; Rev. Father Tessier, St. Joseph's College; Mr. George H. Maxwell, St. John; Mr. R. K. Tracey, M.L.A., Centreville; Mr. W. H. Miller, Campbellton.

ONTARIO

F. P. Gavin

By the Vocational Education Act of 1921, the Industrial Education Act of 1914, and the subsequent amendments thereto, have been repealed. The new Act provides for the establishment and development of vocational schools giving instruction in industrial, homemaking, art, technical, commercial and agricultural subjects. Under the Act schools may be established giving instruction in one or more of these types of vocational education, or departments may be established in schools of the composite type giving instruction in one or more of these branches.

TYPES OF VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS

The Industrial Schools and Departments are designed to give boys and girls looking forward to employment a thorough training in the essentials of a general education, and at the same time to furnish a special training in the subjects and operations which are fundamental to the trades and industries in which they expect to become employed.

The Homemaking Schools and Departments are planned to provide for girls a substantial extension of their training in the essentials of a general education, and at the same time a special training in the subjects and processes which will lead to efficiency in home activities.

The Art Schools and Departments are planned to provide the training needed by those who are preparing to follow either the fine or the applied arts as their vocation. Special courses may be offered also for those who are taking other vocational courses or are engaged in other pursuits.

The Technical High Schools and Departments are planned to meet the needs of those who are looking forward to occupying junior executive and technical positions in the trades and industries or to proceeding to higher institutions for advanced training in technical and engineering lines.

The Commercial High Schools and Departments are planned to meet the needs of boys and girls looking forward to employment in commercial occupations. The courses of instruction provide for a good general education and for a special training in the subjects related to commercial pursuits.

The Agricultural High Schools and Departments are planned to meet the needs of boys and girls who expect to be occupied in farming, dairying, stock-raising, fruit-growing, or gardening. The courses of instruction provide for a good general education and for special instruction in the subjects, processes, and operations which are fundamental to these occupations.

SUMMARY OF PROGRESS

The vocational schools continue to make satisfactory progress. The following tables furnish the best evidence of the developments of recent years:—

LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS

No changes have been made in the Act or in the Regulations governing vocational schools.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS AND BUILDING OPERATIONS

Perhaps the outstanding feature in the development of vocational education during the year has been the efforts of local school authorities to provide accommodation for carrying on the work.

The Third Annual Report of the Technical Education Branch of the Department of Labour contained an account of building projects under way at Sault Ste. Marie, Sarnia, Hamilton, Windsor, and Walkerville. The buildings at Sault Ste. Marie, Sarnia, and Hamilton were completed in time for occupancy in September, 1922. The Windsor and Walkerville Technical School will be ready for use in September, 1923.

New buildings of the composite type to provide for all types of secondary school education have been under way in St. Catharines, Kitchener, and Guelph, and will be ready for use in September, 1923.

In Toronto the new Riverdale Technical School, a branch of the Central Technical School, will be completed and ready for use in September, 1923.

Renfrew has just completed the erection of a building for composite school purposes of a type somewhat different from that of those just mentioned. Accommodation is provided for vocational courses in agriculture. This building will be occupied by classes in September, 1923.

Galt has under construction a large addition to the Collegiate Institute, which will furnish accommodation for vocational classes.

Weston is one of the smaller municipalities that has made provision for industrial and technical education. A new building adjacent to the High School will be ready for use in September, 1923.

Owen Sound has under construction a substantial addition to the Collegiate Institute specially designed to accommodate vocational classes.

The readiness of local school authorities to provide their share of the expenditures for buildings and equipment for vocational education shows that the need for vocational schools is felt in the communities concerned.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

The following table shows the value of the accommodation for vocational schools that has been provided in the last three years, or is being provided in the places mentioned. In some cases the accommodation is in a self-contained vocational school, in others it forms a separate wing or a portion of a composite school.

STATIONARY ENGINEERING

Officers of the Technical Education Branch, in consultation with the Board of Stationary and Hoisting Engineers of the Department of Labour, have compiled a manual to aid students in preparing for examinations in stationary engineering, and to assist teachers in vocational schools in giving instruction in this work. This manual is placed in the hands of the teacher. Copies may be purchased by students for a nominal sum from the Department of Education.

HOME NURSING

A course of study in home nursing has been prepared by officers of the Technical Branch. This outline is intended for the guidance of teachers of this subject.

NAVIGATION AND MARINE ENGINEERING

A short term full-time day school for navigators and marine engineers has been organized in Midland. Midland is an important lake port in which live a considerable number of men concerned in lake navigation. The school was attended by 13 men preparing for masters' or mates' certificates, and by 11 men preparing for marine engineers' certificates. This school is in addition to those already in operation in Kingston and in Collingwood.

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION

The Vocational Education Act of 1921 made provisions for the organization of commercial departments in connection with vocational schools. Prior to the passing of the Act all commercial instruction in secondary schools was carried on under the High Schools Act.

The commercial departments of the vocational schools have been organized in response to the need for broader and more extended courses for those who are to enter any department of business life. The requirements of these courses should be worked out with a great deal of care. Stress should be laid on the academic subjects necessary for a good general education, and on the practical side the courses should be adapted to fit young people for the varied demands of business. It is important to find out just what are these demands. As a preliminary step in this direction, Mr. M. A. Sorsoleil, one of the organizers of the Technical Branch, made an enquiry among the business men in Toronto. The following results of this enquiry are illuminating and should be studied by all teachers in commercial departments:—

1. A number of business concerns find it necessary and advisable to give instruction, academic or commercial or both, to their employees.

2. There is a constant demand for juniors sixteen or seventeen years of age with education carried beyond the public school for whom some commercial education would be an advantage.

3. There is also a demand for beginners with matriculation standing, or the equivalent, for whom business education would be helpful.

4. Business men ask that training in penmanship, arithmetic, English, and spelling be very thorough.

5. The stenographer generally required is an expert typist equipped with secretarial qualifications.

6. Clerks and machines are replacing the book-keeper. However, there is still need for the trained book-keeper, the accountant, the auditor, and the cost accountant.

7. Persons going into office employment should have some skill in the commoner office machines.

8. There is a general opinion in favour of the teaching of salesmanship.

9. The teaching of book-keeping should illustrate modern business methods.

10. Opinion is divided as to the desirability of teaching stenography to all students in schools of commerce. Only eight out of forty-five firms recognize it as the road to promotion.

11. There is a growing opinion that all going into business should receive some training in typewriting.

12. A large percentage of persons in commercial employment are neither accountants nor stenographers. The suggestion was made that the course in commerce should be comprehensive enough to furnish training for these persons.

13. Many business men regard a knowledge of economics and commercial geography as fundamental to a business course.

14. Fifteen of the firms interviewed expressed themselves as willing to co-operate with the schools in giving the students some business practice.

15. It was commonly recognized that a study of materials, processes, and products of manufacture is an important factor in the business intelligence of salesman, stenographer, and accountant.

TEACHER-TRAINING ACTIVITIES

Summer school courses for teachers of vocational subjects were given in 1922 and 1923 in the Central Technical School, Toronto. The enrolment was as follows:—

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

The men's classes were made up of teachers, with trade experience of machine shop practice, motor mechanics, carpentry, cabinetmaking, electricity, power-plant operating, sheet metal work and mechanical drawing.

The women's classes were made up of teachers, with trade experience, of dressmaking and millinery, and of teachers of household art subjects, who wished to improve themselves on the practical side of their work.

The enquiry into the kind of training needed for entrance into commercial occupations, mentioned above, showed that there is a general opinion among business men that salesmanship should be a subject of instruction in commercial schools. To aid teachers of commercial subjects in vocational schools in preparing to teach salesmanship, a summer course was offered in 1923. The teachers in attendance, six in number, received instruction in the principles and methods of salesmanship, and also three hours a day actual practice in large departmental stores.

The present arrangements for training teachers of vocational subjects require the teacher-in-training to attend two summer sessions, each of about twenty-five days of five hours each. This arrangement is temporary, pending the establishment of a permanent training institution, and is expected to terminate in September, 1924.

The experience of the past three years in the summer schools shows that the time available is not adequate to give the amount and kind of training that is desirable. Not only is more time needed for instruction in the principles of teaching and in school methods, but more time and better facilities are needed for practice teaching. Each teacher-in-training should have an opportunity to teach in classes of adolescents some twenty to thirty practice lessons.

The necessity for the establishment of a training institution affording facilities for practice teaching is steadily becoming more urgent. Plans are now being matured for the establishment of such a school in connection with one of the large technical schools.

STAFF CHANGES

Dr. F. W. Merchant, who was appointed Director of Technical Education in 1912, has been made Chief Director of Education for the province. The remarkable development in vocational education in Ontario during the period of his administration is a tribute to his wise and stimulating leadership. In his new position he will still exercise a general oversight over the vocational schools.

Mr. F. P. Gavin has been promoted to the position of Director of Technical Education.

MANITOBA

R. B. Vaughan

During the year ending June 30, 1923, the effects of the economic stringency, so loudly proclaimed in other lines of western industry, have been very acutely felt in the field of vocational education. School boards have been subjected to the demands of tax payers for retrenchment, and, regardless of their opinion of the value of the courses, the work has in some cases been eliminated from the school programme.

In the evening school courses an attempt has been made to make the classes more nearly self supporting and larger registration fees have been charged. Whether due to this reason or not, the attendance has not compared favourably with the previous year. On the other hand many of the teachers believe that one effect of higher fees has been the selection of a more purposeful class of students.

In Winnipeg the practical arts course for girls and the commercial course have continued to be popular with the students. The purpose of the commercial course is to give the beginning of a commercial training and at the same time allow the students to maintain their standing in the university matriculation course. The course in practical arts for girls offers similar opportunities by allowing the students to take sufficient academic work to practically keep up their matriculation subjects and devote a large part of their time to preparation for the home-making vocation. If at the end of two years they decide not to complete their university training, they may specialize on home economics subjects to a much larger extent for the remainder of their course.

The junior matriculation and engineering course for boys has been badly interfered with by the junior high school programme, which to date has not been favourable to the working out of the vocational courses.

In relation to preparation for the trades and industries no school has taken advantage of the practical arts course for boys that was recognized by the Federal Department of Labour. The object of this course was to provide an opportunity to give instruction to boys of high school age that would be of value to them in the vocations concerned with trades and industry. It is recognized that at an age of from fourteen to sixteen years the choice of a vocation is a very difficult decision for a boy to make, and this course, like the commercial course and the practical arts course for girls, was so outlined that it could be carried by students for two years, allowing them to secure standing for matriculation and to devote the major part of their time in the senior year to more specific vocational work.

The following figures show a comparison of the work for the years ending June, 1922, and June, 1923—

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

NOTE.—The difference between 3,506 and 1,535 is largely accounted for by a change in the form of report. In the 1923 returns only students taking regular vocational courses are shown.

The teacher training classes begun in 1921 and 1922 continued with increasing success during the year. A class of forty, consisting of teachers and practical mechanics, was conducted throughout the winter. This class will open again in October, 1923, with a course in applied mathematics.

Provision for a six weeks' summer course in home economics for girls has been made. It will be held at the Manitoba Agricultural College during July and August. Students will go into residence and take intensive training in cooking and sewing.

Part time education has made no noticeable advance since the last report.

SASKATCHEWAN

J. H. McKechnie, Chief Inspector

No marked changes in the field of vocational education in Saskatchewan are to be recorded for the school year just closed. The chief industry at present of this province is agriculture, and agricultural education is excluded from the benefits of the Act. Progress along the lines of so-called vocational education will necessarily be conservative. Judging by the increased enrolment of students and the number of new classes added to the evening programme in the established centres, the progress during the past year has been most encouraging.

In Saskatchewan, the cities of Moosejaw, Regina, Saskatoon, Weyburn and Yorkton are organized for vocational classes under the Technical Education Act, and all are carrying some phase of the work at the present time, except Weyburn. In this latter city certain lines of work were organized for the fall term of 1920, but were temporarily suspended at the close of the school year in 1921. Local conditions will doubtless improve soon to such an extent as to warrant the authorities in resuming the work. During the period referred to, day classes were conducted in household economics and commercial work, with one evening class in dressmaking.

While the city of Prince Albert has not yet taken advantage of the provisions of the Act, nevertheless day classes in commercial work under competent instructors have been a feature of the daily programme of the Collegiate Institute for some years. In addition to this, one member of the staff devotes her entire time to instruction in home economics. At several other points in the province excellent work is being done in this department.

During the past year inquiries have come from several centres in the province and interviews arranged relative to the organization of special classes for vocational education. After discussing the question from all angles, the local authorities did not think the time opportune for undertaking anything beyond that already provided by their present school facilities.

While four cities are at present operating classes under the Act, the work in Yorkton during the past year was limited to day classes in household economics for collegiate girls. In the cities of Moosejaw, Regina and Saskatoon, day classes were also conducted in commercial subjects and these classes were largely attended. The city of Regina in addition to vocational classes in home economics and commercial work, conducted industrial classes where the operation and care of the motor and tractor were studied. The attendance for this work was encouraging and greater enrolment is confidently expected next year.

The character of the work done in the evening classes in the three larger centres was varied and of a high character. Hundreds of young men and women, as well as many married persons, took advantage of the opportunities presented. The following partial list of classes will convey an idea of the work attempted: dressmaking, millinery, cooking, industrial art, commercial work, steam engineering, motor mechanics, salesmanship, English to the non-English, applied mathematics, chemistry and physics, drafting, machine shop, joinery, dietetics, radio-electricity, etc.

There is no special provision in the province for the training of teachers of vocational classes. The teachers of academic subjects are graduates of normal schools, while the remaining instructors are chosen from the various trades, and great care is exercised by the committees that only competent persons are selected. In this respect they have been singularly fortunate.

No real demand for the training of teachers for this work has yet arisen. Should such a demand arise, the necessary department would probably be added to one or both of our present provincial normal schools.

There has not been any extensive building programme during the past. At present the provincial government makes no provision for assistance in this respect. The city of Moosejaw was fortunate in securing one of the buildings used recently by the military authorities. In this building a very commodious and well arranged room has been set aside and equipped for the work in motor mechanics. In Regina, a temporary frame building has been constructed where much of the work with motors and tractors is being done. In Saskatoon, the committee was fortunate in being able to rent a portion of the university building and equipment, where evening classes are conducted in motor mechanics and machine work generally. All other lines of work in each of the cities are carried on in the collegiate institute rooms or basements.

In the day classes there is little demand at present for so-called vocational instruction beyond that given in the commercial and home economics classes, and the former is more definitely vocational than the latter. Students in attendance in the commercial classes have fairly definite notions why they are taking this course. They wish to secure positions in commercial life and with this definite objective in mind are as a rule very attentive and painstaking in their work. The aim of the instruction is to prepare the boys and girls for business life, and up to the present there has not been any serious difficulty in securing positions. It is encouraging to note that graduates of the day classes form a large percentage of the enrolment in evening classes. Having secured positions, the former day students wish to still further improve themselves and return to the night school.

Up to the present there has been no demand for part-time day classes.

As has been pointed out, the authorities try to meet every legitimate demand of adults for instruction in evening classes, and as a result the courses offered are quite varied in number. An analysis of the daily vocations of the persons in attendance is frequently made by the department. For instance, in one class visited, thirteen young men and women were present for instruction in reading, spelling and elementary arithmetic. They were for the most part clerks in stores and helpers in hotels. In another class of seven boys, six of whom worked in tinsmith shops, instruction was being given in sheet metal pattern drafting. Considerable preliminary work involving geometric construction had been done and a familiarity with drafting instruments, geometric terms and their application, gained.

In one of the dressmaking classes, twenty were present. The following indicates the daily vocations of those present:—

| Girl living at home..... | 1 |

In a cookery class in one of the cities, fifteen housewives were present. One of the city butchers was present and cut up a quarter of beef before the class, demonstrating and answering questions.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

In a class in millinery there were eighteen housewives and four unmarried women present. The married women present were anxious to learn how to make their own and their children's hats. The others present were also anxious to learn something of millinery to reduce the cost.

In a class in dietetics, nineteen senior nurses and one housekeeper were present.

The classes in English for the non-English are usually well attended.

The enrolment in the evening classes in motor mechanics was heavy and the course was practical throughout. Those present came from garages, from the farms, while others took the course in order to be familiar with their cars. These probably were taking advantage of facilities not intended to be provided by the Technical Education Act.

During the year we were fortunate in having a visit from Mr. A. W. Crawford, Director of Technical Education, who, besides conferring with the departmental authorities, found time to visit Moosejaw, Regina and Saskatoon. At the two latter cities conferences were held with the committees at which there was a helpful exchange of ideas and much valuable information conveyed to the committees.

REPORT ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

J. T. Ross, Deputy Minister

During the school year ending June 30, 1923, there was no marked growth in the field of vocational education in day, part-time, evening and correspondence work throughout the province. There was an average of two thousand and fifty students who received vocational instruction in evening classes, under the authority of local school boards in eighteen cities, towns and villages in the province. In addition there was a considerable number of evening classes in English for new Canadians. An average of one thousand and fifty-six students were enrolled in day, part-time and correspondence classes, receiving instruction in industrial, technical and commercial work, in the cities of Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. Three hundred and ninety-two students were enrolled in correspondence work in mining and steam engineering at the Provincial Institute of Technology and Art, Calgary. Statistical tables are appended to this report.

Vocational evening classes were in operation at Bellevue, Blairmore, Brûlé, Calgary, Coleman, Dinant, Drumheller, Edmonton, Evansburg, Hillcrest Mines, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Mountain Park, National Park, Nordegg, Rosedale Village, Sedgewick, and the Provincial Institute of Technology.

INSTRUCTION OF VARIED CHARACTER

The subjects of instruction offered covered a wide field, as the following list shows:—

Steam engineering (for 1st, 2nd and 3rd class certificates), mining engineering (for 1st, 2nd and 3rd class certificates), electrical engineering, motor mechanics, machine-shop practice, gas engineering, battery and ignition, armature winding, woodwork, telegraphy, drafting (architectural, mechanical, mine survey, sheet metal), shop mathematics, business English and arithmetic, chemistry, matriculation subjects, cookery, millinery, sewing, dressmaking, dietetics for nurses, art appreciation, drawing and design, commercial illustration, shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping.

With a few exceptions the enrolment and attendance in these classes were satisfactory. It may be noted that a few night schools which were conducted during the 1921-22 school year were discontinued during the year 1922-23, but it will further be noted that several new classes were conducted during that latter period and it is hoped that similar classes will be conducted in a greater number of centres during the year 1923-24, thereby affording rural communities the advantages enjoyed by residents of the cities.

The work was carried on in the following types of schools:—

Four commercial high schools, two technical schools, one provincial Institute of Technology and Art, two part-time classes, nine coal-mining schools, three steam engineering schools, four sewing and dressmaking schools, seven business English and arithmetic, and two correspondence classes.

SPECIAL CERTIFICATES

During 1921-22 certificates were issued to teachers of special subjects in this province. Some of these teachers were teaching manual training, household economics, music and art in the elementary and secondary schools of the province, others were teaching vocational subjects in the technical schools. In awarding such certificates consideration was given to the technical training and practical experience of such teachers, especially as most of them were engaged as experts in special fields of industry. All were required to present evidence of their academic, professional and vocational training and were granted certificates as teachers of special subjects in accordance with the statements of qualifications submitted. During the year 1922-23 very few such certificates were issued in view of the fact that during the previous year practically all the teachers in the province holding the necessary qualifications were granted special certificates. However, since the inauguration of this system some seventy-five such certificates have been issued by this department.

THE PROVINCIAL INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY AND ART, CALGARY

The new buildings of the institute are now completed and occupied. The instruction given is of a vocational and semi-professional character and has attracted pupils from all parts of the province. The teaching staff has been enlarged, there being a staff of twenty-three specialists, well equipped by training and experience, now engaged. During the year ending June 30, 1923, they gave instruction to nine hundred and sixty-two students in day, part-time, evening and correspondence classes, which enrolment shows a vast increase over that for the year ending June 30, 1922. It is expected, however, that a still further advancement will be made during the year 1923-24.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

John Kyle

It is with much pleasure that I submit a brief survey of the educational work in British Columbia as far as it is included under the term "technical education," and also to state as tersely as possible the aims of the Department of Education in relation thereto.

The content of the various phases of technical education is being slowly developed from and arises out of an educational system which is entirely academic in nature. It will be found, however, that, although growth and development are slow, this tree of knowledge will be well rooted and will continue if nourished to produce sound fruit of a desirable and marketable kind.

A glance at the accompanying sheet of statistics will show that the scheme embraces the following departments: Commercial, Technical, Home Economics, Junior High School, Night Schools, Teacher-Training and Correspondence classes.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMERCIAL COURSE—THREE YEARS

The aim of this course is to equip the students with a knowledge of the principles and book-keeping, together with the mechanical arts of typewriting, stenography and regular office routine work. To do this effectively it has been found advisable in the first year to lay a solid foundation of English, arithmetic, commercial geography and history. At the same time practice in typewriting and stenography is sternly carried on.

When the third year is reached this mechanical skill has developed to about 60 words per minute in typewriting and 130 words per minute in shorthand. Simultaneously a study is made of statute law, commercial law and economics, and when students finish the course they are readily placed with commercial firms.

As graduates from the Commercial School are not permitted to pass into the Normal Training College to become teachers until they matriculate in the usual way, the commercial students who desire to be teachers must stay at school for another year or two, but it is not often one finds a student who has reached a wage-earning capacity continue at studies. Office-work and business call loudly to those who enroll in the commercial course.

COMMERCIAL-TEACHER TRAINING

It has been found extremely difficult to obtain the services of competent commercial teachers—men and women who have the proper balance of academic and business training. Consequently teacher-training classes have been in operation during the summer for the past three years, and last year the idea was formulated of linking up the summer sessions by correspondence classes during the remainder of the year. By this means it is hoped that a supply of skilful teachers will be forthcoming and that in consequence the commercial subjects will be introduced more freely into a greater number of high schools.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 26

It may be here stated that the examinations are conducted by a board of examiners and a determined effort is being made to prevent incompetent teachers from entering the profession.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL COURSE—THREE YEARS

Technical Leaving Certificate and University Matriculation

To this course all those students are guided who desire to participate in industrial activities. The technical students may elect to study for the Technical Leaving Certificate or for Matriculation to the University of British Columbia.

During the first year it is intended that pupils should consider their future trade or profession, and varied experiences are provided to assist them to intelligently select those activities which are most appealing to their natures. "To business that we love we rise betimes and go to't with delight".

In the second and succeeding years this attitude has to be persisted in until the greatest possible number find themselves with a clear and decided objective. The Technical Leaving Certificate is in the nature of a passport to industries which are worthy of an intelligent boy's attention, but it does not admit to the University of British Columbia or to the Normal School. Technical students who pass the university matriculation examination may enter Normal School and graduate as school teachers. Should such teachers ultimately proceed to university and graduate from the Department of Engineering, one may readily see how valuable they would be on the staff of a technical school.

In addition to these three-year technical courses, there are courses of a short-term nature for special work to which certain trade students are admitted. So far these have not been attended by any great numbers, but with more accommodation much headway in this direction would undoubtedly be made.

TEACHER TRAINING FOR TECHNICAL TEACHERS

Just as difficulty was found in obtaining competent teachers for commercial work, so has it also been experienced in staffing the technical schools. It required careful selection to find men adequately trained academically and at the same time skilful in their hand manipulations. In a similar way even more difficulty has been found in meeting academically trained men with the insight, knowledge and interest in industrial work to warrant their position on a technical school staff. Training classes have thus been organized at which craftsmen study the art of imparting knowledge and the psychological principles which govern good teaching.

These classes are held on Saturday afternoons and during summer holidays. Much of the good educational work accomplished in the workshops and a great part of the spirit which is apparent where technical work is in operation is in a great measure due to the classes referred to. At the same time it must be admitted that we have found in British Columbia much excellent teaching material among the craftsmen who have been technically trained in other countries.

JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

The name of this school is rather a misnomer as it is more in the nature of a vocational school. The students are over elementary school age; have failed to pass the entrance to high school examination, and the majority know full well that they will have before long to enter industrial life. Half of each day is spent in the workshops, and at the end of the first year it is expected that the students, after their series of experiences, will have decided upon what trades they will thereafter follow.

Although the instructors are technically trained and the work accomplished is of a purely vocational type, the students have the option, if they reach a suitable standard of excellence, of passing into the academic course as well as any existing technical course in a high school. Many pupils are undoubtedly being rescued through the junior high school who are out of sympathy with the grade work in the elementary schools.

HOME ECONOMICS COURSE (HOMEMAKING)

This course, as its name implies, is specifically for girls, and the curriculum is found to touch life at many points and to be, not only an excellent foundation for the work of school teaching, nursing, housekeeping and many other forms of industrial work, but also to be of a kind which enriches life in its highest sense, making the home and home activities the centre of all that is highest and noblest in the pursuit of knowledge.

TEACHER TRAINING FOR DRESSMAKING, MILLINERY, COOKERY AND HOME ARTS

Again there is a difficulty in obtaining teachers who have that breadth of training which enables them to see the cohesion existing between all the studies of the curriculum.

The oneness of the science and art that pertains to home life is appreciated by few teachers of home economics and therefore Saturday training classes have been established to provide them with an opportunity to prepare for this larger sphere of activity.

That these classes will be successful is not to be doubted as instructors well qualified for the work in hand are engaged.

NIGHT SCHOOLS

At these schools every conceivable subject may be taught. Importance is attached equally to studies in which citizens may be interested apart from their daily occupation and also to those subjects which demand attention in order that people may increase their efficiency as wage-earners.

Last year over thirty different subjects were taught throughout the province. The only stipulation made by the Department of Education regarding instructors is that they must be the most efficient people obtainable and must have public confidence.

It has been found that in voluntary night schools the key to success or failure is with the instructors. When school boards undertake to advertise night schools in the same attractive way one finds private business colleges doing, then a great influx of students will be the result.

CORRESPONDENCE CLASSES

These classes only relate to coal-mining operations and were established because the three-shift system of mine-working made night schools practically impossible. Through this system men receive tuition in preparation for the following examinations:—

Shot-lighter's certificates (Third class).

Overman's certificates (Second class).

Mine Manager's certificates (First class).

Mine Surveying.

The above is a mere outline of the aims and purpose underlying the organization of technical education in the province of British Columbia. There is still much to be done in linking up the educational system with the industries affected, in vocational guidance, and in obtaining increased accommodation during this period of economic stringency.

VIII.—DOMINION GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES

During May, 1922, the administration of the Government Annuities Act, 1908, was transferred from the Postmaster General to the Minister of Labour, and, as this is the first time the subject has been dealt with in a publication of this department, it will no doubt serve a useful purpose, before presenting a financial statement up to and including the past fiscal year, to indicate briefly the nature of the Act and of the annuity system which it has established.

A Bill entitled "An Act to authorize the issue of Government Annuities for Old Age," was introduced in the House of Commons in March, 1908, by the Hon. Mr. Fielding, the then Minister of Finance. A similar measure had been introduced in the Senate during the previous session by the Right Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, not for the purpose of enactment, since, to be enacted, it was necessary that the Bill should originate in the House of Commons, but by way of illustration of the views which he desired to submit to the public. Mr. Fielding's Bill was substantially the same as the earlier one of Sir Richard Cartwright. Mr. Fielding, in introducing his resolution to the House, pointed out that the plan of Government Annuities was not to be confused with old-age pensions, which, as commonly understood, implied a contribution wholly or largely from the public treasury, whereas under the annuity system no contribution by government was contemplated, unless it might be in the way of a higher rate of interest on the moneys collected. The administration of the Act was first placed under the Minister of Trade and Commerce, but in 1912 it was transferred to the Post Office Department, and as has been already stated, in May, 1922, to the Minister of Labour.

THE SYSTEM IN BRIEF

Briefly, the Annuities Act was passed with a view to promoting habits of thrift and to afford facilities whereby provision might be made for old age by the purchase of annuities. Statistics show that 95 per cent of people are at the age of 60 dependent for support on their current earnings or on others. The object of the Annuities Act is to remedy this situation to some extent, and to enable persons in receipt of moderate wages or salary to purchase a fixed yearly income payable by the Government of Canada from a specified age.

The Act provides that annuities may be purchased by individuals, or associations on behalf of their members, or by employers on behalf of their employees. They may be either deferred or immediate, and may be on one life or on two lives jointly. An immediate annuity is one that can be purchased by a single payment, and is designed to meet the needs of persons who have saved a certain amount and desire to secure a safe investment and certain income for the balance of their lives. Annuities are not taxable by the Dominion Government, and cannot be transferred. No medical examination is required.

An important provision is that by which an annuity may be guaranteed for a certain term of years not to exceed 20. If the annuitant dies before the guaranteed period expires, the annuity for the unexpired portion of the term will be paid in accordance with his directions. If he survives the guaranteed period, the annuity will be continued, without any additional charge as long as he lives.

It is also provided that if payments for the purchase of a deferred annuity are for any reason discontinued they may be renewed at any time, and the arrears made up by a single payment or by increasing the annual payment. In case arrears are not paid up the annuity will be proportionately smaller.

The minimum annuity purchasable on the life of one person, or on the lives of two persons jointly, is $50, and the maximum amount $5,000. The cost of an annuity varies with the age of the applicant, the time the first payment is made, the amount of annuity desired, the age at which the annuity is to begin, and the kind applied for. The Dominion Government bears the cost of administration, and there is, therefore, no charge on this account against the annuitant. An annuity of $500 to be paid at the age of 60 years would cost a man 15 cents a day or $53.05 a year from the age of 20 years, and, if the annuitant should die before the date fixed for the first payment of the annuity to begin, all payments made with 4 per cent compound interest would be returned to his legal representatives. If the purchaser waives the right to the return of the money in case of death before the annuity begins, a considerably larger annuity is obtainable for the same payments, or an annuity of $500 may be had for an annual payment from 20 to 60 years of age of $36.85.

The rate of interest allowed in the calculation of the value of annuities is 4 per cent, but, having regard to the greater longevity of the people of Canada over that of the people of Great Britain on whose mortality experience the tables were calculated, the benefits received are on approximately a compound interest rate of 5 per cent. There are no loadings in the rates and no deductions are made from the premiums paid for any purpose whatever, the annuitant receiving full benefit for every cent he pays in, the Government bearing all administration expenses.

It is believed there is no other plan of investment available to people resident or domiciled in Canada under which provision for old age can be made with such facility; and that there is no other plan which will give them the same return for the amount invested, for the reason that with each quarterly instalment of annuity is returned to the annuitant a portion of the purchase money, as well as of the interest earned, and in this manner the purchaser is able to spend during his lifetime the capital invested, as well as the interest, without his income becoming smaller no matter how long he may live.

The main principles which underlie Government Annuities are as follows: (1) That they are guaranteed by the State; (2) that there is no forfeiture in case premiums are interrupted or should cease altogether, the only effect being that if the arrears are not made up the amount to be received will be proportionately less than if payments had been made in full; (3) that the annuity cannot be seized or levied upon by or under the process of any court; and (4) that it cannot be alienated or anticipated.

The records of the Annuities Branch show that the average duration of immediate life annuities is fourteen years, and that of deferred annuities, thirty-four years. Three-fifths of the money received is for the purchase of immediate, and two-fifths for deferred annuities.

A handbook of information has been published which anyone may obtain free on application to the Department of Labour, Annuities Branch.

ASSISTANCE OF POSTMASTERS

Under an Order in Council passed on May 31, 1909, postmasters and assistant postmasters of offices where money order business is transacted are required to receive payments for the purchase of annuities, and to remit the same to the Superintendent of Annuities in manner instructed by him. Postmasters other than those whose salaries are paid on a city office basis are allowed a commission on all moneys remitted on annuities account; 5 per cent on moneys remitted for the purchase of deferred annuities where payments extend over a period of 5 years; and 1 per cent where the purchase is completed within a period of 5 years, and 1 per cent on moneys remitted for immediate annuities, the purchase of which is completed by a single payment.

During the fiscal year 1922-3 a total of $1,028,353.07 was received for the purchase of annuities. Of this amount 25 per cent, or $262,489.16, was remitted through the money order offices, 75 per cent, or $765,863.91, having been sent direct to the Branch.

Postmasters of all post offices, of which there are over 12,000, are kept supplied with booklets, inquiry cards, etc., for distribution, as well as with posters to be hung in their offices; but for a number of years no office has been supplied with application forms or tables of rates for distribution except where these have been specially applied for, experience having shown that the better plan is for the applicant to make his wishes known to the department which will supply promptly any information desired.

Mention has been made in previous annual reports of the Department of Labour of the establishment of the International Labour Organization of the League of Nations under the authority of the Treaties of Peace and of its objects, plan of organization, etc.; also of the matters which received attention at the first, second and third sessions of the conference held in Washington, D.C., October-November, 1919; Genoa, Italy, June-July, 1920; and Geneva, Switzerland, October-November, 1921, respectively.

The proposals emanating from the first, second and third International Labour Conferences were received in due course by the Canadian Government and were brought by the Government formally to the attention of the competent legislative authorities, as required by the treaty terms. It should be noted that certain of the proposals were regarded by the federal law officers as coming within Dominion jurisdiction, whilst others were deemed to be within provincial authority and were accordingly referred to the several provincial governments for attention.

Under the terms of the Treaties of Peace, each state adhering thereto is entitled to four delegates in the International Labour Conference, two of whom shall be Government delegates, and the two others shall be delegates representing respectively the employers and workpeople of the country, chosen in agreement with the industrial organizations, if such organizations exist, which are most representative of employers or workpeople, as the case may be, in the respective countries. Each delegate may be accompanied by advisers not exceeding two in number for each item on the agenda. It is also provided in the Treaties of Peace that the decisions of the conference may take the form of (a) a recommendation to be submitted to the member states for consideration with a view to effect being given to it by national legislation or otherwise, or (b) a draft international convention for ratification by the member states. A two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates is required for adoption of any recommendation or draft convention by the Conference. The recommendations and draft conventions are afterwards transmitted through the Secretariat of the League of Nations to the different countries represented on the International Labour Organization for acceptance or otherwise. Each country is obliged under the treaties, within a period of one year at most from the closing of the conference, or, if it is impossible owing to exceptional circumstances to do so within one year, then at the earliest practicable moment and in no case later than eighteen months from the closing of the conference, to bring the respective recommendations or draft conventions "before the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies for the enactment of legislation or other action."

The fourth session was held in Geneva, Switzerland, from October 18 to November 3, 1922, twenty-one sittings in all being held. The following 37 countries were represented at the Conference: Albania, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Esthonia, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, India, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Netherlands, Norway, Paraguay, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, Siam, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Of the delegates to the Conference, 61 were appointed on behalf of governments, 21 on behalf of employers, and 22 on behalf of workers. There were besides 91 technical advisers in attendance, of whom 44 were attached to government delegates, 24 to employers' delegates, and 23 to workers' delegates.

THE CANADIAN DELEGATION

The Government delegates were the Honourable James Murdock, Minister of Labour, and the Honourable Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. The employers' delegate, appointed on the nomination of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was Mr. W. C. Coulter, of the Booth-Coulter Copper and Brass Company, Limited, Toronto, with Mr. H. W. Macdonnell, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Toronto, as technical adviser. The workers' delegate was Mr. Tom Moore, Ottawa, president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, with Mr. John W. Bruce, of Toronto, Canadian Representative of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, as technical adviser.

Although the items on the agenda were not such as would fall within the scope of provincial legislation, the provincial governments were invited to be represented at the Conference under conditions similar to those in which they had attended previous conferences, namely, as advisers to the Dominion Government delegates; advantage, however, was not taken of the invitation on this occasion.

AGENDA OF THE CONFERENCE

The following was the agenda of the Conference:—

I. Revision of Part XIII of the Treaty of Versailles and the corresponding parts of the other treaties of peace;

- (a) With a view to the reform of the constitution of the Governing Body;
- (b) With a view to modification as regards the periodicity of the Conference.

II. Communication to the International Labour Office of statistical and other information regarding emigration and immigration and the repatriation and transport of emigrants.

REFORM OF GOVERNING BODY

Article 393 of the Peace Treaty provides that the International Labour Office shall be under the control of a Governing Body consisting of twenty-four persons: twelve representing governments, six representing employers, and six representing workers. A new article was adopted by the Conference providing for the increase of the Governing Body to thirty-two persons, distributed in the same proportion as before.

Both the original article and the proposed amendment set forth that of the persons representing governments, eight shall be chosen by the member states of chief industrial importance, and the other persons representing the governments, numbering four under the original article and eight under the proposed amendment, shall be appointed by the members selected for that purpose by the government delegates to the Conference, excluding the delegates of the eight members mentioned above. The proposed amendment further requires that of the sixteen members represented, six shall be non-European states. The question as to which are the members of chief industrial importance was left to the Council of the League of Nations, which, having adopted a classification placing Canada amongst the first eight member states of chief industrial importance, assures the Dominion Government of representation on the Governing Body similar to that which it has had since the inception of the International Labour Organization. Under the terms of article 422 of the Treaty of Peace, the proposed amendment of article 393, before going into force, will require to be ratified by the states represented on the Council of the League of Nations and by three-fourths of the members of the League of Nations.

Procedure for Amendment of Conventions.—A committee on this subject held several meetings and also appointed from its members a sub-committee of legal experts to consider a proposal whereby in future draft conventions a clause could be inserted to provide for desired amendments. It was recommended by the committee and decided by the conference that the International Labour Office should be directed to undertake a thorough study of the problems involved in the proposal to permit of amendments to future draft conventions and to prepare a report for submission to member governments in advance of the next conference.

Resolution Regarding Unemployment.—A resolution was adopted calling upon the International Labour Office to continue the collection of information relative to unemployment and measures for dealing therewith, and further resolving that the International Labour Office should ask the Economic and Financial Organization of the League of Nations for all pertinent information concerning the influence on the demand for labour of both sexes of monetary, financial and commercial policy in different countries.

Recommendation Regarding Migration Statistics.—No draft Conventions were adopted at this conference, but a recommendation was adopted that each member of the International Labour Organization should communicate to the International Labour Office available information regarding emigration, immigration, repatriation, transit of emigrants on outward and return journeys, and measures taken or contemplated in connection with these questions. It was also recommended that the members of the International Labour Organization should make every effort to communicate to the International Labour Office specified statistics as to sex, age, occupation, nationality, country of last residence, and country of proposed residence. Finally, the recommendation suggested the adoption of a uniform definition of the term "emigrant" and the determination of uniform particulars to be entered on identity papers issued to emigrants and immigrants by the competent authorities, and the use of a uniform method of recording statistical information regarding emigration and immigration.

THE GOVERNING BODY

Six meetings of the Governing Body were held during the past fiscal year as follows: April 4-7, 1922, at Rome; July 25-27, 1922, at Interlaken; October 12-13, 1922, at Geneva; October 31, 1922, at Geneva (two sessions); and January-February, 1923, at Geneva. As already intimated, the Governing Body is composed of twenty-four members, of whom twelve are Government representatives, six employers' representatives, and six workers' representatives. Of the twelve Government seats, one is held by the Government of Canada. The Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labour, attended the meetings of the Governing Body which were held in Geneva on October 12, 13 and 31, 1922; Colonel David Carnegie, Honorary Correspondent of the Department of Labour in London and Canadian delegate on the Temporary Mixed Commission for the Reduction of Armaments of the League of Nations, who was resident in Canada throughout the period of the war, represented the Minister of Labour at the April and July sessions. At the First Session of the International Labour Conference (1919), Mr. P. M. Draper, Secretary-Treasurer of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, was elected as one of the six workers' representatives on the Governing Body. Mr. Draper, being unable to attend any of the sessions of the Governing Body last year, was represented at the meetings in Geneva in October by Mr. Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

In accordance with article 393 of the Treaty of Peace, the Governing Body appointed at the First Session of the International Labour Conference (1919) completed its term of office in 1922 and the Fourth Session of the Conference proceeded accordingly to the election of a new Governing Body. The Government members representing the eight states of chief industrial importance entitled to seats on the Governing Body, are as follows: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Great Britain, India, Italy and Japan. The other four governments chosen at the Conference to appoint government delegates to the Governing Body are as follows: Spain, Chile, Finland and Poland. Six persons representing employers on the Governing Body were chosen as follows by the employers' delegates present at the Conference: Mr. Carlier (Belgium), Mr. Gemmill (South Africa), Mr. Hodac (Czechoslovakia), Mr. Litlgow (Great Britain), Mr. Olivetti (Italy) and Mr. Pinot (France). Mr. W. C. Coulter, of Toronto, was chosen as one of the deputy members of the employers' group. The following persons, representing the workers on the Governing Body, were elected by the workers' delegates present at the Conference: Mr. Jouhaux (France); Mr. Leipart (Germany); Mr. Tom Moore (Canada); Mr. Oudegeest (Netherlands); Mr. Poulton (Great Britain); and Mr. Thorberg (Sweden).

The Department of Labour is charged with the duties arising out of the relations of Canada with the International Labour Organization. These have entailed much correspondence, not only with the International Labour Office, but also with other departments of the Dominion Government, with the provinces, with employers' and with workers' organizations. Replies have also been prepared in the Department of Labour to various questionnaires which were circulated on behalf of the International Labour Office. The performance of these duties has necessarily entailed a close study on the part of officers of the Department of the various technical questions which have figured on the various conference agenda and meetings of the Governing Body and of questionnaires received from the International Labour Office.

A bulletin entitled "Canada and the International Labour Conference" was issued by the Department of Labour in February, 1922, for the purpose of furnishing information in reference to the International Labour Organization and the subjects which have received attention at the hands of this body to date.
