This report contains the results of the first retail commodity survey planned as a continuing series on a five year basis. Formerly, commodity detail was collected as part of the Census program; however, because of the restricted range of information collected by the 1966 Quinquennial Census of Merchandising and Services and because of the growing interest in commodity statistics the present extensive survey was established.

It is important to realize that this survey represents an activity study of the business surveyed. As such, it raised the problem for most businesses, of reporting data not readily available under normal accounting practices. Many businesses had to review purchase invoices or examine their inventory movements for the information required and to them must go the greater share of the credit for the success of this publication. Others, unable to use the procedures above, submitted their best estimates.

Scope and Coverage

This survey was restricted to the collection of commodity information and it was, therefore, possible to design a questionnaire better adapted to meet the needs of the prime users of such information. In contrast to earlier commodity surveys which employed the "reporting panel" methodology, this one utilized sampling techniques.

A systematic random sample of 25,000 retail establishments was selected from among 135,000 firms counted in the 1966 Census universe. All establishments which reported sales in excess of $1,000,000 in 1966 and all chain store organizations were included in the sample on a "take-all" basis - with the exception of brewer's warehouse stores, government liquor stores and wine stores, which were excluded from the survey in their entirety. The 1966 retail universe was classified into 94 trades and in order to produce a statistically sound sample, this rather large number was reduced to 26 sampling groups. In setting up these sample groups every effort was made to maintain each group as homogeneous as possible. Certain individual trade classifications, because of their particular importance in the retail universe, were assigned to a group by themselves, while one, the miscellaneous group,

Le présent bulletin renferme les résultats de la première enquête sur les marchandises de détail, dont il est prévu qu'elle se poursuivra sur une base de cinq ans. La statistique des marchandises était autrefois recueillie au cours des recensements; toutefois, du fait que le recensement quinquennal de 1966 des établissements de commerce et de service avait produit une gamme restreinte de renseignements et à cause de l'intérêt croissant manifesté pour la statistique des marchandises, la présente enquête, plus approfondie, a été instituée.

Il faut d'abord se rendre compte que l'enquête en question constitue une étude d'activité des entreprises interrogées. De ce fait, elle a soulevé pour la plupart des entreprises le problème de déclarer des données qu'une comptabilité ordinaire ne révèle pas immédiatement. Nombre d'entreprises ont dû revoir leurs factures d'achat ou étudier leurs mouvements de stocks pour fournir les renseignements. C'est donc à ces entreprises que revient la grande part du mérite de la présente publication. D'autres, se voyant dans l'impossibilité d'utiliser les méthodes susmentionnées, ont soumis leurs meilleures estimations.

Étendue et champ d'enquête

L'enquête se limitant à la collecte de renseignements sur les marchandises, il a donc été possible d'établir un questionnaire mieux adapté aux besoins des principaux utilisateurs de ce genre de renseignements. Contrairement aux enquêtes antérieures qui faisaient appel à la méthode "de l'échantillon constant", celle-ci emploie des techniques d'échantillonnage.

On a établi un échantillon aléatoire systématique de 25,000 établissements de détail parmi 135,000 faisant partie de l'univers du recensement de 1966. L'échantillon comprenait l'ensemble des établissements dont la valeur des ventes dépassait un million de dollars en 1966 et des entreprises à succursales multiples sur une base "exhaustive", sauf les comptoirs de vente des brasseries, les régies des alcools et les magasins de vins qui ont tous été exclus de l'enquête. En 1966, l'univers des établissements de détail était classé en 94 types de commerce mais ce nombre plutôt considérable a été réduit à 26 groupes en vue de produire un échantillon statistiquement valide. En établissant ces groupes d'échantillonnage, on s'est efforcé de respecter l'homogénéité de chaque groupe. A cause de leur importance particulière dans l'univers du commerce de détail, certaines catégories constituaient un groupe par elles-mêmes alors qu'une des catégories, celle des marchandises diverses, se composait de 16 types de commerce. Les huit contained 16 trades. There were eight groups that contained only one trade and these were: grocery stores with fresh meat, department stores, variety stores, new car dealers, used car dealers, service stations, jewellery stores and family clothing and furnishings stores.

Reference was made above to the omission of brewer's warehouse stores, government liquor stores and wine stores from the sample frame. Because of the limited nature of the commodities which they handle, it was felt that no useful purpose would be served by including these three trades in the retail commodity survey. As a result, the total Canada figures shown in the accompanying tables are deficient by $1,276,740,300 which represents the total sales of alcoholic beverages as established in the current retail trade survey for 1968. The sample was based on the 1966 Census universe but because of the lack of information on births and deaths in the intervening two years, was not updated. However, since births and deaths in retail trade, to a large extent, tend to be offsetting particularly among smaller firms, this factor was not taken into consideration during the imputation procedures.

Imputation for non-response

Non-response to the survey fell into three categories:

- (i) firms reporting total sales but only partial commodity distribution.
- (ii) firms reporting total sales and no commodity distribution; and
- (iii) firms reporting neither sales nor commodity distribution.

For those firms falling within the first or second categories, only the commodity distribution had to be imputed while for firms in the third category sales had to be imputed as well.

The imputation for sales was undertaken by obtaining 1966 data from Census records and updating these by applying the growth-rate factors, applicable to the particular trade, established by the 1967 and 1968 current retail trade surveys.

The imputation for commodity detail was somewhat more complex. Because the sample was stratified by sales size and the smallest geographic area was set at the province, non-responses were given the same commodity structure as that established by groupes formés d'un seul type de commerce étaient: les épiceries avec viande fraîche, les grands magasins, les bazars, les concessionnaires de voitures neuves, les marchands de voitures usagées, les stations-service, les bijouteries et les magasins de vêtements et de mercerie pour la famille.

Comme il vient d'être dit, les comptoirs de vente des brasseries, les régies des alcools et les magasins de vins ont été exclus de la population de référence. En raison du nombre restreint de produits vendus par ces trois genres d'établissement, il n'a pas été jugé utile de les inclure dans l'enquête sur les marchandises de détail. Il s'ensuit que les chiffres donnés pour l'ensemble du Canada dans les tableaux annexés au bulletin font abstraction de $1,276,740,300, valeur totale des ventes de boissons alcooliques établie par l'enquête de 1968 sur le commerce de détail. L'échantillon a été tiré de l'univers du recensement de 1966, mais il n'a pas été actualisé en raison du manque de renseignements sur le nombre des magasins ayant ouvert ou fermé leurs portes au cours des deux années suivantes. Toutefois, il n'a pas été tenu compte de ce facteur au moment des imputations puisque, dans une large mesure, les ouvertures et les fermetures tendent à se compenser, surtout pour les entreprises de moindre importance.

Imputations pour non-réponse

Les cas de non-réponse à l'enquête se classaient en trois catégories:

- (i) entreprises déclarant les ventes totales mais seulement une répartition partielle des marchandises.
- (ii) entreprises déclarant les ventes totales mais aucune répartition des marchandises; et
- (iii) entreprises ne déclarant ni ventes ni répartition des marchandises.

Dans le cas des entreprises de la première ou de la deuxième catégorie seule la répartition des marchandises a été imputée, tandis que pour la troisième catégorie, il a également fallu imputer les ventes.

On a imputé les ventes en actualisant les données du recensement de 1966 au moyen des taux d'accroissement relevés aux enquêtes de 1967 et de 1968 sur le commerce de détail et applicables à chaque commerce.

L'imputation des catégories de marchandises était un peu plus complexe. Du fait que l'échantillon était stratifié par taille des ventes et que la province constituait la plus petite région géographique, on a appliqué aux cas de non-réponse le classement par catégorie de marchandises établi the "good" responses in particular trades for given strata. Once the imputation had been completed, the sample was blown up to the universe.

Limitations

The main limitation has already been touched on: the lack of uniformity of trades that inevitably occurs when 94 trades are grouped into 26 sampling groups. Thus, the groups that contained a relatively large number of trades would have a limited number of common characteristics and the information would, therefore, be less representative than in a group made up of a single trade. Another factor that may place some limitation on the data is the fact that the universes of the trades are of various magnitudes and that the representation of a trade in the sample is dependent on the size of the universe and the number of other trades in the sample group.

Finally, another limitation of the survey lay in the fact that it was necessary to change the trade classification for certain reporting firms because commodity information reported for 1968 differed significantly from the data reported by the same firm in the 1966 Census. For this reason, Tables 1 and 2 of the report cover only those "selected" trades or commodities for which it was felt the trade and commodity information were representative. It should be noted, therefore, that both Tables 1 and 2 do not add to the Canada "Total All Commodities" shown at the top of Table 2. Because the calculations were based on percentages calculated to one decimal point, the estimated sales for certain small categories are identical.

par les "bonnes" réponses de chaque type de commerce pour les strates données. Une fois l'imputation terminée, on a gonflé l'échantillon à la taille de l'univers.

Limitations

On a déjà parlé de la principale limitation, c'est-à-dire du manque d'uniformité qui surgit inévitablement lorsque 94 types de commerce sont classés en 26 groupes d'échantillonnage. Ainsi, les groupes composés d'un nombre assez considérable de types de commerce ont un nombre limité de caractéristiques communes et les renseignements sont moins représentatifs que quand il s'agit d'un groupe formé d'un seul type de commerce. Un autre facteur qui pourrait amener une certaine limitation des données est le fait que l'univers des divers types de commerce est plus ou moins grand et que la représentation d'un type de commerce dans l'échantillon est fonction de la taille de l'univers et du nombre des autres types de commerce faisant partie du groupe d'échantillonnage.

Finalement, une autre limitation de l'enquête provenait du fait qu'il a fallu modifier la classification par type de commerce pour certaines entreprises interrogées parce que les renseignements sur les marchandises données en 1968 différaient sensiblement des données déclarées par les mêmes entreprises au recensement de 1966. C'est pourquoi les Tableaux 1 et 2 du bulletin ne portent que sur les marchandises et les types de commerce "choisis" dont on a estimé que les renseignements concernant ces deux caractéristiques étaient représentatifs. Il faut par conséquent noter que le total correspondant aux Tableaux 1 et 2 est différent du "Total tous produits" qui figure dans la partie supérieure du Tableau 2. Du fait que les calculs prennent pour base des taux établis au dixième de pour cent près, les chiffres estimatifs des ventes sont les mêmes pour un certain nombre de catégories moins importantes.
