GLOSSARY OF TERMS

Modular Housing - Is defined as housing that has approximately 85% of its value added at the factory. It leaves the plant on a flatbed truck in the form of three dimensional modules or boxes. The modules contain the interior wall surfaces with all insulation, plumbing and electrical work installed, as well as floor coverings, cabinetry, mouldings and electrical and plumbing fixtures in place. Generally, two, three or more modules are joined together at the construction site to form a completed house or multi-unit commercial or institutional building. Modular units can be stacked to form multi-level apartments or commercial structures. Modular housing is manufactured to the requirements of the National Building Code of Canada under the A277 certification provisions of the Canadian Standards Association (CSA).

Mobile Homes - Can be defined as a house that has 85 to 95% of its value added at the factory. Like the modular, mobile home units leave the factory in the form of three dimensional modules or boxes. Unlike the modular home however, the mobile home modules are constructed on a longitudinal subframe (undercarriage) that ultimately forms a structural part of the foundation. Axle assemblies are attached to the subframe for transportation from the factory to the home site. These units contain all of the components noted in the modular with the addition in many cases of appliances and window coverings. A completed mobile home consists of two modules joined together at the home site or very often a single module up to 80 feet in length and 16 feet in width. Mobile homes are manufactured in accordance with the

GLOSSAIRE

Maison modulaire - Cette expression désigne une maison dont 85 p. 100 environ de la valeur ajoutée provient de l'usine. Elle quitte cette dernière sur un camion à plateau et sous la forme de modules ou boîtes tri-dimensionnels. Ces modules contiennent déjà les parements de mur, avec tous les instants et tous les fils électriques, toute la robinetterie, ainsi que les revêtements de sol, les placards, les moulures, les appareils d'éclairage et les appareils sanitaires. Généralement au moins deux ou trois modules sont réunis sur le terrain à bâtir, pour constituer une maison complète ou un immeuble commercial ou de séjour permanent à plusieurs unités. Les modules peuvent être empilés de façon à créer des ensembles commerciaux ou d'appartements à étages multiples. La maison modulaire est fabriquée conformément aux exigences du Code du bâtiment du Canada, en suivant les dispositions en matière d'accréditation A277 de l'Association canadienne de normalisation (ACNOR).

Maison mobile - Elle peut être définie comme une maison dont 85 à 95 p. 100 environ de la valeur ajoutée provient de l'usine. À l'instar de la maison modulaire, elle quitte l'usine sous la forme de modules ou de boîtes tri-dimensionnels. À l'encontre de la maison modulaire, toutefois, les modules d'une maison mobile reposent sur une fausse ossature longitudinale (train de roulement) qui constitue en fin de compte une partie structurelle de la fondation. Les éléments de l'essieu sont joints à la fausse ossature en vue du transport de la maison depuis l'usine jusqu'à l'emplacement. Ces unités contiennent tous les éléments relevés dans la maison modulaire, avec l'adjonction, dans bien des cas, d'appareils ménagers et de parements de fenêtres. Une maison mobile complète comprend deux modules réunis sur le

Canadian Standards Association (CSA)
Z240 National Standard of Canada.

Panelized Component Housing - Defined as housing constructed from a series of factory produced wall, floor and roof panels. The panels may be "closed" with insulation, wiring, vapour barrier, interior gypsum board, and exterior sheathing installed at the factory. If "closed", the panels can be manufactured to the National Building Code of Canada under the A277 provisions of the Canadian Standards Association (CSA). Panels may be "open" consisting only of the framing lumber or "closed one side" consisting of exterior sheathing applied to the framing members as the panel leaves the factory. The "open" and "closed one side" panels are finished on site and are subject to local building inspection to determine building code compliance.

Pre-engineered Component (Pre-cut) "Packaged" Housing - Defined as housing that has all materials engineered and pre-cut at a factory. The materials are then packaged and delivered to a building site for erection on a permanent foundation. The packaged house may consist of a simple building shell or may include some parts or all of the components necessary to complete a house for occupancy. Packaged home "kits" normally include windows, doors, flooring, insulation, electrical, plumbing and interior finishing materials.

terrain à bâtir, ou très souvent un seul module qui peut mesurer jusqu'à 80 pieds de long et 16 de large. Ce type de maison est fabriqué conformément à la norme nationale Z240 de l'Association canadienne de normalisation (ACNR).

Maison à éléments préfabriqués - Définie comme maison construite à l'aide d'une série de panneaux muraux, de panneaux de plancher et de panneaux de plafond, lesquels peuvent être "fermés" et dont l'isolation, le câblage, le pare-vapeur, les plaques de parement intérieur en plâtre ainsi que le parement extérieur ont été installés à l'usine. S'il s'agit de panneaux "fermés", ils peuvent être fabriqués conformément aux exigences du Code du bâtiment du Canada ainsi qu'aux dispositions en matière d'accréditation A277 de l'Association canadienne de normalisation (ACNR). On peut trouver aussi des panneaux "ouverts" en bois de charpente seulement, ou bien des panneaux "fermés d'un côté" qui consistent en du parement extérieur que l'on accole à des éléments de charpente avant que lesdits panneaux ne quittent l'usine. Les panneaux "ouverts" ou "fermés d'un côté" sont apprêtés sur le chantier même et assujettis à une inspection sur place afin de déterminer si ils sont conformes au code du bâtiment.

Maison "prête à expédier" de construction industrialisée (pré-découpée) - Définie comme maison dont tous les éléments sont fabriqués et découpés au préalable à l'usine, avant d'être emballés et livrés à un chantier de construction vue d'être montés sur une fondation permanente. Ce type d'habitation peut consister en une simple coquille d'expansion ou comprendre une partie ou la totalité des éléments nécessaires pour terminer une maison en vue de l'habiter. Les "jeux" de maisons prêts à être expédiés comprennent ordinairement les fenêtres, les portes, le Industrial Camp Units - Can be defined as self contained camp buildings generally destined for remote regions, complete with kitchens, baths, recreational areas and the like. Units are often customized to the customers specifications such as kiosks, offices and dormitories. Similar in construction detail to the mobile home, industrial camp units leave the factory in the form of three dimensional modules or boxes. The units are constructed on a longitudinal subframe (undercarriage) which ultimately forms a structural part of the foundation. A completed industrial camp structure can consist of two or more modules which are joined together at the work site to form the required building purpose. The manufacture of industrial camp units is carried out in accordance with the requirements of the Canadian Standards Association (CSA) A277 certification procedures.

Log Homes - There are principally two types of log homes built in Canada referred to as Precut and Handhewn. Precut log homes are machine profiled with a tongue and groove on the top and bottom of each log. The Precut logs are milled to specific sizes, shapes and lengths to suit a particular design. The precut logs along with windows, doors, roofing and other finishing materials form a "kit" which is transported to the building site where it is assembled on a foundation. Handhewn log homes are ones where the logs are hewn (cut by hand) flat on one or more sides or are left round to form the exterior shell of the building. The exact origin of log building is lost in prehistory, but in Canada both the English and French planchéage, l'isolant les installations électriques, la plomberie et les garnitures intérieures.

Unités de camp industriel - Elles peuvent être définies comme des constructions autonomes destinées à des régions éloignées, qui ont tout, notamment des cuisines, des salles de bain, des aires de loisir, etc. Elles sont souvent adaptées aux goûts des clients, dotées par exemple de kiosques, de bureaux et de dortoirs. Ressemblant à la maison mobile quant au détail de leur construction, les unités de camp industriel quittent l'usine sous la forme de modules ou de boîtes tridimensionnels. Elles sont construites sur une fausse ossature longitudinale (train de roulement) qui constitue en fin de compte une partie structurelle de leur fondation. Une unité de camp industriel complète peut consister en deux ou plusieurs modules réunis au chantier de construction pour constituer le bâtiment voulu. La fabrication des unités de camp industriels effectue conformément aux exigences du Code du bâtiment du Canada et suivant les procédures d'accréditation A277 de l'Association canadienne de normalisation (ACNOR).

Maisons de rondins - On construit au Canada principalement deux types de maisons de rondins, dénommées maisons pré-découpées et maisons équarries à la main. Les maisons pré-découpées sont profilées à l'aide d'une machine servant au bouvetage du haut et du bas de chaque rondin. Les rondins pré-taillés sont usinés selon des tailles, des formes et des longueurs précises, afin de les adapter à un plan particulier. Ces rondins ainsi que les fenêtres, les portes, de la toiture d'autres matériaux de finition, constituent un "jeu" que l'on transporte au chantier afin de l'assembler sur une fondation. Les maisons équarries à la main sont celles dont un ou plusieurs côtés des rondins sont équarris à la main ou gardent leur rondeur settlers built log walls by laying logs horizontally on top of each other to form a four sided structure. Traditional log structures are notched at the corners and detailed in many ways. Handhewn walls are first built in house form at the companies yard, then numbered and disassembled for transport to the permanent site, where it is re-erected with use of a crane on a prepared foundation. Precut and Handhewn log building companies both provide customized structures as a norm.

Timber Frame - In this type of construction the principal structural components are large dimension timbers placed vertically (post) and horizontally (beam) to form the structural exterior frame of a home. The house "frames" are then enclosed with insulated panels which are attached to the frame shell in order to enclose the exterior of the structure.

Timber Framing, first used in the construction of farm buildings in Canada, in recent years has been revolutionized with the addition of the insulated stress skin infill panel. These finally crafted "frame" structures provide a unique combination of stability, energy efficiency and design flexibility which lend themselves to traditional, rustic and contemporary housing tastes.

pour constituer la coquille extérieure du bâtiment. L'origine exacte de la construction d'habitations en rondins se perd dans la nuit des temps. Au Canada cependant, les colons, tant français qu'anglais, construisaient les murs de rondins en empilant horizontalement ces rondins pour en faire une structure à quatre côtés. Les structures de rondins traditionnelles sont entaillées aux coins et épurées de maintes façons. Les murs équarris à la main sont d'abord bâtis sous la forme d'une maison dans la cour des entreprises, puis ils sont numérotés et déassemblés en vue d'être transportés à leur emplacement permanent où ils seront montés sur une fondation appropriée au moyen d'une grue. Normalement, les constructeurs de maisons de rondins pré-découpées et de maisons de rondins équarries à la main fournissent tous deux des structures personnalisées.

Charpente en bois d'œuvre - Dans ce type de construction les principaux éléments structurels sont des billes de grosses dimensions que l'on place verticalement (poteaux) et horizontalement (poutres) pour constituer la coquille externe d'une maison. La charpente est entourée de panneaux isolés qui lui sont attachés du côté extérieur. L'utilisation d'une charpente en bois d'œuvre, qui a tout d'abord eu lieu dans la construction des bâtiments de ferme au Canada, a subi une transformation révolutionnaire ces dernières années, avec l'adjonction d'une structure panneau tée intermédiaire et isolée. Cette structure de charpente, construite avec soin, offre une combinaison unique de stabilité, de rendement énergétique et de souplesse de conception, qui se prête aux goûts à la fois traditionnels, rustiques et contemporains.
