

Child care use during and after the pandemic

We asked Canadians what it is like to be a parent during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Here are some of the participants' responses:

Among parents who were using child care during the pandemic

I am concerned about the health of my child or another member of the household

13%

My family members or friends will take care of my child or children

6%
I can no longer afford child care services

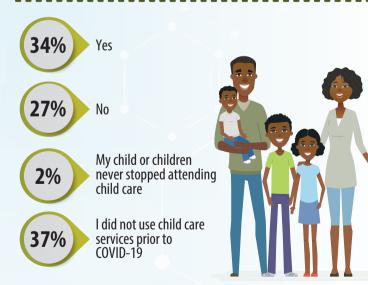

32%

I will no longer need child care services

Among parents who were not using child care during the pandemic

53%	6 %	42%
Did not pay fees and child did not attend	Paid fees to hold a space but child did not attend	Did not use child care prior to COVID-19

When child care services reopen, will your child or children attend?
