Canada

In every country in the world, cereals make up a large portion of the diet, as a source of energy and protein. Cereal grains remain as a staple food because they can be grown in many different climates and soils.

In Canada, wheat, oats and barley are the main cereal crops produced for human consumption and for animal feed; other cereals grown are corn, rye, buckwheat and triticale. Most of the wheat, oats, barley and rye are produced in the Prairie Provinces and nearly all of the grain corn is harvested in Eastern Canada. Buckwheat is grown mainly in Manitoba and the eastern provinces. These cereal grains are processed into various kinds of flour and meal, breakfast cereals, bakery products and pastas.

Cereals make an important contribution to the diet by furnishing protein, carbohydrate, iron, phosphorus and the B vitamins — thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. Because whole grain cereals include the entire kernel of grain they are especially valuable for these nutrients, especially the B vitamins. Cereal protein is not a complete protein but may be supplemented with milk, eggs, cheese, meat or legumes.

Canada's Food Guide recommends that we eat three to five servings of bread and cereals every day.

BUYING AND STORING

Whole grain cereals, available in quick, instant and regular forms, usually cost less per serving than ready-to-eat cereals. Cereals packed in individual servings are usually the most expensive; those that need to be cooked are usually less expensive. It is false economy to purchase larger amounts of cereals than can be conveniently stored. After packages are opened, ready-to-eat cereals lose crispness and become stale if air gets to them.

Store cereals at room temperature in airtight containers or packages to preserve freshness. Check packages regularly for insect infestation and discard any cereals affected.

COOKING

Follow directions on the package. If there are none, or if the cereal is bought in bulk, use the following as a guide for cooking the regular type of breakfast cereals.

DIRECT HEAT METHOD Add cereal slowly to boiling salted water, in heavy pot, stirring constantly. When cereal begins to thicken, cover and cook on low heat for time indicated below. Stir occasionally during cooking. For thinner cereals, add a little more boiling water.

DOUBLE BOILER METHOD Cook as above over direct heat until cereal begins to thicken. Cover and finish cooking over boiling water for time indicated in the table (stirring not required).

	Cereal (mL)	Water (mL)	Salt (mL)	Time		Yield (L)
				Direct heat (min)	Double boiler (h)
Cracked wheat	250	1125	3	45	1½	3.5
Farina*	125	750	3	30	½	2.0
Oatmeal (ground oats)	250	1000 cold	5	30	1	3.5
Mixed grain cereals	250	750	2	20	¾	2.0
Rolled oats, regular	250	625 to 750	2	20	¾	2.5

*Cream of wheat, wheat hearts, wheatlets

As a precaution against the lumping of oatmeal, add the cereal to cold salted water. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Continue cooking as directed for other cereals.

Combination of three or more whole grain cereals such as rolled oats, flaxseed, bran, farina, rye, cornmeal, cracked wheat, corn, rice, barley.

You can substitute fruit juice or milk for part of the water in cooking cereal.

Try combining two or more cereals. Allow the time required for cereal with longest cooking period.

If desired, sweeten cereal with white or brown sugar, maple syrup or honey. Add extra flavor with a pat of butter, chopped fruits or nuts.
