ABOUT THIS PUBLICATION

Library of Parliament Legislative Summaries summarize bills currently before Parliament and provide background about them in an objective and impartial manner. They are prepared by Parliamentary Information, Education and Research Services, which carries out research for and provides information and analysis to parliamentarians and Senate and House of Commons committees and parliamentary associations. Legislative Summaries are revised as needed to reflect amendments made to bills as they move through the legislative process.

For clarity of exposition, the legislative proposals set out in the bill described in this Legislative Summary are stated as if they had already been adopted or were in force. It is important to note, however, that bills may be amended during their consideration by the House of Commons and Senate, and have no force or effect unless and until they are passed by both houses of Parliament, receive Royal Assent, and come into force.

Any substantive changes in this Library of Parliament Legislative Summary that have been made since the preceding issue are indicated in bold print.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY OF BILL C-41: AN ACT TO AMEND THE CRIMINAL CODE AND TO MAKE CONSEQUENTIAL AMENDMENTS TO OTHER ACTS

1 BACKGROUND

Bill C-41, An Act to amend the Criminal Code and to make consequential amendments to other Acts, was introduced in the House of Commons on 9 March 2023 by the Honourable Marco Mendicino, Minister of Public Safety.¹ On 27 March 2023, the bill passed second reading and was referred to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Justice and Human Rights.

Bill C-41 amends the *Criminal Code*² (the Code) to allow Canadians to provide humanitarian assistance in areas controlled by a terrorist group, when authorized by the Minister of Public Safety. Bill C-41 sets out conditions that must be met before such authorization can be granted, including the completion of a security review.

The immediate impetus for Bill C-41 is the humanitarian situation in Afghanistan. Afghanistan has been under the control of the Taliban – a terrorist group³ – since the withdrawal of United States and North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces in August 2021. This prompted Afghanistan’s exclusion from the international banking system, the freezing of its foreign reserves, and the suspension of international development assistance.⁴

Current section 83.03(b) of the Code prohibits the direct or indirect provision of property or financial services “knowing that, in whole or part, they will be used by or will benefit a terrorist group.”⁵ As a result of this broadly framed provision, Canadian humanitarian organizations are currently unable to provide aid in Afghanistan without risk of criminal sanction, since their work could incidentally benefit the Taliban through, for example, the payment of taxes.

In December 2021, the United Nations (UN) Security Council adopted Resolution 2615, which clarified that humanitarian assistance in Afghanistan would not constitute a violation of international sanctions against the Taliban and its associated entities pursuant to UN Security Council Resolution 2255.⁶ At the same time, the resolution encouraged “reasonable efforts to minimize the accrual of any benefits, whether as a result of direct provision or diversion, to individuals or entities [such as the Taliban].”⁷ This was reaffirmed and expanded upon in December 2022 by UN Security Council Resolution 2664.⁸ Several countries have implemented these resolutions through amendments to their domestic legal frameworks.⁹

Despite international efforts to remove barriers to humanitarian aid, by the end of 2022, more than 90% of Afghans were suffering from some degree of food insecurity, with the number of people facing acute food insecurity expected to rise to 20 million.¹⁰ Children and single-parent households headed by women are at disproportionate risk. Moreover, the issue of food insecurity is compounded by the broader curtailing of human rights in Afghanistan, including the systematic violation of the rights of women and girls.¹¹

The UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan recently reported that the humanitarian crisis in Afghanistan “has been exacerbated by the unintended consequences of political cautiousness and overcompliance with sanctions, despite the humanitarian exemptions afforded by the Security Council.”¹²

Bill C-41 follows UN Security Council resolutions 2615 and 2664, as well as recent recommendations from three parliamentary committees to remove Canadian barriers to humanitarian aid in Afghanistan.¹³ Bill C-41 does not fully reflect some of the specific recommendations contained in these parliamentary committee reports, including the recommendation of the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights to create a blanket humanitarian exemption to section 83.03(b) to clarify “that legitimate humanitarian aid – absent any terrorist intent – that results in an incidental benefit to a terrorist group would not fall within the ambit of this provision.”¹⁴ Instead, Bill C-41 establishes a process for case-by-case exemptions.

2 DESCRIPTION AND ANALYSIS

Bill C-41 contains six clauses. The discussion in this section focuses on clause 1, which includes the bill’s most significant amendments. These amendments are grouped by theme.

2.1 EXCEPTION TO TERRORISM FINANCING PROHIBITION WITH AUTHORIZATION

Under current section 83.03 of the Code, it is an indictable offence to provide property or services for the purpose of terrorist activity (section 83.03(a)), or “knowing that, in whole or part, they will be used by or will benefit a terrorist group” (section 83.03(b)). A “terrorist group” is defined in section 83.01(1) as an entity that facilitates or carries out terrorist activities, or an entity listed by the Governor in Council pursuant to section 83.05.¹⁵

Clause 1 of Bill C-41 replaces current section 83.03 with new sections 83.03 to 83.0392. Under the bill, sections 83.03(a) and 83.03(b) become sections 83.03(1) and 83.03(2), with a separate heading added for section 83.03(2). This way of splitting section 83.03 emphasizes the distinction between providing property or services for the purpose of terrorist activity, and providing property or services that will benefit a terrorist group. An exception to the latter offence is then created under new section 83.03(3) for those granted authorization to carry out specified activities under the new scheme.

The exception created by new section 83.03(3) could be used to protect authorized providers of humanitarian assistance in Afghanistan from criminal liability even if their activities incidentally benefit the Taliban. It would also be available to those seeking to provide humanitarian assistance in any region controlled by a terrorist group.

2.2 ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA FOR AUTHORIZATION

New sections 83.032(1) to 83.032(4) of the Code set out the key eligibility criteria for authorization under the new scheme. Under new section 83.032(1), the Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness (Public Safety Minister) may authorize a person to carry out specified activities “in a specific geographic area that is controlled by a terrorist group.”

The activities must be for one of the listed purposes, including providing health services, education services, employment programs, human rights programs, and immigration services (new sections 83.032(1)(a) to 83.032(1)(f)). Activities supporting other kinds of Canadian government operations may also be authorized (new section 83.032(g)); however, no government grants or contributions may be authorized for this purpose (new section 83.032(3)).

New section 83.032(2) defines what it means for a geographic area to be controlled by a terrorist group. The group must exert sufficient influence that they could reasonably be expected to use or benefit from an activity involving property or services in the area.

New section 83.032(4) establishes that only Canadians or those in Canada are eligible for authorization under the scheme.

2.3 AUTHORIZATION PROCESS

There are two stages to the authorization process. First, the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration and/or the Minister of Foreign Affairs (depending on which of the listed purposes the application involves) decides whether to refer an application for authorization to the Public Safety Minister (new section 83.032(5)). Only once an application is referred can the Public Safety Minister conduct a security review and decide whether to grant the authorization requested. At both stages, the relevant minister may designate a person to act on their behalf (new section 83.031(2)).

Bill C-41 does not set out specific timelines for the authorization process.

2.3.1 Referral by Minister of Citizenship and Immigration and/or Minister of Foreign Affairs

The referral process is set out in new sections 83.032(5) to 83.032(8). To refer an application, the relevant minister must be satisfied that the application meets the following conditions (new section 83.032(6)):

- the application meets any regulatory requirements;
- the geographic area in question is controlled by a terrorist group;
- the proposed activity is for one of the listed purposes;
- the activity “responds to a real and important need” in the area; and
- the applicant is capable of administering funds in an accountable manner.

These conditions overlap with but are not identical to the eligibility criteria set out in new sections 83.032(1) to 83.032(4).

If the minister decides to refer the application to the Public Safety Minister, they must provide an assessment of how these conditions are met (new section 83.032(8)).

2.3.2 Final Decision by Public Safety Minister

Once an application has been referred, the Public Safety Minister may grant the authorization if satisfied of the following additional conditions:

- there is no practical way to carry out the proposed activity without the risk of benefiting a terrorist group (new section 83.032(9)(a)); and
- the benefits of the activity outweigh the risks (new section 83.032(9)(b)).

As part of determining whether the benefits outweigh the risks, the Public Safety Minister must consider the information provided in the referral, along with any measures or conditions that may be included in the authorization to minimize the risk of benefiting a terrorist group. The Public Safety Minister must also conduct a security review to assess the potential impact of the authorization on terrorism financing (new sections 83.032(9)(b)(ii) and 83.032(10)). New section 83.032(10) sets out a non-exhaustive list of factors that the Public Safety Minister may consider in conducting the security review, all of which probe possible links between the applicant and terrorist groups or activities.

New section 83.032(15) sets out a further limitation on granting authorization when the proposed activity will benefit a listed entity subject to UN Security Council sanctions.¹⁶ In this case, the activity may be authorized only if the Minister of Foreign Affairs confirms that the Security Council approved or did not intend to prohibit the activity, or that “there is no obstacle in international law.” This provision would apply to activities in Afghanistan, as the Taliban is a listed entity subject to UN Security Council sanctions. Humanitarian activities would likely meet the criteria for confirmation by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in light of UN Security Council resolutions 2615 and 2664.

2.4 PROCEDURAL RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES

At the first stage, an application may be deemed withdrawn if the applicant fails to provide missing information that has been requested within 60 days (new section 83.032(7)). At the second stage, the Public Safety Minister may request additional information regarding the application to be provided within a specific timeframe, failing which the application may be deemed withdrawn (new section 83.032(11)). Unlike in the referral process, the Public Safety Minister is not limited to requesting only information that should have been included in the initial application.

If the decision is made to refuse an application at either stage of the authorization process, notice must be given to the applicant “within a reasonable time” (new section 83.033(1)). The applicant must wait 180 days before applying again, unless the minister who gave the notice is satisfied there has been a “material change in circumstances” (new section 83.033(2)). If the notice came from the Public Safety Minister and they are so satisfied, the new application may be considered without going through the referral process described above (new section 83.033(3)).

New section 83.034 allows the Public Safety Minister to conduct additional security reviews at any time an authorization is in effect, and to request additional information from the applicant for this purpose. This would allow the government to assess and respond appropriately to changing circumstances, including, for example, new information or allegations regarding the applicant’s activities in the area.

2.5 SCOPE OF AUTHORIZATION

The Public Safety Minister may grant an authorization under Bill C-41 subject to any terms and conditions that they deem necessary (new section 83.032(12)). The authorization applies to any person involved, directly or indirectly, in carrying out the approved activity (new section 83.032(13)), and is valid for a specified period not exceeding five years (new section 83.032(14)). Upon application, the Public Safety Minister may renew an authorization for successive periods of not more than five years at a time (new section 83.035).

The Public Safety Minister may also amend an authorization, so long as this does not “change the essential nature of the authorization” (new section 83.036). Changing or adding to the listed purpose(s) of the activity counts as changing the essential nature of the authorization, and thus cannot be done via an amendment (new section 83.036(2)).

The Public Safety Minister may suspend, revoke, or restrict the scope of a granted authorization if a person fails to comply with its terms, or to provide information requested for additional security reviews under new section 83.034 (new section 83.037).

New section 83.032(16) clarifies that the Statutory Instruments Act does not apply to an authorization granted under Bill C-41. This ensures that authorizations are not subject to the various procedural requirements pertaining to regulations and other statutory instruments. Of particular note, this section ensures that authorizations need not be publicly accessible or subject to scrutiny by the Standing Joint Committee for the Scrutiny of Regulations.

2.6 INFORMATION SHARING

To facilitate the implementation of the authorization scheme, new section 83.038 of the Code allows for information sharing between various federal government departments, law enforcement agencies and intelligence agencies for the purposes of Bill C-41.¹⁷

2.7 JUDICIAL REVIEW PROCESS

A decision made by a minister at either stage of the authorization process set out in Bill C-41 could be challenged in federal court through the process of judicial review. New section 83.039 of the Code sets out rules to protect the confidentiality of sensitive information during the judicial review and appeal process, while still ensuring certain procedural rights for the applicant.

For instance, while the relevant minister and the applicant both have a right to be heard (new section 83.039(2)(d)), a judge must exclude the applicant and the public when hearing submissions on certain evidence if this is requested by the minister and deemed necessary to protect national security or the safety of any person (new section 83.039(2)(a)). The applicant must be “reasonably informed” of the reasons for the minister’s decision via a summary of the evidence; however, this must not include any information that would harm national security or endanger any person if disclosed (new section 83.039(2)(c)). Even if a summary of certain evidence has not been provided to the applicant, the judge may still base their decision on that evidence (new section 83.039(2)(e)).

2.8 REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

New section 83.0392(1) requires the Public Safety Minister to table an annual report on the operation of the authorization scheme set out in Bill C-41 for each calendar year, within 180 days of 1 January. Under new section 83.0392(2), the Public Safety Minister must undertake a statutory review of the new scheme within five years of its enactment, with a report to be tabled before each House of Parliament.

2.9 REGULATION-MAKING AUTHORITY

New section 83.0391 gives the Governor in Council the authority to make regulations regarding the authorization process as recommended by the Public Safety Minister. The regulations may also add new entities to the list of those permitted to share information under new section 83.038.

2.10 CONSEQUENTIAL AMENDMENTS

Clauses 2 and 3 of Bill C-41 replace references to section 83.03 in the Code and the Canada Business Corporations Act with references to new sections 83.03(1) and 83.03(2), reflecting the split created by Bill C-41.

Clauses 4, 5 and 6 amend the Excise Tax Act, the Income Tax Act and the Excise Act, 2001 to expressly allow government officials to share confidential taxpayer information for the purpose of security reviews conducted under the new scheme created by the bill. This amendment complements the new information sharing provision (new section 83.038) discussed previously at section 2.6 of this Legislative Summary.

2.11 COMING INTO FORCE

Bill C-41 does not include any transitional provisions, nor does it indicate a coming into force date. Consequently, the bill comes into force on the date it receives Royal Assent.¹⁸
