

Figure 2. Typical eastern Victoria Island, sandy-silt diamicton with ~20% surface stone content; note mix of subangular to subrounded clasts. A typical internal stone content in this till is <10%; hence, the surface gravel could be described as a lag that indicates erosion of matrix sediment; mid distant scene is ~100 m across. Photograph by D.R. Sharpe. NRCan photo 2018-312