

Figure 3. Typical eastern Victoria Island till plain with a bouldery surface. The till is thin,  $<2$  m, and some bedrock is exposed. The surface is marked by common small polygons, which occur when sufficient matrix sediment is present; mid-distant scene is  $\sim 1$  km across. Photograph by D.R. Sharpe. NRCan photo 2018-313