AN INTRODUCTION TO THE CAJ INDEX

The publication of an official journal in Canada for the purpose of disseminating army information, encouraging discussion and debate on all aspects of land warfare—be it concepts, strategy, doctrine, training or organization—and, more broadly, stimulating wider government and public interest in Canadian military affairs writ large, may easily be traced back to Confederation itself. Beginning in 1867, militia headquarters published The Volunteer Review and Military and Naval Gazette (1867–1876), which in turn was followed by many other publications including the Canadian Militia Gazette and the Canadian Military Gazette (1885–1943); VRI Magazine (1894–1897); Canadian Field and Canadian Defence Magazines (1909–1916); Canadian Defence Quarterly (1921–1939); the Canadian Army Training Memorandum (1941–1947); the Canadian Army Journal (1947–1965); the Canadian Army Doctrine Bulletin (1980–1993); The Army Doctrine and Training Bulletin (1997–2003); and, finally, the revived Canadian Army Journal (2004–present).

Each of the journal series served not only to present a forum for army ideas and debate; they also captured the context of the army at a specific time in its history and would later serve as an invaluable reference for future scholars and practitioners. In fact, anyone engaged in the serious study of Canada's Army must consult these sources at one point or another; therefore, it made sense to produce indexes whenever possible in order to facilitate that research. To that end, the editors of the new Canadian Army Journal published their first index covering the Army Doctrine and Training Bulletin and The Canadian Army Journal during the years 1997–2008, in 2009.

This new and revised CAJ index incorporates the valuable feedback received on the first edition, including overlooked entries and the correction of any errors. In addition, it has been expanded to include all material present in the journals, not just articles and reviews, and it has been extended to cover the journal's publication up to Volume 14 (2012). It is hoped that these improvements will serve researchers well. Finally, we continue to invite your feedback on this publication as we prepare future editions. If you have any questions, corrections, or suggestions to report, please do not hesitate to email the journal at thearmyjournal@forces.gc.ca.
