A. Introduction

Note: This introduction to Info Source is in large print to assist persons with visual disabilities.

Info Source: Sources of Federal Employee Information will help you, as a current or former federal employee, to locate your personal information held by the government. It will also help you to exercise your rights under the Privacy Act.

This book is a complementary volume to “Info Source: Sources of Federal Government Information” that contains information about the Government of Canada, its organization and its information holdings.

The annual edition of Info Source is supplemented by Bulletins, including the Directory of Federal Government Enquiry Points.

B. Inside Info Source

This Info Source publication has three main components:

Table of Contents

The Table of Contents is organized alphabetically by the commonly used name of the department or agency, such as Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, or Health Canada, rather than by their legal titles, Department of Agriculture and Agri-Food, or Department of Health.

Introduction

The Introduction includes:

- information about the terms used in this publication, some essential points about the Privacy Act, and directions on how to locate information by using Info Source or by making a formal request under the Privacy Act;
- a summary of the roles and responsibilities of the federal government institutions that are either responsible for the production of Info Source or are responsible for the provision of input to the Info Source publications;
- a listing of Access to Information and Privacy Coordinators, which is organized in the same order as the Table of Contents. This listing gives you the address and telephone number of all Access to Information and Privacy offices; and
- the description of each of the Standard Banks (see definition below).

Chapters

There is one chapter for each federal government department or agency subject to the Privacy Act. Each chapter contains a description of personal information relating to current and former employees of the institution, the purpose and intended use (consistent use) of the information, and a statement of how long the records containing the information are retained by the institution (retention), what happens to the records when no longer required by the institution (disposal which is either destruction or transfer to the National Archives of Canada for permanent retention) and the authority reference that permits the initiation of the disposition action (Retention Disposition Authority).

C. Useful Terms

Access to Information and Privacy Coordinator: Each federal government department or agency has an Access to Information and Privacy Coordinator. The Coordinators' offices are staffed by people who can answer questions and help you identify the records you may wish to see. The Coordinators may be contacted in person, by telephone, by letter or through the completion of the Access to Information and/or Privacy Request form. If you send a completed Access Request form or letter, include as much information as you can to help the staff locate the records you want and send you a reply as soon as possible.

Administrative Purpose: The use of personal information in a decision making process that directly affects that individual.

Classes of Personal Information: Personal information not used administratively or not retrievable by personal identifier is described under "Classes of Personal Information," i.e. unsolicited opinions, complaints or correspondence. This category was included to ensure that government departments and agencies account for all personal information that they hold.

Data Matching: An activity that involves comparing personal data obtained from a variety of sources, including personal information banks, for the purpose of making decisions about the individuals to whom the data pertains.

Information Life Cycle: The life cycle of information encompasses the stages of the planning, collection, creation, receipt, and capture of information; its organization, retrieval, use, accessibility, dissemination and transmission; its storage, maintenance, and protection; and its disposition and preservation.

Multi-Institutional Disposition Authority (MIDA): A MIDA is a Records Disposition Authority granted by the National Archivist to government institutions on a multi-institutional basis, which relates to records managed by all or a multiple number of government institutions, and which allows the institutions empowered to use the authority to dispose of records under certain terms and conditions. The Multi-Institutional Disposition Authorities are designed to eliminate the need for government institutions individually to prepare submissions for and negotiate agreements with the National Archivist for records that have similar administrative or operational status.

There are currently three categories of MIDA. They are:

1. Transitory Records

- The Authority for the Destruction of Transitory Records

2. Common Administrative Records

http://www.archives.ca/06/0610_e.html

- General Administrative Function (Authority No. 98/001)
- Real Property Management Function (Authority No. 2001/002)
- Material Management Function (Authority No. 99/003)
- Comptrollership Function (Authority 99/004)
- Human Resources Management Function (Authority No. 98/005)

3. Common Operational and Medium-Specific Records

- Institutional Records in the Office of a Minister (Authority No. 96/021)
- Records of Deputy Heads of Government Institutions (Authority No. 96/022)
- Electronic Imaging Systems (Authority No. 96/023)
- Poster-Creating Areas of Government Institutions (Authority No. 96/024)
- Audio-Visual Records Stored on Behalf of Client Departments (Authority No. 2001/004)

Questions concerning the application or interpretation of the Multi-Institutional Disposition Authorities may be addressed to the Information Management Centre of the National Archives of Canada (NA) at (613) 944-IMGI (4644) or by e-mailing imgi@archives.ca

Personal Information Banks (PIBs): Personal Information Banks provide a summary description of the type of information about individuals that is held by federal departments and agencies in their records and that has been used, is being used, or is available for use for an administrative purpose, or is organized or intended to be retrieved by the name of an individual or by an identifying number, symbol or other particular assigned to an individual.

Please refer to Section “D” of this Introduction for additional information related to Personal Information Banks.

Program Record Number or Bank Number: This unique identifying number located at the end of each Program Record or Personal Information Bank helps the Access to Information and Privacy office to locate the information requested. This number is assigned by each institution as a finding tool to access the information contained in their records.

Records Disposition Authority: In accordance with the provisions of the National Archives of Canada Act, a Records Disposition Authority (RDA) is the instrument that the National Archivist issues to enable government institutions to dispose of records which no longer have operational value, either by permitting their destruction, by requiring their transfer to the National Archives or by agreeing to their alienation from the control of the Government of Canada.

Accountability regarding the decision to destroy records and the timing of records destruction rests with individual government institutions. Records Disposition Authorities are normally applied when records are no longer required to support the business functions, operations and activities of the organization.

Retention Guidelines: Government institutions are responsible for ensuring that all information/records are managed within an established life cycle. The retention guidelines provide a timetable for the length of time institutional information/records are held within the institution, when the information/records are no longer required to meet operational, legal or other requirements, and when the Records Disposition Authorities can be applied to the information/record holdings for final disposition.

It is incumbent upon each government institution to understand and apply any legislation regarding the retention of information and more specifically, its own legislation. Each government institution is therefore required to determine the appropriate retention periods for its records, including those common administrative records covered by a MIDA. The National Archives of Canada does provide guidelines on retention periods for common administrative records on their Internet site at www.archives.ca.

D. Personal Information Banks

Personal Information Banks: Personal Information Banks provide a summary of information about individuals that is held by federal departments and agencies in their record keeping systems. The Privacy Act requires that Personal Information Banks include all personal information that is organized and retrievable by a person's name or by an identifying number, symbol or other particular assigned only to that person. Personal Information Banks must also include personal information that has been or is being used, or is available for use for an administrative purpose.

There are four types of Personal Information Banks (PIB), but this publication contains only three of those types of PIBs, as follows:

Standard Banks: There are 23 Standard Personal Information Banks that describe the information that may be contained in the common administrative records that many government institutions maintain about their employees. Institutions may require several or all of these banks to describe the personal information contained within their records. The Standard Banks describe information about pay and benefits, training and development, performance, etc.

Standard PIBs are identified with the unique identifier "PSE" as part of the bank number contained within the PIB.

Central Banks: These records and their related banks are maintained by central agencies such as the Public Service Commission, Public Works and Government Services Canada, and the Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat. They describe information about employees from all or several government institutions.

Central Banks are identified with the unique identifier "PCE" as part of the bank number contained within the PIB.

Particular Banks: Particular Banks describe personal information about employees that is specific to the requirements of each department or agency and is held within their record keeping systems.

Particular information banks are identified with the unique identifier "PPE" as part of the bank number contained within the PIB.

The fourth type of Personal Information Bank is also a Particular Bank, but it is only contained in Info Source: Sources of Federal Government Information. This type of PIB describes personal information about members of the general public, contained in the records of the particular institution declaring that PIB. In addition, this type of Personal Information Bank may describe personal information about members of the general public and federal employees (current and former). These Personal Information banks are identified with the unique identifier “PPU”.

E. Roles and Responsibilities

Treasury Board

In accordance with the Access to Information Act, Treasury Board is responsible for the annual creation and dissemination of a publication that provides a description of government organizations, program responsibilities and classes of records with sufficient clarity and detail to enable the public to exercise its rights under the Access to Information Act.

Treasury Board is also responsible for the annual publication of an index of personal information that will both serve to keep the public informed of how the government handles personal information, as well as facilitating the public’s ability to exercise its rights under the Privacy Act. Treasury Board Secretariat fulfils these requirements through the annual publication of Info Source that is comprised of the following publications:

Sources of Federal Government Information

This publication describes the organization and its information holdings

Sources of Federal Employee Information

This publication lists the personal information banks containing information related to federal employees

Directory of Federal Government Enquiry Points

This publication contains contact information for federal departments and agencies

Access to Information Act and Privacy Bulletin

This publication contains summaries of federal court cases and statistics of requests made under the ATIA and PA.

Info Source is distributed to libraries, municipal offices and federal government offices across Canada.

National Archives of Canada

Under the National Archives of Canada Act (1987), the National Archives is charged with various responsibilities regarding the disposition of information created by federal institutions in support of public policy, administration of government and program delivery. These responsibilities include the authorization of records destruction by government institutions and the preservation of records for their historical or archival importance.

Through the Government Records Disposition Program, the National Archivist issues Records Disposition Authorities (RDA) to enable government institutions to dispose of records which no longer have operational value, either by permitting their destruction (at the discretion of institutions), by requiring their transfer to the National Archives of Canada, or by agreeing to their alienation from the control of the Government of Canada.

Questions concerning the application or interpretation of the Multi-Institutional Disposition Authorities may be addressed to the Information Management Centre of the National Archives of Canada (NA) at (613) 944-IMGI (4644) or by e-mailing imgi@archives.ca

Individual Institutions

Government institutions are required to provide descriptions of their organization and information holdings to Treasury Board Secretariat on an annual basis. These descriptions are utilized in the production of the publications required by the Privacy Act. Consequently, each department and agency is responsible for the information it submits.

Government institutions are also responsible for ensuring that all information/records are managed within an established life cycle. It is incumbent upon each government institution to understand and apply any legislation regarding the retention of information and more specifically, its own legislation. Each government institution is therefore required to determine the appropriate retention periods for its records, including those common administrative records covered by a MIDA.

F. Privacy Act

In its day-to-day operations, federal government departments and agencies collect personal information from almost all Canadians. The Privacy Act gives Canadian citizens and people present in Canada the right to have access to information that is held about them by the federal government. It also protects against unauthorized disclosure of personal information. In addition, it strictly controls how the government will collect, use, store, disclose and dispose of any personal information.

Most information is available when you ask

In many cases, you, as a federal employee, may be able to obtain your personal information from a government institution without applying under the Privacy Act. You should seek information about gaining access to your records by contacting a personnel officer at your employing institution at headquarters, or in the regions, as appropriate.

Some personal information is confidential

The federal government must keep some personal information confidential under the Privacy Act, much of which relates to other people, national security or law enforcement.

How to apply

When you have decided to make a formal request under the Privacy Act, there are certain procedures to follow.

- Obtain a Personal Information Request Form at any location where Info Source is available (including the Web Site: www.tbs-sct.gc.ca/tbsf-fsct_e.html).
- Fill out the form and identify yourself in such a way that the government institution can verify who you are, i.e. that it is you, and not someone else, asking for your information. The more precise the information you provide, the faster your request can be responded to.
- If you are currently a federal employee, send the form to the Access to Information and Privacy Coordinator in your department or agency.
- If you are a former federal employee, you should contact the National Archives of Canada, 395 Wellington Street, Ottawa, Canada, K1A 0N3, (613) 995-5138.

There is no charge to apply for information under the Privacy Act.

To change the information

If you believe the information that a federal institution has on file about you is untrue or misleading, you may ask to have it corrected. Even if the department or agency does not agree to change this information, it must make a note that you have asked for the change and attach it to the file.

Safeguarding personal information

The protection of your personal information and privacy is also a very important purpose of the Privacy Act. The Act states how and when the government can collect, store and dispose of personal information. It also covers specifically why and how the information can be used or given out, as well as who can use or receive it.

Giving out information

The government can only disclose your information to someone else with your consent or when one or more of the criteria in the Privacy Act are met, such as complying with a subpoena.

Turnaround time

Under the law, all or most of the information you ask for should be disclosed within 30 days of receiving the request. If a time extension is required, you will be notified within the first 30 days and told the reason an additional 30 days may be needed.

Privacy Commissioner

The Privacy Commissioner is a representative of the people with the power to look into complaints of improper collection, use, storage, disclosure or disposition of personal information. The Privacy Commissioner can also help if you are dissatisfied with the response to your formal application or the time it has taken to obtain your response.

When the Privacy Commissioner's investigation is completed, an individual who is of the opinion that they have not been given access to all of their personal information to which they are entitled, has the right to apply to the Federal Court - Trial Division for a review of the matter.
