THE SHORT-RUN DYNAMICS OF THE CANADIAN LABOUR MARKET

Economic Council of Canada. The focus of this study is the Canadian labour market, although the methodology and conclusions may be of interest in a more general context.

Specifically, it is concerned with month-to-month movements of people into, out of, and within the labour force - with the nature and magnitude of these movements, the manner in which they are influenced by labour market conditions, and their implications for the distribution of the unemployment burden, the level of labour force participation, and other matters of consequence for labour market analysis and policy formulation.
