Introduction

Pursuant to section 11 of the Criminal Records Act (CRA), the Parole Board of Canada (PBC or the Board) must submit a report on the record suspension program to the Minister of Public Safety within three months after the end of each fiscal year. The report must contain the following information:

1. the number of applications for record suspensions made in respect of offences referred to in each of paragraphs 4(1)(a)¹ and (b);²
2. the number of record suspensions that the Board ordered or refused to order in respect of offences referred to in paragraphs 4(1)(a) and (b);
3. the number of record suspensions ordered by the province or territory of residence of the applicant; and,
4. the number of record suspensions ordered, categorized by the offence to which they relate.

Due to a Federal Court decision in March 2020,³ the PBC no longer retrospectively applies legislative amendments made to the CRA in 2010 and 2012. In applying this court decision, the PBC processes pardons⁴ and record suspensions. This report contains information related to the above with respect to both pardons and record suspensions processed by the PBC during fiscal year 2025-2026.

Background

The PBC, as part of the criminal justice system, contributes to the protection of society by facilitating, as appropriate, the timely reintegration of offenders and the sustained rehabilitation of individuals into society as law-abiding citizens. The Board makes independent, quality conditional release, record suspension and expungement decisions, as well as clemency recommendations, in a transparent and accountable manner, while respecting diversity and the rights of offenders and victims. The PBC is headed by a Chairperson who reports to Parliament through the Minister of Public Safety.

The record suspension program supports the successful reintegration of an individual into society, as it can assist them in accessing employment, housing, educational and volunteer opportunities. It is a formal attempt to remove the stigma of a criminal record for people found guilty of an offence under an Act of Parliament and who have completed their sentence and demonstrated law-

¹ Offence that is prosecuted by indictment or is a service offence for which the individual was punished by a fine of more than $5,000, detention for more than six months, dismissal from His Majesty's service, imprisonment for more than six months or a punishment that is greater than imprisonment for less than two years in the scale of punishments set out in subsection 139(1) of the National Defence Act.

² Offence that is punishable on summary conviction or is a service offence other than a service offence referred to in paragraph 4(1)(a).

³ See P.H. v. Canada (Attorney General), 2020 FC 393.

⁴ Prior to legislative amendments in 2012, record suspensions were known as pardons.

abiding behaviour for a prescribed number of years. By improving access to stable employment and housing, it is estimated that this important program also plays a pivotal role in preventing homelessness and helping Canadians build productive lives.

A record suspension restricts access to records under federal jurisdiction, removes disqualifications that would result from a conviction under federal statute or regulation, such as the ability to contract with the federal government, or eligibility for Canadian citizenship. It does not, however, guarantee either entry to or visa privileges for another country nor does it have effect on a prohibition order under section 109 of the Criminal Code of Canada. Although the CRA applies only to records kept by federal organizations, many provincial, territorial and municipal criminal justice agencies also restrict access to their records once they are informed that a record suspension has been ordered.

A record suspension does not erase the fact that an individual was convicted of a crime. The criminal record is not deleted/purged, but it is kept separate and apart from other (non-suspended) criminal records. Through the program, the PBC reviews record suspension applications for completeness and eligibility and collects information for investigation and decision-making. The Board has exclusive jurisdiction and absolute discretion to order, refuse to order, or revoke a record suspension under the CRA.

The process for revocation is started when the Board is notified, usually by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, that the person is subsequently convicted of an offence referred to in paragraph 4(1)(b) of the CRA, other than an offence referred to in subparagraph 7.2(a)(ii) of the CRA.

A record suspension / pardon can also be revoked on evidence establishing, to the satisfaction of the Board, that:

- the person is no longer of good conduct; or,
- the person knowingly made a false or deceptive statement in relation to the application for the record suspension / pardon, or knowingly concealed material in relation to that application.

The CRA authorizes that a record suspension / pardon ceases to have effect if a person is subsequently convicted of an indictable⁵ offence under a federal act or regulation of Canada or certain other types of offences⁶ that are punishable either on indictable or summary⁷ conviction. A record suspension / pardon can also be ceased if the Board is convinced by new information that the person was not eligible for a record suspension / pardon at the time it was awarded.

On December 21, 2021, the Minister of Public Safety announced that effective January 1, 2022, the record suspension application fee would be reduced to $50. It is not subject to Consumer Price Index (CPI) adjustments. Since lowering the application fee, access to record suspensions has increased for a greater number of individuals, facilitating access to employment, housing, education and other necessities that support sustained reintegration. The reduction in fee helps alleviate pre-existing barriers for those disproportionately affected by the criminal justice system.

Although there are no legislated service standards attached to the $50 application fee, the PBC continues to process applications as efficiently as possible and endeavours to adhere to established processing times. Generally, applications involving summary convictions are to be processed within approximately six months of the date of acceptance of the application. Applications involving indictable offences require more time to process and may take up to 12 months or longer to process from the date of acceptance.

Applications for which the Board is proposing to refuse to order a record suspension or deny a pardon may require up to 24 months to process after the date of application acceptance. The reason for this is that under the CRA, the Board must notify the applicant in writing of its proposal to refuse to order/deny, and advise them that they are entitled to make, or have made on their behalf, any representations to the Board that they believe relevant. In some cases, the Board may authorize a hearing.

As part of the record suspension program, the CRA provides for a no-cost record suspension for those with only simple possession of cannabis convictions. Individuals previously convicted of only simple possession of cannabis who have completed their sentence (excluding payment of fines and victim surcharges) can apply to the PBC for a record suspension with no application fee or waiting period. PBC staff members administratively order record suspensions for applicants with only simple possession of cannabis convictions.

On March 19, 2020, the Federal Court⁸ declared the transitional provisions of amendments to section 4 of the CRA, namely, section 10 of the Limiting Pardons for Serious Crimes Act and section 161 of the Safe Streets and Communities Act, unconstitutional. The Court concluded that these provisions infringed on subsections 11(h) and 11(i) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (the Charter) because they add to the punishment imposed at sentencing, and deprived applicants of the benefit of the lesser punishment available at the time the offence was committed.

Because of this decision, the PBC no longer retrospectively applies legislative amendments made to the CRA in 2010 and 2012 (as it relates to eligibility periods and criteria) for all record suspension applicants who committed their first offence prior to the coming into force of these changes. This means that applications are being processed using the CRA eligibility criteria in place at the time of an applicant's first offence.

Findings for 2025-2026

Number of applications

In 2025-2026, the Board received 15,809 record suspension applications and accepted 11,693 (74%) as eligible and complete.⁹ There were 4,042¹⁰ applications (25.5%) that were rejected at screening due to ineligibility, missing payment, wrong processing fee and/or missing documentation. Among rejected applications during the screening stage, 20% were returned for ineligibility/no jurisdiction/discontinued and 80% were returned for reasons related to missing documents/payments, etc. At the end of the fiscal year, there were 74 applications (0.5%) that had been received, but not yet processed. In the previous fiscal year 2024-2025, the Board received 17,072 record suspension applications and accepted 12,130 of them (71%) by year-end.

Following the Federal Court decision in March 2020 that resulted in record suspension applications being processed using the CRA eligibility criteria in place at the time of an applicant's first offence, there continue to be fewer applications processed as record suspensions under the current CRA. The majority of applications received in 2025-2026 were processed as pardons under previous versions of the CRA (as it relates to eligibility periods and criteria).

The chart below indicates the number of record suspension applications received in each fiscal year over the last five years: 2021-2022 to 2025-2026.

Application volumes for the record suspension program have varied greatly over the past decade. For the first time in four years, application volumes declined compared to previous years. The observed reduction in applications during 2025-2026 could be attributed to a number of reasons such as delays in receiving documents required for the application process, as well as the possibility of a return to stable volumes following the reduction in application fee in 2022. Although application volumes appear to have stabilized, some variability is expected as additional individuals become eligible under the current CRA.

Record Suspension Decisions

1. Number of applications for record suspensions made in 2025-2026 in respect of offences referred to in paragraphs 4(1)(a) and (b)

As per paragraph 4.1(1)(a) of the CRA, the Board may order that an applicant's record in respect of an offence be suspended if the Board is satisfied that, during the applicable period, the applicant has been of good conduct and has not been convicted of an offence under an Act of Parliament. Pursuant to paragraph 4.1(1)(b), the Board may order that an applicant's record in respect of an offence be suspended if the Board is satisfied that, during the applicable period, the applicant has been of good conduct and it would provide them with a measurable benefit, sustain their rehabilitation into society as a law-abiding citizen and would not bring the administration of justice into disrepute. The applicant must clearly describe how receiving a record suspension would provide them with a measurable benefit and sustain their rehabilitation into society as a law-abiding citizen.

3. Number of applications for pardons made in 2025-2026 in respect of offences referred to in paragraphs 4(1)(a) and (b)

In 2025-2026, a significant proportion of applications were processed as pardons under the relevant scheme of the CRA.

Legislative scheme: C-47

As per subsection 4.1(1) of the CRA,¹² the Board may grant a pardon for an offence prosecuted by indictment or a service offence referred to in subparagraph 4(a)(ii) if the Board is satisfied that the applicant, during the period of five years referred to in paragraph 4(a), has been of good conduct, and has not been convicted of an offence under an Act of Parliament or a regulation made under an Act of Parliament.

As per subsection 4.1(2) of the CRA,¹³ a pardon for an offence punishable on summary conviction or a service offence referred to in subparagraph 4(b)(ii) shall be issued¹⁴ if the applicant has not been convicted of an offence under an Act of Parliament or a regulation made under an Act of Parliament during the period of three years referred to in paragraph 4(b).

Legislative scheme: C-23A

As per subsection 4.1(1) of the CRA,¹⁵ the Board may grant a pardon for an offence if the Board is satisfied that the applicant, during the applicable period referred to in section 4(a), has been of good conduct and has not been convicted of an offence under an Act of Parliament, and if granting the pardon at that time would provide a measurable benefit to the applicant, would sustain their rehabilitation in society as a law-abiding citizen and would not bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

As per subsection 4.1(1)(a) of the CRA,¹⁶ the Board may grant a pardon for an offence punishable on summary conviction or a service offence within the meaning of the National Defence Act if the Board is satisfied that the applicant, during the applicable period referred to in section 4(b), has been of good conduct and has not been convicted of an offence under an Act of Parliament.

Other Information Required by the Minister

Pursuant to paragraph 11(1)(d) of the CRA, the Board shall, within three months after the end of each fiscal year, submit to the Minister a report on the number of applications for record suspensions made, ordered or refused to order, and the number of record suspensions ordered, the province or territory of residence, and categorized by the offence to which they relate. The Minister may request additional information during that same covering period. There were no additional requests for information by the Minister during this review period.
