CANJUS PROJECT

The CANJUS project is being undertaken by the Ministry of the Solicitor General. It is guided by a steering committee, the Interdepartmental Committee on Justice Statistics, made up of senior representatives of Statistics Canada, Department of Justice, Law Reform Commission, Treasury Board and the Ministry of the Solicitor General. The project team has consisted primarily of persons from the Ministry of the Solicitor General, with others from time to time on loan from the other federal agencies. The other agencies' resource contributions have included secondment of personnel, special statistics and senior advice and consultation when necessary.

The objective of the project is to develop a comprehensive model of the Canadian Criminal Justice System in order to -

1. develop a basic quantitative description of that system,
2. assist in the planning of policy and program changes by agencies involved in the administration of that system, and
3. serve as the foundation for future analyses and research on the system.

INTRODUCTION

This document is intended as a very brief summary of the flow of offenders through the police, courts and corrections systems in the Nova Scotia Criminal Justice System. The flows have been derived from Statistics Canada publications, produced for 1971, on these three subsystems of the criminal justice system. Many assumptions were necessary in deriving these flows, including:

1. Conversion to offenders from offences at some points in order to get a common unit of count, offenders, through the system.

2. The development of correspondence between the different crime types used by the police, courts and corrections systems in the reporting documents.

3. Other assumptions on the different methods of count and recording used by the different subsystems.

It is unnecessary to say that the numbers reflect only a numerical assessment of those statistics which were recorded by Statistics Canada for 1971. We have aggregated those statistics in order to derive a comprehensive picture of the flow of offenders through the criminal justice system, but as will be seen in some points, the numbers differ. This is because a person is not necessarily processed through the total system within the one year or because a person may start processing or end processing during the year and not have finished or begun that processing during the same year. For this reason, for some of the flow diagrams incompatibilities will appear. However, particularly for the more common crime types, these variations tend to offset one another. The flows are presented with the data assumptions described explicitly in the various CANJUS reports (see references).
